ANNOTATIONS

On the Book of the Prophet

ISAIAH.

The Argument.

By two sorts of persons did God anciently make known his minde, and will, to his people the Jews; by ordinary Ministers, and by extraordinary Messengers. The ordinary Ministers were the Priests, and Levites: both these, all of one Tribe, the linage of Levi; the former of them, all of one house in that Tribe, the off-spring of Aaron. The extraordinary Messengers, were the Prophets; so termed, of foretelling future events, by divine revelation; men immediately called by God himself, and by him immediately inspired. These were of any house, tribe, or profession, indifferently, as God was pleased to cull, and call. The Prophets, whose monuments we have severally booked in Scripture, are in number sixteen: whereof the four former are called, in regard of the largeness of their prophecies, the greater; the latter twelve, in regard of the shortness of them, the lesser.

Of the four larger, Isaiah, as in place, and rank, so in order of time, is without question, the first; and lived also, in likelihood, some time at least, together with the first of the other twelve: no one of them, whose times are expressed, rising higher then the reign of Jeroboam the second King of Israel; who reigned fifteen years together, with Uzziah King of Judah, in whose reign this our Prophet began his prophetical employment. What Tribe he was of, or of what estate, and profession, before his entrance upon his Office, is uncertain: no mention being made of his pedigree, either here, or else-where; further then his next progenitor. So that what the Jewish Doctors tell us, concerning his being of the Tribe of Judah, and of the blond-royal; as also of his Fathers being a Prophet, and brother to King Amaziah, are matters of no certainty, having no footing in Scripture. His Sermons, or Prophecies, here recorded, abound with great variety of religious instructions, serious admonitions, sharp reproofs, severe menaces, and comfortable promises. And these all delivered in a stile suitable to the subject matter, very lofty, and stately; full fraught with rhetorical garnishes, & such native elegancies, as in other languages cannot easily, if at all, be expressed. Besides his predictions of Gods judgements to befall his own nation for their sins, partly by the Assyrians, and partly by the Chaldeans, and concerning the utter destruction of the adversaries of Gods people, as well joyntly, as severally; he is most plentiful in foretelling their deliverance from the Babylonian Captivity by Cyrus, whom by name he mentioneth, above one hundred years before he was born, and well near two hundred, before the thing it self effected: and withall in declaring the restitution and enlargement of the Church, whereof that was a figure; together with the calling in of the Gentiles by Christ; whose incarnation, birth, breeding, calling, offices (royal, priestly, prophetical) life, teaching, courses, sufferings, death, rising again, glory ensuing, kingdome length, and extent, he so largely and lively describeth, that he may seem rather to write a story of things already done, then a Prophecy of things to come. In regard whereof, he is by the Ancients not undeservedly termed An Evangelical Prophet, and A Prophetical Evangelist. Even his menacing predictions being usually tempered, and closed with some gracious promises of the Gospel. His continuance in the Prophetical function, is from the times of the Kings under whom he prophecied, not improbably deemed to have been about threescore years. Howsoever, that which is from the Jewish Doctors received, concerning his prophecying under Manasses, and suffering death by him, seemeth groundless: the inscription of his Prophecies making no mention of any King under whom he prophecied, lower then Hezekiah; towards the latter end of whose reign, it is not unlikely that he died. Besides this Book of prophecies, he wrote also the acts, first and last, of King Uzziah; as appeareth by 2 Chron. 26. 22. but that seemeth not now extant. See on Chap 1. 1. So much of his writings hath by Gods providence been preserved, as he deemed necessary for the good of his Church.

CHAP. I.

Verse 1. THE vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Iudah, and Ierusalem] This first verse containeth in it, the title, or inscription, not of this first Chapter alone, or the Sermon therein delivered, but of the main body of the whole Book, and all the Sermons, or prophecies therein contained; as by the times, and reigns of the several Kings hereafter mentioned, may appear: see the like, Ier. 1. 1, 2. Hosea 1. 1.

the vision] Gods word, or minde made known to this his servant by vision or revelation, Rev. 1. 1. and 9. 17. a kinde of divine, or spiritual rapture, Num. 24. 4, 16. Ezek. 1. 1. and 11. 24. one of those means, whereby God in those times imparted his minde to his Prophets; of which see, Gen. 15. 1. Numb. 12. 6. to Obad. 1. Nahum 1. 1.

vision] Put collectively for visions; as Chap. 22. 1. 1 Sam. 3. 1. Dan. 1. 17. because it hath reference in general, to all the ensuing visions, prophecies, or sermons, as was before shewed. So חזה and משא; for חזון and משא, verse 2.

of Isaiah] Or Jeshaiah, as Amariah, and Azaziah, 2 Kings 15. 1. and Jeshaiah also, Ezra 8. 7, 19. yet here, Heb. Jeshaiahu: (tor so is the name of this Prophet constantly written) as Hezekiahu, Chizkijahu, and others, as well here, as else-where. Greek, Hesaias, Mat. 15. 7. Iohn 1. 23. and 12. 39, 41. as Ieremias, Mat. 16. 14. and Zacharias, Luke 1. 5, 12. In our ordinary speech, following the Greek, rather Isay, then Isaiah; as in Ezekiel, Ezekiah, Ieremy, Zachary, and the like. And so our ancient versions, speaking in English forms to English ears, not amiss render it. The word signifies, Gods salvation. No unfit title for him; who so clearly, and largely prophecied of Christ, and of salvation to be atchieved and accomplished by him, wherefore see the preface: and to this purpose, some of the Jewish Doctors alledg Chap. 49. 1. As if it were there intimated, that God for this cause had assigned him that name, before he was born. But of that, See more on the place.

the son of Amoz] The Jewish Doctors have a rule, that where any Prophet hath his Father mentioned together with him, (as Esay here, and some others else-where, Ier. 1. 1. Ezek. 1. 3. Hosea 1. 1. Joel 1. 1. Zeph. 1. 1. Zach. 1. 1.) there both Father, and Son, were Prophets; whence they conclude, that Daniel, Amos, Obadiah, Nahum, Habbakuk, Haggai, and Malachy, were Prophets indeed, but no Prophets Sons; because, though the place of their birth, or abode, be mentioned, yet their parentage is concealed; which, albeit of Amos it be true, Amos 1. 1. and 7. 14. Yet of the rest of them is altogether uncertain. Nor hath that rule concerning the former, any good ground; but is a meer fiction of their own fancy. The mention of the parents of some of them seems to have been added; either because their parents were of some eminent note or place, in Church, or State; as Ier. 1. 1. or, because, there were some other of the same name in those times, from whom they might, by such mention of their linage, be distinguished. And so it might well be with this our Prophet; in being not un-unlikely, that In his dayes, there were other persons, bearing the same name, as well as in divers other ages, both before and after the times he lived in, as appeareth, 1 Chron. 26. 25. Ezra 8. 7. 19.

Amos] of, Amois. Not the same with the Prophet Amos: as some have imagined: (for their names in the original differ, not in the two letters onely; the first, and the last: but in notation also, the one having a signification of might, the other of weight) but some other. One, whom the Jewish writers affirm to have been the son of Ioath, King of Iudah, and Brother (not to Uzziah, or Azariah, as most interpreters, by mistake, misreport them, but) to Amaziah. For which yet, because they produce no authentick record, their report of it deserves no great credit.

which he saw] That is, was revealed to him, 1 Pet. 1. 12. 1 Cor. 2. 10. As clearly, and as certainly, as if he had seen it. 2 Cor. 4. 18. and 5. 1. Heb. 11. 27. From whence also the Prophets were anciently termed Seers. 1 Sam. 9. 9, 19. Chap. 30. 10. So Chap. 2. 1.

Iudah, and Ierusalem] As 2 Kings 23. 1. 2 Chron. 34. 3. Chap. 3. 1. Ier. 19. 7. and 27. 20, 21. Tho' ygh the one be comprehended in the other; yet mentioned apart, the one from the other; because the latter, a more eminent, and remarkable part of the former. So, the land, and terreho. Iosh. 2. 1. Of Davids servants nineteen men, and of Isabel. 2 Sam. 2. 30. Out of the hands of all his enemies, and out of the hands of Saul. 2 Sam. 22. 1. Or, because Ierusalem, as the principal place both of Church and State in Iudah; Psal. 76. 1, 2. and 122. 4, 5. so (which usually falleth out in bad times) more disordered then other parts of the land; and by her example, a leader of others into the like. Mich. 1. 5. Iudah and Ierusalem put here for the State and people of either. As verse 7. Chap. 2. 1. and 3. 1. These are onely here mentioned; because unto them, chiefly, was the Prophet sent. Chap. 6. 9. Albeit he prophesied of, at least, if not unto other nations, besides them. But that also, for the instruction, consolation, or reprehension of Gods people: those nations being, for the most part, such as they either had been oppressed by, as Assur, and Babel, Chap. 10. & 13. Or had too much sclied upon: as Egypt, and Ethiopia; Chap. 20. and 30.

Iudah] The name of Jacobs fourth Son by Leah; Gen. 29. 35. and 49. 8. whose posterity also did bear his name. Deut. 33. 17. Iud. 1. 2, 3, 4. and also the land that fell to their lot; and wherein they abode. Iud. 17. 9. and 18. 12.

Ierusalem] The name of a city in the land of Canaan; formerly called Iebus; Iudg. 19. 10. 1 Chr. 11. 4, 5. and Salem, Gen. 14. 18. Psal. 76. 2. In regard whereof, some suppose it to have been called, in process of time, from those two termes put together: first, Iebusalem, and then Ierusalem. Others would have it so termed, as a formidable city, in regard of the strength and impregnableness of it; as a place dangerous to be dealt with: 2 Sam. 5. 6. See Zach. 13. 3, 4, 6. Others, as a peaceable possession, or a possession of peace. See Heb. 7. 2. and others, lastly, and that most probable; as a place of special providence: whereof see further, Chap. 22. 1. The word is sometimes found in a dualI form; because the city was divided into two parts, the upper, and the lower. See Ier. 39. 3. And Iosephus of the Iewish war: 1. 6. c. 13. or, because it stood in the confines of two Tribes, Iudah, and Benjamin; part of it belonging to the one Tribe, and part to the other, Iosh. chap. 15. verf. 63. & 18. 28. Iud. 1. verf. 21.

in the dayes] That is, the times, the reigns, as Hos. 1. 1. Amos 1. 1. the usuall manner of computation in Scripture, by dayes, Gen. 5. 4, 5, 8. & 47. 9. Psal. 39. 4, 5. teaching us to make reckoning of every day, as being for every day accountable, Psal. 90. 10, 12.

of Vzziah] Heb. Uzziahu, (as Iehoahahu, and Chizkijahu, before.) Greek, Oziæ, Mat. 1. 8, 9. called also Azariah, 2 King 15. 1. having, it seems, two names, as Ornan, the Iebusite, 1 Chr. 21. 18. called also Araunah, 2 Sam. 24. 16. Iehoiachin, 2 Kings 24. 8. called also Ieconiah, 1 Chron. 3. 16. Iehoiada, 2 Chron. 24. 20, 22. called also Barachias, Mat. 23. 35. and divers others. See Ier. 22. 11. Of th is kings reign, see 2 Kings 15. 1, 7. & 2 Chr. 26. Of his acts, it is said, that this our Prophet wrote; but that book of his seems not now extant: no more then that of Iasher, 2 Sam. 1. 18. and that of Ieremy, 2 Chr. 35. 25. For it cannot well be understood of that short abridgment, in so few verses comprized, in the second book of the Kings; and coming so far short of that larger relation in the second of the Chronicles, where yet it is mentioned, as relating much more, then is there upon record.

Iotham] Of his reign, see 2 Kings 15. 32, 38. 2 Chr. 27. 1, 7.

Ahaz] Heb. Achaz: as Achab. And so the Greek. Mat. 1. 9. as Rachab also there, v. 5. Of his wicked reign, see 2 Kings 16. and 2 Chron. 28.

and Hezekiah] Heb. here, Iechizkijahu: and Mic. 1. 1. Iechizkijah. Though moft commonly Chizkijahu, as chap. 36. 1. and 38. 1. and sometime Chizkijah, as 2 Kings 18. 1, 10. Greek, Ezekias, Mat. chap. 1. verf. 9, 10. Of his religious reign, see 2 King. chap. 18, 19. and 20. and 2 Chron. from chap. 29. unto chap. 32. as also of some good part of it, in this Prophecy, from chap. 36. unto chap. 39. He being the last King mentioned under whom Esay prophesied, it may be probably hence gathered, that the Prophet Esay did not survive Hezekiah: and consequently, that he suffered not under Manasses, as is commonly, but groundlesly held.

Kings of Iudah] That is, of the Kingdom, or State of Iudah, consisting of that tribe, with those of Benjamin that adhered unto it: so termed, as distinguished from the other ten tribes, commonly called by the name of Israel; after their revolt from the house of David, under Rehoboam, 1 King. 11. 31, 32. and 12. 16, 17. So Ier. 3. 8. Hos. 4. 15. Some suppose, that the Sermons, or Prophecies in this book recorded, are disposed, and digested in order successively, according to the times and reigns of the Kings here mentioned: but of that there is no great certainty. See v. 2. Nor do we finde the like in the writings of the other Prophets observed. See Ier. 27. 1.

V. 2. Hear, &c.] Here beginneth Esays first Sermon, or Prophecy, contained in this Book; and that concluded in this Chapter: which yet to some, seems not to have been the first in time, after his deligment to his office. See verf. 7, 8. (where the desolations mentioned seem to have reference unto Ahaz his time:) and Chap. 6. 1, 8. In it the Lord first arraigneth his people; as in the view of the whole world, of extream unthankfulness, stupidity, and brutishness in their carriage towards him: Verf. 2, 4. as also of desperate obstinacy under his hand, that had been so heavy upon them, for their sins: verf. 5, 9. Secondly, acquainteth them with the cause, why their sacrifices and services found no acceptance at all with him. verf. 10, 15. Thirdly, inviteth them to a friendly debate, propounding them terms of composition, and reconcilement. verf. 16, 20. Fourthly, complaineth of a strange alteration with them, in their Rulers especially, for the worse. verf. 21, 23. Fifthly, promiseth a restitution of them, upon their sincere and serious reformation, verf. 25, 27. and withall denounceth destruction unto those of them that shall still persist in their wicked courses, verf. 24, 28, 31.

hear O heavens, and hearken O earth] The fore-mentioned arraignment of them the Prophet makes entrance into, with a solemn contestation: wherein heavem, and earth, the whole frame of the creature, Gen. 1. 1. are summoned, and called upon: as to appear, and bear witness in Gods behalf against his people, as Deut. 4. 26. & 30. 19. & 31. 28. so to hear, and to take notice of Gods charge given in against them: as Mic. 6. 1, 2. Thereby implying them to be so extream obstinate, and senseless; that the very liveless creatures were more ready to hear, and obey Gods word, then they, Numb. 20. 8. Psal. 105. 31, 32. & 107. 25. & 119. 15, 18. Mat. 8. 26, 27. And their carriage towards God so vile, base, and abominable, as might well make the very liveless and senseless creatures to abhor it, and to be astonished at it. Ier. 2. 12. Luke 19. 40. Howbeit some by Heavens, here understand the blessed Angels; whose abode is in heaven: as Iob 15. 15. Psal. 97. 6. 7. By Earth, people living on the surface of the earth: as Psal. 96. 9, 13. & 98. 9. As if men, and Angels, were both appealed unto, for the hearing, and deciding of the controversie between God, and his people: so Chap. 5. 3. Ier. 2. 9, 10. But the former seems the founder, and more simple exposition. In like manner doth Moses begin his long: Deut. 32. 1. as Esay here: his prophecy: for frivolous and ridiculous is that conceit of the Chaldee Paraphrast there, that Moses should say: Attend, O heaven, and hear, O earth; because he was near to heaven, and far from the earth: whereas Esay saith, hear, O heaven; and attend, O earth: Because he was farther from heaven, and nearer the earth: whereas it is well known, that the words are promiscuously used; and either of them as well to those afar off, as to those that are near at hand: See Psal. 5. 1, 2. & 17. 1. & 49. 1. verf. 10. Chap. 28. 23.

heavens] Or, heaven. As it is well rendred, Gen. 1. 1. 1 Kings 8. 23. Chap. 49. 13. & 66. 1. For, though the word have a dual form; supposed to have his appellation, from the waters, therein contained, whole name is also deemed to have the like form, in regard of those two general receptacles of water, the one above in the clouds, the other below in the sea: and other parcels, that either environ the earth, or shoot themselves into it: Gen. 1. 6, 7. And it be not denied, that there is mention in Scripture of more heavens, then one: Deut. 10. 14. 1 Kings 8. 27. Psal. 148. 4. Yet neither is that notation certain, or the deduction, and composition so exact. And we read of more then two heavens: a third, 2 Cor. 12. 2. and both in Hebrew, and other languages, many words are found, that under a plural form bear but a singular sense: as that of Water among other. verf. 22. 30.

O earth!] Not the Inhabitants of the earth, as Psal. 2. 10. & 33, 8. but the earth it self, as Ier. 6. 19. & 22. 29.

for the Lord] Not man, but God: not the Prophet, but the Lord: 1 Thes. 1. 13. Heb. 13. 7. not the Herald, or crier: Chap. 44. 3. Mar. 1. 3. but the King and Iudg, Chap. 33. 22. By whose command, and authority, and in whole name, and person, he speaks: Chap. 6. 1, 9. & 40. 1, 6. He that speaks by him, and in him. Acts 4. 25. 2 Cor. 13. 3. the Lord] Heb. Iehovah, as Psal. 83. 18. The onely true God. Deut. 6. 5. who alone hath his being of himself, Exod. 3. 14. Chap. 43. 11. 13. and giveth being to all things. Acts 17. 25, 28. Rom. 11. 36. Rev. 4. 11. See Exod. 6. 3. Chap. 26. 4.

hath spoken] Or, doth speak, speaks. As Amos 1. 3, 6. & 3. 8. Or, is about to speak; (as perish, for, about to perish, ready to perish, Prov. 31. 6. Chap. 27. 13. And say, for, am about to say, 1 Cor. 10. 15.) And requires therefore all due attention, as chap. 4. 1. Which if Moses require, when he speaks, though by Gods appointment, yet in his own person: Deut. 32. 1. Surely Esay, speaking in Gods own person, much more.

I have nourished] God begins this his contestation with his people, with a recital of his singular favours conferred on them, and continued unto them: in a more especial manner, then unto many, yea, unto any other people, Deut. 7. 6. & 10. 15. & 26. 18. Psal. 147. 20.

nourished] Or, nursed. Heb. reared, brought up. So is the word used, Iob 31. 18. Chap. 23. 4. & 58. 18. I have from their first being brought to a people, while they were yet in Egypt as an abject infant, disregarded, and not looked after, taken them up, undertaken the charge of them: provided for them, protected them, supplied them with all necessaries, had as tender a care of them, as parents are wont to have of their children, until they come to their full growth, or to mans estate; chap. 46. 3, 4. Ezek. 16. 7, 14. Hos. 11. 3. children] the people of Israel, whom he had adopted to be his peculiar ones, his children. Deut. 32. 6, 14. chap. 63. 8.

and brought them up] As chap. 23. 4. Or, advanced, exalted: As 1 Sam. 2. 7. Ezek. 31. 4. And this rather here: because that was, before, not implied only, but expressed: and this latter seems to be a further addition to the former. I have not only brought them up, but preferred, honoured, advanced them, by entring into a solemn covenant with them, taking them to be so near to me, committing my sacred oracles to them, setting my place of special residence among them, working strange, and unheard of miracles for them; and raising them up to a kingdom of great note, and renown. Deut. 4. 5, 7, 8, 32, 36. Ezek. 16. 8, 14. Psal. 135. 4. & 147. 19, 20. & 148. 14. Chap. 42. 21. Rom. 3. 1, 2. & 9. 4, 5. For neither can I allent to the Iewish Doctor that confoundeth this with the former, expounding both of advancement onely: and much less approve of his fathers nice distinction, restraining the former, unto Gods giving them his Law: chap. 42. 21. the latter to the setling of his Sanctuary among them. Psal. 76. 1, 2. Chap. 11. 9.

and they have rebelled against me] After the relation of Gods goodnels towards them, follows a narration of their unworthy demeanour towards him, who had dealt so gratiously, and bountifully with them: The one much aggravating the guilt of the other, Deut. 32. 10, 18. 1 Sam. 2. 27, 29. chap. 63. 9, 10. Ezek. 16. 7, 20. Amos 2. 9, 13.

and] Or, but. The copulative, for the adversative, as verf. 20, 21.

rebelled] As the word is used, 2 King. 3. 7. & 8. 20. or, transgressed: as it is rendered, chap. 43. 27. Ier. 33. 8. 1 Sam. 15. 23, 23.

have rebelled] Or, as it may well be rendred, do rebell, as v. 3. know, know not, consider not: as noting, not only their fore-passed rebellions, but their perfisting still in them, Ier. 2. 15.

against me] I set them up, and they set themselves against me. So Num. 16. 9, 11.

V. 3. The ox knoweth, &c.] The very brute-beasts, and the dullest of them (Psal. 32. 9. Prov. 7. 22. & 26. 3.) are brought in, by their carriage and courses toward their masters, and benefactors, such as feed them and make much of them; to controll, and condemn the demeanor of Gods people towards him, who took no notice of, nor regarded him that had done the like, and much more, for them, v. 2. So Ier. 8. 7.

ox knoweth] Or, oxen know: ox, for oxen; and ass, for asses: as vision, for visions, ver. 1. and the like, verf. 6. For those popish legendaries grosly and palpably abuse this place, who out of it, have forged us a fable of an ox, and an ass; that being in the stable, where our Saviours Mother was delivered of him, should take notice of him, and cherish him with their warm breath, as he lay in the cratch.

knoweth] takes notice of, regards; as Prov. 12. 10. chap. 42. 25. They so regard him, as not to offer to hurt, or wrong him; but are obsequious to him, however they be fierce, and offensive to others, Exod. 21. 28, 31.

his owner] Or, buyer. Him, properly, that by bargain and sale, (Levit. 25. 28. chap. 24. 2. Ezek. 7. 12.) or more largely, that any way, or by any means, is possessed of him, Zach. 11. 5. It is given to God, as Lord and owner of all things, Gen. 14. 19, 22. but more specially, as by purchase, the Possessor of his people, Deut. 32. 6.

and the asse] The word here used, properly signifies the male; as another the female; but are both promiscuously used, as well for the one sex, as the other. As the word that signifies a filly, is used sometime in the masculine form; sometime in the feminine, of one and the same filly, Jon. 1. 17. and 2. 1. whatsoever the doting Rabbins there dream of two fishes, a male, and a female. The word is used generally, to comprehend all of that kind, of whether sex, or for what use soever, as here, so elsewhere, Exod. 21. 33. as well those for burden, Gen. chap. 49. verf. 14. as for the saddle, Exod. 4. 20.

his masters crib] Heb. the manger of his masters. For the word is in a plural form; but such as is oft used in a singular sence: as of God, Mal. 1. 6. So of man, Exod. 21. 29, 36. He taketh notice of God, that bringeth him to the crib, or manger, and feeds him there: and to such an one God compareth himself, Hos. 11. 4. I was to them, as one that taketh the yoke off their jaws, and laieth them meat.

but Israel, &c.] The different, yea the contrary practice following, of Gods people towards God, as before, v. 2.

but] Or, yet. A defect of the particle adversative, as v. 6. Psal. 30. 7.

Israel] The name given to Jacob, (as he was at first called; Gen. 25. 25.) upon his wrestling with the Angel, and prevailing therein, Gen. 32. 28. Hos. 12. 3. and transmitted from him, as the more honourable title, to his posterity; called sometime the sons; or, children of Israel, Gen. 32. 32. and 46. 31. and sometime simply; Israel, Gen. 48. 20. and 49. 7. 15. Psal. 149. 2. and so here. But to here stiled in way of reproach, as having degenerated from him who first bare that name; nor answering to what it imported. So Iesburun, though of it self a name of honour, Deut. 33. 26. yet in way of exprobation, enunciated of that people, Deut. 32. 15.

doth not know] Heb. hath not known, see verf. 2. doth not know; hath not knowledg, or understanding: as Deut. 32. 13. Psal. 14. 4. they are a people of no understanding, Psal. 53. 4. so ch. 44. 18. they know not, nor understand. They have no more knowledg, nor understanding, then the brute beasts: Ier. 10. 8, 14. (whom yet, being endued by God with reasonable souls, they ought therein, to go beyond: Iob 35. 11.) yea, herein they come short of them. Or, doth not know me, is ignorant of me: as Ier. 4. 22. and 9. 3. they doth not know me, saith the Lord: and, there is no knowledg of God in the land. Hos. 4. 1. But know here rather, for, take notice of, respect, acknowledg; as Psal. 1. 6. Prov. 27. 23. Ier. 2. 23. Mat. 7. 23. and consider, as Psal. 10. 14. Prov. 29. 7.

me] Or, now me: a defect of the pronoun necessarily supplied, 25. 12. know not me: a defect of the pronoun necessarily supplied, 25. 12. know not me: a defect of the pronoun necessarily supplied, to make the sense perfect, as verf. 15. They know not me, though their owner. Deut. 32. 6. their master. Mal. 1. 6. One, that from time to time have fed them; and most kindly entreated them. Deut. 8. 3, 4. and 32. 13, 14. They know not me, whom I have known above others, Amos 3. 2.

my people] Who have been better taught then others, having been trained up under me. Deut. 4. 8, 14. Psal. 147. 19, 20. And to whom I have been more beneficial, then to any other. Psal. 105. 12, 45, Mal. 1. 2, 3. doth not consider] As the word is rendred, Psal. 37. 10. and 52. 15. Or, understand; as it is translated, Psal. 107. 43. either, they are of no understanding, as before, chap. 27. 11. Ier. 5. 4, 21. They are more blockish, and fottish, then the brute beasts: they have not so much understanding as they have: Ier. 8. 7. Or, they consider not the great things that God hath done for them: nor the great goodness that he hath from time to time shewed them. Deut. 29. 2, 3, 4. Psal. 92. 5. chap. 42. 18, 20. Ezek. 12. 2. they neither take notice of him, nor think upon him.

V. 4. Ah sinful nation!] He proceedeth here to aggravate their sins, and to bewail their misery, thereby procured: so chap. 24. 16, 18. Ier. 9. 1, 2, 3.

ah!] The word here used, is sometimes a note of compellation; as chap. 55. 1. sometimes of denunciation, as chap. 5. 8, 11, 18, 20. (See chap. 10. 5. and 18. 1.) and so some take it in this place; sometime of lamentation, as 1 King. 13. 30. chap. 6. 5. Ier. 22. 18. and so rather here: but sometimes mixt with indignation; as verf. 24. and with detestation, as chap. 28. 1. And so it may well also be in this passage.

sinful] Addicted, and given wholly to sin, and to loosnes of life: Psal. 1. 1, 5. Luke 7. 34, 37. John 9. 31. Gal. 2. 15.

nation] The term usually given to those people that lived without the pale of the Church: and were strangers from the commonwealth of Israel, Eph. 2. 12. So Psal. 96. 5. chap. 11. 10. and 42. 6. and 60. 9. and 66. 19. Ier. 10. 2. 25. And which the Iews to this day, are wont in way of reproach, to stile all other by, but their own. The Prophet may the rather seem here to have used it; thereby partly to imply, that they had made themselves no better, if not in some respect worse, then any other people, in Gods repute, by their sins and excesses, Ier. 9. 25, 26. Ezek. 5. 6, 7. And partly, to intimate the generality of their sin, and apostacy; which not some few, or more among them, but the main body of the nation, stood guilty of. It was a general defection, a national evil. chap. 59. 4. and 64. 6, 7. Ier. 5. 1. and 9. 2. Mic. 7. 2, 4. Mal. 3. 9. see verf. 6.

a people laden with iniquity] Heb. a people of heaviness of iniquity. Not laden with sin, as groaning under the burthen of it: as Psal. 38. 4. Mat. 11, 28. But committing, and standing guilty of, not small so much, as heavy and hainous sins: heavy, for, great, and grievous: as chap. 21. 11. and 30. 27. and 36. 2. Great and grievous sinners: such as the Sodomites: Gen. 13. 13. and 18. 20. and as Elies sons are said to have been, 1 Sam. 2. 17.

a seed of evil doers] A wicked, and wretched race, that tread, and run on in the footsteps of their ungodly progenitors; and transmit their ungodliness unto those that come of them. Num. 32. 14. Psal. 78. 8. and 106. 6 chap. 57. 3. Ier. 7. 18, 26. and 16. 11, 12.

children that are corrupters] Or, as some, corrupt children, children, that deal corruptly, 2 Chron. 27. 2. Ier. 6. 28. Or, that have corrupted themselves, Exod. 32. 7. Deut. 32. 5. and their doings: Zeph. 3. 7. Heb. children corrupting, or, corrupters, that is, wasteful, or, wasters; as Prov. 18. 9. or, destroyers, as Prov. 28. 24. stray-goods; or wasteful children. A metaphor taken from riotous, or prodigal yonkers; that waste, and consume their patrimony, the means left them by their parents. Luke 15. 13, 30. Applyed to this people, as having embezzled their spiritual patrimony, derived and transmitted to them, from their religious predecessors. Gen. 17. 7. Deut. 7. 6, 8. and 32. 9, 20. Psal. 147. 19, 20. and 148. 14. Rom. 3. 1. and 9. 4, 5.

they have forsaken the Lord] By refusing to walk according to the prescript of his Law: and by following false Gods, and addicting themselves unto the service of such, verf. 28. Ier. 1. 16. and 2. 13. and 16. 11. and 22. 9. See chap. 2. 6.

they have provoked unto anger] As Num. 14. 11, 23. and 16. 30. Or despised, contemned, set light by: as Deut. 31. 20. Psal. 107, 11. Prov. 1. 30. and 15. 5. or, abhorred, as Deut. 32. 19. 1 Sam. 2. 17. Ier. 14. 21. or, reproached, blasphemed, as 2 Sam. 12. 14. Psal. 10. 13. and 74. 10, 18. chap. 52. 5. They so carried themselves, in their wicked courses, sinning with an high hand; Num. 15. 30, 31. As if they did what they did, on purpose, to provoke God to wrath, chap. 3. 8. and 65. 3. Ier. 7. 18, 19. and 17. 10.

the holy one] The holy God, or Lord; a defect of the substantive, as chap. 5. 19, 24. so verse 24. to be supplied: as chap. 5. 16. he, who both is holy himself, chap. 6. 3. and sanctifieth those that are his, Levit. 19. 2. and 20. 7, 8 Ezek. 20. 12.

of Israel] Who was in covenant with them, and was to be worshipped, and served by them: Deut. 6. 5, 6. and 26. 17, 18. so Psal. 89. 18. Of the name, See verse 3.

they are gone away backward] Heb. they are fcverfed, or alienated, or eſtranged backwards. That is, they are fcverfed, or alienated, (to wit, from him) and turned backward; or, gone, or, go backward: A defective ſpeech; the like whereunto ſee chap. 38. 14, 17, 21. as alſo in the like argument, Hoſ 9. 10. they are ſevered, or have ſeperated themſelves (to wit, from the Lord) unto that ſhame, or ſhameful thing; that is, and betaken themſelves to it.

gone away] Or, alienated: they have ſcverted, or eſtranged themſelves from God by their ſins, Pſal. 58. 3. chap. 59. 2. Eph 4. 18, 19. Col. 1. 21. by the ill Idolatry eſpecially. Ezek. 14. 5, 7. Where yet the ſame word is rendred, eſtranged, in the former place; and ſeperated himſelf, in the latter place: as if the words there uſed, came from two ſeveral roots. And in like manner the Jewiſh Criticks, ſpeak doubtfully of the word here uſed; one while referring it to that root, that hath a notion of ſeperation: Levit. 22. 2. Another while to that which hath a notion of alienation, Iob 19. 13. Pſal. 78. 30. But whether way we here take it, it will come in effect to one: ſeparation, or eſtrangment, in the preſent caſe, being in a manner the ſame.

backward] It ſeems a metaphor taken, either, from undutifull children, or ſervants; that turn their back on their parents, or maſters, in diſdain, when they like not what they are bidden to do: Ier. 2. 27. and 15. 6. and 32. 33. Ezek. 8. 16. Or, from reſtive jades, that go the more backward, the more the rider, or driver, ſtrives to put them on forward. See verſ. 5.

V. 5. Why ſhould ye be ſtricken any more? ye will revolt more, and more] Or, may be read, as one continued ſentence, Thus, why, the more ye are ſtricken, do ye more and more revolt? Or, why ſhould ye be ſtricken any more; ſince ye will, or do, revolt more and more? What availeth it, to ſeek, or ſtrive to amend you, by chaſtiſements: (Gen. 6. 3. Pſal. 95. 10, 11. Ier. 5. 3.) when as the more you are chaſtiſed, the worſe ye wax: 2 Chr. 28. 22. Ier. 7. 24.

ſtricken] With variety of judgments: which are as Gods rods, or ſtrokes, Deut. 28. 22, 27, 28. 2 Sam. 7. 14. Pſal. 89. 32. Amos 4. 9. Mic. 6. 9.

ye will] Or, ſince that ye will; a defect of the particle, as Iob 32. 22. and 38. 21.

will] Or, do; the future for the preſent: as Deut. 25. 3. Ruth 1. 17. 1 Sam. 2. 17. See chap. 3. 16.

revolt more and more] Heb. increaſe; or, add revolt: as verſe 13. chap. 7. 10. Clean contrary to that which God intended in ſmiting them: he ſmote them to reclaim them, and bring them home to him; chap. 9. 12, 13. Amos 4. 6, 11. And they took occaſion thereby, to go further away from him, Ier. 44. 17, 18, 21, 22. See verſ. 4.

the whole head is ſick] The whole ſtate, both civil, and eccleſiaſtical, is diſtempered, and out of frame: and thoſe worſt, and weakeſt, that ſhould ſupport and ſtrengthen the reſt; Pſal. 75. 3. and 82. 5. So ſome, underſtanding it of their exceſs of ſin, and wickedneſs; in ſuch eſpecially, as were as the head, and heave of the State: Numb. 25. 4. Mich. 3. 1, 9. But it ſeems rather to be ſpoken of their lamentable condition; by means of Gods judgments inflicted on them, for their ſins. The evils, that have befallen, and lie ſtill heavy upon you, are both general; few or none eſcaping ſcot-free in them; and withall fore, and grievous, like hurts received (Gen. 3. 15. Iſal. 68. 21.) or diſeaſes lying in the head. 2 Kings 4. 19, 20. Or, ſuch as ſtrike, and pierce to the heart: Ier. 4. 18, 19. and 8. 18.

the whole head] Or, every head: as Ezek. 29. 18.

is ſick] Heb. into ſickneſs: or, in ſickneſs. For ſo the particle here uſed, is obſerved, oft to ſignifie, Pſal. 16. 10. Hoſ. 7. 2. In a lamentable plight; in a grievous diſeaſe: 2 Chr. 21. 18. Pſal. 38. 7.

The phraſe is emphatical: as in ſin; in iniquity. Pſal. 51. 5. Ioh. 9. 34. In the gall of bitterneſs; and in the bond of iniquity. Act. 8. 23. Not lightly touched with it, but wholly poſſeſſed of it.

and the whole heart] As noting the extremity of the evil, Pſal. 22. 14. and 25. 17. and 102. 4. Or, every heart; as implying the generality of it, ſee verſe 4. chap. 2. 9. The Iewiſh Doctor referreth it to that commination, Deut. 28. 28.

is faint] It is, as with women in their infirmity of courſe, Levit. 15. 33. and 20. 18. or, languiſhing, Lam. 1. 22. and 5. 17. As with thoſe that pine away, through grief, or affliction, or by means of ſome lingring and waſting diſeaſe, Deut. 7. 15. and 28. 60. 2 Sam. 13. 4. Lam. 1. 13.

V. 6. From the ſole of the foot, even unto the head] Ye have been ſo ſcourged, over and over, that there is no part free, from top to toe: a proverbial ſpeech; the uſe whereof, ſee 2 Sam. 14. 25. Iob 2. 7. The meaning is: that in the calamities and afflictions, which in thoſe times had befaln them, none had eſcaped Gods hand; but all, as well greateſt and higheſt, as leaſt and loweſt had ſuffered: they had been plagued all, one with another: 2 Chron. 28. 5, 8.

the ſole] The Hebrew word ſignifies, bending, or, hollow; and it is applied ſometimes to the foot, as here, the ſole, Deut. 2. 5. and 11. 24. Sometimes to the hand, the palm, Levit. 14. 15, 18, 19. Sometimes to the thigh, the hollow, wherein the huckle bone reſteth, Gen. 32. 25, 32.

even] Heb. and: as Deut. 4. 32.

unto the head] Incluſively, taking it with the reſt of the body: as 2 Chron. 34. 30. Pſal. 44. 3. Ier. 8. 10. Elſewhere more ſully: unto the top, or crown of the head, Deut. 28. 35. Iob 2. 7.

there is no ſoundneſs] Or, nothing, no part ſound: ſo is the word uſed, Exod. 29. 1. Levit. 9. 2, 3. Or, as ſome, there is no ſhape of a man: for, ſo is the word taken, Iud. 20. 48. He compareth the Iewiſh State, to a mans body; ſo generally poſſeſſed with ſome malignant diſeaſe, that no part of it is found, or free, either from the inward taint, or the outward ſymptomes thereof: or to ſuch a body, as either by the like malignity, or by fore and often ſcourging, or evil uſage otherwiſe, is with tumors, and ulcers, ſo overſpread, that no ſhap: or figure of a man, almoſt, appears on it. So Pſal. 38. 3, 7. where the very ſame phraſe, is found.

but wounds] The adverſative particle is wanting, as verſ. 7.

wounds] Heb. wound; taken collectively, as Prov. 20. 30. So bruiſe, and ſore, or ſtripe, and ſtroke, afterwards, of which ſee, verſ. 11. viſion, and verſ. 3. axe, and aſſe. Yet there ſeems to be ſome emphaſis in it: nothing but wound, and bruiſe, ſtripe, or mark: as if the party were to be martyred, as we uſe to ſay, that the whole body might ſeem to be, but as one wound, one ſtripe, one ulcer, one tumour, one ſore.

bruiſes] Heb. bruiſe. The word properly ſignifies the mark of a ſtripe formerly given; remaining ſtil to be ſeen on the body, Pſal. 38. 5. Prov. 20. 30. chap. 53. 5. The Iewiſh criticks thus diſtinguiſh, this and the former. A wound, ſay they, is that which maketh a breach in the fleſh, and bringeth out blood; a bruiſe, ſuch as makes no breach in the skin or fleſh, but coagulateth the bloud under the skin.

putrifying ſores] Heb. moiſt. That is, either green hurts; as a green jawbone, Iudg. 15. 15. New hurts, lately made. Or, as other matur: moiſt with mattier: ſuch as old feſtered ſores uſe to be. The word is ſaid to be in Arabick writers, uſed for a green wound: but in the Talmudick language, ſaith one of the Iewiſh Commenters, for a matury ſore.

ſores] Heb. ſtroke; as Lev. 26. 21. Chap. 14. 7. and 27. 7. Ier. 30. 12. ſee verſe 5. ſtroke, for ſtrokes, as before; ſo verſe 13.

they have not been, &c.] No means, at leaſt, available, have been uſed for the cure or removal of theſe evils wherewith our State is thus ſurpriſed, and defaced, ſee 2 Chron. 28. 13. Expreſſed here by metaphorical phraſes, borrowed from the art and practice of chirurgery: the like whereunto are found, Pſal. 60. 2. and 147. 3. chap. 3. 7. Ier. 30. 12, 13.

cloſed] To make up the wound, or the breach in the body: chap. 30. 26. Or, cruſht, rather: (for ſo the word properly ſignifies) as chap. 59. 5. or, wrung out. As Iud. 6. 38. To expreſs, and force out the mature: as in the feſtered ſores, where the corrupt mature muſt be removed, before they be cloſed, or made up. Yet one of the Iewiſh commenters ſeemeth to underſtand it of waſhing: as wounds are wont to be, commonly, before they be cloſed: referring us to Iob 18. 15. Brimſtone ſhall be ſcattered upon his habitation. And then it would be rendred ſprinkled, or ſyringed: but the roots are divers. And another, whom he alſo citeth, is too large, who rendreth it, heated; building on, Ier. 30. 13. Whereof in its place.

neither bound up] As wounds and ſores wont to be, when the putulent matur is wrought out; to keep out winde, and air: and to cauſe the lips of the wound, or ſore, to fodder, Chap. 3. 7. and 61. 1. Ezek. 30. 21. Hoſ. 6. 1.

neither mollified] Pſal. 55. 21.

with ointment] Heb. oyle. As Eccleſ. 7. 1. and 9. 8. To aſſwage the ſwellings: and to ſupple the ſores, Ezek. 16. 4.

V. 7. Your country] Or, land. Heb. earth: as chap. 2. 19, 21. He proceeds to declare the miſerable condition of their State; by the lamentable devaſtation, and deſolation of their land. So Ier. 4. 23, 26.

is] The verb ſubſtantive to be ſupplied; moſt render, in the preſent ſent tenſe, it: underſtanding it of ſuch waſte, as had already been made of it, by the Syrians, and others joyning with the Iſraelites, under Ahaz: 2 Chron. 28. Others render it, in the future; ſhall be: ſuppoſing it a prediction, of an evil to come: but the former is rather to be admitted, ſee verſ. 5.

deſolate] Heb. deſolation. That is, moſt deſolate. As deſolate, as deſolation it ſelf: ſo chap. 64. 10. The abſtract for the concrete, as Jer. 27. 17. Ezek. 25. 13. & 35. 4. Or, brought into deſolation: as Ier. 12. 11. or, is in deſolation, the particle wanting: as Iob 1. 18. In deſolation, as in ſickneſs, verſ. 5. ſee chap. 3. 26.

your cities are burnt] By the enemy; either in the ſurpriſal of them, or afterward, in the exerciting of rage, to ſatisfie their fury: or, that they might not be places of refuge, or habitation again, to thoſe that formerly held them. Ioſh. 11. 11. Ier. 37. 8, 10.

your land] your ground; Or, tilled land. Gen. 2. 5. & 3. 17. and 4. 2, 12.

ſtrangers] The Syrians, Edomites, Philiſtines, and others, 2 Chro. 28. 5, 17, 18. chap. 9. 12.

devour it] That is, conſume, and eat up the fruit of it, Deut. 28. 33, 51, 53. Ier. 5. 17. it, or your land; for, the fruit of it, as the tenth of the land, Levit. 27. 30. For the tenth of the fruit of it, Deut. 26. 12. See Ier. 26. 16. Ier. 5. 17.

in your preſence] Heb. before you. Before your faces, in your ſight, to increaſe your grief, being unable, either to reſcue ought from them, or to reſtrain their rage, Deut. 28. 32, 33, 34, 51, 52.

and it is deſolate, as overthrown by ſtrangers] Heb. according to the overthrow of ſtrangers. That is, lay ſome of the Iewiſh Doctors, ſuch as thoſe of Sodome and Gomorrah, verſe 9. people eſtranged from the fear of God, who were therefore overthrown by God; and the word overthrown ſhall be taken paſſively, Ier. 49. 18. But rather, as ſtrangers are wont to overthrow a land, making havock of all before them, as being none of their own; nor like long to enjoy it: ſo theſe, as being none of their own; nor like long to enjoy it: and ſo it is taken actively, as Jer. 50. 40. Amos 4. 11. See the like phraſe, Deut. 29. 23. chap. 13. 19. But as thoſe Iewiſh Doctors pervert the ſenſe; ſo thoſe of them alſo corrupt the text, that inſtead of the word that ſignifies ſtrangers, would ſubſtitute another ſomewhat like it; that ſignifies a ſtorm: Chap. 25. 4. and 28. 2. As alluding to thoſe Egyptian ſtorms, Exod. 9. 23, 25.

V. 8. And &c.] From the condition of the whole land, and State, he paſſeth here unto the ſtate of the chief city, ſee Ier. 15. 8. and 34. 1.

the daughter of Zion] Or, the daughter Zion, Pſal. 9. 15. Zach. 2. 10. and 9. 9. As the daughter of Zidon, or, the daughter Zidon, chap. 23. 12. (for ſo it would rather be rendred) for Zion it ſelf, and Zidon it ſelf. Or, if it be the former way rendred, it is no otherwiſe to be underſtood; then as when we ſay, the city of Rome, and, the city of London; and the Evangeliſt, the feaſt of Paſſeover: Luke 2. 41. And the Apoſtle Paul, the ſign of circumciſion, Rom. 4. 11. that is, circumciſion, which is a ſign, or, for a ſign: and ſo Zion, that is, as a daughter; becauſe the ſpeech is metaphorical: ſee chap. 3. 1. For, they are far out of the way, who by daughter of Zion, conceit it to be meant (which conceit yet ſome great ones ſeem taken with) either a parcel of buildings, branching out of the old Zion; or, the whole nether city, as deſcending from, or iſſuing out of it: not conſidering, how abſurd a thing it is, to imagine; that from ſome inferiour, and meaner part, the denomination, as here it is, ſhould be given to the whole city: nor obſerving, or attending at leaſt, the uſual manner of Scripture: wherein great cities, and States, as compared to goodly, and beautiful daughters, or damſels, are commonly ſo ſtiled: See of Babel, chap. 47. 1. Of Egypt. Ier. 47. 11. Of Edom, Lam. 4. 21. And of others, elſewhere. Though of Zion, it is not improbable, that God in a more ſpecial manner, doth here ſo ſpeak: as the Prophet in the like, Ier. 9. 1. Becauſe as dear to him, as a daughter: (ſee chap. 22. 4.) That which makes the miſery the more ſtrange, and grievous: that one ſo dear to God, ſhould be ſo deſtroyed, or diſtreſſed, Lam. 1. 15. and 2. 1, 2. and 4. 12.

Zion] That is, Jeruſalem. So termed, from a principal part of it: to wit, that mountain, or upper-part. 2 Sam. 5. 6, 7. Wherein both Gods Temple, and the Kings Palace, were ſeated: Pſal. 2. 6. and 48. 2. Zach. 8. 9. See chap. 2. 3. and 14. 13.

is left] Not by the keeper, that is, God, Pſal. 121. 4, 5. the keeper of ſtreet; as ſome of the Iewiſh commenters expound it: but left ſtanding alone by it ſelf, as other of them better: like ſuch a lodg, or cottage, hereafter deſcribed, that hath no other houſing uſually about it, or neer it: and ſo Jeruſalem; all about her being deſtroyed, and laid waſte; either, as ſome of them apply it, by the Aſſyrian invaſion, chap. 7. 17, 20. and 36. 1, 2. or rather, by the waſte of the land, made in Ahaz his reign, by the Syrians and Iſraelites, 2 Chron. 28. 5, 8. 17. 20.

as a cottage in a vineyard] As a ſhed, or, a booth, ſet up in the midſt, or on the one ſide of a vineyard, for the keeper there to watch, or repoſe himſelf in. Iob 27. 18. ch. 4. 6.

as a lodg] Made for the gardiner to lodg, or reſt in, chap. 24. 20. Lam. 2. 6.

in a garden of cucumbers] Or, melons. A fruit frequent, as in Egypt, ſo in thoſe Eaſtern parts, Num. 11. 5. Howbeit it ſeemeth a neer nicety, which from the Chaldee Paraphraſt, one of the Iewiſh Doctors here hath, that it is not ſaid, in a garden, ſimply, but in a garden of melons, as before in a vineyard; becauſe, in a garden, there may be ſtill uſe and need of a keeper, though this, or that plant, or fruit be gone; whereas in a vineyard, or field of melons, when the grapes are gathered in the one, and the melons gone in the other, there is now no need or uſe of a keeper in either: For this is grounded upon a mif-expoſition, before mentioned.

as a beſieged city] Heb. kept, watched. As Ezek. 6. 12. Or, as ſome, walled, as chap. 65. 4. where ſome, as here alſo, ſtrain the word over far, to make it ſignifie, a place ſo defaced and horrid, that men ſhun it, and keep aloof from it for fear, as Pſal. 30. 11. Nahum 3. 7. but the former rather: As deſolate, in regard of the countrey round about; ſo in great diſtreſs it ſelf, being ſo ſtraitned, that none can go in, or out, in ſafety, 1 King. 15. 17. 2 King. 6. 24, 25. and 18. 27. Ier. 4. 16, 17. and 5. 6.

V. 9. Except, &c.] From the deſolation of the countrey, and diſtreſs of the city, he proceeds now to the conſumption of the people; appearing by the paucity of the perſons ſurviving. See ch. 4. 1.

the Lord] That all is not clean gone, and utterly deſtroyed, it is Gods gracious work, his great and meer mercy, Lam. 3. 22.

the Lord of hoſts] Heb. Jehovah Sabaoth. Which ſome ſuppoſe to be a defective form of ſpeech, thus to be ſupplied, The Lord, or, Jehovah, the God of Hoſts, as Levit. 22. 2. But that needs not, ſince that we have the one without the other, frequently in the Prophets; ſo with the Apoſtles, Rom. 9. 29. Jam. 5. 4. Nor hinders it, that the word is not in a contracted form: for the word, Elohim, is alſo, oft-times uſed in the very ſame phraſe entire; four times in one Pſalme, Pſal. 80. 4, 7, 14, 39. And this may be the priviledg of the word, Jehovah, that it admitteth no ſuch contraction: the rather, if it have (as may well be deemed) a prick, or point, in its laſt letter, as Jah, and Eluah, both have: which keepeth the word, ſo marked, always entire. For the word it ſelf, ſee verſ. 2. The Jehovah, or, the Lord of hoſts. That is the powerful, and Soveraign Commander of all the creatures, in heaven, and earth; which are, as his hoſte, ready preſt to do him ſervice, Gen. 2. 1. and 32. 1, 2. Ioſh. 10. 11, 13. Judg. 5. 10, 11. Pſal. 68. 17. and 103. 21. and 119. 91. and 148. 8. chap. 14. 26, 27. Joel 2. 11, 25. Mat. 26. 53. Luke 2. 13. See further, verſ. 24.

had left unto us] Had reſcued, and reſerved ſome few of us, as brand ſnatched out of the fire, Amos 4. 11. Zach. 3. 2. That which God doth in mercy, that he may have ſome ever to ſerve him, and to be monuments of his mercy, Pſal. 130. 3, 4. chap. 4. 3. & 6. 13. Mat. 24. 21, 22. See Rom. 9. 27, 29.

unto us] The Prophet, very frequently, here varies the perſon, ſpeaking ſometime, as in the perſon of God, verſ. 23. Sometime, as in his own perſon, verſ. 4. Sometime in the perſon of his people; and ſo here: the uſual manner of the pathetical ſpeeches.

a very ſmall remnant] An handful, in regard of the whole. A very poor, and ſorry company, in regard of thoſe that had periſhed in the calamities of the times, chap. 10. 22. and 17. 6. a remnant only, and that very ſmall. So is the word uſed, Pſal. 105. 12. Ezek. 16. 47. Yet ſome render it, almoſt, (and it is alſo frequently ſo uſed, Gen. 26. 10. Pſal. 94. 12. and 119. 87.) referring it to the latter clauſe, We had almoſt been as Sodom, &c. But the pointing in the original, carrieth it rather the other way.

we ſhould have been as Sodom, and we ſhould have been like unto Gomorrah] We ſhould have been utterly ruinated, and conſumed; (none, or nothing left of us) as thoſe Cities, and the Regions adjacent were, with all their inhabitants, Gen. 19. 24, 25. Deut. 29. 23. Lam. 4. 6. Amos 4. 11. The defect of the copulative, makes the ſentence the quicker, as verſ. 3, 4, 8. and needed not therefore to have been expreſſed.

V. 10. Hear] Here God begins to turn the tenor of his ſpeech, from the heaven and earth, unto thoſe, whom what he had before ſaid, concerned; to the Princes of Judah, and the people. And his ſpeech to them, he enters upon here, with a very tart and ſharp interception; and continueth, afterward, with no leſs vehement and paſſionate expoſtulation, verſ. 11, &c. Nor is this, as ſome have thought, the beginning of ſome new ſermon, but a continued purſuit of the former diſcourſe.

hear] Hear ye, whom that which I ſpeak, concerneth, ſo, Mich. 6. 1, 2, 3. Mal. 2. 1, 2.

the word of the Lord] The word of Me, who am the Lord, (Heb. Jehovah.) So after here, verſ. 20. See ch. 2. 1.

ye Princes] Ye firſt, becauſe the worſt; and by your example encouraging others, to do evil. See v. 28.

of Sodom] Like them for wickedneſs, Deut. 32. 32. as bad as they, or worſe rather, Ezek. 16. 46, 48. and juſtly therefore deſerving to be deſtroyed, as they were. See verſ. 9. from whence he taketh the hint of the terms, here given.

give ear unto the law] Or, doctrine. Not the law delivered you ſometime by Moſes; but thoſe leſſons, (though conſonant to that) and that meſſage, which from God I now bring, and deliver unto you in his name. So the word, Law, is uſed, Pſal. 78. 1. Prov. 1. 8. and 3. 1, 21. and 6. 20.

of our God] The God whom we profeſs to ſerve, and whom, both you, and we, ought to hear and obey: ſo chap. 55. 7. Yet here ſpeaking to them who neither regarded to hear, nor take notice of ſpeaking to them who neither regarded to hear, nor take notice of him: he ſaith our God, as not theirs; who owned not him, verſ. 3. as God afterward; Your ſacrifices, as not his, becauſe not owned by him, from them, v. 11.

ye people of Gomorr.h] People as like them, as if you were of the same lineage, as Ezek. 16. 3. and in the same repute with me, as Amos 9. 7.

Gomorrah] So Rom. 9. 29. Judg. 7. as Gaza, Acts 8. 26. Heb. Amorrah, as Amos, v. 1.

V. 11. To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me, saith the Lord] Heb. upon what; or for what. Not, as demanding, as some would have it, on what part he should smite them; there being already no part free: nor, as others, with what new plague he should smite them: as having tried them with such variety of Judgments already. But For; or, To what, to wit, end? in plainer terms: wherefore? or, why? as the same term is used, Psal. 10. 1. But here the words run expressly thus; To what end; or purpose, unto me? that is, either, brought to me? or, in regard of me? as if I liked them, or accepted of them. It is spoken in way of expostulation, as Jer. 6. 20. implying, that all they did in their daily devotions, was in vain, to no end; all but lost labour: neither gratefull to God, nor useful therefore to themselves: not unaccepted with God only, but abhorred of him, and abominable in his sight, v. 13.

is the multitude of your sacrifices?] Or, your multitude of sacrifices. That is, your many sacrifices. As, a multitude of words: for, many words, Prov. 10. 19. and, thy multitude of witchcrafts: For, thy manifold witchcrafts, chap. 47. 11. Now such sacrifices as these, though God had commanded to be brought, and offered to him, as all the other duties enstiing, to be done; yet being done, as well the one, as the other, by such as they were, and in such manner as they did them, without hearty repentance, and due devotion: he rejecteth to own them, and accept them; he rejects them, as not his, but theirs. See v. 10. our God. So Psal. 50. 8, 16. Prov. 15. 8. and 21. 27. chap. 61. 8. and 66. 3. Jer. 6. 20. and 7. 21. Amos 5. 21, 22. Mic. 6. 7.

I am full of] I am cloyed with them, as a man is with some meat which he loathes, and his stomach goes against, Psal. 107. 18. Prov. 27. 7. and is ready, even to cast up again, Prov. 25. 16. Rev. 3. 16.

the burnt-offerings] Such as were wholly consumed with fire, Levit. 1. 3, 9. Psal. 40. 6. and 51. 19. Mar. 12. 33. Heb. 10. 6.

of rams] Male-sheep, above a year old. For, those that came short of that age, go under the name of lambs, Exod. 12. 5. Levit. 1. 10. Of lambs was the daily sacrifice, Numb. 28. 3. Of rams, those in their principal solemnities, Numb. 28. 11, 27. and upon some other special occasions, Levit. 5. 15. & 6. 6. & 8. 2. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Psal. 66. 15.

and of the fat] Not of the flesh, or the body of the beast, (for that, the Hebrews have two other words to express, Psal. 63. 5. and 109. 24. and it might lawfully be eaten, Neh. 8. 10. chap. 25. 6. & 55. 2.) but the fat, or suet, that is about the flank, and the kidneys, or about, and upon the entrails, Levit. 3. 3, 4. which out of all the sacrifices, was reserved as Gods portion, to be burnt upon his altar, Levit. 3. 15, 16. & 4. 8, 10. & 17. 6. Deut. 32. 38. 1 Sam. 2. 15, 16. (alluded to, Psal. 37. 20.) and is forbidden therefore to be eaten by any, Levit. 3. 17. & 7. 23, 25.

of fed beasts] Not fat barely, but fatted of purpose, Luke 15. 23, 27. the best and choiseſt ye can bring, 2 Sam. 6. 13. 1 King. 1. 9. Amos 5. 22.

I delight not in] Heb. have not delighted. See v. 2, 3. Though he much delighted in the good affection, and obedience of his faithful people expressed in, and testified by such performances, Gen. 4. 4. and 8. 21. Psal. 20. 3. & 51. 19. Mal. 3. 4. Yet not at all, in the things themselves simply considered, Psal. 50. 15. (how soever the Gentiles had such a fond and grosse conceit of him, as of their own false gods, Deut. 32. 37, 38.) much leſs in them, by such persons, and in such manner performed, ch. 57. 6. Jer. 7. 22, 23.

the blood] Reserved, as the fat, to make atonement for their souls, Levit. 17. 11. As a type of the Messias his bloud, whereby our propitiation, and peace with God is procured, and purchased, Rom. 3. 25. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 1. 14, 20. Heb. 9. 12, 22. The principal cause of the prohibition of eating bloud, Lev. 7. 26, 27. & 17. 10, 12.

of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he-goats] Of these three kinds of cattel only their sacrifices were, bullocks, or heifers of the herd; sheep, or goats, of the flock, Gen. 15. 9. Levit. 1. 2, 3, 10. & 4. 23. Numb. 19. 1. Psal. 50. 9. & 66. 15.

lambs] Because rams were mentioned before, Psal. 37. 20.

he-goats] The Hebrew word signifies the greater sort of that kind, chap. 14. 9. Jer. 50. 8. For there is another word that signifies ordinarily, Male-goats, Gen. 37. 31. Levit. 4. 23. and goats, in general, a third. Levit. 1. 10. & 3. 12. See before, fed beasts.

V. 12. When ye come to appear before me] Which thrice a year, all their Males were enjoyned to do, Exod. 23. 17. & 34. 23. Deut. 16. 16. As also upon other occasions, many of them, oft, at other times, did, 1 Sam. 10. 3. Psal. 42. 2, 4. & 66. 13.

to appear] Heb. to be seen. As Exod. 34. 23. Deut. 31. 11. Which, though the ordinary phrase of such accesse and approach; yet may here have some emphasis, more then ordinary: as implying, that they repaired thither, only to be seen there; and that was all the good that thereby they gained. So our Saviour of the Pharisees, Mat. 6. 2, 5, 16.

before me] In my house, in my temple: the place of my special residence, Deut. 12. 5, 11. Psal. 42. 2. & 84. 7. & 95. 2. Jer. 7. 10.

who hath required this?] Or, who doth require it? As before, I delight not, verſ. 11. yet had he required it, Deut. 12. 5, 6. But not so much that, as other things, which he more regarded, Ier. 7. 21, 23. Ezek. 20. 39, 40. and that from such as were accordingly qualified, Levit. 10. 3. Ezek. 14. 3, 4. So that it is, as if he had said; I neither desire, nor require, either the company of you, or ought from you: What I required sometime of my people, I require not now so you: being such as you are, and coming so as ye do. Against whom therefore, he witheth his temple-doors thut, Mal. 1. 10.

at your hand] Heb. from your hand. That is, of you, or, from you, as 2 Sam. 4. 11. Mal. 1. 9, 10, 13. Yet, there may here be some eye to their hands, being such as he saith they were, v. 15.

to tread] Or, trample on. As ch. 63. 3. As if by repairing to his house, they did but trample upon the pavement of it, as a company of beasts would do; and foul it only, and wear out the stones of it with their feet. That was all the good they did, or was gotten by their appearance there, Ezek. 23. 38, 39.

my courts] The courts of the Temple, or Sanctuary, Psal. 84. 2. and 116. 19. which were principally two; the inner court, wherein the Priests and Levits ministred; and the outer court, wherein the people met, 2 Chr. 4. 9. Ezek. 40. 31, 44. Luke 1. 10. This reproof therefore seems to reach the Priests, as well as the people. Howsoever, courts may be put for court, as chap. 62. 9. And the great court, into which the people had free accesse, seems to have been divided into divers partitions. See Ier. 26. 10. and that also is stiled the temple: for there they were whom our Saviour drove out, Mat. 21. 12, 14.

V. 13. Bring no more] Heb. add not to bring, as verſ. 5. chap. 23, 12. He would rather have none brought, then any brought in that manner: rather not be served at all, then not to be served by such, Ier. 7. 21. Ezek. 20. 39. Mal. 1. 10.

vain oblations] Heb. an oblation of vanity, as, Lam. 2. 14. Oblation, for, Oblations, as verſ. 1. 6.

oblations] Meat-offerings. Sometime offered alone, Levit. 2. 1. Sometime additionals to other sacrifices, Numb. 15. 4. The word signifies, in general, a presents solemnly tendred unto God, or man, in acknowledgment of honourable respect to either, or for procurement of grace and favour with either, Gen. 4. 3, 5. & 32. 13, 18, 20, 21. & 43. 11. 1 Sam. 10. 27. 2 King. 20. 12. Psal. 45. 12. in regard whereof, it is by some deemed to descend from a word that signifieth, to bring; by others, from one that signifies, to pacifie, or make quiet. But it is more specially applyed to some certain sort of religious oblations; whereof, see further on ch. 57. 6.

vain] Because a service, not sincerely, but feignedly, performed, chap. 29. 13. & 59. 4. Lam. 2. 14. Or, vain, because in vain offered, or not regarded, nor accepted, Gen. 4. 4. verſ. 11. Mal. 1. 9, 10. and 2. 13. Mat. 15. 9.

incense] Both that which the Priests daily burnt on the golden altar, Exod. 30. 3, 7, 8, 35, 36. As that also which the people brought, together with their offerings, Levit. 2. 1, 2.

is an abomination to me] Heb. abomination it to me. It, for, is. The pronoun, for the verb-substantive: a thing in Hebrew very frequent, Psal. 44. 4. Eccles. 1. 5, 10. & 7. 9. Abomination, that is, very abominable, Levit. 18. 22. As desolation, for very desolate, verſ. 7. That which was formerly reputed, a pleasing, and pleasant favour unto God, Exod. 29. 7, 8. Psal. 141. 2. Ezek. 20. 41. That now, from them, as a thing most unfavoury, and of evil scent, he utterly abhorreth, Levit. 26. 31.

the new Moons, and Sabbaths, the calling of Assemblies] Or, the calling of Assemblies, in the New Moons, and the Sabbaths. A defect of the particle, in, as ler. 9. 2. so Numb. 12. 8. Psalm 10. 4. and elsewhere.

new Moons] Heb. new-Moon, as Psal. 81. 2. So, Sabbath, and Assembly. See verſ. 13, 6.

Sabbaths] Either weekly, or yearly, Levit. 23. 3, 32, 38, 39.

calling of Assemblies] Heb. to call; Or, proclaim a Convocation. Which was done in those solemn times of convening, by sound of trumpet, as well to give warning to the people of meeting, as to incite them unto due preparation of themselves thereunto, Numb. 10. 2, 7, 10. Psal. 81. 2. Joel 2. 2, 15. A learned Annotator, lately divulged, giveth two other readings here; either taking the words absolutely, As for the new Moons and Sabbaths, and calling of assemblies. Or, with supply from the former branch, Add not to call, that is, call no more meetings, on the new Moons and Sabbaths. Which latter I mislike not.

I cannot away with] Heb. only, I cannot: or am not: or, shall not be able; to wit, to bear it, or, to endure it any longer, or the like: I cannot; for, I cannot bear: as, ye could not; and, ye cannot, for, ye could not bear; and, ye cannot bear, 1 Cor. 3. 2. and, I could not; for, I could not for bear, Jer. 20. 9. An imperfect speech, intimating an inexpressible measure or degree of discontent. Such a burthen it was to him, that he was even tired out with it, and no longer able to endure it. See v. 14. Jer. 44. 22. Amos 7. 13.

it is iniquity] So most Interpreters. As declaring the cause, why these offices were so displeasing to him, in regard of the iniquity inherent in those by whom they were performed, or adhering to the duties in their performance of them, Psal. 66. 18. Prov. 15. 8. & 22. 27. chap. 43. 23, 24. Others rather, it is an affliction, or, a grievance, as the word is used, Job 5. 6. ch. 10. 1. and oft elsewhere. And this seems the more probable.

even the solemn meeting] So it is generally rendred; or, much to the same purpose. Yet with that late learned Annotator, I finde this last clause thus fastned to the words foregoing, I cannot endure iniquity, and a convent: that is, saith he, a solemn meeting joyned together with wickednesse, as with you it is: And much to the same purpose, with one only before him: but in another construction, iniquity, and congregation, that is, a wicked congregation. As a consumption, and determination, for, a determinate consumption, chap. 10. 23. And it is true that such kind of construction as this, is not unusual: of which, see chap. 4. 5, 6. As also that the word here used, and another not unlike it, do both sometime signifie, a solemn assembly, or day of restraint, Jer. 9. 2. Joel 1. 14. So termed, because the people were thereon restrained, from their ordinary imployments, and affairs, Levit. 23. 7, 8, 21, 24, 25, 27, 31. For thence, I suppose it rather to termed, then as that learned Annotator, because it closed, or concluded the festival, being given therefore to the last day thereof, Levit. 23. 36. Numb. 25, 35. Deut. 16. 8. 2 Chron. 7. 9. for the word is used more generally, of dates of such solemn meeting, with the like restraint implyed, Amos 5. 21: and that also, where no other of that nature at all had then preceded, as 2 King. 10. 20. Joel. 2. 14. But yet to me it seems rather to have a signification of vexation. As another of the same original hath the like, Psal. 107. 39. ch. 53. 8. And so the words may well be rendred, It is a grievance or affliction and a vexation, to me. The last words are to be supplyed from the former clause, concerning incense. So verſ. 14.

V. 14. Your new Moons] Both the solemnities themselves, and the sacrifices offered in them, Numb. 10. 10. 2 Chr. 31. 3.

your appointed feasts] Heb. set-meetings. And so it would rather be rendred, more generally, both here, and Hos. 2. 11. to comprehend, as well fasts, as feasts, Levit. 23. 2, 4, 27, 37. see ch. 58. 3, 6. and of the word, further, on ch. 14. 13.

my soul hateth] I hate, or, I abhor, as Job 6. 7. or, I hate them from my heart, Psal. 11. 5. Prov. 6. 16. Zach. 11. 8.

they are a trouble to me] Or, a cumbrance. As Deut. 1. 12. where burthen, and it, are joyned together. They are such an encombrance, as wearies, and tires me out, Job 37. 11.

I am weary to bear them] Or with bearing of them. Or, of bearing them. For so we use to speak: as Gen. 19. 11. they were weary, or, wearied, to find, (that is, of seeking, or, with seeking to find) the door. And Jer. 6. 11. I am weary with holding. See verſ. 13. Jer. 15. 6. and 20. 19. a defect of the pronoun: as verſ. 3. 15.

V. 15. And when, &c.] Or, when also. As Jer. 1. 3. Neither your sacrifices, and oblations; nor your suits, and supplications: the incense of your prayers, Psalm. 141. 2. nor, the calves of your lips, Hos. 14. 2. shall find any acceptance with me, Prov. 1. 28. Jer. 11. 11. and 14. 12. Mic. 3. 9. Zach. 7. 13.

ye spread forth your hands] To wit, in prayer; Described by the gesture therein ordinarily then used, with arms spread forth, and hands laid open; especially in solemn earnest prayer, Exod. 9. 29, 33. 1 King. 8. 22, 38. Ezr. 9. 8. Job. 11. 13. Psalm 88. 9. and 143. 6.

I will hide mine eyes from you] I will not regard, either you, or your prayers; but I will hide my face, as Psalm 27. 9. and 30. 7. chap. 8. 17. (for eyes, are sometime put for face Ezek. 23. 40. compared with Jer. 4. 30. as, face, for eyes, chap. 25. 8.) Or, my self, as Psalm. 10. 1. chap. 57. 17. from you; as one that withdraweth himself, and will not be spoken with, Hos. 5. 6, 15. Or, I will turn mine eyes from you, as from some loathsome, and abominable thing, that one cannot endure the sight of, Psalm 109. 7. Prov. 15. 8. and 21. 13. and 28. 9. See the phrase, Prov. 28. 27. and the like, chap. 58. 7. Ezek. 22. 26.

yea, when ye make, &c.] Though ye be never so instant, and importunate, by such your instancy and importunity, hoping and expecting to speed, and prevail, Matth. 6. 7. Luk. 11. 8. Yet it shall not avail you, Prov. 1. 28.

yea] Heb. also, As Psalm 41. 9.

when] Or, though. As Gen. 8. 21. Josh. 17. 18. Psalm 23. 4.

ye make many prayers] Heb. multiply prayers. As multiply sope, Jer. 2. 22. and multiply medicine, Jer. 48. 11. For, use much sope, and many medicines.

I will not hear] I will not hear you. The pronoun wanting to be supplyed. As verſ. 3. Israel knoweth not me: So here, I will not hear you: and chap. 40. 5. all flesh shall see it. To hear, with man, is sometime, to obey: as verſ. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 22. with God, to grant, Psalm 4. 1. and 20. 1. But there seems here, to be some emphasis in it, more then ordinary. I will not so much as give you the hearing, much leſs grant your requests. See Zach. 7. 11, 13.

Your hands are full of blood] The reason why God so abhorred their praiers, because their hands which they spread out in prayer, and ought therefore to have been pure, and clean, 1 Tim. 2. 8. were polluted, and that with blood, ch. 59. 3. see v. 12.

blood] Heb. bloods. That is, blood-guiltiness, Psalm 51. 14. and 55. 23. ch. 26. 23. Murther, cruelty, oppression, extortion, verſ. 20. which are as murther, in Gods repute, verſ. 21. chap. 3. 25. Mic. 3. 3. 1 Joh. 3. 15. That which was the cause why their prayers sped no better, seemed they never so devout, chap. 58. 2, 3, 4. and 59. 2, 3. Job 27. 8, 9. Ezek. 8. 17, 18. See ch. 4. 4.

V. 16. Wash ye] An exhortation taking its rise, from the reason before rendred, of the evil succesſe of their suits, and directing them, to what was to be done by them, if they desired to speed in prayer, and to have their services accepted. So ch. 58. 6. 10.

wash ye, make your selves clean] If the foulnels of your hands be that which hinders the acceptance of your services, and the succesſ of your suits, then must you wash and cleanse them, ere you can hope to have gracious acceptance of the one, or effectual audience for the other, Job 11. 13, 14.

wash ye] Cleanse both your hands and hearts, Psal. 26. 6. and 73. 13. Jer. 4. 14. Jam. 4. 8. An allusion to the rites of washing, then in use, of mens bodies, their garments, and their sacrifices, Exod. 19. 10. Levit. 1. 9. and 8. 21. Numb. 19. 28, 29. Deut. 21. 6. and 23. 11. Heb. 9. 10. and 10. 22.

make ye clean] Heb. be cleanſed, ch. 52. 11. as verſ. 24. See ch. 52. 1. Wash your selves sedulously, and diligently, over, and over; again, and again, until you be effectually, and throughly cleanſed, Psal. 51. 2, 7.

put away the evil of your doings from mine eyes] Which cause me to turn my face away, and to hide mine eyes from you, verſ. 15. Let me not hear, or see any more of them, if you would have me to regard, and hear you, your services, and your suits, Job 11. 14. Remove them from before my face, leſt I set them before yours, Psalm 50. 21.

cease to do evil] The first step to amendment, Psalm 34. 14. and 37. 27. 1 Pet. 3. 11. Succeaſe your cruelty, your injurious and merciless carriage towards your brethren, chap. 4. 6. Ezek. 45. 9.

V. 17. Learn to do well] Apply your selves unto the practice of the contrary duties, Psal. 34. 14. and 37. 37. Luk. 3. 9, 14. and 19. 8, 9. Ephes. 4. 22, 24, 28. Col. 3. 5, 12.

learn] Be instructed, and taught: take out a new lesson: as Deut. 5. 1. Psal. 119. 71, 73. ch. 26. 9, 10. Ephes. 4. 20. 24. Phil. 4. 12. Or, enure, and accustom your selves unto it: as Jer. 13. 23. and 31. 18. Hos. 10. 11.

to do well] To exercise mercy, and beneficence, ch. 58. 6, 7, 10. Dan. 4. 27.

seek judgment] From the general he descendeth to those particulars wherein they most failed: and presseth them with the duties of the second Table. Because hypocrites, though professing a great deal of devotion, yet are therein wont much to falter and fail. So Psal. 50. 16, 18. Mic. 6. 7, 8. Matth. 23. 23. Jam. 1. 26, 27. and 2. 14, 26. While they vainly imagine, that their sedulity and assiduity in the one, may make amends for their defects and defaults in the other, Prov. 21. 27. Jer. 7. 9, 10. How beit these are the things, that God professeth to prefer before sacrifice, Prov. 21. 3. ch. 61. 8. Mark 12. 33.

seek judgment] Consider seriously, and sedulously, what belongeth to you in your places of judicature, and do it, cap. 16. 5. So seek peace, and the like, Psalm 34. 14. Amos 5. 14. Zeph. 2. 2. He bendeth his speech to the Princes, and Rulers especially; because they were principally in fault; and by their example encouraged others to their evils, which they ought to have redreſſed in others, verſ. 23. Ecclef. 5. 16.

relieve] Heb. righten, as Prov. 23. 19. do them right. Set things right, and strait, between the oppreſſed and those that oppreſs them. Do as God himself doth, whose Vice-gerents ye are, Psal. 82. 1, 3. and 146. 7.

the oppreſſed] The word properly signifies those whose hearts are so vexed with evil usage, that their spirits are made as sour a vinegar, or leven; or as with vinegar, or leven, Exod. 12. 39. So Psal. 73. 21. and the same intimates the term given to the Oppreſſour, so called, as a fourer of the hearts and spirits of those, whom he so dealeth with, Psal. 71. 4.

judge] Judge for them. Do them justice: as Deut. 32. 36. Psal. 7. 8. and 26. 1. or, judge the cause of the orphan, as verſ. 23.

the fatherleſs] Heb. the orphan. Such as want either parents, or either parent, to protect them. Concerning whom therefore, God gives special charge, Exod 22. 22. 21. Deut. 10. 18. and 24. 17. and 27. 19. Psal. 82. 3, the want hereof is complained of, and reproved, v. 23.

plead for] Heb. debate, contend for, Prov. 25. 9. chap. 3. 13. or, upon debate, decide for, Psal. 43. 1. and 119. 154. Mic. 7. 9. or, plead the cause of the widow, as before.

the widow] Who wants now her husband to help her; and whom God therefore takes special care of, Exod. 22. 22. 1. Psal. 68. 5. Jer. 7. 6. and 22. 3. widow, for widows: as before, vision, verſ. 1. and orphan here.

V. 18. Come now] A gratious invitation, with offer, and promise of reconcilement, remission of fore-passed transgressions, and restitution of former blessings, and benefits, upon such reformation, as was before here required. So chap. 55. 1, 3, 6, 7. and 58. 6, 12. Ezek. 18. 21, 22.

let us reason together] Let us debate the matter between our selves, setting apart the creatures formerly called in, verſ. 2. Consider well, you your selves, whether the terms I propound be not equal and reasonable, and for your own good. Thus is God content to condescend, and stoop so low to sorry wretches, as to argue with them, and to make them even as Judges in their own cause, Job 9. 32. & 16. 21. chap. 5, 3, 4. Jer. 2. 5, 31. Mic. 6. 1, 2, 3.

though] Heb. if. As Job 14. 7, 8. and 16. 6.

your sins be as scarlet] That is, as red, as scarlet: as Exo. 4. 6. his hand was as snow, that is, as white as snow: as red as scarlet, that is, of the deepeſt dye, of the heynousest guilt: of a scarlet colour that comes neareſt unto bloodsins in grain, as we use to say, chap. 63. 1, 2. allu-

scarlet] The word is by some supposed, to signifie cloth double-dyed, either first in the wool, and then again in the web: or, after it hath past the Weavers hand, twice dipt to make the colour the deeper, and the cloth to keepe colour the better. But this seems not to probable, for the sentence should be cast full in the latter manner, which is not so agreeable to reason. Nor is it probable, that the invention of those double-dies, were any thing neere so ancient, as the use of this word, in matter of dye, or colour, is found in Scripture; being of so late a date in comparison of Moses, that seven hundred years were over, after the building of Rome, ere it came to be in use there. See Plin. lib. 9 cap. 39. The word is indeed used sometime for double garments, Prov. 31. 21. and sometime for a twined, or twisted thred Gen 38 28 30. or, lace, or, cord, Josh. 2 15, 18, 21. For there is little reason to imagine, that a woman of so mean condition, as was Rahab, should have in her house, a cord of crimson, or scarlet, and, that double-dyed too, as some have rendered it, so strong, and so long, as to let the spies down from the top of the Town-wall, of whose height, see Deut. 1. 28. Howbeit, the word is most commonly used, for such a Red reed, as the cochinel, or the scarlet-grain yeelds, 2 Sam. 1. 24. Cant. 4 3 Isa. 1 18 30 Seldom is it found without yeelds, 2 Sam. 1. 24. Cant. 4 3 Isa. 1 18 30 Seldom is it found without the latter hereafter mentioned: and it is here in the plural, as Prov. 31. 21, but in another sence there, scarlets, for scarlet, as we also sometime use to speak, but in that form, never else where.

they shall be as white as snow] they, That is, your sins. But the phrase is metonymical, for to speak properly, the sins themselves are not purified; but the persons, whose sins they are, when they are done away: as the garment of such are said to be whitened, when the spots of them are done away, Rev 7. 14 and so Christ is said, to purge our sins, Heb. 1. 3. when he purgeth us from our sins, Heb. 9. 14. The meaning is, that the guilt of your sins shall be so utterly abolished, being washed away in the blood of the Messias, 1 John. 1. 7. Rev. 1. 5. & 7. 13, 14. that ye your selves, who were formerly so tainted, and coloured with them in your soules, as if your bodies had been rom top to toe, dyed all over with some deep red shall appear, as clean, as pure, as white, as snow, in Gods sight Psal 51. 7. Cant. 4. 7. as white as snow, and whiter then snow, a proverbial forme of speech, very frequent in Scripture, Psal. 68. 14. Dan. 7. 9. Lam. 4. 7. Matth. 17. 2. and 28 3. Mar. 9. 3. Rev. 1. 14.

though they be red like crimson] Or, as crimson: that is, as red as crimson, as 2 King. 3 22. red as blood: that is, as red as blood. Some of the Rabbines take this to be a deeper colour then the former; and so in reason it should be, if they be several colours. But others of them, affirm them to be one and the same: they are most commonly joyned together, as importing one and the same thing, both in the discription of the work of the Tabernacle, and the Priestly apparel; as also in the purification of the leper, and other unclean ones: save, that this is put first, that after, in the one, Exod. 25. 4 & 26. 1. 31. & 28. 5, 6. Whereas, this followeth that in the other, Levit 14. 4, 6, &c. Numb. 19. 7. being found alone, and in a masculine form, twice only in this place, and Lam. 4. 5. But in both the forms of speech formerly mentioned, wherein they are conjoyned, the construction is such, as argues a concurrence of both, in one and the same subject: scarlet of crimson, and crimson of scarlet, (to use the words, whereby they are commonly rendered) as a rock of flint, or, a flinty rock, Deut. 8. 15. and, a flint of rock, or, a rocky flint 32 Deut. 32. 13. (which in effect are all one) or, (to render it, as I suppose the genuine notion of either, to be) the scarlet grain of crimson, or, of the worme: that is, the worme, or crimson grain, for thereof hath the crimson his name; from the worm, not from the grain) and the worm of the scarlet grain, or, the grainy worm, or, crimson. For the latter word here used signifies a worm, cap. 41. 14. Jon. 4. 7. and a worm ordinarily grows in that grain, wherewith the crimson is died; from whence also, both in Arabick, and in other tongues, it hath its name. Of this worm, see Pausanias in Phocicis. & Plin. lib. 14. cap. 4. The former word therfore, I conceive to signifie the grain, the latter, the worm: & the same colour to be in both intimated; unless this latter add ought to the deepnesse of the die, the worm being of it self, a deeper red then the grain is by it self alone. See Nahum 2. 3 they shall be as wool] That is, as white, as wool, as of snow before: a defect of the former epithet, to be from the particle of similitude understood. as 2 King. 5. 27 or out of the former branch to be here supplied, at the term, red, in the former, out of this latter.

as wool] That is, pure wool, as Dan 7. 9 or as white wool, Rev. 1 14. For, there are as well black, or brown; as white wools in those parts, as well as with us, Gen. 30. 32. as white wool undyed, another defect of the epithet: the like whereunto, see chap. 5. 2. Mal. 1. 14 and the very same, where snow and wool are joyned together; and snow likened to wool, Psal. 147. 16. the very same thing that was spoken in the former branch, is (after the usual manner of this Prophet) repeated; but with other terms of expression in this latter. For, as for that, which one of the Jewish writers hath, that Gods meaning should be, that if their sins were but as scarlet, they should be made as white as snow: but if they were, as crimson, (which is a deeper die) they should be made no whiter then wool, that comes short of snow: It is a fivo'ous fancy, wronging the text, and mincing Gods mercy: whose mind and intent, doubtless, was to give his people affirmance of a full, and entire purging of them, from the guilt of their sins, by the blood of his Son, were they never so heynous, upon their repentance, 1 Joh. 1. 7. Besides, that it is affirmed by those that are well skilled in such affaires, that wool, even with us, artificially dressed for worsted, is not, for whitenesse, inferiour to snow it self. As little credit, I suppose, is to be given to that groundless conceit, that some of our Rabbinical Writers have of late vented, (who yet tax all for blind buzards, that deale with this place before them,) to wit, that the Prophet in these words, alludes to a rite used in sending out of the scape-goat Levit. 16. 10. between whose horns (as the Talmudists tell us) the high Priest, before the dismission of him, was wont to put a piece of scarlet, cut out like a tongue; which if it of it self it turned white, (as it may be, by some jugling, the Priests made the people believe sometime that it did) they then beleived that their sins were remitted. But of this rite, there is no precept: of this miracle, no mention in Moses. And it is more likely, that from this place the fable was forged, then that the Prophet should here have reference to any such figment.

V. 19. if ye be willing, &c.] If you can be content to accept of the terms before propounded, v. 16. 17.

willing, and obedient] implying, that whatsoever they had hitherto suffred, was to be justly ascribed to their former wilful disobedience, Psal. 81. 11, 16.

be willing and obedient] Or, will consent, (as Pro. 1. 10.) and obey, or, consent to obey. as Exod. 3. 7. to what is now required of you.

obedient] Heb. hear. As 1 Sam. 12. 15. & 15. 22. See vers. 15.

ye shall eat the good of the land] Ye shall reap, receive, perceive, and enjoy, whatsoever benefit and commodity the land is able to afford you, Levit. 26. 3, 5, 10. Deut. 2. 11, 12. it shall not be devoured, as before, by your enemies, v. 7. but you your selves shall enjoy it chap. 62. 8, 9.

good] Heb. goodnesse. For good things, as Neh. 9. 36. Jer. 2. 7. the abstract for the concrete, as v. 7. chap. 64 10. Of the goodnesse of the land, see Gen. 13. 10 Numb. 13. 20. & 14. 7. Deut. 8. 7. 9. Joel 2. 3.

V. 20. But] Heb. And: as v. 21. 22 Gen. 4. 2. chap. 29. 13.

if ye refuse] Oppoſed to contenting, Neh. 9. 17. Psal. 78. 10. Prov. 1. 24.

and rebel] Opposed to obeying. v. 2. chap. 63, 10.

ye shall be devoured] A fearful conmination annexed, to enforce them to acceptance of the conditions propounded. So Lev. 26. 14, &c. Deut. 28. 15, &c.

devoured] Heb. eaten up: So Jer. 21. 7. these word is said to have a mouth; and therewith to devour, Jer. 46. 10, 14.

with the sword] Of your enemies, chap. 3. 25. yet called also the sword of the Lord, Jer. 12. 12. because sent in upon them, by him, Levit. 26. 25. and comming with his commission, and by his command, Jer. 47. 6, 7. Ezek. 14. 17. See a passage parallel to this, Job 36. 12.

the sword, as comprehending by a Synechdoche, all war-like weapons. chap. 21. 15. Jer. 5. 35, 37. is put frequently for hostile invasions, and all such calamities as are wont to accompanie the same, Deut. 28. 22. Ezek. 14. 17, 21.

for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it] God himself, as by word of mouth, hath spoken it, chap. 40. 5. and 58. 14. and it is therefore of most undoubted truth, and shall assuredly be effected, 1 King. 14. 12. chap. 11. 17. 2 Sam. 14. 28, 29. Ezek. 12. 25.

the Lord] Heb. Jehovah. He, who, as he hath his being in himself, Exo. 3. 14. and gives being to all things, beside himself, Rev. 4. 11. So to his word also, as well as to his works; whether of promise, or of menace, Exod. 6. 3. See v. 1.

spoken it] A defect of the pronoun, or affix, as chap. 21. 17. Hos. 8. 4.

V. 21. How is, &c.] A new increpation of them for their generall defection; as promising little hope of a found reformation.

How] Spoken in way of admiration, as wondring at so strange an alteration with them. So Jer 2. 21.

is the faithfull city become an harlotet] Jerusalem, who had plighted fidelity unto God, 2 Chr. 15. 2 15. & 23. 16. and had for some time continued faithfull to him, (even when Israel fell away) as a loyall wife to her husband, 2 Chro. 13. 9, 11. Hos. 11. 12. but now carried her self dilloyally, as a harlot, or common strumpet, Psal. 73. 27. & 106 39. chap. 57. 4, 11. Jer. 2. 20. & 3. 20. 21. Ezek. 16. 15, 23. & 23. 3, 8, &c.

it was full of judgment] A place, wherein judgment and justice had been. plentifully and constantly exercised, and executed under her religious Kings, and righteous Rulers, 2 Sam. 8. 15. 1 King. 10. 9. 2 Chr. 19. 4 to 11. Jer. 22. 3, 6.

full] Of it, as a river of water at high tide, or swelled up with a land-flood, Amos 5. 28. See ch. 11. 9. For the Jewish Doctor here dallieth who from the word rendred ful, gathereth, that there were 480 either courts of Judicature, or oratories (for the term of convention used by him, may import either in Jerusalem; because the letters of that term make up that number, as indeed they do, and one over. Which pity it is, he tooke not notice of, to coin us out of it some other mysterie: that letter especially being a radical, which the two last are not.

righteousnesse is lodged in it] Or, in her. The meaning is, that matters were there so evenly carried, and uprightly decided, that Justice it self might seem to have taken up her abode there. See Psal. 85. 9, 11. and the contrary hereunto, Psal. 55. 9, 11. Howbeit, in regard of murtherers persons in the opposite member mentioned, some by justice, understand here, men of justice, just men, as might, for, men of of might, mighty men, chap. 3. 2. 5. and righteousnesse, for, the most righteous ones, chap. 64. 6. See v. 26. For our Jewish Masters here again dally with us in their descant upon the word, lodge: as if that term were here used in relation to the manner of their judiciary proceedings, wherein pecuniary controversies were usually decided the same day; but in cases of life and death, or capital crimes, the judgment was not dispatch'd the same day that the cause was heard; but unless the party appeared to be guiltless, the doom of death was deferred unto the day following, being put off till then, of purpose, in this regard, if ought mean while might come to light, whereby the parties innocency might appear: and justice therefore should be said to lodge there. But as one of them well observeth, the word is not here in the notion of a mighty stay, as Iudg. 19. 15. 20. Ier. 14. 8. but in an humble tarter of constant abode, as Iob. 17. 2. 15. 20. Ier. 14. 8. but in an humble tarter of constant abode, as Iob. 17. 2. & 41. 22. Psal. 25. 13. Ier. 4. 14. Zach. 5. 4. So 2. Pet. 3. 13. wherein righteousnesse is dwelleth; the same with lodged here.

but] Heb. and as v. 20, 28.

now murtherers] That is, men given to oppression and cruelty, v. 15. ch. 3. 11. For our Jewish Masters here, either daily again, renewing their former note, of condemning and executing men without respite, or reprival, the same day that their cause was heard; or shoot wide, referring the Prophets words to times far remote, to the murther of Zachariah under King Ioash, 2 Chr. 24. 21, 22. which was long before Esayes dayes, and of Uriah, under Iehoiakim, Jer. 26. 23. which was again as far later then his times. Whereas the Prophet speaketh expressly of the time he lived in, & that more particularly, at which he delivered this Prophecie; now murtherers. It is a defective form of speech, (but quick and emphatical) to be supplied from one of the members in the fore-going sentence: as the like, verf. 18. ch. 3. 6. either such now lodge in it, or it is full of such. And if it were so in Manasseh's time, 2 King. 21. 16. it is very probable, that it was no otherwife in Achaz his daies.

V. 22. Thy silver is become drosse] Some understand it, as the letter sounds, of the counterfeiting, or embasing of their coyn. But it seems rather to be a figurative speech, implying, that whatsoever purity or goodnes had formerly been among them, it was all now clean gone: and if any outward form of it remained, it was but as drosse, which though it may sometime have a few of good metal; yet it is of no true worth, or value, Prov. 26. 23, ch. 64. 6. Ier. 6. 28, 30. Ezek. 22. 18, 19. 2 Tim. 2. 20, 21. & 3. 5.

drosse] He. drosses. Either the plural, bearing the same sence with the sing. as Ezek. 22. 18. where both are used, as tins, v. 25. or the plural used by way of excesse; for all drosse, or all manner of drosse: not of silver alone, but of other baser metals too. See Ezek. 22. 18, 19.

thy wine is mixt with water] Some understand this also, of the Vintners fraud, and the like in other trades, practised by mixing unsound stuff with the better sort of their wares, thereby to vent the one, for, or, with the other. Yea, there want not those, that refer both this and the former, to their Vintners, that cheated their customers, as well with counterfeit coyn mixt with base metal, as unmixt, Rev. 14. 10. such as usually, and easily, is wont to overcome men, ch. 56. 12. Nah. 1. 10. the best and excellentest ordinances are thereby signified; or those that in former times, had been kept most free from corruption.

mixt] Or, spoiled with water. Which both taketh away the purity, and abateth the strength and efficacy of wine. The word is no where else found in Scripture.

water] Heb. as some think, waters. But of that, see heavens, v. 2. V. 23. The Princes, &c.] See v. 10.

are rebellious] Or, revolters. As it is well rendred, Hos. 9. 15. For these two are distinguished, Ier. 5. 23. and the verb, whereof it comes, signifies to turn away, go aside, or, depart from, Psal. 34. 14. Jer. 6. 4, 8. See v. 4, 5.

and companions of thieves] Maintaining extortioners, and evildoers; not winking only at them, Levit. 20. 4. but countenancing, encouraging, bearing them out, partaking with them, Prov. 37. 24. Mic. 3. 11. & 7. 3. and doing themselves, the very same that such do, Eccles. 3. 16. chap. 5. verf. 23.

thieves] Put here, for all manner of wrong-doers, such as wrong others by force, filching or fraud. So Ier. 7. 9.

every one loveth gifts] Heb. a gift, or, bribe. So Psal. 28. 10. taken collectively, as v. 8.

after] Defires, likes, expects; requires, and takes. Exod. 22. 12. Hos. 4. 18. a practice forbidden, Exod. 23. 8. Deut. 10. 17. & 27. 19. and that with a curse on him that so doth, Deut. 27. 25. Job 15. 34. noted, and condemned in some, 1 Sam. 8. 3. chap. 5. 23. and the contrary approved, & commended in others, Psal. 15. 9. ch. 33. 15.

and followeth after rewards] He is as eager upon them, as a martial man is in the field, on the enemy, whom he hath in pursuit, Iudg. 4. 16. Psal. 18. 38. or, as a merchant man in his trade, on such commodities as he deems to be most advantagious, Psal. 34. 14. ch. 57. 1. Prov. 21. 21. Ephel. 4. 19. and omitting no means, or occasions, of procuring them, Prov. 1. 19. & 28. 21.

rewards] Doing nothing freely in their places, but all for hire, and retribution, Mic. 7. 3. And because this later word hath a notion of retribution, or, requital in it; Hence the Jewish Commenters expound it, of the judges compiotting and combining among themselves, to give by turns, wrong judgment, one for another, as others occasion should require. But the word seems to look another way, and that the same with the former.

they judge not the fatherleſſe] They judge not for them, be their cause never so just, (as verf. 17.) but against them rather, Psal. 109. 31. or they refuse to hear them, because they are not able to bribe them; as in the next clause, the widowes cause comes not before them, Ier. 5. 28. Zach. 7. 10.

fatherleſs] Or, orphan, & widow, collectively, as gift, before. So v. 17.

before them] Heb. to them, as Neh. 2. 13. Ier. 6. 21.

V. 24. Therefore thus ſaith, &c.] A dreadful conmination, yet mixt with a promise of reformation, and restauration, v. 25, 26.

ſaith] Heb. the ſaying of the Lord. And ſo chap. 3. 15. & 14. 22. and oft elsewhere.

the Lord] Heb. Adon. The title given to God in regard of his creatures, as their Soveraign Lord, and owner, Iosh. 3. 11, 13.

the Lord, the Lord of hoſts] as chap. 3. 1. & 10. 16. the latter would be retained, as in the Hebrew Jehovah: to distinguish it from the former: the Jehovah of hoſts. See v. 9. And hereby it may appear, that the word Jehovah, is sometime taken appellatively: as it is also, Deut. 6. 4. where it is said, Jehovah our God, is one Jehovah; that is, is the onelyetrue and eliential God, 1 Ioh. 5. 20. one, for only: as Zach. 14. 9.

the mighty one of Iſrael] The mighty Lord, or God, or Protector of Israel; as of Jacob. Gen. 49. 24. ch. 49. 26. and 60. 16. See v. 4. He that was formerly their powerfull Protector, will now exercise his power in punishing of them, ch. 63 9, 10.

mighty one] And their protector to Master them, be they never so strong, or great, v. 31. Yet some suppose the word to signifie rather Chiſtian, thus Mighty, as 1 Sam. 21. 7. Ioh. 14. 20.

Ah] An expreſſion of grief, as Ier. 22. 18. & 34. 5. See v. 4. Thus God goes about the punishing of his people, with grief; as enforced by their sins to do that, which otherwise he hath no mind unto, Lam. 3. 33. Ezek. 18. 31, 32. and 33. 11. Hof. 6. 4 and 11. 8.

I will eaſe me] Heb. I will be comforted; or, I will comfort my ſelf: as v. 16, I will ſatisfie my self, and cale my mind, by taking vengeance. See ch. 57. 5. Spoken after the manner of men, so unsufferably provoked, and so much enraged, that they cannot therefore be at rest, until they be avenged, Gen. 27. 41, 42. So ch. 47. 24. Ier. 5. 9. Ezek. 5. 13. and 16. 42. Hof. 10. 10.

of mine adverſaries] My people, whom I account now, not as children, but as enemies, and adverſaries: Such as by setting themselves against me, and walking crosly with me, have enforced me to carry my self, as an enemy toward them, Levit. 26. 21, 24. Deut. 32. 5, 25. verf. 20. chap. 63. 10. Ier. 30. 14. Luk. 19. 14, 27.

V. 25. And I will turn mine hand upon thee] Some render it against thee. (see v. 2.) Understanding it, as a proſecution of the former denunciation in the ful rigour of it. Mine hand, that had wont formerly to be stretched out for you, as my friends, against your foes, Psalm 89. 21, 23. & 136. 11, 12, 15. shall be now turned against you, to take vengeance upon you, and to destroy you, as my foes, Iudges 2. 14, 15. But others rather, unto thee, (as the particle is found used, Psal. 13. 6. ch. 53. 1.) I will put mine hand again unto thee, as a workman fets his hand to work, Prov. 31. 19. chap. 11. 11. I the to return is usually in Hebrew, to do a thing again, Gen. 26. 18. Ecclef. 4. 7. chap. 8. 5. Dan. 9. 25.) I will once more let upon reforming of thee: and the new molding of thee again, as at the first, v. 26. supposing it, by what followeth, to be spoken in way of mitigation, and moderation in part, at least of that dreadful and direful intermination, v. 24. as God intending by the doom therein denounced, the destruction, only of the worser sort; and the amendment of the better, Dan. 12. 10.

and I will purely purge away thy droſs] I will, by those calamities that I shall send upon thee, purge out of thee, the incorrigible wicked ones, Psal. 119. 119. Ezek. 20. 38. & 22. 19, 22. v. 31. and purifie the rest, ch. 4. 4. Ier. 9. 7. Dan. 9. 35 Zach. 13. 8, 9. Mal. 3. 3.

purely] Throughly. Heb. according to purity, as Pl. 18 20, 24. (but in another fence,) or, by purity, as Iob 12. 30. some render it, at with ſope. And the word here used, comes neer indeed to that of ſope; both of them deſcending from the same flock: Yea, the very word here used, seems to be so taken, and were most fitly so rendred, Iob 9. 30. where ſnow waters, and it, are joyned together; but the words following, carry it rather another way For ſope, as also nitre is for the scouring of mens bodies, and garments, Iob 9. 30. Ier. 2. 22 not for the melting and trying of metals, here intimated: and it may rather therefore wel be rendred, as with the fire of purity: the noun inclosed in the verb, Purity, for purifying matter, whether ſope, as Iob 9. 30. or fire, as here, (he is as the fivers fire, and as the fullers ſope, Mal. 3. 2.) as ſining, for fining pot, or fire, Prov. 17. 3. & 27. 21.

purge away] Heb. melt; or, burn out by melting, ch. 4. 4. Ier. 6. 29. and 9. 7. Ezek. 22. 20.

thy droſs] Heb. droſſes. See verf. 22. the wicked themselves, which are as the reſuſe of a State, Psal. 119. 119 Prov. 25. 4, 5. Ier. 6. 30. or the vices and corruptions of mens hearts and lives, Prov. 17. 3. & 27. 21. c. 48. 1. c. Ezek. 36. 25, 27. or both.

and I will take away all thy tin]Tin is mentioned among the baser metals, Num. 31. 22. Ezek. 22. 18. & it is said, being mixed with gold and silver, to make them harder, or shorter, and more brittle. Heb. tins, as drosses, v. 22. though in the singular number more usual, to intimate an utter riddance of such wicked ones, and wickednesses of all sorts. Some by dross, understand gross iniquity: by tin, glittering hypocrisie: or persons openly prophane by the one, inwardly unsound by the other. Which may well be, for that tin carrieth an outward resemblance of silver; as copper, or brass burnished, of gold, Rev. 1 15. Howbeit, I suppose rather with the Iewish Commenters here, that by several resemblances, the same wicked ones; are here, after our Prophets usual manner, represented and intended.

V. 26. And I will restore] Heb. bring back: or, cause to return: as 2 Sam. 15. 15. Ier. 34. 11. See v. 25.

thy Iudges] Thy Rulers and Governours, Iudg 2. 16. Acts 13. 20. not by raising up the same again; but others like them, in their room, as Mal. 4. 5. with Matth. 11. 14. Luk. 1. 17.

as at first] Such as thou hadst at first. Moses, Ioshua, David, &c. fulfilled in Ezekiah, Iosiah; and after the captivity, in Zorobabel, Ioshua, Nehemiah, and others.

and thy Counsellours] Such as by their advice, were assistant to the Rulers in chief, 1 Chr. 27. 32, 33. 2 Chro. 25. 16. and are, if prudent and faithful, a great stay to a State, Prov. 11. 14. chap. 3. 3.

as in the beginning] At the first setling and constitution of thee, as a State, after the coming out of Egypt, chap. 44. 2. and 46. 3. Ier. 2. 2.

afterward] Heb. after so, or, thus. When God hath thus purged thee, and set good Rulers over thee. See chap. 4. 2, 3. and Ezek. 36. 33.

thou shalt be called] Heb. it shall be called to thee; or, of thee: as ch. 64. 4, 12. thou shalt both be so, and be so accounted, as ch. 4. 3. & 61. 6. Matth. 5. 9.

the city of righteousnesse] Or, a city of righteousnesse, Ier. 31. 23. and 50. 7. as, a city of truth, Zach. 8. 3. that is, a true and righteous city: as, weights, and measures of justice: for just weights and measures, Levit. 19. 36. or, a city of just, or righteous ones, of men of righteousnesse, chap. 4. 3. and 62. 21. the abstract for the concrete, as Prov. 12. 27. and 21. 26. See v. 21, chap. 4. 2. and 64. 6.

the faithful city] Or, a faithful city. As returned to her former loyalty, v. 22. Hos. 2. 7, 16. faithful, as a faithfull spirit, Prov. 11. 13. or, a firm, setled, well establihed State; as a firm house, 2 Sam. 7. 16. For the word is in both places the same. See chap. 2. 2.

V. 27. Zion] Ierusalem, and the whole State of Iudah. See v. 8. Here the place for the people, as ch. 40. 9 & 49. 14.

shall be redeemed] Rescued, and delivered from her forepassed calamities, by her sins formerly procured, and from her sinners, and sins, whereby they have been procured. So the word of redeeming, is commonly taken in Scripture, Psal. 55. 18. & 107. 2. & 130. 5. ch. 29. 22. There promises be added, for the support and comfort of the faithful, as ch. 4. 2. and 10. 24. Ier 3. 14.

in judgment] Or, by Iudgment. To wit, executed by God upon the wicked among them, and upon the enemies of his people, chap. 4. 4. and 5. 16. and 34. 2. Ezek. 20. 38.

and her converts] Those that are reformed in her, from their former evill courses, ch. 10. 20, 21. & 59. 20. Or, those of her that return, to wit, from captivity, being bettered (as Manasseh sometime, 2 Chro. 33. 22, 23.) by their bonds, Ezra, 6. 21. Psal. 126. 1.

in righteousnesse] That is, in faithfulnesse, shewed on Gods part, by fulfilling his promises to his people, as Psal. 143. 1, 2. chap. 51. 5. and 56. 1. or, by righteousnesse; that is, by setting righteous Rulers over them, and setling the due execution of justice (before wanting, v. 23.) among them, Psal. 122. 5. ch. 32. 2. and 33. 5. and 54. 14. and 60. 17.

V. 28. And] Or, But. The copulative for the adversative, as v. 2. ch. 29. 23.

the destruction of the, &c.] The wicked shall have no part or portion in the blessings promised. Being either cut off by Gods iudgments before denounced, Psal. 38. 37. or, continuing still in an accused condition, by reason of their obstinacy in their sins, chap. 65. 20. The dross is consumed, or cast away, when the gold is once fined. So Iob 31. 3. Psal. 1. 6. and 37. 20. and 73. 26. and 92. 9. and 104. 35.

destruction] Heb. breaking. Alluding to the breaking of some earthen vessel, Psal. 2. 9. ch. 30. 14. Ier. 19. 11. So chap. 14. 15. & 15. 5. Ier. 4. 6, 20. and 6. 1.

transgressors] See v. 2. men openly prophane; such as have cast off all profession of piety, ch. 46. 8.

and sinners] Men of lewd life; though retaining some outward shew and semblance of devotion, ch. 48. 1, 2. & 58. 1, 2. Luke 7. 37, 39. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16. See v. 25.

and they that forsake the Lord] Ver. 4. by going after strange gods, ch. 65. 11. Ier. 1. 16. & 5. 7. or by breach of his commandments, and their covenant with him, Deut. 29. 25. Ier. 11. 10.

shall be consumed] By the fire of Gods iudgments, ver. 31. ch. 26. 11. or, the e shall be an utter riddance of them, Psal. 37. 20. Ier. 16. 4.

V. 29. For] Or, When, As vers. 30. Some understand it, as noting the time when they should so perish; others, as one reason, why they should so miscarry; to wit, because their Idols were unable to help, save, or relieve them, chap. 16. 12. Ier. 2. 28. and 11. 12.

they shall] Or, ye shall, &c. The person changed, as Iob 18. 4. ch 3. 14, 26. & 42. 20. Ezek. 31. 26. See v. 9.

shall be ashamed] Of your Idols, when you find them unable to relieve you, or to stand you in any stead. So ch. 30. 5. & 44. 9. See ch. 2. 20.

of the okes] Or, groves. Of such trees, Ezek. 31. 14. or, as some, of the gods, Idols, false gods, Exod. 15. 11. See the like ambiguity, chap. 57. 5. but tho former here rather, for that which followeth. Trees and groves set apart for idolatrous services, ch. 65. 3. Ier. 2. 20. & 3. 6. Ezek. 20. 28. forbidden, Deut. 12. 2, 3. & 16. 21.

okes] Yet some of the Iewish Doctors expound it not okes, but elms. That it was some kind of throwdy and thadowy tree, appears, Hos. 4. 13. where it is also rendred elmes.

which ye have desired] Or, delighted in. As chap. 2. 16. Ier. 22. 28. not so much in regard of the pleasantnesse of them, as for the worship of your idols, which your hearts were wholly set upon, and taken up with, chap. 57. 7, 8. & 66. 3. Ier. 17. 2.

and the gardens] Abused in like manner to the practice of idolatry, ch. 65. 3. & 66. 17. intimating, that in every place they had their idols, and excercised their idolatry, as well in their gardens, as in the woods and groves. See ch. 2. 8. & 17. 9.

that ye have chosen] Made choice of for such purposes, chap. 65. 12. and 66. 3.

V. 30. For] Or, when. As Psal. 75. 2. See v. 29.

ye shall be as an oke] Like one of those okes, or trees, (which ye delighted so much in, v. 29.) when you shall be stript of all your wealth and state; as it is of all its leaves and verdure, chap. 18. 1, 2. Ier. 17. 6. & 48. 6. See the contrary in the blessed estate of the godly, illustrated by the same kind of resemblance, Psal. 1. 3. Prov. 11. 28. Ier. 17. 8.

whose leaf fadeth] Heb fading, or, falling, with her leaf, that is fleedding, or, having shed her leaves, (see on chap. 10. 14.) despoiled of all its bravery, chap. 34. 4. leaf, for, leaves, as Ier. 8. 13. Ezek. 47. 12. See v. 8, 6.

and as a garden that hath no water] Heb. to which water is not That is, not watered, either from heaven, chap. 5. 6. Amos. 4. 7 or with the hand, and help of man, Deut. 11. 10. As one of those gardens you made such choice of, verf. 29. wanting water in time of drought: wherein nothing thrives, but all windles and withers away ch. 5. 13. & 10. 17. & 17. 4. See the contrary, ch. 58, 11. He alludeth to the trees, and gardens, that these idolators had offended in: as to those flowers and garlands, that the drunkards use to wear at their drinkings, chap. 28. 1.

V. 31. And the strong] Either the strongest of you, and all that they are able to do, as Psal. 76. 5, 6. Amos 2. 14, 16. or your strong idols, as ye esteem them; and all the makers of them, as Psal. 97. 7. and 115. 8. shall perish together, when the Lord truly mighty, v. 24. shall come to deal with them. See ch. 2. 18, 21.

the strong] One, for strong ones, as Amos. 2. 18. See ver. 30.

shall be as tow] As easie to take fire as tow, (see vers. 17.) which from the least spark that is, fireth, and is suddenly therewith consumed, Iud. 15. 14. & 16. 9.

and the maker of it] To wit of the idol, Hab. 2. 18. or, and his work; that is, all that he (to wit, the strong man) doth, or can do. So the word is used, Psal. 104. 22. Ier. 22. 13.

as a spark] To set the towe on fire. See Zach. 12. 6.

and they shall both burn together] Both perish together; the one, by, and for the other, ch. 2. 18.

and none shall quench them] The fire that God kindles, none but he can quench, Ier. 4. 4. & 17. 27. & 21. 12. Ezek. 20. 47, 48. Amos 5. 6.

CHAP. II.

Vers. 1. THE word] Here beginneth a second sermon; contained in the three ensuing chapters, concerning the restitution of the Church, principally under Christ. Which he both beginneth with chap. 2. 2, 4. and after the denunciation of many heavy judgments inserted, to be inflicted upon the main body of the Iewish people, for their manifold gross and grievous sins, at length concludes with ch. 4. 2, 6.

the word] Or, thing; or, matter. As the word is frequently used So 1 Sam. 14. 6. and 16. 18. Iob 4. 12. that which Esay saw.

that Isaiah] Or, Esay. See ch. 1. 1.

the son of Amoz] See ch. 1. 1.

saw] Had revealed unto him from God, and was as sure of, as if he had seen it done. See ch. 1. 1. and 5. 9. Amos 1. 1. Hab. 1. 1.

concerning Iudah, and Ierusalem] both their ruine and restitution. See ch. 1. 1. Thus far the title, or inscription of this particular Prophecie.

V. 2. And] Or, Now. As 1 Sam. 9. 1. Ezra 1. 1. Neh. 1. 1. For the ensuing discourse hath no connexion, with any foregoing. But the particle is here used, as oft-times in the Hebrew, to make entrance into some new relation, without dependance upon, or reference unto any other. So Hos. 1. 2. Ion. 1. 1.

it shall come to pass] Heb. it shall be, Chap. 43. a prediction of the restauration and enlargement of the Church, in the times of the Gospel. See the very same, Mic. 4. 1, 2, 3. but Micah in likelihood after Esay, if we compare Mic. 4. 1. with Ier. 26. 18, 19. And the Church to be gathered out of all Nations, is here described & illustrated, by its its eminency, frequency of repair to it, v. 2. alacrity and fervency of people repairing to it, ver. 3. and tranquility and peaceablenesse of people repairing to it, ver. 3. and tranquility and peaceablenesse of them among themselves, v. 4. Closed up with an incitement unto the Iewish people, to imitate their forwardnesse, v. 4.

in the last daies] Heb posterity: or, latter end of daies, as Ier. 23. 20. & 30. 24. The phrase commonly used to design (as the Iewish Commenters themselves on this place observe) the last age of the world, the daies the Messias, the times of the Gospel, Ier. 48. 47. and 49. 39. Ezek. 38. 8. and 16. Dan. 10. 14. Hos. 3. 5. Ioel 2. 28. Act. 2. 17. 1 Joh. 2. 18. And yet a late Annotator, (in this kind too oft faulty) would have this so pregnant a Prophecy of the times of the New Testament, fulfilled in Ahaz his daies, upon the deliverance of Ierusalem from Resin and Pekah, ch. 7. 1, 7.

the mountain of the Lords house] The mountain on which the house of the Lord stands. Mount Zion, on the North wing whereof, (where Ornans threshing floor sometime was, called also Mount Moriah, as bearing the name of the Region) the Temple was built by Solomon built. See Gen. 22. 2. 1 Chron. 21. 18, 26, 28. & 2 Chron. 3. 1. Psal. 48. 2. & 87. 1. chap. 14. 13. Zach. 8. 3. but here for the Church, whereof it was a type, Psal. 2. 6. and 87. 5. chap. 40. 9. and 61. 3. and 62. 1. Though some would have it here to signifie Christ, the stone, that being cut out of a rock, became a great mountain, Dan. 2. 34, 35. But the tenour of the text, and use of the type here, carries it rather the former way.

shall be established] As chap. 16. 5. or prepared, as Hos. 6. 9. So Psalm 108. 1. or set, placed, seated, as Psam 93. 2.

in the top of the mountains] In a most conspicuous place, Matth. 5. 14. and in regard of spiritual glory, advanced above all secular State, and power, Psal. 68. 15, 16. chap. 60. 1, 16. 2 Cor. 3. 9, 10, 18. Rev. 21. 9, 10, 23.

in] Or, on. As, on the mount, 1 King. 19. 11. on a hill, Matth. 5. 14. on earth, (for so it would be rendred) Matth. 6. 10.

top] Heb. head. Num. 23. 4. chap. 42. 11.

and all nations] The calling in of the Gentiles is here foretold; which out of all parts of the world should adjoyn themselves to the Church, Psal. 87. 5. chap. 11. 10. Ier. 3. 17. & 31. 12. Matth. 8. 11.

nations] Who are now in so mean and vile repute with you, that you esteem them unworthy of any society with you, Act. 10. 14, 15, 28. and 11. 3. and 22. 21, 22. Ephes. 2. 11, 12. See chap. 1. 4.

shall flow unto it] Shall by whole flocks, and sholes, come into the Church, and embrace the Gospel, like leffer rivers, that meeting together, run all into some one common stream; or as great rivers, swelling up at the flood, or tide, come flowing with a full stream, up into the land. A metaphor intimating as well a plentiful, as a voluntary confluence: for the waters are thus wont to flow in, not forced, but of themselves, Psalm 110. 3. Matth. 11. 12. Acts 2. 41. and 4. 4. So Psalm 34. 5. Ier. 31. 12. & 51. 44. A learned Writer observeth here, an elegant consonancy and similitude of sound, in the original, between this word of flowing, and the seem beforegoing, that ligh fies a mountain; so thence called, as he deemeth, because rivers use to flow down from it; and it seemeth to flow with them chap. 30. 25. & 64. 1, 3. Ioel 3. 18. and withall, hence gathereth, as therein intimated, the alacrity of the people here spoken of, making as fast up the hill, as rivers run down from the hill. But neither doth the notation of the word seem found and solid; and the notion built on it, rather witty then weighty. But see more hereof on Ier. 3. 17.

V. 3. And many people] Heb. peoples. As Psalm 100. 1. v. 4. a numerous company out of several nations, verse 2. Rev. 7. 9.

shall go] Heb. walk. As after here, so ch. 60. 4. they shall be content to take, though long journeys to such places, where they may be partakers of God ordinances, and joyn themselves unto the Congregations of Gods people, Psalm 84. 6, 7. Ier. 50. 4, 5. Eph. 2. 13.

and shall say, Come] The zeal and forwardnesse of the people is here described, that should be in those times; not content, alone to flock unto Gods house, and to embrace the Christian faith and profession themselves; but inciting others also: and each one another, thereunto, Psalm 122. 1. Ier. 31. 6. Zach. 8. 20, 23. Ioh. 1. 36, 37, 40, 41, 45.

let us go up] Or, repair unto; as chap. 37. 14. and 38. 22.

unto the mountain of God] That, which at Mount Sinai called also the mountain of God, 1 Kings 19. 9.) what time the law was delivered, they might not do, Exod. 19. 12, 21, 23. Heb. 12. 20.

unto the house of the God of Jacob] The house, the Temple; the place of his special abode. So Gen. 28. 17, 19. 1. Sam. 10. 3. 1 King. 8. 17, 19, 17. Psalm 42. 4. Ier. 7. 11.

the God of Jacob] Whom he and his posterity worshipped, and were in covenant with, Psalm 46. 11. & 105. 10.

Jacob] the son of Isaac, the brother of Esau; born, (but the latter) with him, at the same birth. So called; because, by holding his brother by the heel, at the time of his birth, he seemed to supplant him, who had started out before him, and thereby gotten the priviledg of birth-right; whereof yet afterward he defeated him. See Gen. 25. 26, 33. and 27. 36. Hos. 12. 2. His posterity were also called by his name, Psal. 14. 7. Hos. 12. 2.

and he will teach us] Or, that he may teach us. Intimating, either he effect, or the end of their repairing to Gods house, to be taught, to learn, Deut. 31. 12, Neh. 8. 1, 8, 12. Acts 13. 44. See the like use of the particle, Ioh. 14. 9. Psalm 86. 11. Mal. 1. 9.

he] Christ, the teacher of his Church, Matth. 23. 8, 10.

his ways] The manner of his service, and such courses of life and conversation, as he approves of, and are well pleasing in his sight, Psalm 18, 21. and 25. 4. and 119. 33. 1 Thess 4. 1.

and we will walk] As in way of promise, as Mic. 4. 5. or, that we may walk, in notion of end, and purpose; as before. The end, as of repairing to learn; so of learning to practice. Deut. 6. 1. Matth. 7. 24. Luke 11. 28. Ioh 13. 17. Iam. 1. 25.

in his pathes] As he hall direct us, waies, and paths, are here the same, as Psalm 25. 4. Prov. 3. 17.

for, &c.] Some take this clause, as a part of the peoples speech, rendring a reason, why they repaired thither to be taught; to wit, because the true knowledg of God was there onely to be had, ch. 60. 2. Zach. 8. 23. Others rather, (and so the Iewish Commenters) as the words of the Prophet, shewing by what means the people should be induced to flock, and flow in such manner, thither; to wit, by the notice given them, through the preaching of the Gospel, of what was there to be had, Psalm 96. 10. and 98. 2. ch. 61. 9. and 66. 19. Rom. 10. 18.

the Law] The doctrine of salvation by Christ, Psalm 19. 7. Rom. 3. 27. and 16. 25, 26. Ephes. 3. 3, 5, 6. Law, for, doctrine: as ch. 1. 10.

shall go forth out of Zion] Or, from Zion: as after, from Ierusalem. See ch. 1. 8, 27. from Zion, Psalm 50. 2. as before, from Sinai, Deut. 33. a. Heb. 12. 18, 22.

and the word of God] His message concerning the Messias, now exhibited, Act. 2. 22, 36. and 3. 13, 18. and 10. 36, 43. & 13. 23, 38, 44.

from Ierusalem] A type of the spiritual Ierusalem: the mother; and mother-city, of all the faithful, Gal. 4. 25, 26. Heb. 12. 22. The Gospel was to be preached, first at Ierusalem, and among the Iews; and from thence, to go abroad into all parts of the world, Psalm 110. 2. Luke 24. 47. Acts 1. 8. and 13. 46, 47. See v. 2.

V. 4. And he shall judg among the nations] The Lord Iesus, having all power of judicature given him by the Father, Matt. 11. 27. Ioh 5. 22, 23. shall, by the powerful Scepter of his Word, exercise his royal authority, not among the Iews alone, but among the Gentiles abroad, and subdue their hearts unto the obedience of it, Psal. 2. 8, 9. and 45. 5. and 110. 2, 6. Matth. 28. 18. Mark 16. 15, 16. 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. Rev. 6. 2. and 19. 21, 26.

and shall rebuke many people] Heb. peoples: as verf. 3. He shall convince them of their sins, and bring them to repentance, and faith in him; that so he may absoil them of their sins, and they may be saved by him, Iohn 16. 8, 9. Acts 2. 37, 38. and 3. 26. and 5. 31. and 11. 18. and 15. 9. and 26. 18.

and they] The people so convinced, and converted.

shall beat their swords into plow-shares] Beat: as Zach. 11. 6. Or, shall have their swords turned into plow-shares, or, having beaten or, broken; as ch. 30. 14. That is, by beating; or, breaking; or, having beaten out, or, broken; they shall convert, or, turn, their swords into plow-shares. See the like phrase, ch. 1. 4. A description of that peace and concord, that the Gospel preached doth produce among those that embrace it, Psalm 46. 9. chap. 9. 6. Hos. 2. 18. Zach. 9. 10. Luke 2. 14.

swords into plow-shares] which in time of peace, is wont to be done; when, of arms there is little use. As on the contrary, in times of war, such instruments of tillage, are wont to be converted into arms and ammunition, Ioel 3. 10. And men are careful to furnish themselves therewith, Luke 22. 36.

into plow-shares] Albeit they leave warring one with another; yet not living idly, but applying themselves to other honest, and peaceable employments, Ephes. 4. 28. 2 Thess. 3. 10, 12.

nation shall not lift up sword against nation] Nation against nation, as Matt. 24. 7. That is one nation against another. This, some expound of the general peace, that was, throughout the whole Roman Empire, about the time of Christs coming into the world, which as it is apparent, from the Romane histories: so may be gathered from the universality of the Tax, or muster, mentioned in the story of the Gospel; which could not well be, but in time of a general peace, Luk. 2. 1. But it seems rather to be understood of that peace, and agreement, that should be among those, one with another, persons, and peoples, who had sincerely embraced the faith of Christ. Who as he is called, a Prince of peace: and is faid to leave peace, as a legacy to his, Ioh. 14. 27, So his doctrine is called, a Gospel of peace, Ephes. 6. 15. And is such as worketh people to a peaceable dispolition towards each other, Phil. 4. 7, 9. Col. 3. 14, 16. Iam. 3. 17. The meaning is, that these Nations, which were before at enmity, should then be in amity, one with another, Luk. 9. 52, 55. and 10. 33, 37. compared with Ioh. 4. 9. Acts 1. 3, 12, 18. Ep. 2. 14, 16. That which is indeed the proper and genuine fruit, and effect of the Gospel, Rom. 14. 17, 18. Heb. 12. 11. Iam. 3. 18. For, as for that war, and strife, and sword, that the Gospel is faid to bring with it, Matt. 10. 21, 22. Luk. 12. 49, 53. It springeth not from the nature of the doctrine it self, which enjoyneth the faithful to be at peace, so far as lyeth in their power, with all men, Rom. 12. 18. Heb. 12. 14. and much more to maintain it among themselves, Mark 9. 50. Iohn 14. 27. Rom. 14. 19. 1 Cor. 14. 33. Eph. 4. 3, 6. Phil. 2. 1, 2. But it ariseth from the corrupt nature of mans heart, wholly unsubdued, as yet in the enemies of the truth, whose corruptions it crosseth, which ſetteth them therefore on work, with all cagerneſs to oppoſe it, Act. 13. 8, 10, 50. and 14. 2, 19. and 28. 22. Rom. 8. 7. 1 Theſſ. 3. 16. and from the reliques of that corruption, even in the faithful themſelves, ſtill remaining, Rom. 7. 17, 20, 23. Whence jars ariſe ſometime among them, by the prevalency thereof, warping from that gracious diſpoſition, that God, and his Spirit have in part wrought them unto, Mar. 9. 34. Luk. 9. 54, 55. Gal. 2. 12, 26. Jam. 3. 14, 17. and 4. 2.

neither ſhall they learn war any more] Learn; or, exerciſe, accuſtome themſelves unto war. As Jer. 13. 23. and chap. 1. 19. Warlike exercites, being much diſuſed in times of peace. Yet, neither is this ſo ſpoken, as if all uſe of arms, either defenſive or offenſive, were to Chriſtians utterly interdicted. (See Luk. 3. 14. and 22. 36, 38. compared with Matt. 26. 52.) or, as if under the Goſpel no wars at all, ſhould at any time be among thoſe that profeſſe the ſame; (which by woful experience, we find, and feel to be otherwiſe.) But by theſe, and the like expreſſions, the Prophet would intimate, what a ſtrange temper of neck, and peaceable diſpoſition, mens hearts ſhould be wrought unto, by the Miniſtery of the Word, who had been fiercely, and furiouſly affected before; as if men, that had been bred ſouldiers, and trained up all their life long in martial, and military affairs, ſhould now wholly give over, and, as grown out of love thereof, ſhould abandon that courſe of life, and betake themſelves to other more peaceable employments. See ch. 11. 6, 9. and to hold forth withal, that entire affection, and conjunction of ſpirit, that true-hearted Chriſtians ſhould bear either to other. Whereof lee a ſingular example, Act. 4. 32. Five thouſand (at leaſt, if not eight thouſand, Act. 2. 4. and 4. 4.) believers, all of one heart, and one mind. As if one ſoul had dwelt in ſo many bodies. Lord, for thy mercy, vouchſafe us the like.

V. 5. O houſe of Jacob] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to his own people: to prevoke them, by the example of other peoples forwardneſſe to come in unto God, Deut. 32. 21. Rom. 10. 19, and 11. 13, 14. Yea, to endeavour to prevent them; and by going before them, (as they were juſt called upon) to ſhew other people the way, to ſerve, and obey him, Jer. 10. 8.

houſe of Jacob] Ye Jews of the family, and linage of Jacob, verſ. 6. ch. 8. 17. Called alſo the houſe of Iſrael, chap. 5. 7. As the houſe of Aaron, Pſalm. 115. 10. And the houſe of David, ch. 7. 2. See verſ. 3.

Let us walk in the light of the Lord] Let us (whatſoever others do, Joſh. 24. 15. Pſalm. 26. 11. Hoſ. 4. 15.) frame our lives, and courſes, according to the direction of that ſpiritual light, that God in his word, and by his Spirit, affords unto us, Pſalm. 89. 15. and 119. 105. Prov. 6. 23. ch. 8. 20. John 12. 35. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Eph. 5. 8.

in the light] Michah renders it, in the name, Mich. 4. 5. That is, the ſervice, and worſhip, by God himſelf preſcribed, Deut. 12. 5, 11, 21.

of the Lord] Heb. Jehovah. (See ch. 1. 2, 10.) our God; as other nations do of their Gods. Mich. 4. 5.

V. 6. Therefore thou haſt forſaken thy people] In theſe words begins the ſecond part of this long Sermon, conſiſting of a very ſad ſubject, Gods deſertion of his people, and proceeding in wrath againſt them for their great and grievous ſins; together with their impudency and obſtinacy therein, ch. 3. 8, 9. The crimes charged upon them, may be referred to two heads: Firſt, their impiety, in abandance of idolatry, ſorcery, and confidence in the creature, chap. 2. 6, 8, for which God threatens, Firſt, To abate & abaſe their pride, by pulling down what ſoever height, or ſtrength, they conſide in, verſ. 9–18. And ſo to diſtreſs them, that neither their idols, nor any humane help ſhould be able to relieve them, v. 19, 21. Secondly, To withdraw from them all thoſe ſtaies and ſtores, wherewith, either mans life is ſuſtained, ch. 3. 1. Or, Church and State ſupported, verſ. 2, 3. Whereupon ſhould inevitably enſue, a general confuſion in all eſtates, verſ. 4, 5. and ruine irrecoverable, ver. 6, 9. Where, yet, by the way, is a word of comfort inſerted, for the ſupport of the faithfull, verſ. 10, 11. The ſecond head of crimes chaiged upon them, the Rulers eſpecially, is, their cruelty and oppreſſion, verſ. 12, 15. Whereunto is ſubjoyned the pride, exceſs, vanity, and levity of their women, diſcovered in their attire and carriage, verſ. 16. for which God threatneth to ſtrip them, and expoſe them to much ſorrow and ſhame, verſ. 17–24. And in concluſion, to diſpeople the land, verſ. 25, 26. and chap. 4. 1.

Therefore] So indeed ſeemeth the particle, here uſed, not amiſs rendred, Pſalm 116. 10. compared with 2 Cor. 4. 13. as alſo Jer. 9. 26. How beit I conceive, it would rather be here rendred, But. And ſo it is uſed alſo, Pſalm 118. 17. Neh. 8. 8, 12. Job 9. 31. and 23. 10.

thou haſt] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech again from the Jewiſh people, to God; lamenting his deſertion of them, procured by their crofs walking with him, and their grievous exceſſes in all manner of ſin, ch. 50. 1. Rom. 11. 20. Of this change, and paſſage from perſon to perſon, See on ch. 1. 9. and hereafter, ver. 9.

haſt forſaken] As if he ſhould ſay, What, do I call on this people, whom, for their ſins, God hath deſervedly rejected? and little hope therefore left of prevailing with them, Jer. 6. 29, 30.

forſaken] As Judg. 6. 13. Jer. 12. 7. where the ſame word is uſed. Thou haſt forſaken them; becauſe they have forſaken thee, Jer. 15. 6. where the ſame word is again. See ch. 1. 4, 28.

thy people] In part, or for the greater part: the main body of them; yet not all, Rom. 11. 1, 2, 25.

the houſe of Jacob] See v. 5.

becauſe they be repleniſhed from the Eaſt] With matters (ſuch rites, ſuperſtitions, and idolatries, as come to them) from the Eaſt. Or, they are fuller, (of ſuch abominations) then the Eaſt; they go beyond it in thoſe vanities. See the like phraſe, Pſalm 18. 17. and 45. 7. and 69. 4. and the like ambiguity, Jer. 4. 15. and 49. 19. They ſeem, needleſſly to vary here from the more received interpretations, who would have it rendred, either, they have filled the land, with Eaſterly matters; becauſe the verb hath, ſometime, an active notion, as Job 36. 17. Or, they have dreamt ſuch matters from the Eaſt; Becauſe the Chaldee and Syriak verſions do ſo oft uſe the word.

the Eaſt] That is, the Eaſtern parts, or people. Thoſe of the Eaſt, the Syrians that lay Eaſt from Judah, 2 King. 13. 17. ch. 9. 12. See 2 Chr. 28. 23.

and are Southſayers] Or, and with Southſayers. (for the particle inſtrumental, is oft deficient, as Pſalm 44. 2.) They are repleniſhed, or, abound; as before. The ſentence, either running on in the ſame continued tenour, They are full of things from the Eaſt, and of Southſayers; or, the verb ſupplyed, and repeated again from the former branch. See chap. 1. 21.

Southſayers] Concerning the proper ſignification of the word here uſed, there is much variety of opinion, as well amongſt the Iewiſh Doctors, as among our own writers. Some will have it to ſignifie, ſuch as take upon them to fore-tell future events, by the view of the skie, and the poſture of the Stars, and Planets, ch. 47. 13. And they deduce it from a word that ſignifies, to eye, or obſerve, 1 Sam. 18. 9. From whom thoſe ſwarve not much, who would have the term uſed of ſuch, as raiſe their conjectures, from the various figures, and motions of the clouds in the skie; or from the flight of fowls, that flye in the skie towards the clouds, Gen. 1. 20. Deut. 4. 19. Prov. 23. 5. And they derive it from a word, that commonly ſignifies a cloud. Others, ſuch as by magical skill delude mens ſight: as drawing a cloud, or caſting a miſt, (as we uſe to ſay) before mens eyes; whereby things are made to appear other, then in truth they are. So it is thought, the Magicians in Egypt did, Exod. 7. 11, 12. And of theſe, ſome deduce it from a word that ſignifies an eye: others, from a verb, that ſignifies to cloud, Gen. 9. 14. Others underſtand by it, ſuch as give anſwers to thoſe that repair to them, for advice and direction, concerning their affairs, and ſucceſſe of them; deriving it from a word that ſignifies to anſwer: but this ſeems over general. Others, ſuch as obſerve daies and times, as good, or bad; lucky, or unlucky: ſuch as thoſe, that caſt lots before Haman, Eſth. 3. 7. fetching its original from a word, which ſignifies, as they ſuppoſe, a lot time, Exod. 21. 10. but that word ſeems rather to bear another ſenſe. The firſt, and ſecond, are the moſt probable.

like the Philiſtines] Of theſe, ſee Gen. 10. 14. chap. 14. 29. Theſe bordering on the Weſt of Judah, as the Syrians on the Eaſt, ch. 9. 12. were much addicted to ſuch ſuperſtitions, 1 Sam. 6. 2. and the Iewiſh people, though forbidden them, Levit. 19. 26. Deut. 18. 4, 10. Yet had from theſe learned the practice of them; contracting much evil from bad neighbours on both ſides. See 2 King. 21. 6. 2 Chr. 33. 3. chap. 57. 3. Ier. 27. 9. Mic. 5. 12.

and they pleaſe themſelves in the children of ſtrangers] They are much taken, affected with, and addicted unto the rites and fathions of Outlandiſh people, Ier. 10. 2, 3. Zeph. 1. 8. Or, they delight in commerce, and matches with ſuch, Ezr. 9. 14. Nehem. 13. 23. Pſal. 106. 36. though by God forbidden ſo to do, Deut. 7. 2, 3. 1 King. 11. 1, 2. Nehem. 13. 25. Or, which I take to be the genuine ſenſe of the place, With ſuch they abound: For the word is uſed for pleny, and abundance, as 1 King. 20. 10. And it fareth better ſo, both with what went before, and with what followeth, ver. 7. ſo it is taken, Job 20. 22. where fulneſſe, and it, are both joined together. It ſignifies indeed, ſometime the ſtroke of the hand, Iob 36. 18. or the clapping of the hands, Iob 17. 23. but that, in indignation, this in deriſion: neither of them in delight. For that Iewiſh Maſter ſeems to go out of the way here, who by the uſe of the word for to ſuffice, 1 King. 20. 10. would have the text here underſtood, of their contenting themſelves with the ſuperſtitious courſes, and arts of heathen people, which made them ſet light by Gods law.

children of ſtrangers] For ſtrangers themſelves; as Nehem. 9. 2. Pſal. 18. 44, 45. and 144. 7, 11. chap. 60. 10. and 61. 5. Though ſome expound it of children, abſtract contrary to nature. A vice grown too common, even among the Iewiſh people, 1 Kings 14. 24. and 15. 12. and 22. 46. and 2 King. 23. 7. but this ſeems too coarſe. As they have delight in ſuch, ſo to ſuch they ſhall be ſerf; and by ſuch plagued, chap. 7. 17. and 9. 12. and 10. 5, 6.

V. 7. Their land alſo] Heb. His earth. His; as having reference to the word, people, taken collectively, ver. 6. and ſo alſo, ver. 8. earth; as ch. 1. 6. and ſo like wiſe, ver. 8.

alſo] Heb. and.: as Ier. 1. 3 and ſo v. 8.

is full of ſilver, and gold.] Not that theſe things are ſimply evil, Gen. 13. 2. Iob. 22. 24. Hag. 2. 8. but they are taxed for their abuſe of them, and about them. Their greedy, and undue gathering of them by fraud, and oppreſſion, ch. 3. 14. Mic. 6. 10. Hab. 2. 9. their denining of them from thoſe, unto whom they were due, Prov. 3. 27, 28. Ier. 22. 13. Their priding themſelves, and putting of vain confidence in them, ch. 28. 15. Pſalm 49. 6. and 52. 7. and 62. 10. Hab. 2. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 17. Their exceſs by occaſion of them, in attire, chap. 3. 18, 23. And in rare, and all manner of delights, ch. 5. 11, 12, 22. Amos 6. 1, 4, 6.

6. 1, 4, 6. And the converting of them to idolatrous uſes, verſ. 8, 20. chap. 30. 22. Ezek. 16. 17. Hoſ. 2. 8.

neither is there any end of their treaſures] Implying, as ſome think, the great abundance of their wealth; as Nahum 2. 9. and 3. 3, 9. Or as others, their unſatiable greedineſs, as having never enough, Prov. 30. 15. Eccl. 5. 10. But the former rather, and ſo in the next clauſe.

their land alſo is full of horſes] Wherein alſo they much confided, ch. 31. 1. though forbidden to multiply them, Deut. 17. 16, 17.

neither is there any end of their chariots] Whereof no uſe, without horſes; another ground of vain confidence, Pſalm 20. 7. becauſe of much uſe in war, Exod. 14. 9. Judg. 4. 3, 13.

V. 8. Their land alſo is full of idols] They are in all parts, and all places full of falſe goods, ch. 1. 29. and 57. 5. 8. Ier. 2. 28. and 11. 13. So that their land might juſtly be teamed as, Babylon is, a land of idols, Ier. 50. 38.

idols] So commonly termed in Scripture, Levit. 19. 4. Pſalm 96. 5. ver. 18. Either becauſe no Gods in truth, howſoever men may eſteem them, Ier. 2. 11. and 5. 7. and 16. 20. Or, becauſe nothing worth; as a thing of nothing, Jer. 2. 11. Hab. 2. 18, 19. 1 Cor. 8. 4. So the ſame word is uſed, Job. 13. 4. Ier. 14. 14. Zach. 11. 17.

they worſhiped the work of their own hands] That, which they themſelves had made, inſtead of him that made them, ver. 20. Ier. 25. 6. and 32. 30.

worſhip] Heb. bow down themſelves. (As Exod. 20. 5. ver. 9.) To them, as to ſome what more excellent then themſelves; which if it be an unworthy thing, for man, bearing Gods image, to do in a religious way of worſhip, to any, even the moſt glorious creatures that God himſelf hath made, Deut. 4. 19. How much more baſe and abominable to do ſo, to ſome forry piece of his own making, ch. 44. 15, 17.

their own hands] Heb. his own hands; and after, his fingers. Either diſtributively, which each one hath either made himſelf, or, procured to be made for him; as ver. 20. Or, his; for their, collectively, as ver. 7, 8.

that which their own fingers hath made] A further amplification of the ſame matter, as ch. 17. 8. becauſe the fingers are in ſuch curious artifices moſt imployed. So the heavens are ſaid to be the worke of Gods fingers, Pſalm 8. 3. Yet it may here have ſome emphaſis, to imply the fottiſhneſs of ſuch, as having been ſo long time fingring of that matter whereof their idols were framed, had not all that while the wit to conſider, what manner of ſtuffe it was that they intended to adore, as their God, ch. 44. 18, 19.

V. 9. And] As proceeding in the relation of this their folly. Or, Therefore; as Job 10. 15. and 21. 14. and 42. 8. Ier 6. 11. as a paſſage to God's judgments on them, procured by ſuch their courſe.

the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himſelf] Or, ſhall be bowed down ſhall be humbled, That is, pulled down, and abaſed. All ſorts, and ſtates, concur in theſe idolatrous practices. Or, all ſorts and ſtates being a like guilty, herein, ſhall, for ſuch their carriages and courſes, be abaſed, and laid low; ſo chap. 5. 15. And ſo the Iewiſh Doctors alſo here take it, ſave, that (therein going out of the way) they put it off from their own nation, to the people of Gog and Magog, that ſhall invade Jeruſalem under the Meſſias, Ezek. 38. and 39.

the mean man] Heb. Adam. The name of our firſt parent; from the earth, whereof his body was as at firſt framed, and unto which, after decaſe, it returneth, and is reſolved into, again. by God himſelf impoſed on him. Gen. 3. 26. 27. and 2. 7. and 3. 19, 23. Eccl. 12. 7. and from him derived unto all his poſterity. Iob 25. 6. There are four names given to man in Scripture; two of honour, two of diſgrace. 1 Gebir, a man of ſtrength, a mighty man, ch. 22. 17. Ier. 30. 6. 2. Iiſh, a man of worth, of value, and valour, an eminent man: and it is uſed therefore to diſtinguiſh the ſex, Gen. 2. 23. and the age, Iudg. 8. 20. 21. and 1 Cor. 13. 11. 3. Adam, a man of clay, an earthly man, 1 Cor. 15. 47. 4. Enoſh, a ſick, ſorrowfull, corruptible mortal man. Pſalm 8. 4. and 9. 19, 20. For ſo ſignifies the word whence it is derived, 2 Sam. 12. 15. Pſalm 9. 20. Ier. 30. 12. Mic. 1. 9. The name that Seth firſt impoſed on his ſon, to minde him of this miſerable and mortal condition, Gen. 4. 26. & 5. 6. And became afterward a common terme to mankinde, in general; as the name of Adam, from him to all his, Pſalm 39. 5. and 144. 4. in both which places, alluſion is to the name of Adam, and Abel. To theſe we might add a fifth; but that never found out of a plural form, Metſhim, Pſalm 17. 14. and, in ſignification, it ſeems to come neer home to the laſt of the four, as properly ſignifying mortal man, as meer mortals; for it differeth ſcarce in a letter, in a point only from the word Metſhim, that ſignifies, dead. But to return to the word here uſed. The word Adam, commonly imports man, in general, without diſtinction of place or ſtate, and ſo Adam, and Iiſh, are all one, Prov. 3. 13, 30. But where theſe two are found together, as counter-diſtinguiſhing, either man-kind in general; as Pſalm 49. 2. and 62. 9. or ſome ſpecial perſons, or number of people; as here the main body of the Iewiſh ſtate: there it is by Adam, underſtood a mean man, a man of low degree; alluding to his firſt original from the duſt, Gen. 2. 7. and 3. 19. which as it is the loweſt, and baſeſt of the elements: ſo in Scripture language, it notes lowneſs and baſeneſs, Gen. 18. 27. Pſalm 113. 7. ch. 49. 7. Ier. 17. 13. whence that ſpeech, Job. 30. 8. Sons of baſe men more vile then earth.

boweth down] To do honour to his idol; as ver 8. Or, ſhall be brought down, as ch. 5. 15. As they bow down to their idols, ſo will God bow and bring them down by his judgements, ver. 11, 17. Thus is God wont to retaliate mens ſins and exceſſes with judgements, in ſome kind or other, correſpondent thereunto. See ch. 1. 30. and 66. 3, 4. and the great man] Heb Iiſh. The word Iiſh, is taken moſt uſually, and generally, for any man, indifferently. Gen. 2. 23. Levit. 7. 8, 10. and 15. 2. But ſometime more ſpecially for a married man, an husband, Numb. 30. 8, 9. Hoſ. 2. 16. Or, as in this place, where oppoſed to, or diſtinguiſhed from Adam, for a man of more then ordinary ſtate, and degree. See before, Adam.

great man] And, mean man. Collectively, for men of their ſtate and degree; as Iob 7. 1. and 14. 1, 10. ver. 11.

humbleth himſelf] Forgetting his own excellency, and eminency, either by creation, as bearing Gods image; and, as Gods vice-roy, ſet above the reſt of the creatures, Gen. 1. 27, 28. Or, by place and degree, in the civil State, being raiſed and ſet aloft above others, as in ſome fort Gods vice-gerent among men, Exod. 22. 28. Pſalm 82. 16. abaſeth himſelf by advancing that, as his God, above himſelf, which God had ſet far beneath him, chap. 44. 15, 17. Ier. 2. 26, 27. Or, ſhall be humbled, abaſed, and laid low, God, by his juſt judgment, abaſing, and pulling thoſe down from their ſtate and greatneſs; who by their ſervice done to things of no worth, have formerly ſo abaſed themſelves: ſo ver. 11, 12. The meaning is, that none, high or low, great or ſmall, ſhall be exempted from his judgment, ch. 5. 15.

therefore] Heb. and. Which particle is indeed ſometime ſo uſed; See the beginning of the verſe. But here, it may well be taken, as a copulative, in his firſt and native ſenſe.

forgive them not] So moſt interpreters, taking this clauſe, as ſpoken by way of imprecation. As if the Prophet in an holy fervour of ſpirit, tranſported by the conſideration of ſuch foul, enormities, and unſufferable abuſes, by all ſorts and degrees among them, committed, ſhould entreat God not to pardon, or to ſpare them any longer. See ſome what the like, Nehem. 4. 5. & 6. 14. Pſalm. 35. 5. & 109. 14, 15. 2 Tim. 4. 14. But the words may well rather be rendred, as a meer prediction or denunciation, (albeit, that the Prophet by way of Apoſtrophe, in the delivery of it, turns his ſpeech unto God; as in paſſionate expreſſions, paſſage from perſon to perſon is not uſual. See ch. 1. 2, 4, 9. & 2. 6. & 3. 7. Revel. 1. 5.) and thou wilt not forgive them: whereby intimating the former doom, and ſentence paſſed on them, to be ſo peremptory, that God would not revoke it; and that he had been ſo far provoked by their ſins, that he would not remit them; but the judgment for the ſame denounced againſt them, ſhould unfailibly take effect. See the like denunciations, 1 Sam. 3. 14. 2 King. 23. 26, 27. & 24. 4, 5. chap. 22. 14. Or, that God, who had formerly born with them, and a long time forborn them; would now, at length, without further delay, proceed moſt ſeverely in judgment againſt them, chap. 27. 11. The Particle here uſed, (which alone againſt this verſion can be objected, though it uſually import matter of inhibition, or deprecation; yet, in ſundry places, it implyes no more then a bare negative; ſo Pſalm 121. 3. Prov. 21. 28.

forgive] Or, ſpare, Heb. take away, or, take off. Which is ſaid to be done, when the preſent punishment is remitted, or removed, Pſalm 78. 38. & 99. 8. Or, the ſin it ſelf abolished, chap. 38. 17. Ier. 31. 34. Mic. 7. 18, 19. This latter, yet God ſometimes doth with ſuch, as humble themſelves well before, and make good ſo upon the ſincere repentance, and ſerious return of any of them, according to his gracious promiſe, ch. 1. 18. Unto thoſe among them, that by ſincere repentance, at any time, returned unto God, 2 Chr. 15. 2. Whom, therefore, he failed not to take ſpecial notice of, either to ſave them from perithing in the common calamity, with the reſt, or ſo to ſanctifie their ſufferings unto them, that they were diſpoſed to their greater good, albeit the ſentence, ſo far as concerned the outward judgment, touching the deſtruction of the main body of the obſtinate wicked, were not reverſed, 2 King. 22. 19, 20. with 23. 26, 27. Whom, therefore, he failed not to take ſpecial notice of, either to ſave them from perithing in the common calamity, with the reſt, or ſo to ſanctifie their ſufferings unto them, that they were diſpoſed to their greater good, albeit the ſentence, ſo far as concerned the outward judgment, touching the deſtruction of the main body of the obſtinate wicked, were not reverſed, 2 King. 22. 19, 20. with 23. 26, 27. Jer. 21. 9. & 45. 5. Ezek. 11. 16. Rom. 8. 18, 28. 2 Cor. 4. 17. 2 Pet. 2. 5, 9.

V. 10. Enter into] The Prophet here turneth again his ſpeech from God, to the people, whom he ſpake before to; ver. 5. As if he ſhould ſay, Since that you cannot be perſwaded to return unto God, and to ſhape your courſes according to his Will and Word, for the prevention of his wrath; make what ſhift you can to, thicker your ſelves from that ſtorm of his indignation, that will thereby fetze upon you, for this your diſobedience and refuſal, Jer. 5. 3, 8. and 6. 8. and 12. 12, 13.

enter into the rock] This is ſpoken by the Prophet, not as adviſing them ſo to do, nor, as if any ſuch place could afford ſhelter, and ſecurity againſt God, Pſalm 139. 7, 10. Jer. 23. 24. Amos 9. 2, 3. but as foretelling, what their eſtate and condition, then, ſhould be; and unto what ſorry ſhifts they would be ready then to betake themſelves, when God ſhould come to execute judgment upon them, ver. 19, 21.

the rock] The holes, and clefts of the rocks, where they might ſeem, in likelihood, to be moſt ſecret, and moſt ſecure, ver. 19. Pſalm 104. 18. Cant. 2. 14. Rev. 6. 15. Rock, for, Rocks; as ver. 9. ch. 1. 13.

and hide thee] Heb. be hidden. As ch. 1. 16. So Iudg. 9. 5. 1 Sam 10. 23. Jer 36. 29.

in the duſt] In the caves of the earth, ver. 19. Joſh. 10. 17. Iudg. 6. 2. 1 Sam 13. 6. Iob 30. 6. Duſh, for, Earth; as Hab. 1. 10.

for fear of the Lord] Heb from the face of; or, from before (as chap. 2.

21.15. the dread of the Lord; as ch. 8.13. Ye shall so do, by reason of that terrour that shall surprize you, at his appearance, ver. 19. See the like phrase, Ier. 7.12. & 44.3.

and for the glory of his Majesty] Heb. from the glory, or, excellency, &c. as ch. 35.2. To be hid from his Majestical appearance, in a most resplendent and magnificent manner, when he shall come in pomp and state; a Judge, to sit on the bench, Psalm. 50.1, 5. & 97.2, 7. Dan. 7.9, 10. Act. 25.23. Rev. 6.16. ver 19, 21. See ver. 12.

V. 11. The lofty looks of men shall be humbled] The effect of Gods judgments, the pulling down of mans pride; and the laying low of all those things wherein he pleased himself, ver. 9, 12, 17. ch. 5, 15. & 10.33. Lev. 26.19. Iob. 33.17.

the lofty looks of man] Heb. the eyes of loftiness; or, haughtiness (as v. 17.) of a man; or, a man of lofty looks, Psalm 101.5. Prov. 6.17. a sign of an haughty heart, and spirit, Prov. 16.5, 18. & 21.4.

so all be bowed down] See v. 9.

and the Lord] Heb. Jehovah. See ch. 1.2, 9.

alone shall be exalted] He only shall be magnified, when all mans pride and power shall be depressed, v. 17.

in that day] Or, then, at that time; as ver. 10. ch. 26.1. & 27.1, 2. But withal, day, for, a set, a precisely determinate time. Zach. 14.7, 8. implying, that God keeps his word to a day, Exod. 12.41.

V. 12. for the day of the Lord] Or, the day for the Lord; as Psalm 7. & 102. & 127. in the titles, The time that he had set, as a solemn day of festion, or assise; for the execution of judgment, either special, as here, and ch. 13.6, 9. or general, Act. 17.31. Rom. 2.16. 1 Theil. 5.2.

of Hosts] Wherewith he is attended, when he comes to judgment; as a judg with his train, Dan. 7.10. Matth. 16.27. & 24.30. & 25.31. See on ch. 1.24. & v. 10.

shall be upon] Or, against; as Jer. 5.25. The day wherein he will come to sit in judgment upon the, as ch. 18.12. & 27.1. or to proceed against them, ver. 17. ch. 3.13, 14.

every one that is proud and lofty] Such God most opposeth, because they most oppose him, Prov. 6.17. & 16.5. Jam. 4.6. 1 Pet. 5.5.

and upon every one that is lifted up] in state, or in heart. No mans might, or height shall suppo.t, or secure him, Ier. 51. 53. Ezek. 31.1, 10, 18. Obad. 3, 4. and he shall be brought low] As ver. 9, 11. Matt. 23.12. Luk. 14.11. and 18.14.

V. 13. upon the cedars of Lebanon] A mountain lying on the North part of the land, Deut. 1.7. Ioth. 1. 4. So called, as some, from some store of sweet wood, or gummie-trees, that there grew: For it comes neer the word that signifies fruitfulness, Lev. 2.1. ch. 43.23. See Cant. 4.11. Hos. 14.7. Others rather from the whiteness of it, by reason of the snow, that is wont to lye constantly on the tops of high mountaines, Psalm. 68.14. Hence, the snow of Lebanon, Jer. 18.14. It was of special note for goodly tall Cedars, 1 King. 5.6. Psal. 29.5. & 104.16. ch. 14.8. Zach. 11.1.

that are high and lifted up] Above the other trees that grow neer them, Ezek. 31.4, 5.

and upon all the Oakes of Bashan] A Region beyond Jordan, Iosh. 17. 5. Sometime the kingdom of Og, Deut. 3.1. 4. famous for fair, and choice oaks, Ezek. 27.6. Zach. 11.2. By tall cedars, and great oaks are understood, either their stately buildings, framed out of such materials, as Ier. 22.6, 14, 15, 23. Zach. 11.2. Or, men proud and haughty, or powerful and mighty, high, and great in state of stature, or both, ver. 11, 12. Iudg. 9.15. Ezek. 31.3. Amos 2.9. See Ezek. 31.14. For they seem over-curious, who by cedars of Lebanon, would have meant the king, and Princes of Syria; by oaks of Bashan, the king, and Princes of Israel.

V. 14. And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills, that are lifted up] Above the plain. By high mountaines and hills, likewise seems to be understood, men of strength and state; and whatsoever is in them, advanced against God, Psalm 68.15, 16. & 114.6. ch. 40.4. Zach. 4.7. Yet not without some respect unto those mountains, whereof they gloried, as places of impregnable strength; and wherein they confided, as sure recourse for retreat, and relief in times of difficulty and distress, Ier. 5.17. & 21.13. & 49.16. Matth. 24.16.

V. 15. And upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall] No Fort, or strong wall, shall be able to fence, or secure any, chap. 30.25. Ier. 51.44, 58. Lam. 2.2, 5, 8.

V. 16. And upon all ships of Tarshish] The land lying, a good part of it, upon the Midland-sea, the Western bound of it, Deut. 34.2. Iosh. 1.4. Their shipping was matter both of strength and wealth to them, by furnishing of them, both with treasure, and other rich mer. handise, with matters, as wel of necessary use, as of pleasure also and delight, Gen. 49.13. Deut. 33.19. Iudg. 5.17. 1 King. 9.26, 28. 2 Chron. 9.21. Prov. 31.14. For they are wide here, who would have Tyre here intended, ch. 23.1. as comfortable with Syria: The Prophet dealing here only with his own people, ver. 5, 6.

Ships of Tarshish] Tarshish, Or, Tharshish, Was the name of one of the sons of Javan, Gen. 10.4. whose posterity bearing his name, and settling, as some suppose, in some part of Spain, gave that denomination, both to the city they there built, and the Region thereunto adjacent; which, by some corruption of language, afterward came to be called, Tartessus, the one; Tartessia the other, And of this place, they understand that passage, Ezek. 27.12. Others, (and this way the most go) are opinion, that having seated in Cilicia, they gave the name of Tarshish, to the whole region, in general, which they supposed to be mentioned, ch. 23.10, 6c. more especially, to the chief city, and Port-town of that Territory, called, in after-times, Tarsus, the place of Pauls birth, Act. 21.39. and 22.3. The former suppose, that by ships of Tarshish, here, as also, ch. 23.1. Psalm 48.7, & Ezek. 27.25. are meant such ships, as either belonged to that Port-town in Spain; or that belonging to other places, were wont to trade thither: as also, that those ships of Tarshish mentioned, 1 King. 10. 22. and 22.49. 2 Chron. 9.21. & 20.36. were so teamed, because they traded to a place in India, of the same name with that in Spain; which they imagine also, to be that which is usually called, Ophir. But that seems not to be; because in the story of Jehoshaphat; it is said, that he built ships of Tarshish to go to Ophir, 1 King. 22. 49. 2 Chr. 20.36. Those therefore that go the latter way, suppose, that from the city of Tarsus, being a Port-town of note in the Mediterranean-sea, and its territory lying much upon that Sea, the Midland-sea, was sometime called, Tarshish, so understand they that, Ion. 1.3. and that the ships, either belonging to that Port, or trading to and fro, in that sea, were thence called, ships of Tarshish. Now that sea being the greatest, that they, of those parts, were acquainted with, in regard whereof it is called, Thus great sea, as neereft also at hand, Psalm 104.5. in way of distinction, from that other less, and more remote, the red-sea, Psalm. 106.7. Hence, in process of time, it might well come to pass, that the name of Tarshish, was given more generally, unto any more vast ocean, or main sea. From whence also the Geek word, that signifies the Sea, seems derived, by the interchange only of one letter, not unusual. And so ships of Tarshish, in general, those that were usually employed in any such great Sea. Thus it is said, that the King had a Sea, a Navy of Tarshish, 1 Kings 10.22. That is, such a Fleet, as was imployed in the Eastern main-Sea; by which it traded to Ophir. But howsoever it be, for the originall of the name, or the place from whence the teatm was first taken; both parties herein agree, that by ships of Tarshish, are meant ships of great bulk and burthen; such as used to trade in the main seas, in great, wide, and deep waters, Psalm. 107.23. So teatmed in way of opposition to such smaller vessels, of less size and strength, as were commonly imployed in the shallower waters, and more shoaly Indian seas; such as the inland lakes; called also seas, ch. 9.1. and the red sea, ch. 18.1.

and upon all pleasant pictures] Heb. pictures of desire; or, delight, As ch. 32.12. fields of desire; or delight: and, a vessel of desire, or, delight, Ier. 25.34, Hos. 13.15. Some understand it, of such curious pictures, or other ornaments, as their ships here spoken of, were beautified, painted, or inlaid with, Ezek. 26.5, 6, 7. Act. 28.11. Others, of such as their chambers, were hanged, and adorned with, Ezek. 8.12. Others, of their images, made for idolatrous purposes, such as they were forbidden to make use of, Levit. 26.1. and commanded to destroy, Num. 33.52. The word hath affinity, with one, that signifies imagination, Psal. 73.7. Prov. 18.11. and it fitly answers a Greek word, used, Act. 17.29. In regard whereof, some render it, rare devices. But the word being used for imagery, and pictures, we may very well here take it, for all such curious pictures, as being either for superstitious uses, or civil ornament intended, they were much taken with, and took much delight in. See ch. 1.29.

V. 17. And the haughtiness of man shall be bowed down] Or, humbled, abased, when they are stript of all those goodly matters, implements, and ornaments, wherein they so much formerly prided themselves, chap. 39.4, 6. 1 Sam. 1.7, 10. See v. 9, 11.

and the lord alone shall be exalted in that day] See v. 11.

V. 18. And the idols] Of the name, or word, See before, v. 8. their idols shall not be able to save themselves; much less those that saved them, and expected safety from them. See chap. 1.31. 2 Sam. 5.21. ch. 46.1, 2.

he shall utterly abolish] He, to wit, the Lord, of whom, v. 17. or, the idols shall utterly pass away; or, be abolished. For the verb is of a passive fence, and signifies such a changing, or passing away, as is accompanied with diffolution, and destruction, Iob 14.14. Psal. 102.26. Prov. 31.8. compared with Prov. 24.21. or more fully, (the noun being plural, and the verb singular) the idols, each of them, shall be utterly abolished. For, that is usually intimated, in such kind of construction. The like is found, Gen. 49.22. Exod. 17.20. & 31.14. Prov. 5 18. and 14.1. See v. 20. ch. 3, 5, 10. & 16.19.

utterly] So the word, here in an adverbial notion, is found adjectively oft used elsewhere; as of the sacrifices, wholly, or, utterly consumed and burnt all to ashes, Levit. 6.22. 23. Deut. 13.16. & 33. 10. Psal. 51.20. the rather to be observed, (as implying a generall and utter abolition of their idols) because a Writer of some note, denyeth the word here used, so to signifie, and would have the text read, they shal pass away; and he might doth at the Sun-rising, Cant. 2. 17. But this the vowel points will not bear.

abolished] Abolished they shall be, either, by Gods judgment executed upon them, Exod. 12.12. 1 Sam. 5.3, 4. Ier. 43.12. & 46.25. See ch. 1.31. or by the hands of those, that had before made, and adored them; being now either ashamed of them, when they find how unable they are to help them: 20.or abhorring them, and seriously repenting of their folly, in the worship of such vile and base stuff, ch. 17.7, 8. & 27.9. & 30.22. Hos. 14.8.

V. 19. and they shall go into the holes of the rocks] The wicked Idolaters, terrified with the dreadfulness of Gods judgments, shall betake themselves to any place, where they might, if it were possible, be sheltered from Gods wrath, or be hidden from his sight. See. v. 10.

they shall go] Or, men shall go, or, there shall then be going into the holes of the rocks. An impersonal, or indefinite manner of speech, (like that, Numb. 19.5. and he, or, one shall burn the heifer; that is, the heifer shall be burnt. And Mal. 1.5. and they, or, men shall call them: that is, they shall be called,) which makes it, here, the more emphatical. As if he had said, (naming none that should so do) there will be nothing on all hands, but running into holes, and caves, to hide themselves, Hos. 10.8. Luk. 23.30. Rev. 6.16. & 9.6.

and into the caves] Heb. holes, or, hollow places. For it comes from a word, that signifies to pierce, or, bore; or thrust through. Exek. 28.9. and hath affinity, both, with that, which signifies windows, that are broken through the wall, to let in air, and light, Jer. 22.14. and with that also, that signifies pipes, that are made hollow, for wind and breath to pass through, Iudg. 11.34. Such holes, or hollow places, as are as windows, or pipes, in the ground. The word is no where else found.

of the earth] Heb. dust, as verf. 10.

for feare of the Lord] See v. 10.

when he ariseth] So is God said to do, when he comes to execute judgment; who before seemed to sit still, as not regarding what men did. So Psal. 3.7. and 76.8, 9. 19. & 68.1.

to shake terribly the earth] Or, land, as ch. 1.7. and 9.19. and verf. 7. when he comes to make a terrible earthquake in the State, Psal. 75. 3. Great commotions and concussions in a State, are compared to great earthquakes, that over-turn houfes, and buildings, and swallow up, sometime, whole cities, Rev. 6.12, 14. & 8.5. and 11.13, 19. and 16. 18. Zach. 14.4. So v. 21. Yea, such sometime come before, as presages of further judgments, Matth. 24. 7. Mar, 13.8. Luk. 21.11. and so it seems, one did, as a warning peice, or peal, to that here denounced. See Amos 1. Zach. 1.4, 5.

V. 20. In that day] Then, or, at that time: as v. 11. chap. 3.7.

a man shall cast his idols] Man, for men; as verf. 9. Idolaters shall with indignation and disdain, cast their idols, the most precious of them, not the treen, and the stone only, Ezek. 20.31. but their silver, and golden ones, Psal. 115. 4. into the vilest and filthiest holes and corners; when they shall perceive them utterly unable to stand them in any stead. See ch. 1.29. & 8.21. Though some (but with less probability) understand it, of hiding them in such places for security, in regard of the richness of their materials. But the verb here used, seems to imply, not a care to keep, but a contempt, and difregrade, as Ezek. 7.19.

which they made] each one for himself] Heb. which they made for him, or, for Himself: Which may be taken, either indefinitly, and impersonally, which they made: what is, which were made for him as Gen. 41. 13. he restored me to mine office; and him he hanged: that is, I was restored to mine office, and he was hanged. And ch. 60. 14. they shall call their city the city of the Lord, &c. See v. 19. or, by a transition from number to number, in Scripture not unusual; as Psal. 127. & 81.10. & 8. distributively, as our English well renders it; each one for himself. The rather, because the word is taken collectively in the former branch. See v. 8, 18.

to the moles and to the bats] Some joyn these words with the next before-going; and so render the text, which they made to worship moles, and bats. As if the meaning were, that they made golden, ship moles, and bats. As if the meaning were, that they made golden, and silver images, as the Egyptians sometime of mice, 1 Sam. 6.4, 5. So of moles, and bats, thereby to worship those creatures, whom those figures did resemble. And true it is, that the Idolaters, in those times, did, in their Idolatrous services, make use of the pictures and images, even of the vilest and baseft creatures, Ezek. 8.10. yet not in likelihood, to worship those very creatures, but such imaginary deities, as by those forms they intended symbolically to represent. So the Philistims by their Dagon, framed like a fish, or a mer-maid rather, 1 Sam. 5.4. intended not to worship any fish, or such Sea-monster, but their tutelar-god; whom, out of some superstitious conceit, they were pleased so to portray. This exposition, therefore, seemeth over-much forced; and the words are rather to be referred to the first branch of the verse; they shall cast them to the moles, and to the bats; that is, into such holes, as the one dig in the ground; and such dark and dusty corners, as the other use to rouft in, either about the houfe, or elsewhere, not the very same, necessarily, but any such. See. ships of Tarshish, v. 16.

moles] The word is no where else found; but signifies such a beast, as digs, and boroughs in the ground. Which some therefore would have to be the conny, or the great mountain-rat, that is rife in the Alps. But the Hebrew hath another name for the one, Levit. 11.5. Psal. 104.18. Prov. 30.26. And of the other it is uncertain, whether it were at all found, or known much-lefs frequent in those parts. It is moft probable therefore to be, as it is here rendered, the mole, though another word also be so translated, Lev. 11.30. Some would make two several words of it, rendering it, to dig holes, or vaults; but the former is the most generally received, and the more probable.

bats] Of this all agree, both here, and Levit. 11.19. Deut 14.18. yet the Latine word for a mole, is the very same with this. And the one may be derived from the other, in regard of some qualities, wherein those two creatures agree. As in the dimness, and duskiness of their eye-sight, nor enduring the broad day-light. For neither of them is stark blind; and the same word in Hebrew (yet not this) being used both of a fowl, Levit. 11.18. and of a creeping creature in the very same chapter, v. 30. Some of the Rabbins render it in the former place, a bat, in the latter, a mole.

V. 21. To go into the clefts of the rocks] When he hath thrown away his idols, that could not secure him, to assay what shift he can make for himself. See v. 18.

into the tops] Or, clifts. See ch. 57. 5. to go into the clefts; or, up to the cliffs. The word in the original, doth properly signifie a branch, chap. 17.6. & 27.10. and being applyed to rocks, and hills, it signifieth such parts thereof, as the main body of the rock, or mount, doth branch it self forth into. The cliffs, as we term them: between which places of refuge and shelter, are oft-times found; and which being steep, and rising higher then the main bulk, or body of the rock, are not of easie access for an enemy, Iudg. 15.8. Psal. 104.18. Jer. 48.30.

of the ragged rocks] The word, ragged, is not in the original, nor is it included in the term here used: which signifies any rock in general, Numb. 20.8. Psal. 42.2. chap. 32.2. See chap. 16.1.

for feare of the Lord, and for the glory of his Majesty] See verse 10, 19.

when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth] See before, v. 19.

V. 22. Cease ye from man] A dehortation, very fitly inferred upon the former denunciation; and making way for what followeth, ch. 3.1, 2, &c. seeing that all humane helps, and external stayes will fail; and no might or height will be able to secure any, when God comes to execute judgment: be admonished, and advised, to cast off your vain confidence in frail and morral man, Psal. 146.3. Jer. 17.5, 6. and remember you have to do with God, before whom no man is able to stand, Psal. 76.7. 12. Eccl. 6.10. ch. 45.9.

whose breath is in his nostrils] Heb. in his nose. Whose life is so frail that if his nostrils be but stopt, that he cannot breathe freely, he dyeth, 2 King. 8.15. or whose life, as a puff of wind, passing to and fro dyeth, 2 King. 8.15. or whose life, as a puff of wind, passing to and fro through his nostrils, may be very soon and suddenly gone. Or, who may puff and blow, as if he could do great matters, Psal. 10.5. and be puffed up, and swell, with an high conceit of himself, 1 Cor. 8.1. 1 Tim. 6.4. but all is no more, but a little loose wind, that may be soon gone, and he with it, Psal. 78.39. and 146.4. Act. 5.5.

for wherein is he to be esteemed] What reckoning is to be made of him, Iob. 7.17, 18. Psal. 8.4. & 144.3, 4. Nor, but eat than is an excellent creature of himself, bearing Gods image, Gen. 1.27. & 9.6. and being one of Gods matter-pieces, Gen. 1.26. Psal. 139.14, 16. of more value then the whole world besides Matth. 16.26. as appeareth by the price paid for his ranfome, 1 Pet. 1.18, 19. But that, if he come into comparison with God, or if he shall stand in opposition against God, he is a sorry, feeble, worthless thing; a puff of wind, and a pile of duft, Psal. 103.14. & 78.39. Eccl. 12.7. a thing of nothing, or less then nothing: that God is able easily to blow away, and bring to nought, in an instant, Gen. 2.7. and 3.19. & 18.27. Psal. 62.9. chap. 40.15, 16, 22, 24. Dan. 4.35.

CHAP. III.

Verf 1. For behold, &c.] This chapter is part of the Prophecie, or Sermon, beginning chap. 2.2. Very fitably subjoyned to the dehortation, wherewith the former chapter is concluded. He dehorted, there, from confidence in the creature; man especially, and whatsoever arm or support he is able to afford. And here he renders a reason of that his dehortation; to wit, because all such props and stayes God hath determined to withdraw.

behold] A note as well of admiration, as of attention; giving warning of some, as well admirable, as remarkable matter to ensue. So Gen. 6.13. ch. 7.14. and 29.14.

the Lord, the Lord of Hosts] See ch. 1.24.

doth take away] Heb. is taking away; or, is withdrawing: as Prov. 28. 9. he is presently about to do it. He will certainly do it; and he will suddenly do it: It is as sure to be done, and soon done, as if it were in doing, or done already. So Gen. 6.7, 13. 1 King. 14.14. chap. 29.14. Jer. 4.6. and. 5.15.

From Jerusalem, and from Judah] See of these, on chap. 1.1.

the stay, and the staff] All means, one and other, whereby, as with a staff, man is life is sustained, v. 1. or a State is supported, v. 23. The words in the original, do both signifie one and the same thing; to wit, such a staff, wherewith men, weak through sickness, Exod. 21.19. or age, Zach. 8.4. or for ease in journey, Mar. 6.8. are wont to stay other a feminine form; either is used for ought, that a man stayeth himself with, thrusteth to, or relieth on, Psal. 18.18. ch. 36.26. though the latter only be found used for a staff properly so termed; both mentioned here, to intimate stayes of all sorts, more or less.

the whole stay of bread] Heb. all staff; or, stay of bread. (as whole bread; bread;or,every bread;chap.1.5.) Hereby some understand that power and vertue that bread hath to nourish;as if God threatened to deny a blessing to their food.So that albeit they had bread, and did eat,yet what they did eat should not nourish them, should do them no good, A judgment supposed to be threatned, Levit. 26.26. in those words,ye shall eat,and not be satisfied;and to have been put in execution,Hag.1.9. where it is said,ye eat, but are not satisfied; or filled. And true it is,that mans life,health,and strength, depends not on bread, or food; but on Gods Will and pleasure,Deut.8.3. Matth.4.4. who, if he deny a blessing unto the creature,or withdraw the power and efficacy from it, which he can do, when he will,and oft doth:the creature then, though we have it,and use it can nothing avail us. But even those two Scriptures seem rather to intimate a scarcity of bread; as by the tenour of the context in either may appears also by the opposition in the former of them, *of eating their fill;or, feeding to satiety,*to the full,Levit.26.5.and in the prefent passage,God seems rather to threaten the taking away, from them, the creatures themselves, that are the ordinary stayes of mans life ; as the persons also of those, that were the stays of their State,v.2,3.By the stay,or,staff of bread, therefore, I suppose rather to be meant,bread it self: Bread being put for all manner of food, and sustenance, as the principall, most general, and most strengthening food,Psal.104.14,15.(2 s Kin g.4.2 2, 23 Neh.5.14, 15,18.ch.4.1.and staff of bread,for bread; which is as a staff, or, a stay,Levit.26.26.Judg.19.3,8,Ezek.4.14.and. 5.16.as the daughter of Zion,for Zion;that is,as a daughter, ch.1. 8.and the sign of circumcision,for circumcision,w. 1 h is a sign,Rom. 4.11.God threatning to bring upon them (as he did sometime upon Egypt;where he is said,as here,to have broken the whole, or, all the staff of bread,Psal. 105.16.) an extream scarcity of food. And what was here threatened,we shall finde fulfilled, Jer.37.21.&38.9.

and the whole stay of water]Heb.as before; all stay,or,staff of water.All manner of drink,as needful as bread, or meat, for the support of mans life: All comprehended under the name of water,because water is in those parts,the most general and ordinary drink, Num.21.5.Deut.2.:8.& 9.9.1 King.18.4,5.2 King.6.22.Jer.3.7.

stay of water]As of bread before.For,water it self,See Amos 4.8. compared with Hag. 1. 6.

V.2.The mighty man,&c.]Those two mentioned, ver.1.were the stayes of each feveral mans life.These that follow,being the prime persons for martial, civil, and Ecclesiastical Officers are not the chief ornaments only, but the stays and pillars of the joynt body politique,both of Church and State,Judg.5.1.45.15.1 King.2.12.and 13.14.Psal.68.27.87.5.3.Eccl.10.17.Is.2.6.2 Tim.3.15,which being removed therefore, the ruine of both must needs ensue ; as when an house when the principall pillars are pulled away,that support it, Judg.16.,28,30.

mighty]For strength of body,1 Sam.14.52.1 Sam.17.10. or, for power of command, Gen.10.8,9. and the man of war]Or, the warriour. Skilful and expert in military affaires,Judg.20.17.1 Chr.12. 36.

the Judg, and the Prophet]The one to act, and by execution of justice,to reform.Jud.2.18,19.The other to instruct;and by instruction,to reclaim.Jer.23.22.

and the prudent]The word properly signifies a Diviner;and is taken,commonly,in an evil sence, for such, as by diabolical wayes of divination,undertake to fore-tell future events, Deut. 18. 0.Josh. 13.22.Yet here,in the better part,for a man of much sagacity, and depth of judgment able to look out the truth of things difficult, and abstruse;and to deem of,and guess shrewdly at the consequences, and events of affairs, that he may seem to have a spirit of divination in him.So is the word taken,Prov.16.10,and an instance of it we may see in Solomon,1 King.3.16,28.See Eccl.9. 16,18.

and the ancient]As ch.9.15. by reason of years, and age, grave, wise,and experienced;and in that regard,of more authority,Levit. 19.32.Prov16.31.and 20.29.Job15.9,10&32.4,6,7.Ezek.7.20. See 1 King.12.6.8.

V.3.The captain of fifty] One of the least numbers that Commanders took charge of,Exod.18. 21, 25.1 Sam. 8.12.2 King.1.9, 11.,13. intimating, that hardly any fit to undertake the least and lowest charge, should be left.See verse 7,8.

and the honourable]Heb. the man eminent in countenance; as ch.9. 15.one that carries authority with him in his countenance,a man of respect,in regard of his birth,(Eccl.10.17.chap.19.11.)place,or parts,Eccles.8.1.

and the counseller] Such as Princes were wont to have neer at hand,to advise with in weighty affairs, 2 Sam. 15. 12. and 16. 23. 1 Chr.26. 14.2 Chr.30.2. Esth.1.3.ch.1.2.6.&48.13.Such, as being pious and prudent,may be of great concernment for the support of a State;and where such fail,all is like to fall, and miscarry,both at home,and abroad,Prov.1.1.14.and 24.6.Mic.4.9.

and the cunning artificer]Heb. the wise of the workmen,in timber, stone, or metal; for in Scripture, as also in other the learned languages,the skilful in such arts are reamed wise,and skilfulnefs in them,wisdom,Exod 31.3,6.Such among them,as are in such affairs more skilful then ordinary ; who being of much use in a State,either for civil, or warlike employments ; much inconvenience and detriment therefore,may accrue to a State,by want of them,1 Sam. 13.19,20.2 King.12.11,12,and 24.14.Jer.24.1.Zach.1.20,21. For I cannot here accord with that learned Writer, who would have the words rendred,one skilfull in witchcrafts;because the Chaldee useth the latter tearm commonly for witch-crafts.

artificer]The word signifies(as also the Latine that answers it) any sort of workmen in metals;as smiths, brasiers, and goldsmiths, Gen.4.22.Deut.27.15,or, in timber and stone;as carvers, carpenters,masons,and the like,2 Sam.5.11.1 Chr.14.1. and 22.15.

and the eloquent Orator] Or, skilfull of speech. Heb. skilled in charms,ch. 26.16. and so also would that former learned Annotator have it here taken.But it is generally supposed rather,thereby, here to be meant one of that power and efficacy in speech ; that he is able by his perswasions, so to prevail with those he speaks to, that his words seem to be as a spel,and the persons he speaks to,to be as charmed by him,Psal.58.5.11. Cor.2.4. As is the word of divination used in no ill sence, Prov. 16. 10. Such an one was Abigail,that charmed David,1 Sam.25. 24, 34. and such another was the woman of Abel,that charmed Joab first,and then the whole City,and so saved it from being sacked, 2Sam.20. 15,22.Of such Solomon,Eccles.9.14,15.The words,Orator, Artificer, and so the rest of them, though in the singular number, are not meant of any one particular person; but are put collectively, for all, or most, of each degree or rank mentioned. So ch.2.720.v.5.

V.4. And I will give children to be their Princes] The fearful effect following on the removall of such as are of abilities for government and imployment.

I will give children to be their Princes] Or, I will make children their Princes.For,that is the usual sence of the Hebrew phrase here used,Psal.2.8 chap.60.17.Jer.9.10.

I will give]Set up,place in Offices of government. For, into such places none come, but either by Gods permission, or appointment, Psal.75.6,7.Prov.8.15, 6.Dan.4.25,32. and he gives such,as well in wrath,as in mercy.Hos.13.11.

children] Either in age,and years, and consequently rude, and raw, wanting experience and discretion for so weighty an employment,Eccl.10.16.or of a childish disposition,for wit,skill,carriage, courage,and the like,no better than children;or in some sort worse, because less teachable and tractabl : then children, Eccl. 4. 12. Such were Ahaz, Manasses,and Josias his successors. See v. 12.

And babes shall rule over them] Babes,that is,childish,babish ones; no wiser or discreeter, then either suckling, or newly weaned babes. For, from the word that so signifies, the most deduce that here used,Psal.8.2.ch.28.9.Yet some other render it,in. of illusions,or,in olences;that is,mockers;men of insolent carriage; such as take delight in the scornful usage of others. For so is the word taken,from whence they derive it. But the former seems the genuine sence of the word here used,(being no where else found)as confirmed by what followeth,v.12.

V.5.And the people shall be oppressed] The necessary consequent, either of none, or of ill government ; where either no governours at all are,or in such place of goverment,as are not able to govern themselves,Judg.9.4,6,15,20&17.6.& 18.1&19.1.& 21.25.

oppressed]Not by close,and under-hand dealing defrauded; but by force,and open violence despoiled,as Judg. 18.24.25.So v. 2.Some read it,and the people shall oppress one another;or,among the people,one shall oppress another.And the lenie come all to one,in either; but the verb here used,is passive,as 1 Sam.13.6.&14.24.chap.53.7.

one by another]Or,one against another. Heb.man by man ; or, man against man. This clause some joyn to the former words, as our English hath it. Others being a new sentence with them, supplying a word,much of the same notion with that which in the next branch is subjoyned. Man shall rise against man,as Mic.7.6. that is, one against another,as 1 Sam.2.25. and the points of distinction, in the original,carry it rather this way.See ch.9.21.

and every one by his neighbour]Heb.a man by, or, against his neighbour:or,friend,A common phrase in Hebrew,for one another;without any special notion, or intimation of mutual relation, or respect, Exod.21.14,18,35.ch.13.8.Jer.7.5.Yet, in this place, it seems to have some emphasis in it,as implying, that no respect of vicinity, or amity,would be had among them;but that they would be as forward to wrong a neere neighbour,as a meere stranger,a friend,as a foe.See Jer.9. 4.5. Mic.7.5,6.

the child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient] There shall be a general confusion of all degrees,without respect of age, or State,ch.3.2.

behave himself proudly] Or,shew,then himself. For the word signifies as well power,as pride,Psal.138.3.Cant.6.5. See Rehab,ch.51. 9.Heb.*behave themselves proudly*or,shew then themselves.For the noun is singular,the verb plural. Of which form of speech, see before, ch.3.18,20.The meaning is,every boy, or young stripling, will be taking heart, to carry himself malepertly, or insolently toward the ancient,whome he ought to reverence and respect,Levit.19.32 See v.12.

and the vile]Or,contemptible.Heb. of light esteem,1 Sam.2. 30. & 18.23.See ch. 16. 14. every base fellow, (as before, every boy) will make bold with,or carry himself saucily, and arrogantly toward honourable] The word signifies weighty,as the other light.Men of worth, and weight. For honour and weight go together;and the same word,with little difference, in the three learned languages,imports,either ;Deut.23.18.ch.23.9.

V.6.when a man, &c] Or, as some,For a man,&c.so rendring a reason of the former consusion ; because every man should shun all publick employment,& no man be willing to take any authority upon him,ch.59,16. The particel may well signifie either ; as before,chap. 1.29.30.& 2.19. And according to the former reading, confirmed by what followeth, v.7. it containeth a relation of a further evil, mentioned rather as an effect and consequent of the former;to wit, that the State should be in such a general confusion,that men would be glad to get any to protect them, and to offer place of command and authority to them ; but those whome they should make such, confidering how things stood, should utterly refuse unto, (which ordinarily men are wont most to affect, Num.16.3. 2 Sam. 15.4.

when]Or,And when.As some render it,that go this way,(as ch.8. 19.)for the better connexion of it with the precedent discourse. So v.11.

a man]Or,any man,as Levit.1.2.

shall take hold of his brother]Any one of his kindred as Gen.13. 8.Deut.18.2.&25.5.9.or,of his nation;as Deut.15.7,11.&23.19,20, For, no stranger was to bear rule with them,Deut.17,15.

saying]Anecdfull supply,though not in the Hebrew,as Psal.105.15. Jer.30.17.

thou hast clothing] Thou hast good apparrel,such as few have left them in these times of plunder, and spoil ; that, for which the common sort of people, are wont most to regard men, Jam. 2. 2. or,apparrel, being put more generally for all sort of necessaries; thou art furnished with means, and are not unfit therefore to beare office among us.

be thou our Ruler]As Judg.9.8,10,12.& 11.6.

let this ruine be under thine hand] Help to support,or repair the ruines of the State; or, (the abstract put for the concrete,as chap.1. 21.&64.6.)take the charge and goverment of this ruinous, or totering State,upon thee.See Psal.75.3.& 82.5.

ruine]As Zeph.13. A metaphor taken from an house,or wall,either ready to fall,or ready fallen down,Psal.62.3.ch.30.13.Amos 9. 11.See v.8.

under thine hand] Under thy charge,hand, for,charge; as Num.4. 2833.

V.7.In that day]Or,Then,as ch.2.11,20.answering to the particle when,v.6.

shall he swear]Heb. lift up.To wit,his hand.A phrase frequent in Scripture, taken from the rite, in those times used, of lifting up the hand toward heaven,in the solemn taking of an oath,as to him that dwelleth in heaven,(Psal.123.1.chap.57.15.&66. 1.)by whom they sware,See Gen.14.22.Deut.32.40. Ezek.20.6,15,63.Rev.10.5,6.

saying,I will not be]Or , I cannot be.For the future,in Hebrew,is oft potential.So Job 9.3.& 14.4,14.Jer.2. 23.32. and so here for the reason rendred of his refusal.

an healer]Heb.a binder up.A metaphor taken from chirurgery,and the binding up of wounds,and sores for the cure of them.See ch.1.6. & 30.26.I dare not undertake the cure of such desperate evils,as the State is possessed of,and pestred with,chap.1.5,6.

in mine house is neither bread nor clothing]I am not so furnished,as you suppose me to be.Either fear shall make him rather to forswear himself, then to undertake so perplexed and perilous a charge. Or such scarcity shall be of all nece saries, comprehended all under these two heads,(as we use to say,meat,drink, and apparrel.) Gen. 28.20.1 Tim 6.7.that even those shall be found to want them, that were esteemed to have greatest store of them,2 King.6.27.

bread]See v.1.

V.8. For Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen]Or,when;as v. 6.So some,continuing the former speech of the party refusing to take charge;and rendering a reason of his refusal to undertake the care and cure of the State:as being so far ruined, that it was not in his power to support & keep it up.But the context runs better,as we have it;or as some other, surely.For so the particle here used, is also sometime taken, Iob.8.6.& 20.20. Psal. 44. 22.or, Therefore, as Psal 116.10. Ier.9.20. For the Prophets intent seems to be, as to relate their ruin, touched upon v. 6. so to shew the cause of it, to wit, for their extream obstinacy and impudency, in their carriage towards God.

Jerusalem and Judah] The Jewish State,the Inhabitants of that city,and people of that land. See ch. 1.1.For, that he speaks not so much of the city,or land it self;as of the persons, people, and State consisting of them, as ch.1.27.the words enfuing shew.

is ruined]Or,as some,hath stumbled; as Psal.27. 2.ch.8. 15 .according to that of the Apostle,Rom. 9. 32. &11. 11.but the other agreeth better with the former passage,v.6.and so is the word used, Psal. 107,12.&109.24.

is fallen]Is come to confusion,as ch.21.9.

because their tongue and their doings are against the Lord] They because their words and deed against Jehovah, him from set themselves both in word and deed against Jehovah, him from whom they have their being,(Act.17.25,28.See ch.1.2.) Psal.73.9. Mal.3.13. Jude 15.

to provoke the eyes of his glory]As if they spake,and did things on purpose,to provok him to his face.So Psal.78.17.chap.1.4.&65.3.Jer. 7.18,19.See somewhat the like, Job 17.2.

to provoke]Or.by provoking; or, in provoking. So is the particle used,Gen.3 .22.by knowing ; or, inknowing. For so it would be there rendered ,and Deut.9.18.in doing evil.See ch.10.2.

the eyes of his glory]Or, his eyes,of glory:as, his name of glory,Psal. 72.19.For,his most glorious eyes;his most glorious name. So,his hill of holinesse,Psal.15.1. his Son of love,Col.1.13.His word of power, Heb. 1.3. For, his most holy hill, his most beloved Son ; his most powerful word.

V.9.The shew of their countenance doth witness against them]Their lewdnefs and shamelesnefs discovereth it self in their very face and fore- head;neither do they desire,or endeavour, to conceal it, Ezek 24.7,8.

shew]Or,trial, as fome.For it comes from a word that signifies, to acknowledge;Prov.20.11 . or,strangeness; as others : because the same word sometime signifieth, to estrange, 1 King. 14.5,6. Or, as others harshness ; from a word that signifies,to harden, Job 19.3.and the word in Arabick,is said so to be used. Nor is it unusual in the Latine tongue,to say,one of an hard face,for an impudent man. The word (as many other, in this Prophecy) is no where else found in Scripture ; that which makes it the more ambiguous. However, the sence is certainly this, that their very looks alone, were evidence enough, without further proof, to convince them, how they stood inwardly affected ; the disposition of their heart therein as evidently offering it self unto view, as if it were even enstamped on their faces,or engraven on their fore-heads : and that their extream impudency is imply ;ed.the sequel shews.See.Jer.3,3. an harlots fore-head.

doth witness] Doth give in evidence against them.Heb.doth answer;in reference to such interrogatories, as are wont to be administred to those that come in as witnesses against a party questioned, or accused.So ch,59.12.and in the law,Thou shalt not answer a false testimony against thy Neighbour, Exod.20.16.Deut.5.20.

they declare their sin] They tell it out ; (as Judg. 14.16*thou hast not told it me*,)they not only shew it in their face ,as,the heavens are said to shew Gods righteousness, Psal.89. 9. but they publish it with their tongue;not in way of confession,as David,Psal,32.5.but in way of profession,as Lam.ch.Gen.4.23,24.

as Sodom]That is,the men of Sodom, who openly professed what they intended,and commonly practised, Gen.19.5.So Judg.19. 22. See Jer.2.25.

they hide it not] As those seek to do,that are ashamed of their sin, they do not.See Exek. 24. 7. a defect of the pronount as ch.9.9.

woe to their soul]That is,to them;or, to themselves: as in the next clause,and Lam.5.16.woe to us.So Psal.32. that say to my soul;that is, to me:and ch.1.24.which have said to thy soul,that is,to thee.Yet the to me:and ch.1.24.which have said to thy soul,that is,to thee.Yet the phrase makes the speech more passionate ; being spoken by the Prophet,rather in way of deprocation,then of denunciation;as that also in the Lamentations. See ch.1.4,24.

for they have rewarded evil to themselves] They do,by these their untoward and obstinate courles,procure mischief to themselves. They hurt not God,but wrong themselves,Job 35.4. Prov.9.12.& 11. 17 Jer.7.19.

rewarded]Or,done; or, procured. For the word doth not alwaies imply,any retribution, or reward;as it doth hereafter, v.11. but oftimes, only a doing of ought,simply,to ones self, or another, be it good,or evil, See Psal.7.5.& 13.6.& 116.7.Prov.3.30.ch.63.7.In all which places,is the same word used. And it might well be here rendred in the present tense,(as the like,ch.1,1,3.)they procure; or, do evill to themselves ; or bring evill upon themselves. See Hos. 12.9.

V.10.Say ye to the righteous]Some take these words,as spoken by way of concession,and preoccupation you will say,there is a promise made to the righteous that they shall do well; but ye are no such, and it belongs not therefore to you, Deut. 28.18,19. Others as in way of reprehension, and castigation of the false Prophets, that fadded the hearts of the godly, but presumed peace to the wicked, Ezek.13.19,22.Others rather,by way of caution,and consolation,to keep up the hearts,and bear up the spirits of that small company of godly ones,that remained yet among them; and to give them assurance of Gods goodness to be shewed them, and his care to protect them, amidst those confused and calamitous times, ch. 8. 24. 2 Pet.2.9.

Say ye to the righteous] Heb. say the righteous;or, tell the righteous. A defect of the particle,as 1 Sam. 15. 31. one told David; and 1 King 20.9. tell my Lord the King. Say to them; that is, to them be it said. As say to Archippus,that is,to Archippus be it said.(a place more then one way wronged, (Let the godly man assure himself of this, ch. 49. 9. & 44. 28. Hos. 2. 1. 23. For what God fayeth or bidderh fay,shall alluredly be, Num.23. 19.chap.55.10,11. See ch.1. 20.

the righteous] the upright man. Righteous, in regard of inherent righteousnes,truly, and sincerely; though not perfectly, and exactly, according to the rigour of the law : for so none is here on earth, Psal.143.2.Prov.20.9.Eccles.7.20.) So Psal,32.11. & 58.10.& 97. 11.Jer.5.1.& Luk.1.6.

that it shall be well with him]Heb. that good.As in the next verse, that it shall be well with him] Heb. that good.As in the next verse, that evil. A short, but quick, and emphatical form of speech, (the like whereunto,ſee Job 34.18.)that good ſhall betide him; that it ſhall fare well with him, however it betide others. That howſoever things go, it ſhall go well with him; for all ſhall work for his good, Eccl. 8.12.Jer.15.11.Rom.8.28.

for they ſhall eat the fruit of their doings]They ſhal not fail to fare well,for their well doing,Pſal.18.24,25.& 62. 12.Gal.6.7,8.Heb.6. 10.A metaphor,taken from husbandmen; who are then ſaid to eat, or enjoy the fruit of their labour, when they are fed,and maintained by that,about which they had formerly taken pains,Pſal,128 2. 2 Tim.2.6.So Prov.1.31.

they ſhall] That is, each one of them ſhall. For there is a paſſage from number to number,as chap.1.18 20.See verſ.5.

V.11 Wo to the wicked,Or,But wo. A defect of the adverſative; as v.6,To here,a note of denunciation, as ch.5. 11.See ch 1.4.

it ſhall be ill with him]Heb,no more but,evill.See v.10.howſoever the godly fare,it ſhall be ſure to go ill with him,Eccleſ.8.12,13. ch.65.13,15,20.

the reward of his hands ſhall be given him] He ſhall be rewarded according to what he hath wrought, Pſal. 28.4.&62.12.Prov.1.31. Rom.2 .6.2Cor.5. 12.

hands]For works. Becauſe the ordinary inſtrument of working, Prov.30.28 & 31.16,31 Eccl.9.10.

V.12.As for my people]. Heb.my people. Put abſolutly.See the like, Pſal.11.4.&18,30.Prov.8.14.&16.33.The Prophet,after the former aſſertion inſerted, concerning the different ſtate of good, and bad. according unto eithers diſpoſition, and demeanour,returns again to proſecute his former diſcourſe concerning the confuſion and diſorder of the times.

my people] An emphaſis in it,that ſuch confuſion and diſorder ſhould be among Gods own people, who had better means among them whereby to know their duty,had been better taught,and profeſſed better things,Deut.4.5.7,8.&5. 27.or,that Gods people,thoſe whom he had in a ſpecial manner made his, and undertaken to protect,ſhould by perſons of no worth,or parts; boys, and women be ſo baffled,and abuſed,ch.52.5.See ch.1.3.

children are their oppreſſors]Or, children oppreſs them. Heb. child oppreſſing them;or,oppreſſors of them: That is,every child,or every boy, is oppreſſing them.Of the phraſe,ſee before, v.5. Yet ſome read the words,My people do their Oppreſſours glean; that is,their oppreſſors do ſo ſpoil and peel them, that they leave nothing behind. And the word indeed may ſignifie a gleaner of grapes, properly;as another is thought to ſignifie(but that doubtful) of corn, Pſal.129. 7.and ſo it ſhould be an alluſion to that,in the Law, where they were forbidden to pluck their vines ſo, as not to leave ſome cluſters behinde, Levit. 19. 10. Deut. 24. 21. and the meaning were, that they ſhould utterly ſtrip them of all as Jer.6.9.See Jer.49.9.But the word rather ſeems here to be taken in the former ſence, as that word neer unto it,and of the ſame lineage with it,doth very frequently import, Jer.6.11.&9.20.&44.10.and ſo the meaning is,that even boys and women abuſed them,and domineered over them;implying,as the inſolent carriage of the one party;ſo the baſe ſpirits of the other : that could endure to be ſo dealt with,by ſuch, Jud.8.20,21.&9.34.See v. 4,5.

women rule over them]Thoſe of the weaker ſex,1 Pet.4.7. not ſo fit for rule, 1 Tim. 2. 12. and yet over-ruling thoſe,it may be, that ſhould rule; as Jezabel did Ahab ,1King 21.7.15,25.that,which of Jeconiah's mother,ſome ſuppoſe,2King 24.12.or,as ſome,effeminate and womaniſh men,ch.19.16. The word in the Hebrew,wants the firſt,or head letter,of that which ſignifies men;as denying head-ſhip to ſuch.They go too far from the text, that would render the word, either uſurers,or oppreſſors.

O my people]He turns his ſpeech to the people, as minding them, who they were that were the prime and principal cauſes of this their ruine.

they which led thee,cauſe thee to erre] Thy leaders, thy rulers, princes,prieſts,& prophets,that ſhould aright lead thee,miſlead thee; partly by their evil examples,and partly by their miſgovernment, the one;and their miſteaching the other, ch.1.10, 23.Lam.2.14.&4.13.

which lead thee]Or, that ſhould direct thee. From a word that ſignifies, as, to go, Proverbs 4. 14. and ſpecially to go on ſtrait, or right, Prov.9.6. So to right,or, righten,ch. 1. 17. and to direct; or,guide thy directors;or,thy guides,Matth.15.14. & 23. 16. or, as others,thoſe that bleſs thee. Thy falſe Prophets, that preach peace to thee,and that ſooth thee up in thy ſins, Jer. 6.14. Lam.2,14.Ezek. 13.6,10,16.and ſo is the word uſed,Job19.11. Pſal.72. 16. Cant.6. 9. Mal.3.12,15. But the former ſeems more agreeable to the ſcope of the Prophet,both here,and ch.9. 16.

cauſe thee to erre]Heb. only cauſe to erre.A defect of the pronoun, or affix,as ch.1.15.ſeduce the, lead thee out of the way, ch. 19. 13. Jer. 50. 6.People being more prone to follow bad examples, then good;and to be led aſide by irreligious, 1King 11.5,13.& 12.30.& 14.16.Jer.44.17.then to be led aright by their righteous,& religious Rulers,2 Kin.14.4.and 15.4,35.2Chr. 27. 2 & 30.3,10.&33.17.

and deſtroy the way of thy paths] Heb. ſwallow up. They ſpoil thee, and overthrow thee, by cauſing thee to take evil wayes, and corrupting thy life and courſes.So is the word uſed for ſpoiling,and deſtroying,Pſal.35.25.&107.27.chap.49.19. Lam.2.2,5,16.Or,as others,they hide;or,cover.As,ſay, they, the word is taken, Num.4.20. becauſe things hidden,or covered,as well as things ſwallowed down or deſtroyed,are removed out of ſight. And they expound it of the Prieſts and Levites, that concealed, and with held from the people, the doctrine of the Law, whereby they ſhould ſhape their courſes aright,Luk.11.52.But the former ſence is more plain,and more frequent.Nor doth the word in that place of Numbers, ſeem to ſignifie ſimply to cover,but to wrap up, or to involve , and make up in a fardle;where the things ſo made up, ſeem, as ſwallowed up in their outmoſt wrappings.

the way of thy path:]See chap. 2 3.

V.13.The Lord ſtandeth up] Heb. Jehovah.See ch.1.2.The Lord chief-Juſtice,or Judg-general,Pſal.50.6.& 75.7.&82.1.chap.33.22. A deſcription of Gods entrance upon, and proceeding in judgment, againſt thoſe oppreſſors,and miſleaders of his people.

ſtandeth]As Gen 37.7 Exod.15.8.or rather,is ſet;as Pſal.45.9. On thy right hand the Queen(thy wife,ſo the word ſignifies) is ſet,not ſtanding,but ſitting:as the Perſian kings wife beſide him,Neh.2.6. and Bathſheba the Queen-mother,on Solomons right hand.1 King, 2.19.and ſo it would be rendered,Pſal.82.1.he is ſet,as the Judge on the bench,that ſitteth down,to hear cauſes debated before him,Exod.18.13,14.chap 6.1.Dan.7.9. Joel 3.12. Rev.6.16.ſo, to ſet themſelves,(to wit,in battel array)and,to ſtand,(or ſtand ſtill) are mentioned,as two diſtinct notions, 2 Chr. 20. 17. See the like error in tranſlation,ch.52.2.

to plead]Or,to debate, Job 9.3.Prov.25.8,9. either, to plead and debate the matter in their behalf,as their advocate,Jer. 50. 34.or to here the pleas and debates on either ſide.as a Judg,Mic.7.9.

and ſtandeth to judg the people]He ſate down to hear, and debate; he ſtands up now,as the manner of Judges is,after full debate,to paſs ſentence.So Act.7.56.He appeareth unto Stephen, as ready to paſs ſentence for him,againſt thoſe that had condemned him, and to avenge his blood upon them.Or,he ſtandeth to judg;that is, as he is ſet down about it,ſo perſiſteth in it,he goes on in it, and will not give it over, untill he have brought the matter to an iſſue, and finiſhed his work of judicature, Pſal. 94. 14, 15. chap. 42. 3. For, to ſtand,is ſometime to perſiſt in a buſineſs, Eccl. 8. 3. Hoſ. 10 9.

to judg the people[To judg for them;in their behalf.To paſs ſentence againſt their oppreſſors, as Pſal. 7.8. & 26.1. See ch.1.17.

the people]His people;of whom before,v.12.Deut.32. 36.A defect of the affix,v.12.Heb.peoples;as Pſal.7.8.chap.2.3,4 the whole multitude of them,as well one,as another.He will hear, and right them all,be they never ſo many,pſal.145.14,21.& 146. 7.God can, and will do it;though Moſes could not; Exod.18.14.

V.14.The Lord will enter into judgment]Will come to a trial,Job 14.13.Pſal.143.2.

with the ancients of his people] Before was ſhewed in whoſe behalf,v.13.here, againſt whome he would proceed.

the ancients]Or,elders;that is,as the next word ſhews,the Princes, and Rulers.So called,becauſe choſen a ordinarily, of ſuch as were well in years,Exod,24.9,11.Num.11.16.Deut.21.2 and becauſe in maturity of underſtanding and judgment,they ought to be as ſuch, albeit they be not ſo far in years as ſome others, Exod. 18.21.Deut 1.15.In which regard alſo, the ſame title is given unto the Miniſters of the Goſpel;though ſometime, having not attained yet to old age,1 Tim.5.17. & 3.6. & 4.12.

of his people] Elders of the people,ſay ſome, as diſtinct from the Elders of the Prieſts.But thoſe of both ſorts were herein faulty; and in government they ſeem to have been conjoyned,Deut.17.9.2Chr. 19.8.

for ye have eaten up the vineyard] Before, the perſons againſt whom he would proceed.Now the actions and inditements that he enters againſt them;and the crimes wherewith he charged them; to wit,their oppreſſions of his people.

for]Or,becauſe. Heb. and. The copulative for the cauſal;as Pſal. 60.11.ch.64.5.and ſo it may be taken,2 Sam, 24.1 in thoſe words and he moved David,&c.becauſe one(that is.Satan,1 Chr.21,1.) had moved David;or,becauſe David had been moved. (of which form of ſpeech,ſee chap.1.18,20.)Others render it, but;as if it were the latter part of a ſpeech,partly conceived,and partly expreſſed:(as ſome make that of the Serpent,Gen. 3. 2.)wherein God having related that their duty was to have done, and what care they ought to have had of his vineyard ; doth after proceed to ſhew, what a contrary courſe they had taken therewith ; But ye have eaten it up. And indeed the copulative is oft uſed for the adverſative, as ch. 2.6:& 5.2, 6. Mal 2. 11. But it is not needful,that it ſhould ſo be here uſed;nor are ſuch needleſs ſupplyes ſafe.

Ye have]Or,they have.A change of the perſon.See the like,chap 1.29.Deut.31.28. 29.the turning of his ſpeech to them, adds ſome emphaſis to it ; as if he had ſaid, Ye, even ye,are thoſe that I ſpeak of.

eaten up]Deſtroyed, ſpoyled;a metaphor taken from beaſts, that depaſture,a ground,Exod.22.5.Num.22.4.&24. 22.&5.5&.6.13. or, that brouſe upon vines,and other plants,and ſo ſpoyl them,ch.18.6. & 27.10.Some render it,burnt up, as the word is taken, Judg.15.5. Pſal.80.16.and 83.14.ch. 9.18. laid it as waſt, as if it were burnt up with fire,Joel 2.3.

the vineyard]Either Gods vineyard;that is,his Church;ch.5.1,7. his his people,v.15.vineyard, for, my vineyard , as, people, for, his people, v. 13. or ;vineyard, for, vineyards, Judg,15.5.and with the article alſo, Deut. 22.9.the vineyards,that is,the lands,and poſſeſſions of his poor people ; of whom he ſpeaks,v. 13, 15. See 1 King. 21.1,7,15.Neh.5.3,5. and]The defect of the copulative,makes the ſentence the quicker.

the ſpoyl of the poor]Not taken by them:but taken from them:as, my wrong,not done by me,but done to me,Jer.51 .35.and his ſnare and his gin;not ſet by him,but ſet for him,Job 18.10.

ſpoyl]That which ye have wreſted,and torn from them;as in an hoſtile manner;or as wild beaſts prey upon cattel.See ch.10.2.

is in your houſes]And that is evidence ſufficient againſt you.Mic. 6.10.Zeph.1.9.

V.15.What meane ye,&c.]Heb.what to you.And that all contracted into one word.A quick form of ſpeech,not unfit to expreſs anger and paſſion,what have ye to do? Or, Who gave you authority to uſe my people in this manner ? A ſharp expoſtulation ; as proceeding from, and intimating no ſmall meaſure of wrath and indignation: not unlike thoſe,Pſalm 50.16.chap.52.5.Joel.3.4.

that ye beat my people to peices]As Mic.3.2,3.Or,that ye cruſh them; as Job.4.19.Prov.22.22.Lam.3.34.Or,bruiſe them;as chap.53.5,10. Or,make powder of them;as Pſalm 143 .3. (See the like,2 King.13. 7. Pſalm 18. 42.) That ye excercile all manner of cruelty upon them.See.ch.1.15,21.The ſame ſpeech is found,Pſalm 94.5.

and grind the faces of the poor] Cauſe them by your oppreſſions, and hard uſages of them,ſo to pine away,that it manifeſtly appears how it fares with them, by their faces.See ch. 1. 17.Or,as ſome other,ye batter, ye beat them black and blew; ye are not content to bereave them of their goods,and means of maintenance;but you exerciſe your cruelty alſo upon their perſons;the marks whereof they beare about them in their faces. The word here uſed ſignifies,as to grinde,Numb.11.8.So to batter, Exod.32.20.

ſaith the Lord God of hoſts]See ch.1.9.24.

V.16.Moreover,the Lord ſaith] Heb.And;as Neh.12.8.Here the Prophet paſſeth from the actions, that God would proceed for againſt the men,the Rulers; and great ones eſpecially;unto the enditements that he had to commence againſt the women;& the heavy doom that ſhould be paſſed,and executed upon them,for the ſame becauſe the daughters of Zion are haughty] The crimes charged upon the women,are principally, their exceſs of pride, wantonnes, and vanity,diſcovering it ſelf in the manner of their gate,& garb.

Daughters of Zion]Not,as the Daughter of Zion;(of which phraſe, ſee chap.1.18.)but,as Daughters of Iſrael,2 Sam.1.24.And Daughters of Jeruſalem,Luk.23.28.The women that dwelt in Jeruſalem, whereof Zion,being a principal part,is put here for the whole city; as ch.4.3.But here the rather, it may be, becauſe many of the women of chief note, and moſt faulty in the exceſſes, here taxed,(as thoſe before noted, and taxed for their domineering over Gods people, ver.12.)did, in that part of the city,(the kings Court eſpecially,being there Scituate)reſide.So alſo,ver.17.ch.4.4.

are haughty]Or,ſtately.Heb.are high;or,lofty;as ch.55.9.or, lift up themſelves;as Zeph.3.9.Carry their heads aloft.

and walk]Heb. will walk. And ſo after,again in the future, but put for the preſent : (as appeareth by the former) which, in Hebrew,is not unuſual;eſpecially where the ordinary doing of,or continuance in the doing of a thing, is intimated. Thus they do, and thus they will do,for it is their ordinary guiſe. So Numb. 23. 7, 9.& 24.9,17.ch.5.8.

and walk with ſtretched-forth necks] Heb. ſtretched out in the throat:For ſo the word,here uſed, properly ſignifies;as ch.58.1. But is here put for the neck, becauſe part of it ; or joyned to it; as alſo, Ezek.16.11.

ſtretched forth]The ſtretching out of the neck,is ſometime of earneſt deſire and expectation , Rom. 8. 19. Sometime of pride and ſtatelineſs,Pſalm 75.5.So here.

and wanton eyes]Heb.lying,or deceiving; or,dealing deceitfully,ch. 63.8.With their eyes.(for both the prepoſition wants;as Pſalm 17. 7, 14. and the affix alſo;as ver. 13.) That which ſome expound of their painted faces, and counterfeit viſages. Of which; Jer. 4. 30. Ezek. 23. 40. (See ch. 1. 15.)Others,of their lewd and enticing looks, Gen. 39. 7. Or as others rather read and render it, twinkling with their eyes.That which,as Solomon makes the note of a lewd man,Prov.6.13. So the Prophet here, the note of a light and looſe diſpoſition in the women of his times.

walking, and mincing as they go] Or, tripping it,nicely, as they go along.Heb.walk;walking;or.go,going, and tripping; or, tabering;go,going;as Pſalm126.6.That is,go ordinarily,or are wont to go tripping, or,tabering.The hebrew word here uſed,being no where elſe found, is ambiguous.Some ſuppoſe it,by interchange of one letter with another,of very neer affinity, to come from a word that ſignifies to beat, or, play on a taber. Which Some of them underſtand of the creaking of their pantofles.Others,rather of a ſet frame of affected pace,not without ſome noiſe or ſound, as they footed it : and ſo it may be rendred; They uſe to taber it as they go. As in another kinde,it is ſaid of the court-Ladies of Nineveh, carried away captive;that they ſhould go along with their Queen, in the ſame condition with them tabering upon their breaſts,Nah.27.Others derive it from a word that ſignifies a little child., Jer. 40.7. & 41.16. and render it,Go like little children;that can ſcarce go alone,and are fain to be led; imitating ſuch in the niceneſs of their gate.Or as others, going ſtruttingly,and wantonly;as little boyes and girls are wont to do;in a lighter manner then will ſtand with matrone-like gravity. Others, laſtly, underſtanding it of ſuch an affected nice pace,as before; ſuppoſe it to come from an Arabick tearm, uſed in that language, for a pacing, or ambling nag. Which may well be deemed the more probable, from that which next followeth.

and making a tinckling with their feet]This word alſo, as the former two, is no where elſe found. That from whence it hath its original,uſed in the ſingular number, Prov.7.22. ſignifies a fetter; as moſt render it ; though our Engliſh,the ſtocks in the plural ; we have it,ver.18..for garters,or,chaines, worn, uſually, about the legs. Some therefore expound it,going,as if they were fettered. Others, tinckling; that is,making a noiſe with their ſpangles about their gartering ſay ſome ; with little bels about their ſhooes; ſay others; or with the chaines of gold, or ſilver about their legs ; wherewith they uſed to make a noiſe of purpoſe, as they went along in the ſtreets : See verſ. 18. Thus,as twinkling with the eyes,ſo tinkling with the feet, ſhould be taxed as a note of lightneſs. But they that render it,going,as if they were fettered; underſtand it of ſuch a nice kind of affected pace,as was in the former tearm intimated ; and here further deſcribed,by a reſemblance taken,either from captives and priſoners,that having irons upon their legs, cannot go freely and readily;but in a ſlow, and ſtalking manner, as their irons will give them leave. Or as others,from thoſe cords, or fetters, that horſe-breakers are wont to hamper young colts with,to bring them to a pace.That which ſorts wel with the notation of the word foregoing,from the Aradick.

feet]For legs.as Pſal.105.18.

V,17.Therefore the Lord]Heb.And.So Job.10.15.&21.14. Their crimes were before, their doom now follows. God wil puniſh them in thoſe things,and in thoſe parts,wherein they diſcouer,and wherewith they practiſe their wantonneſs,and their pride.

will ſmite with a ſcab the crown of the head]So ours,and moſt Interpreters;as deeming the word,(no where elſe uſed) to come from one, which (with uſual change of a letter) ſignifies a ſcab; uſed oft in the deſcription of the leproſie,Lev.13.2,6,&c.and without ſuch change alſo in another form,for the ſame,ch. 5. 7. So the ſence is,God with a ſcab,or,ſcal,will take off their hair, which is a part of womens glory, 1 Cor. 11. 15. and wherein theſe did pride themſelves.This might be effected, either by evil uſage,when they came into an enemies hands;or,by ſome foul diſeaſe otherwiſe ſiezing on them ; ſuch, as not ſeldome fellows looſeneſs of life, Job 20.11.Prov.5,11.Yet ſome render it more generally; The Lord will peel,or,make bald the crown of the head. Which may alſo be done, by cauſing them to be ſhorn, or ſhaven by the hand of their enemies,with whom they ſhould be in captivity,which,with ſlaves and captives,is not unuſual,Deut.21.12.And is done,on purpoſe, ſometimes,in diſgrace;ſuch as it is alſo uſually deemed to be,1Cor.11.6. Or,by giveing them ſuch occaſions of grief,as ſhould cauſe them to cut,yea,or to tear off their hair:that,which in heavy calamities,out of impaciency,and impotency of ſpirit,is oft done, Jer.7.29. But the firſt ſeems moſt probable.See verſ.24.

the crown of the head]The natural ſeat of haire. He will make thoſe their heads,which before they carried ſo high, not only void of all lovelineſs, but ſo loathſom now, that they ſhall have little deſire to have any ſee them : and others as little luſt to looke after them , that were formerly taken with them See Cant. 7.5.

of the daughters of Zion]As,the daughters of Moab,ch.16.2.See v.16.

and will diſcover their ſecret parts]Heb.make naked;or,bare,Levit. 20. 18, 19. By bringing them into that miſerable condition, that thoſe,who now exceed in variety of apparrell, change of rayment, and unneceſſary ſuperfluities, ſhall want clothes, wherewith to cover their nakedneſs:ſhall hardly have to hide thoſe parts, which natural ſhame,and womanly modeſty, do,by all means, deſire and endeavour to conceal,and keep out of ſight,ch.20.4Mic.1.11.Or,the meaning may be that they ſhould,in way of ſcorn and abuſe, ſuffer ſuch diſgraceful uſage,by the uncivil,and immodeſt carriage of the ruder ſort of their enemies;into whoſe hands they ſhould fall,ch.47. 3. Jer. 13. 22. Ezek. 16. 37. & 23. 10, 26. Hoſ .2. 2, 10. Nah. 3.5.

V.18.In that day]What time this doom ſhal be put in execution; as ch.2.20.See ver 7.

the Lord will take away] He will ſtrip them of all their ornaments,and abiliments, wherein they now ſo much abound, Ezek. 16.39.&23.26.Not that ſuch ornaments and attires,were of themſelves ſimply evil and unlawful,(See Gen.24.22,53.2 Sam. 13.18. Ezek.16.10,13.)but their exceſs in them,and their abuſe of them, to the fomenting of their pride and luſt,is that which is condemned in them;and for which the removal of them is here denounced. So Hoſ.2.8,9.See ch.5.12.

the bravery] Conſiſting in the great variety of ornaments and attires,hereafter rehearſed,being ſuch as they uſed to wear in times of feaſting and jollity : oppoſed therefore to mourning weeds,ch.61. 3. Nor is the word to be reſtrained to the firſt of them alone, here mentioned;but hath reference alſo to all the reſt that enſue. The bravery of all theſe things ; for all theſe brave, and goodly things, As,bravery of excellency, for, brave excellency;or,excellent bravery,ch. 13.19.

of their tinkling ornaments about their feet]Or as some, their slippers.The hebrew word properly signifies,fetters,Prov.7.22. but garters here, as the most;or, chains. Such golden chaines,as in divers of the Eastern parts women of fashion use,at this day,to wear. This was questionless, aimed at in the last clause of the verse next before going.

and the cauls]Or,as some,net-works.As others,embroydered works, by change of a letter, from that which signifies, embroydery,Exod. 28. 4, 39. though some distinguish that, and embroidery. Some would have it to be some ornament about the legs; as the former about the feet:as if the former were some kind of shooes, or slippers; these of hose, or stockings. But there is little probability of either. The word hath no fellow.

and the round tires like the Moon] The word is found only here, and Judg.8. 21, 26. where such ornaments are said to have been on the camels necks, that belonged to the Midianitish Princes. It is generally acknowledged,by the interchange of two letters of very neer affinity,and in sound almost,if not wholly the same, to be derived from one, which in Syriack (whereof the Syrian deity is so tearmed)signifies the Moon; yet not so much the half, as the whole Moon.Others render it,chains,or collars.Which are indeed round in compass, but do not so fitly resemble the Moon. And chains are also said to have been on the camels necks; and that distinguished from these moon-like ornaments. Others.and those not a few,take it,for round -looking glasses.And such indeed swelling up, and bellying out,do not unfitly resemble the Moon,and that at full;for from her roundness she hath that name.But what should looking-glasses do on camels necks?Others, lastly, for some kind of ornament about their shooes;such,as the Nobility among the ancient Romans, were : whereby they were distinguished from the meaner sort; or other such jewels,and ornaments,shaped like the Moon; as among other Nations,(which stories shew) have been in use. Nor doth it hinder, but that these, here mentioned, should be of the same sort with those;because they resembled not the figure of the round, or whole, but the half-hooked, or horned-Moon. For albeit the Moon, from her roundness, have that name; and so properly, and primarily design the Moon at full: Yet was it, in likelyhood, more largely used, to signifie that Planet, without special respect had to her several shapes.And so the word,here used,may well signifie such Jewels,or ornaments,as represented her in any shape.Of which sort might well be the silver,or golden bosses,on the camels furniture, before mentioned.

V.19.And the chains]So some.Others, collars; as collars of Esses with us.Which may therefore amount much to one. But chains,or, collars,and these seem to be distinguished,Judg.8.26.where both are mentioned.The word,here used, comes from one, that signifies to drop. And because pure Myrrh, is such as drops, or issues from the plant of it self enforced,is by a word of the same original,thence so tearmed,Exod. 30.34. Some therefore suppose that by it here are meant,such little boxes,like our civit boxes, of gold, wherein they used,either to reserve,or carry about them, myrrh, and other like odours,or sweet oyntments ; bearing the name of that for which they were first made and used.See ver. 20.Others take it for pearls; so tearned from the form of them,(as some the like in Greek)resembling the droppings of myrrh, or other gummy matter : such as we tearm, pendants ; and our great ones were wont to wear at their ears.

and the bracelets]Or,chaines.Peradventure the lesser sort of them, such as our bracelets ordinarily are.The word,as it is here single, is no where else found. But in a square, or double form it is oft used, in discribing the work about the tabernacle; as Exod.28.vers.14.& chap.39.15.and there signifies chains;it coms of a root that signifies to wreath;and hath affinity with one,that signifies the navel,Ezek. 16.4.And with another,that signifies,a coat of mail;or,a brigandine, 1Sam.17. 5.And it is most likely to import any such ornaments, as consist of links fastened together; as the mail in the coat thereof consisting,or of gold-wire,or thread therewith covered,twisted and wreathed together.Such as those about the tabernacle,and Priestly robes seem to have been,of both kinds,whereof chains and bracelets are usually made,It may,as some think, comprehende chains of all sorts,used about neck,arm,wrest,or leg Howbeit,the Chaldee Paraphrast used the word sometime for hooks;whence it may be surmised to intend such golden hooks,clasps,or taches as women use oft about their looser garments,to fasten one part to another.Of which mention is made,Exod.35.22.though amiss rendred there, bracelets,the word being commonly used for hooks.ch.37.29.Ezek. 19.4, 19 & 29.4.

and the muflers]Or,masks,or,veiles;or,hukes, Such as women use to veile,or cover their faces with, as Rebekah did;Gen.24 65. and of which the Apostle speaks.1.Cor,11.10,15.(for the head there signifies not the skull,or scalp only, but takes in the face also ; as when a man is said to be beheaded,2.Sam,16.9.) So some take it, because the word whence it comes, is found used by the Jewish writers.for in that maner to cover:who yet from the word here, seem to have taken up that use of it,which in Scripture is not found. Others therefore expound it spangle,or spangled attires,that are wont to quiver,and by quivering to make a more glittering shew. Because the original of it,is from such a root, as in Scripture signifies trembling,and shakng,or,quaking, Psal.60.3.chap.51,17,22.Nah.2.3. Zach12.2.The word it self, is a sole one.

V.20. and the bonnets] Or, head-tires ,or, hoods. The word is of the same descent with that translated, bravery ,vers.18.And is deemed,sometime, to be taken more largely,for all sorts of goodly garments,ch. 61.3, 10. But is most commonly used for head-attire; and that common to either sex,as appeareth,Exod.39.28.Ezek.24. 17,23,&44,18. See ver. 22.

and the ornaments of the legs] Thus do divers render it. Some of them so taking it because it comes from a root that signifies,going,of pacing,or marching, Judg.5.4. Psal.68.7.But these notations are not alwaies of certainty.The same word, with an Aleph onely prefixed, which altars not its original, is rendred,chains, Numb.31.50.and a bracelet,2Sam.1.10. Whence also it appear ,that it was such an ornament as was usually worn,not on the legs, but on the arm.For it is said to have been taken off Sauls arm;and yet in that other place in Numbers,some translate it also garters,as the old latine also doth here:however, it appears that it was an ornament no more, if at all,of the legs then of the arms:and the translation therefore would be altered.See vers. 19.bracelets,Of which,these seem to have been some special distinct kind.

and the head-bands]Silken fillets,or ribbens;which they used about their heads;therewith either to tye up their hair, or to fasten their other head-gear,or attire to their heads. See Ezek.24.17.It was an ornament of special note with them;as appears, Jer.2.22.See the note there. Nor is it to be omitted, that the royal Diadem (as the name it self also imports)was in ancient times,no other then a fair and rich fillet.It comes of a word that signifies to tye, or to binde. And God seems to allude unto such curious fillets,or ribbens; when he willeth this people to bind his precepts for a sign upon their hands, Deut.6.8.As also Solomon,when he chargeth his son to tye,or bind the lessons he taught him. about his neck, on his heart, and on his fingers;or hands,Prov .3.3.&.6,21.and7.3.

and the tablets]Heb.houses of the soule or,breath,soul, for breath: as Gen. 6.17.& 7.22.and so some take it not amiss, Jam.2.26.By these houses,or receptacles of breath,some understand pomanders;or, boxes wherein they carried sweet odours about them ; with small holes pierced in them(not unlike the myrrh boxes, by some thought to be mentioned,ver.19.)by the sent thereof,to refresh their spirits when they pleased. Others, masks or muslers, or the like, that covering the mouth, receive, or keep in the breath. For they seem to stray too far, that render it, pectorals ; or, breast-plates; understanding thereby, such jewels as they wore in their bosoms, or between their breasts : Becanse the soul, to wit, the heart,is there scituate. Another word is rendred, tablets, Exod. 35.22.

and the ear-rings]Jewels,that hung in, or about their ears. So some of the Jewish Doctors,and of ours. But there is another word used in Scripture for ear-rings.Numb.31.50.&Ezek.16.11.See ver. 21.Others therefore of them, whom some also of ours follow, understand by it,amulets, superstitious trinkets,of magical device,supposed to have vertue against charms, and enchantments, or other casual evils: plates, or medals of gold, with spels,or characters engraven on them to that purpose. This they seem, thence to conceive,because of the nere affinity between the word here used, and that that signifies to charm, and enchant,Psal.58.5. Eccl.10.11.

V.21.And the Rings] Mentioned among the Midianitish ornaments,Numb.31.50. used to be worn on the hand, or fingers, Esth. 3.10.&8.2.Luk,15.22.Jam.2.2.and in Heb.so called,of a word that signifies to dip deep;or,to fix,and fasten,Exod.15.4. Job 38. 6 Psalm 69.2,15.Prov.8.25. Either because the finger is dipt deep into the ring,and the ring fastned unto it,Cant.8.6.Jer.22.24. Hag.2. 23 Or,becaus being much used in sealing of deeds,they are as dipt in, and fixed upon that which they seal;or give an impression unto,and add a greater firmness to the deed thereby sealed,Esth.8.8,10.

and the nose-jewels] Such as they used to wear on their foreheads,hanging down toward the nose, Gen.24.47.Prov. 11.22. Ezek.16.12.This kind of jewel,it seems, was very rife with them. For we find it oft mentioned,Gen.24.22. Exod. 35.22, Judg 8.24. Job 42.11.Prov.25.12, and they were of divers sorts ; some, that were hanged in,or about the eares;as appears,Gen 35.4.and were so rife with their women,and the younger sort of that sex,that of them alone,was made the golden calf, Exod.32.2.From which,to distinguish those here spoken of,they are called jewels of the nose.though the word here rendered, nose, is oft-times used for the whole face, Gen.3.19.2 Sam.24.33. and so it may take in also the eares,and be rendred more largly, the face-jewels; as comprehending either kind.

V.22.And the changeable suits of apparel] From their jewels,and additional ornaments, he seems to pass here to their clothes and garments themselves, that covered their bodies, or the greater part of them.

changeable suits] The word in Hebrew is but one ; and is found but in one place more ; to wit, Zach.3. 4. where it is rendered, change of rayment. But a word of neer affinity to it,and of the same descent with it,signifies spoils, taken from men slain and stript; whether armour,as 2Sam.2.21.or rayment,as Judg.14,19. (where another word also is used, for change of apparel) so called from a word, that signifies to pul away;or,pul off.Deut.25.9,10. & so it is thought, that change of appacel is, here stiled ; because the one is put off for putting on of the other:as Zach.3.4.But others rather deem it som special kind of apparel, that covered the body from the waste downward ; such as our womens kirtels, or peticoats are : For it is very near the word, that commonly signifies the loyns,ch.5.27. & 11. 5. Nor see I any reason, why it may not be so taken, in Zachary also for some such garments, as men used to wear, fastned to them about their loins.Onely there seems there, a defect of the epithet ; such, as in this Prophet, chap.1.18. & 5.4. & Mal.1.14.and it may then be rendred, I will cloth thee with fair robes : or the like. Some garments and attires were, in name at least, common to both sexes. See Bonnets,v.20.

and the mantles] From covering or enwrapping the body, so called. For that is the notion of its original, Psal. 73. 4. This seems to be some upper garment, as the former an inner:That girt to the body ; This hanging loose. The word is but once read.

and the wimples]It is rendred a veil,Ruth 5.13. Some would have it an apron.

and the crisping pins] Or, curling-pins. Such long pins, as they were wont to curle, or to fasten their hair with : or, to make use of about their attire and apparel. Otherwise, it comes neer to a word that signifies a pen, or pin, to write with, chap. 8.1. or a tool, to engrave with, Exod.32.4. Some expound it pin-cases ; or, needle-cases. I should rather, pin-cushions, or, pin-pillowes : as resembling the form of such bags, as the better sort used to put their money in. For which the word is used, 2 King. 5. 23. being not found elsewhere.

V.23. And the glasses] Not drinking; but looking glasses; or, mirrhors. Which yet alwaies were not in those daies, if at all, of glass ; (for of glass we find no certain mention in the stories, or books of the Old Testament : nor is there any word that I know for it in Hebrew) but of fine and bright brass ; or other the like metals. See Exod.38.8. though two other words, be also used for such: but both from one root, and notion of sight : and but once onely,as this here also, used either of them; the one in that place of Moses:the other, Job 37.18. The word here given them, hath its ground from the use of them, to reveal, and shew a mans, or womans own face, to themselves, Jam.1.23,24. The Apostle alludes to them, 1 Cor. 13. 12.&2Cor.3.18.Howbeit som of the JewishDoctors would have the word to signifie such fine and thin garments of lawn, or silk, as do not so much cover, as discover the body clad with them, and lay it open to view of others ; as the heavens, in that regard, are in the opinion of some, in that of Job, compared to glass ; because transparent : but that is questionable. Nor is there any notion of glass; in the word there used. And of like uncertainty is that of some others ; who suppose some reference to such kind of apparel, as is here intimated,in the term used, ch.8. 1. (where alone the singular is found ; as the plural here onely)which if it should so be,I should then surmise, the word here to signifie some kind of rolls ; such as with us also, among the neater, or nicer sort rather, are in use; for there the word certainly signifies a roll of paper, or parchment, to write in. But the first exposition is most received ; and the same words in the Hebrew sometime signifie, one thing in the singular number, and another in the plural ; as, that which signifies a pot in the singular, signifies thornes in the plural, Eccl.7.6. that which signifies an asp, or some kind of serpent, in the singular, chap. 14. 29. signifies extrements in the plural masculine, Exod.4.15. issue, in the feminine,chap.22.24. that which signifies light in the singular,Esth. 8. 16, Psal. 139.12.signifies herbs in the plural, 2 King.chap.4.v.39. ch.26.19.

and the fine linnen] The name of the stuffe, or matter ; not of the vesture or thing it self, thereof made. It is translated sheets in Sampsons story, Jud.14.12. and the Greek word answering it, and derived from it, is used by three Evangelists, in relation of our Saviours Sepulture, for a winding sheet, Matth. 27. 59. Mar. 15. 46. Luk.23.53.But might peradventure, in that former place, have been better rendred, shirts, then sheets: for it is not likely, that those Philistims whom Sampson slew, to make payment of his wager, carried their sheets ; and much less their winding sheets, about them. Besides that it seems used also, for a shirt, or such an inner garment of linnen, as is wont to be worn next the skin, Mar.14.51, 52. and it may well therefore here be rendred, either smocks, or shifts ; the the more modest term used in these times, comprehending both shirts, and smocks.

and the hoods] Or, Turbans. An attire for the head, different from the bonnet before mentioned, v.20. Levit.8. 9, 13. such as the Turks and Persians, or their women use at this day, consisting of many folds, and wreaths ; and with some raised up to a great height in the middle : so called of a word that signifies to roll ; or, turn round, chap.22.18. It is used, both for a royal diadem,ch.62.3. Ezek.21.26.and for a Priestly myter, Exod.28.4. Levit. 8. 9. Zach. 3.5. and it is so called, because it was rolled up in many folds ; and the head enwrapped with it, Levit.16.4. and the veils] Or, robes ; or, frockes : or, cassocks. A loose upper garment, so called of spreading. For so signifies the word, from whence it comes, 1 King.6. 32. It is found here, and Cant.5. 7. not elsewhere.

V. 24. And it shall come to passe, that] Heb. it shall be As chap. 2. 2. and a defect of the particle, that ; as ch.4.3. Before, was the privative part of the doom ; what they should be deprived of : Now followeth the positive ; what in room thereof should succeed.

there shall be instead of sweet smell] The word comprehends all aromatical, or odoriferous spices, Exod. 30. 23. 1 Kings 10. 2. Ezek.27.22.

stinck] The word properly signifies putrefaction ; or, rottenness, ch.5.24. and by consequence stench, thence usually proceeding. That which should befal them, either from such filthy sores, and loathsome diseases wherewith God should smite them, Deut. 28. 27, 60. Job.7.5.& 19.17.Psal.38.5.v. 17. or from such evil usage, and restraint, in prisons, and dungeons, which they should endure in the time of their captivity, ch.42.22.

and instead of a girdle] Or, of girding. Which the word properly signifies, 1 King. 3. 21. as also the like word hereafter used ; and may import, either a girdle, wherewith they used to gird to them their inner garments, Exod.29.5. or such garments, as being girt to them, about the loynes, or paps, 1 King.18. 46. Levit. 12.35. Rev. 1.13.) do fall down to the lower parts of the body ; whereof before, v.22. For it is used of those aprons, or girdings, which of twigs twisted, or wreathed, rather then leaves sowed together, (for the word there used signifies as well twigs, or branches ; as leaves,Gen. 8.11. Neh.8.15.) our first parents made to cover their shame with, Gen.3.7.

a rent] renting of garments for extremity of grief, Jer. 41. 5. Or, rags ; having no whole garment to put on. It comes of a word that signifies to cut down,ch. 10. 34. or to cut asunder, ch. 29. 1. Some therefore expound it of their garments, by the enemy cut short, in scorn, to the discovery of their shame ; as 2 Sam. 10. 4. ch. 20. 4. Others render it loosnesse, dissolution ; opposed to girding : and the word it comes from, seems so to signifie, Job 19. 26. Their rags;such as they shall have, shall, in a slatternly manner, hang loose about those that were so curious in girding, and fitting their garments to their bodies, before : as it is wont to be with those, who either being in a sad or forlorn condition, are wholly regardlesse of themselves : Or, whose apparel is so tattered and torn, and by reason thereof so unusefull, that they hold it not worthy of any regard, nor would stand them in any stead, were they never so careful to gird it unto them. See v.17.

and in stead of well-set hair] Heb. work of caven, or, smooth setting ; or, trimming, to wit of hair ; as by the opposite doth appear Hair cavenly, and curiously so disposed, as no one hair riseth, or standeth above the rest, but all lies as smooth as the surface of some gold, or brass-plate, artificially beaten out, and exactly smoothed with the hammer, ch.41.7. For from a word that signifies such manner of work (Exod.25.18. Numb.10. 2 ch.44.12.) is that,here onely used ; with a small alteration of one vowel onely derived. And the word which we render, setting, disposed, or trimming, is applyed to the dressing, or trimming of hair, on head or beard, in the story of Mephibosheth, 2 Sam.19.24. which place gives light to that other ambiguous one, concerning the captive womans dealing with her nails, Deut.21.12.

baldness] Procured either by the scab before mentioned, ver. 18. or the hair pluckt, or cut of in scorn, or rage, by the hand of a foe; or torn off in extremity of grief, through impotency of spirit, by themselves.ch.15.2.& 22.12. Mic.1.16.

and instead of a stomacher] The hebrew Doctours themselves agree not about this. And indeed in most of these names, as also in the forbidden fowls, Levit.11.& Deut.14.) their greatest Rabbins rove, but, as well as we. Some would have it a silken swathing-band ; such as they used to wear about their breasts.Which with our version, may not altogether unfitly agree. Others of them a fine upper garment, of fine linnen or silk. Some of ours, a girdle made of twist-silk, or thread : Because it hath all the letters of a word that signifies twist, Exod .28. 28. (for so it would rather be there rendred, then lace) and a cord, or line, Ezek. 40. 3. and some kind of wearing cloth made of such ; but rendred a bracelet, Gen. 38. 18. Others of them a fardingale ; a garment consisting of many pieces, that being narrow at the top, where it is girt to the wast, widens still to the bottome, where it carries a large compass ; such, as in times past, were among our Gentry very rife. These suppose the word compounded of a tearm that signifies a piece, Gen.18.5.Lev.2. 6. And another that signifies round : whence the land of Galilee, 1 King. 9.11. But neither is the former word used of pieces of cloth, but of bread, or cake onely : nor is the deduction very probable : nor would all granted afford ground sufficient for the making up of such a garment, as these Authors would piece together out of these notions. Ours may stand, till some more probable can be produced.

a girding of sackcloth] Heb. sack ; as Gen. 42. 25. A word that holdeth its own in most languages. Such course, and sorry stuff, as their sacking was mostly made of ; and being the ordinary matter of mourning weeds, was used commonly, as a badge of much heaviness & grief,Gen.37.34.Job16.15. Ps.30.11.& 35.13.ch.15.3.Girding of, or, with sack ; as ch.22.12. For putting it on, and wearing it ; as girding on of harness, 1 King. 20. 11.

and burning] Tanning ; or Sun-burning. Which they had formerly been so curiously careful to shun, that they would not once peep out into the air, much less into the Sun-shine, without mask, or veil, for fear of abating their beauty, and altering their hew. But should now seize on them with a witness ; being exposed to all such burning] A defective word, from that which, more entire, so signifies, Exod. 21 25. not found elsewhere, unless ch.32. 13. (See the note there) and here used, partly, to quicken the sentence; and partly to make it comply in sound with its opposite. For in such kind of modulations, this our Prophet aboundeth. Nor is the tearm, ci, from cawah, to burn, any more uncouth a deduction, as a (learned Authour, to make way for his own uncouth interpretation, here tearmeth it) then ri, from rawah, to water, Iob 37.11.

and] A defect of the copulative; as Iob 12.4. and 20.17. ch.5.24. Hab. 3. 11. which makes the sentence the quicker.

instead of beauty] Which by all means, they had formerly been so exceeding carful and studious to maintain; whereof they had been so proud, Ezek.16.14,15. The main sum of all is, that being stript of all their former goodly raiment, and ornaments. they should, in most pitiful plight, and sorry rags, be carried away bare head, and barefoot, in captivity to Babylon. See Ier. 2. 25, 37. That construction of a late learned Annotator, seems over-harsh; who taking the foregoing word not for a noun but a particle, teareth off this clause from the present verse, and gleweth it to the next, thus rendring the words, For instead of beauty, or, because of beauty, thy men shall fall by the sword.

V.25. Thy men shall fall by the sword] The men shall suffer; for suffering, and fomenting in the women, the vices and crimes before charged on them; ver. 16. And the whole State, for not restraining and reforming them, ver. 26. Or, the women shall suffer, as in their own persons, by the means above mentioned; so by the loss of their husbands also, and of such as might be a support unto them, and a means of keeping them from reproach. See ch 4.1.

Thy] thine, O Sion, thine Inhabitants; as ch.1.27. v.16.

men] Distinguished from women, and children, Deut. ch.2.v. 34. & ch.3.v.6. Of the words, see ch.2.9.

shall fall] Be slain; as 2 Sam.ch.21.v.9 Psal.78.64.

by the sword] Of the enemy, see ch.1.20.

and thy mighty] Heb. thy might. And so Jer.49. 35. their might: as we use to say, nobility, gentry, comunalty, for nobles, gentlemen, commons: so, the height of people, for haughty people, ch.24.4. or, thy men of might, for mighty men; as wisdome for a man of wisdome: a wise man, Mic.6.9. and honour for men of honour, honourable men, chap.5.13. so strength, for strong ones; or, men of strength, Judg. 5. 21. See ch.1.21,26.

in war] Where the mighty fall, as well and assoon, oft, as the weak, 2 Sam.11.25. Eccl. 9. 11. especially then, when God fights against them; and the enemy comes with Commission from him; against whom no power can prevail, and before whom no strength can stand, Psal.33. 16. and 76.7. Amos.2.14.16.

V.26. And her gates shall lament,] The City being ruinated, shall yeeld a most lamentable spectacle to all that behold it; or, the whole State and land shall be in such condition; it shall so be with all her cities. See Jer.ch.34.v.1.

her] a change of the person, as before verse 14.

her gates] her cities, gate, for city; as Exod.20. 10. Deut. 16. 15. and 31.12. Or, the gates of Zion, that is, of Jerusalem, wherein the Judges and Elders used to sit; for the hearing of causes, and the execution of Justice, Ruth 4.1, 2. Psal.127.5. Ier.37.7.

shall lament] A very pathetical expression, intimating such a woful condition, as even the very senselesse creatures might seem to be sensible of it. So, chap. 24. 4. The gates of Zion are said to mourn: for want of that confluence of people that had wont to be in them; as the waies of Zion, are said to lament for want of passengers that used formerly to passe to and fro by them, Lam. 1.4.

being desolate] Heb. cleansed: that is emptied of goods and people: or destroyed: cut off as the word is rendred, Zach. 5. 3. But of that version there is some doubt. The word seems to have a metaphor in it, taken from the sweeping of an house, with brooms or besomes Matth.12.44. which by this very word, are of some deemed to be so tearmed, Exod.25.29. and elsewhere. But that is not so probable; for the vessels or instruments there mentioned, were of gold, and belonged to the holy Table; and the use of them seems to look and lead another way. Howbeit, to the use of such implements, the Prophet might well be supposed here to allude; nor is it any unusual resemblance in Gods menaces. For so of Jeroboams house, God threatens to sweep it away, as a man sweeps away dung, until it be all gone, 1 King.14.10. that is the sence of the place; though the very term of sweeping be not there expressed. But of Babylon he saith expresly, that he will sweep it with the besome of destruction, ch. 14.23. and of Tyrus, that he will scrape, or sweep her very dust away, Ezek. 26.4. Or. it may be a trope, taken from the wiping, or cleansing of a dish, Matth.23.25. For in allusion hereunto, in the story of Manasses God threatens to wipe Jerusalem, as a man wipes a dish, and whe'ms it, when he hath so done, 2 King. 21. 13. whether of the two, the phrase here used hath respect to; apparent it is, that by cleansing of it, is here meant, a depopulating of it; or an emptying the place of its inhabitants; who, as before they were compared to dross and such refuse stuff, as must be severed and consumed, ere the gold can be purified, ch. 1. 25. So are they here likened, for their wickednesse, to the grease or filth of a dish; or the dust and dirt that sticks fast to the pavement of an house, that cannot therefore be cleansed; the one, or the other; untill the one be throughly wiped: and the other swept accordingly: and to such stuff, as is so wiped off, or swept away, or scowred, or scraped off, are they compared, Lam.3.45. Yea, such they were, even in Gods repute: and accordingly it is here intimated, that by him they should be so dealt with. See Jer.6.30.

sitteth upon the ground] As the manner is of mourners, Ezra 9. 3. Iob 2.8.13. chap.47.1. Lam.2.10. Ezek.8.14. Yet withall, alluding to the site, and sight of a sacked City, that having her stately buildings, either pulled down, or burnt down, seems to lye in the dust; or to be, as a body dissolved into dust, 1 King.20.10. Psalm 102. 14. ch.25.12. and 26.5.

CHAP. IIII.

Verse 1. AND in that day] In those times, as chapt. 3. 18. This chapter belongeth to the former Prophecie, contained in chapt.2. and 3. And this first verse of it, to the menaces denounced in the chapter next before-going, v. 25, 26. Concerning the destruction of their men, and desolation that thereupon should ensue; further here amplified by such a paucity, and scarcity of that sex surviving; the war having consumed the most of them, (the like whereunto, see chap.13.22.) that many women should be content, yea sollicite, to come upon any tearmes, though never so unequal and unreasonable, under one mans wing, that he may be accounted as an husband, and head to them; and they may not be deemed to want such an one. So some take that, Jer. 31.22. but of that in its place.

seven women] i.e. that is many women, As Psal.119.164. Prov.24. 16. ch.30.26. Ier. 15. 9. A certain number, for an uncertain. So Zach. 8. 23. ten men there; as seven women here.

shall take hold] Contrary to the modesty required in that sex; rather to be sued, aed sought unto by the other; then themselves to seek and sue to them.

of one man] Contrary unto that natural disposition, which in that Society, is not willing to admit compeers; Marriage, and majesty, enduring no co-partnership. And the wife superinduced, therefore, is said to be a vexation, and, a vexer, Levit. 18. 18. 1 Sam.1.6.

we will eat our own bread] We will find our selves meat, drink, and apparel. We will expect no such means of maintenance from thee, as the law tieth husbands to, in regard of their wives, whether they have one, or more, Exod.21.10.

bread] For all manner of food; as Gen.28. 20. ch.3.1.

our own bread] That which we will earn our selves. See Proverbs 31.27.

and wear our own apparel] Either, wrought with our own hands; or procured by our own employments, otherwise. See Proverbs 31. 13, 18, 19, 22, 23.

only, let us be called by thy name] Heb. let thy name be called upon us. That is, let us be called, and acounted thine; to wit, thy wives. So Iacob, Gen. 48. 16. Let my name be called upon them: that is, let them be called and accounted mine, to wit, my sons.

to take away our reproach] for it was deemed a reproachfull thing among that people, for a woman, as to be without issue. 1 Sam.1.6. Luk. 1. 25. (for barrenness was accounted a curse, Exod. 23. 26. Deut 7. 14. and fruitfulness a blessing, Psal.127.3. & 128.3.) so to want an husband; to live single as one, that no man regarded, or looked after, ch.54.4. Ier.30.17. and that therefore could not have issue, in an honest and warrantable way. Hence it is mentioned, as one dismal effect of Gods judgments on this people, that the maidens were not given in marriage, Psal. 78. 63. See the story of Iephtha's daughter, Iudg.11.36,37. This the Apostle seems to have had an eye to, 1 Cor.7.36.

V.2. In that day] At that time; or, Then: as chap.2 20. or, And then. For the better connexion of it with the rest of the context, as ch 3.6. but here, then: for after: as ch. 30. 25. And, as the particle then, is oft with us a note, not of the time present, but of the time ensuing. For, the Prophecie, or predictions here following, were to take effect: Not what time they should be in that desolate condition: but after these calamities over-past, and the people of God by these afflictions thus purged: the incorrigible wicked being swept away, and the residue reformed, v.4. ch.1.26, 27. For this Sermon, or Prophecy, the Prophet concludes, as the former, with gracious promises, for the support of the faithfull; and with a prediction, as most think, of the exhibition of the Messias, and the restauration of the Church under him, wherewith also he began the same, ch.2.2.

the branch of the Lord] The promised Messias: the Lord Iesus. Whose name is said to be Tsemach, that is, bud: or, branch, Zach. 3.8. & 6.12. and is so called: partly, in regard of his descent: his issuing from the root of Iesse, the stem, or stock of David, budding and sprouting forth again, when it was much decayed, and in a manner, to sight, dead, ch.11.1. and 53. 2. and partly, because all life of grace, and spiritual blessings are contained in him, as leaves, blossoms, and fruits, in a bud, or branch: and from him, springing and sprouting forth, are derived unto all those, that are ingraffed into into him and have interest in him, Rom.6.5. and 11. 17,24. 1 Cor. 1. 30. In regard whereof, he is also further termed a bud, or branch, of righteousnesse, Jer.23.5. & 33.15. The Jewish Doctors themselves, expound it of the Messias; and many of ours therein, concur with them. Yet others understand it of the Church. That as their land, though wasted by former wars, ch.1.7. & 32.13. and much more also, by occasion of the Babylonian deportation, ch.3.26. seemed never likely to recover, and return to his former fertility and beauty again, Jer. 30.17. yet should become, both after the Assyrian incursion and devastation, as also after the return from the Chaldean captivity, as fruitful and beautifull, as ever before, chap.32.16. & 35. 1, 2. Jer.33.,10,13. So the Church, and people of God, called his pleasant plant, ch.5.7. though it seemed so to be impaired, and wasted, by the foregoing calamities here denounced; and the long continuance thereof, during the Babylonian deportation, and bondage, that it was deemed as a dead corpse, or plant, never like to recover life again; much less to attain to any such flourishing estate, as before it enjoyed; yet should again spring forth, and sprout out of the dust, and be restored to as glorious a condition, as ever, chap. 26.19. & 37.31. & 44. 3, 4. Ezek.21.21. & 37. 11, 12, 19. Others again conceive, that by the bud, or branch, here mentioned, is understood the spirit of God, and the graces of it, that should in great abundance, through Gods blessing on the labours of his servants in their spiritual husbandry, 1 Cor.3.6.9. spring forth, and manifest themselves more gloriously then ever, in the lives and courses of his people, v.3. chap.1. 26,27. & 60. 21. & 62. 3, 11. See the like phrase, Psal.85. 11. ch. 45. 8. I conceive the second interpretation, to be most agreeable to the course of the context.

branch of the Lord] Because, which way soever we take it, it is from him. It is he that caused the Messiah to spring from the withered root of Jesse, Psal.132.11, 17. Ier. 33. 15. Zach 3. 8. Act. 13. 23,33. It is he, that causeth his Church to spring up again, out of her dust, ch.26.19. & 55.10,13. Ezek.37.12. It is he, that causeth the graces of his spirit, to spring abundantly forth, from the hearts of those who were barren and fruitlesse before, chap.44. 3,4. Ezek. 36.26, 27. 1 Cor.3. 7.

shall be beautiful, and glorious] Heb. For, or, to beauty and glory. As, for glory, Zach.3.5. and, for a crown of glory, chap.28.5. or, simply, beauty and glory; as it is rendred, Zach.3. 5. that is, beautifull and glorious; the abstract for the concrete: as ch.3. 25. So, desolation, and unto desolation, are one and the same, ch.1.6. with Ier.12. 11. See ch 24.16.

beautiful] Or, beauty. The word is rendred glory, chap.13. 19. & 23.9. & 24. 16. and elsewhere. But glory, and it, are here distinct. And it seems rather to signifie such loveliness, comeliness, and pleasantness unto the eye, as makes amiable, desireable, delightfull. So, a pleasant heritage, Ier.3.19. and, a pleasant land, Dan.11.16. For, it comes from a word that signifies a roe; a comely smooth-skinned creature, and delightful to behold; whereunto therefore, the Spouse in the Canticles, likeneth her love, Cant. 2. 9. and her love, his Spouses two breasts, to two fawns; or young ones of that kind, as most take it, Cant.4.5. & 7.4. nor much differeth it from those lovely creatures; which Solomon would have the wife like unto, in her husbands eye and esteem, Prov. 5. 19. This word therefore implyes such a comliness, or loveliness, as makes amiable, and drawes affection to it: the other, such a lustre, as stands with state. Both joyned together, very fitly express the exceeding great amiablenesse, mixt with no less Majesticalness, that is found in the person of Christ, and in his Church, and in his ordinances, and in the graces of his Spirit, Psal.45.2,3,4. & 110.2, 3. Cant.1.9,16. & 4.1. & 5.10. & 6.4. ch.52.7,8. & 60. 1, 14. & 62. 4,5. Rom.10. 15. 2 Cor. 3.7, 12, 18. and 10.4.

and the fruit of the earth] Or, of the land: as ch. 1. 19. alluding to that fruitfulnesse that the land formerly had, Gen.26.12. Deut.8.8. and should attain to again; both, after the removal of the Assyrian Army; and again, after their return from the Chaldean captivity: though it had lain so long time waste, Ier.31.5. See ch. 30. 23, 24. Ezek.36.8,11,35. where it is said, The land that had lien waste, became as the garden of Eden. But to be withall spiritually here understood of the fruits of the spirit, holiness, righteousness, and the like: that should spring forth, and appear in the lives and courses of Gods people, proceeding from the inward principle of grace in their souls, chap.45.8. & 61.3. Ezek.47.12. Gal.5.22,23. Phil.1.11. Heb.6.7. and 12.11. Jam.3.17,18.

shall be excellent] Heb, excellency. Or, for; or, unto excellency: as before. The word properly seems to signifie gayness; for it comes from a root, which that in the Greek answers: from whence we have our English word, gay; And it is a title given to a chief degree among the Rabbins, as you would say, excellent; or, illustrious. Hence, the excellency of Jacob, Psalm 47. 4. yet is it frequently taken in the worst part, for pride, Prov.16. 18. because of excellency, and gayness, people are wont to grow proud, Ezek. 28.12, 17. and in gayness, to express their pride, ch.3.16. & 13. 19. & 23. 9. But here it is taken for excellency, and of the excellency of the fruit of that land, see, Numb.13.24, 27. ch.1.19.

and comely] Or, goodly: for comely is not the usual commendation of fruit. Heb. comeliness, or, goodliness: As in the other before. The word seems to import somewhat more then comliness, and to be a degree above it. It is that, that was rendered bravery, chapter 3. 18. See chapter 28. 1, 4.

for them that are escaped of Israel] Heb. for the escaping; as ch. 10. 20. those that through Gods mercy and goodness, being protected and preserved, shall escape and survive the forementioned calamities. See ch.1.27.

of Israel] See ch.1.3,4.

V.3. And it shall come to pass, that] Heb. it shall be; as ch.2.2. with a defect of the particle; as ch.3. 24.

he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem] The sanctified estate and condition of the remnant so preserved, in the state of Gods Church now reformed, ch.1.ver.25.

left] not swept or taken away by the forementioned judgments, ch.1.9. & 3. 26. See.v. 2.

shall be called holy] Shall so be, and be so reputed, as Gen.21.21. ch.1.26. & 44.5. & 56.7. Heb. holy shall be said to him; or, of him: For so also is the particle used, Gen.20.13. & 26.7. Esth. 3.2. Psal. 91.11. See the like phrase, ch.61.6. So ch.60.21. Thy people shall all be righteous; and ch.62.12. They shall call them the holy people: for holiness, and righteousness, are here all one. See Act.15. 9. & 26. 18; 1. Pet.1.2. & 2.9.

even every one, that is written among the living in Jerusalem] Or, written unto life; or, written for life: as 2 Sam.15. 21. Prov. 10. 16, 17. whom God had foreappointed to escape and survive the calamities of the times: as if he had made a list of them, and enrolled their names in some book, Dan. 12. 1. a type of the Elect, whose names are said to be written in heaven, Luke 16. 20. and to be entred into the book of life: or, of the living, Psal.69.28. Phil. 4 3. Rev.3.5. & 17.8. & 20.12. kept by the Lamb, the Lord Iesus, the Master of the rolls in heaven, Rev. 13. 8. Wherein none are recorded, but such as are designed, as well unto grace, righteousness, & holiness as to life, glory, & happiness: unto sanctification, as well as unto salvation, Ps.69.28. Ephes.1.4. 2 Thess.2.13. 2. Tim.1.9. Iam.2. 5. 1 Pet.1.2. See also Exod.32.32.

V.4. When the Lord shall have &c.] This hath reference to that Then v.1. When the reformation before spoken of shall be throughly effected, ch.1.25,27.

When] Heb. if. So is the conditional particle used, Iob 21. 6.

washed away] An allusion to the legal and ceremonial washings, Levit.15.5,8. Heb.9.10. types of cleansing from the filth of sin, by the efficacy of Christs blood and Spirit, Ezek. 36. 26. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Heb. 9. 14. and 10. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 2. 1 Ioh. 1. 7. Rev. 1. 5. and 7. 14.

the filth] Heb. ordure: or, excrement. The word imports all such filth, or excrement, as comes forth from the body, (for thence it is so termed: nor need we for the notation of an Hebrew word, to have recourse to an Ethiopian term, said to be used, Iohn 11. 39. for to stinck) either upward, as chap 28.5. 2 Pet. 2.22. or downward, as Deut.23. 14. Ezek.4. 12. but is used more generally, for any exceeding foul, or filthy thing, as of such garments, Zach.3.3,4. and for sin, and wickedness, spiritual filth: shewing how loathsome and abominable sin is in Gods sight, Ezek. 24. 6. Matth.15.18,20. 2 Cor. 7. 1. So is it here taken: and so Prov. 30. 12. where Agur saith of some, though seeming, and deeming themselves pure: that yet, they are not washed from their filth.

of the daughters of Zion] Whose pride, vanity, wantonness, and other excesses, had no small share among the procuring causes of the judgments before menaced. See ch.3.16. Though by daughters of Zion, some understand here, the cities of Judah, whereof Zion or Jerusalem, was as the mother, Jer.34.1. But the former is more agreeable to the other passages of this particular Prophecy.

the filth of] them. Thereby intimating, that those gates, and garbs, and courses, and carriages, that they prided themselves in, and accounted their bravery, chap. 3. 16, 18. were such in deed and truth, as made them odious, loathsome, and abominable in Gods eye. See the contrary, 1 Tim. 2. 9, 10. with 1 Pet 3 3, 4.

and shall have purged] Heb. washed out: as 2 Chron. chap. 4. verse 6. Ezek. chap. 40. ver. 38. or driven away, carried away, cast out, removed: as the same, Jer. chap. 51. verse 58. and as the like, ch. 11. verse 12. shall have severed, and cast out, as dirt, or dung: or as dross, in regard of the metaphor following. And the Prophet may seem to have made use of such a word here, as might well fit with both.

the blood] Heb. bloods, used commonly for murther, Psal. 9. 3. ch. 33. 15. Hence, a man of bloods, for a bloody, a bloody minded, a murtherous man, Ps.5.6. and men of bloods. for the like, Ps.26.9. It is used also for the guilt of blood, Exod. 22. 1, 2. or blood guiltiness, Psalm 51. 14. It is put here for oppression, and all manner of cruel carriage, which is as murther in Gods account, Mic 3.10. Hab. 2. 12. the common sin of the one sex as those before mentioned, of the other. See ch. 1. 15, 23. & 3. 12. & 14.15. Yet, some understand it more generally of all manner of uncleanness: because blood defiles, ch.9.5. Ezek. 16. 6. Hos.6. 8.

of Jerusalem] Therein spilt, 2 Kings 21. 16. Ezek. 9. 9. and therewith defiled, Numb.35. 33, 34. Psal. 106. 38; or the cruelty exercised by her Inhabitants, chap. 1. 15. Ezek. 22. 6, 9.

from the midst thereof] Or, out of it: as Numb. 14. 13. Judg.10. 16. Amos 2. 3.

by the spirit of judgment] By judgement executed upon the evil evill among them, Ezek. chap. 20. 38. See chap. 1. verse 27. and by a spiritual work of Judgment, in severing between the fleth and the spirit, in the fouls of the faithfull, Heb. chap. 4. verse 12. Or, as some, by working repentance in them, Act. 5. 31. & 11. 18. by which men are judged, & judge themselves, Jer. 31. 18, 19. 1 Cor. 11. 31, 32.

and by the spirit of burning] So the very same word is used, chap. 40. 16. and the verb whereof it comes, doth most frequently so figure, Exod. 22. 6. chap. 1. 31. & 9. 18. and elsewhere: and thereof was that place, called Tabe'rah, Num. 11. 1, 3. because God there came to judgment with them by fire; as he speaks, Amos 7. 4. and the allusion is to the trying of oare, or the casting of metal, whereby the drosly metal, is severed from the purer substance, and either consumed, or cast away. See chap. 1. 25. yet some render it, the spirit of a-mo'na; or, consumption: or, removal. Because the verb it comes of, signifies sometime to depasture; or, eat down: as beasts do grass, Exod. 22. 5. chap 3. 14. and sometime to remove, or, take away, 1 King. 21. 26. 2 King. 23. 24. But the former seems more proper to this place. And it is decred to have respect to the fire of Gods zeal, c. 9. 7. & 16. 11. Ezek. 36. 5. or to the fire of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 3. 13, 15.

V. 5. And the Lord will, &c.] Here follows a promise of Gods gracious presence among his people, thus purged, in all places of their abode, as well for direction, and guidance, as for protection and defence: expressed in way of allusion to his leading them through the Wilderness, in their journying toward the land of Canaan. For unto that usually is reference had to one of the most remarkable, and miraculous passages of Gods providence, in behalf of his people) both in the relations of their return from the Babylonian captivity, and other like deliverances in those times vouchsafed them; as also in the predictions of the restauration of the Church under Christ. See chap. 40. 3, 4. and 41. 18, 19. & 42. 16. & 43. 2, 20. & 49. 9, 11. & 51. 9, 11.

create] Do strange works, like works of creation; such as are above, or beyond the power of nature, and beside the ordinary course of the creature, for the safety and welfare of his people, ch. 41. 20. & 43. 19. & 65. 18.

upon every dwelling place of mount Zion] On, over: as Psal. 105. 39. upon, or over every place of the habitations of his people. Protection they shall have wheresoever they abide, ch. 8. 14. Ezek. 11. 16. See ch 32. 18, 19. & 33. 20.

and upon her assemblies] Or, places of meeting. The word coming from a verb, that signifies to cry, call, or read, is used first for reading, or Scripture read, Neh. 8. 8. and thereof hath the Turkish Alcoran, its name. Secondly it is used for an assembly, or a meeting; not for the hearing of the Scripture read and opened onely, Deut. 31. 11, Acts 13, 44. but for other solemn service also, Levit. 23. 7, 27. so called, from the calling of them together, chap. 1. 13. Lastly, it seems here to be put for the places of their assembling and meeting together for such purpose: as the like word is used, Psal. 74. 8. Lam. 2. 6. opposed hereunto, or distinguished from their private houses, or places of abode, mentioned in the former branch. So the meaning is, that God would so protect them, that they might use onely fit safely and quietly in their several places of abode, Zach. 3. 10. but assemble also and meet together for the publique service of God, without fear of danger or disturbance, Exod. 34. 14. having God and Christ himself, above, about, and among them, to protect and secure them, both in the one place, and in the other, Psal. 46. 5. Zach. 2. 5. Matt. ch. 18. 20.

a cloud, and smoke] For, a cloud of smoke; or, a smokie cloud. A cloud like smoke, or as thick as smoke, Exod. 19. 9, 18. See the like, verse 6. and Prov. 22. 15. compared with Prov. 28. 15. So the most expound that, Matth. 3. 11. the Holy Ghost, and fire, and, water and the spirit, Joh. 3. 5.

a cloud] Alluding to the pillar of cloud, or cloudy pillar. That both conducted and protected them in the desart, Exod. 13. 21. and 14. 19. & 40. 38.

and smoke by day] Because in the day time fire is not so conspicuous, as smoke, or some thicker vapour, Josh. 18. 20. Joel 2. 30.

: and the shining of a flaming fire by night] This likewise alludes to that pillar that conducted the people. Which being one and the same, appeared as a thick cloud without light by day, partly to be the more visible in the light; Sun-light, or Sunshine especially that useth to dim fire: and partly to cover, shadow and shelter them from the heat of the Sun, more vehement and offensive in those waste places, and sandy grounds, Psal. 105. 39. chap. 32. 2. and as a flame of fire in the night: both that they might see it, and their way by it, and follow its conduct, when by night they travelled, as sometime they did, Numb. 9. 21. and neither miss their way, nor, miscarry in it, as they might otherwise in the dark, Joh. 11. 9. 1 John 2. 11. And again to make the night the lesse uncomfortable to them, when they made stay in those uncouth desarts. And that one and the same pillar did both those offices, and had two such several appearances with it, appears hereby: in that when it passed over the heads of that people, (at which time they were baptized with it, 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2. it dropping or misling down upon them, to refresh them, Psal. 68. 9.) and came to the rear of them, where it stayed and stood still, to keep them and the Egyptians asunder: it appeared at the same time, as a dark cloud to the Egyptians on the one side: and as as a bright light to the Israelites on the other side, Exod. 14. 19, 20, 24.

a flaming fire] Heb. fire of flame. So Lam. 2. 3. Joel 2. 5.

for upon] Or, over. As before.

all the glory] All Gods people: who are his glory, verse 2. whom he make partakers of his glory: as he did Moses, Exod. 34. 29, 30. 2 Cor. 3. 18. in whom he is and will be glorified, Psalm 29. 9. ch. 60. 21. Rom. 8. 30. 2 Thess. 1. 10. and whom by works wrought, as well for them, as in them, he makes glorious oft, even in the eye of the world, Psalm 84. 11. & 85. 9. & 149. 4, 9. chap. 60. 1, 2. Sec ch. 11. 10. & 22. 24. or, as I conceive the plain meaning to be, that that glory, or goodly and glorious estate, that God would advance his people to, after restoring them from their former dejected and distressed condition, should continue firm, and steddfast, under Gods protection, overspreading every part of it. See chap. 32. 15, 19. & 33. 17. 21. & 35. 1, 2, 9, 10.

shall be a defence] Or, a covering. For the word here used, comes from a root but once read, that signifies to cover, and by covering, to protect: which is the very proper notion of the word, protect. It is used by Moses in the blessing of Benjamin, Deut. 33, 12. The beloved of the lord shall dwell in safety by him, he shall cover him every day, or all the day long; that is, continually, and constantly. A good comment upon this place. What may also be rendred, as our translators there supply it, he, (that is, the Lord) shall be a covering, See v. 6. It may have in respect in general, unto choice matters of value, price, and regard, which men are wont to keep close covered, as well to keep fair, as for safety otherwise. But it is supposed more specially to allude to that cloud, that covered the Tabernacle, a type of the Church, Psalm 15. 1. When it was within filled with the glory of God, Exod. chapter 40. v. 34, 35. Numb. 9. 22. The word is found onely in two other places, Psalm 19. 5. & Joel 2. 16. and it is in both those places used for one and the same thing: to wit, the bridegrooms chamber, closet, or bower. For this was, as some tell us, such a green booth, or bower, as in the feast of Tabernacles, they made use of, Levit. 23. 42. Num. 8. 15, 17. (though others say, a canopy, supported with four perches, or poles, at the four corners, under which the bridegroom and bride received their solemn blessing, Psalm 128.) wherein the bridegroom solaced himself with his bride. A place as of secrecie, security, and safety: for of solace, and delight; not unfit to represent, as well the comfort and joy; as the immunity and safeguard, that Christ, the Bridegroom, by his gracious presence afforded to the Church his Spouse, Psalm 31. 20. and 91. 1. being both Sun, Solace, and shield, or shelter unto her, Psalm 84. 11. See Cant. 2. 3. But it may justly be questioned, whether the use of either of these, were so ancient, as either Davids time, or Esays. Only this we are sure, that the word here made choice of by the Prophet Esay to decipher Gods protection of his people, is in Scripture used for that wedding room, whatsoever it was.

V. 6. And there shall be] Or, as some, he shall be. He, the Lord. Of whom, v. 5. But the verb here is feminine. Others, of which, protection there shall be. Or, most fitly, as I suppose, which, (to wit, covering, supplyed from the verse before) shall be. For the copulative is frequently put for the relative: as ch. 5. 4. Job 20. 11, 19. and 37. 5. Jer. 6. 20. Mal. 3. 1. with Matth. 11. 10. Or, And it shall be. For he proceeds to illustrate the use of the forementioned creature, for the safety of the Prophet Esay to decipher Gods protection of his people, is in Scripture used for that wedding room, whatsoever it was.

and for a place of refuge] Such as the feebler sort of creatures are wont, in hazard of their lives, to betake themselves unto, Psal. 104. 18. and such is the Lord said to be unto those that are his; and that such an one, as never fails, Ps. 91. 9, 10. and 46. 1. and 61. 3. and 62. 8.

and for a covert from storm, and from rain] Such as keepers, before, when occasion was, for such purpose. It is used also for such coverts as wild beasts are wont to make use of, to lurk, and to shelter themselves in; Psal. 10. 8, 9. Lam. 3. 10. and it is by Gods people ascribed to God, as their surest, and safest covert, Psalm 32. 7. and 119. 114. and by their enemies in derision; let him rise up, and be your covert, Deut. 32. 38. See ch. 32. 2.

from storm] The word is sometime used for an inundation of storm] The word is sometime used for an inundation of land-waters, breaking in upon the swelling up of some stream, or flood: as Ps. 90. 5. Hab. 3. 10. but most frequently for a storm of showers, or rain, Job 24. 8. Psalm 77. 17. chap. 30. 30. and 32. 2. and so here.

from storm, and from rain] That is, from storm of rain; or, a rainy storm: as, storm, and tempest, for a tempestuous storm, chap. 29. 6. storm: as, storm, and tempest, for a tempestuous storm, chap. 29. 6. storm: as, storm, and tempest, for a tempestuous storm, chap. 29. 6. and, from the wind of storm, from the tempest: that is, from the tempestuous storm of wind, Psalm 55. 8. So, fire and brimstone; for, fire of brimstone, or, sulphureous fire, Gen. 19. 24. Psalm 11. 4. Rev. 14. 10. and 21. 8. and, a cloud and smoke, for, a smoky cloud, verse 5.

CHAP. V.

Verse 1. NOw will I sing] Here beginneth our Prophets third Sermon, compofed in form of a ditty, or Song. In the first part whereof, he layes down, under the parable of a vineyard, the great care and cost that God had been at with his people, and their unworthy carriage again towards him: his goodnesse to them, and their unthanksfulnesse to him. That which he began also his first Sermon with, chap. 1, 2, 3.

Now, &c.] In the former part of this verse, is the Title, or Inscription of this discourse; or of the first part, at least, of it.

I will sing] As Moses did by Gods appointment. Deut. 31. 19. and 32. 1. So Deborah begins her song, Judg. 5. 3. and David, Psalm 32. 1. See Psal. 101. 1.

to my beloved] That is, Jesus Christ, the welbeloved of God the Father, Matth. 3. 17. and 17. 5. Ephes. 1. 6. called also his Son of love, Col. 1. 13. Whence Solomon also, a type of Christ, his Son of love, Col. 1. 13. Whence Solomon also, a type of Christ, his Son of love, Col. 1. 13. Whence Solomon also, a type of Christ, is by the word here used, from God himself, termed Jedidiah, 2 Sam. 12. 25. (which title also Moses gives to Benjamin, in blessing him, Deut. 33. 12.) that is, the beloved of the Lord. And the sing him, Deut. 33. 12.) that is, the beloved of the Lord. And the sing him, Deut. 33. 12.) that is, the beloved of the Lord. And the Churches beloved; so oft styled in the Canticles; Cant. 1. 13, 14, 16. & 2. 3, 8, 10, 16, 17. &c. and her love, Cant. 2. 7. & 8. 4. as she also is said to be his, Psal. 60. 5. & 108. 6. Jer. 11. 15. & 12. 7. Some therefore suppose it to be spoken in the person of God the Father, the Lord of the vineyard, speaking to Christ his Son, & Heir, concerning his vineyard, Mat. 21. 33, 37. Others rather, in the person of the Prophet, (not, as some would have it, as of kin to Christ, of the Prophet, (not, as some would have it, as of kin to Christ, supposing him to have been of the tribe and seed-Royal, a thing altogether uncertain. See ch. 1. 1. but) as being (therein like to John Baptist, ch. 3. 29.) a friend and well-wisher both to Christ, and to his Church; to the Bridegroom and his Bride.

a song] A discourse made in metre, that it may be the more easily and readily learned, the better remembred, the more frequently chanted; and being commonly in the mouthes of all sorts, be transmitted from age to age, and remain unto all posterity; as we find by experience, that the Psalmes which we have turned into metre, are generally more familiar, and in more frequent use with us, then any other part of Scripture. See Deut. 31. 19, 21.

of my beloved] Either commanded of him, as Deut. 31. 19. or suggested by him, as 2 Sam. 23. 2. or, composed in his name, and in his behalf; for it is a song of expostulation and complaint, concerning the wicked and unworthy demeanour of Gods people towards him, who had been so carefull of their good: not unlike those, Deut. 32. Psal. 78. & 106.

my beloved] The word differeth a little, but not much from the former. And as Solomon the son had his name from the former: so David his father from the latter: for it signifieth ones beloved. Yet some render it here uncle, and some, cousin: upon that groundless supposition above-mentioned: that Esay should be of kin to Christ. And it is true indeed, that the word here used, doth sometime more strictly signifie an uncle, Levit. 20. 20. & 25. 48. and seems sometime enlarged to any one neer of kin, as Amos 6. 10. See Ier. 32. 7, 8, 12. but it is used as commonly for a friend, or one beloved; and that above thirty times in that short book of the Canticles; and they are far out therefore, that imagine it never to be so used.

touching his vineyard] So the particle is taken, Gen. 20. 13. & 26. 7. Psal. 91. 11. Yet it may here be rendered, and that is indeed the most proper and usuall signification of it: to, or, unto his vineyard: as composed in his person speaking unto his vineyard: or to be sung sometime by him in in person, when time should be, to his vineyard: which they suppose done in effect, when he propounded to them, that parable concerning the vineyard, Matth. 21. 33, 34. Mar. 12. 1, 12. Luk. 20. 9, 16. but the former seems better. See ch. 27. 2.

his vineyard] His Church; as it is expounded, v. 7. Howbeit, what some hence gather, that this song was framed in allusion to such merry songs as in vintage time they used in the vineyards, ch. 16. 10. & 17. 2. being such a mournfull ditty, seems not to probable.

My beloved hath] Here begins the song it self, my beloved] Christ, as before.

hath a vineyard] So is the Church usually styled in Scripture, as a place that men have much care of, take delight in, and expect pleasant fruit, and no small gain from, Gen. 49. 22. Ps. 128. 3. Cant. 2. 15. & 6. 12. & 8. 11, 12. See Ps. 80. 8. chap. 27. 2. Jer. 12. 10. Ezek. 15. 2, 6. Hos. 10. 1. Matth. 20. 1. & 21. 28, 33. Luk. 13. 6, and 20.

in a very fruitfull hill] Heb. in an horn, the son of oyl; (as Psalm 89. 15.) or, fatnesse, as 1 Chr. 4. 40. an horn, that is, as most, an hill; and that very fruitfull, as deemed fittest for vines, Psal. 80. 10. some, an high hill. For horn is used for height, Psal. 75. 5. as being the most eminent part of any horned beast. Others an horny hill, such as bowing like an half moon, may receive the Sunbeams at all times of the day, both morning, noon, and evening; and on every side, for the better ripening of the grapes: and are in some other languages said to be so termed; and, they suppose an allusion to the mountains of Israel, Jer. 17. 3. & 31. 5. & 33. 13. and the son of fatnesse, that is, a very fat, and rich soil: The one term importing the commodiousnesse of the situation: The other, the richnesse of the soyl. Yet some suppose them both to intimate one and the same thing. The horn being put for the excellency of any thing; as one of Jobs daughters is named Kerenhappuch, that is, the horn of complexion, as we term it, or, of beauty, and the son of fatnesse, for exceeding fat; as the son of the morning, for exceeding bright and illustrious, chap. 14. 13. for it would be rendered word for word, the horn of the son of fatnesse; or, the horn, and the son of fatnesse, (a defect of the copulative, as chap. 32. 13.) that is, in a principal fat, or, a principal and very fat soyl; alluding to the land of Canaan, wherein God had seated that people, Numb. 13. 27. Deut. 8. 7, 9. and 11. 9, 12. Psal. 16. 9. & 88. 9. Ezek. 20. 6.

V. 2. And he fenced it] He spared for no pains nor cost about it, either for the manuring, or fencing of it, verse 4. Mark. 12. 1.

fenced it] Made a fence, a wall, a hedge, or both about it, (see v. 5.) to keep out, as strangers, that might crop it: so wild beasts or cattle, that might spoyl, or annoy it, Exod. 22. 5. Cant. 2. 15. an emblem of Gods care for, and providence over his people, ch. 27. 3. Psalm 22. 5. 2. Zach. 2. 5. See Job 1. 10.

and gathered out the stones thereof] Heb. he floned it. The word here used, signifies sometime to cast stones at one, 2 Sam. 16. 6, 13. Sometimes to pick stones out of a place, as ch. 62. 10. and so here. As the casting of stones into a field, is said to spoil it, 1 King. 3. 19. so the picking of them out is want to amend it: because stones hinder the growth of plants, and makes the land, or ground, less fertile. A type of Gods care to free his people, as well from annoyances within, as to protect them against incursions, and surprizals of enemies from without. See Zach. 2. 5. & 3. 4, 5, 6. Some expound the fencing, of keeping them within a compass by the law: the picking out of stones, of the prohibition of evil things therein forbidden: others, of the casting out of idol-worship, and idols, Deut. 7. 25. and 12. 2, 3. And others of expelling the Canaanites, and other wicked people before them, and from among them, Exod. 23. 30. Psal. 44. 2. But these things seem over-curious.

and planted it] He setled his people in the land, Psal. 44. 2. & 80. 8, 9. where they had been but strangers before, Ps. 105. 12. as a vineyard planted with strange plants, brought from some forraign soyl, chap. 17. 10.

with the choicest vine] Heb. Sorek, (and so Jer. 2. 21.) which is the name of a place, (whether in the Philistims Countrey, or in the land of Israel, uncertain) where Dalila dwelt, Judg. 16. 4. from whence some suppose, that this kind of vine had its name. Some of the Rabbins therefore read the words here, He planted it with plants, or slips of Sorek. It is agreed upon, that it signifieth a very choice kind of vine; whole grapes, fay some of them, had no grains or stones in them. But that is scarce probable. See Gen. 49. 11. ch. 16. 8. and 19. 9. Of the colour of this vine were some horses, mentioned, Zach. 1. 8. as some in Greek called, Spadices, of the like. Some suppose it to intimate the Jewish people, as a choice seed, descended from the loyns of those their worthy Ancestors, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and by God therefore set apart for his peculiar, Deut. 7. 6, 8. & 9. 27, 29. Others, of Gods precepts that he had planted his Church with, Deut.4.8. ch.42.21. Rom.3.1,2. But we may not descend unto such niceties, and particularities, in the exposition of a parable. And these branches thus expounded, fall one into another. See more hereof, on Jer.2.21.

and built a tower in the midst of it] So Mark 12. 1. A place for the keepers of it, to retire to, and lodge in, so scituate in it, that they might over-look the ground, ch.1.8. in the midst of it. Either simply, in it; as ch.7.22. or, in the midst; as a place most convenient for over-sight. Of Jerusalem some expound it, wherein, as in a watch-tower, the Priests and Princes resided. See Jer.6.27.

and also made a wine-press therein] Heb. hewed out. Of wood, or stone, Prov.9. 1. ch. 10.15. and 22.26. Mark 12.1. It is said, he digged out. But that seems spoken, not of the press, but of a place to set a vessel in, to receive the wine from the press. This some expound of the altar, streaming with the blood of beasts offered in sacrifices, (See ch.1.11. & 29.1,2.) like the liquor of grapes, Gen.49. 11,12. Deut.32. 14. Others, of the Priests and Prophets, who, by their preaching, pressed out of Gods people good works, and pious offices, as pleasant liquor, very gratefull to God, Heb.13.16,21. Judg. 5.13. But of that, as of the rest.

and he looked] Heb. expected. After so much care had of it, and means used about it, he expected, and waited untill time of year, then making account to receive fruit answerable to the cost and pains that he had been at with it. Matt.21.34. 1.Cor.9.7. Heb. 6.7. Jam.5.7.

that it should bring forth] Heb. make; as Gen.1.11,12. Matt.3.8, 10. & 7.17,19. So in the next clause, and v.10.

grapes] Grapes, of some kind or other, it could not but produce, unlesse it were wholly barren. But the meaning is, such grapes as those plants, or slips wherewith he had planted it, used to bear. By grapes therefore, here, we are to understand good grapes, or choice grapes; as, garments, for clean garments, or goodly garments Zach.3.5. A defect of the Epithet, not unusual, So c.1.18. wool, for white wool, c.28.8. no place, for no clean place, Mal.1.14. a male, for a sound male opposed to a corrupt one: as here grapes, opposed to filthy, bad, noysom, naughty, stinking ones.

and it brought forth wild grapes] Most Interpreters, (some Greeks onely excepted, that render it thorns) the latine especially run in a track, expounding the word, wild-vines; so called in latine, because they use to grow in the hedges, or edges of grounds. And to mend the matter, (because that is the name, not of the fruit of such, but of the plant it self; and the translation therefore seems not to sound well;) They tell us, that the plant is put for the fruit. But we need not involve our selves in any such difficulties; the sense of the word being plain enough of it self: The verb whereof it comes, signifies, first to rot, ch.50.2. then to stinck, Exod.7.v.18. & 8. 14. & 16. 20. Because rotten things use to stinck, and because things rotten and stinking, are naught. In the third place, it signifies to be evill, and naught, Dan.6.v.14. and hence the word in the feminine singular, Ezr.ch.4.12. a bad, evil, or naughty city; and the same here in the masculine plural, to answer unto and agree with the word grapes, rotten, filthy, noysome, or naughty, to wit, grapes: like those naughty figs, Jer.24.2,3. or rather like those grapes of gall, and bitter clusters: yielding wine like the poyson of dragons, and venome of aspes, Deut. 32. 32,33. The word grapes is not in the Text, but may well be supplyed from the former branch: though there be no necessity so to do: since it may be rendred naughty, or noysom ones. So the very like word is used, Job.31. 40. for noysom or naughty, to wit, herbs: that is, weeds: such as grow among corn: of which, Matth.13.25. where the word used, would rather be rendred weeds, then tares. Nor can I assent to those, who make that here spoken of, a figure of hypocrisie, carrying a fair shew of piety, as these do of good grapes, without inward power, 2 Tim.3.5. Since that the vices, and crimes hereby said to be resembled, ver. 7. as those also that Moses speaks of, and our Prophet elsewhere taxeth, in foregoing parallel places, are such as too openly publish, and make profession of impiety and cruelty. See ch. 1. 21. and 3. 9, 15. The defect, as of the adjunct before, in grapes, for good grapes; so of the subject here in bad, for bad grapes; is neither in-frequent in other languages. For so in the Greek, Matth. 23. 15. we read sea, and dry, (agreeable to that, Gen.1.10.) by a defect of the subject; which, in our English, we render sea, and land; by a defect of the adjunct; nor unusual in the Hebrew: for so, Psalm 38. 7. loathsom, for a loathsom disease; (for disease is not in the text:) so, untempered, for, untempered, or, ill-tempered morter, Ezek. 13.10,11,14,15. & 22.28. See further, ch.17.5.

V.3. And now] Having shewed how his vineyard had frustrated his expectation, he first requireth the judgment of others, even of those themselves whom it concerned, and were parties in it, what they deemed it deserved to have done unto it, v.3, 4. and then relates in what manner he purposed to deal with it, v.5,6.

O ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah] That the equity of his proceedings may the more evidently appear; he is content to make them Judges in their own cause: judge (saith he) I pray you, between me, and my vineyard: as if he should say, Tell me what your selves would in the like case do, so served as I have been with my vineyard. So chap.1. 18. 2 Sam. 12. 1, 6. Jer. 2.5. Mic. 6. 3, 7. Matth.21.40.

inhabitants, and men] Heb. inhabitant and man. Taken collectively, as ch. 20. 6. & 3. 2. ver. 7. or distributively, as if he had said; Let any one of you pass sentence between me and it; as daring, and being content to put his cause to any reasonable mans decision.

of Jerusalem, and of Judah] See ch. 1. 1.

V. 4. what could, &c.] Implying, that nothing as wanting on his part, could be pleaded; in regard whereof he should come short of what he expected.

what could have been done] Heb. what was there to do? What was more to be done? as 2 King.4.13.16. Esth.6.6.

to my vineyard] Or, for my vineyard; as Psal. 72. for Solomon: and for his land, Joel 2. 18.

that I have not done] Heb. and I have not done. The copulative for the relative; as ch.3.6.

in it] Or, for it; or, to it, or, about it; that might any way further the fructifying of it.

wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?] Heb. wherefore did I expect, &c. and it brought forth, &c. Why hath it failed mine expectation? See somewhat the like syntax, Rom. 6. 7. grapes, and, wild grapes. See ver. 2. It did not so much prove barren, and yielded no fruit, which yet were sufficient to justifie mine intended proceedings with it, Mat.24.19, 20. Luk.13.6,7. Joh.15.2. But it brought forth filthy, naughty, noysom fruit, Heb.6.8.

V.5. And now, go to, I will tell you] He proceeds to relate his purpose, having formerly propounded the ground of it, and left the equity of it to be deemed by themselves; so Mat.21.40,41. Mar.12. 9. Luk.20.15,16. And the Prophet here passeth from person to person; speaking now in Gods person, as before in his own. See ch. 1. 9.

what I will do] Heb. what I am doing; That is, am about to do; will do speedily, without further delay; as ch.3.1. and 43.19.

to my vineyard] Or, with it; as Ps.147.20. Jer.2.18.

I will take away the hedge thereof] I will take no more charge of it, nor care for it; but expose it to spoil, and let it run to ruin. I will withdraw my protection and providence from my people, and suffer mine enemies to break in upon their land, Psal. 8. 12, 13. and 106.29.

I will take away] Heb. I will taking away, take away. That is, I will utterly, or certainly, take away; as Gen.2. 17. But in this place a defect of the verb finite: as Eccles.9.11. See ch.59.13.

the hedge] The word properly signifies a fence of thorns, or the like, Prov.15.19. Hos.2.6. Mic.7.4.

and it shall be eaten up] By Beasts breaking in upon it, Psalm 80. 13. That is, wasted and destroyed, by hostile invasion, See ch.1,7. and 3, 13. Heb. it shall be for eating up. Or, that it may be for eating up: Josh.24. 9. Mal. 1. 9. as being good for nothing else, Matthew 5.13.

and I will break down] Heb. breaking I will break down; as before. A defect of the copulative, as ch .3.24.

the wall thereof] Her stone-fence. As it is fully expressed, Pro.24.31. nor seems it otherwise taken, Eccles.10.8,9. Lam.3.9. Hos. 2. 6. So this and the former are commonly distinguished; as also the Jewish Doctors here observe: though some of ours would have them both one. See Psalm 80. 12. & 89.40,41.

and it shall be troden down] Heb. and it shall be for treading down; as ch.28.18. Mic.7,10. Or, that it may be for treading down: as before. That it may be for cattel to tread down, and depasture at pleasure, ch.7.25.

V.6. And I will lay it waste] Heb. wastnesse. That is, utterly, or extreamly waste: as ch.7.19. the valleys of wastnesse. In which two places onely, is the word found. See ch.1.7.

it shall not be pruned] To take off its superfluous branches, that spend its sap, and hinder the fructifying of it, Lev.25.3. Joh.15.2.

nor digged] As Luk.13.8. So the Greek, and old latine here; though otherwise, elsewhere. Or, houghed; as the later Latine versions import, both here, & ch.7.25. Or, dressed; having reference to the ground, as the former to the plants: (for the word signifies properly, to keep in order, 1 Chr.12.33,38.) to rid it of weeds and briars, and to loosen the earth about the roots of the plants. The spade, or hough, being for vineyards, chap.7.25. as the plow for corn-fields, Jer.4.vers.4.

but there shall come up briars, and thornes] It shall be overgrown with such noxious plants, bushes, and shrubs, for want of husbandry, which by those means might have been prevented, Prov.24.3, 30. ch.7.23,24. & 32.13.

briars and thornes] Joyned frequently together, ch.7. 23, 24, 25. & 9.17. & 10.17. & 27.4. Heb. briar, and thorn: as weed, for weeds, Job.31.40. The former word seems to signifie such a kind of thorny plant, as for stiffenesse, and stubbornnesse, or hardness, is compared to an adamant, as most expound it, Zach.7.12. for the sharpnesse of its prickles to the point of an adamant, Jer.17.1. For, the same word is for an adamant, or diamond, (for all is one) supposed to be used in both these places: but thereof see on Jer.17.1. The latter, is usually in the latine, rendred by a word that answers our bush.

I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it] Heb. and I will charge the clouds from raining rain upon it.

and] For also: as Jer.1. 13.

command] Or, charge. For the word is used, as well for prohibition, as for precept. So Deut.2.37 where the same word is found.

that they rain no rain] Heb. from raining rain. As from seeing, Psal. 69. 23. From redeeming, chap. 50. 2. From saving, from hearing, ch. 59.1,2.

rain rain] As fear fear, ch.8.12. sleep sleep, Ps.76.5.

upon it] That being not watered it may wither away with drought, chap.1.30. Amos 4.7. Some interpret all these several branches, in a more mysterious way: understanding by plucking up the hedge, and pulling down the wall: some, the abrogating of the covenant between God and them, Zach. 11. 12, 14. Others, the taking from them his law, that severed them from other people, Ephes. 2. 14. and kept them within compass, Gal. 3. 23. By making them desolate: the depriving them of their civil State, and lawfull polity: by not pruning and digging: the taking away of the priestly ministery, Hos.3.4. Luk. 13.8. By the briars, and thornes, springing up: idolatry and other corruptions springing up among them, 2 Sam. 23.6,7. ch. 27. 4. By forbidding the clouds to rain on them: the bereaving them of their Prophets, Psal.74.9. ch.30.20. But these curiosities, the graver and soberer sort of Interpreters, do not unjustly refuse and reject.

V.7. For the vineyard, &c.] Hitherto was the parable. Now followeth the explication of it, applyed unto God, and his people: shewing how the case stood between God and them: how they had failed in their duty, and what for the same was to befall them.

For] So some, as rendring a reason, why it should not so have been with it, as it was: because it was Gods vineyard, v,1. and the place that he desired to delight in. Psal.132. 14. but that goes too far backward. Others therefore rather render it, Truely, Verily, Surely: as Job 8. 6. & 20.20. & 28. 1. because having made an end of the parable, he proceeds now to expound it. See.ch.7.9.

of the Lord of hosts] See ch.1.9.

is the house of Israel] See ch.1.24. & 2.5.

and the men of Judah] In a more special manner, as ch.1.1. Hos. 4. 15. & 11. 12.

his pleasant plant] Heb. his plant of delights, or, pleasures; that is, in which he took exceeding great delight, Psal. 132. 13, 14. so Jer. 31.20. a child of delight. For, a child, that God hath taken very much delight in: David useth the terms very frequently, thereby to express the great delight he took in Gods Law, and his Word, Psal.94.19. and 119. 16,24,70,77,92,143,174. and Solomon of the delight that God takes in his son, Prov.8,30. as also, of the delight that the Son of God takes in the sons of men, Prov.8.31. that is, as here in his Church, while it continueth faithful unto him.

and he looked for judgment, &c.] See v.3,4. judgment, and justice; the execution of the one, and exercise of the other, were the good grapes, or fruit, that God expected from his people, Mic.7.1.

but behold oppression] To wit, there, where judgment ought to have been, in places of judicature, at the bar, and in the bench of justice, Eccl.3.16. See ch.1.23. & 3.14,15. So Jer.4.23.36.

but] Heb. and. As v.2. so v.6.

behold] Spoken by way of admiration, at so strange a degeneration. See ch.1.21. Jer.2.21.

oppression] as some render it, a consociation, or conspiracy, from a word that signifies to cleave fast together, Job 30.7. 1 Sam.26. 19. ch.14.1. and understand it of the wicked Judges and Officers conspiring and combining together to do injustice, Hos. 6. 8, 9. Mic. 7.3. or, as most, a scab; or, as some, from the former root, a cleaving scab. Such an one, as cleaves, or sticks fast to the body; or causeth the body to stick fast to the rayment. So are two other words of the same stock, with very small alteration, used, Levit.13.2,6,8. & 14. 56. See ch.3.17. The word is by the Prophet here used, to make an elegant consonancy, between it and its opposite; such as is also in the next clause, and is with him very frequent. The meaning is, that the judge whose office was to be as a Physitian, to relieve and heal such as were vexed and wringed by the iniquity of their oppressours, ch. 1. 17. and 3.7. was a worse disease to them that repaired to him for ease and relief; as a grievous scab, or sore, that sticks so fast to him, that a man cannot easily be rid, or recovered of it; so that in them the proverb was verified, a prating Physitian, a second disease to his patient; a bad one, worse then the disease it self. The Judges worse then their oppressors: what they sustained by the one, more grievous then what they suffered by the other. See ch. 3:15. Others fleeced them; They fleyed them: Others bruised their flesh; They brake their bones, Mic.7.2,3. The word doth not signify leprosie simply, as some would have it, no more then the word, plague, or stroke; though joyned also oft with it, Levit.13.3, 9, &c. but any such scab, as was before said; either leprous, or other, Levit. 13 2,6. and 14. 56.

for righteousnesse] Or, justice, joyned commonly with judgment; as if these two were inseparable companions: and without justice, judgment, no judgment, or a scab of judgment rather; as our Prophet here speaks, chap.61. 8. See Gen.18.19. Psal. 33. 5. and 89. 14. & 96.2. Prov. 1.3. & 21. 3. 2 Sam. 8.15. ch.1.21. & 33. 5. and 56.1. Jer.5.1. & 9.23. & 22.15. & 23.5.

but behold a cry] The cry of the oppressed, crying out of their oppressions and wrongs done them; and crying to God, when they can get no relief with man, Exod.22. 22,23, 27. Job 19. 7. Psal. 12.5. Eccles 4.1. Lam. 5. 4. And these were of the bad grapes; fruits not of the spirit, but of the flesh, Gal.5.19,23. complained of before v.2.4.

V.8. Wo unto them, &c.] The parable being before propounded, v. 1, 6. and expounded, v.7. the Prophet now proceeds unto a more particular enumeration of some principal heads of those bad fruits, before touched upon, with denunciation of judgments proportionable in some sort thereunto. See the like, Amos 2. 9,12,15,19.

Wo] An usual term of denunciation, chap.29. 1. & 30. 1. & 31. 1. See chap.1. 4.

wo unto] The particle, unto, though necessarily to be understood, yet is here omitted; and with the interjection here used, very seldome expressed, once onely, that is observed; the inseparable one, Ezek.3.13. and once the separable, Jer. 48. 1. and instead thereof, twice, the particle that signifies upon, Jer.50.27. Ezek. 13. 3. but oft expressed with another denunciative very neer this, ch.3. 9. and elsewhere.

unto them &c.] The first head of the evils, or crimes more especially instanced in, is the grievous oppression of the greater and richer sort, exercised by them upon their poor neighbours, in expelling them out of their houses, that stood neer them, and their lands, that either lay within, or bordered upon their own; thereby either to multiply their own places of abode, or to enlarge their own demains. See 1 King.21. & Mic.2.2.

that joyn house to house] Heb. makers of house to touch by house. Not that they removed houses out of their places, to adjoyn them unto their mansions: but that they added houses to houses: others, to those that they were formerly possessed of, Psal.83.12. That they might have variety of places to repair to, according to the times and seasons of the year, Amos 3.15. Or to make use of otherwise. So Hos.4.2. bloods touch bloods; That is, murther is added to murther; one comes in on the neck of another. House to house; for, one house to another; and field to field: That is, one field to another. As, man of man; for one man of another, ch.3.5.

that lay field to field] Heb. field to field they will make to approach. A double defect, both of the copulative, and; as Exod. 15. 9. ch. 3. 24. and of the relative; as 2 Chr.28.9. chap. 42.5. to those that, &c.

will make to approach] So have done, do, and will do. See such use of the future, ch.3. 16. Job.11:44.

field to field] By taking in those that lay between some of their own, on either side, and so making them to meet; or by encroaching upon, and taking in those that on any side joyned to them, Amos 1.13. compared with Jer. 49. 1. Job 24. 2. forbidden, Prov. 22. 28. & 23.10.

till there be no place] No room for any to dwell by them, when they have engrossed all to themselves.

that they may be placed] Heb. and ye may be made, or, make your selves to dwell. The copulative for the finitive; as chap. 2. 3. The passive for the reciprocal; as ch.1.16. And the person changed; as ch.1.29.

alone] As if the whole land were given them to inhabit, Ezek.11.15.

in the midst of the land] Or, in the land; as v.25. ch.7.22.

V.9. In mine, &c.] The judgment followeth, proportionable to the offence. And that, for fuller assurance, confirmed with an oath; as 1 Sam. 3. 17. ch.22. 15. Psal.110.4.

In mine eares, said the Lord of Hosts,] That is, in my hearing: as Luk. 4.21. I heard when God spake it, Psal.62.11. Or, God by secret inspiration revealed it to me, ch.22. 14. He told me it in mine ear; as 1 Sam. 15.16. So some. But because the affix, or pronoun is wanting, (which is not altogether unusual, Psal.91. 4. ch. 1. 3, 15. & 3. 12.) nor is the verb in the text. For the hebrew hath no more then, in the ears the Lord, or, of the Lord, &c. (and yet is that verb also sometime wanting; as 1 King. 20. 34. ch.46. 4.) Others therefore, and those not a few, thus render it; In the ears of the Lord of Hosts. That is, This your cruel, and injurious carriage is gone up into Gods ears: as Gen. 18.20. 2 Chr.28. 9. Ezr.9.6. Jon.1.2. He sees it, and takes notice of it, though ye think he doth neither behold nor regard it, Psal.10. 11, 13, 14. and 94.4.

the Lord of Hosts] Who is able to right those whom ye wrong: and to avenge them on you, Psal.146. 7. Prov.10. 11. & 24. 15, 16. See.ch.1.9,24.

of a truth many houses shall be desolate] Heb. if many houses be not desolate. A defective, but emphaticall form of swearing. See Psal.95. 11. As if he had said Let me not live; or let me not be God; or let me not be deemed a God of truth, a God of my word; let me never be believed; if such a thing be, which he means shall never be. So c.22.14. & 62.8. Or if such a thing be not, which he is fully resolved shall be: as in this place. See the like forms with man, Gen. 14.23. Ps.132. 3. wherein, out of a cautious shunning dismall expressions, they used in swearing to omit the tearms of execration, which yet in the form of the oath was implyed, and was to be supplyed to make the sentence entire: yea, sometime was, but in a more sparing and indefinite way, for the most part, expressed. See Ruth 1. 17. 1 Sam. 3. 17. 1 King. 19.2.

of a truth, &c.] Saith he, is to be supplied. As the like is very usual, in the relation of the speeches, either of God, or others, See 1 King. 1. 27. &, 20. 37. Psal. 105. 15. with 11. & 132, 14 chap. 47. 4.

many houses] The multitude, and variety of your houses, so gotten, shall do you no good; you shall have no benefit by them, little joy of them. See Amos 3. 15. & 6. 11.

desolate] Heb. for, or, unto desolation. Designed for it, and brought to it, as Jer. 2. 11. See ch. 1. 7. Your houses shall stand empty, the inhabitants being either driven out of them, Mic. 2. 10. or destroyed, and deceased in them. Amos 6. 9. 10.

even great and fair, without inhabitant s] Even, wanting, as ch. 51. 12. Heb. great, and good; as we use to say goodly. So Deut. 8. 12. Neither the largness, nor the fairness of your houses, shall procure you security, or afford you safety, Amos 3. 15.

without inhabitant] Heb. from no inhabitant being. That is, for want of inhabitants, or because there is no inhabitant in them. So Jer. 4. 7. See the like, ch. 50. 3.

V. 10. Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath] As their houses shall stand empty, so their land shall lye waste and barren; as well those, that thus they came by, as those which they were formerly possessed of. The one part so gotten, shall bring a curse upon the whole. See ch. 7. 23. Hag. 1. 6.

ten acres] The word signifies a yoke, a pair, or couple of Oxen, Job. 1. 3. Affes, Judg. 19. 10. Mules, 2 King. 5. 17. Or other beasts, whether yoked, or unyoked, yea, sometime not of horse only, but of both, Deut. 22. chap. 22. 7, 9. In the second place, it is used for such a parcel of ground, as a pair, or yoke of oxen could ordinarily plough in a day, 1 Sam. 14. 14. which among the Romans, was esteemed to be of two hundred and forty foot in length, and one hundred and twenty in breadth.

shall yield] Heb. make. As ver. 2. Hos. 2. 16. 8. 10. 1. to make wine, for to yield wine, as 10 make milk for to yield milk, ch. 7. 22.

one bath] That is, but one bath, not of grapes, but of wine, made of the grapes, that it shall bear. For the bath was a measure for liquid things, yet not the least in use for them, as some say, him, was far less, Levit. 13. 13. Ezek. 4. 11. (and the log less then that. Levit. 14. 10, 12, &c.) and it contained about eight of our gallons, the tenth part of an homer, Ezek. 45. 11. So that an whole acre of ground, planted with vines, should not yield so much, as one whole gallon of wine.

and the seed of an homer] For, an homer of seed. So also, Levit. 27. 16. The homer was a measure, as well for grain, as for liquor, containing ten either baths, or ephah. Ezek. 45. 11. And it had its name, either from the heap that so much corn as that measure contained, laid together, would make; or because it held as much as an ass might well bear.

an ephah] That is, but an ephah, no more then one ephah, as one bath before. Which ephah, was a measure for dry things, as the bath for liquid, and of the same quantity with it, the tenth part of an homer, Ezek. 45. 11. much about our bushel; so that their corn grounds should not yield them above the tenth part of their seed, they shall carry out much, and bring in but little, Hag. 1. 6.

V. 11. Woe unto them that arise early in the morning] The second crime charged on them, their excess and riot: sensuality joyned with security, ver. 12.

that rise early] Heb. the early risers. As making a daily exercise of it. So Psal. 127. 2.

rise early] That rise early to their drink, as worldly men to their work, Psal. 127. 2. as being never well, till they be at the wine, the one, at their work, the other. (So Zeph. 3. 7. They arise early to corrupt their actions.) And in swilling, and drinking, spending away, and lavishing out the time assigned and allotted to labour, and to more serious and necessary employments, according to the condition of mens several places, Psal. 104. 22. Eccl. 8. 16, 17.

that they may] A defect of the particle finitive, as Zeph. 3. 7. See ch. 7. 15.

follow strong drink] As Psal. 119. 150. that follow mischief. Pursue it as eagerly as one doth his fleeing foe, or his trade. See ch. 1, 23. so to seek after it, Prov. 23. 30, 35.

strong drink] Not wine, but other such drinks, made of honey, dates, rice, malt, or other grain, that for strength, oft-times, come not short of wine, and (when of also they have their name) do make drunk, as well as it, Num. 6. 3. Judg. 13. 4, 14. chap. 29. 9. And though ordinarily distinguished from wine, v. 22. yet used here to comprehend both, and to ch. 56. 12.

that continue until night] Heb. continuers, or, drawers out of, to wit, their drinkings. For there is a two-fold defect, both of the copulative, as v. 8. and of the noun, after the participle: in the like case expressed, Psal. 127. 2. or simply, staying at it, sitting by it, to wit, at, or over the wine, Prov. 23. v. 30.

unto night] Heb. in, for unto: as Gen. 11. 4. Exr. 9. 7. twilight, which may be understood either of the even twilight, as Job 24. 15. Prov. 7. 9. they stay by it, from morning to night, all the live-long day, as we used to speak; or of the morning twilight, as the Word is used, Job. 7. 4. 1 Sam. 30. 17. from morning to morning, spend night and day, in drinking and revelling: as they are never well, till they be at it it; so they can never give over, when they are once set to it, Deut. 32. 19. Prov. 23. 35. chap. 56. 12.

till wine inflame them] A defect of the particle; whether we are to understand it, till, as some, or, that, as others: the one implying the issue, or effect, the other, the purposed end.

wine] Whence it appears, that the word used in the former branch, doth there comprehend both: as doth also here the word, wine.

inflame them] So is the word used, Ezek. 24. 10. Obad. 1. 18. and that is indeed the ordinary effect of wine and strong drink, immoderately taken, to inflame the body, Jer. 51. 39. to bring feavers and calentures, such as have thereof their name, Deut. 28. 22. yea, to inflame it with filthy lust, Gen. 19. 32, 36. Hos. 4. 11. Yet because the word sometime also signifieth, eagerly, or ardently to pursue. Psal. 7. 13. & 10. 2. Lam. 4. 19. Some therefore render it, till the wine pursue them: as they pursue it, so it pursues them in that manner, that it doth furprise them, and master them, and take wits, Reason, and understanding, from them, Hos. 4. 12. Prov. 20. 1. but the former seems the sounder.

V. 12. And the harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts.] They abound excessively in all manner of delights; abandoning themselves wholly thereunto: not that these things here mentioned, are of themselves evil; but as in their women, attire, and ornaments, ch. 3. 18, 24. So here the excess in them, and abuse of them, is that which is condemned. So Amos 6. 4, 6.

Harp] The name of a musical instrument. Whence one, in the Greek, hath its name, said to be strung with wires, and to yield somewhat a mournful, or querelous sound. See ch. 23. 16. But whether of the same form with our harp, is uncertain.

viol] Another musical instrument, chap. 14. 11. so called, because it was bellied out after the manner of a bottle, so also called, ch. 30. 14. Jer. 13. 12. See ch. 22. 24. Which not unfitly answers our, either lute, or viol. The instrument, in greek, having its denomination from this is acknowledged by some of them, to have its original from the Phenicians; under which name; they sometime include the Syrians also, and the Jews, from from the Cappadocians, as some of them. And it was among them, accounted to make a sweeter melody then the harp. No musical instrument is, in Scripture, more frequently mentioned, then these two; and they are oft joyned together, 1 Chro. 15. 28. 2 Chro. 20. 28. & 29. 4. Psalm 81. 2. & 150. 3.

the tabret] The word coming from one that signifies to beat, includes both drums, such as they used to beat at the slaughter ing of their children, in sacrifice to Moloch, whereof the place of those horrid rites had its name, ch. 30. 33. Jer. 31. 32. and tabrets, such as they used commonly in their feasts, and merry meetings, ch. 24. 8. Jer. 31. 4.

and pipe] Or, flute; A wind-instrument, (as an hand-instrument the former), so called, because hollow, or pierced through. See chap. 2. 19. and 30. 20. tabret and pipe, are both joyned together, as here, so elsewhere, Exod. 15. 20. Judg. 11. 34. And were used commonly, as among us in dancing, from whence the frequent use of the pipe therein, gave the name, in Hebrew, to the daunce, Psal. 149. 3. Jer. 31. 15. Luke 21. 21.

wine] Without which no feast, no banquet: called therefore the feast, or the banquet of wine, Esth. 7. 7. wine put here for all delicious drinks, See ver. 11. ch. 22. 3. as there, for all delicious fare, whereof wine is esteemed a principal, Esth. 1. 7, 8.

are in their feasts] A defect of the prepositions, as Numb. 12. 8. Job 1. 18. Yet some read it, Are their feasts. That is, their feasts consist wholly of these. There is nothing else to be seen, or heard in them, nothing pious, or serious: but all cares, and loosnes. Contrary to that of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 10. 31. A pious fence; but I conceive; not here so fit a sense, as the former is.

feasts] Or, drinkings; for that cause so rearmed. So the word properly signifies. Hence the phrase, as of ordinary meals, to eat with one, Gen. 31. 54. Psal. 41. 9. Luk. 14. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 11. So of feasting, to drink with him, Esth. 3. 15. and 7. 1.

but] Heb. and, as ver. 5, 4. As their riotous excess, and sensuality was before taxed; so now their security, and contempt of God, that then they gave themselves wholly unto this dissolute and voluptuous course of life, without any regard of Gods judgments, at that time, either present on others, or hanging over their own heads; as being not denounced only against, but in part also inflicted on the State wherein they lived. So ch. 22. 12, 13. Amos 6, 4, 6. Matt. 24. 38, 39.

they regard not] Heb. they will not behold. So Psal. 28. 5. Where the same sentence is, To behold, for to regard; take special notice of, ch. 22. 11. Zach. 12. 10. Of the form of speech, see ver. 8.

the work of the Lord] His judgments, either incumbent or, impendent, Psal. 64. 10. Hab. 1. 5.

neither consider the operation of his hands] Heb. and the doing of his hands; or, his hands-doing, they see not; or, they have not seen. They either consider not, or take notice of the things themselves, ch. 42. 25. Hos. 7. 9. or, at least, take no notice of an hand of God in them, ch. 26. 11. For it is too nice, that some of the Jewish Doctors have, who, by the work of God, understand the Law of God, by the work of his hands, the writing of it in the tables of stone, Exod. 32. 13, 14. As if they were taxed for not regarding, and looking after Gods law, Job. 21. 14. And that likewise seemeth to be out of the way, which some of them have, with whom some of ours concurr, who understand by Gods works of creation, the celestial bodies that set forth thereby Gods glory, Psal. 8. 3. & 19. 1. As if they were reproved, for not glorifying themselves to the contemplation thereof. As also, that others of ours expound it, of their not taking notice of, as of having no heart to the works of judgment, long before executed on the old world in Noahs time; and on Sodom, and Gomorrha in Lots dayes, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 6. & 3. 5, 6. Jud. v. 7. But the Prophet seems rather to point at some judgments then present.

V. 13. Therefore my people are gone into captivity] The punishment inflicted, or doom past upon them for this their sin, as sure to take effect, as if it were executed already. See the like judgment denounced upon the like grounds, Amos 6. 7.

my people] See ch. 1. 3. & 2. 6.

are gone into captivity] Or, are going. Are as sure to go, as if they are gone into captivity. So Jer. 9. 1. Joh. 3. 18.

because they have no knowledge] Heb. for no knowledge. Or, becauseof no knowledge. Because they are such brutish, senseless, and sensual people, Psal. 92. 6. & 94. 8. ch. 27. 11. Or, for want of consideration, because they do not regard, and take notice of the hazardous estate they are in, and Gods judgments suddenly like to seize on them, and having seized on the State in part already, ver. 12. Jer. 8. 7. Mat. 24. 39. Luk. 17. 44.

and their honourable men are famished] Heb. and his honour, or glory, (are, or shall be) men of hunger, or famine. His, to answer the ty, (are, or shall be) men of hunger, or famine. His, to answer the ty, (are, or shall be) word people. Which is, though a collective, (and the pronoun may well therefore be rendered their), yet a singular term. Honour, or glory, for men of honour, or glory; men honourable, or glorious: that are in great esteem, and make a great shew in the world. So pride, for a man of pride: a proud man, Psal 36. 12. Jer. 50. 31. mighty: for men of might, mighty ones, ch. 3. 25. Peace: for a man of peace, a peaceable man. Phal. 120. 7. See ch. 1. 21.

famished] men of famine: or famished men: as men of vanity, for vain men, Job 11. 11. Psal. 26. 4. Men of wickedness, for wicked men, Job. 22. 15. Men of fewnesse: for, a few men, Deut. 25. 5. & 28. 62. Of the word men, see ch. 2. 9. the first tearm of the phrase, see more. Of the word men, see ch. 2. 9. the first tearm of the phrase, see more, Jer. 44. 28. The meaning is: the great men, that now live in such pomp and State, and revell it in that manner, shall be starved for want, even of necessary food.

and their multitude dryed up with thirst] Their; Heb. his multitude: as before. That is, the meaner sort of them, opposed to rude: as before. That is, the meaner sort of them, opposed to their glory, or glorious ones: As Adam to ish, verf. 19. dryed up with thirst. For thirst, arising from want of drink, caused drought, ch. 41. 19. Lam. 4. 4. And the want of drink is more unsufferable, and prejudicial to mans life, then the want of bread. The meaner sort of them shall suffer want, not of bread onely, but of water too, which being the usual drink, in those parts, was more obvious then bread: and more necessary, in some sort, to the preservation of mans life, then it. Those, both great and small, high and low; that have so much abused those good creatures of God, when they had them in abundance, shall now suffer want in either kind of them, and for want of them shall perish. See chap. 3. 1. & 65. 13. Jer. 2. 5. Hos. 2. 3. Amos 8. 13. For it is not to be conceived, as if the Prophets meaning were, that the one of them only should suffer hunger, and the other only perish; and the other only thirst: but, that both of them thereby perish; and the other only thirst: but, that both of them should sustain a grievous want of either; set forth in a rhetorical manner, as in way of distribution; for the fuller amplification and aggravation of the evil: such as with this Prophet is very frequent. So ver. 15, 16. chap. 28. 17. and so, Psalm 106. 17. Where it is said, that the earth opened, and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram. Not, but that it swallowed up the company of Dathan, as well as of Abiram; or, but that it covered as ny of Dathan, as well as of Abiram; or, but that it covered as well the one as the other. See also Dan. 12. 3 Howbeit a learned late Annotator, because the word in this latter branch is found late Annotator, because the word in this latter branch is found wealth, Psalm 37. used sometime for abundance, and is applyed unto wealth, Psalm 37. 16. Eccl. 5. 10. would have it also so taken here, and v. 14. and ch. 16. Eccl. 5. 10. would have it also so taken here, and v. 14. and ch. 15. 15. abundance; for men abounding in wealth: and so it will be the same in effect with the former.

V. 14. Therefore hell hath enlarged her self] Hell. Heb. Sheol; a term used commonly for the grave, as Numb. 16. 30. Psal. 30. 3. & 55. 15. & 86. 13. Herein differing from that other, Qeber, which also signifies grave, or sepulchre, Psal. 5. 10. & 88. 11. ch. 22. 16. that the former is of larger extent, then the latter: the latter signifying an artificial grave, or sepulchre onely made by mans hand, whether by digging up the ground, or hewing into a rock, Matth. 27. 60. or the like. Whereas the other comprehended as well the natural, as the artificial Sepulcre; as well that by-nature provided, as by mens means found out. whatsoever place of receptacle a mans body after the souls departure, is by dissolution, or for dissolution, bestowed in. Thus Jacob saith, he would go to his son Joseph, to Sheol, whom yet he supposed not to be interred or laid in the ground: but devoured, and so buried, as we may so say, in the bowels of some wild beasts, Gen. 37. 35. So Jonas calleth the belly of the fish, that had taken him in, and swallowed him down, the belly of Sheol, Jon 2. 1, 2. because it was like the grave to him, and was like to be the place of his dissolution. So when Hezekiah saith, Sheol cannot praise thee, ch. 38. 18. He means any dead, without distinction, whose bodies are now disposed in their places of dissolution, of what kind or sort soever. That which Job calleth, the general meeting house appointed for all that live, Job. 30. 23. and of which Solomon saith that all go to one place, Eccles. 3. 20. which, of the grave of mans handy-work cannot be said, Jer. 22. 19.

her self] Heb. its soul: soul for self, as ch. 3. verf. 9. Jer. chap. ter 51. 14.

and opened her mouth without measure] A very rhetorical and emphatical expression, insinuating the numberless multitude of those that by hunger and thirst, and other like judgments were swept away, as if there were scarce room enough any where, either under-ground, or above-ground, to receive them. See Jer. 7. 32, 33.

opened] Or, widened. Men are said to open their mouths to speak, Psal. 78. 2. Matth. 5. 2. to widen their mouthes, when they gape, murder then ordinary, to draw in breath, as Psal. 119. 131. or to receive, and take somewhat into the mouth, that they greedily desire. So Job saith, that men waited for him, (that is, for his words, that dropped upon them) as for rain, and opened their mouthes wide, (there, to the word here used) as for the latter rain: that is, as the earth useth to gape for rain in the time of Summers drought: as also men are said sometime so to do in way of mockage, Job 16. 10. where the word is transflated gape: as another neer to it of the like sense and use, is rendred, make a wide mouth, chap. 57. verf. 4. The word would therefore be here tran flated, hath widened, or, doth widen, as before; gapes wide, as one that is to take in some more then ordinary great morsel, or much at once.

her mouth] Or, with her mouth, as Job. 16. 10. (the particle wanting as Psal. 17. 14. with ver. 7.) as being no less desirous to take them in, and swallow them down: as it is described Dathan and Abiram with all theirs, Numb. 16. 32, 33. Psal. 106. 17. (whereunto David alludes, Psal. 55. 15. & 69. 15.) then they were greedy to seize on the possessions of others, Mic. 2. 2. A mouth is ascribed to the grave, as to the earth, Gen. 4. 11. Num. 17. 32. and the threat of wicked ones, whose mouthes are implyed in traducing of innocent persons, is said to be as an open Sepulcre, Psal. 5. 9. as being ready to swallow men down quick, like the grave, or the pit, Prov. 1. 12.

without measure] Heb. unto no measure; or, appointment; or, proportion; or, ordinance: as the word ordinarily signifies, Gen. 47. 22, Exod. 15. 25. Josh. 24. 9. beyond all ordinary proportion, or wont, the grave is as unmeasurable, and unsatiable, in surprizing and devouring of them, as they were, in seizing on the possessions of their poor neighbours, and taking them to themselves, verse 18. chapter 3. 14.

and their glory, &c.] Or, that their glory, &c. may descend, &c. as noting the end for which the grave gaped so wide; because it had in it that which would be to the rest of the people, as the plague was to them down suddenly, without stop, or stay, at once. See that use of the particle, ch. 5. 5.

their glory] Heb. her excellency; or, the excellency of her: as the word is rendred, ch. 35. 2. where it is also distinguished from glory. See also ch. 3. 10. & 13. 2. excellency, as most take it (though some, simply, for excellency it self, as Ezek. 16. 4.) for, men of excellency: as glory before, for men of glory, v. 13. those that were of most State, and esteem, among them.

of her, That is, of the City of Jerusalem, as some: or the State of Judah, as others: for the affix is not masculine here, as before, v. 13. but feminine: and hath therefore nothing else in the text, whereunto it may be referred. See v. 3, 7.

and their multitude] Heb. her multitude: as her excellency. Her, as in the former branch: and multitude, as in the verse next before going: the many, or, as we use to speak, the mount, those of the meaner sort, which are the greater number by much, every where. And so most here take it. Howbeit a late author, as v. 13. so here, rendreth it rather abundance. Which to teeth not amiss here, with what followeth. See ch. 16. 14.

and their pomp] Or, noise, or, tumult: as it is rendred, ch. 37. 29. their tumultuous noise, or, howling: as ch. 16. 10. for to the word properly signifies, ch. 13. 4. Jer. 6. 66. 6. such as is usual in warlike conflicts, ch. 22. 15. Hos. 10. 14. Amos 2. 2. as the like also in disorderly feasting, and revellings, especially where wine hath got the upper hand, ch. 24. 8. Jer. 48. 45. & 51. 38, 39.

and] Some, with: as Exod. 15. and Joseph, for, with Joseph: and Neh. 10. 42. and Jeremiah, for with Jeremiah: as it is there well rendred: their tumultuous thoughts shall cease, or dye, and be buried with them, ch. 24. 8. & 25. 5.

their] Heb. her. As before.

pomp] Or, noyse, or, tumult, or, flout: as some, for, those that make such noyse, tumult, or flout: called the sons, or children of flouting, Jer. 48. 45. as glory before, v. 13. and excellency in this.

and he that rejoyceth] Or, and him. To wit, and, with him, as before.

and he that rejoyceth] Or, and him. To wit, and, with him, as before.

that rejoyceth, Or, revelleth rather: as the City of Jerusalem is called a revelling city, ch. 22. 2. the houses thereof, houses of disport, or, merriment, ch. 32. 13. The word properly signifies to skip, or leap for joy. The word used of John Baptist, answering to it, where it is said, that he leaped (or sprang rather) for joy, being as yet in his mothers womb, Luk. 1. 44. and it is taken in a middle sence, sometime for such expression of joy, either honest, and lawfull, on good and just ground: or a degree of joy more then ordinary, albeit no such expression be therein used, as chap. 12. 5. Psal. 28. 7. & 60. 6. & 68. 3. Hab 3. 18. Otherwhiles, for loose and and disorderly skipping and frisking, out of lightnes& wantonnes& and other the like motions and gestures,expreſſions of immoderate and inordinate delight,Jer.51.39.and so here; he,or him,that rejoyceth and revelleth,taken collectively, for the whole crew of them.See chap.1.3.ver.15.

ſhall deſcend]Or,may deſcend;taking the copulative for the finitive; and,for,that:as was before ſaid,that there may deſcend,to wit,into the grave,the glory,or excellency,&c.for ſo the words lye, that may all,and all ſorts of them,go down into the grave. So Job. 21. 12. 13.

into it] To wit,the grave before ſpoken of,according to our verſion;and ſo is the particle uſed,Ezra 9 7. chap. 10, 21.but the tranſlation is too great to admit here that ſenſe. For the word of deſcending,ſtandeth here in the front of the ſentence, and not in the cloſe of it, as our verſion placeth it. And it ought therefore to be rendred,he, or him that revelleth in her, or the reveller in her; as before,her excellency her multitude,her ſhouting. Of which,ſee before.

V.15. And the mean man ſhall be brought down,and the mighty man ſhall be humbled] Men of all ſorts(as before, ver. 14. ſave that the greater, and of higher degree and ſtate, are ſtill ſpoken of there; the meaner condition is firſt mentioned here) ſhall alike be laid low,being brought down to the grave,that makes no diſtinction of ſtates,Job.3.13,19.See chap.2 9.where the words being the ſame, this is at larg opened.

and the eyes of the haughty ſhall be humbled]See chap.2.11.

ſhall be humbled] Their countenance, or big look. ſhall then be caſt down;Gen.4. 6 Lam.2.10.

V.16 But] Heb. And.Which may well ſtand here.

the Lord of Hoſts]See chap.1.9.

ſhall be exalted in judgment]He ſhall,by his juſt judgment executed on thoſe wicked wretches, who ſet ſo light by him before, manifeſt and magnifie, as well his power,as his purity, Pſal.9.6. See ch.2.11, and God that is holy] Heb. the God: the holy One. The moſt holy God;ſo holy,as none holy as he,1 Sam.2.2.as none good in regard of him,Matt.19.17.none wiſe,in way of collation with him, 1 Cor.3. 19.1 Tim.1.17.So none holy,in ſuch manner as he is.They that are holy,and wiſe,and good,in ſome kind, by participation from him, are neither holy,nor wiſe,nor good,when they come into compariſon with him,Job 4,17,18.& 9.2.& 15.15.&25.5,6. See ch.1.4, & 6.3.

ſhall be ſanctified] His holineſs, and hatred of ſin ſhall appear, and he religeouſly acknowledged, by his puniſhing of it in obſtinate ſinners,Levit.10.2,3.Ezek.20.41.& 28.22,26.the ſparing and forbearing of whome,for a time,cauſeth wicked wretches oft times, to call in queſtion his holineſs,Pſal.50.21.Mal.2.17.

in righteouſneſs, by his righteouſneſs ſhewed in thoſe his judgments.For it is not to be underſtood, as if he were to be exalted by judgment,and not by righteouſneſs, or ſanctified by righteouſneſs,and not by judgment.But it is a rhetoricall illuſtration, amplifying and dilating both the act and the effect : and deſcribing the act by two ſeveral arguments:the ſubject, judgment ;the adjunct, juſtice: the effect or event by two branches of it,the manifeſting and magnifying,partly of Gods greatneſſe, and partly of his goodneſſe ; the one applyed to the ſubject, the other to the adjunct; though both common to either.So alſo ver.15. See of judgment and juſtice, chap. 1. 27,& ver.7.Of the manner of ſpeech,ver.13.

V.17. Then ſhall the lambs feed after their manner]Heb.And. for, Then, as Gen. 28. 21.or 22 rather,(for the condition of the vow there is in the 21.verſe,the matter of it in the 22.) Levit. 4. 3.& 6.4.

Then] When by the judgments before threatned, being put in execution,the unjuſt poſſeſſors of thoſe houſes and lands before ſpoken of,being either ſlain,or expelled;they ſhall either lye waſte, or return again to the houſe to whome they formerly belonged.

the lambs ſhall feed after their manner] Some expound it literally, and ſimply,without any figure, or allegory; of cattel, grazing freely without reſtraint,in thoſe places, whence before,by incloſures,they had been excluded, after the paſture came into thoſe great mens hands:yea, upon thoſe places, now lying waſte, where their either dwellings,or farm-houſes,had before ſtood, as chap. 7.25. & 17. 2. But it ſeems rather. as the moſt and beſt, to be underſtood of the godly poor;who either being left in the land, during the time of the captivity,ſhould enjoy thoſe places, and receive the fruits thereof, which by the deſtruction, or deportation of their Oppreſſors, were now vacant,Jer.31.13.Zeph,3.12.(ſee chap. 7. 21.22.or returning out of captivity,ſhould quietly enjoy their lands and means again, whence by cruel and injurious courſes of the mightier ſort they had formerly been expelled,Ezek.34.14,15.

the lambs]Gods people are in Scripture termed his ſheep;in regard of the care that he hath of them,as their ſhepheard,Pſal.77. 20, & 80.1. Ezek.34.15.Joh,10.10,16,27.28.& 21.16,17.and his paſture ſheep,in regard of the plentiful proviſion he maks for them,Pſal.23. 1, 2, & 100. 3.Ezek.34.31.and his lambs,in regard of his tender affection towards them,ch.40.11,Joh.21.15.

after their manner]The word here uſed,is but twice found in Scripture;here,and Mic.5.12.For the one of theſe Prophets hath much from the other, (ſee chap.2 .2.)Now in Micah it is apparent, that it ſignifies a fold, whereinto ſheep are gathered,for their better ſecurity,therein to be folded; alluded unto by our Saviour. Joh. 10 16.and ſo ſome take it in this place,thus rendering the words they ſhall feed beſides their wonted fold,or, folds.But the particle is ſeldome , if ever, found uſed, for beſide. Others therefore, and ſo the moſt,take it according to another word that comes very neer it,uſed Pſal.110.4.compared with Heb.6.20.& 7.17.Eccl.3.18.for order,or, manner ; they ſhall feed freely and quietly, as they had wont to do before their diſturbance and expulſion,Jer.23.3,4.&30.10.&46.27. Ezek.34.25,28.See chap.7.25. Others according to their conduct, or leading: as their ſhepheard ſhall lead them, after the manner of thoſe parts,ch. 40.11. becauſe,the verb it commeth from,is in the Chaldee ſo commonly uſed.

and the waſte places of the fat ones, ſhall the ſtrangers eat[This ſome underſtand of ſtrangers, by Gods juſt judgment,devouring what was found left in the places where they had expelled thoſe great onesbefore mentioned:and ſo it ſhould be the ſame with that, chap.1.6.ſtrangers devour your land, &c. Others, of the expulſion of thoſe great ones out of thoſe places, whence they had expelled the right owners before,and driving them out into the waſt wildernes, to ſeek relief and harbour there:and theſe render the words,and the fat ones,as ſtrangers(to wit,from God) ſhall feed on the waſts of the land:and ſo it ſhould be as that,Pſal. 68.6.the rebellious ſhall dwell in a dry land. But this ſeems to offer over-much violence to the text. Others therefore underſtand it of the poor oppreſſed, as before, returning again to thoſe places, to which they had been for a long time as ſtrangers,after their freedome from captivity, Jer. 12. 14, 15.

of the fat ones]The word whereof this comes,ſignifies marrow. Job 21.24Hence this word word is uſed for fat beaſts, or fatlings,Pſal. 66.15.and another not unlike it,for the ſame,ch.25.6. becauſe the bones of fat ones,men,or beaſts,are uſually full of marrow Job 21.24. Some therefore underſtand here,the paſtures,the now waſtes,where fat beaſts,that they fed on,and feaſted with, (ch.21.13.)did formerly feed.Others,where thoſe fat ones,that is,rich ones, did themſelves formerly abide. Fat. for, rich,or, great, for their ſtore of wealth, or high feeding,or both;(as Luk.16,19.ſo ſtyled,as Pſal.22.29.& 78.31. ch.34. 67.

V. 18. Wo unto them that draw iniquity,with cords of vanity and ſin as it were,with a cartrope[the third ſore of abominable fruits that Gods vineyard produced, is the obſtinacy and eagernes of wicked ones in the purſuit of ſin and wickedneſs, together with a profeſſed contempt of God and his judgments,v.19.

that draw iniquity] Some underſtand this, of drawing others to ſin;of them,that are not content to ſin and do evill themſelves ; but intice,perſwade,urge, and force others thereunto:the Devils trade, Gen.3.2.4 called therefore the Tempter, Matth. 4. 1, 3.1Joh.3.2. 1Cor.7.5.1 Theſſ.3.5.Rev.12.9.& 13.14.& 20. 8, 10. Of ſuch,ſee Gen.39.7,10,12. 2 Sam.13.3,11,14.& 16.21.Hab.2.15, Matth.29. 15.and they ſuppoſe, that the metaphor uſed. doth very pregnantly expreſs it, wherein the perſons themſelves are compared to beaſts, that draw in a cart, or a wain; the vain, and falſe perſwaſions, and arguments, wherewith they draw them on unto evil, to traces, or cart-ropes : and the parties ſo drawn on by them, to wains, or carts; drawn by beaſts,Underſtanding by iniquity and ſin, as the word iniquity after an Hebraiſme not unuſual,men of iniquity,and men of ſin, as the word iniquity ſeems taken. Pſal 49.5. & 65.3. & 119.133. Of which phraſe,ſee alſo ver.13,14. But the place ſeems rather to moſt others,to be meant of ſuch,as being deſperately bent,and abandoned to ſin,do not lengthen only,and draw out their ſinful courſe and tenour of life,as a man draweth out a line, or a cord, either in the unfolding,or in the ſpinning and framing of it,(for the word ſometime ſignifies to continue,or,protract, Pſal 36.11.)but by all means, that they can deviſe,draw ſin unto themſelves, where there is hardly any matter of profit,pleaſure,gain delight,perſwaſion by others,enforcement from others; or other like temptations that are wont to lead aſide,and carry men on to evil.So that,whereas others are drawn by ſuch motives unto ſin,they draw ſin unto themſelves; whereas,ſin is by ſuch inducements preſſed and enforced upon others, they preſs and enforce it upon themſelves : they draw ſin to them, as a beaſt draws a cart,or wain,after it.Deut.21.3.Mowbeit,ſom by ſin,and iniquity, here conceive to be meant, the penalties or puniſhments due unto either. And ſo indeed the words are not feldom uſed, Gen.4.13,Levit.20.17.Num.9.13.according to which interpretation,the meaning ſhould be ; ſuch as labour to draw on Gods judgments upon themſelves by their continuance in impenitency,and adding ſin to ſin,and thereby provoking God,to come the more ſpedily in judgment againſt them,Rom. 2.4,5. and this indeed would well ſuit with what follows,v.19. But I ſuppoſ rather the genuine meaning to be;ſuch as by all means, and with all their might, apply themſelves to the practice of evil,toiling and tiring themſelves in it, as a beaſt tugging at the plow,or drawing in the cart,as Jer.9.5.See Job 4.8.Prov,3.29.& 21.4.where the The met: phor is uſed.

that draw iniquity]Heb.the drawers of iniquity;as the early riſers, v. 11.See there., with cords of vanity]By cords of vanity,Some underſtand here ſuch vain excuſes,and pretences, as wicked ones uſe ordinarily to cover, or or colour,to ſmooth,or ſmother their vile practices with, 1Sa.15.13, 15,20.21.But that is not manner of ſuch deſperately profeſſed profligate ones,as here ſpoken of:but with open face,and bare forehead rather, to avow, blaze abroad, and boaſt of their evil doings,Pſal. 52.1.chap.3. 9.By cords of vanity, therefore, I rather underſtand thoſe ſeeches and devices, toilſome courſes and employments, wherein men bent to wickedneſs, and ſet wholly thereupon,do labour and toile and take pains inceſſantly, for the compaſſing of their intended evil, practices, and the bringing about of their wicked deſigns,Pſal.36.4. Mic.2.1.

with cart-ropes]Heb.the thick rope of a wain,or cart.For the word properly ſignifieth a thick cord, or rope;ſuch as thoſe are uſually, wherewith carts or wains are drawn, and whereof traces are made for the beaſts, that draw in them : and hereby is intimated the ſtrength of thoſe plots, that they make uſe of, for the accompliſhment of their wicked purpoſes, that they may not fail, and miſcarry before they come to full effect, Pſal.64.5,6.

V.19.That ſay, Let him make ſpeed,&c.] That ſcoff at Gods menaces, and jeſt at his judgments ; neither crediting the one, nor expecting the other:yea not onely,not conſidering them, or thinking at all on them:as thoſe before wholly drowned in ſenſuality, and carnal delights,v.12.but in moſt impious manner jeering at them, and the Prophets that denounced them,as if their words were but wind,and the matter it ſelf a meer mock ery; ſuch, as it were a moſt fond thing for any man to fear, Jer.5.12,13.

Let him make ſpeed,and haſten his work,that we may ſee it,]Or rather, Let him make ſpeed; let him haſten his work,or,make haſt with his work.For the copulative is not in the text,&the inſerting of it maks the ſpeech leſs emphatical. The words they are of theſe deſperate Athieſts;as if they had ſaid, we have heard much,and long,of what God,you ſay, intends to do, we would fain ſee it once done.So Jer. 17.15.Ezek.12.23. Amos. 5.18.2 Pet.3.3. they ſpeak, as if they thought it long a coming; but will think that it comes too ſoon, when it doth come, Matth. 8.29.

let the counſel]That is,the matter,as by counſel ſet down,and reſolved upon.Pſal.3.11. ch.19.17.

Of the holy One of Iſrael] So in mockage they ſpeak of God, as thoſe,Job.21.15. Of the ſtile, ſee ch.1.4.

draw neve and come, that we may know it]Heb.know.A defect of the particle,denoting the object, or thing to be known:neither know it to be true:and you to be true Prophets,that now tell us of it.Ezek. 2.5,&6.10.or know it,by ſeeing, yea, or feeling,what we now hear, finding that fulfilled,that is now ſaid,Jer.30.24.

V.20. Wo unto them that call evill, good; and good,evill] Some would have this reſtrained to matter of judicature;and ſo it would be in effect, the ſame with that which followeth, v.23.But it ſeems more general, and to deſcribe the perverſe diſpoſition of thoſe who do not onely confound the names and natures of things, ;and take away all diſtinction between good,and bad;honeſt,and diſhoneſt; as ſome here expound it,(which yet were a moſt horrible depravation and obliteration of natural reaſon, and of the remainder of Gods image,in mans corrupt heart)as miſ-place them in a croſs and perverſe courſe and manner , (like thoſe that turn ſpight into day ; and day into night) transferring the one into the room of the other ; and ſubſtituting the one in the place of the other; not only confounding vice with vertue,and evil with good,making both alike,either allowable,or diſ-allowable,& ſuch as may alike be either rejected or received: but going further then ſo,hating that, and rejecting it that ought to be loved,and embraced;and embracingthat ,and approving it ,that ought to be rejected,and abhorred, Amos 5.10.Mic.3.2.that which is the higheſt degree, if it be don out of judgment,of that reprobate minde,or, unſound judgment, that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, which ſome heathen were given up unto, Rom. 1.28.or if againſt judgment and knowledg out of a meer willfulneſs, and perverineſs of ſpirit;is not far from that oppoſition, which our Saviour Chriſt terms blaſphemy againſt the Spirit of God ; and faith,ſhall never be remitted,Matth. 12.32. And this is the fourth evil fruit,or crime, that ſome part, at leaſt, of this people, are here charged with.

Call evill,good,and good, evill] Heb.ſay of evill,it is good ; and of good,it is evill:as Mal.2.17.Prov. 20.14. that ſo do, either out of unſoundneſs of judgment, or baſe calumny, or groſs flattery, or meer malice.See,Prov.24. 24.of evill,or concerning evill; and, of good, or, concerning good : as the particle is uſed, Pſal. 91. 11. Eſth3.2.

that put darkneſs, for light, and light for darkneſs ; that put bitter for ſweet ,and ſweet for bitter]Heb.put darkneſs into light,that is,into the room of light; and ſo of the reſt.In theſe words,is a metaphorical amplification of the thing before ſpoken, illuſtrating the practice and carriage of the perſons therein taxed,by two ſimilitudes, taken from natural objects; thereby intimating, that this their ſentencing of good and evil,proceeded not meerely from a natural ignorance;or from ſome infirmity,or weaknes:ſince that thoſe that are corporally blind,albeit they cannot diſtinguiſh between night and day ; and they may therefore ſuppoſe it to be night, when indeed it is day : yet can they not take darkneſs it ſelf for day-light, or deem day-light to be darkneſs; as alſo thoſe that have their mouths or pallats,by ſome diſtemper or diſeaſe out of taſt: although they do apprehend things of themſelves ſweet,as bitter ;yet do they not apprehend things bitter, as ſweet. But by theſe metphorical illuſtrations, the Prophet implys,that this their croſs carriage; in paſſing ſuch doom on good and evil, and not diſplacing only,but miſplacing of either; proceeded rather from a willful and inordinate love of whatſoever was evil, and repugnant to grace and goodneſs; and an inveterate hatred of whatſoever was good, or had any reliſh of grace and goodneſs in it,Job 20.12,13.&24.13, 17,Pſal.36.2,4.Joh.3.20.

darkneſſe for light]Grace and goodneſs is commonly tearmed light in Scripture,Act.26.18. Rom.13.12. Rom.13.12.Eph.4.8.1 Theſ.5.4,5.1Joh.1.6,&2.11.becauſeit darkens the mind,Eph.4.18.it affects darkneſs, Eph.5. 11,12,1 Theſſ.5.7.it is ſuch as cannot endure the light of Gods word,Joh.3.19,20.Eph. 5.13.it is the ſervice of Satan. the Prince of darkeneſs, Eph. 6. 12. bitter for ſweet,&c.] Gods Word, and Gods ways,are of themſelves ſweet and comfortable : and ſuch is his favour following all thoſe that are guided by the one,and walk in the other,Pſal. 4. 6, 7.8.19.10.& 34.8 8.37.7,8.& 119.103. Prov.3.17. and on the other ſide ſin, and ſinful courſes, though they may ſeem pleaſant for the preſent, yet have no true, or ſound delight in them : they produce bitter fruits,and will proove bitter in the end, Prov.5.3,4.& 9.17, 18.&14.13.& 23.32.Jer.2.19.Act.8.23. Gal.5 19,21.Eph.4.31. and yet is mans corrupt heart over-apt to conceive, that there is no ſweetneſs,or delireableneſs at all in the former: no ſweetneſs,or deſireableneſs at all,bitr in the latter,Job 30. 12,13.&21.14.15.

V.21.wo unto them that are wiſe in their own eyes] The firſt woe denounced againſt thoſe that are puffed up with ſelf-conceit : and a vain opinion of their own wiſdom.This moſt of our interpreters underſtand,of ſuch an opinion and eſteem of themſelves,that men commonly are poſſeſſed of, in regard of their own knowledg, that they think ſcorn to be adviſed and taught by others;and reſent therefore,to hear ought that Gods Miniſters ſpeak to them,as being fitter to teach them, then to be taught by them. And true it is, that ſuch ſelf- conceit,is a great hinderance to proficiency in any knowledg ; either Humane, or Divine. Neither can wine, or other liquor, enter into a blown bladder, untill the wind be voided, and the bladder quit of it. And the Apoſtle therefore ſaith, that the man that thinks himſelf wiſe, muſt become a fool, that he may be wiſe, 1 Cor.3,19.and Solomon,that there is more hope of a fool,then of him that is wiſe in his own conceit, Prov.26.12. But I ſuppoſe, that the vice,or crime, that the Prophet here aimeth at, is the vain confidence that many of thoſe times,had in their own wildom, by means whereof,not a few,great Statеſmen eſpecially, imagined, that they could deviſe and contrive ſuch ways and courſes, as ſhould be able wholly to avert thoſe evils & judgments, as were either threatned, or expected;and ſo to ſecure well enough, both the State,and themſelves;that which made them not to regard at all,any the ſpeeches of Gods Prophets,ſee chap,30.13, & 31.1,3,and by help whereof, others of them made account, that they ſhould be able to ſecure themſelves at leaſt,and to procure their own indemnity, howſoever matters ſhould go, and what ſoever ſhould befall the State ; that which made them alſo ſet light by whatſoever was denounced,as being ſunniſhed, with armour of proof before-hand, againſt all that might come;and ſure to ſhift well enough for themſelves, however it might fare with others. See chap.28.15.&29.14,16. Such kind of ſelf-confidence is that,which Solomon oppoſeth to truſting with the whole heart in God,Prov.3.5.

in their own eyes]That is,in their own opinion,conceit,judgment: or,as the Apoſtle ſpeaks,with themſelves, Rom.12.16.So prov. 3.7. & 12.15.&16.2.and.21.2.&26.5,16.&28.11. &30.12.

and prudent]Some would diſtinguiſh this from the former; referring wiſe,to matters concerning God:prudent,to things concerning the world.But the words are in Scripture uſed promiſcuouſly : and the ſame thing ſeems (as with this our Prophet is very frequent) in divers words repeated ; implying, that none of their prudence,or policy, wiſdome, or underſtanding, term it what, or how they pleaſed, ſhould be able to prevail againſt God, or to ſecure them from his wrath,Prov. 21.30.

prudent]Heb.under ſtanding.So Jer.4. 22. where ſuch are oppoſed to fools,or fooliſh ones.The term comming from it,is uſed, Prov.3.5. where Solomon admoniſheth his ſon; not to lean upon,or truſt unto, his own underſtanding.

in their own sight]Heb. before their own face. The same in effect with that before, in their own eyes. Because what ſtands or lyes before a mans face, is in his ſight, or in his eyes. So, before the ſight of God, Pſ. 18.24 and before the face of God, 1.a. 3.35. are one and the ſame.

V. 22. woe unto them that are mighty to drinke wine]The ſixth woe is thundered out againſt thoſe that gloried in their ability to take in much liquor, and go away with it. This ſome think to be the ſame, in ſubſtance, with what was before dealt with, ver. 11, 12. Suppoſing this chapter to be made up of parcels collected out of ſeveral Sermons of this Prophet; and ſo repeating the ſame things, as they were found in thoſe ſeveral Sermons oft delivered. And ſo indeed our Saviour on ſeveral occaſions at ſeveral times, taught ſometime the ſame things as Matth. 5.29,38. compared with Matth. 18.8,9. Matth. 7.16, 18. with Matth. 12.33. Matth. 10.38,39. with Matt. 16. 24, 25. as alſo, that the Apoſtles out of their former Epiſtles ſometime repeat ſome things, 1 Cor. 5.9. Phil. 3.1. But little probability is there, that this chapter ſhould be ſo pieced out, and not be an entire diſcourſe and context, framed out of the ſum and ſubſtance, at leaſt, of one particular Prophecie. Others, though they deny not this to be the ſame with the former: yet they ſuppoſe that the ſame vice, or crime, might well be more then once reproved, and dealt with in one and the ſame Sermon; as ſome things are more then once inculcated, ſometime in the ſame Epiſtle. 1 Cor. 1.10, 12. & 3. 1.4. & 11, 18. Phil. 2. 1, 2. & 4. Phil. 3. 1. & 4. And that indeed is not unuſual in the writings both of the Prophets and Apoſtles; howbeit there ſeemes here ſome difference between the former paſſage and this. That which ſome ſuppoſe to conſiſt in the perſons dealt with; the Nobles and Courtiers being principally aimed at there; the Commanders, Soldiers, and men of armes, hereſtand it is not unlikely, by ſome terms here uſed, but that they are ſpecially glanced at among others. But I conceive, that the courſes and vices mentioned, and darted at, in either paſſage, are diſtinct. There was taxed their ſenſuality; and their unſeaſonable immoderacy in mirth, muſick, drinking, and all manner of delights: here the extream vanity and vileneſs of thoſe that gloried in this, as matter of much honour and valour, that they were able to take and pour in more liquor, then moſt others could do. A practice, that many, who live as looſely and as luxuriouſly as any, yet cannot, or dare not deſire not to do; much leſs are ordinarily faulty in. Of which we may well ſay with the Apoſtle, that the glory of ſuch is their ſhame, Phil. 3.19. it being rather the commendation of a tun, then of a man, (for a beaſt will ſcarce abide it) to be able to take in and contain much liquor.

and men of ſtrength]It is not unlikely, that in this expreſſion, the Prophet intended to touch their military men. For ſuch in Scripture are commonly ſo ſtiled, by the tearm here uſed, men of armes, and armies; or might and valour, (for the word imports either) Judg. 3. 29. 1 Sam. 9.1. and. 31.1.2. Sam. 24.9. It is therefore, as if he had ſaid of them, They are ſtiled men of valour: and they are valorous, but at board, not in field; not to fight, but to drink. For that is it, onely wherein they deſire to ſhew their valour.

to mingle] So indeed the word here uſed, primarily, ſignifies, Pſalm 102.11. where the afflicted perſon complains, that he mingled his drink with his tears. Now becauſe it was uſual in thoſe parts to mingle, and temper their wine, when they drank, ordinarily, with water, thereby to allay the heat and ſtrength of it; hence came it to paſs, that the word, which properly ſignifies to mingle, or temper, is both in hebrew, greek and latine, uſed for to prepare, pour out, ſerve, reach, or pour in wine, or other liquor. So proy. 9.2. wiſdome is ſaid not to have mingled (for her wine is not mingled ſtuff, like that, chap. 1.22. but pure, and ſincere, as her milk, 1 Pet. 2.2. (but to have prepared, that is, drawn out of the veſſel, poured out into cups, and made ready to be ſerved out) her wine. And hence, thoſe that ſerved and attended at feaſts, are ſaid to mingle, that is, to ſerve out wine to the gueſts, and that then, when they ſerved it to them without any mixture of ought. Yea, hence mixture is uſed for wine in general, either mixt, or unmixt. So God is ſaid to have in his hand a cup full of mixture, that is, a cup full of wine, Pſalm. 76.8. of which it is ſaid more fully, and expreſly, Rev. 14. 10. that it is the unmixt, or pure wine of wrath mingled, that is, poured in to be ſerved out in the cup of his anger. And the drunkard is ſaid, Prov. 23. 30. to ſeek for mixture, that is, for wine, or full cups of it: not mingled wine, as it is amiſs rendered; it is not ſuch that they ſeek after. And here therefore it would be rendered, not to mingle, but to pour in, or pour down. Nor will it help, for the ſalving the tranſlation, to ſay, that it may be they uſed to mingle their wine, or drink, with ſome drugs, or ſpices, as we ſometime do, to improve thereby the heat and ſtrength of it, and ſo make it the more ready for this could not be that, but the taking of it in rather, wherein they ſhould ſhew their ſtrength. That had been matter of art, and skill rather, then of might and valour, as they eſteemed it.

ſtrong drink] Some render it drunkenneſs, and expounde it of making others drunk by tempering, and tendering of wine and ſtrong drink to them, until they make them drunkias God is ſaid to have mingled, that is, poured out upon, or into the Egyptians, a perverſneſs of ſpirit, that made them ſtagger like a man in drink. chap. 19.14. Nor is it improbable, but that ſuch as the Prophet here ſpeaks of, were forward and frequent enough in ſuch practices, and accounted it no ſmall glory to be able to lay ſo many men under the board: as too many among us, do. Hab. 2.15. But the word here uſed, is no where taken for drunkenneſs, (there is another word for that, though of the ſame ſtock with this. Ezek. 23.33, & 39.19.) but alwaies for ſtrong drink. See v. 11.

V. 23. which juſtifie the wicked for reward] Or, We alſo be to them, which juſtifie, &c. This is to be ſupplyed, becauſe this is a new crime, and diſtinct from the former, as well in regard of the matter of it, as of the perſons alſo ordinarily therein offending. For the former reached the generality: men of all ſorts and ſtates: and if it touched any more ſpecially, it was their military men: whereas the preſent concerns thoſe, only, that are in place of judicature: howſoever ſome of them alſo might be in the former kind faulty: but this hath more ſpecially relation to them, as in ſuch place and office. And the crime for which a wo is denounced againſt them, is their iniquity and perverſe judgment, together with the roor of it, their covetouſneſs. That for filthy lucre, being by wicked men bribed, they would not ſtick to acquit the guilty, and condemn the guiltleſs: both which are pronounced to be moſt abominable in Gods ſight. Prov. 17.15.

which juſtifie] To juſtifie, is not to pardon, as ſome would expound it in the doctrine of the Goſpel: for the word is never found ſo uſed, either in the Hebrew, or Greek Writers, ſacred, or prophane, nor in our common ſpeech; nor as it is a law term, doth it ever ſignifie to make juſt: ſave as we uſe to ſay, you make me a knave, or a thief, when ſome charge us with that which may ſeem to infer, or imply, as much of us: and when John ſaith of ſome, that they make God a liar, 1 John. 2.10. & 5.10. that is, they carry themſelves ſo toward God, as if they accounted him ſo to be; or, as we uſe to ſay, of one, whoſe honeſty and integrity ſome ſtrive to maintain, when we deem otherwiſe of him, you would make him an honeſt man. But to juſtifie in a legal way, doth alwaies ſignifie to defend or to deem as juſt and guiltleſs; free from the offence, where the party called in queſtion is charged; to defend as juſtland ſo it is the office of an advocate, to deem as juſt, and conſequently abſoil from guilt and ſo it is the part of a Judge: and it is therefore oppoſed ſometime to crimination, in regard of the former; ſometime to condemnation, in regard of the latter, Deut. 25. 1. Matth. 12.37. Rom. 8.33,34. and ſo it is conſtantly uſed in caſes of this kind, Exod. 23.7. 1 King. 8.32. 2 Chr. 6.23. Job. 13.18. Pſal. 82.3. chap. 50.8. Yea, ſo it is ſaid, that wiſedome is juſtified of her children, Matth. 11.19. that is, her children as advocates, plead for her, and maintain the equity of her cauſe and courſes, againſt thoſe that traduce her and them. As alſo in private carriages, men are ſaid to juſtifie others, when they plead for them, and avow their integrity and honeſty, againſt thoſe that queſtion it, Job. 27.5. & 33.32. and to juſtifie, or ſtand in juſtification of themſelves, when they maintain their innocency, and freeneſs from that which they are ſuſpected of, or charged with, Gen. 44. 16. Job 9.20. & 32.2. Luk. 16.15. Here therefore the word juſtifie, ſignifies, as ever in matter of judicature, ſo far forth as it importeth the act of a Judg, to doom, acquit, or abſoil, as guiltleſs, or as free from the offence charged on the party queſtioned. And this conſtant uſe of the word, in ſuch caſes, well weighed, would much conduce to the clearing of the doctrine of juſtification of a ſinner in Gods ſight. Concerning which, ſee further, on chap. 53.11.

the wicked] The guilty. Whome they ought to pronounce guilty, or condemn, Deut. 25.1. Where the word uſed, ſignifies properly to guiltifie, or to make wicked. That is, to paſs a doom, or ſentence upon one, as ſuch, Prov. 17.15. 1 King. 8.32,2. Chr. 6.23. Now in ſome caſes, and for ſome ſpecial reſpect, it may ſometimes be lawful for thoſe that are in authority, to ſpare or pardon an offendor. And yet if men do it, there where God requits juſtice to be ſtrictly executed, they muſt look with Ahab, to pay with their own ſoule, for the ſparing of ſuch as he demands unto death, 1 King. 20.42. As in the caſe of wilful murther; God will have no ſatisfaction to be admitted, Numb. 34.31. and the like. But for perſons placed in office of judicature, for hire, or favour, not to ſpare, or pardon, or connive at onely, but to juſtifie, and abſoil thoſe as guiltleſs, whom they ſhould ſentence for guilty, is ſuch a crime, as is not abominable onely in Gods eye, but moſt odious alſo with men, Prov. 17.15. and 24. 24.

for reward] Or, as ſome, for hire of reward, or gift. That is, for gifts given in way of hire: but we need not here ſo to force the text, when the words of themſelves yield a plain and full ſenſe, without tranſpoſition, or ſupply. Since the former word is oft uſed, ſimply, to ſignifie, for, Gen. 22.18. & 26.5. 2 Sam. 22.6, 20. Now for Judges to make ſale of juſtifie, ſo as not to do juſtice, unleſs hired, is vile: and to take gifts from any that have cauſes before them, is forbidden Exod. 23.8. Deut. 16.19. But to receive hire on purpoſe to do injuſtice, is a far greater offence, Mic. 3.11. Again, to deny juſtice to the wronged, and to acquit the wrong doer, is a point of much injuſtice, ch. 1.23. Jer. 5.28. Ezek. 22. 12. But to condemn them as guilty, that are utterly guiltleſs and to be hired ſo to do, is yet a further crime of a more tranſcendent nature, Exek. 22. 12. and ſuch as hath a ſolemn curſe ſet upon it, Deut. 27.25.

and take away the righteouſneſſe of the righteous from him] That is, which for hire, or favour, or other ſiniſter reſpects. For the one of them is here mentioned, as the moſt common, the other alſo not excluded (do condemn, and paſs ſentence on them, as guilty, as Pſal. 94 21. They make wicked, or condemn as guilty, the innocent, the guiltleſs).

not that any man can take another mans righteouſneſs, or innocency from him, and ſo make him really unrighteous: but then they are ſo eſteem him, and ſo make him really unrighteous: but then they are ſaid ſo to do, when they pronounce them to be ſuch; and ſo cauſe them to be deemed, and to ſuffer as ſuch: That men are ſaid to do, which they endeavour to do, and as far as in them lyeth, effect. Compare Levit. 24.17, 21. with Deut. 19.16, 21.

take away] Or, remove: as Job of himſelf: I will never remove mine integrity from me: I will hold my faſt righteouſneſs, and not let it go, Job 27.5, 6. Not meaning, that he would ever give over his upright carriage (though that, no queſtion, he was alſo reſolved on) but that he would not give over the juſtifying of himſelf, he would never condemn himſelf, as guilty of thoſe things which they unjuſtly charged him with.

the righteouſneſs] The guiltleſneſs; as Pſal. 7.8.

of the righteous] Or, righteous ones. Of perſons guiltleſs; not faulty in that whereof they were accuſed, whether good, or bad, otherwiſe. So Deut. 25.1.

from him] That is, from any of them, or each of them. For the noun is plural, the pronoun ſingular; and implies ſuch a common courſe of corrupt carriage in this kind, that they made no conſcience of ſparing any, whatſoever they were, whome, by any one they might be hired to condemn. See of the manner of ſpeech, ch. 2. 20. ver. 26.

V. 24. Therefore] Hence followeth a general denunciation of an utter deſtruction, that God would for theſe crimes, ſo rife and common among them, bring, and that ſuddenly, upon the main body of his people. For thoſe things that follow, as inferred upon the former, do not refer unto the branch laſt before mentioned, alone, but to the whole body of the charge.

as the fire devoureth the ſtubble, and the flame conſumeth the chaffe, ſo their root ſhall be rottenneſs, and their bloſſome ſhall go up as duſt] He returneth to, and alludes to the allegory of a vine, or a vineyard, which he began with at firſt, verſ. 1. Becauſe this vine, my people, which I had been at ſo much charge with, and taken ſo much pains about, brings forth ſuch vile and abominable fruits, as have been before mentioned; therefore will I without further delay, proceed in judgment againſt it, and even ſuddenly conſume it. Pſal. 81. 16.

as the fire] Heb. the tongue of fire. The flame of fire; or fire, the flame whereof running out in length, reſembleth a tongue; and that like a tongue, doth licke up, and conſume, either liquor, or dry and light combuſtible matter. So 1 King. 18.38. it is ſaid, The fire it that fell from the Lord, conſumed the burnt offering, and the wood, and the ſtone, and the duſt, and licked up the water that was in the trench. The phraſe is uſed of a thing that is ſuddenly done; of ought ſuddenly deſtroyed, as licked up, and without further adoe, ſwallowed down in an inſtant. So Balack of the Iſraelites, encamping neer him in the wilderneſs; This company will now lick up all round about us, as oxen lick up the graſſe of the field, Numb 22.4. devoureth the chaff] Heb. eateth up. So fire that eateth up ch. 9.4 & 30.30. A mouth is given to the fire, as well as to the ſword, ch. 1.20.

the ſtubble] Light matter, ſoon conſumed. An uſual emblem of deſtruction, ſuddenly conſummated. As dry ſtubble, being fired at one ends of a land, doth in the turning of a hand, run over the whole field, Exod. 15. 7. Joel. 2.5. Obad. 1. 18. Nah. 1.10. Mal. 4.1.

and] A defect of the particle, making the ſentence the quicker, anſwerable to the matter contained in it. So chap. 3.14.

the flame conſumeth the chaff] Heb. the chaff ſaileth, with, or from the flame, ſo the verb ſignifies, Judg. 19.9. where the day is ſaid to fail towards the evening. The particle noting the efficient, is wanting, as Pſal. 17.13, 14.

their root] The root of them; before ſpoken of. By root ſome underſtand ſtrong ones well rooted; Job 28.7. Jer. 12.2. By bloſſoms, weak ones, eaſily blown away Pſal. 103. 15, 16. ch. 40.7. Others by root, the perſons themſelues; by bloſſoms, their iſſue, as if it were ſaid, That they, and their iſſue, ſhould both be deſtroyed, Hoſ. 9. 16. Others, their whole might, as well in ward, as outward. Which preciſe interpretations, and applications of each tearm, to ſeveral ſet ſubjects, it is not be deemed here requiſite, and by the Prophet himſelf intended; I ſhould rather ſuppoſe, that by root, or ſtem; as ch. 11.1. were underſtood, ſtrength, and power: by bloſſoms, pomp and glory: as ch. 28.1. & 40.6. But the words ſeem only to import an utter deſtruction of that State, as of a plant, which ſo long as the root is found, though cut and crope, yea hewen down to the ground, yet may ſprout up and ſhoot forth, and recover its wonted beauty again, Job 14.7, 9. Dan. 4. 14, 15. But when the root is rotten, all periſheth together with it not the bloſſoms alone, though here only mentioned, as a goodly part and ornament of it; but fruit, lips, twigs, branches, and whatſoever elſe ſprings from it, and appertaineth to it, Job 18.16. Jer. 11.19. Amos 2.9. See chap. 9.14.

rottenneſs] Or, as rottenneſs. That is, it ſhall moulder away, as a thing that is rotten. The word was uſed before, ch. 3.24. in ſome what another notion; but both alluding to the nature of things putrified: The word whereof it comes, ſignifies properly to rot, Zach. 14.12. their fleſh ſhall rot, while they ſtand upon their feet, for above-ground while they live; and their eyes ſhall rot in their holes; and their tongues ſhall rot in their mouths. The puniſhment, as of the enemies of Gods people there; ſo of his people. that carried themſelves as enemies to God, here and their bloſſoms ſhall go up, as duſt] Their bloſſoms ſhall never grow to; or yield any fruit; but ſhall alſo, as rotten things are wont to do, mouldering to duſt, flye up into the air, and being there diſperſt, come to nought, Pſal. 22.15. chap. 9.18.

becauſe they have caſt away the law of the Lord of Hoſts] This is by ſome Interpreters, ſuppoſed to be added, as the main ground and cauſe of all the fore-mentioned exceſſes. And indeed, where men have once ſhaken off that yoke, and caſt off that curb, it is no marvel if they run forth into all exceſs of ſin, Jer. 8.6. But it may as well be underſtood to be mentioned as an effect of them; to wit, that by theſe wicked and rebellious courſes, they do, as it were, profeſſedly caſt off Gods Law, and refuſe to yield any obedience unto him; and give him therefore, thereby, juſt cauſe to reject them, and to inflict the heavy judgment here denounced, upon them, as he had before threatned, Levit. 26, 43.

caſt away] Or, rejected with contempt. For ſo the word uſually ſignifies, Jer. 8.9. Ezek. 20.13; 16, 24.

Lord of hoſts] See ch. 1.9, 24.

and deſpiſed the word of the holy One of Iſrael] The ſame thing in effect for further amplification repeated; that which is very frequent with this Prophet.

deſpiſed] See ch. 1.4.

the word] Or, command: as Pſal. 119. 67. 158. and the like word, Eſth. 1.15. & 2.20.

the holy One of Iſrael] One, as moſt mighty, and therefore able to puniſh: ſo moſt holy, and one therefore that cannot endure ſuch abominable courſes, or ſuffer them to paſs unpuniſhed. See ch. 1.4.

V. 25. Therefore is the anger of the Lord kindled againſt his people] Or, Therefore hath the anger of the Lord been kindled againſt his people. For he ſpeaketh here of judgments formerly inflicted, for theſe, and the like exceſſes, as ſome think, in the reigns of Joath, by the Syrians, 2 Chr. 24, 23, 25. and of Amaziah, by the Iſraelites, 2 Chr. 25.22, 24. But I rather conceive them to be afflictions of latter times under Ahaz, partly, by the Iſraelites, and partly, by forrein nations, the Edomites, the Philiſtims, the Syrians; and the Aſſyrians themſelves, whom he called in for aſſiſtance againſt them, 2 Chro. 28, 5, 18, 17, 20. See ch. 1.7, 9. For I cannot accord with them, that underſtand theſe words as ſpoken of evils to come, and not yet inflicted, but as ſure to come, as if already inflicted, and therefore delivered in the time preſent and paſt. Which though it be uſual in prophecies, as before hath been obſerved, ch. 3.1. Yet the courſe of the context here will not bear it. He mindeth them of judgment lately paſt, and yet freſh in memory; partly, to ſhew what God can further do, contrary to their impious conceits, and ſcoffing ſpeeches of him, verſ. 19. and partly, to intimate their extream obſtinacy in evil, being not at all amended by thoſe heavy afflictions, that already had befallen them; as the words following imply.

the anger] Heb face: becauſe anger appears in the face, or the countenance, Pſal. 34.16. Or noſe: becauſe anger expreſſeth it ſelf, in ſome creatures, more eſpecially, in their noſtrils, Pſal. 18.8. So ch. 13.9. & 30.30.

is kindled] hath been inceaſed: or, hath waxed hot. Becauſe anger heateth, ſo Numb. 11.33. Hoſ. 8.5. See on chap. 51.17.

againſt his people] Whome he had moſt cauſe to be angry with, having carried themſelves ſo to him, who had done ſo much for them, ch. 1.3. Amos 3.2.

and he hath ſtretched out his hand againſt them] He hath not only been angry with them but proceeded to manifeſt his anger, by the diſmal effects of it. He ſpeaks of God, after the manner of men, who having conceived diſpleaſure in wardly, diſcover it firſt in their looks, geſture, and ſpeech; and when that will not ſerve to affect, and move thoſe with whom they are offended, to uſe means of pacification are wont then to proceed to blows, and ſtripes, Prov. 29. 19, & 26.3.

ſtretched out his hand] The hand is ſaid to be ſtretched out, ſometime to help, aſſiſt, or relieve, Pſal. 136.12. Prov. 31.20. Sometime to hurt and ſmite, Pſal. 55.20. & 138.7. ch. 31.3. Jer. 6.12. Sometime for, hurt and ſmite againſt one. That hand therefore, that is, that power and providence, which had formerly been ſtretched out; that is exerciſed, and employed in their behalf, againſt their enemies, for their good, had, of latter times, been turned againſt them, and employed contrarily for their evil. See Jog. 2.15. As he had threatned it ſhould be, when they ſhould rebel againſt him, Levit. 26.21, 24, 28.

and hath ſmitten them] As men in anger are wont to do, ch. 57.17. Jer. 30.14. See ch. 1.5.

and the hills did tremble] The ſtroke was ſo terrible, the judgment ſo dread full, that the very ſenſeleſs creatures, the hills themſelves, might ſeem to be ſenſible of it, Pſal. 68.8. ch. 64.1, 2. Jer. 4.24. Joel 2.10. Though hiſe people (which manifeſts their ſtupid ty, and extream obſtinacy)were not,ver.12.ch.42.24,25.

and their carcaſes were torn in the midſt of the ſtreets] implying, both the multitude of ſuch as were ſlain,and the hideous,and gaſtly ſight of the dead corps, which either for want of people to bury them,or for fear of the enemy, not ſuffering them to be enterred, lay unburied in the ſtreets,Pſal.79.3.Jer.8.2.Of the havock of men, made under Achas, in Judea,ſee 2 Chr.28.6.where it is ſaid, that by Pekah, one hundred and twenty thouſand ,were ſlain in one day.

their carcaſes]Heb.carcaſe,taken collectively; as Pſal.79.2.Jer.7.33.

were torn in the midſt of the ſtreets] Heb.as ſome,were cut off; deriveing it from a word that ſignifie to cut off, or cut down.Uſed. Pſal. 80.16.and ch.33 .12. and ſo taken,it would be rendered, Being cut off lay in the ſtreets. Of which kind of phraſe, or form of ſpeech ,ſee ch,1.4.& 14.12.and 38.14,17,Or as others,were as duſt or,dung in the ſtreets; ſuppoſing it to be of the ſame notion with another very like it,that ſignifies ſuch dirt, or other filth, that from the pavement is wont to be ſcraped,or ſwept away.See Lam.3. 45. which I conceive to be the genuine ſenſe of the word, having the the note of ſimilitude prefixed to it, in this place.See Pſalm 83.10. Jer.9.21.& 16.4.

for all this his anger is not turned away] Albeit the Lord hath ſo grievouſly ſmitten,and plagued his people,that his wrath may ſeem to have been ſatisfied;yet he is not as yet pacified,nor turned from his fierce anger, but hath further judgments to inflict on them. So he threatned before, that when they offended, if they would not be reclaimed;and amended,by leſs and lighter judgments, further,and fiercer then the former ſhould follow,Levit.26 .21,24,28. The ſame is repeated again, and again, ch. 9. 12, 17, 21. & 10.4.

for all this]Heb,in,or,with,as ch.7.20.or,for,as Gen.18.28.Which ſome would refer,not ſo much to the judgment here denounced,as to the ſins before recited, ver.24.

but]Heb,and. The copulative,for the adverſative;as ver.5.

his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] To ſmite ſtill,and further:as before, So Joſh.8.18,26.

V.26.And he will liſt up,&c.]Heb. For he will liſt up, &c.as ch. 9.12.The copulative particle, in a declarative notion.For he proceeds now to relate, more particularly, what further judgments ſhould be inflicted upon them, (becauſe they had not profited by the former)by other forraign, people,breaking in upon them, and waſting their land,far more then the former had done.

liſt up an enſign] The uſe of an enſign in times of war,is either to call people together to come in, that they may be liſted,and their names entred for ſervice;or to admoniſh thoſe that be ſo liſted, to be in a readineſs to march : or to fit themſelves, where they are, in the field,for fight, and to fall upon the adverſe party. Unto the firſt of theſe,the Prophet ſeems to have reſpect in this place; when he ſaith,God will,as ſome great Commander,ſet up his Standard,to call thoſe together, whom he intends to imploy in this ſervice againſt his people ; thereby intimating, that he will by a ſecret work of his, cauſe them to come together, levy forces,and undertake this ſervice, as if by ſome potent Prince,that had erected his ſignal for that purpoſe,under whoſe power they lived,and at whoſe command they were,they had been enjoyned ſo to do.See further, chap.11.12,& 13.2.& 18.3, to the nation]Or,for the nations.Some would have it read, to, or, for a nation. Suppoſing, that by a ſlip of the pen,a letter might be added to this word, from the beginning of the next; becauſe the words following, run in the ſingular number. But hereof there is no neceſſity, as ſhall be afterward ſhewed. Of what nation, or nations, this is ſpoken, Interpreters differ. Some expound it of the Aſſyrians under Senacherib, in the time of Hezekiah, that waſted moſt of Judea,and ſtraitened, but took not Jeruſalem,Some,of the Chaldeans under Mebuchadnezzar, in the reign of Zedekiah, who both waſted the land, and ſacked the city, and fired the Temple, which yet after ſome ſpace of time, were in leſs then an hundred years reſtored,and raiſed up again. Others, of the Romanes, under Titus Veſpaſian, who ſo ruined the Jewiſh State,that it could never be reſtored,ſo razed the Temple,that it could never be re-edified,for ſixteen hundred years,and upward,unto this day.Theſe Nations, as the principal, together with thoſe of other Nations, that were aſſiſtant to, as ſundry were, and ſerved under each of them. Of theſe three, few hold with the laſt; and it is indeed the leaſt probable of the three : moſt go with the ſecond. I incline rather to the firſt : becauſe, as notable, ſo neer at hand ; and it is not likely, would be over ſlipt : and when it came, was ſuch, as would meet with thoſe to the purpoſe:and mar all their mirth, that gave themſelves wholly to jollity: and ſuppoſing it would never be, wiſhed it,in mockery,once come, ver. 11,12,19. Beſides that, the like things are ſpoken, to what here enſues, concerning the deſolation that ſhould,by the Aſſyrian invaſion,be effected,ch.7.17,25.

from far off]Not liſt up;or ſet up an enſign a far off:as ſome: though the word be ſo uſed,Exod. 20.21.where it is ſaid. The people ſtood a far off:but to,or,for Nations, that are a far off,or,ſhall come from far off:as ch.43.6.Bring my ſons from far :and theſe ſhall come from far, 49.12.This had God threatned before, Deut.28.49. and would now make good by the Aſſyrians,that were remote from them, and their confederates,as after by the Chaldeans,of whom the ſame is ſaid,Hab,1.8.The leſs favour to be looked for from people,ſo unacquainted with,and whoſe language not underſtanding,the leſs able they ſhould be to apply themſelves unto,and to ſue them for mercy, Deut. 28. 49. ch. 28. 11. Jer. 5. 15. and the leſs hope of releaſe, or return, for thoſe that ſhould be carried away captive by them,ch. 22.18.

and will hiſs unto them] Or, will whiſtle to them. For the word, though it be well rendred, to hiſs, when it hath a notion of contempt;as 1 King.9.8.Lam. 2.15, 16.Yet where it implies a mean of calling to any for acceſs,it would rather, be rendered to whiſtle. So here,and ſo chap.7.18. Zach. 10. 8. And it ſeems to allude to the manner of thoſe, that whiſtle to thoſe that are out of ſight in the houſe;and uncertain where,or how far off,or that being,though in ſight,yet further off,then that their voice can wel reach unto.Or, rather, and more eſpecially, unto the uſuall manner of ſhepherds,that with their whiſtle, are wont to call their ſheep together, when they ſtraggle further then they ſhould, or is ſafe for them. That which our Saviour alludeth to, Joh.10.4,5.God will not onely ſet up his enſign,for thoſe neer at hand, with in the ſight of it;but he will whiſtle alſo to thoſe that are more remote, wheresoever; and his bare whiſtle will be ſufficient to bring them together. For the word implies a readineſs in thoſe that are whiſtled unto, to come at the call of him that whiſtleth.

unto them]Heb,unto him, or,unto it,in the ſingular number ; and ſo after,he,or it ſhall come, &c.as if he had ſpoken but of one nation before. The pronoun therefore is to be taken, either diſtributively it,or him; that is,each of them:as ver.23. Or collectively, as carcaſe, for.carcaſes,ver.25. but withal implying, that they ſhould meet together,and come along,not as a rude,confuſed multitude, Act. 19. 32,but as united together,or making up one main body, under one Commander in chief;as Joel.2.7,8.11.

from the end of the earth] That is, from the utmoſt places, known to the moſt of them, in thoſe parts : as the whole world; for the whole world commonly known ; and that was under the Romane juriſdiction, who had, at that time, command of the greateſt part thereof,Luk.2.1.and every nation under heaven: to wit, with whome the Jews had ordinary commerce : or among whom they had Proſelytes,Act.2.5.Or from places ſo remote,that they might be deemed to come from the worlds end.So ch.42.10.& 43.6.Jer. 10. 13.& 12.12. Matth. 12.42. Or as ſome, (which I miſlike not)from the lands end:as Pſal. 51.3. & 72. 8. that is,from thoſe remote places, where the land is bounded,either with the ſea;or other great water, river of note,large lake,and the like.See chap.7.ver,18.

and behold]Look for it;be ſure of it, as ſtrange,and unlikely as you think it, yet it ſhall undoubtedly come to paſs, See ch. 1. 21.

they ſhall come] They ſhall come as readily, as the ſheep at the Shepherds whiſtle:nor ſhall any remoteneſſe of place,hinder them from hearing of Gods whiſtle;or any length of way, or journey to be performed by them,deter them from undertaking Gods ſervice in the preſent expedition,chap.7.19.

with ſpeed]Or,with haſte;Jer.48. 16.The particle is in both places wanting but to be ſupplyed,and found expreſſed,Eccl.4.12.with ſpeed,or haſte: that is, ſpeedily, quickly, haſtily ; ſooner then you think:ſpoken here, in way of anſwer to what they had ſaid before: Let him make ſpeed: Let him haſten his worke,ver.19.what you ſeem ſo much to deſire,ſhall be done.

ſwiftly]Heb.lightly. As ch.19.1. Jer, 4.24.Becauſe lightneſs of body. is a ſpecial help to ſwiftneſs. See Deut. 28,49. Hoſ. 8. 1.

V.27.None ſhall be weary] There ſhall none of them be wearied out,with the length of the journey.

nor ſtumbl amongſt them] Stumble at ought in the way : (which in rough,or ſtony waies,oft falleth out)as Pſal.91.12.ch.63.13.Jer. 31.9.Or,one againſt another:(which in tumult,and haſte,oft comes to paſs, Jer. 48. 6, 19.)So Joel 2.7,8. They ſhall meet with no impediments,that ſhall hinder,or retard them in their journey:but ſhall march on,in an orderly manner, without let, or impediment, either from without,or from among themſelves.

none ſhall ſlumber,or ſleep]That is,none ſhall ſlumber,much leſs ſleep: Becauſe, to ſlumber. is ſomewhat leſs then to ſleep.So Pſal.121.4. & 132.4.Not that they ſhould not reſt and ſleep, at due times, by the way:but they ſhould not be ſleepy, and ſlothful,Prov.6,9.& 19. 24.ch.56.16.but lively, and watchful, and attentive to their buſineſs,Prov.6.4.Or,as ſome, they ſhall ſpend as well night,as day, in beſieging,and aſſaulting the city :as Jer.6.5.But the Prophet ſeems to ſpeak here,rather of their expedition by the way:then of their, employment at their work, when come, to their waies end.

neither ſhall the girdle of their loins be looſed] That is,as ſome they ſhall not be weak; the looſing,or want of a girdle,being an argument of weakneſs;as the girdle, and girding with it, an emblem of ſtrength. Pſal. 18.32. 39,ch,23. 10. & 45.5, Or,they ſhall not be faint-hearted:noted by the looſing of the loins. Dan. 5.6. But the meaning ſeems rather,that they ſhould not diſarm,lay their weapons aſide : but go alwaies with their ſwords, girt to them, hanging at their belt, or girdle upon their thigh, Pſal.45. 3. Cant 3.8. Or alwaies ready for journey, or action ; as men that go girt, not ungirt ,as men are wont to be, when they ſit ſtill in the houſe, or lay themſelves down to reſt, 1 King.18.46. 2 King.9.1. Prov. 31. 17. Luk.12.35.

nor the latchets of their ſhooes be broken] That is, as ſome, they ſhall not be buſie about any other work. Which I ſee not how the words will bear. Others therefore expound it of their ſucceſſe and ſafety in fight, that they ſhould not ſuſtain hurt or loſſe of ought, not ſo much as of a ſhoo-latchet. See Gen.14.23. But the meaning ſeems rather to be, (for he ſpeaks of them as yet in journey) that they ſhould have nothing befall them, not ſo much as the breaking of a ſhoo-latchet, that might cauſe them to ſlacken their pace, or to ſtay them on the way for the mending of it. The ſum of all is, that they ſhould be hearty, lively, ready, and well appointed; and meet with no difficulties, or ſuch common occaſions,as might retard them in their way. An elegant and artificial deſcription of a journey, or a march rather, with rare expedition, and without any notable impediments diſpatched.

V. 28. Whoſe arrowes are ſharp, &c.] He proceeds to relate with what arms they come furniſhed. And he begins with their bow, and arrowes ; becauſe that was a principal part of their artillery in thoſe times, Gen. 48. 22. Pſal. 78. 9. Deut. 32. 23, 42. 2 Sam.1,22.

arrowes ſharp] Or, ſharpned. For ſo the word properly ſignifies, Pſal. 120. 4. & 140. 3. Prov. 25.18. ſharpened, that is, poliſhed, and well kept, to wound the deeper ; as ch. 49. 2. Jer. 51. 11. So Pſal. 45.5.

and all their bowes bent] Heb. trodden. As ch. 21.15. So to tread the bowe, for, to bend it, Jer. 50. 14. becauſe they made uſe of the foot in the bending of the bowe. They have all things continually in a readineſſe for fight, Pſal.7.12. & 11.2. & 37.14.

their horſes hoofs ſhall be counted as flint]Or,rock;as ch.2.10.Ezek. 3. 9. For firmneſs, as an hoof of braſs, or ſteel,Mic.4.13.

and their wheels a whirlewind] The wheels of their chariots,much uſed then in war,and fight, Exod. 14. 7,25. Judg.4.3. & 5.28.Pſ.20. 7.& 76. 6.a whirlewind,for ſwiftneſſe. So ch.66.15.

V. 29. Their roaring ſhall be like a Lion] Like the roaring of a lion ; as Dan.4.33. His hairs were grown like the eagles, and his nails like the birds.That is,like the feathers of eagles,the one;and the nails of birds, the other;for length, both of them.See ch.13.4.

their roaring] The dreadful ſhout,that in joyning fight, or in ſtorming places of ſtrength they ſhall make, to the terrour, and amazement of all that hear it, Pſal.74.4. See Jer. 25. 30. For he paſſeth now to ſpeak of their fierceneſſe,in fight, and aſſault.

like a lion] Whoſe voice is , of any living creature,the moſt dreadful, Amos 3.8. To which therefore, both the wrath of a King, Prov. 19. 12. and 20.2. and Gods indignation alſo,is likened, Hoſ.11.10. Joel 3. 16.Amos 1.2.

they ſhall roar like young lions] Heb. he ſhall roar (as before) like young lions ; that is, like a company of young lions ; or, like ſome young Lion ; (becauſe a lion in the former branch) as beſide ſtreams of water. That is,ſome ſtream of water, Pſal. 1. 3. like young lions, which are wont to be more fierce, and to have a ſtronger voice, as being in the vigour of their age ; and their might and fierceneſſe nothing yet abated, or allaied. So ch.31.4. Jer.2.15. of the ſeverall names of lions, in Scripture diſtinguiſhed,according to their ages,or qualities, See on Job 4.10.

yea, they ſhall roar, and lay hold of the prey] Or, they ſhall both roar, and take hold of the prey : and, for both, as Pſal. 76.6.Jer.6.24.& 17. 26. or, they ſhall roar, I ſay, in taking the prey, or, when they take it : or, ſeize on it : and,for when, as Pſal.37.23. the ſteps of a man are eſtabliſhed by the Lord, when he delighteth in his way ; As the Lion is ſaid to roar, when he wants prey : but that in a more lamentable tune, as if he prayed for it, Pſal.104.21. So is he ſaid alſo to roar over his prey, when he hath got it : but that is in another-gates manner, in a more terrible tone, as inſulting and ſhouting over it, ch.31.4. and ſo we may reconcile the Pſalmiſt, and the Prophet.The one affirming, that he roares when he wants prey , the other, that he roares not, to wit, in ſuch manner till he have it, Amos 3. 4. See Ezek 22.25. and the word here uſed,imports ſuch an hideous roaring, as wherewith much indignation is expreſſed, Prov. 20. 2. and 28.15.

and ſhall carry it away] The word here uſed, ſignifies in general, to take, and carry away by force: ought from thoſe that detain it,and are unwilling to part with it. And it is therefore very frequently uſed for the reſcuing, recovering, ſaving, and delivering of one from, or out of the hands of thoſe, that are either ready to ſeize on him, and to miſchief him : or, that having ſeized on him, detain him in captivity and thraldom.So Pſal.17.13. & 18.2,44.& 22. 4, 8. Onely in this place it is uſed, for the violent ſnatching from a man, and going away with what he was quietly, and legally poſſeſſed of before. In oppoſition whereunto, as it is here ſaid by Eſay, of the Aſſyrians, that they ſhould lay hold of the prey, and carry it away : ſo by Micah, who lived in the ſame time with Eſay, of the Jews, by them invaded, that they ſhould lay hold, (on what they deſired to keep back, and ſave from the enemy) but ſhould not be able to deliver it : Uſing the very ſame word there,that Eſay doth here,Mic.6. 14. So that the one ſhould carry away,whatever he laid hands on:the other ſhould not be able to ſecure, or withhold what he had a deſire, and endeavoured to keep.

and none ſhall deliver it] Or, becauſe none can deliver it. They ſhall ſeize upon, and carry away what they pleaſe, becauſe none ſhall be able to make head againſt them, or hinder them : much leſſe to reſcue ought out of their hands. There is no meeting of a lion,when he is ranging about to ſeek prey : nor reſcuing from him what he hath once ſeized on ; unleſſe by ſome extraordinary power,and help from God:as in Sampſons caſe,Judg.14.5,6.and in Davids, 1 Sam. 17.34,36. alluded to by Paul, 2 Tim.4.17. See Pſal. 17.11.ch. 31. 4. But theſe came armed with Gods commiſſion : and there was no ſaving therefore of ought from them, ch.10.5,6.

none ſhall deliver] Or, none ſhall be able to deliver. For the indicative, is oft uſed potentially. So Pſ.50.22. Mic.6.14.

V.30. And in that day they ſhall roar againſt them]Or, as the words lye in hebrew , they ſhall roar, I ſay, againſt them; (for he repeateth again, what he had formerly ſaid,with addition of a new ſimilitude, exceeding the former) then, or, at that time: as ch.2.20.

they ſhall roar] They ſhall make a moſt hideous noiſe. It is the latter word uſed,v.29.

againſt them] Heb. he ſhall roar againſt him. That is, the Aſſyrian army, againſt the Jewiſh people : againſt whom all the foregoing menaces were denounced.

like the roaring of the Sea] With ſuch an hideous noiſe, as the waves,and waters of the ſea, make ; where having born down, or ſurrounded its banks, with much violence and fury,it breaks in upon the land,and carries all away before it. For to ſuch inundations are hoſtile invaſions oft compared in Scripture, Pſalm 93. 3, 4. chapter 8. 7,8. and 17. 12, 13.and 59.19.Jer.50.44.and 51.42,55. Lam. 2.13, and if one look, &c.] This laſt paſſage is, by Interpreters very variouſly rendred. Yet ſo, that herein they all agree, that therein is related the forlorn condition of the Jewiſh people, by the irruption of ſo powerful and prevalent an adverſary, ſo perplexed ; that turn they, and caſt their eye which way ſoever they could, no hope of help, or relief, ſhould appear. This is deſcribed by a metaphor of one ſo ſurpriſed and environed with a thick miſt, or fog, on every ſide,that no glimps of light,can from any part be diſcried. See the like concerning the ſtate of this people, upon the Aſſyrian invaſion, cloſing up the prediction thereof, as here,ſo there, chap. 8.21,22.

and if one look into the land] Or, when he ſhall look unto the land; or, down to the earth, or the ground. Whether a man look downward, or upward. When, rather then if; as not queſtioning whether they will ſo do : but making no doubt, but that they will ſo do ; And,for,when,(as before , and Pſal. 37.23. there cited.) See ch.8.22.

one look] Or, he ſhall look. To wit, the people, before implyed in thoſe words, againſt him. The ſingular number, but collectively taken, or him, for any of them ; and it may here alſo be ſo rendred, they ; or, as ſome other, he ; that is, the enemy ſhall look into the land. &c. As if this his very look (ſo terrible it ſhould be) would ſo damp them, that the whole countrey ſhould ſeem over-ſpread with ſuch hideous darkneſs, as Egypt was, Exod. 10. 22, 23. But the former ſence ſeems more probable, becauſe more agreeable to that, ch.8.21,22. Again, ſome read it, we ſhall look ; as if the Prophet ſpake in his own perſon, including himſelf amongſt the reſt of them,as a member of the ſame body with the reſt ; as he doth, ch. 1.9.& 64.6. But the points, that ſerve for vowells, and the analogy of the verb,in the original, will not admit it, behold darkneſſe]When men ſhall look any way down,either about them, or abroad, (Pſal.142. 4.) they ſhall ſee nothing on every ſide, but darkneſs, over-ſpreading the whole face of the earth ; ch. 60.2.) all involved in the ſame miſeries and calamities, with themſelves. Darkneſſe, for affliction, and diſtreſs, ch. 50. 10. Joel 2. 10. Amos 2. 10. and 8. 9. As on the contrary part: light , for joy, and comfort, Eſth. 8. 16. Pſalm 18. 28. and 97. 11. and 112.4.

and ſorrow] Or,rather,of ſorrow; or, of tribulation, of affliction, of diſtreſs.For the word properly ſignifies a ſtreight,Job 7.11. Pſ.18.6. & 66.4. ch. 63. 9. Yet ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors would have it here ſignifie the Sun ; and the word tranſlated aright the light, in the next branch (unto which they joyn this) the Moon, a name given indifferently,both to Moon,and Sun,Gen.1. 16. Pſalm 136. 7, 9. And ſo the ſence ſhould be, both Sun and Moon ſhall be darkned ; no glimpſe of light from either. Which, though it expreſs as much as the text intendeth;& the like manner of ſpeech may be oft found elſewhere, ch. 24. 13. Ezek. 32. 7. Joel 2. 10, 31. and 3. 15. Matthew 24. 29. Rev. 6. 12. Yet cannot here be received becauſe we never find the Sun elſewhere ſo tearmed , nor doth ought in the text, neceſſarily here require it ; and other of their own, therefore, herein controll them, and render the words, as we have here done. The pauſes in the text here make it very difficult, for the words rendred according to their ordinary acception, run thus;Behold darkneſs;ſtreights;(or, diſtreſs)and light; which a late learned writer therefore rendereth, diſtreſs and light are together, or, diſtreſs with light, diſtreſs continueth even when it is light.See the next clauſe.

and the light is darkned] Some read the words with a twoſold ſupply out of the former branch; And he ſhall look (as before) to the light, upward to the heavens, from whence light cometh) and behold(as above,)it is darkned.Others, taking into this branch the laſt words of the former,and repeating again the next before it;the darkneſs of diſtreſs;ſo ſoon,as he(,that is,the enemy)ſhall enlighten all (making of the noun, a verb) and ſo the ſence ſhould be, that the glory and luſtre of his army, ſo ſoon as it ſhewed it ſelf, ſhould damp and darken all with them. Not unlike that,he ſhall deſtroy him,with the brightneſs of his apperance, 2 Theſ.2. 8.Others again,the light it ſelf ſhall be affliction;(that is,the hope it ſelf, that they had conceived of ſome help and relief, ſhall vex them(when it ſhall be darkned, that is,be defeated,and prove helpleſs. Theſe ſeveral verſions and interpretations I relate, becauſe they have authors of great note abeting them; but ſeem much to force and tear the text:and I adhere therefore here,rather,to our own verſion,as flowing moſt naturally from the words of the text, It is,as if he had ſaid; when they ſhall look up towards heaven, as in miſery men are wont to do, chap. 8. 21. he ſhall ſee no more light,hope of help and relief from above,then from below.

in the heavens thereof] That is, in the land of Judah, before ſpoken of;in the heavens,that cover that part of the earth, wherein that people dwell, The heaven,or skie, is in Scripture, as alſo in other prophane writings, ſaid to be darkned to men, when they are in ſuch grief,or fear, that they have no joy of the light,becauſe dark and gloomy daies work much upon men ſpirits, Job.24.13,17.Amos,8.9. as on the contrary, the heavenly bodies are ſaid to give light,and to ſhine forth with more then ordinary brightneſs to men, when they have much matter of mirth and rejoycing afforded them,Pſal.112.4. chap.30,26,becauſe the ſight of light is cheerfull,Eccl.11.7.

the heavens thereof] The heavens. So called,of a word that ſignifies to drop,Deut.32. 2. becauſe the rain and dew drops down from thence,Deut.33.28,and his heavens,there;as,her heavens, here, And ſome therefore render it, in its diſtillations, or rains,that is,to wit, the light,is wont to diſperſe,and drop, or dart upon the earth. But the word,light, is maſculine, the pronoun here feminine. Others read it,in the deſtructions thereof, or, its ruines,to wit, of the land. Becauſe the ſame verb, ſometime ſignifies alſo to deſtroy, Hoſ. 10. 2. the verb is but once found in this ſenſe,twice in the former: the noun in this place alone. Which, therefore, the forementioned learned Writer deriveth from the Ethiopick language, wherein it hath a notion of reſt,Matth.11. 28, 29, & 26.45. and thus rendereth the text, Behold darkneſs; diſtreſſe, or,anguiſh with light; (anguiſh continuing even when it is light, or light is looked for)it groweth dark in its reſts;that is,they meet with darkneſs there, where they might promiſe themſelves reſt. But of this let others deem.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. IN the year that Uzziah died] Here beginneth the fourth Viſion,or Sermon, of this our Prophet, recorded in this Book.Or,according to ſome,the ſecond book of hisProphecies,which they ſuppoſed to have been digeſted, according to the reigns of thoſe four Kings under whome he propheſied.ch.1.1.So that all the three fore-going Sermons,or Prophecies, ſhould be delivered in the reign of Uzziah,this onely, in the beginning of Iothams reign: the next,ch.7.8.&c.under Ahaz: ſome other under Hezekiah. But of this,ſee more on v.8.

that Uzziah]Of this King and his acts, written by this our Prophet,ſee ch. 1.1.

Uzziah died] It is the manner of thoſe that write Hiſtories, or ſome remarkable relations, to conſign or date them by ſome ſpecial note of thoſe times, whereat they begin their relations, or, in which the things related were done : as the year of ſuch a Kings reign,or ſuch an ones birth or death; or ſome other memorable accident : as Amos, by the earthquake that fell out in this Kings daies, Amos 1. 1. and Iſaiah here by his death. Concerning which,yet there is ſome variety of opinions. For ſome would have the apparition here ſpoken of,to have been exhibited, and ſeen in Uzziah's reign, but in the laſt year of it, before his deceaſe:as Amos his was,before the earthquake:otherwiſe,ſay they, why ſhould he not rather ſay,in the firſt year of Jothams reign;then, in the year that Uzziah died.But unto others this ſeems not ſo probable:who therefore ſay that the death of Uzziah is mentioned, to fix the time of it more certainly,and to avoid all ambiguity: becauſe of Iothams reign, there might be a two-fold reconing : the one,from the time that he governed the Kingdome, and exerciſed Royal authority,as next heir to the Crown,after that Uzziah was ſmitten with leproſie and lived ſequeſtred,as a Leper,2 Chr.26.21. The other, from the time of Uzziah,deceaſe : when he ſucceeded him in the Throne,for whom before he ſate on it,2 Chr. 26.23.& 27.1.Nor want there thoſe among the Jewiſh Doctors, who ſuppoſe,that by Uzziah's death is here meant:not his natural deceaſe, but his civil death:ſuch as the lepers eſtate was eſteemed, Num. 12. 12,and as David accounted his,when in likelihood,under Saul, he was debarred from acceſs to Gods houſe, and free commerce with Gods people, Pſal.31. 12. and 84. 2,9,10. with 1.Sam. 26. 19. and Heman deemed his in ſome depth of affliction, Pſal.88.3. But this ſeems not ſo ſound: And when the text taken properly, affords a fit ſenſe;nor doth ought appear in the context,or other places collated,that may croſs it;it is not ſafe running out into metaphorical ſences.

I ſaw alſo] As if this had reference to ſome fore-going viſion. The hebrew is,And I ſaw;and it is true,the copulative is uſed ſome time,for alſo,as Jer.1.3.but it is uſed alſo,to begin a relation,without any dependence upon former diſcourſe,or matter;as ch.2.2.and it may well here be rendred,then I ſaw, with reference to the time of the occurent here expreſſed. For ſo is the copulative uſed,Levit. 4.3.& 6.4.

I ſaw,&c]The preſent chapter conſiſts of two parts;a relation of a moſt glorious apparition,v.1.7.and a narration of amoſt dreadful Meſſage,that the prophet was ſent to deliver unto his people,v.8.13.

I ſaw]I ſaw in a ſpiritual extaſie, and a ſymbolical apparition,as Eze.1.1.Joh.12.41.Act.10.10,11,&22.17.2.Cor.12.2.Rev.1.12.See ch.1.1.& 2.1.

the Lord] The word here uſed,is not Jehovah,(which is yet commonly ſo rendered) but Adonai, which properly ſo ſignifies. and is given unto Chriſt,Pſal.110.1.from which place Chriſt averreth his diety,Matth.22,42,45. Whence ſome infer,that it was the ſecond Perſon,the eternal Son of God, who is here ſaid to ſit, as King, on the Throne:or the Spirit, or third perſon, that ſpake unto the Prophet,ver.9.And it is true indeed, that the Evangeliſt John, ſaith of Chriſt that Iſaiah in this Viſion, beheld his glory, Joh.12.41,as alſo that the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that by the Holy Ghoſt Eſay ſpake unto their Fathers. The words here enjoyned him, by him that ſate on the Throne,v.9.Act. 22. 25. and ſo,queſtionleſs did he ſpeak alſo, whatſoever,as from God, he delivered to his people. But to exclude the Perſon of the Father, from ſitting on the Throne in ſuch apparitions,is not ſafe. The rather,for that in ſuch apparitions wherein the Perſons are diſtinguiſhed. the Father is ſtill ſaid to ſit on the Throne,and the Son to be preſented unto him, Dan. 7, 9. 13. or the Son,and the Spirit, to be before the Throne; not on the Throne, Rev.4.2.3.& 5.6.& 6.16.&1.4.&4.5.But in this apparition.no ſuch diſtinction of perſons appearing; I ſuppoſe it ſafeſt to ſay, that one God Jehovah,ver.3,5. the onely true God, Deut.6.4.who is alſo called Adonai,or Lord;as the only Soveraign Lord of all,Joh.3.11. Mic.4.13.Mal.1.6.in three diſtinct Perſons, as the allegations abovementioned ſhew:and that plural term alſo uſed,v.8.who ſhall go for us?(not unlike thoſe,our image,Gen.1.26. and one of us,Gen 3.22.)ſeemeth to imply.If it be demanded, how the Prophet could ſee God, when as it is in Scripture ſaid, that No man hath ſeen God at any time, Jon.1.18.1 Joh.4.12.and whom no man hath either ſeen, or can ſee,1 Tim.6.16. The anſwer is eaſie, that no man can ſee him in his Eſſence,as he is in himſelf; ſince that he is a Spirit,Joh.4. 34.and a Spirit cannot with corporal eyes be ſeen;Luk. 24. 38, 39. nor can he be ſeen in the infinite excellency of his Majeſty, Exod. 33.20.1 Tim.6.16. but yet in ſuch viſible modules of glory,as he is pleaſed to repreſent himſelf unto the view of the creature, ſo he may,and hath oft been ſeen,Exod,24.9,10,11.Amos9.1.and in ſuch manner Eſay here ſaw him.In regard whereof, inſtead of what the Prophet ſaith of himſelf here,I ſaw the Lord : the Evangeliſt ſaith of him,he ſaw his glory Joh.12.51.

ſitting upon a Throne]As a Royal Soveraign,1 King.2.12.in his Temple,(which by the words following,appears, v.4.6.) as in his Court,or Palace,here upon earth. See ch. 14, 13. or,as a Judg on the bench,ready to execute judgment, as Dan.7. 9, 11. Joel.3.12. Rev.6,16.& 20.11,12.See ch.3.13,14.

high,and lifted up]That is exceeding high,and ſtately:as,men lofty,and lifted up,ch 2.12.and cedars high, and lifted up,ch. 2. 13, or, high in regard of the frame, and making of it : lifted up,or ſet aloft in regard of ſituation, and place. (ſuch in ſome ſort, as Solomons was;ſtately to ſight,and lofty for ſite, 1 King.10.18.20,(as high, in likelyhood,as the Porch,before Solomons Temple;ſaid to be 120 cubits high.2 Chr.3,4. As we ſee with us in ſtately ſtructures,the portall,or gatehouſe,as we commonly tearm it(far higher,many times, then the main body of the whole fabrick beſides.See further on ver. 2.above it.

and his train filled the Temple]He appeared,as ſitting on a ſtately throne;ſo clad alſo in his royal robes,Pſal.93:1.

his train]Or,as ſome render it,the train thereof,to wit,of his Throne ſuppoſing the utmoſt part of that chair of State which he ſate on,to be thereby meant. But we find not the word; whereby this is here expreſſed, to be any where ſo uſed,It is applyed ever to apparel;and ſignifies the skirts, that is, ſuch parts of it as hang down to the ground : or being longer, and of more worth then is fit to be trailed along upon the ground, are with Perſons of State born up by others:and it is not amiſs,therefore,rendred here,his train,or,his skirts.For the word here is plural:nor is it ever read otherwiſe, that is,the train,or skirts of his robes.As her skirts,Lam.1.9,and thy skirts Jer.13.22,26.that is,the skirts of their garments.

filled the Temple,]Or,Palace.For that the word moſt properly ſignifies,Pſal.45.8.Prov,30.28. Dan.4.4. & 6.18. and ſo it would be rendred,Pſal.11.4.There is a queſtion moved among Interpreters where the Throne here mentioned,was ſituate ,whether within the Temple, or without it;which I ſuppoſe, may not amiſs be thus reconciled.The Temple, taken in a large ſenſe, comprehendeth the whole Fabrick, conſiſting both of the houſe, which was all over covered;& the two Courts alſo before it,which were(beſides the cloyſters about,& within them)uncovered;as the like, before great mens houſes, are alſo with us. So is the word, Temple, taken, Jer. 7. 10. & 26. 10. See chap. 1. 12. Secondly, it is taken ſometime for the houſe only, 1 King. 6. 9. divided into three parts; the porch, or portall;the Palace, and the Oracle, 1 King. 6.3, 5. Now it ſeems to me, that the throne, or chair of State, was ſo ſituate in the porch, or portall of the Temple,(the height whereof, you had before; and which comes within the compaſs of that appellation) that the train hanging down from it, though ſeated far above the door of the Temple, entred into the main body of it, and filled the whole Palace. Being ſo ſituate then, it ſtood in ſome ſort without ,the Temple becauſe, not within the Palace, moſt ſtrictly ſo termed;and yet within the Temple to, becauſe the porch, or portall, was a part of it. This, the rather I incline to, becauſe God is generally deemed to appear here, as ſitting in, or unto judgment. Now the manner of the Kings in thoſe times, was to ſit for judicature, in the ports, or gates, (which doubtleſſe were not without porches) either of their palaces, or of the city. See 1 King. 7. 7. Jer. 26. 10. & 37. 13. & 38. 10. Beſides that, the quick coal taken from the Altar, implyes as much : the Altar on which the fire was perpetually burning, being ſituate in the inner court, againſt the front of the houſe, 1 King. 8. 22. Ezek. 40. 47. But ſee further, on ver.6.

filled the Temple] As, when the cloud covered the tent of the congregation, the glory of God filled the Tabernacle ; in Moſes his time, at the dedication of the Tabernacle, Exod 40. 34. and, the cloud filled the houſe, at Solomons dedication of the Temple, in ſo glorious a manner, that the Prieſt could not enter to do ought there, 1 Kings 8.10,11.

V.2. Above it ſtood the Seraphims] After the deſcription of Gods majeſtical ſeſſion upon his Throne, is related his attendance, correſpondent to his State : as Princes and Potentates are not wont to ſit in State alone; but with their Nobles, and chief Officers attending upon them : ſo hath God, here, his glorious Miniſters attending upon him : and ſo Dan. 7.10.

Above it] Or, as ſome, About the upper part of it : to wit, the Throne, To clear this, ſome tell us, that whereas there were three rowes of chambers built on either ſide the body of the Temple, one over another, 1 King. 5. 6. the footſtool, as Exod. 24. 10, or loweſt part of the Throne , was eaven with the pavement of the ſecond chamber : and the uppermoſt part of it, about which the Seraphim attended : eaven with the floor of the third : above which, the reſt of that ſhape of a man, wherein the Lord manifeſted himſelf, reached unto the roof of that row. But I gueſs rather, that the Lord appeared in a far more ſtately and lofty manner : his head and upper parts above the Throne reaching from it well near to the roof of the porch : the Throne he ſate on, reaching from thence downward, unto the top of the doors of the Temple By which the train of his Majeſticall robes, filled the whole houſe. So that the Seraphs might wel ſtand attending him,above the Throne, as the text expreſly ſaith,the bodily ſhape of humane nature,wherein he appeared, ſo far exceeding the Throne, whereon he ſate.For, as for thoſe, that render the word above him, they ſeem not to conſider how incongruous a thing it is, for the ſervant to ſtand over his maſter, on whom he attends. ſee v. 1. lifted up. The celeſtial Spirits ſtand above, neer the upper part of Gods Throne : the faithful on earth, as attending at his foot-ſtool, chap. 66. 1. Pſal. 99.5.

ſtood] Sate not, as he did : but ſtood attending on him : the uſual poſture of ſervants attending on their maſters : of Officers, on their Lords, 1 Kings 1. 2. & 10. 12. & 17. 1. 2 Kings 25.19. Prov. 22. 29. as ready to go and come at command, about whatſoever they ſhall enjoyn them , Matth. 8. 9. applyed to the Angels, both here, and elſewhere, Dan. 7. 10. Luk. 1. 19. as miniſtring Spirits, ready to be ſent abroad, to execute what God pleaſeth to enjoyn, either in mercy,or in wrath, Pſal. 103. 20, 21. ch. 37. 36. Heb. 1. 14.

the Seraphims] Or, Seraphs. A counterfeit Authour of pretended antiquity, whom our Popiſh Writers follow, makes theſe Seraphs, the firſt of thoſe nine orders of bleſſed Spirits, as he reckons them : and he affirms them to be ſeven degrees above the Arch-Angels,(being, according to his account,the eighth) and never to ſtir out of the glorious preſence of God, as ſtanding here about his throne. So, that, as he ſtates the rank, thoſe Seraphs are the higheſt ; and the Angels the loweſt. True it is, that ſome diſtinction of degrees among thoſe glorious creatures ſeems to be intimated by a place in Daniel, ch. 11. 13. where Michael is ſaid to be one,(as moſt) the firſt (as ſome)of the chief Princes.Which can hardly be underſtood other, then Angels. For, whether verſion we admit, a chiefty of ſome, in regard of others, ſeems to be intimated. But to ſet out certain ſeveral and diſtinct ranks of them, aſſign them their ſtations ; deſign them their offices, and cut them out their work. is a preſumptuous attempt of ignorance and arrogance, joyning together, for the producing of a groundleſs and frivolous conceit. Nor is that leſs ridiculous, which ſome of them tell us, that Seraphin, and ſo Cherubin, with n, ſignifies order ; but Seraphim, and ſo Cherubim, with m ſignifies the ſpirits of each order. Whereas the one is but the Chaldee, or Syrian rather, plural termination; the other, the Hebrew. But to leave them to their idle and frivilous fancies, the Seraphim, or Seraphs, rather then Seraphims, (as Cherubs, Cherubim, or Cherubin, rather then Cherubims, or Cherubins ; and Baals, or Baalim, not Baalims, Jer. 2. 23. becauſe im, is the plural termination in the Hebrew ; as is es, or s, with us in Engliſh : and the one therefore is ſuperfluous) are glorious Spirits : ſo termed from a word that ſignifies to fire, or to burn : as ſome think, becauſe they are of a fiery nature,or ſubſtance ; fire being the moſt ſubtile of the elements: as purer then the air,or the pureſt part of the ayr: and coming neereſt therefore to the nature of ſpirits. Others, in regard of their fervency of love unto God. And others again, in regard of their agility : the like unto that, which appears in fire, or of their ſplendor and brightneſs, Rev.10.1. It is ſaid indeed, that God maketh the winds his meſſengers, (as he did in fetching back his fugitive ſervant Jonas, Jon. 1.4.) and the flame of fire, or, flaming fire, his miniſters ; which the Apoſtle by way of inverſion, applying to the Angels, ſaith, He maketh his Angels Spirits, and his miniſters, a flame of fire, Heb. 1. 7. (whence ſome fondly gather a diſtinction of Angels, that ſome of them are of an airy ſubſtance, therefore called Spirits:ſome of a fiery, therefore termed Seraphs.) And we read of Angels appearing in the likeneſs of horſemen and chariots of fire, 2 King.6.17.and of the Cherubs, or ſome one of them, with flaming ſword, or, ſwords ; ſet at the entrance into Paradiſe, to keep man out, Gen 3.24. and it may well be, that theſe did likewiſe (though having the ſhape of men, as thoſe other of horſemen,and with thoſe Cherubs, the figure of a blade;yet)appear, as all of a flaming fire ; and thereof were ſo termed:but of the reaſon of the name,here,and no where elſe given to theſe ſpirituall attendants, we have nothing more then meer conjecture. Yet becauſe the word is the ſame with that, whereby thoſe fiery ſerpents, are deſigned, that were ſent to ſting with fiery torment and inflammation, thoſe mutinous and rebellious ones in the Wilderneſs, Numb.21. 6. Some thence ſuppoſe, they are here ſo called,becauſe to be executioners of Gods fiery wrath on theſe obſtinate and refractory wretches : againſt whom an heavy doom is here in the words following denounced. And we read of an Angel, that had power over the fire:and to ſcorch men with fire, Rev.14.18. & 16.8. But of this alſo, as of the former. Concerning the number of them that appeared here, is ſome doubt alſo made. The moſt affirm them to have been two only ; anſwerable to thoſe two ſmall Cherubs in the Tabernacle, on the lid of the Ark, Exod. 37. 7, 10. and to thoſe two large ones in the Temple, that reached with their wings ſtretched out from wall to wall, in the Holy of Holies, 1 King. 6.27. againſt which ſome object, that the word is not dual, but plural : and howſoever that exception be but weak ; for the plural is oft uſed, as well of two, as of more, Levit 5. 11. & 14. 22. yet the aſſertion is uncertain ; ſince that we find four ſuch in an apparition, Ezek. 1.5. and myriades, yea millions of them,Pſal.68. 17.Dan. 7.10.nor is it neceſſary, that the number of the Seraphs, ſhould here anſwer the number of the Cherubs, either in the Tabernacle, or in the Temple,more then the like elſewhere. How many therefore there were of them, cannot certainly be determined : but hereof, ſee more,v.3,4. The deſcription of them, in what ſhape they appeared, here followeth.

each one had ſix wings] Heb. ſix wings, ſix wings, (the reduplication uſed by way of diſtribution : as morning, morning, for every morning, ch. 28. 19. & 50. 4.) were to one, one, for each one ; as Ezek. 1. 6. & 10. 14,21. in which laſt place alſo,it is ſaid, four,four, to one ; for, four, to each one : as ſix, ſix, here. And herein theſe differed from the form of thoſe two Cherubs,in the inner part of the Temple,& thoſe alſo that appeared in a viſion to Ezekiel; that thoſe in the Temple had but one pair of wings, 1 King.6. 27. thoſe in Ezekiel two pair a piece,Ezek. 1. 6. & 10.21. theſe had three pair, ſix a piece;(as thoſe four living wights had, Rev. 4.8. one pair on their ſhoulders,wherewith they flew; another,as may de deemed,on either ſide of their breaſts,which being caſt upward, might cover their faces:and the third about their hips, which falling a croſs, might cover their lower parts.For ſuch was the uſe of them, deſcribed in the words next enſuing.

with twain he covered his face]With one pair of them,to wit,thoſe on either ſide the breaſt,each of them covered(not Gods face,as many Interpreters would have it,thence extracting myſteries of not ſeeing Gods face,Exo.33.20.as implying an inhibition,of prying curiouſly into Gods ſecret counſels,and hidden miſteries,Deut.29.29.Pr.25. 2. Act.1.7.) but his own face, as not enduring to behold the reſplendent brightneſs of Gods glory & Majeſty;no more then mortal creatures are,with open eye,able to behold the Sun ſhining forth in his full ſtrength.Howbeit,I dare not avow, as ſome have done,that the Angels thus are ſaid to cover their faces, in Gods preſence : becauſe they appear before God in their own righteouſneſs:but that chriſtian men need not ſo to do : they may look on him with their faces uncovered : becauſe they appear before him in the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 5.21.For neither are Chriſtian men,while they live here,ſo pure, in regard of freedome from the taint of ſin : as the Angels are, who never had, nor have any the leaſt ſpot or ſpeck of it : nor doth that righteouſneſſe , which by imputation accreweth to them from Chriſt, further, in this this regard,avail,then to cause them to be reputed as perfectly conformable to Gods Law, which by vertue of their own inherent righteousnes,the se blessed & glorious Spirits,both now are, & ever were,Nor did the Apostle, in the place mentioned,intend any such matter,as to make any comparison in this kind, between Christian men and Angels ; but between the faithful before Christs coming, and those since his revelation in the flesh; and that, not in regard of righteousnes imputed to them; for,and from Christ (wherein there is no difference at all between those faithful of former times; and those that now live and believe , (but in regard of the clearer manifestation of the Mysteries of the Gospel unto the one above the other,as elfe-where,he makes use of somewhat the like phrase in comparing the fcanter light and fight of God, which the faithful attain here, with the fuller and clearer light, and fight of God and the things of God that they are to enjoy hereafter, 1 Cor. 13. 12. as by the whole tenour of his discourse there, may evidently appear.But that men in Christ, and partakers of righteousnes, as well imputed from him, as imputed for him, have been smitten with such a reverend dread of Gods Majesty, as hath caused them in like manner to cover their faces in Gods presence; as the Angels here are said to do ; and that upon far lefs glorious apparitions then this was;is apparent by the practice both of Moles,Exek.3.6. and of Elias,1 King.19.13.

and with twain he covered his feet] A second use which the Seraphs made of another pair of their wings;to wit,the nethermost of them about the hips, rather, then at some would have it, about the feet: that as with the middlemost of them; (both being under, or within compass of their arms)they cover their faces; fo with these lowermost, their feet;not Gods feet, as some fondly,as of his face, the like before;(thereby, fay they, intimating, that neither Gods face,or his upper parts,that is,things done before the world began:nor his feet, or his lower parts,that is, things after the worlds end,are to be curiously enquired into)but their own ;where by feet,moft underftand that part of the body that is properly and ufually fo tearmed, wherewith we tread upon the ground : which being in that regard more fubject to foil : much washing of feet was therefore ufed in those parts,Gen.19.2.& 24. 32.Judg.19.21.1 Sam.25.4.Luk.7.44. Joh.13.10.might feem to be no unfit emblem of fome defilement. But I fuppofe rather, with fome other, thatby feet,(as in the Hebrew tongue frequently) by a modeft form of fpeech,are underftood thofe fecret parts, which the Apoftle tearms uncomely, 1 Cor. 12. 23.and which nature hath taught many even favage people,to cover,whe yet go with all,or moft of the body befides,ftark naked.So is the word,without queftion, or contradiction of any ufed by this our Prophet;chap.7.20. fo it is by moft Interpreters taken, Gen.49. 10.Deut.28.57.and Ezek.16.25. And the Jews call urine,the water of the feet; fo reading the text,2 King.18.27. & ch. 36. 12.where Rabfhakeh ufed(as they fuppofe, and it may well fo be)a broader and more unfeemly term. The bleffed Angels therefore appearing in humane fhape, did with one pair of their wings,the one of them croffing the other, veil and cover thofe parts, as deeming them to have fome uncomlinefs in them,both our firft parents,and their poferity moft of them,are careful to conceal and keep out of fight,Gen.3.7.and which willfully to difcover, is generally deemed as a note of impudency ; or fhame, and mifery, to have againft the will difcovered unto,or by others,Gen.9.21,27. Hab.2, 15, 16.See ch.3. 17.Now this they do not, in regard of any taint of fin,as of fpiritual filth in them:(no more,then in regard of any guilt of fin,they are faid to have hid their faces) though in that regard,our firft parents fometime fo did, Gen.3. 7. but as they veiled their faces,as having their eyes dazled with the exceeding brightnefs of his glorious appearance;the light whereof, with open face,they could not endure fo they cover their feet(take the word which way you will)as abafhed,in the apprehenfion of their own infirmity and imperfection, in comparifon of Gods incomparable and incomprehenfible perfections:to which purpofe,fome,apply the fe paffages in the book of Job. 4.18.& 15.15. which more fully to have reference to the fall of the apoftatical Spirits. But certain it is, that the neerer the creature makes his approaches to God ; and in the more glorious manner God manifefteth himfelf unto him; the more apprehenfive he is of his own meanneſs, baſeneſs,vileneſs,nothingneſs,in regard of Gods infinite greatneſs, ch.40.17.See Gen 18.27.Job 38.1. & 40.4.& 42.5,6. The like importeth that, Ezek. 1. 11. where the Cherubs are faid, with one pair of their wings, to have covered the y bodies. Nor can I conceive, Why the covering of the body there, or feet here,fhould denote their unfpotted purity,as fome great ones would have it.

and with twain he did fly] The uppermoft pair at their fhoulders were made ufe of, for flight: not that they were then flying to and fro,or,at prefent in flight; but that with them they ufed to flie,and had them ftretched out, as ready preft for that employment : like thofe of the Cherubs,1 King.6.27.& Ezek.1.11. Whereas the other two pair were clapped clofe to their bodies : whereby is intimated, their promptneſs to, and fwiftneſs in, the execution of Gods Will and Work, whenfoever he fhould appoint them any fervice whatfoever,Pfal. 10.20. Matth.6.10.Hence it is faid, that one of them flew unto the Prophet,v.6.and of the Angel Gabriel,that he became flying fwiftly,to Dan.9.21.

V.3. And one cried to another] Their fhape was before,and the ufe of fome parts of them ; to wit,their wings,now followes their prefent exercife:fuch as is faid to be the conftant employment of thofe four wights,that attended before the Throne,Rev.4.8, one cried to another]Heb.*this to this*as Exod.14.20.Pfal.55.7. not one with another, as finging in a conſort joyntly together;and yet is the word alfo fometime found fo ufed. Of which, fee Lam.3.40.but one to another, as by courſe finging out the praiſes of him, on whofe wing he attended;in fuch manner,as the men and women did,anfwering one another,upon the delivery of them at the red Sea,Exod.15. 1,21.and the Levites,at the laying of the foundation of the fecond Temple,Ezr.3.11.And hence fome gather,that there were but two of them,See further,v.4.

and faid, holy, holy, holy, A three-fold repetition,as fome would have it,intimating the Trinity of Perſons,in the Unity of the Deity as fome alſo,that of Jehovah, God, and Jehovah again, Deut.6.4. But there is no great likelyhood of that heje : and in the latter place much lefs.Others rather fuppofe,fuch repetition to denote the fuperlative eminency of Gods holineſs ;as if they had faid, holy, yea thrice holy;or infinitly holy:fo Rev.4.8.and we fhall find the like repetition ufed,for more vehemency, Jer. 7.4.& 22.29.Ezek.21.9.14. 27.For that of the Jewiſh Rabbins,concerning the three worlds,for the creation whereof,God fhould be pronounced thrice holy,holy,in creating the fupercelestial world, the Angels; holy, in creating the celeſtial world, the heavens:and holy, in creating the fubcelestial world, they creatures all beneath the heavens : as alſo, that of fome others, that this threefold repetition, fhould have reference to the threefold diſtribution of time, into paſt, preſent, and future; and fo intimate the eternity of Gods holineſs, Rev.1.4. feem both, though true, yet not at all to the mind or intention of the text.

is the Lord of hoſts]Or, be the Lord of Hoſts;that is,as he is moſt holy in himſelf,and none holy like him, 1 Sam.2.2. ſo let him be acknowledged of all creatures,to be ſuch the ſum and ſubſtance of the ſecond Perfition,Matth.6.9. Hallowed be thy Name;or,as ſome,ſhall be: as approving Gods holineſs, and the juſtneſs of his judgment thereafter denounced, ver. 9. 11.and fhortly to be executed on that obſtinate people;according to that of the Pſalmiſt,The Lord is righteous in all his wayes,and holy in all his works, Pſal. 145.17.Of the title here given to him,ſee ch.1.9.

the whole earth is full of his glory[Heb. the fulneſs of his glory,(as the fulneſs of the earth,Pſal. 24. 1.)is, ſhall be,or let be,the whole earth;or as ſome ,this whole land.Theſe expound what is here ſpoken of the land of Judea, wherein God made his more ſpecial abode, and did in more ſpecial manner manifeſt his glory, and make known himſelf.Levit.26.12. Pſal.76. 1.and in more peculiar manner alſo yet,in regard of his Temple,which was filled with his glory at the firſt dedication of it, 1 King 8. 11. And which ſhould be filled with his glory, by the execution of his juſtice, 2 Num.14.21.Others extend it to be the wide world,ſpoken,as in way of enunciation,that all the world, and whatſoever therein is,doth manifeſt,and ſet forth Gods glory:according to that of the Pſalmiſt How excellent is thy name in all the earth ! that is, throughout the whole world, Pſal.8.1,9. or by way of exhortation, inciting all men to take notice of it,and to acknowledg it:according to that, Pſal.99. 3.Let them praiſe thy great and dreadful name; for it is holy:and,Let the whole earth be filled with his glory, Pſal. 27.19.or, laſtly, by way of prediction.a s foretelling, that in ſucceeding ages,not that land of Jury only : but the whole world ſhould behold, and partake of that glory of God, which the Jewes in more ſpecial manner alone then enjoyed : according to thoſe Prophecies, All people ſhall ſee his glory,Iſay.59.19.& And the glory of the Lord ſhall be revealed; and all fleſh ſhall together ſee it, chap.40.5. The firſt of theſe ſeems moſt probable.For the phraſe,ſee the very like,chap.8.

V.4.And the poſts,&c.]Here followeth the dreadfull effects, that enſued upon the crying,or loud ſinging of thoſe bleſſed and glorious creatures, implying matter of much wrath,already conceived, and ready to be manifeſted,and put in execution. The Temple doors, and poſts ſhaken ; and the body of the Temple, filled with ſmoak.

the poſts] That ſtood on either ſide of the door. The word is no where elſe read in Scripture. Yet, becauſe it differeth in one point, or vowel onely,from that which ſignifies cubits,ſome of the Jewiſh-Doctors ſo expound it:herethence conceiving the poſts,or the tranſomes removed.ſome cubits,two or three,from the place where they formerly were fixed.

of the door]Heb.of the tranſomes;or,the threſholds:as Amos 9.1.to wit,the upper,and the lower, whereunto thoſe poſts were faſtned, the upper reſting on them at the topithe lower,at the bottom,bearing them up;and the doors between the poſts ſo large,and ſo weighty;as Joſephus informeth us, that twenty men could hardly open, or ſhut them;being on either ſide,both below, and above, with great round ſockets of brafs, deeply entred into mortaiſes,made proportionably in either, that they might by the help thereof, turn to and fro.In regard whereof, thoſe tranſomes,or,threſholds, are here rendred the door ; becauſe, either put for the door ; or becauſe the doors and they are deemed to have moved here together, the one with the other. The word is ſometime rendred poſt, Exod. ch. 21.ver.6. and poſts,Amos 9.1 .but the threſholds, or tranſomes, and poſts,are diſtinguiſhed,Exod.43. 8.

moved] Or, ſhook; or, trembled : as chap. 7. 2. & 19. 1. & 24. 19.& Amos.9. 1. where the like is faid of them, preſaging ſuch a commotion as ſhould be in the State, chap. 24. ver. 19.

at the voyce of him that cried] That is, as ſome, at the voyce of one of the Angels ; not crying, or ſinging aloud altogether: but in courſe, one by one, either of them in his turn. Whence alſo they conclude them to have been two only. But others render it,at the voyce that cried: that is, of the voyce,whether of one alone, or of all of them joyntly,(howbeit the words may well be rendered, at a voyce that cryed;or,of one that cryed:as ch. 40. 3. to wit, of God himſelf : whoſe voyce is ſaid to have ſhaken the earth,Heb 12. 26. See Pſal.29.3,9 & 104.7. This implyeth the terribleneſs of the voyce of an angry God, making the very ſenceleſs creatures, and thoſe of them that ſeem firmeſt ſtrongeſt, and beſt ſetled, to ſhake again;as with a blow given at his command, Amos, 9. 1. ſo with a noyſe onely made here. For whether it were by a voyce comming immediately from him ; or upon the voyce of thoſe celeſtial Spirits ſinging his praiſes; the power whereby this was effected, was not theirs, but his, as that power whereby Jericho was diſmantled,upon the ſound of the rams horns,Ioſh.6.20.

and the houſe] That is, the Temple, or, the palace diſtinguiſhed, both from the Courts without,and from the Oracle within;1 King. 6.2,5,17.2 Chr.8.9.

was filled with ſmoak] It is ſaid,ſometime,to have been filled with a cloud,in token of Gods acceptation,Exod.40.34.1 King 8.10. but here,with ſmoak,as a token of his indignation, as a ſmoak is ſaid to have gone out of his noſtrils, when he was angry, Pſal.18.8.See alſo Deut.29.20. And hence further,ſome gather an argument,to prove, that the Throne was ſtaiute within the houſe, at the upper end of it;and that this ſmoak came from his face there ſitting. See further hereof,on v.6.

V.5. Then ſaid I, woe is me, &c.] The prophet here proceeds, to ſhew how himſelf was affected with the ſight of this glorious appearance, together with that terrible voyce,and the dreadful effects of it. He was exceedingly amazed, abaſhed, and confounded in himſelf, in conſideration of his own wants, weakneſs, inward remainders of corruption ; and by reaſon thereof , unworthineſs to appear in the preſence of ſo glorious a Majeſty, and unfitneſs to praiſe him, ſo as thoſe bleſſed Spirits did, Job 42. 6. Pſal.50.16.and withall, (it may well be) laying to heart thoſe fad ſigns of Gods heavy diſpleaſure,as Hab.3.16. See the like dread that the faithful have been ſmitten with, upon the appearance either of God himſelf, or of Meſſengers from him, Dan.8.17,18.& 10. 7,15, 16.Luke 1. 12.Heb.12.21.

Then]Heb.And.So ch.5.17.or, as ſome,wherefore: as ch.3.17. the one,as intimating the time:the other,the cauſe.

woe is me]As,woe to us,1.am.5.1.0. See ch.11.4.

For I am undone] Heb. cut off. As the word is moſt commonly uſed,ſo ch.15. 1.Hoſ. 10.7. 15. I am a forlorn man, ſure to periſh. Others render it, for I thought within my ſelf, as followeth : and ſo the word ſignifieth, 2 Sam,8,3,5 & Pſal.50. 21. But it is there in an active ; here, in a paſſive form. Others again, and they not a few, following the old Latine, Becauſe I have been ſilent:as if that were the thing that ſo much troubled the Prophet,that he had been ſilent, and ſo faulty, in forbearing to reprove the ſins, and exceſſes, as well of Prince, as of People. So a word indeed neer unto it ſignifies; whence our Engliſh,dumb,ch.23. 2. Amos 5.13.and this alſo ſignifies ſometime, but in another form, to ceaſe, or forbear, Jer. 14.16. Lam.3.49. though, in this alſo, ſome take it, in the ſame form,Pſal. 49. 12. 13, 20.reading there, the beaſts that are dumb. Others laſtly, becauſe the word is paſſive, I was ſilenced, or, brought to ſilence:as they alſo render the word,ch.15.1.that, is I was ſo aſtoniſhed, that I could not ſpeak, as Pſal. 77, 4. I was as one ſtricken ſtark dumb,Luk.1,20. but the firſt ſeems to be the genuine ſenſe, of the place, and is the uſual ſignification of the word. So Judg.13.23.we are undone, we ſhall dye. For conſidering the words of God, to Moſes,Exod.33.20. no man ſhall ſee me and live: and by the Angels cry underſtanding whom it was that he ſaw, he began to deem himſelf,as they themſelves,neer unto death.

becauſe I am a man of uncleane lips ; uncleane lips as uncircumciſed lips,Exod.16. 12,30. For, unclean, and uncircumciſed, are both joyned together, ch.52.1.oppoſed to a pure, or, a purified lip, Zeph. 3.9.the uncleanneſs of the ſpeaker is, of tongue,or, language,as Gen. 11. 1, 6, 7, 9. but for all manner of pollution, remainders whereof abide ſtill,ſo long as they make abode here, in the beſt, Math,7.11. Rom.7.17,20.24. 2 Cor.7.1. becauſe faultineſs in this kind,is moſt frequent, and not without much difficulty avoyded, Jam. 3. 2, 7, 8, and, as it pollutes the whole man, Jam. 3. 6. ſo it diſcovereth alſo that pollution that lyeth hidden in the heart, Matth. 12. 3 4, 35. 36. & 15. 20.Eph.5.29. The conſideration therefore of his inward corruption, fainting the tongue, as well as other parts,and making men unfit to appear before God : who is of ſo pure eyes,that he cannot endure the ſight of ſin, Hab.1.13. and a devouring fire,ready to faſten on ſuch fuel, Deut.4.24.Heb.12.29.& that of the lips eſpecially,rendring men unmeet, to ſpeak either to God,or from God;and withall, as ſome ſuppoſe,the apprehenſion of ſome defects and failings, in the delivery of Gods Meſſages, and the diſcharge of his miniſterial duty, may juſtly ſeem to have made him cry out in this manner, as a forlorn creature, So Peter, Luk. 5. 8. Lord, depart from me for I am a ſinfull man.

and I dwell in the midſt of a people of unclean lips] Intimating as ſome think, a conſciouſneſs of ſome guilt, in forbearing to reprove thoſe, whom he ſaw and knew to be ſuch ; and ſo cloſely rendring a reaſon of his former words, wo is me, that I have been ſilent. But of that before : as others, rather implying, that living among ſuch, he had attracted ſome contagion and taint from them; among ſuch, he had attracted ſome contagion and taint from them; it being a matter of much difficulty, for men to be as fiſh, that live in the ſea, and yet not taſte of the Salt ; to converſe with defiled ones, and yet not be defiled, Pſal. 1. 1. & 26. 4, 6. & 106. 35. & 119. 115.

dwell] Heb. ſit : as ch. 5.8. Pſ.26.3.

in the midſt] Or, among:as Jer.40.5,6.

for mine eyes have ſeen the King, the Lord of hoſts] So Manoah, to his wife, we ſhall dye, becauſe we have ſeen the Lord, Judg. 13.23.

the King] the King of all the earth, Pſal. 47. 7, 8. yea, of heaven and earth, Pſal. 103. 19. that great King, Mal. 1. 14. or, on whoſe foot-ſtool, all the Kings of the world ſit, holding from him, Prov. 8. 15. Dan. 4. 21, 34,35. and commanding ſome ſmall piece, or pitcance of it, ch. 66. 1. But more ſpecially, the King of his people, the Subjects of his Kingdom ; not of people only, but of grace, and mercy, Pſal. 44. 4. & 47. 6. & 74. 12. ch. 33. 17, 22.

have ſeen] Hence, ſome ſay, alledging for it a Rabbinical Tradition, that Manaſſes ſhould cauſe Eſay to be ſawen in ſunder, (to which they apply that, Heb. 11. 37.) as guilty of blaſphemy, in ſaying, that he had ſeen the Lord of hoſts. But little heed is to be given to ſuch Jewiſh relations. See of the Kings,under whom he propheſied, ch. 1.1. of his ſight of God,ver.1. Of the ſtile here given to God,ch.1.

V. 6. Then flew one of the Seraphims unto me] The courſe followeth, that God took to quiet and pacifie the troubled mind of the Prophet ; and as to free him from his diſtracting fears,ſo to confirm him in his miniſtry, and to encourage him to a further exerciſe of it.

Then] Heb. And. as v. 5. or, as ſome, But. As ch.29. 13.

Seraphims] Or, Seraphs. See V. 2.

unto me] By God appointed ſo to do, whoſe commands they ſtood ready preſt to put in execution, v. 2. and that by Commiſſion from him, the Seraph did what he did, and in his name, appears by his ſpeech to the Prophet.

having a live coal in his hand] Or,with a live coal in his hand.Heb. aud. as ch. 13. 5. Ezek.9.1.

a live coal] The word properly ſignifies a quick coal, or, a coal of fire:as it is more fully expreſſed, Cant. 8. 6.that is, fiery, or fired ; (for it is another word, and ſome,what more general, that is uſed, Pſalm 18. 8, 12.) Hence the ſparks, called the ſons, or children of ſuch a coal, Job 5. 7. the rather may the Prophet ſeem to have uſed this term , becauſe of the vicinity of Seraph; and Reſheph. With which manner of alluſions, he ſeems to have been much delighted. See chapter 5. 7. The quick coal here, is a note of purification, and expiation of ſin, becauſe the nature of fire is to ſever and conſume droſs. See chapter. 1. 25. Matth.3.10.

in his hand] For they had hands under the it upper wings, Exod. 1. 8.& 8 3.& 10.2.

which he had taken] Or, took. A defect of the relative; as Gen.39. 4. 1 King.18.12. had taken, or, took ;as Gen 12. 1.

with the tongs] The word,here uſed, is by our Tranſlator diverſly rendred. Sometime, as here, tongs : ſo Exod. 25. 38. Numb. 9. 4. 1 King. 7. 49. 2 Chr. 4. 21. Sometime ſnuffers ; as Exod. 37. 23. Which place yet anſwers to that, Exod. 25. 38. It hath a dual ſoim, as our Engliſh a plural ; becauſe conſiſting of two branches, or joynts : and may well comprehend either, to wit both of them, or any one of them,as the word,here uſed, that ſignifies tongs, and ſnuffers. It comes from a word, to take; as if he had ſaid, He took with the taking inſtruments, or the taker. There is another name of an inſtrument, uſed alſo about the lamps in the Temple,as well as the former; Derived from a word that ſignifies to prune, trim,cut, or, pare ; tranſlated ſnuffers ; 1 King. 7.50. 2 Chr. 4. 22. The one might ſeem to have been of uſe for the raiſing of the week,the other for the topping of it ; thoſe of either kinds,uſed about the lamps, were of gold, Exod.25.38. 1 King. 7. 49,50. Thoſe employed about the altar,as theſe here of braſs,Jer. 52. 18. The Seraph is here ſaid to take one coal onely with the tongs, becauſe for a moderate,and gracious uſe, about the Prophet : but another is ſaid, with his bare hand, to take, and ſcatter of them by whole handfuls,in way of wrath,and judgment, upon the people,Ezek. 10. 2,6,7.

from off the altar] To wit, the brazen altar of burnt-offerings, that ſtood in the inner court before the front of the Temple,or palace,Exod. 40.6. 1 King. 8.64. having fire continually burning upon it, Levit.6.12,13.So that there are probabilities for conjectures on either ſide. See on v.1.& 4.

V.7.

V. 7. And he laid it upon my mouth]Or,which he laid upon my mouth: either and for which. See ch. 4.6. or a defect of the affix,as ch. 5.29. Heb. made it touch my mouth. The use he made of the coal, to expiate, and purifie the Prophets lips with it.

*and [said]*informing the Prophet,what,by that act of his he meant, and intended unto him; who might, otherwise, have been thereby more disinaid, then before;mistaking,or misconstruing it, as an argument of wrath:as a thing done, not to purge,but to fear his lips. See Pf. 130.3,4.

Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged] This touching of thy lips, (not with strange fire, as Levit. 10.1.but)with fire from Gods Altar,(a type of that altar, that is both sanctified, and sanctifies all that is offered on it, Heb. 13.10. & 9. 21, 22, 23. Matth. 23. 19.) may assure thee from God, (for in his person he speaks, who alone is able, both to purge away the foil of sin, ch. 1. 15. Ezek. 36.25. and to assoil from the guilt of it,Mar. 2. 7. 1 Joh.1. 7,9.) that the guilt of thy sin, is all utterly removed from thee, 2 Sam.12. 13. Psal.103.12.and thou also, in some further these, 2 Sam.12. 13. Psal.103.12.and thou also, in some further measure, sanctified and renewed, then before, Deut. 30. 6. Zeph. 3. 9. For that which some suppose, that the spirit of Prophecie, and infallibility, was now conferred on him, which before he had not; is not certain, nor very likely. See chap. 1. 1. and ver. 1.

taken away] Heb. is departed, is gone We are said to depart from sin, when we surcease the practise of it, Psal.34. 14. to depart, or be removed from us, when the guilt of it is remitted, Psal. 32. 1. & 103.12. So Nathan to David, The Lord hath taken away thy sin,thou shalt not dye, 2 Sam.12.13.

purged] Heb. expiated. Which is then moft properly said to be done, when propitiation and atonement is obtained, Levit. 1. 4. ch.22. 14. Rom. 3. 25. Yet the other of purifying, may here be joyntly understood.

V. 8. Also I heard the voice of the Lord saying] Also; Heb. And; as Jer. 1. 3. or, Then;as ver. 6. After that he had thus heartned me and prepared me for such employment,as he pleased,

I heard the voice] As did our first parents, but they with dread, which made them flye from it, Gen. 3.8.Elsay with refreshing,which made him rather to approach it.

of the Lord] Heb. Adonai. Him that sate on the throne, ver.1. Not speaking to him now by a Seraph, as before, but immediately from himself.

whom shall I send?] To wit, on my errand to this people. Not as doubting, or deliberating, as uncertain whom to send; but implying that the errand that he should send on, required some party well accomplished.See Jer.49.19. & 50. 44.

and who will go for us?]Who is willing to undertake the office? or, who shall go for us? Whom shall we design, and appoint unto this work? as before. Some make it the speech of God the Father, speaking unto the Son and Holy Ghoft. Certain it is, that it was the voice of the one and onely true God, in three Persons distinct,(though inseperable, as well in operations towards the creatures, as in nature and Essence) as consulting among themselves: and speaking therefore, first in the singular number; to note the unity, and singularity of the Godhead, or Divine nature; then in the plural, noting the plurality of the Persons in the Godhead into that God useth any such like consultations; as for want of perfect understanding of affairs, and events, men are enforced oft to make use of; Princes, with their Peers, and men one with another; but that hereby, speaking after the manner of men (See chap. 3. 3.) the orderly and prudent carriage of God, who is said to do, effect, and bring all things about, according to the counsell of his own will, Ephes. 1. 11. may thereby be designed. See the like, Gen. 1.26. and 3. 22. and 11. 7. 1 Kings 22. 20. See also chap. 1. 1.

For us] A paflage, both of instruction to inform him, in whose name, and for whom he should deal, 2 Cor. 4. 5. & 11. 2. and of confirmation, to encourage him unto, and support him in the execution of his ministry, going for, and from God; who would be sure to be with, and protect him in the faithfull performance thereof, Exod. 3. 12. and 4. 12. Jer. 1. 17, 19. Matth. 28. 18, 20. Acts 18. 10.

Then I said] Heb. And, as before. Then being comforted, and encouraged, by the former allurance of favour confirmed and sealed to me, with so folemn a myftery, I offered my self willingly to be imployed in Gods work, and to go on his errand.

Here am I] Heb. behold me. Or, Lo I as Gen. 22. 1. ch. 59. 9. Ready preft for whatsoever it shall please thee to imploy me in. So 1 Sam.3.4,6,8. Pf. 40.7,8.Matt.2.12,13,20.

send me] A great promptneffe, and forwardneffe, not to obey onely, but to offer himself unto Gods service; like the Nethins, or Nethinim, Ezra 2. 43, 58. And those, of whom the Apoftle, that they had freely of their own accord, set themselves apart to the Ministry of the Saints, 1 Cor. 16. 15. contrary to that backwardneffe, and tergiverfation, which upon Gods call hath fometime appeared in some others, Exod. 3. 11. & 4.10. Jer. 1. 6. See Pfal.110.3.Yet what some would hence gather, that this should be Efayes first mission, as not entred into Prophetical office before, doth not, necessarily, hence follow; nor is it very probable; for it is affirmed, chap. 1. 1. that he prophesied under Uzziah, whereas this vision seems to have appeared after his decease; See ver. 1. Nor doth this appear to be so much a general mission,as a special commission, for a particular message, or errand, that he was at this time to deliver, from God to his people. So Ezek. 8. 1, 2, &c. & 11. 1, 4.

V. 9. And he said, Go] He is not so forward to be sent, but God is as willing to send him on his errand. So 1 King. 22. 22. Though to divers parties, and of divers natures, and qualities; yet both to be imployed in his work of wrath,by execution, the one; by denunciation, the other.

and tell this people] Heb. and thou shalt say. Or, do thou say to, &c. as ch. 38.28. Act. 28.26. But here the rather so to be rendred, because he seems rather to speak by way of permission, and dereliction,then by way of prediction.

this people] not my people. (as unworthy to bear his name, or to be owned by him) but this people: as those that he now made no reckoning of, whatloever formerly he had done, So ver. 10. ch. 29. 13. Jer.7.16,23. and so, thus fellow, in scorn, and contempt, as one not worthy to be named, Matth.26.61.Luk.23 2. and this man, Act. 24.5.

Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not] A moft dreadfull judgment denounced against this people, to wit, of giving them up wholly to the stubbornneffe and obstinacy of their own perverse hearts, and rebellious wills. As if he had laid, since that you will needs willfully ftop your ears against those things that you hear;that you will not conceive them, though they be never so plainly delivered unto you,never so powerfully preffed upon you,again and again, ch. 28. 9, 12. Zach. 7.11,12. Act. 7. 57. and ftuit your eyes, that ye may not see, nor perceive and take notice of such things as are so evidently set before you, that ye cannot chuse,the sight of them, ch. 26. 11. & 42. 18, 20. Since that, I say, you are thus ftiffly resolved, and desperately bent, that you refuse to regard, or to be wrought upon by ought that is spoken in your hearing, or done in your ftght; go on ftill in your obstinacy, never once thinking of return, till destruction over-take you. It is like that in the Pfalm, My people would not hear me; Israel would not obey me: Therefore gave I them up unto their own hearts luft, to walk after their own counsells, Pfalm 81. 11, 12. and,go, and ferve, each of you his own dunny (or, dung-hill) idols, (for so the word properly fignifies, the vileft and baleft of them,that are)both now and hereafter, since you will not hearken unto me: and be ruled by me, Ezek. 20. 39. and fulfill ye the measure of your fathers iniquity. Go on to do as they have done before you: you ftall not want of Gods Meffengers (I will send you Prophets, and Wise men,) enough for you to murther, Matth.23. 32, 34. and that in the revelation, Let him that is unjuft, continue unjuft ftill; or grow more unjuft yet, then before he was: and let him that is filthy be filthy ftill; or, Let him be yet more filthy, (for the words may bear either) Rev 22.11. This I take to be the genuine meaning of the words. Howbeit, I reject not the sense that many learned and religious Writers give, conceiving it to be delivered,as by concession, and pronunciation. As if the Lord had faid, Prophets indeed ye ftall not want, nor ftall signs and miracles fail with you; ye ftall have enough to see and hear of either: but ye ftall receive no more fruit, or benefit by them, then as if ye had never, either heard ought of the one, or seen ought of the other, Pfal.78.2. &.106.7. Joh.12.37 God in juft judgment for their former excesses,and obstinacy,denying a blessing unto the means: and either withdrawing,or withholding the efficacy of his Spirit,where by it might have become beneficial to them,for their spiritual good, Deut.29.2,4. Ezek.2. 5,7.& 3.7. whether way you take it,it comes much in effect to one.

Hear ye indeed]Or,as fome, hear inceffantly;as others,*plainly.*Heb. in hearing hear,as ch.55.2. the Greek, with whom fome of the Evangelists concur, read it in the future. Hearing, you ftall hear, &c. Matth.13.14.Act.28.26. which Mark,also,seems to have followed Mar.4.12.but the future is not unusually put for the imperative;as in the precepts,Exo. 20.13,17.But according to that version,rendering both branches in the future, the former seems spoken; in way of concession;ye ftall see,ye ftall hear: the latter, in way of comminationye ftall not understand,ye ftall not perceive; the reduplication adds much emphasis to it.

but understand not]Heb.and. And so Mark.4.12.as ch. 29. 13. for, understand not,Matt.13.14.*ye ftall not understand.*See therefore also. ver.13.& 19.

and see ye indeed]Heb. *in seeing see.*And so Matt. 13. 14.seeing ye ftall see.

but perceive not] As before. An heavy judgment that befel this people,as in Efays dayes; so in Christs time, Matt. 13.14:and continues on them to this day. 2 Cor. 3.14, 15. And it is indeed a juft thing with god,when men willfully wink, and ftut their eies against the light,to ftrike them ftarke blind, as he did the Allyrians,2 King 6.18. the Sodomites, Gen. 19. 11. and Elimas the Sorcerer, Acts 13. 11. to dash out their eyes, Deut.28.28. Pfal. 69.23. Rom. 1. 21, 22,26,28.and 11.8,10.Howbeit,by the words of understanding, and hearing ear,applyed to the foul,(whereof it is so oft faid, He that hath ears to hear,let him hear, Mat.11.15,43.Luk.8.8.& 14.35.Rev.2.7,11, 17,29.& 3.6,13,22.& 13.9.)is meant ftuch an ear,as is elsewhere termed an ear uncircumcifed, Act.7.51. ftuch an one as cannot endure to hear Gods Word,or ought that is ftritually good, Jer.6.10.

and ftut their eyes]close them, as fome; or daub them up with plaifter, or other like matter. For so ch.44.18. he hath danbed up, or, daubed over their eyes,and their hearts. Others dumme them, or, make them dimme. For the word here used is not ellewhere found, thus used; fave in another form once, chap. 32. 3. where it is expounded by *dimnes*s. The eyes intended, are the eyes of the mind; of which, Pfal.119. 18. Act. 26.18.Eph. 1. 18. The Evangelists together with the Greek,render it, and their eyes have they closed,Mat.13. 14.Act.28.27.as pointing to the original of this dreadful evil, their own willful obstinacy.

left ftould they see with their eyes,and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts] Or, a little more plainly;that they may not see, &c.nor hear,&c.nor understand,&c. that they may be like meer sages, or ftatues, that have eyes, but see not, ears, but hear not, &c. Pf. 115. 5,6. & 135.16,17. fottish, blockish, and senseless creatures, idol-hearers;like those idol ftepherds,Zach.11.17.profiting not at all,by what they either see,or hear, chap.42.18,19.& 44.18. Jer. 5. 21. 2 Tim. 3.7.

with their eyes, and with their ears,and with their hearts] Not that without these, or with any other instrument but these, men can see hear, or understand but the expression of them, adds a kind of emphasis, and weight to the sentence, and makes the speech the more affectionate, that men should have such organs, or instruments,and yet have no use of them,no benefit at all by them. See the like manner of speech,Gen.45.12.Job 42.5.Ezek.3.10.

and convert]Or,*turn.*That they may not return from their wicked courses,but he hardened in them more and more, according to their own desire: My people love to have it so,Jer.5.31.and it is a juft thing with God, to let them have what they love; to afford them what themselves desire, Pf. 81.12.

and be healed] Or, as fome, and health; or,healing come to them, as if it were a noun;but none fuch is:or,healing come to them;as that of coming,being included in the verb:but the verb is active,not passive; as appears,ch. 19. 22.& 57. 19. Jer.33.6. Hof.11. 3. It is, word for word,and he heal him; that is, taken impersonally, or indefinitely, one heal him: or, he be healed. For by the paffive, yet, are such phrases oft expressed. See chap. 2. 19, 28. The Evangelists,as the Greek version before them, render it, and I ftould heal them; to wit, as by pardoning their sins upon their repentance: (as Mark expreffly gives it,Mar.4.12.)So by reftoring of safety and prosperity unto them,and repairing the breaches of their State: For by healing, is that, also, oft-times expressed, Pf.60. 2.ch.19.22.& 57. 18. Jer. 30. 17.See ch.1.6.& 3.7.

V. 11. Then said I, Lord how long?] An abrupt and imperfect speech,as interrupted, and cut short,through excesse of paffion. Like that of the Pfalmift, But thou, O Lord, how long > Pfa. 6.3 and How long, O Lord?Pfal.13.1. How long ftall this fad condition last?How long ftall I, and other thy Prophets,preach thus,without fruit, and this people perfift in this their wonted obstinacy? Jer. 4. 14. and 13. 27.

And he answered, untill the cities be wasted,&c.] Gods answer to the Prophets demand,propounded by way of complaint;as much affected with this desperate condition of his people, with whom God had so long born,that he could no longer forbear,2 Chr.36.16.Jer. 15.6.& 44.22.Ezek.21.27.

untill] Heb.*if.*As ch.30.17.

be wasted] By the incursion of forraign forces. The Syrians,ch.9. 12.The Assyrians,ch.36.1.The Babylonians, Jer. 34. 1. & 52.7. Yea, though some reftrain what is here spoken to Senacheribs invasion; yet some other extend it,unto the sacking of their chief City,and overthrow of their State by the Romans,under Vespasian first, and afterward by Hadrian.

wasted without inhabitant] That is,wasted,and left without Inhabitants:as, burnt, without inhabitants:that is burnt, and left without inhabitants; that is, laid waste, and left without inhabitants; that is, laid waste, them,Jer.2.15.and laid waste,without inhabitants; that is, laid waste, and left without them, Jer.4.7. A defective,or comprehensive speech, wrapping up two notions,in one term; the like whereunto,see ch. 38.17.21.

and the houses] As well within,as without the cities,ch. 5.9.Amos 3. 15.

without man]That is,either men,as ch.5.3.or any man;as Jer.4.25.

and the land be utterly desolate]Heb.country,or filled Land, (as ch. 17.)be wasted with desolation. See such an utter desolation described,Jer.4. 23,26.& Zeph.1.2,3.and of the phrase,see ch.22.17.18. Mic.2.1.0. Howbeit, we are not so to conceive the words, as if the whole country ftould be utterly difpeopled;or the people,all, without exception, destroyed. For there is mention of a reserve, ver. 13. but that the devaftation ftould be very general, and a great part, both of cities and houses, wholly emptied of inhabitants, many of them utterly destroyed. See Jer. 39. 8, 9 and 52. 13, 15.

V. 12. And the Lord have removed men far away] Some read the words,as rendring a reason of the forementioned desolation. For the Lord ftall remove men far away. But that needs not; because the words run wel on in a clear tenour,without any such alteration. Further onely declaring the principal author of this judgment; whosoever they were that should be the instruments, and executioners in it. See ch.17.17,20.& 10.5.

removed men] By causing them to be carried away captive, chap. 28.15.

far away] Into Assyria, and Chaldea, countries far remote from Judea, ch.5.26.

and there be a great forsaking] Or, leaving. Not of people, left in the land, but of people leaving it; not a voluntary, but an enforced dereliction of lands and houses; with such other commodities that men therein had enjoyed, but should then be constrained to abandon, being either driven away out of them, or carried away from them, Jer. 9.19. For it seems not so natural, to expound it of Gods forsaking them and their land; though it be true, that the enemy could not have prevailed so against them, if God had not forsaken them, and given them up into the enemies hand, Deut. 32. 30. Jer. 12.7.

in the midst of the land] That is, in the land: as ch.5.8.& 7.22.

V. 13. But yet in it shall be a tenth] In this last verse, the foregoing sad Prophecy is yet shut up with some matter of comfort, to wit, that notwithstanding this great and general devastation of the land, and dissipation of the State: yet all should not be utterly ruined, & rooted out: a small remnant should be reserved and that remnant, though it should be cropt again, and again, yet should never be so cut off, or consumed, but that there should continue still, a seed of Saints, to uphold and perpetuate the race. So he concluded his first, and second Sermon, with gracious promises of mercy, and restitution, ch. 2.& 4.

But yet] Heb. And yet: ch. 1.28. as spoken in way of mitigation of the foregoing sentence. Yet some read, And until there be but a tenth left in it: as in way of continuation of the former doom, and of the stint of time therein designed. But I find not the word that is here, any where so used: though the word that signifies until, come neer it.

shall be a tenth] A small number, one of ten shall be reserved: as ch. 1.9.& 10.21,22. Either remaining still in the land, as many of the poorer sort did, 2 King. 25.21,22. or preserved in the captivity: and restored again to their land, after it had been long waste, ch. 7.3.& 6.1.4. The word here used, is no where else found and being formed, like those proper names, Azaniah, Neh. 10.9. Azariah, 1 Chron. 15.21. and Azariah, 2 King. 14.21. It may not improbably be deemed to signifie as those, Gods hearing, Strength, and help; so this, Gods tenth: as a portion dedicated to him, and reserved for him: as the tenths were, Levit. 27.30. And that the rather, not unfitly to be reserved in regard of the holy seed wrapped up in it. See ch. 1.9. Gods tithe. Howbeit we are not to conceive, that such a precise number was to be preserved, either from captivity, or under the captivity: to wit, just one of ten: but a certain number is put, as oft for an uncertain: So this number of ten, Gen. 31.41. Numb. 14.22. Rev. 2.10. And so some other numbers in this argument: as two or three on the top; three or four on the side-boughs, chap. 17.6. And one of a city, and two of a family, Jer. 3.14. Some of those writers that refer and restrain this to the spoil and waste that Sennacherib made in Judea, under King Ezekiah, understand by this tenth, the city of Jerusalem, which was preserved at that time, when the whole land was over-run, ch. 36. 1.& 37.35: and which may well, say they, go for the tenth part of the whole land beside. But the tearms useth, both, here, and in the rest of this verse: as also in other places where the same subject is handled, do seem rather to point at persons, then places. But divers of the Jewish Doctors, and some of ours concurring with them, therein understand, by the tenth, here, a Decade of Kings, that should immediately succeed one another, before this waste of the land, and havock of the inhabitants should be. For God, say they, to comfort the Prophet, and alleviate his grief, concerning this sad message enjoyned him to go with; and to meet with such thoughts and doubts, as he might have, as if the same were to fall out, and be executed in his daies, informs him, that this doom was not to be put in execution, before the end of ten Kings of Judah their successive reigns. And indeed there were just ten of them, that reigned successively in that State; to wit Jotham, Ahaz, Ezekiah, Manasses, Amon, Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, Zedekiah; before that heavy downfall of it, by the Chaldeans, fell out. But this seems a meer Rabbinical conceit: nor doth it fit so well with the text.

and it shall return, and shall be eaten] Heb. and it shall return: and be to depasture: as the word is taken, Numb. 24.22. and chap. 5.5. That is, it shall again be cropped, or eaten down, 5 so is the word of returning frequently used, Gen. 26.18. He returned and digged; for, he digged again, Psal. 78.41. they returned, and tempted: for they tempted again: it shall return, and be built, for, it shall again be built, Dan. 9.21. And this seems to have been fulfilled, in the several renewed deportations, as gleanings of the people, by Nebuzaradan, after that, in the first surprisal of the city, Jer. 52. 28,30. Or, as some, in those remains, that after the murther of Gedaliah fled into Egypt, and there perished, Jer. 41.16, 27.&c 42.22. Yet some refer the words to the return of the people from captivity, rendring them either, and it shall return, having been consumed: or when it shall return and have been consumed; not a tenth part of those that were carried away captive to Babylon, returning in safety home again. And some again read them, It shall, after its return again, be burnt up, or removed; that is, utterly abolished: understanding it as spoken of the last destruction of the Jews, and their State, by the Romans. And it is true indeed, that the word here used, signifies both these; sometime, to burn, sometime also to remove; as was formerly shewed, on ch.4.4. But neither doth either of those senses fit well here with the context: nor doth this prophesy seem to reach so low, as those times in the primary, and peculiar intendment of it. The first exposition seems the most probable. For as for that which a learned late writer hath, who taketh the latter word in an active notion, thus rendring the text; it shall return, to wit, from captivity, and shall be to burn; that is, shall destroy and burn up its enemies; as Zach. 12.6. Obad. 18. I propound it onely, and leave it to the judgment of the learned.

as a Teil-tree, &c.] Or, howbeit, as, &c. For the better connexion of this branch, with the former; wherein God by the Prophet declareth, for the comfort of his people, that albeit there should be but as a tenth reserved, and that tenth, in a manner, tithed again; yet should, in that small reserve, so much impeached and impaired, be such a seed of Saints, as should keep the people in a subsistence, and not suffer them utterly to be razed out, Jer.33.25, 26. And this he illustrates by similitude, as most take it of a tree, that having cast her leaves in winter, ch.1.30. or having been browsed upon by cattel, ch.5.5. or cut and mangled, yea, lopt, and hewen down, yet retains some life; by vertue whereof, it maintains life, and in due time sprouts forth, and springs up again, Job 14.7,9. or, as others take it, of certain trees planted on the side of some bank, or causey, that by the roots thereof piercing into it, help to keep up the earth, that would otherwise be crumbling, and mouldring away.

a Teil-tree] Or, a Line-tree. A tree of goodly leaves, and spreading branches, fit to make bowers of. And this, and the oak, as some suppose, are here made choice of: because the one, in regard of its fairneis, the other, in regard of its sturnness, might be unlikely to lose their goodly verdure, in winter; applyable in that regard, unto the Jewish estate; yet wether the hebrew word signifie that kind of tree, is uncertain. Some render it, an Elm, some, an Holm; some a fyr, or Turpentine-tree, so the Greek:) Our translators render it, an Oak, ch. 1.30. and so oft elsewhereas also do most other translators of note. Nor conceive I any reason why it should be rendred otherwise here, then there: the teil, or line, having no affinity at all with an oak.

and an oak] This word is likewise so rendred, chap. 2.13. Ye some of the Rabbins tell us, that it signifies a pine. Others of them, a chestnut; which by the Arabians is tearmed the King of Oaks. As a name, not unlike thereunto, is by the Greeks, and Latines given to the walnut. The former word, and this differ, not much in the original; in regard wherof, they are deemed to be trees of a neer kind, both oaks, but of divers sorts, as of oaks there be many: for which both the Greeks, and Latines, have distinct names, though we in English have not. And some of our more exact translators, therefore render them in Latine, both here, and ellewhere: The former, by the word quercus; the latter by the word, robur. The first word of this passage then, very variously, both translated, and understood, may thus be rendred; As an oak, either of the one, or the other kind; that oak, and that oak; for that, or that; as father, and mother; for father, or mother, Exod. 21.15. and lion, and bear; for lion, or bear, 1 Sam. 17.34. Or, as the oak of either kind; as defigning trees, that grow in a certain well known place: oak, and oak; for oaks of this kind, and oaks of that kind: as ox, and ass; for oxen, and asses, ch.1.3.

whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves] This sense most Interpreters, as well Jews as ours, here follow. But this seems not so agreeable to the words in the original; where in the former branch, it runs thus; which (not whose) support (rather then substance) is in them, which in them; by a redundancy, very frequent, and familiar in the hebrew; for, in which, or, wherein. So Gen. 2.50. which in it is life: for, in which, or, wherein is life: and Jos 3.2. which I was born in it, for, on which, or, wherein I was born. And I render the word rather, support, then substance, because, in propriety of speech, it signifies a pillar; being used of the pillar placed on Rachels sepulchre, Gen 35.20. As also of that, which Absolom erected for himself, in the Kings dale, 2 Sam. 18.18. put here for support, because pillar s, are means of support, Judg. 16.26. And for the latter clause, when they cast their leaves; that of their leaves, is not in the text. Some other therefore of either, render it, in the dejection, or depostition: that is, as they understand it, the thrusting, or driving, and fattining down into the ground of the trees themselves, before spoken of: as if it were said, as in the trees, when they are thrust, and driven down into the ground: But how soever, unto stakes and piles driven for support into the ground, the tearm here used, may not altogether unfitly be applyed: yet of trees set in the ground, and planted for that purpose: it seems not so proper nor do I suppose, that the word can be found so used of either. Others take the word, Shallechath, here used, for the proper name of a place: to wit, of a gate of the Temple: so called, as some, because by it, they used to cast out, or carry out the ashes, which the altar of burnt-offerings offerings yielded; together with the sweepings, and other soil of the Temple; which yet seems to be no very probable conjecture, because it opened upon a principal passage to the Kings Palace, as appears, 1 Chron. 26.16. compared with 1 Kings 10.5. Or as others, rather so called, from the passage it self, on which it opened, so tearmed, in regard of the earth that was cast in, to make it up, by railing the ground that lay, formerly, too low. Nor is it needfull to put into this text, as some do, the gate; it being sufficient to say, the trees wherein the support, at Shallechath consists. For the better clearing wherof, it is to be observed, that toward the West-side of the Temple, there was a causey, or a terrace, 1 Chro.26.16. that reached from the temple unto the kings palace; and by it the King used to go up unto Gods house, 2 Chr. 9.4. Now on either side of this causey, or terrace, it is supposed, that there was a goodly row of trees, as to beautifie the passage, (which made the Queen of Saba, among other things that she saw in Solomons Court, to admire it, 1 King. 10.5.) so to keep up the earth, that it might not moulder away, and so the causey come, in time, to decay. Unto these trees, therefore, are the faith full, among Gods people, compared: as those, for whose sake the nation was yet kept in being, and not brought to utter ruine.

so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof] The application of the former similitude. The small number of the truly godly, shall be to their land, or State, as those trees are to the causey, whose banks they bear up; as supports, and shores to sustain it from being utterly brought to nought. See Some-what the like, Job 22.30. and according to some, Prov. 10.25.

So] The note of similitude is concealed; as Proverbs 26.12.

the holy seed] Not the holy seed, in regard of profession onely, and external sanctification, being taken into league and covenant with God, as Ezr. 9.2. But the seed truly, and sincerely holy, in heart and life, answerable to what they profelled, ch.4.3.& 62. 12. Heb. a seed of holinesse; for, an holy seed: as an hill of holinesse; for an holy hill, Psal. 15.1. a seed of God; for a godly, or precious seed, Mal. 2. 15. those choice ones, which God reserves as seed to propagate his Church, Rom.11.15. Those that refrain this to Senacheribs invasion, do hereby understand those few godly in Jerusalem; for whose sake God then saved the City: but that seems too narrow.

shall be the substance] Or, support; as before: or as a support; as a Har supporting the note of similitude (as Psalm 11.1.) wanting.

thereof] Either of the land, before spoken of, ver.12. or of the tenth, mentioned in the beginning of this verse.

CHAP. VII.

Vers. 1. And it came to pass, &c.] Here beginneth the first Sermon of Isaiah recorded in this book; which he makes entrance into, by relating the occasion of it; to wit, the fear that Ahaz King of Judah was surprised with, upon tidings brought him, that the Kings of Israel and Aram, were entred into a league and confederacy against him; whereupon the Prophet is sent, by God, unto him, partly to stay his heart, by assuring him, both of the vain attempt, and speedy decease shortly to ensue; of those two kings that made account to divide his kingdome between them; and partly, to foretel him of what evil should befall his land, from the King of Assyria, whom he trusted too much unto. Withal interlacing, by the way, that remarkable Prophesie concerning the Messias to be born of a Virgin; the onely sure stay for men to rest and relye on, in all difficulties and distresses.

And it came to pass] Or, Now it came to pass. For this discourse hath no connexion at all, with, or dependance upon the vision, or Prophecy, next before going: They being of divers dates, and delivered in several Kings reigns; that of Jotham, this of Ahaz; as in the front of either is expressed. Heb. And it was: of which, see chap. 2.2.

in the dayes of Ahaz] See ch. 1.1. dayes, and Ahaz. This is the third king, under whom Esay prophesied; who, though a most wicked King, yet had he more then one, and those also very comfortable Prophecies under him; for the support of the faithfull that lived in those bad times. So that Esay seemed to have been under Ahaz, as Eliasunder Ahab.

the son of Jotham the son of Uzziah King of Judah] The Jewish Doctors move a question here, Why so wicked a king should have his genealogy thus expressed? and they tell us it is in regard of the piety of his two progenitors, therein specified; to intimate, that it was not for his, but for their sakes, that the enemy could not prevail then against him. But this is one of their groundlesse conjectures. We know well, that it is a thing not unusual in Scripture, to genealogize, as well bad as good, Jer. 22.18.& 26.1.& 27.1. And it may well be, that the Prophet mentioneth these, because he had under these, and these onely hitherto prophesied.

that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, went up, &c.] Concerning the time of this expedition, there is some doubt made; which to remove, we are out of the facred Story, to observe a twofold expedition of these two kings, and their forces, against Judah, under Ahaz. The former, in the very beginning of his reign: having made some attempt before to that purpose, towards the latter end of Jothams reign, 2 King. 15.37. But that done by them severally: the Syrians by themselves, and the Israelites by themselves; and then they mightily prevailed, 2 Chro. 28.5,8. The latter, sometime after, when having severally found such succes before: they made full account, now joyning their forces together, to make a full conquest of them: especially, being so low brought by their several invasion before. But in this they prevailed not, 2 King. 16.5. And this, not the other, is that which is here mentioned: and seems to have been in the third, or at the furthest, about the beginning of the fourth year of King Ahaz: for within the fourth of his reign was Pekah slain: that is, in the twentieth, from the beginning of Jothams reign, who reigned but fifteen, 2 King. 15.30,33.

Rezin] See of him, 2 King. 15.37.

Syria] Heb. Aram. As also it is found tearmed by ancient Greek writers. See Strabo. lib. 1.& 13.& 16. The countrey confining on the land of Judah, Eastward, ch.9.11. was so called, from Aram: one of Shems sons, whose posterity sometime possessed it, Gen.10. 22. It was divided into divers Regions. Hence Padan Aram, Gen. 25.20: and Aram Naharaim, or Mesopotamia, Gen. 24.10. Aram Zoba, Psal. 60. title, 2 Sam. 8.3.& 10.6. And to pass by others, Aram of Damascus: that is, where of Damascus, was the head-city, 2 Sam. 8.6. And of this Aram of Damascus, was Rezin King, of the other parts of it, how far, is uncertain, See v. 8.& ch 9.12. Syria it is by some supposed so to have been called from Shur, mentioned, Gen. 25.18. Though some other rather think, from the famous haven-Town, Tyre, in Hebrew tearmed, Tfor, in Syriak, Tfur: and thence the whole country, Suria, and Syria: for they mould two countries into one, that suppole it called Syria, for Assyriatas Spania, sometime, for Hispania. See ch.23.1.

Pekah king of Israel] King of the ten tribes, after their revolt from Davids house, under Rehoboam, commonly called Israel, as distinct from Judah. See ch. 1.1. Judah. Of Pekah, see 2 King. 15. 27, &c.

went up] Some conceive this tearm here used, either because the land of Judah was a mountanous country, and so higher then that from whence they had advanced; or because Jerusalem was situate on a hill: (though it were rather on a knole in a plain, Jer. 17. 3. and environed with hills, Psal. 125.1.& 125.2.) and that therefore it is said, thither the tribes go up, Psal. 122.4. Though that is, but as we are said to go up to London, from all parts of the land; because that is our chief city. But besides that, the words of ascending, and descending, are in the hebrew tongue, frequently used for going forth, or, forward, simply, without any reference to the situation for height, or lowneis of the places, towards which men advance. Of which, see chap. 38.8.& Jer. 34.20.& 37.5. where the Chaldeans are said to go up, that is, to go away, or depart from Jerusalem. It is, besides this peculiar phrase in that language, to say of Kings, or Commanders; that they ascend, or go up, when they go forth upon any expedition, when they go out unto war: so Hiram went up to help Lachish, Josh. 18.33. and Joshua with all Israel, went up to assault Hebron, Josh. 10.36. And as here the Syrian is said to go up, against Judah; so is Ahab; said to go up against the Syriat, Go up and prosper, 1 King. 22.6, 12.

towards Jerusalem] Or, against Jerusalem. The preposition is wanting; as 1 King. 3.13. Of Jerusalem, see ch. 1.1.

to war against it] Or, unto war with it. Because of the war he had with it, or against it: for it is the noun, not the verb, that is here. used. So Jer. 46.3.

but could not prevail against it] The Lord not permitting it, but inhibiting them from so doing. Heb. could not war: the noun was before; the verb is here. And it is used, sometime by a trope, especially with the particle here subjoyned, not barely for to war; but in warring to prevail. So Numb. 22. 11. Deut. 20.19. Jer. 21.2. And so 2 King. 16.5. They besieged Ahaz, but could not war; that is, prevail by surprising him, or his city.

could not] Heb. he could not. Where the Jewish Doctors make a needless debate, why the Prophet should speak in the singular number, when as there were two of them, Rezin, and Pekah,; and the reason, in general, they give, is, because the one of them commanded in chief; (which some would have to be Rezin; others of them to be Pekah) and the other was but as adjutant, and subservient to him, but there is no need to flye unto such niceties, and uncertainties; the verb singular is used, as the other of going up, before, in a way not unusual, where an action wherein two have a joint hand, is by a verb singular attributed unto either. He could not; that is, neither of them could. And so 2 King. 16.5. in the plural, they could not; as also the Greek, and Latine, have both here.

V. 2. And it was told the house of David, saying] This was the preparation of these two Kings: now followeth the effect, that the tydings of it, brought to Ahaz his Court, had with him.

the house of David] The Jewish Doctors move a question, why he saith not to Ahaz, but to the house of David: and they say, that he is not named, because he was a most ungodly man. Davids house is named, in regard of the promises made to him, and his house, 2 Sam. 7.25. But it is enough for this manner of speech, that Ahaz, how wicked soever, was of the lineage of David, and his Court, therefore, is termed Davids house: as the Throne he sate on, is termed Davids Throne: even then, when the worst Kings sate in it as well as when better, Jer 13.13. & 22.2. and the rather, he saith, the house of David here, as also v. 13. because, as he speaks there: so the news was brought here, not to the King alone, but to his Princes also, and to other the officers of his house, So Jer. 21.12.

Syria is confederate with Ephraim] The Syrians and the Israelite are entred into a league and confederacy against you.

Syria] The King of Syria, and his Kingdom.

is confederate with] Heb. resteth upon; reyseth upon him for assistance. For men are faid to rest, or rely upon those, whom they trust to, as chap. 10. 20. Others render it, is set down with him. He hath joyned his camp with his: and so is the word of resting used, v. 19. and the particle here used, sometime signifies with, as Exod. 35. 21. or, is set down in his country. For the same particle also, signifies in, as ch. 38. 20. yet some conceive the word, which we translate, resteth, to be of a nother root, that signifies, to lead; and so render it, hath led, or brought his Army to Ephraim. And some would have the letters transposed, to make it signifie, hath pitched his camp. But that is not so improbable: but this is as presumptuous. Such supplies, where needfull: and changes, where grounded-less, are not to be admitted. The sense is apparent, flowing, not unfitly from either of the former, that they had entred into a mutual confederacy, and joyned their forces together: and that Rezin having got Pekah to joyn with him, made no doubt now, but to make an absolute conquest of Judah.

Ephraim] Israel. Or, the ten Tribes: whereof Ephraim being a chief one, Gen. 48. 29. doth oft-times give the denomination to that whole State. So chap. 28. 1. Hos. 12. 1. Besides, that the first King that reigned over the ten Tribes, after their revole from Davids house, was an Ephramite, 1 King. 11. 26. and the chief seat of that Kingdome, to wit, Samaria, was situate in that Tribe, 1 King. 16. 24. 29.

and his heart was moved, and the hearts of his people] Their hearts shook, or were shoken. For the word signifies such a motion, or concussion, as in liveless bodies is caused by some over-powring force, or violence used to them. We had it before used of the posts, or transomes. of the Temple, ch. 6. v. 4.

as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind] Heb. from the face of the wind. That is, by the blast, or force of it. So Ps. 68. 1, 2. & 83. 13. their hearts quaked, and quivered, as we say, like an aspen leaf, within them. An elegant expression of the exuremity and baleness of their fear, arguing no spirit, or courage at all in them. Though I suppose it over-nice, which the Jewish Doctours here observe, that therefore Achaz his trembling is compared, rather to the trees of the wood, then any other; because fruitless trees make more noyse then such as bear fruit; rather, because those that stand in the wood, or on the waft, whether fruitfull, or fruitlesse, are more exposed to the force of wind and storm, then such as are planted in places of some shelter. Now the ground of this their excessive fear, seems to have been, from what they had felt, and suffered before: for having been so beaten, and such havock lately made of them, by either of these, severally invading them, they supposed it could not be avoided, but that they would make an utter conquest of them, having joyned both their forces together, (see somewhat the like, 2 Kings 10.4.) and in regard hereof, they were instantly upon dispatching of messengers, for aid, unto the King of Assyria; which God sends here to disswade them from, 2 King. 16. 5, 7.

V. 3. Then said the Lord unto Isaiah] In this their consternation, God sends his Prophet to Ahaz, as another, sometime, to Ahab, in the like perplexity, 1 King 20. 13. (though both very wicked men) to stay, and strengthen him and his, by giving assurance of deliverance, from what they so much feared: the subversion of their State, and surprizal of their city.

unto Isaiah] For, unto me, who write this. The noun for the pronoun, as ch. 2. 1. & 13. 1.

Go forth now to meet Ahaz] God sends the Prophet to him, though he neither seek to God, nor send to the Prophet, which Jehoshaphat, and Hezekiah, God like unto, did, 2 Chr. 20. 3. ch. 37. 2. This doth he prevent, even the wicked oft-times, with mercies, beyond, not their desertes onely, but their expectations and desires.

go forth] Not out of thine house onely, but out of the city. For the place where he was to meet Ahaz, was without the city.

thou, and Shear-jashub thy son] He is willed to take his son with him, not as some would have it, to be as a witness of the delivery of his message, or to add some authority thereto, as ch. 8. 2. (for what could so young a childs presence in that kind do?) but, because he was to make use of him in his speech to Ahaz, as a sign to assure him of that deliverance, which from God he brought him tydings of, ver. 16. His name was given him, in a Prophetical way, by Gods special appointment; as was also the name of our Prophets other son, ch. 8. 3. and the names of Hoshea's children, Hos. 1. 4, 6, 9. It signifies, a remnant shall return: as foretelling a reserve of some portion of people, that should, as some, return to their own homes, after the siege of Jerusalem by Sennacherib, broken up, having fled thither for succour and safety before. Or, as others, that should return to their land again, from the Chaldean captivity: or, as others again, that in all times, even of the heaviest calamities, some should be reserved, to rise and return again to their former condition, as a seed preserved for the perpetuating of Gods people, ch. 6. 13. Yet some render it, the remnant shall be converted; shall return to the Lord, being purged and purified by their foregoing calamities; and reformed, and reclaimed from their former aberrations: and so we find it applyed, ch. 10. 20, 21. and was to be verified also in those gracious reserves. See ch. 6. 13. They pull the text asunder, that would read it, Jashub thy son, that is left, (for so the Greek and Latine render it) so called, say some of them, because he was saved, when so many thousands were slain in one day, 2 Chr. 28. 6. or, because he staid with his Father the Prophet, when Rabshakeh his other son, (a Jewish tale) revolted to the Assyrians in discontent; and they force it no lesse, who would enforce it to speak, with the Chaldee, not of any natural son of the Prophet, but of some of his Disciples, whom he had (as Paul saith of Onesimus, Philem. 10.) begotten to God by his Ministry, and brought to repentance, and which continued still stedfast with him, when many other had fallen from him.

at the end of the conduit of the upper pool] The place where Ahaz at that time was, as some think, hasting unto the City, upon the news brought him of the intended invasion, while he was somewhere else abroad: as other suppose, being thereupon come out of the City, to view the places neer about it, and consider what was fit to be done with them; especially such places, as afforded any great quantity of water, either to make them usefull for himself; or to hinder the enemy from help or relief by them, as expecting a siege. And this is the more likely, for that we read the like course taken by Hezekiah on the like occasion, 2 Chr. 32. 3, 4, 5, 6. ch. 22, 9. Yet some think, that he was onely walking there upon pleasure, being a place, though without the City, yet not far from his Palace: and there, therefore, Rabshakeh made a stand, when he came to summon Hezekiah in his Masters name, to surrender to him the city, chap. 36. 2. 2 King. 18. 17. But it is not probable, that Ahaz amidst so great fears, should have much lust to make walks out on pleasure. Yet it is somewhat observeable, that God should send the Prophet to encourage Ahaz, & affure him of deliverance from God, in that very place, in which he was afterwards by that blasphemous wretch so railed on and reviled, and destruction, in spight of him and what he could do, threatned to the City.

the conduit] The word in Hebrew, signifies a going up, or ascent; and it is used sometime for a trench made to receive water, 1 King. 18. 32, 35. Sometime for a water-course, Ezek. 31. 4. and it is here taken, not for a conduit, (such as ours are) to receive water derived from the pool; (though some fo expound it) but for that passage, by which the water was from the spring-head conveyed unto the pool. As the word of ascending, is used oft for to pass, Numb. 19. 26, 27. 1 Sam. 6. 20.

of the pool] The word is commonly deemed to have a notion of blessing in it. Whereupon our Jewish Doctors take liberty here to dote and upon it; and to tell us, that this pool was so termed, because the water that fed it, came from a blessed place. But, beside that the name is common to all pools, in general; though the more common opinion be, that pools are in Hebrew so termed, either because that fish multiply in them, by vertue of that primordial blessing, Gen. 1. 22. or because they are fed and inceased with the blessings of rain from above, (whence the various readings, by reason of the ambiguity of the word, Psal. 84. 6. the rain fils the pools, or, the rain of blessings; that is, large, and liberal showers, Ezek. 34. 26. showreth them) or becaufes watry places, being ordinarily more fertile, are deemed therefore to be accompanied with a blessing, ch. 32. 20. Judg. 1. 15. (in which place, there is hence also a diverse reading, give me a pools or, give me a blessing:) Yet others suppose them to be so called, from the depression, or lowneſs of the ground, where they are usually situate. The root from whence the word comes, signifying as well to stoop low, as to bleſs.

the upper pool] A place inclosed on the South-side of the city, to receive and retain of the water that issued from the fountain of Gihon, which the Chaldee, and some other, make to be the same with Siloah; in regard whereof it is, also termed, the pool of Siloah, Neh. 3. 15. Joh. 9. 8. and the Kings pool, Neh. 2. 14. and it is here called the upper; because it was situate beside the upper city, on the South, neer the Kings garden, Neh. 3. 15. to distinguish it from the lower pool, ch. 22. 9. that lay beside the lower city on the West, 2 Chr. 32. 30. & 33. 14. Neh. 3. 16.

in the high-way] Heb. in the causey, or cast-way. As ch. 11. 16. & 19. 22. opposed to a way that is not cast up, where no causey is, Jer. 18. 15, that which beareth somewhat another sense, then the term of high-way, doth with us. See chap. 35. 8. and 40. 3.

of the fullers field] That is, that leadeth to it. It seems there was a causey that reached from this pool to a field not far distant from it, where the Fullers used to dress and dry their cloth, having their dwellings neer adjoyning to it, and making choice of that place, for that purpose, in regard of the pool affording plenty of water, which they had much use of. And this is more probable, then what some others have, that the causey here mentioned, should be a causey, situate between the two pools, the upper, and the lower, lower, reaching from the one, to the other.

V. 4. And say unto him] Heb. Thou shalt say: as chap. 8. 9.

Take heed, and be quiet] The message that God sends the King by the Prophet, the sum whereof is, that he should not be so disturbed and disquieted as he was:

Take heed, and be quiet] The Jewish doctors are somewhat curious here about the former word; which, in regard that the word that signifies feet of wine, (of which, see ch. 25. 6.) comes from the verb regel, take heed, but, yesh on thy feet: according to that of Moab, Jer. 48. 11. he is setled on his lees, that is, say they, his feet content with such power as thou hast of thine own; without seeking of ayds from Assyria, or any other abroad. And it is true indeed, that in the latter tenn, (which some render, be silent: Others rather, be quiet, as the word is most commonly used) as much is implyed, ch. 30. 15. where in quietness, and consilence, is their safety said to consist: that is, in not hearing to seek to and fro for succours abroad, and relying on God's assistance: but there is no need here to strain the word to such a far-fetcht notion, from that which it generally signifies, and doth exceeding well fit the place. Nor are there wanting of outs, who, though not so fit a ining the word, yet in the exposition of it, swerve from the intendement of the Prophet, some understanding it, as an admonition given the King, to be more wary: and not to venture his person so abroad: which were rather to discourage, then to enhance his courage him, contrary to the end that he was sent for. Others, as an advice, to set Sentinels, and keep watch and ward diligently: as implying, that God, though he gave assurance of safety, yet would not have industry neglected. But that had been but to spur on a running horse. There needed no inciting of him, unto that which he was froward enough unto of himself: and in likelyhood, looking after at that very time when the Prophet came to him. See on v. 3. The former word, hath reference to the Latter. And it is no more then as if he had said, take heed how thou beeth thus unquiet, and restless: Or, see by any means, that thou keep quiet: be not disturbed and distracted, but quiet thy mind, and looke not out for foreign helps; but rest on that eye, that God shall by thine own forces assisting them, or other wise working for thee, afford thee. Like as Moses his speech to the Israelites, pursued by Pharaoh, Exod. 14. 13. and Jahaziels to Jehoshaphat, and his people, 2 Chr. 20. 15, 17. Take heed, and be quiet, for, take heed thou be quiet, as, take heed for thy heed, and be quiet, for, take heed thou be quiet, no more, Exod. 10. 28. Take heed of him, and obey his voyce, for take heed that thou do obey his voyce, Exod. 23. 21. Take heed, yee go not unto iniquity, for, take heed that thou regard not iniquity, Job 36. 21.

fear not, neither be faint-hearted] The same in effect, in other terms repeated, to put the more courage into him, and the better to settle his unsettled thoughts. Heb. Let not thine heart be tender; be not soft-hearted. Softness being opposed to firmness, the property of a body easily to yield, and give in, upon the least force or touch, and to receive impression from every approaching object. See the like phrase, Deut. 28. 5. Jer. 51. 46. a soft heart, therefore, is put for such a weak, faint tender, timorous, hildin, or effeminate disposition, as hath no courage or manlineſs at all in it, 2 Chr. 13. 8. as faith or confidence (which yet some suppose, here alluded unto) but smoaking, as makes the heart firm, Heb. 11. 27. so distrust and diffidence, makes it to faint and flutter, Luk. 12. 29.

for the two tayls of these smoaking fire-brands] Thus the Prophet speaks in way of contempt of those two Kings, and their forces, which were so for middable to this King and his people, and came on with such fury and fierceneſs, as if with fire and sword they were resolved to destroy all before them; and made full account to without resistance to carry it. He calls them, in derision, not two fire-brands which yet were not much to be feared, unleſs it were in some very light matter, Zach. 12. 6. but two tailes, that is, two ends of sick brands, in which fire is usually kept, and those two ends, not flameing, and burning, as those of Samsons between the foxes tails, Judg. 15. 4. (which yet some suppose, here alluded unto) but smoaking, as ch. 42. 3. So that though they may make some smother, yet have little fire, or force to do much hurt, in them, and are ready to go out. Psal. 118. 12.

fire-brands] Which being taken off the hearth, retain not fire long, but after a while smoak onely, and to at length go out. So Amos 4. 11. Zach. 3. 2. though there made use of another way. However, the Jewish Doctors, whome some of ours also here follow, affirm by the word here used, to be meant, not a fire-brand, but a vaſſle-ſtaffe, or, flock; such as they use to stir the fire to an fro with in the oven; which when it is burnt to neer to the end, that it cannot longer behold in the hand safely, or further use made of it, is thrown away, and yeth smoaking on the ground, till it go out. No unfit resemblance to illustrate that, that is by the Prophet here intended. But the use of the word in those other places, carries it rather the former way.

for the fierce anger] Heb. in the fierce anger: and so it is well rendred, Exod. 11. 8. 1 Sam. 20, 34. But so is the same particle also used, as it is here rendered, Neh. 5. 3. Esth. 4. 7. Psal. 150. 2.

fierce anger] Word for word, heat of nose. Because anger discovereth it self in the nose, Psalm 18. 8. So also ch. 13. 9, 13. As if he had said, all their fiercenels, and fierineſs of their fury, though they fume at the nose never so much, shall prove nothing but smoake.

of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah] The two brands ends before mentioned.

with syria] Heb, and Syria, But so elsewhere, chap. 5. 14. The latter with pipe: and Neh. 12. 42. The singers sang with Jezrahiah their over-seer. So that, the King of Syria, with Syria; That is, all his Syrian forces put together, make but one brands end.

the son of Remaliah] So he calleth him in contempt, rather then by his proper name, Pekah: because his father Remaliah was but an obscure private perſon: and his sone Pekah, might the rather therefore go for the tail of a brand. See ch. 9. 14.

Remaliah] Heb, Remaliyahu; as Jeshaiahu, ch. 1. 1. So constantly, ch. 8. 6.

V. 5. Because Syria, Ephraim and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying] The words in the hebrew run thus, Because Syria hath consulted against thee evil; Ephraim and the son of Remaliah saying. An elegancy of speech, not unusual in hebrew; in this Prophet especially: whereby divers acts, or attributes, are to divers subjects, as in way of distribution, severally applyed: whereas they are to be joyntly understood of either party: and alike appertain to either. See chap. 5. 13. For we are not to conceive it thus spoken: as if the one party had propounded, or contrived, and counselled: and the other concluded, and resolved: but they laid both their heads together, and agreed both joyntly upon the issue; as those Psal. 83. 3, 5.

Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah] God will scarce vouchsafe to give them their names, Syria] Or, the Syrian, in contempt; For Rezin the King of Syria, See ver. 1, 4.

Ephraim] Israel, the ten tribes. See ver. 2.

the son of Remaliah] For, Pekah King of Israel. See ver. 4.

have taken evill counsel] Heb. have consulted evill: or, an evill thing. (for the hebrews use the feminine for the neuter) Or, have upon con sultation resolved evill; as 2 Chr. 25. 16. Jer. 49. 20, 30. See verse 6, 7.

V. 6. Let us go up against Judah, and vex it] The result of their fore-mentioned consultation to make war joyntly upon Judah.

go up] Of this phrase, see on ver. 1.

against Judah] That is, the kingdome of Judah, say some: the head, or head city of it, Jerusalem, say others: it may well comprehend both, and the land it self with them.

vex it] That is, weary them out, and so compell them to yeeld up to us both themselves, and their city. Some other render the word, let us wrack them, or, vex the Hivites as if they lived securely, and expected no hostile invasion; which is not so probable, having smarted so much, and that so lately also already. See on ver. 1. Or, as some others, let us make some disturbance among them, let us set them among themselves together by the ears; a ready course to make way for a forreign enemy to enter. But the translation we have is right, and confirmed by that which is objected against it. For whereas it is alleaged by some, that the verb in the form here expressed is not used, but for to awake, that is, to stir up, and to raise out of sleep; the contrary is true, that the word where it hath reference unto sleep, in that form, out of which, in such like, it is never read, though the form be usually active, yet hath always a passive notion, and signifies, not to awake, or make one to awake, (to which purpole, another word is ordinarily used, Cant. 2. 7. 8. 5. & 8. 4.) but to be awaked, or to awake of ones self. as 2 King. 4. 31 Psal. 35. & 44. 23. & 73. 20. and constantly elsewhere. And the sense here rendered, is further confirmed by the use of the same word in another form, with reference to those very words, ver. 16.

and let us make a breach therein for us] That is, as some, let us violently break in upon it, or, through it: as the word is used, 2 Sam. 23. 26. & 2. King. 3. 26. and as some expound that, Amos. 1. 13. so it is said of the Arabians, that they brake into Judah, 2 Chr. 21. 17. & of Jerusalem, the city was broken up, Jer. 39. 2. Others, let us make a breach in it, to wit, among the people, which may be for us, that is, for our advantage, whereby the more readily to surprize it. Others, let us tear it away from the King, the rest, and adjoyn it unto our own territories, or our selves. Others, let us vex it, divide it to our selves; that is having parted it in twain, (as dividing the spoyl, before the field fought, or victory gotten, and making no doubt of a general conquest) let us share it between us, and take either his moyety of it. And such complexive phrases in Scripture are oft found. See on ch. 6. 11. Howbeit because the same form is used, where no such partition is to wit, 2 Chr. 32. 1 where Senacharib is said to have entred into Judah, and encamped against the fenced Cities thereof to break, or, divide or, by breaking, or, dividing, to win, or, to gain them to, or, for himself: (where in also, that complexive form of speaking is found) I suppose there is nothing more here intended, then that by a forcible surprisal of the land and Kingdome of Judah, they intended to make it theirs.

and set a King in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeel] Some read this clause by way of disjunction, or set a King in the midst of it. Let us either put it between us, or, if we cannot accord upon the partition, let us set up such an one for a King over it, that may be under our protection, & hold it from us both. And it is not improbable, that their intent was to set up such a King, as might be in a kind of vassalage, lage to them both; such as the Syrian sometime challenged the king of Israel to be to him, 2 King. 20. 2,6. as also true it is, that the copulative is used oft, as a disjunctive, Gen. 2. 6. Exod. 21. 19. But of that there is no necessity here; because no such partition before necessarily implyed.

in the midst of it] In Jerusalem, the head city, or the center of it; or, in the vein, simply, by a frequent Hebraisme: as chap. 6. 12. ver 22.

Set a King——even the son of Tabeel] Heb. let us make to reign in it as King, or, for King, the son of Tabeel. So 2 King. 8. 20. & 2 Chr. 21. 8. the Edomites made to reign over them a King. Who this son of Tabeel should be, there is much dispute and debate. Some Syrian, say some; for Tabeel, say they, is a Syrian name: as Tabrimon, 1 King. 15. 18. signifying a worshipper of the God Rimmon: 2 King. 5. 18. others, some Israelite; and as some of them conjecture, Zichri the Ephramite, that slew the Kings son, and the chief about him: for the good service he then did, 2 Chr. 28. 7. The Jewish Rabbines, some of them by a trick of theirs, which they call Athbam, make of Tabeel Remalia; but whether thereby they understand Remaliah, or no, they tell us not. But their device is this; they write the letters of the hebrew in two lines, the one half thus, under the other.

Then they take them, as they stand in order, the upper, for the lower and the lower for the upper: and so of טאבאל they make רמליה Another crochet they have, which they call Athbash. Of which, see on Jer. 25. 26. Others, of them, whome some of ours also accord with, would have it no proper name, but to signifie such an one, as should seem good to us, or such an one as shall not be good for them. But neither will the word, with any writing, well afford such a sense; nor is it probable, but that some certain person is designed, whose parent bear that name; though, who, and what he was, be uncertain, because no where else named: Yet of the same name we find one, but of far later times, Ezr. 4. 7. whereby it appears to have been a name not unusual.

V. 7. Thus saith the Lord God] Gods sentence followeth concerning this their resolution; which they made no doubt but to bring about.

It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass] It, that is, this their counsel, or resolution, inclosed in the word, have consulted ver. 5.

not stand] Things are said, in hebrew, to stand, when they take effect, Psal. 33. 11. The counsel, or purpose of the Lord shall stand: or are confirmed, and established, Numb. 30. 4, 7, 9. Deut. 19. 15. and on the other side, not to stand, but to fall to the ground, when they take not effect, but are frustrate, Numb. 30. 12. 1 Sam. 3. 19.

neither shall it come to pass] Heb. nor shall it be: chap. 8. 10. And this hath a further emphasis in it: for things may be produced into act, and so have an existence, and yet not be established, not continued; but this resalt of theirs shall never have any existence: it shall go no further then words, it shall never come into Act. Thus the Lord bringeth the counsel of nations to nought; and makes peoples devices of none effect, Psal. 33. 11. thereby shewing, that there is no counsel against God, Prov. 21. 30.

V. 8. For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin] Or, as some other, But the head of Syria shall Damascus be, and the head of Damascus shall Rezin be: that is, he shall continue that which he now is: to be, for, to continue: as Dan. 1. 21. So the meaning should be; I have set these Kingdomes their limits, Act 17. 26. and they shall not pass the bounds that I have assigned them. As Damascus shall continue still the head city of that part of Syria, 2 Sam. 8. 5, 2 Chr. 28. 5. so shall Rezin continue, while he lives, king of Damascus: and shall not be, as he makes account to be, King of Jerusalem: nor shall Jerusalem have any relation to Syria, but continue the mother-City of Judah, still, as it is. Thus, they, how beit another reading may well be admitted, that neither, foreeth the text, and seems better to suit with that which ensueth; nor requireth any such supply as this doth, to make the sentence entire. And though, (for so the particle is frequently used, Josh. 17. 18. Psal. 23. 4. ch. 14. 1.) or, For though, (for one particle sometime includes two: see on ch. 18. 5.) Damascus be the head of Syria, and Rezin the head of Damascus. Yet (so is the copulative oft taken, ch. 8. 9. 10. & 17. 6. & 49. 5.) within sixty and five years shall Ephraim be broken, —— and Samaria with her head, Remaliahs son, shall likewise be broken: as if he had said, although the house of Israel carrie it self so high, rely ing on their confederacy with Rezin, who being King of Damascus, the head city of Syria, & by reason thereof, hath the greatest part of that country at command; yet that shall not hinder, but that within the term of time here designed, the State of Israel shall be dissolved, and Remaliahs son shortly ruined. And this I suppose to be the genuine, sence of the place. See v. 9.

and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people] Concerning this prediction, and the stint of time mentioned in it, there is no small difficulty. Since that, from the time of this Prophecy, about the third or fourth of Ahaz, as was formerly shewed; (see on v. 1.) unto the time that the ten tribes by Salmanesser king of Assyria were removed out of their native soyl, and transported into other parts of his Dominions; nor had now any setled State, which was in the sixth year of Hezekiah, 2 King. 18. 9, 10. cannot be above twenty three, or twenty four years at most; yea, there want not, that reduce them to a far narrower compass, to the space of eleaven years, two of Pekah, ch. 8. 4. and nine of Hoshea, 2 King. 17. 6. which difference we shall not now stand to reconcile, because it concerneth not this place. This knot some finding not how how to untye, fall to cut it asunder. And pretending the original copies to be corrupted, would have six read for sixty; as if the Prophet had said, within six, and five, (that is, eleven) years: shall Ephraim be broken from being a people: and just so many, say they, are reckoned from the time of this Prophecy, unto the ruine of Samaria, 2 King. 17. 6. But this, because it seemeth over-bold with the text, and introduceth a strange and unusual kind of computation, we let pass. The most generally received solution, given both by Jewish Doctors, and Christian Writers, is, that the head of this account is to be fetched, not from the time that Esay spake these words: but from the time when this dissolution of the Israelitish State, was by the Prophet Amos foretold. This they reckon two waies, Some make up their account by the reigns of the Kings of Judah, Amos, say they, prophesied in the daies of Uzziah; two years before the earthquake, Amos, 1. 1. which was in his reign, Zach. 14. 5. And fell out, (as the Jewish tradition hath it,) just at that time, when he prested into the Temple to burn incense, and was smitten with the leprosie, 2 Chr. 26. 16, 20. This they presume to have been in the twenty and seventh of his reign, two years before which Amos began to prophesie: to wit, in his twenty and fifth. Nor do they much swerve from this way of computation, who would have the number of years reckoned from that year, or the next after it, wherein Uzziah was so smitten: because, say they, the Syrians then began (taking occasion by the kings disability) to make inroads on his land, 2 King. 15. 37. Though that seem rather to have been in Jothams reign: and, in likelihood, toward the latter end of it. But however that be, these agree with the former, in that, albeit they make Uzziah's irruption into the temple, two years sooner then they: Yet both begin their computation from the same year, to wit, the twenty and fifth of Uzziah; and so cast twenty and seven years of his reign (being, in all, two and fifty, 2 King. 15. 2.) into this account; unto which, if we add his son Jothams sixteen, 2 King. 15. 33. Ahaz his sixteen, 2 King. 16. 2. and six of Ezekiah's, (for in the sixth of his reign was Samaria taken, and that State ruined by Salmaneser, 2 King. 18. 10.) we have the just sum of sixty and five years. But against this computation, we have divers weighty exceptions. First, there is nothing more then uncertain tradition, to assert the truth of that terrible earthquakes co-incidence, with that inconsiderate act of Uzziah. Secondly, it is not onely improbable, but undoubtedly untrue, that Uzziah was smitten with leprosie, either in twenty and fifth, or in the twenty and seventh year of his reign. For his son, and successour Jotham, was twenty and five years old at his fathers decease, 2 Chr. 27. 1. and was consequently born in the twenty and seventh of his reign, which should be the very same year that he became a leper, according to the one; two years after that fad occurrent, according to the other. Neither of which is agreeable to truth: The sacred story informing us, that Jotham was not either unborn, or an infant, when his father was so smitten: but of those years that he was able, both to mannage the private affairs of the royal family, and to sway the State. For so it is said, that his father being sequestred upon that occasion, Jotham his son, was over the house, judging the people of the land, 2 King. 15. 5. Lastly, it is objected, that Amos his prophecy, which is made the head of this account, was as well in Jeroboams, as in Uzziah's reign, whereas the year of Uzziah, which is here fixed on, was some space of time, after Jeroboams decease. For Uzziah began to reign in Jeroboams twenty and seventh year, 2 King. 15. 1. and Jeroboam reigning but fourty and one, 2 King. 14. 23. His last must fall in with the fourteenth of Uzziah's, some ten, or eleven short of Uzziah's twenty fifth, the first year of their account. Others therefore to shun these difficulties, make their reckoning by the reigns of the King of Israel, and ca-ry up their account to the seventeenth, or eighteenth of Jeroboam. From whose reign, taking either twenty and four years: and so not regarding the reigns of Zachery, and Shallum, his next successors, that made up but seven moneths between them, 2 King. 15. 8, 13. or twenty and three years, reckoning one year for them: and thereunto adding Menahems ten years, 2 King. 15. 17. Pekahiahs two years, 2 King. 15. 23. Pekahs twenty, 2 King. 15. 27. : and Hoseahs nine, 2 King. 17. 6. they make the sum, with out any overplus, compleat. But we meet in Scripture again with that which disturbs also this course of account. For we read there, that Zachery, Jeroboams son, began his reign in the thirty and eight year of Uzziah, 2 King. 15. 8. Now his fathers last falling in with the fourteenth of Uzziah: there must of necessity be an interual of, at least two, or three and twenty years, between the decease of the father, and the short reign of the son; supposed to have fallen out by the infancy of the son, or his fathers decease: neglected therefore, and not regarded, while others governed, until that comming to some maturity of years, he gat the reins into his hand, but held them not long. Now these years, taken in, will make the product arise far above the sum, mentioned here in the text. Nor doth it add any strength, therefore, to either of these computations, to tell us, as some of prime note do, and

and that very confidently, though without any colour or ground for it; that this number of years was formerly defined by Amos, and passing by tradition, from one to another, was common in mens mouths, and this before mentioned thus by the Prophet: nor what some other observe, that in Scripture computations are sometime made, not from the time of any matter in present discourse, but from some other fore-past: and not there, or then, at all mentioned. To which purpose they produce that of Absolom, who having obtained liberty of access to Court again, is said, after forty years, to have entred into a conspiracy, 2 Sam. 15. 7. which years are not to be reckoned, either from his return from exilement, or his repair again to Court, but from some other remarkable tearm of time, no more expressed, then this in the text. For as the former is a meer presumption, so this latter, is but a misapplication of matters incomplient; the tenour of the speech, running far diverslly, in the one, and the other. At the end of so many years, such a thing was done saith the one: and yet sixty and five years, and such a thing shall be done, saith the other. But all these difficulties may be easily cut off, if we understand the words, as one would have them; not to intend any set stint of the standing, or fall of the State: but of the time onely, at which the fall of it was fore-told: for on this wise he gives us the sense of them. Samaria shall fall, as was sixty and five years ago fore-told by Amos. Which being presumed to be the mind of the Prophet, the account may soon be made up. For begin we at the seventh year of Uzziah, concurring with the thirty and third of Jeroboam; there will remain fourty and six of Uzziah's reign: and unto which, adding the sixteen of Jothams, and the three first of Ahaz's: we have what we desire. But this Authour must first shew us how this notion of his can be made up, by any grammatical construction out of the words of the text; which indeed he doth not, nor can it be done. Thus then having, considered the computations of those who fetch the head of the account backward, from before the time of Esay's delivery of this prophecy; and either ending it, some space of time after, or setting no period or stint of it at all. We do not meet with, in them any satisfactory solution of the doubt, concerning it, moved. And undoubtedly the words seem evidently to carry it on entire to the future. Now as in the former, the main question was concerning the head of the reckoning, so the difference here is most about the other tearm, the end of it. The most suppose it, to end at the taking of Samaria by Salmaneser the king of Assyria, in the ninth year of Hosheahs reign: and the sixth of Ezekiahs, 2 King. 18. 9, 10. But that accounts falling, (as hath been shewed) at least forty years short; since that, taking the rise of it from Ahaz his first, (which is earlier, in likelihood, by two, or three year, more then should be,) and adding to his fifteen, 2 King. 17. 1. Ezekiahs six; the most that can be produced, is but twenty two years; forty and three short of sixty five. To salve this, some referre hold of the Hebrew, that is it not said, To, barely: as Jon. 3. 4. To forty dayes, and Nineveh shall be destroyed: but words for words, as Jer. 28. 3. within two full years, and even year, &c. which is truly accomplished, if at any time within that compass, though never so many years before the expiration thereof, it be fulfilled. And this is true indeed: But neither is God wont to set such large limits of time, concerning matters to be concluded within a far shorter compass; and much less to cut out computations so precisely, not in fome ones; whole exact account is not punctually intended. Nor had it been agreeable to what God himself, and the Prophet here in propounded: to wit, the encouraging of Ahaz against the fear of these his enemies, to enlarg the limit of their appointed fall, in the acquainting of him with it; so far beyond the set point of time, in Gods secret purpose assigned thereunto. It had been far greater matter of encouragement to him, to tell him, that within some twenty four, or twenty five, or some what lower. Is to nine indeed, that in Scripture we find severe how of Gods, both promises and menaces, upon mans worse, or better carriages; yet such himself acquaints us with his course, either way, in that kinde, Jon. 3. 4, 10. But that God hath, at any time, cut short any precise term of time, peremptorily set, for the execution of a judgment, I suppose no example can be produced: and there is little reason to admit that here, which we have no president of elsewhere. In the last place therefore, some late writers conclude this account, not at Salmaneser's surprizal of Samaria, and deportation of the main body of the ten tribes: but at a far later, utter removal of them by Esarhaddon; who succeeded Sencherib his father, in the kingdome of Assyria, ch. 37. 38. This they gather from Ezr. 4. 2. where those, whom the Jews upon their return from Babylon, found inhabiting in those parts, affirm that they were brought thither by Esar-haddon, and had continued there ever since. That which they deem to have been done, when that king of Assyria, by his Captains invading Judah, took Manasses prisoner, whome he kept some space of time also, in bonds, at Babely 2 Chro. 33. 11. and withal swept away the remainder of those that Salmaneser had left; in the room whereof he placed those mentioned in Ezra. From the third then; or fourth of Ahaz, at what time this was by Esay delivered, (of which, see on ver. 2.) unto the twenty and third, or fourth year of Manasses, about which time he is presumed to have been captived, and the residue of the ten tribes taken away; taking in the latter twelve, or thirteen, of Ahaz his reign, and the twenty nine of Ezekials, 2 Chr. 29. 1. the whole product will be, just sixty and five years. And this seems the most probable computation of this sum, and expofition of the place.

that it be not a people] Heb. from a people, or from being a people; Jer. 33. 10, & 48. 42. So ch. 17. 2.

V. 9. And the head of Ephraim is Samaria: and the head of Samaria is Remaliahs son] Or as others, And the head of Ephraim shall be Samaria: and the head of Samaria shall Remaliahs son be, : as before of Damascus, and Rezin, vers. 8. Samaria shall continue still, the head city of Pekahs kingdome; and Pekah for that short time that he hath to reign, and live, the king of it, and not of Jehualem, which he shall have no power to dispose of. Howbeit, some would rather knit these words with the verse next before-going: and render them together, thus, For the head of Syria, Damascus, and the head of Damascus, Rezin, shall be broken in pieces: which is supplyed from the next branch (Then after sixty and five years Ephraim be broken from being a people; together with the head of Ephraim, Samaria; and the head of Samaria Remaliahs son. To which purpose, also some of the Jewish Doctors, do in the former verse, the latter clause, insert, Aram, with Ephraim; reading the words, Aram, and Ephraim shall be broken in pieces. Else, say they, nothing should here be spoken, of the evil that should befall Rezin, and Syria, whereas the fall of both kingdomes are usually joyned together in this prophecy, chap. 8. 4. & 17. 3. See vers. 16. But these readings make over-bold with the textand dismember it over much. I rather therefore choose to adhere to that reading, which was pointed to, ch. ver. 8. And both the head of Ephraim, Samaria, and the head of Samaria, Remaliahs son, shall likewise be broken. This onely in the end, being supplyed from the former verse. Then which manner of supply, nothing is more common in Scripture, Gen. 2. 16. & Chr. 10. 11. Job 3. 20. & 8. 14. & 14. 8. & 16. 21. & 24. 19.

If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established] If ye will not give credit to this message which I bring you from God, and rest on his gracious promises, whereby he engageth himself to you, if ye will rely on him, and not seek out to the Assyrians for aid and support, to frustrate all the designs and attempts of these your adversaries, whom you stand so much in fear of: and to protect you against them; ye will never prosper, nor be firmly setled, either in your State, or in your minds. It comes home to that, and drives to the same end, which that of Jehoshaphat, to his people, doth, 2 Chron. 20. 20. Trust on the Lord, so shall ye be established: trust to his Prophets, so shall ye prosper. The same thing, in effect, is in both places intended: the onely difference is, that it is propounded negatively, as by way of confirmation, in the one, and as insinuation of some doubt made, not undeservedly of what they would doubt is laid down affirmatively, as by way of confident and comfortable affirmance, in the other: and as with some hopeful expectation of that to be done by them, that was required of them. There is in either place an elegancy in the found of the words, which our English cannot express. Some other readings there are here. So just by such as have no footing in the words of the text: some render them thus: if ye believe not me, nor are ye faithful to God, according to that, Luk. 20. 16. Others, Do ye not believe? it is because ye are not established, but continue still in your diffident state and distrust. Others lastly, Do you not believe, because you are not confirmed? Because that which I tell you, is not by some sign confirmed to you? And so they suppose, way is made for the subsequent sign. But the reading we have, seems most plain and proper, and to flow most naturally from the text.

surely] So is the particle here found, oft used, Gen. 3. 1. Exod. 3. 12. chap. 5. 7. Some suppose an ellipsis, in such use of it; as if it were entire: truth it is, that it shall so be, or not be. Howbeit, we need not conceive such a defect here, or make such a supply, as some would enforce, as if it were of necessity thus to be read, it is a sign that ye shall not be established. Since that the particle is oft used, as a note of asseveration, where the word, sign, admitted, will make no good sence: as Psal. 44. 22. Job 8. 6. & 20. 20. & 28. 1.

V. 10. Moreover, the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying] The Prophet, by Gods appointment, proceeds fruther to confirm Ahaz, whom he perceived still to stagger, and doubt of what he had said to him, by making him offer of a sign.

Moreover] Heb. And. as chap. 3. 16. and so rather, then therefore, as some. Which though elsewhere it doth not amiss, as Neh. 2. 20. & 5. 2. yet fitteth not here.

the Lord] God himself, say some, immediately. For, when, Ahaz, say they, stood mute, and returned no answer to the Prophet, by his silence bewraying his distrust, and incredulity of what the Prophet had had delivered; the better to encourage and confirm him, God himself undertakes him, as he did sometime, Job. 38. 1. But the whole tenour of the context ensuing, shews the contrary, to wit, that God spake unto him still by the Prophet.

Speake again Heb. added to speak. An usual Hebraism; of which see chap. 5. & 8:5. Yet some would place an emphasis in it, as implying, that though Ahaz continued in his wonted impiety and infidelity; yet God perfisted in mercy and goodnesse to him.

V. 11. Aske thee a sign of the Lord thy God] For the further confirmation of thy faith, and assurance of the truth of the word from him, told thee by me.

Aske thee] An usual and elegant redundancy of phrase, or manner of speech, in most languages: it is in Scripture very rife, Gen. 12. 1 Chr. 21. 10. yet it is here deemed to have some weight to thee, or for thee, that is, for thy behoof, for thy good, as Gen. 13. 11. 1 Sam 13. 2. 1 King. 3. 5. 2 King. 4. 3.

a sign] Somewhat to be done, not ordinarily, unusual: such as God is oft wont to annex to his promises, or threats, either to strengthen mans infirmity concerning the one; or to meet with his obstinacy concerning the other. See Judg. 6. 30, 40. chap. 37. 30. & 38. 7, 8 Jer. 13. 1, 10. and 27. & 28. 16. 23.

of the Lord] Heb. from with Jehovah, or, from Jehovah as Jer. 11. 1. From him, whose word it is; and who by such means is alone able to give further assurance of it thy God] Whose people thou art king of, and whom thou professest to serve, and oughtest to do. For the Scripture oft speaks of things according to what should be done; though it be not ever done accordingly, (so Prov. 16. 13. & 22. 11. & 28. 23.) or, according to what men do profess though their practice concur not; with their Profession. chap. 48. 2. & 58. 2.

ask it either in the depth, or in the height above] God putteth him to his choice, for what sign he will have, a great favor, and honour: had this wicked wretch had grace to make a right use of it. So did he sometime also with Hezekiah, 2 King. 20. 8, 9, 10.

in the depth] Heb. make deep petition, or, go deep in asking. So the most agreeing in sense, but differing in Grammar. For some of them would have the word of asking, here, a noun; and to signifie a petition, or, request. So it should be, make deep request, as chap. 30. 6. they have made deep revolts: but because no noun so signifying, is found of that form: others will have it a verb; and the most of them, an infinitive. So it should be make deep to asken Jer. 49. 5, 30. make deep to dwell. But then there must be a supply understood, at least, of a particle in this latter place, and so in most, if not all, where the like phrase is found. But some, and so the Jewish Doctors, an imparative; which though lose of those that mention it, reject, and the places by the Rabbines alleadged for it, are not solid. Yet it is most consonant to that usual phrase of the language, where both verbs compounded without that particle, are wont to be of the same word. So Hos. 9. 9. they have made deep, have corrupted: for, they have deeply corrupted: and so here, make deep ask, for, ask deep. In like manner are the Hebrew Doctors divided, some going the one way, and some the other, about that, Psal. 51. 2. multiply to wash, or, multiply wash me, for wash me well, or, much, over and over, again and again; as if he could never be washed enough. The simple sense, of this clause, then, is no more than ask deep. How beit, many both of the Greek, and Latine Interpreters, whom, some later ones also adhere to, render the word more largely, make deep, (to wit, the sign, that you would have) to hell, or, to the grave, or, to the depth of the earth; make it as deep as the earth, or hell it self is, Jer. 31. 37. (of the word, and its signification, having its name of asking, or, craving, because it is never satisfied, Prov. 30. 15, 16. see on ch. 5. 14.) and this they labour from the next clause to confirm, where it is said, make it high, or, lift it up aloft; that is, say they, fetch it from heaven, unto which somewhat should be here correspondent; but of that there is no necessity: and, as the word is diverse from that, that signifies a sign, so it is, as much, if not more, discrepant from that which signifies the grave, or, hell:

or in the height above] Heb. make high, or, heighten, or lift up aloft that is, as by instances the Jewish Doctors illustrate it, ask some sign, below: as, the moving, or cleaving of the earth, Numb. 16. 30. 1 Sam. 14, 15. or, some sign above, as the eclipsing of the light of the Sun, or the like, Joel. 2. 30, 31. Luk. 21. 25. The meaning may be simply this, let the sign that thou askest, be high, or low, a matter of greatest or meaner concernment, such an one, as thy self pleaseth: God gives thee thy choyce.

V. 12. But Ahaz said] Heb. And Ahaz said. As ch. 5. 12, 25.

I will not ask] To wit, any sign, one, or other. And he refuseth to ask a sign; not out of any reverent and religious respect to God, as loath to tempt him, or stint him, like those in the Wilderness, Psal. 78. 41. though he made that his pretence, but out of diffidence and distrust; either because he believed nothing of that the Prophet spake; but that all was vain, and frivolous; or, because he was resolved to go on another way, then the Prophet advised, to seek help from the Assyrian, and not to rely upon God, from whom therefore to ask a sign, would be to no purpose. See 2 King. 16. 17.

neither will I tempt the Lord] Some would have the words rendered, I will not exalt the Lord, as if he should say, that he would not do the Lord so much honour, as to give glory to him, by craving a sign of him. But albeit, a word of sound and letters somewhat neer this signifies, to lift up an ensign; yet is this word and this form, no where found so used: but the same word is used in the like sense, though in the better part, and on the like occasion by Gideon, I will try, or prove, or, let me try, or prove, this once, Judg. 6. 30. nor is it to be imagined, that Ahaz, should speak so blasphemously to the Prophet: but it was rather spoken by him hypocritically, as respecting that Prohibition, Deut. 6. 17. (alleadged also by our Saviour, to the Tempter, tempting him to tempt God, Matth. 4. 7. Luk. 4. 12.) Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God: as if a man should, or could tempt God, by doing that which he is enjoyned, or invited by God himself to do. And they therefore also seem to strain here too far, who expound Ahaz his words, as if he should say, that he intended not to try what God would do for him in the present war, and in the danger thence imminent, but take such courie, as he deemed, would most conduce to his own safety and indempnity. As also those do, who surmise that therefore Ahaz should not try, the Lord my God, as the Prophet had before said. The Lord thy God, v. 11 but the Lord, onely, as refusing to own him, as his God: for although it be true, that for such trial, the word is sometime used, 1 Sam. 17. 40. Dan. 1. 12, 14. nor much otherwise in that, Judg. 6. 39. and that Ahaz was a wicked man, and one that in heart was wholly departed from his God, having resolved to rely on an arm of flesh, Jer. 17. 5. yet, it is not likely, that he was as yet grown up unto such an height of profeited impiety, as openly to renounce God, and dependance upon him.

V. 13. And he said] Or, Then. (as ch. 65. 1.) said he, to wit, the Prophet.

Hear ye now, O house of David] This compellation the Prophet useth, as a preface, to stir up, not the King alone, but the rest of them then present, to attend unto that, as a matter of no small concernment, which he was to speak to them, See the like, ch. 28. 14, 23. & 48. 1.

O house of David] Some ask here, why he saith, O house of David; rather then, O Ahaz, when as he intended him only? To which, some of the Iewish Doctors answer, That it was done in way of disgrace and reproach to the King, as one unworthy to be named; as Saul to Ahimelech, Hear, now, O Son of Ahitub 1 Sam. 22, 12. and Moses to Corah, and his associates, Hear, now, O Sons of Levi, Numb. 16. 8. But the Prophet doth not direct his speech unto Ahaz alone; but to the rest of his family, together with him, as faulty also in the same kind with him. And the verb therefore is plural, though the noun be singular, because taken collectively, as ch. 2. 5. Howbeit, true it is, that in way of reproach, the Prophet seems so to tearm them, as much degenerating from him, of whose family they professed themselves to be, and esteemed it no small grace and glory to them. So ch. 48. 1, 2. Matth. 3. 9. Joh. 8. 33, 37, 39. And so Saul to his followers, Hear, now, O Sons of Jemini, will the Son of Jesse give you lands, &c. that ye conspire with him against me. He calls him in scorn the Sone of Jesse, as a man of mean birth; them by way of reproach, the Sons of Jemini, Benjamites, (ch. 9. 1.) as forgetting their own family, and taking part with one, that sought to devest it of its royalty. See v. 4.).

It is a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also] The same he chargeth them with, is their wearying and grieving, not so much Gods Ministers and Messengers, as God himself, whome they serve, and for whom they are sent, in refusing to rely on him, and accept of his gracious offers, and choosing rather to seek after, and rely on other means, for their safety. See v. 4. 8.

It is a small thing] Some would have it read by way of enunciation: This is a small thing. But the particle prefixed, is constantly an interrogative, in this manner of speech, as Gen. 30. 15. Numb. 16. 9, 13. Josh. 22. 17. Ezek. 16. 20. & 34. 18. and it is a form of speech usually favouring of much indignation and exprobration, with inference of some further and greater, than former, or ordinary guilt; as by view of the place pointed to, may appear.

to weary men] To vex, and moleft, (as Job 4. 2. Shall we not grieve, or be troubled some to thee (men; either in generall, and those whom by your tyrannies and violences, you wrong and oppresse: or rather, more specially Gods Prophets, whom ye fight by, and give no credit to: but repute as vain prattlers, and base bodies, that feed you with fancies and fables, 2 King. 9. 11. 2 Chr. 36. Ier. 5. 13. wherein the crime would be the less heynous, did it reach no further then their own persons, as they are men, and did it not rebound to God himself, 1 Sam. 2. 25. as it doth, Exod. 10. 7. Num. 16. 11. 1 Sam. 8. 7. Ier. 5. 12. Luk. 10. 16. Joh. 3. 20. 1 Thes. 4. 8.

but will ye] Or, but that ye will. Making it one continued sentence.

weary God] In distrusting him, and refusing to rely on him. Or, as some, in reputing him unable to do what he promiseth, and undertakes to effect. So they suppose the word sometime to signifie, as Gen. 19. 11. they could not, or, were not able to find the door: and ch. 1. 14. I cannot, or, am not able to bear: and so here, to make God impotent, or, unable to do ought; as men are wont to be, when they are tired, and spent, which God never is, ch. 40. 28, 29. The sense is good, and sound; (for such conceit of God, is one usual ground of distrust, Psal. 78. 19. 20. 22. Rom. 4. 20, 21.) but the construction is too coast.

my God] Whome in special manner, and office, I belong unto, as 1 King. 17. 1. & 18. 10, 15. Rom. 1. 8, 9. in regard whereof also, the wrong done, in disregarding the message that I now bring thee from him, reflects upon him, and doth chiefly respect him, being not my message, but his, 2 Cor. 5. 20. & 13. 3. 1 Thess. 2. 13. Yet some observe, that he saith not now, as before thy God, ver. 11. but my God, because he had feemeed not to own him, himself, v. 12. But of that see there.

V. 14. Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign] Though by your refusal of Gods gracious offer, you make your selfe utterly unworthy of any such favour to be shewed you; yet will God vouchsafe, of his own free accord, to afford you a sign.

Therefore] Or, Notwithstanding, rather, Notwithstanding your wearying of God, and being so troublesome to him by your crosse, perverse, and distrustful carriage (yet will he do this for you. The particle here used, is, as well a disceretive, as a causative, and it is so found in the like case, Jer. 16. 14. & 30, 16. Ezek. 39. 25. Hos. 2. 14. which being observed in some of those places, hath enforced the Expositors to introduce harsh and needless projections, and bred much difficulty in the rest.

the Lord] Of this name, (for it is not Jehovah; but Adonai, the Lord) which the Jews commonly read in the room of that, (see on ch. 6. 1. which the Jews themselves[ ] Not by himself, as some, (for he doth it here by the Prophet) but of himself, of his own accord, unasked: as ch. 65. 1. For they mind not the use of the language, that translate the pronoun here, this, as if the sence were, The Lord will give you this for a sign.

shall give] Or, will give. The better, and fitter to expresse Gods own spontaneous act; as The Lord will give strength, and The Lord will bless his people with peace, Psal. 29. 11.

give] Not exhibit as some would have it: to wit, hereafter: but set: for so in Scripture, to give a sign, is to assign, or, set a sign, Exod. 13. 2. Josh. 2. 12. So Matth. 12. 39. No other sign shall be given them, (that is, set, or assigned them) save the sign of the Prophet Jonas. See the note on the place, being a place much mistaken by many.

you] Not those to come, their posterity, in whose dayes the sign here mentioned, was to be exhibited, as some strain it; but those to whom he then spake. Nor need we restrain it to the better sort of that people, (with some other,) whereof some, at least, might be among the rest there, for the promise of the Messias was made to the whole body of that people, Rom. 9. 4. and the Prophet here speaks to none other, then those, whome in the former words he tartly taxed.

a sign] A sign indeed: a sign of signs: such a sign, as never was before it, or since, A sign, both from above, and from beneath, wherein heaven and earth, God and man, were conjoyned in one, Joh. 1. 14. Phil. 2. 6, 7. But here is a question moved, how this miraculous birth, being a matter to fall out many years, yea ages after, could conduce as a sign unto those that then lived, concerning the deliverance of them, and their head city, from the furprizal of those two kings that were coming with joynt forces against them, and it. Unto which we answer.

1. That Things not present onely, or past, but long after to ensue, are sometime given for signs: and are not seldome of much force, & efficacy to raise mens minds to an hopeful expectation of such events, as are thereby ensured. So Exod. 3. 12. This is by God given, or set unto Moses, for a sign to assure him of the: delivery of the people of Israel out of Egypt, by him: that after their coming out from thence they should serve God upon that mountain, on which God then spake to him: which yet was not to be, until the deliverance was effected. So chap. 37. 30. It was assigned to Ezekiah and his people, for a sign of their deliverance, and indemnity from Sennacherib, that they should for one year eat of that which came up of it self; and the next year on that which sprang from it, and the third year have free liberty to sow, and plant, reap, and pluck without disturbance, or interruption, at pleasure. All which was not to be, until after the departure of him, upon the destruction of his forces, when their delivery was now over. So the stones that Jeremiah was willed to take, and hide in Pharoahs brick-kiln, at Tahpanhes among the clay, for Nebuchadnezar to spread his pauilion over, when he should surprize Egypt, Jer. 43, 9, 10, was to be a sign to those perfidious Jews, who had fled into Egypt, though the event were not yet in being nor to take effect till some time after. Of that dreadful judgment, by the Prophet then denounced, both against Egypt and them. So Ezekiel was not so much the disposing of them there, as the Chaldean king, pitching of his Pavilion in that place, that was to confirm the truth of that Prophecy, whether they lived, in who's sight those were there laid, to see it, or no. To which we may add, that other stone and the book with it, cast into the midst of the river Euphrates at Babylon, thereby to assure Gods people, in captivity, there; yea and those that were to come thither after them: of their deliverance, by; and upon the destruction of Babilon, by that typified, but foretold, and so presigured to give assurance of deliverance thereby unto them; whome it had been but cold comfort to, had they been to perish likewise, together with it. Jer. 51. 63, 64. Nor was the stone and book cast into the river so much, as the irrecoverable downfal of Babel, therein designed, that which was to give the Jewish captives assurance of such deliverance, as was promised them in that book. And yet were many years to passe over their heads, yea, and multitudes of them, (whereof no small number also, not yet experienced, in continuance of time, worn out, and laid up in their graves, before that ruine of the Chaldean estate, the future figit of that their freedom.

2. The ground & end of the sign given, or a signed here, is to be observed. The ground was Ahaz his distrust of Gods power, & doubting, whether he were able to do that which the Prophet would have him to believe, and rely on him for, to wit, to protect, and safe-guard him and his state, against two such potent adversaries, without assistance of some foreign forces. The end is to assure Ahaz, that God can do as much, yea, and much more then this amounts to; he can do things more incredible, more impossible then this. This was no more then God, at divers times; had formerly done, as stories shew, Gen. 14. 9, 15, 16. Josh. 10. 5, 10. 2 King. 10. 4. 2 Chron. 14. 9, 11. 13. & 20. 1, 25. But the signe here propounded, was of such a thing as never the like was, either before or since, the birth of a Virgin. So that is, as if he had said unto Ahaz. Thou doubtest whether God can deliver thee from the forces of these two kings, without help of some other humane aids. I shall tell thee of a far greater, and more unlikely matter, that he both can do, and will do, he can, and will, cause a Virgin to be conceived, and delivered of a child, without the knowledg, or help of man.

3. It is the usual manner of the Prophets, in their prophecies and predictions of restitutions, or deliverances of Gods people, to make mention of the Messias, and to point unto him on whome all those promises of special mercies and favours, made to that people were founded; and for whose sake deliverances were oft afforded, even unto those, who were altogether unworthy of them. In regard whereof, it is not without some good probability, deemed by some, that the Prophet, therefore, instead of setting Ahaz any other sign, directeth him unto the Messias, whose miraculous birth, was the most sufficient sign that could be, both of Gods power for, and love to his people, by consideration of him, if he had any faith at all in him, to entertain some hopeful assurance of Gods word to be made good to him, in the particular now propounded. To which may be added, that it is not unlikely, that from that prediction in Moses, Gen. 3. 15. of the seed of the woman, that should bruise the head of the serpent, which the Jewish Doctors also expound of the Messias, some hint, in those times might be had of a woman (so the Apostle also stileth the mother of our Saviour, Gal. 4. 4.) that should have seed, or issue, without knowledg of man; that which some other prophecies also are, by the ancients, deemed to glance at; as Gen. 49. 10. Psal. 132. 11. Besides, Dan. 2. 34. and so the Prophet might speak unto Ahaz herein, of that which might be already received, or not unheard of, at least, among them.

4. Albeit, this concerning the Messias be mentioned; yet another sign seems to be further, withal, thereunto annexed, taken from that child of the Prophets, whom for that end he was commanded, by God, to take along with him, ver. 3. as we shall hereafter shew on ver. 15, 16. Both of them joyntly concurring to confirm Ahaz his distrustful heart. If it might have been, in that, whereof the Prophet from God, endeavoured to assure him.

Behold] A note of fedulous attention, and serious consideration duly, and deservedly prefixed, before the relation and prediction of a matter so strange, so far beyond, and above the course and power of nature, and of so weighty concernment; the incarnation, and birth of the Lord, and King Messias, the Saviour of mankind, Matth. 1. 22. 23. and that as pointing unto it with the finger, as John sometime at Christ, now incarnate, Joh. 1. 29. 36. as a thing in Gods decree and purpose, already prefent, and even then, to be seen with the eye of faith; as of Abraham, it had been many ages before, Joh. 8. 56. Of the use of the particle, see ch. 3. 1.

a Virgin] So the Evangelist, Matt. 1. 23. and so before him, the ancient Greek version received and allowed among the Jews themselves, and read publiquely in their Synagogues, with such of them as made use of the greek: nor could it therefore be so rendered by the authours of that version, in favour of Jesus, the son of Mary, not yet born, or of the christian profession, not yet in being, yet the later Jewish Doctors, since the birth of our Saviour, out of hatred to him, in whome the same is fulfilled, would have the word, Almah, here, to signifie any young woman, whether Virgin, or other, married, or unmarried; known by man, or unknown of man; and to be a name, not of integrity, but of age, or youth only. Against whome, first, we object the notation of the word, in regard whereof it signifies, properly an hidden, a concealed, a reserved one; one kept out of ordinary sight and view. One hidden from man: that is, one unknown of man. For to be hidden, is not to be known, as 1 King. 10. 3. So only we reason from the constant use of it in the whole body of Scripture, in which it is, besides this place, six times only used, thrice in the singular number, thrice in the plural. The first place is, Gen. 24. 43. in the prayer of Abrahams steward, mentioning such a wife, as for his young master he desired; which could be no other intended by him, then a pure Virgin; such an one as Rebecah is a vowed to have been there, ver. 16. Though they mistake, who say, it is there used of her for of her, another: tearm more large, (See Joel. 1. 8. where it is all for translated, a Virgin) is in that latter place used, but with such restriction, as makes it equivalent unto this; which is, by the old Iewish Greek, there also rendered, as here. The second place, is, Exod. 2. 8. where it is used of that other Mary, sister to Moses and Aaron then very young, and a Virgin, in all likelihood, all her life long. The third place, is Phal. 68. 25. where, amidst the holy train, are the Virgins beating the tabers. The usual employment of such, in their triumphant solemnities, Exod. 15. 20, 21. Judg. 11. 34. 1 Sam. 18. 6. A fourth, and fift place, are in the Canticles; where the Virgins are said to love the Spouses Beloved, ch. 1. 3. Nor were her associates, or attendants, I suppose, presumed to be others and where the Virgins number lesse attending on him, are mentioned with distinction, from both queens and concubines, chap. 6. 8. such, to wit, as those that attend on the Lamb, Rev. 14. 4. The last place is, Prov. 30. 19. where among other things that Agur reckoneth up, as not easie to be discried; one is said to be the way of a man with a Virgin, or a maid; for that is also, usually, a name of integrity with us. And this is the place, that the later Jewish Doctors so much insist upon, & triumph in, as if they had found where the word were used, for one that were no Virgin, no Maid. For vindication whereof, to let pass the forced expositions of those, who so wring the Text, as if they meant to press blood, or crush matwe, rather then to fetch milk out of it: Nor to insist upon those two more specious interpretations, that are generally most received of those, who suppose the word to be taken, not according to the truth of the thing, but according to shew and semblance onely, or repute, and esteem; and so the party chose spoken of, to be reamed a Maid, or Virgin; not as being such indeed, but as deemed, and pretended so to be. Which they seek to confirm by what followeth, verf. 20. of the whorish wife, who yet pretends to be honest. Or, that other, which yet many seem to be much taken with, of those that expound it mysteriously, as the same, in effect with this of Esay; or that, at least, of Jeremie; A woman shall compass a man, Jer. 31. 22. But to omit that, the whole tenor of Aguts discourse runs constantly in another strain. That very addition of the adulterous strumpet is sufficient to overthrow this: For, undoubtedly, the Spirit of God would never yoke the base carriage of so vile, and abominable a creature, with that sacred mystery of the incarnation of the Son of God, never to be without much reverence mentioned, or minded. To leave these therefore to their several authors, fautors, and abetters. The place, to me, seems not plain onely, but very pregnant for that sense of the word, which, as genuine, and general, we avow. For the scope of the place is clearly this, to shew how closely, and cunningly, persons, either men or women, can carry themselves, in contriving, and compassing their plots and practices, for the satisfying of their desires, when they are lewdly disposed. And the sense, consequently, apparent; that a Virgin can hardly be so strictly watch'd, and kept, but that a man, so affected, will by one way or other, procure access to her, and that so covertly, that no notice, for the present, that be taken by any that he hath been with her; as of Ammon, Absalom to Tamar, 2 Sam. 13. 20. in whose case also, nothing would have been suspected other then well, had not the parties themselves, by their own after-carriages, bewrayed it. And the like is added, to make the observation compleat, of a married woman, dishonestly minded; who yet can carry on her dissoyal practices, so smoothly, and secretely, that no note of dishonestly shall appear with her. And thus this text cleared, and the Jewish Doctors onely instance being removed, our reason against them, as well from the constant use. as from the native sense of the word, stands firm against them, that the tearm here signifies a woman untoucht, in Solomons phrase, and the Apostles, Prov. 6. 29. 1 Cor. 7. 1. Whereunto we might further add that which puzzles them, not a little; what strange matter it should import, for a young woman to be a child. And here our great Masters in Israel are at a stand; one supposing the sign to consist herein, that the child, this young woman went with, should prove a Son; another, this to be the strangeneslle of the matter; that this Man-child, as soon as ever he was born, should be able to discern between bad meat, and good; another, that he should eat butter and honey, as soon as he was born, instead of sucking in his mothers milk. These, and the like sorry shifts and surmises, are they enforced to flye unto, while they strive, by all means, to suppress that light, that from this Scripture flatteth full in their faces. Howbeit somewhat, by the way, hath dropped from one of them, that seems to give an inckling of somewhat muttered, in his time, among them, affording test-mony to the truth. He saith, some understand it of such a Maid, or Damosel, as had not been seen to bear a child. Neither doth he pass any doom, at all, upon that their opinion: And what manner of Maid, or Damosel, but a Virgin, should such be? As little agreement is there among them, in determining who this mother, or this child should be. Some would have the woman, to be king Ahaz his wife, and the child, Ezekiah, his, and her son. But herein, others of their own coat, controll them; shewing, by just computation, that Ezekiah was born divers years before this prophecy was delivered: for he was five and twenty year old, at his fathers decease, 2 King. 18. 2. who reigned but sixteen in all, 2 King. 16. 2. and was born therefore before his father was King. Others of them, would have the mother to be the Prophets wife, and the child their son; for the Prophet, say they, had three sons, having, by Gods appointment, names impoled on them, importing some Prophetical matter. Immanuel, promising Gods assistance of them, against the Israelites, and the Syrians, ch. 8. 10. Maher-shallal-hash-baz, implying the Assyrians speedy plundering of those two people, chap. 8. 3, 4. And Shear-jashub, fore-telling the return of a residue, chap. 7. 3. & 10. 21. But, howsoever for the other two we make no doubt, because they give us good ground from Gods word: yet for this their assertion, concerning such a son of the Prophets, as should be here meant, and so stiled, we have nothing from them, but their own conjectures. Against which, to omit what we might object, that the land of Judah is called the land of this Immanuel; as having a peculiar right to it, and dominion over it, chap. 8. 8. which will not agree to any of the Prophets issue, or any other private person: this I say, to let pass; this we perfist to oppose, that neither any son of the King, or of the Prophet, can be the party here spoken of, unless he can be avowed to have been born of a virgin. Upon which ground also we deservedly reject, what some of our own writers, in part, therein complying with the Jewish Doctors, have suggested, to wit, that this might, in some sort, be spoken and meant of some child then born, whether to the King, or the Prophet, or any other, which might be a type of Christ. The pitch most upon the Prophets son, mentioned in the next Chapter. The Prophet, say they, joyned himself solemnly to a Virgin, who was also a Prophetels; by her he had a child, which had a twofold name, this here foretold, and that other there expressed. And this child, so born of one being a virgin, untill the time that he was begotten on her, might be a type of him, who in a supereminent and miraculous manner, was to be conceived in, and born of a Virgin, still continuing so to be. To this purpose they alleadg divers predictions, that were verefied, some lower, or meaner way in the type; but some other far more excellent way, fulfilled in the truth, further by that type intended. But although it be true, that in sundry complexed prophecies, the thing propounded, or promised, is found exhibited, and made good in the type or shadow, corporally; in the truth or substance, thereby typified, or delineed, spiritually; as in this prophecie, is frequently shewed: Or, though corporally in both, yet not in the very selfe same manner; but analogically, by a kind of proportion, that the one beareth with the other, of which, see Jer. 31. 15. Yet this cannot hold here. First, because it takes away the strangeness intimated in the thing it self, here propounded; and which is, by this suggestion, pretended to be the type. And secondly, because it may justly be deemed to enervate the authority of the Evangelist Matthew, expounding the Prophets words, as spoken by him, of a babe to be born, not of one that had been a Virgin, until in marriage he was begotten of her; but of one, who was a Virgin, even then when she was already conceived of him in her womb; as the words precisely, both with the Evangelists, and with the Prophet here, impost; not a Virgin shall conceive; as if the meaning were one: that is, now a Virgin, shall hereafter conceive: but word for word: a Virgin shall go, great, or, be with child: as speaking of a Virgin, that so continuing should be in that condition: of which, more anon. And as that place therefore of the Psalmist, Thou wilt not leave my soul, that is, me (as Psalm 3. 2. & 7. 2. & 119. 25. with 44. 25.) to see corruption in the grave, Psalm 16. 10. may not be expounded, one way of David, though in some things, a type of Christ, and speaking in the person of Christ: and another way of Christ himself: but of Christ onely; whose flesh, though laid in the grave, yet was not there corrupted; as the Apostle argues, Act. 2. 25, 34. So what is spoken of the Messias, to be born of a Virgin, is not applyable in any other way, to any mother, not born of a Virgin, in that manner, as he was: and as it is certain, that none ever, but he, was. And we shall not a little infringe and abate the force and weight of those two principal, and pregnant testimonies, the one concerning our Saviour, his mysterious Incarnation; the other, concerning his miraculous Resurrection: if we shall thus, as some have done with either, pick out the main pith of them, to make them applyable to any other. The Mother, therefore, of the child here mentioned, is a Virgin: and no other then that ever blessed Virgin, the Mother of the Messias, continuing a Virgin, notwithstanding a Mother, Matth. 1. 18, 23. Luk. 1. 27, 35.

shall conceive] Heb. great; or, with child. For the word here used, is not a verb, as some, who render it, shall conceive: nor a participle, as other, who require it to be read, conceiving; but a verbal, signifying one with child; as it is well rendered, Exod. 21. 22. 1 Sam. 4. 19. or, one great with child, ch. 26. 17. Jer. 31. 8. as of other creatures, we use to say, great with young. Nor indeed doth the verb, whereof it comes, properly signifie to conceive: Nor is the word therefore drawn from it, rightly rendred, conception, Gen. 3. 16. where the words would rather be thus read, I will greatly multiply thy pain even the pain; or, the pain I mean (for the copulative is there, as oft elsewhere, exegetical) of thy child-bearing, or, thy going with child. By child-bearing understanding, that interval of time, between conception and birth: during which time, teeming women, as we tearm them, while they breed, and go great, are subject to many infirmities, and bear a continual burthen, for a great part of it, about them. And that is it, indeed, that the word here used, intimates; the affinity in the hebrew tongue being so neer, between woman going great with what she bears in her womb; and an hill, or mountain swelling higher then the ordinary surface of the the earth; that in some Scriptures it is somewhat ambiguous, whether of the twain is meant, Amos 1. 13. the very same word in the the plural form, feminine, signifying as well the one, as the other, king of a thing reckone, not to the eie, but to the faith. should be, Gen. 16. 11. Behold a Virgin with child; on great with child: As the Angel to Hagar, Gen. 16. 11. Behold, thou art with child. Howbeit it is, though for evidence, and certainty of truth, so delivered, to be understood in the future, as the sequel of the context shews, and one of the Jewish Doctors, well observeth, paralleling it with that of the Angel to Manoahs wife; Behold, thou shalt be with child: for so the words are, Judg. 13. 5. To be noted the rather, to meet with the vain cavil of those of them, who tax the Evangelist, as warping from the Prophets words, in rendring them by the future, Behold, a Virgin shall have in her womb: as the Greek hath it; that so, as we rightly render it, shall be with child, Matt. 1. 23. And indeed, so would the words be here also rendred, Behold, a Virgin shall be with child: which yet is not to be understood, as that other place in this Prophet, The child shall dye an hundred year old: That is, he that is now a child, shall be an hundred year old ere he dye, chap. 65. 20. So a Virgin shall be with child: That is, she that is now a Virgin, shall hereafter be with child; because the nature of the blelling promised carrieth it so there; whereas the strangeness of the business propounded, carries it, necessarily another way here: Nor may the Prophets words be otherwise taken, then as the Evangelist expounds and applies them: Unless we will say, that the Prophet fore-told one thing to be done, and the Evangelist relateth another thing as done. Whereas the one onely reportes, as exhibited, what the other had before faid, should be. For as for that quaint descant of a late writer, upon the word fulfilled, used by the Evangelist, Matth. 1. 22. that it is a tearm of art, taken from the practise of picture-drawers, who having first made a type, or rude draught of their work intended, are wont, after, to fill it up with other materials, and with variety of colours; as if therefore by were implyed, that to what the Prophet had delivered typically, the Evangelist had added somewhat; or intimated, at least, that something had been further added, to make up the full truth, of what was, but in parr fore-told: It may well seem subtile; but is nothing solid: for the meaning is plain, and obvious to any weak apprehension, that then any prediction is said to be fulfilled, when the thing is done that was foretold. I must crave pardon, that I have been somewhat prolix, in endeavouring to clear this place, containing matter of so great consequence, and concernment.

and bear] Or, bring forth: as it is more fitly, and fully rendred, Matth. 1, 23. Heb. and bearing: or, bringing forth; as Gen. 16. 11. Judg. 13. 5. Spoken, as before was observed, as in the present & 17. 19. Judg. 13. 5. Spoken, as before was observed, as in the present time, but to be understood, as in the places pointed to, and as lent time, but to be understood, as in the places pointed to, and as all here grant, in the future. And the word Virgin, reacheth as well to this, as to the former. A virgin with child; and yet still a virgin. And a Virgin bringing forth; and yet, for all that, still a virgin. And a Virgin bringing forth; and yet, for all that, still a virgin. For it is not the opening of the womb by birth, but the knowledg of man onely, that procureth, or produceth any innumination of virginity. She brought forth, say the Evangelists of the Virgin Mary, Mat. 1. 25. Luk. 2. 7. Nor are we to give heed unto those frivolous fancies, devised by the Patrons of Popery, to cast some colour upon their prodigious dotage of Transubstantiation, of the Virgin Maries miraculous delivery of our Saviour, without opening of the womb; whereas the Scripture expressly telleth us, that their child was presented in the Temple, as by vertue of a special ordinance, holy to God; because she male, that by birth had opened the womb of her that bare him, Luk. 2. 22, 23. Nor do we therefore, as those of that faction charge us, hereby any whit infringe the continued virginity, of the Mother of our Saviour; they rather themselves infringe it, in denying that to be consistent with pure, and entire virginity, which the Holy Ghost, by the Evangelist, affirms to have been with her. The conception of our Saviour, we read to have been extraordinary, and miraculous, Luk. 1. 35. but the birth of his birth: That a virgin should be with child; that is it wherein the miracle, principally, yea, peculiarly, doth consist: being a matter, not onely beyond the ordinary course, but far above all power of nature. But that, being conceived of a child, she should, at the wonted time, when her daies were accomplished, be delivered of that she went with, Luk. 2. 6. was agreeable to the ordinary course of nature: yet is joyned with the former, in relation of the miracle; because, not onely a consequent, but an evidence of it, a manifestation of that, to open view, that before lay hid, and might otherwise have been deemed, but some meer delusion.

a son] So the Angel to Mary, Thou shalt bring forth a son, Luk. 1. 31. and to Joseph likewise, She shall bring forth a Son, Mat. 1. 21. and accordingly it is said of her, She brought forth her first born Son, Mat. 1. 25. Luk. 2. 7. not a daughter, but a Son. Though the Messias came of a woman, Gal. 4. 4. yet was he to be a male, a man. A man, though of a woman; that both sexes might have interest in him. For neither is the man without the woman, nor the woman without the man, in Christ, 1 Cor. 11. 11. in whom there is no difference of male, or female, Gal. 3. 28. But a man, more especially, in regard of the eminency of the sex, 1 Cor. 11. 7, 9. & 14. 34. 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12. and in regard of the offices he was to sustain, being designed to be a Prince ch. 9. 6, 7. Luk. 1. 31, 32. a Priest, Psalm 110. 4. Hebr. 4. 14. & 5. 6. and a Prophet, Deut 28. 18, 19. Acts 3. 22, 23. A Son, that the same person might be the Son of God, in regard of his humanity; who, from all eternity had been the Son of God, in regard of his Deity, Proverbs 8. 24, 25. Psalm. 2. 7. Luk. 1. 35. Hebrewes 1. 5, 6, 8. and that the Son of God, becomming also, the Son of man; Matthew 16. 13, 16. might make those who were the sons of men, to become the sons of God: Gal. 4. 4, 5.

and shall call] So the most, yet with some difference; for some would have the word here used, a verbal, or a participle; the like whereunto they suppose to have found, Exod. 2. 16. but that place is questionable; and these read the words, as running on in one continued tenor, Behold a virgin, going with child, and bringing forth a son, and calling his name Immanuel. But others, rather, conceive it to be a verb and the greater part go this way; reading it in the third person, and she shall call. Which reading they strengthen, by producing a place out of Deut. 33. 29. where the same word is found in the same form, though in a different signification, (the reason whereof, is well known to those that are skilful in that language) in those words, And evil shall meet with you: it being there a feminine of the third person, as they suppose it here to be. Howbeit others read it in the second person, as the margent of our Bibles also represents it; Thou shalt call: Nor, as if the Prophet spake unto Ahaz: For the word is feminine; but as directing his speech unto the virgin, of whom he spake; Thou, O Virgin, shalt call. So the old Greek renders it, and the vulgar Latine; howsoever many of the ancient Greek copies are reported to have it, Thy shall call; which is as much in effect, according to the Hebrew idiotism, as if it were faid, he shall be called. The like whereunto, see chap. 60. 14. & 62. 12. and so divers also of the ancient writers, in their allegations of this place, read it. But without our marginal reading the Evangelist contends; and that, in some other words, he doth not precisely follow the old Greek. And albeit the difference be not material; yet more into this latter, this may, for the further strengthning of it, be added. That this our Prophet is found to have used the very same word, in the same form, and in the same sense, chap. 60. 18. in those words, And thou shalt call thy walls salvation, or safety. As also, that some of the Jewish Doctors (though for no good end I suppose) attest hereunto: affirming it to be spoken, in way of injunction, or command, in such manner, as legal precepts are wont to be conceived, Exod. 20. 5. & 23. 15. And so the Angell to Hagar, of the child she went with, Gen. 16. 11. Thou shalt call his name Ismael; whether way we take it, as spoken in way of prediction, or in way of injunction, as of her, or to her: appointing it is, that the nomination of the child is attributed to her. That which the hebrew writers observe, to be according to the usual custome of their nation, with whom the mother ordinarily, named the child. And indeed we find it so, very frequently, in the sacred Records. For so it seems, that Eve named her first born Cain, Gen. 4. 1. and his brother, Seth, Gen. 4. 25. and Jacobs two wives, are reported to have named both their own children, and their handmaids, which they repured as their own, Gen. 29. 32, 33, 34, 35. & 30. 3, 6, 8, 11, 13, 18, 20, 21, 24. So Hannah named her son Samuel, 1 Sam. 1. 20. And of divers other, the like is found recorded, Gen. 38. 4, 5. 1 Chron. 4. 9. & 7. 16. But our Writers render a further reason hereof: The right of nomination, say they, is in the father: because imposition of names, in behalf of the party naming, argues a special right in the dominion, or authority over the party named; as appears in Adam, imposing names, as on the creatures, Gen. 2. 19, 20. so on the first of that other sex, a woman, made for him, and to be assistant unto him, both as a woman, Gen. 2, 18, 23. and as his wife, Gen. 3. 16, 20. And in great personages, giving new names unto those, whom they take into their protection, or service, 2 King. 23. 34. & 24, 17. Dan. 1. 7. The prime right of denomination, Therefore, resides in the father, as having the more principal interest in, and more powers to be produced of: whole practice in this kind also, may many profident be produced out of Scriptures Gen. 5. 29. & 38. 3. & 41. 51, 52. 2 Sam. 12, 24, 25. 1 Chron. 7. 23. and the fathers voice carries it, as when Jacob and Rachel, upon the birth of the son of whom she dyed, gave the child several names, that which the father imposed, stood firm, Gen 35. 18. and Zacharias hand, confirmed Elizabeths vote concerning their sons name, Luk. 1. 60, 63. But the Virgin, say they, here hath the sole, and entire power of naming her child, committed to her; because there was no father on earth, either to claim it from her, or to share in it with her. The Messias, her son, being, as God, without mother; as Man, without father, Heb. 7. 3. Without father, I say, here on earth. For God was father to Christ, Joh. 8. 19, 54. not as God onely, but as man also, Luk. 1. 35. And yet unto Joseph his father in law, as some expound the word, stiled, Luk. 2. 33. in regard of his mothers, espousal to him; it is said by an Angel, at one time: as well as to the Virgin, his mother, at another time; Thou shalt call his name Jesus, Matth. 1. 21. Luk. 1. 31. Yea, of Joseph, it is said expressly, that he called his name Jesus, Mat. 1. 25. and afterward indefinitely, that at the time of his circumcision, His name was called Jesus, as he was named by the Angel, before he was conceived, Luk.

Luk. 2. 21. This therefore seems to be a nicety more subtile, then sound.

call his name Immanuel] As, call his name Jesus, Matth. 1. 21. and called his name Jabez, 1 Chro. 4. 9. That is, call him Immanuel: as Gen. 25. 28. She called his name Benoni; But his father called him Benjamin; Gave him that name: wherein question may be, how this was fulfilled, when as neither the Virgin his mother, imposed that name on him: nor was he, that we read of, commonly so called. Whereunto, the answer is ready at hand: that names, in Scripture, are oft given to persons, or said to be given them: the thereby meaning, or intending, that the persons unto whom those names are attributed, either were, or should ordinarily be so styled. But that, that which those names imported, and was thereby signified, should be so verified of them, or in them: that the name it self might, as justly and deservedly be given unto them, and used of them, as if it were their proper and peculiar appellation. So it is said of Solomon, that David his father, called him, Jedidiah: Because the Lord loved him: and by Nathan signified so much to him, 2 Sam. 12. 25. alluded also to, Neh. 13. 26. Yet read we not where David, elsewhere, so stiled him: or that he was usually, so called. So Jeremiah tells Pashur, The Lord hath not called thy name Pashur; but Magormissabib; meaning, that such straights and terrors, should pursue, and surprize him, that that might justly be deemed his name, Jer. 20. 3. 4. So it is said of Ezekiel, that the name of the restored City, formerly called, Jerusalem: shall thenceforth be, Jehovah-shammah, Ezek. 48. 35. thereby intimating, that God should, in so conspicuous manner, manifest his presence among his people, and his abode with them there: that the city might well be named, the Lord is there. Yea, so of Christ himself also; (as the most) the Prophet Jeremie telleth us, that the Lord hath raised unto David, a righteous Branch, and a King, that should reign and prosper, and execute judgment and righteousness in the earth. In whose days Judah should be saved, and Israel dwell safely. And this is the name whereby he should be called, Jehovah-tsidkenu, Jer. 23. 6. & 33. 16. His meaning being not there, no more then Esayes here, that our blessed Saviour should be commonly known, and called by that as his proper name: but, that what that tearm imported, should of him be most truly assumed, and acknowledged to be fully made good in him. And the same is to be said of the name here given: as also of that high, and lofty stile, consisting of so many eminent titles, and attributes, wherewith he is dignified, ch. 9. 6. and yet is the name, here specified, given again after ward to this Virgins birth, ch. 8. 8.

Immanuel] The initial letter being lost, or left out, (in regard of the uncertainty of the sound of it in the Hebrew: or the difficulty of expressing it by any special character, in other tongues) as in Amor, Obadiah, Jacob, and other the like; so in this. Or, Emmanuel: according to the Greek, Matth. 1. 23. which our language is more prone to follow: as in Eve, Abel, Moses, Jesus, Mary, and others. The word signifies, God with us: as it is expresly expounded, both by the Prophet, ch. 8. 8, 10. and by the Evangelist, Matth. 1. 23. A fit name for the Messias, and fulfilled in him; who being God, from all eternity, became one with us in time, Joh. 1. 1, 14. to bring God, and us together, whom sin had before severed, Rom. 5. 10. Col. 1. 20. 1 Pet. 3. 18. and who coming as a Mediator between God and us, 1 Tim. 2. 5. became both our surety to us, Rom. 8. 32. ch. 53. 7. (See the note there) and Gods surety to us, Rom. 8. 32. 2 Cor. 1. 20. Heb. 7. 22. and so made a perfect reconcilment, between God and us, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Ephes. 2. 14, 18. Heb. 10. 14. Unto Jesus Christ therefore doth this name most aptly, most exactly agree in the substance of it, or what it importeth. Howbeit, I dare not say, as some do, that it is a name incompetible to any other. For as the name Jesus, signifying a Saviour, though it be, in a peculiar manner, proper to Christ, Matth. 1. 21. Yet was in time past, not unusually among God people, imposed also on others; Zach. 3. 1. Heb. 4. 8. Act. 7. 45. & 13. 6. Col. 4. 11. and may as well signifie one saved, as saving. So the name Emmanuel, though, in a singular manner, it appertain unto Christ; as it is conceived to import, that inconceivable union of the Divine nature with our flesh, in one personal subsistence; yet is it may also have reference to gods gracious acceptance of, and presence with his reconciled ones in Christ, to assist them, protect them, upon all occasions, at all times, Ge. 28. 15. Psa. 22. Mat. 28. 20. Act. 18. 10. He. 13. 5. So is it applyable to any of the faithful, and to the Prophet himself, having before attributed it to the Messias, doth, speaking in their person, afterward apply it also unto them, ch. 8. 8, 10. It is, in this regard, with the name Emmanuel, signifying, God with us; as it is with the name Ithiel, signifying God with me, Prov. 30. 1. which, though some suppose, to intend there the Messias; yet seems rather to be the name of some ordinary man, either son, or disciple of Agur. Either name is, in some regard, peculiar to Christ: but in other respects, may be communicable to others. Nevertheless considering, that in that special, or singular notion, rather, the names Jesus, and Emmanuel, (for of Ithiel, I say nothing) have been appropriated unto Christ: I suppose it neither fit, nor safe, to impose, either of them on any other; since that, by such common and promiscuous use of them, they may be liable to much prophane and irreverent usage.

V. 15. Butter and honey shall he eat] This verse some understand of the Prophets son, Shearjashub; whom he was commanded by God, to take along with him when he went to meet Ahaz, ver. 3, and they conceive them to be spoken to this end, to assure Ahaz, that the City of Jerusalem should not endure any such great hardship and straits, by the invasion, and siege of those two Kings, as he expected, and so much fearedsince that the child, he had there with him, should be brought up, fed, and maintained, in as free and full manner as children, and those of the better sort, are wont to be in, times of greatest peace and plenty. But this expedition, to the most, seems too much strained: because it fetcheth in the word, child here, out of the verse following; without which the relative, in the next clause hath nothing to relate to. They understand it therefore of the Virgins birth, before spoken of, and annexed to the former relation, to shew, that the child she should bear, and be delivered of, should not be any fantastical appearance, or meer imaginary matter, (as some wicked Hereticks have, of Christs humanity, affirmed) but a very manchild, consisting of a true humane naturetas being fed, and brought up with such food, as other children, in those parts especially, are ordinarily wont to be. For, as for those conceits of the Jewish Rabbines, that the meaning should be, that the child, spoken of before, either Ahaz's, or Esayes, should, as soon as he was born, be able to eat honey & Butter, instead of his mothers milk, which other children cannot do; and should take these, being offered him, and refuse any other meat of unpleasing taste, and that herein the strangeness of the sign given, should consist: they are but frivolous fancies of their own brainss: there is nothing in the text, that implyes any such feeding of the child, whenever it be, in that manner, so soon as it is born; but of the bringing of him up so afterward, when he is capable of such food, untill he come to years of discretion. Nor doth that therefore seem probable, which one of prime note hath; that the Jews use to this day, to give their new born babes butter and honey, in the first place, before ever they taste of their mothers milk: which as it makes nothing to the Prophets mind; so it consists not with that, which for matter of fact, the Rabbins affirm, therein, rather denying, then acknowledging any such wont with them.

butter and honey] Meates that young children affect, and (where plenty of either is) are usually much fed with. Butter, with us, and some neighbour nations, is the common food of such. Honey, not so, because not so rife in these parts: but in those regions very plentiful, as well as butter, or milk; the material of it, see Gen. 43. 11. Deut. 8. 8. & 32. 13, 14. 1 Sam. 14. 25, 26. 2 Sam. 17. 29. 2 Chr. 31. 5. Psal. 81. 17. ver. 22. Jer. 41. 8. Ezek. 16. 13. Matth. 3. 4. Luk. 24. 42. whereunto, add the usual commendation of that country in Scripture: A land flowing with milk and honey, Exod. 3. 8. & 13. 5. Levit. 20. 24. Numb. 13. 28, & 14. 8. Deut. 6. 3. & 26. 9. Josh. 5. 6. Jer. 11. 5. Ezek. 20. 6, 15. Whence also some gather, that hereby is intimated, the nation, both of the mother, and the child: that the should be a Jewish woman, and the child of Jewish breed: implyed in the manner of his education, peculiar to that nation: as many people say they, are wont to be described, by the manner of their food and diet. That which to instance in, (seemed it much material) were not uneasie.

Shall he eat] Not, shall he make us to eat: as some, understanding it of Emmanuel: who should keep them in peace, and plenty, Deut. 32. 13, 14. Psal. 81. 17. but the Hebrew will not bear it.

that he may know to refuse the evil, and chuse the good] Heb. that he know, &c. Hence some would collect, that butter, and honey, are a food of singular use for children, to make them ripe-witted, and of quick apprehension. Which, to shut off, others would have the words read, not, that he may know; but, untill he know. But of that use of the particle they bring no fit example: that of 2 Sam. 13. 2. reacheth it not. Nor need we to use any such refuge, the meaning is plain; that he may grow up, and attain to years of discretion, described here by ability to distinguish between good and bad; as elsewhere by ability of distinguishing between the right hand, and the left, Jon. 4. 10. It is a defective, or complexive speech, that he may know; for, that growing up, he may know, or, that he may grow up to know, &c. which, but by feeding, cannot, in course of nature, be attained. See the like manner of speech, c. 6. 11. v. 1. 6. c. 38. 14, 17, 21. fulfilled in our Saviour, who, as man, had his growth in either, Luk. 2. 52.

to refuse the evill, and chuse the good] This many expound of distinguishing of meats offered him, so as to refuse what is bitter, and unpleasant of taste, and receive what is sweet and pleasant, Job 34. 3. and it is true, that the words, good, and bad, are sometime so used, Gen. 3. 6. Prov. 2. 5, 13. Cant. 4. 10. Eccl. 12. 1. But it seems here, rather, to be understood of good; & evil, morally so tearmed. For that ability children have, even from the womb, while they suck, at least: as also the young of other creatures, to discern the taste of what is offered them, and to refuse things of unpleasant favour, yet neither do I conceive, that any extraordinary knowledg of, or judgment in, matters of that nature, is, by the Prophet, here intended; but such apprehension, and notice of good and evil as children usually have, when the use of Reason and understanding begins first to put out, & exercise it self; which is usually about the fourth, or fifth year. So the very same terms almost, are used by Moses, Your children, which in that day knew not good, or evil; that is, had no ability to discern the one, or the other, Deut. 1. 39.

V. 16. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good] There is again much diversity of judgment among Interpreters, concerning the child here mentioned. The Jewish Writers would have it meant of their Emmanuel, the son of Ahaz, or Esay, or, I know not who else, that then lived; but unless they be able to give us assurance of such an one, in those dayes, born of a Virgin; he cannot be the Emmanuel, spoken of by the Prophet. Some of our Writers expound it of the true Emmanuel, the Lord Jesus, long before whose conception and birth, and much more, education and growth, that should be effected, that is here foretold. But this comfort could this afford to Ahaz, or stay of mind against his little comfort could this afford to Ahaz, or stay of mind against his fears, to tell him, that before such an one were grown up to years of some discretion, as was to be born divers hundred of years after his decease, his two principal adversaries should be cut off. The most therefore, and the best, understand it, not of Emmanuel the Virgins birth, before mentioned; but of some other, or any other the Virgins birth, before mentioned; but of some other, or any other young child, that then was, and here they conceive, the sign, to be directly and expresly delivered, that God had of himself, voluntarily offered to give Ahaz, to wit, that in so short a time, as such a child could be able to discern good and evill, those two, that he so much feared, should both of them be dest royed.

for] Or, And certainly, or surely, assuredly. As this particle is used ch. 7. 7. and before here, ver. 9. Or, yea; as adding a further matter to what he had propounded: and so it is taken, 2 King. 18. 34. ch. 36. 19. Psal. 7. 4. Prov. 2. 3. For having before given Ahaz assurance of Gods power, what he was able to do, by an assurance of a far more incredible matter, verf. 14. he now pasteth to the relation of that, which had he faith to believe it, might having given him assurance that according to his gracious promise, he would do it, and might be an effectual sign to him of the same.

before the child] As before a child, as Num. 11. 27. where the article also is used. And as a Virgin, ver. 14. Any one that is now a child. But as others rather, this child: as pointing to, or singling out one, then in presence: as Gen. 21. 12. & 44. 31. 32. No other, in all likelihood, then Shearjashub, the Prophets child, whome, to this purpose, God had commanded him to take along with him, verf. 3. for no other use appears of his presence there, with his father, but this alone See ch. 8. 4.

shall know to refuse the evill, and choose the good] Of the meaning of this phrase, see on ver. 15. Nor doth it follow, that therefore the same child is here spoken of, that was there intended: because the same thing, in the same phrase; is related of either. For it is an usuall thing in Scripture, with our Prophet especially, by way of allusion, to apply the same words and phrases, unto divers subjects, where occasion is to speak of them together. See on c. 2. 8, 9. & 66. 3, 4.

the land] The land of Israel. Or, as some, both of Israel, and of Syria, taken collectively. But the former seems the plainer.

that thou abhorrest] In regard of the evil and mischief that it intendeth against thee. Or rather, by which thou art vexed. For the same verb that was used in the active form, Let us vex her, ver. 6. (which this manifestly relates unto), is here used in a neuter form, but of a passive signification. So Exod. 1. 12. The Egyptians were vexed; because of the children of Israel: And. Moab was vexed, because of the children of Israel, Numb. 22. 3. whome he feared also exceedingly, as Ahaz did the like here, verf. 2. And so it is laid of Rezin, 2 King. 15. 37. that he was vexed at Israel; or had a spite at Israel. while he reigned in Syria: for so would the words there be rendered, Or another reading, see the next note.

Shall be left of both her Kings] Not that the land of Israel had two Kings, then reigning in her, at once; but Pekah, and Rezin are called her Kings: the one, as her native; the other, as in confederacy led her Kings: the one, as her native; the other, as in confederacy led her Kings: And the is said to be left of them, not as voluntarily with her. And the is said to be left of them, not as voluntarily with her, and she is said to be left of them, not as voluntarily with her, relinquishing her, but as taken away before they could effect, what by their confederacy they intended. Pekah, being taken captive by Tiglath-Pileser, King of Assyria, and not long after, slain by Hoshea, 2 King. 15. 29, 30. and Rezin also taken, and slain by the same Assyrian King, 2 King. 26, 9. Howbeit some refer this clause of the two kings, not to the word, left, but to the word vexed. Rendring the whole branch, (as also the words lye in the original) the land shall be left, (to wit, of her inhabitants: of which phrase, see ch. 6. 12.) by whose two kings thou art vexed. That which fely answers the speech of thole two kings, in consultation together, let us vex her, v. 6. & that, not those two king only were cut off, (as was before mentioned, but their lands also much dispeopled, by the Assyrian invasion, the Israelitish estate especially appears by the story, 2 King. 15. 29, & 16. 9. All which was effected within a year, or two, at the most, after this prophecy, as may appear, by comparing the years of Pekah's reign with those of Ahaz, who began to reign in Pekah's seventeenth year, Pekah not surviving full four more, 2 King. 15. 27, 30. & 16. 1. So that supposing Shear-jashub, to be one, or two years old, at that time, the event here foretold might well be said to fall out, before the child had attained to any notable measure of being able to discern between good and evil. See more hereof, ch. 8. 4.

of both her kings] Or, by whose two kings, as above. Heb. from the face of whose two kings. The like phrase is, Exod. 1. 12. Psal. 38. 3. ch. 21. 15, & 31. 8.

V. 17. The Lord shall bring upon thee, &c.] Hitherto the Prophet had endeavoured to comfort Ahaz, and strengthen him against his excessive fears, by foretelling him, and assuring him of the speedy destruction of those Kings, whome he so much feared. Now he proceeds to foretel him what evil, for his hypocrisie, and impieties, relinquishing of God, and making fleth his arm, should befal him, his people, and posterity, from those, to wit, the Assyrians, whom he so much relyed on, as his cheif, if not only stay, 2 King. 16. 7, 8. 2 Chr. 28. 16, 21. It is as if he had said, a far worse evil, then that thou now fearest: shall befall thee and thine, from those whom thou least suspectest.

the Lord shall bring] As 2 Chr. 36. 17. God brought upon them the King of the Chaldees. The Assyrian shall come with commission from God, God will send him, ch. 10. 5, 6. and so indeed he prosefited, and pretended to be sent, chap. 36. 10. though the truth is, he neither knew, nor intended any such service, ch. 10. 7, 11.

bring] Heb. cause to come. Make such dayes to come upon thee and thine, as the like have not come: that the elegancy of the phrase may be retained, and expressed in the one member, answering to the other.

upon thee] For even in his life time, the evil here threatned, began. So the holy Story telleth us, 2 Chor. 28. 20. 21. 22. that Tiglath-Pileser, (called, ellewhere, Tiglath-Pileser, 2 King. 16. 10.) King of Assyria, came to him and distressed him, but (brenghened him not. Though (so the word should be rendered; as Joth. 17. 18.) Ahaz had taken a portion out of the house of the Lord, &c. to give to the King of Assyria. Of which also, 2 King. 16. 8.

and upon thy people] Who suffer commonly, yea, of necessity, with their Princes, invaded by foreign forces; as they had already, under Ahaz, 2 Chro. 28. 6. 8. and did afterward, from the Assyrians much more, ch. 36. 1. 2. 13. Jer. 39. 9.

and upon thy fathers house] Thy posterity. For the greatest, and heaviest shock of this storm, lighted upon the King, and his successors, 2 King. 18. 13. 2. Chr. 33. 11. & 36. 6, 10, 17. ch. 39. 6, 7. and the repetition of the word, upon, and upon, and upon, is very emphatical; and of much force to make the deeper impression, (the like thereunto, see Josh. 7. 11.) it began with him in his life time; for he was in distress: not from Syria, and Israel onely; but from Assyria, 2 Chr. 28. 20, 22. It was grievous on the people, principally, under Ezekiah, ch. 36. 1, 2. and at last, it fell exceeding heavy on the royal stirpe, under Manasses, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah, 2 Chr. 33. 11. & 36. Jer. 39. 6, 7. & 52. 10, 11.

dayes that have not come] dayes, that is, times, the manner of the Scripture, to reckon by dayes. See chap 11. 1. such times of affliction, as have not formerly befallen them. Evill dayes, Eccl. 12. 1. Eph. 5. 16. and evill times, Eccl. 9. 12. Amos. 5. 13. not, that the dayes, or the times themselves, are evil; but are so called, in regard of the evils that befal men in them.

from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah] Since the time, that the ten Tribes revolted from the house of David, and divided themselves from the tribe of Judah, the greatest affliction that ever befel that family, and that tribe; either before that time, or to this present day; and was the ground of continual wars, and grievous calamities, from time to time, unto this people.

even the King of Assyria] So some read the words, as by way of opposition, joyned with the word, dayes: and expounding what is by them meant, as ver. 20. but this construction seems here somewhat harsh. Others therefore render it, with the King of Assyria, as the particle indeed very frequently signifies; but they expound it here with him, that is, by him, taking the word instrumentally, as in our language we oft use it: Others, lastly, supplying the defect of a particle requisite to make the sense entire, render it, from the King of Assyria, See Gen. 4. 1. I have gotten a man[that is, a man-child, as Joh. 16. 21.]from the Lord: and Psal. 81. 5. when he[Joseph, that is, the Israelites, Psalm. 80. 1.] went out from of Egypt. See v. 20.

The King of Assyria] Whom thou so much relyest upon, and doft unadvisedly call in, to assist thee, God will make him, whom thou makest thy stay, to be a fore scourge, both to thee and thine, chap. 10. 5. thus it fell out with Ahaz, resting on the King of Assyria, as with Asa, resting on the King of Syria, 2 Chr. 16. 7, 9. Now, by the King of Assyria, divers Interpreters understand, some one King only, some Tiglath-Pileser, that distressed Ahaz, 2 Chr. 28. 20. Some, Senacherib, that put Hezekiah to straits, chap. 37. 3. Some Nebuchadnezzar, who had Assyria also subject to him; and swept all away before him. See v. 20. I rather concur with those, who take the word, as also collectively, and take them in all, together with Esar-haddon, that captivated Manasses, 2 Chr. 33. 11. successively; Kings, for a succession of Kings: as Dan. 2. 37, 38. thou King, art this golden head, that is, thou, and thy successors in the present Monarchy, Dan. 8. 21. The rough goat is the King, (that is, the Kingdome of Greece,) and the great horn, between his eyes, the first King. The Kings of Assyria are mentioned, as the principal vexers and wasters, in those latter times of Gods people, Neh. 9. 32. (as the Kings of Syria had formerly been, 1 King. 11. 25. & 15. 20. & 20. 1. 2 King. 5. 2. & 6. 24. & 8. 12. & 12. 17. & 13. 22. & 15. 37. and 16. 6. 2 Chr. 24. 23. 25. & 28. 5.) who having been at first called in to help against others; and thereby taking some taste of a fertile soyl, and wealthy State, were not afterward long at rest; but were from time to time, making incursions into it, and pillaging of it, untill at length, they made themselves absolute Masters of it, ruined the State, and carried wealth, and people away together, Jer. 50. 17. God gave all into their hands, 2 Chr. 36 17.

V. 18. And it shall come to pass, in that day. that] Of this manner of speech, see on chap. 2. 2. & 3. 24. & 4. 1, 2, 3. He proceeds to describe, both the instruments, by whom God would inflict these judgments upon them; and the calamities, that the land and State should sustain in those times. For the word, day, is of large

2.extent, as by the places pointed to, may appear: and so v. 20. 21, the Lord will hiss for]Or,rather,whistle for,will call for them: as men whistle, sometime, to persons that are a far off;or, as the shepherd calleth in his sheep with his whistle. See chap. 5. 26.

for the flye that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt;and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria]A description of those people, by whome chiefly, the land of Iudah should be so grievously afflicted, or of whome those forces should joyntly consist, by which that Kingdome and State should be ruined.

the flye that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt] Flye taken collectively,for flies,as bee,afterward,for bees;and ox, and asse: for oxen,and asses,chap.1.3. the verb plural in the next verse shweeth it. Howbeit,there may be some emphasis in it,as if it intimated,that God would do all that is here threatned, with a flye, and a bee. By this flye, some understand the Egyptians themselves; by whom the land of Iudah was invaded, under the conduct of Pharaoh Necho,after the death of Iosiah; who subdued it, and made it tributary,2 King. 23, 33, 35. And they suppose the Egyptians to be stearned flyes; as for the great multitude to them, that should come like swarms of flyes, Exod.8. 21, 23, 24: So,in allusion to the condition of their land, which lying lowe, and abounding in ponds, ditches,and water-courses,cut out from the river,chap.10. 7, 8, 10. was much pestered with flyes. Others understand by it, not the Egyptians themselves, but some other Nations, as the Moabites, Edomites,Lybians,and Ethiopians,that bordered upon them, chap. 18.1.the rather,because it is not said that is in Egypt; but, that is in the uttermost parts of the rivers of Egypt, that is, of Nilus, which branceth it self out into divers channels, where it ruinheth into the Sea,chap.11.15.or, which is cut out into many streams, toward the upper part,where it entreth upon Egypt, which they suppose to be principally here intended. Nor is it improbable, but that the Assyrian king, having made conquest, both of Egypt it self, and those adjacent parts, did from thence bring many that served under him,when he invaded the land of Iudah, 2 King.24,2,7,ch. 20. 4,6.of whetherfoever it be meant,the flye here mentioned,may well be deemed,to have some reference to the flesh-flye,as applicable to these pepole, in regard of its usual practice of sucking,as theirs of shedding blood. Other resemblances between them, Interpreters give,which I pass by,be ecause they seem besides the Prophets intention,and somewhat too farr fetch'd.

and for the bee that is in Assyria] The Assyrians are compared to bees,as for the numerousnes of them, wherein they agree with flyes;so withal,for their fierceness, and eagerness, wherein these go beyond them, being armed with stings, which they want; and, as able,in that regard,to do,the more hurt,so much fiercer also, then flyes: Deut. 1.44. Psal.118. 12.and of the fierceness and cruelty of the Chaldeans, who go also under that name, as Subjects to one Soveraign;of which before,on ver.17. See 2 Chr. 36.17. Jer.8.17. ch.5.29,30. Jer.5.15.16. where it is said of them, that their quiver is as open Sepulcher:alluding to their shafts,(whereof, see ch. 5. 28.) which, together with their darts, and javelins, might well be resembled by the stings of those creatures; by whose name, also, it is supposed that they are here styled, because the land of Assyria, being a wooddy country, as much abounded with bees, as Egypt with flyes.See Jer,chap.5.15.24,27.

v.19. And they shall come] Those flyes and bees shall come at Gods whistle, without flay, or delay; and enter upon the land of Iudah,ch.5.26.

and shall rest] What they shall do, when they are come: they shall rest,that is,surprise or sit down; or as some, pitch their camp: for to they would have it expounded,both before,v.2.and here. But that seems neither right there, nor so fit or full here. The meaning of the Prophet seems to be, proceeding in the same metaphor which he had before vsed:that these forreign forces,should, having entred the Country, possesse themselves of all places thereintas they did in Egypt,Exod.8.21,24. Psal.7 8.45.& 105. 31. and make the spoil and havock of all,where they came;as, besides the flyes, the locusts also there did, Exod. 10. 4, 5, 6, 14, 15. (where the word of resting, here found, is likewise used) Psal. 78. 46. & 105. 34. 35.

all of them]The number of them being not wasted, or diminished by the length of their march, or by any opposition in their way, ch.5.27.as ch.34.16.not one shall fail:none shall hang back,stay behind,or be missing,of those that God hath thus called and designed to this service.

in the desolate valleys]Heb.valleys of desolations, or wastnesses. The word is no where else used, but here,and before,ch.5. 6. This some understand of the Towns, or Cities, situate in the vale, near the brooks,as the next branch of the strong cities,and forts, seated aloft, on the rocky and craggy hills:as implying, that all places high, and low,should be seized by them. But it may well be understood as the most,of those valleys, that having bin before, rich and fertile had bin depopulated,and spoyled, by the foregoing warres:as implying,that there should be no place left so bare, but that it would be taken up by them to quarter in,(so numerous they should be) and further stripe of what was left. An allusion there is, in the words,to the manner of flyes,muskeetoes,and gnats,that are usually most busie in low watry places,being there bred by the moisture of the foyl. The word first & properly,signifis a brook;and thence,in the second place a valley,or lower flip of ground, wherein such use to run between the hills,Psal.104.10.chap.57.5. 6. Hence, the valley of Kedron, as sometand the brook of Kedron,as others render it, 1 King.15,13.2. King.23.4,6.

and in the holes of the rocks]Alluding to the manner of bees; that in such places are wont to harbour. Whence that phrase, not so commonly as light underflood,of honey out of the rock, Psal. 81. 16. and of sucking honey out of the rock, and oyl out of the hard flint,or, flint of the rock,Deut.32,13, means, of drawing honey from the bees that hive in the one,and oyl from the olive trees that grow on the flint of the other. The meaning here seems to be, that no place should be found so secure,or,secret, that this people would not pierce into.See ch.1.10,19,21.& Jer.9.21.& 16.16.

and upon all thornes]Or, bushes, or shrubs. It appears to be the name of some base plant; in that, chap.55,13 (and,save here and there,the word is not read)it is said,that instead of it, the firre shall spring up.Some render it, cotages:and such may in the scope be intended.But the proper signification of the word is such,as hath been said; and it suits well with the former metaphor: for the flyes and gnats use to gather about such, and that in such abundance, sometime, that the bushes and shrubs seem to be covered all o ver with them: bushes and thickets are places also of shelter, Gen 3. 8. & Chr. 33. 11. but should not thelter ought, or any from them.

and upon all bushes?]So many of our Interpreters render it;taking their rise from some of the Rabbins, who tell us(as others of them do,upon better ground,of the former, that the word signifies trees meat, or base, or, no reckoning, or worth. And these derive it from a word,which though,properly,it signifie to praise, commend,extoll glory in,brag of? Yet by antiphrasis,fay they, signifies base,ignominious, unworthy of any praise.But I finde not,nor do they produce any place, where either the noun,or the verb,is so used. It is true, that in one form,the verb signifies to be mad,Ecc.12.2. and to make mad, ch. 44. 25.& to make as if one were mad, 1 Sam.21.14.yet,not by antiphrasis neither,but by excesse rather,because in excesse of glorying & vaunting men either become so foertime,or carry themselves as such:nor doth it fild with reasn to deduce a reasn rather frō that,(were it found some time so used)that a word by such an spropriety of speech, & contrariety,sometime doth signifie,then,from that which it natively & properly imports;unless there were somewhat else,either to enforce, or induce thereunto;whereof neither here appears. The word therefore,whence this defcends, fignifying sometime to praise, or, glory in, and sometime also to shine, and be bright, ch. 13. 10.whereof the morning-star hath its name.chap.14.12. Hence, others rather render it,goodly, fair, beautiful, commendable trees, and the opposition also seems to carry it this way. Some indeed,suppose it to signifie goodly buildings,or stately Palaces,as the former,cottages. And the Chaldee seems to go this way. So it is faid of the Ayes in Egypt, that they filled Pharaoh's house, and the houses,of his servants,as well as of other his Subjects,Exod.8.21,24.and houses, of both sorts may well be typified by the plants,or trees, here mentioned; but these in the first place.Nor is it unusual for flyes to swarm, as well about fair and tall trees, as about low and sorry shrubs. Others yet understand hereby,men of state,or stature,in comparison of whom, others seem but as shrubs,See ch.2.13.But the Prophet seems here to speak not so much of persons, as of places, his intent being to shew how these flyes and bees should ransack all places, and make prey and spoyl of all that there they meet with,(see Jer.5. 17. & 8. 16.) that which,by another very lively resemblance, is in the next verse farther set forth. The word here used, is no where else read; and by mistake of a letter, is both in the old Latine, and ancient Greek, rendered holes, or clefts. Which were spoken of here before.

V.20.In the same day]Or,at that time:as v.18.

Shall the Lord]He that,before,called in the fly,and the bee,with his whistle,v.18.

Shave]Not cut,simply,as ch. 15. 2. not clip, as Ier. 48. 37.not shear,as Act. 18. 18. 1 Cor. 11. 6. or poll,as Ezek.44.20.but shave, Ezek.44. 20. 1 Cor. 11. 6. For it is one thing to cut, or poll,or trim,which was neglected by them commonly in times of grief; as with Mephibosheth,2 Sam.19.24. and is usually done with scissers, or the like;and another thing to shave, or to cut close to the skin, as with the cleansed leper,Levit.14.9.which is notdone,but with the razor,Psal.52.2.and was wont to be done in times of extreamest grief, and heaviest mourning,Jer.41.5.And unto this shaving of themselves upon such occasions,of which,see on c.3.17,24.Some suppose that the Prophet should here have an eye; as if the meaning were, that so great miseries,and grievous calamities should befall them, that for extreamity of grief, they should even shave themselves. But the shaveing here mentioned,(as that also done, in a tipe,at Gods command, by the Prophet,Ezek,5.1.) seems too look another way, and to be of another nature. For,that done, in such cases,was voluntary, and performed oft,by themselves. Iob 1.20.this enforced,and executed by the hand of another,as acting the part of a barber. That was the taking off the hair of some one part of the body, the head only.Iob 1.20.or the beard, Jer. 41. 5.This is a shaving off all the hair hair of the whole body; (which on such occasions was never heard of)as by the enumeration of the several parts, whereon hair ordinarily groweth,appeareth; and may rather be deemed, to allude to the shaving of the leper,Levit.13.8,9.or the Levites, Numb. 8.7. who at the time of their purification, had their flesh shaved all over: and signifieth an utter stripping of them of all that was ought worth.

with a razor]A sharp barbers razor, Ezek.5 .1. So is the enemy, Gods instrument,here styled;as being in Gods hand, as the razor in the barbers hand , which cuteth as deep, and as far as He pleaseth,but cannot cut deeper,or further then He will.So ch.10.5,15. that is hired] The Greek, by mistake of a point or two, render it, that is made drunke;which some of ours seem not to disallow; because it is said, My sword shall be made drunk,ch.34.5. But the word,that signifieth drunk,1 Sam.1.14. though coming neer this, yet differeth from it, not in the found of the initial letter alone, as Shibboleth, and Sibboleth, Judg.12.6 but in the doubling allo of of the middle consonant, and the change of its annexed vowel. The word fignifies a mercenary, or, hired one. Which fome understand by a trope,so termed,as one that God would make use of to the purpose because men are wont to use things hired more freely,nor regarding what they put them to. But we need not flep out of the way to fetch in such tropes, when we have a plainer sense at hand. The question is,only, how,or by whom, this razor is said to be; or have been hired,for the words will bear either. Some fay,by God who,with hope of obtaining a larg booty,as with a bait,enticed this great king,to invade that wealthy kin,dome: and this they build on the words of God, in Ezekiel, concerning Nebuchadnezzar, I have raised his Army to serve a great service against Tyre;yet neither he, nor his Army,had any wages for it. I will therefore give him the land of Egypt,and that shall be the wages for his Army,Ezek. 29. 18,19. But others rather understand it,of Ahaz his hiring of Tigiath-Pileser the Assyrian king, to come into his succour, against Pekah and Rezin, Israel and Syria,2 King.16.7,8.2 Chr.28.16,21. and this suits well with the main drift of the Prophets discourse here; which is to let Ahaz understand what an unadvised course he had taken, in betaking him self to the king of Assyria; and seeing him to come in to his assistance, he had in to doing but hired a razor to shave him and his State,of whatsoever was of any worth or use in it;as the event thould hereafter shew: It is an allusion to the use of Barbers, whom men usually hire to barb and trim them.

namely[Or,to wit,or,even, annexed by appolition to the former, but the partiele exegetical omitted.See v. 17.

by them beyond the river] Heb. by the passages, (as fome render it, Jer.22.20.)or,by the sides,(as Jer.48.28.& 49.32.)of the rivers;that, is, by those that abide and inhabite about it; and he saith; in the passages; as some suppose, because the river spoken of, running not strait on,in a direct current; but with many windings and turnings had therefore many places of paflage upon it; but of this there is no neceflity:for that, the word is frequently used, for, sides, or borders Exod.32.15.1 King.4. 24.and may well fignifie those, that bordered in any place upon it.

the river] This river fome would have to be Nilus, the river of Egypt,ch.11.15.& 19.5. because mention was made of it before, v. 11.but the most rather understand it of the river Euphrates,that divideth Syria and Assyria : called the river, Psal. 72. 8. Jer.2.18. where both of them are mentioned.

by the king of Assyria]This shavingwas begun by Tigiath-Pileser, 2 King.16.8.2 Chr.28.21.continued by Sennacherib,and Esar-haddon,2 King.18.13,16.2 Chr. 33. 11. consummated by Nebuchadnezzar,2 King.24.13.16.& 25.9,17.ch,39. 6. whom some suppose, principally,here intended; and to be the rather termed here, king of Assyria, then of Chaldea ; though Lord of both: partly, because the Monarchy then bare that name,ch.36.4.and partly,to intimate Gods retaliation of Ahaz his sin, in wasting his land by him, whom , refusing to trust unto God , he had wickedly relyed upon.

the head] Not by cutting off the head it self, or flaying, as the Rabbines most of them, upon the place, do most ridiculously expound it: applying it to the destruction of Sennacheribs forces by the Angel,ch.37.36. to which may be added, that ridiculous tale, reported out of some other of them, of the Angels having his head and his beard. But as it is faid of the Nazarite, he shall shave his head;that is,the hair of his head,Num.6.9. and that, not some few locks of it,as Judg.16.19. but all the hair of the whole head. The hair whereof is master,not of ornament only, but of muniment also, especially in those times, wherein they had wont to go bare head:which was the usual manner of the ancient, both Greeks and Romanes(as by stories and monuments of Antiquity doth appear : and the Apostle may seem to have respected, 1 Cor. 11.4.7.)only, when need was,in rain, or the like, covering their heads with some part of their gown, or upper garment : and may be conjectured to have been allo the common guise of the Jewish people; for that covering of the head, is mentioned, upon occasion of mourning,as a matter otherwise unusual,2 Sam.15.30. Howbeit,see Ezek. 24. 17. which place requires further consideration.

and the hair of the feet] That is, of the secret, or lower parts of the body,Ezek.16.7,25. See on ch. 6. 2. concerning which, the Hebrew Doctors expresly observe, that they were also shaved in the lepers,and in the Levites,at the purifying of either,Levit. 14. 8, 9. Num.8.7.It is,as if he had said,they shall make all bare,from top to toe.

And it] To wit, this razor. That is here attributed to the instrument,that was before ascribed to the chief actor; to God, that made use of it. They strain too far,that render it,it shall end with the beard, shall also consume the beard] Not take off some part of it,as Hanun did Davids Messengers, shaving away only the one half,2 Sam. 10. 4. but consume it, make an utter riddance of it, take away the whole beard, the hair whereof is deemed, not an ornament only, but an argument of virility: which God therefore would not have defaced,Levit.19. 27. and it was deemed therefore a contumelious usage of Davids servants,whom that Ammonite so disfigured,2 Sam. 10. 5. Now here by the head, some understand the King and his Princes,ch.9.15.by the beard,the Priest,Psal. 133. 2.by the feet,the common sort of people,Judg. 4. 10. & 8.8 5. And how foever this may seem somewhat curious:yet certain it is, that an utter stripping off the whole body of that State; and of all estates among them, of whatsoever was,or might be,of use, honour,or ornament with them, is by this shaving of head, beard, and feet intended. It is a speech parallel to that proverbial form, not an hair of your head shall perish, Luk.21.18.Act 27.34.for, as an absolute indemnity is implyed in the one, that they should not sustain so much as an hair-worths losse: so an utter devastation is imported in the other : that not so much as an hair worth of ought should be left. As the Rabbines say of the leper that is to be cleansed, the Priest that shaved him, must not leave an hair ; if he do leave an hair or two, all is nothing : they should strip all sorts of them,of all that was ought worth. So it is faid,Lam,1.10. The adversary stretched out all her desirable, or, delectable things:and Jer.8.16.they have devoured the land, and all that is in it,and chap.39.6.There shall nothing be left.

V.21. And it shall come to pass in that day,that, &c.]As ver. 18. From hence,the Prophet relareth the condition of those that should be left in the land,after Sennacheribs Invasion, as fome,or rather,as others, after the Babylonian deportation :and in what state the whole land should be, after this shaving. For they seem to shoot wide, that turn this to a spiritual notion of Gods gracious provision and abundant supply of all necessaries, for his, in times of publike calamity.

a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep]In these words is noted, the great penury of those that should remain in the land, after it had been lo plundered by the enemy. Those that had kept great herds before,should have scarce a cow,or a young heifer left; and those that were possessed of a numerous flock,not above one or two sheep.

a man] One, fay some, of the better rank; and so, indeed; sometime it is taken,where opposed to,or distinguished from Adam. But, here, I suppose,as elsewhere,more generally,and indefinitely, for any man whatsoever,See ch.2.9.

nourish]Heb.quicken,that is, keep alive, as Psal. 22. 29. which some understand,of saving. as Deut.20. 16. when the reft were destroyed and consumed by the enemy, Deut.28.31. but it seems rather to be taken here,as 2 Sam.12.3.for to keep or nourish; or,if you will,to keep for food:which is,hence,so tearmed,Gen.45.5. Judg.6.4. not to plow, or till with. Few, for fear of some new Invasion, having any mind of giving themselves, yet to tillage, and wanting cattle allo to till withal.

a young cow]Heb.a calf,or,heifer,of the ox,or, herd:as Gen.12.16; & 16.14.Deut.9.3.Deut.12.21.See the same phrase,Deut, 21. 3.1 Sam.16.2. and two sheep]Or,two of the lesser cattle,theep or goats : For in way of distinction from the former, it comprehends both ; as in the places before pointed to,and Levit.ch. 1.2,10.

V.22.And it shall come to pass,for the abundance of milk, that they shall give,he shall eat butter]Or, that he shall eat butter. For the particle would be here supplyed, as well; as ver. 21. & 23. This some understand of the great plenty that God would bleis the land withal;after the raising of the Assyrian fiege under Sennacherib,and the departure of his forces, notwithstanding the great havock that had been made by them, ch. 37.30,31. But others rather, with more probability, understand it,as an argument of depopulation, and a great paucity of Inhabitants left behind in it,when the main body of them was carried away captive by the Chaldeans;the families left,being so small, that the milk of a few cattle, would be sufficient,both to feed them for the present, and to afford also some over-plus,to make butter of for future provision:and those few milch cattle,yeeld the more, because they should have pastures at large to feed the more freely in; being not now restrained by the inclosures of those that joyned field to field before, ch. 5; 8. 17.

for the abundance of milk that they shall give] Heb. from the abundance of making milk,to make milk, for, to yeeld milk:as to make fruit, for, to yeeld fruit:and, to make wine,for, to yeeld wine. See ch.5.2, 10.

he shall eat butter]Having but few in family, and none to take it of him.

for butter, and honey, shall every one eate, that is left in the land] To wit, of Iudah. Heb. in the midst of the land. as. 5. 8. &

6.12. This some suppose to imply great plenty of victuals, through Gods blessing, as above; and by butter, and honey, to be intimated more delicate dyet, as before, ver.15. Others rather, take it for ordinary, frugal, country fare, as milk, cheese, and butter commonly are: and for honey, the woods, affording store of it, it may seem by the story of John the Baptist, to have been no extraordinary food, Matth.3.4. Mar.1.6. on such food therefore, for scarcity, and want of flesh, corn, fruits, and other variety of food, should the poorer sort, left in the land, (2 King.25.12. Jer.39.10.) feed; and that also the more freely and fully, having none (of the richer sore especially) being either consumed, or, captivated, ch.5.13, 14. & 6.11,12.) either to deprive them of it, or to ureer it unto.

V.23. And it shall come to pass in that day, that, &c.] As ver. 21.

every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines, at a thousand silverlings, it shall even be for briars and thorns] This, and what followeth, some take, as if it were said, that such places as had been fertile and fruitful before, should then lye waste and desolate; and on the other side, such as had been waste and barren before, should then become fertile and fruitful, ver.25. To which interpretation, they add spiritual sences, of Gods raising the weak and lowly; and pulling the haughty great ones down, 1 Sam.2.4,5,8. Ps.107.40,41. & 114.7,8. Luk.1.51,53. See chap.29.17 Others take it in a plainer and more familiar sense, as importing only the great desolation of the land, in regard of the fruits of it. Such as is described, ch.7.7. Jer. 4.23,26. & 8. 16. as before, the depopulation of it, in regard of its Inhabitants, v.22. to wit, that the richest and fruitfullest places, for want of husbanding and manuring, should be overgrown with useless and harmfull trash, v.24. ch.5.6.

a thousand vines] Heb. a thousand vine: as we use to say, a thousand house. So 2 Sam. 10. 6. a thousand man, for, a thousand men : and wine, for, vines, as briar and thorne, for, bryars and thorns, hereafter : and ver.24,25.

a thousand] That is, many. A certain number, for, an uncertain: as Psal.50.10. chap.3.17. Mic.6.6. Amos.5.3.

at a thousand silverlings] Heb. a thousand of silver. That is, so many shekels. For that is visually understood, where the coyn or weight is not expressed; as 2 Sam. 18. 11,12. Matth.26.15. The shekel, then being in weight and value; about our half crown: the sum that such vineyards, being of the best sort, were yearly let for, came to about one hundred and twenty and five pounds. See Cant. 8.11. for they seem to shoot wide, who expound it of the small quantity of wine, and money for it, that vines should, in those times, yeeld; as if it were said, that the vines having not been pruned and dressed, as formerly, for fear of the enemy, should yeeld so little wine that no man would give above a shekel for the wine that any one of them should yield. See ch.5.10. The verse following carrieth it the other way. And those Rabbins are yet wider, who refer this to Ezekiahs times, after Sennacheribs overthrow, when men by that good Kings perswation, giving themselves to the study of the law, and drinking but little wine, should neglect the dressing of their vines.

shall be briars and thorns] Heb. for, briars, and for thorns. A redundancy of speech. The like whereunto, see ver. 17. the also ver. 24. & 25. not that they should be for a part for such trash, as fields are, some for corn, some for pulse, and the like, chap.28. 25. being places appointed for them; but that through neglect, they should be so overspread with them, as if they were for no other use, Prov.24 32. See ch.5.6.

V.24. With arrowes, and with bowes shall they come thither] Heb. with arrowes, and with bow, (that is, with bow, and arrowes. For it is a redundancy, such, as ver.23.) shall he come thither : that is, shall men come thither; as chap.2.19. or shall one come thither; (for the verb is singular,) so she bare, for, one bare; or, sons born, 2 Sam. 21.8. thither : they shall go thither so weaponed, say some, because of the thickness and greatness of those thorny shrubs, to make their passage through, free without hurt or annoyance, 2 Sam.23. 6, 7. but a bill, or wood-hook, were for that purpose fitter, then either bowe, or shaft. To hunt, say others, such beasts as use to haunt places of that nature, for covert: and the bow indeed is one of the huntsmans chief weapons, Gen.27. 3. But this forts not so well with the Prophets scope. Others say, they went so weaponed, for fear of the enemy, by reason whereof, they durst not stir abroad to visit their grounds, or look after their cattle: they went abroad, as those wrought, Neh.4.17,18. See Lam.5.9. but neither doth this seem here so probable. Others therefore say, to defend themselves against such either wild beasts, serpents, or other harmful creatures, as they might meet with lurking there; and this, the very next clause leads us to.

because all the land shall become briars and thorns] The land shall be generally over-grown with them, chap.32. 13, as it is said of the slothfull person, the whole surface, of his field was over spread with the like, Prov.24.32. and consequently, would be over run also with, wild beasts, and other harmful creatures; as is usual with places, by. Inhabitants abandoned, and over-grown in such manner, Exod. 23 29.ch.13.21.& 34.14. See the comminations, Gen.3. 18. Levit.26 22.

bryars and thorns]] Heb. bryar, and thorn; as vine, v.23. So. ver, 23, 25.

V.25. And on all hills, that shall be digged with a mattock, there shall not come thither, the fear of briars and thorns] Some read the words, far otherwise, on this manner. As for all the hills, that were digged with the mattock, thou shalt not come thither, for fear of bryars and thorns: A want of the preposition, as Mal.2.5. and they conceive the Prophets meaning to be, that those hilly places, which had been before curiously kept, and digged for vineyards, orchards, or gardens, 1 King.21.2, Luk.13.8. should likewise be so over-grown with brambles, and bryars, that no man should dare to enter upon them. But this agreeth not with the latter part of the verse : for how should their cattle then be turned in thither ? The most therefore follow the more received reading. But some understand it, of a change for the better : that the barren places on the hills, that before would yield nothing, without a great deal of hard labour and toyl, should be free from those obstructions, and over-spreading of such noxious shrubs, as infested other places; and becoming fertile, afford their cattle good pasture. And the Hebrew Doctors run most this way. See before, on ver. 23. But this seems to cross the fore-going discourse, and the main scope of the Prophets speech. Others suppose it to have relation to those that were before said, not to venture out unweaponed, for fear of the enemy: that they should betake themselves to the mountains, that were likewise over grown with bushes, and briars, as to places of more security : the enemies fear, outwaying the fear of any hurt, that from those thorny shrubs might accrue unto them, and by the hard labour of their hands, there, help themselves. Others again would have the meaning to be, that no place shall be shunned for fear of bryars and brambles; albeit they should require never so much pains to rid them. Others, that men having betaken themselves thither, should so diligently grub up those hilly places; that there should be no fear of briar or bramble there; but that their cattle might safely go at large, and feed there, which for fear of the enemy, they durst not trust on the plain, Lam. 5. 9. unto whose footing also, some attribute this immunity from bryars and thorns, as treading them down, as fast as they came up. Others lastly, which seems to come nearest the Prophets mind, understand the words of such places on the hills, which the rich had fenced in for pleasure, or profit; that such fences being now cast down, and made away, they should lye open to cattle, as well great, as small.

And on all hills] Or, And as for all those hills. The nominative put absolutely, as Psal. 11.4. & 18. 30.. or, And all hills. See further below.

that shall be digged] As Luk.13.8. or, houghed; which best answereth the Latine here; both old, and later, and seems most agreeable to the Hebrew, See ch.5.6. not ploughed; as the Greek renders it. For into such places, was not the plow brought, nor there used, that the beasts might not trample on the loose earth, or the tender plants with their footing.

that shall be] Or, that should be; or, had wont so to be, as Mal.1.6. a son will honour his father, that is, should, or is wont so to do. That used not to be ploughed for grain, but to be digged, for planting of vines, or of trees, either for sight, or fruit, or, for the letting, and sowing of herbs and flowers, 1 King.21.2. (to which purpose also, the hilly parts were much used, Jer.3.2,13.& 31,5, (and to be kept in due order afterward, from time to time, by weeding and houghing.

with the mattock] Or, spade, or hough, an instrument used, for weeding, and banking, and loosening the earth.

there shall not come thither, the fear of bryars and thorns] That which, as was before said, is understood by some, not of bryars and thorns, growing up in them, as v.24. but of such thorny bushes, as had formerly served for hedg and fence about them, Psal.63.3. ch. 5. 2. Hos.2.6. to keep cattle from breaking in to depasture the ground, and crop or browse upon the vines, and other, plants therein, which being now broken down, there should be no fear of them, to hinder beasts from free entrance, to feed there at pleasure, chap.5.6. Hos. 2.12. But the most expound them of the former. as v.24. yet much differing in exposition of the place, one from another; whereunto, I shall add, and leave it to be considered of by the learned ; whether the words so taken, the next may not be thus read. And on the hills that, had wont to be digged with mattock or spade, that no fear of bryar or thorn might come thither, shall a place also be for sending in of oxen, and the treading of lesser cattel. All the difficulty here lyes in the defect of the particle, that, importing the end, or illue: the want whereof, both in that language, is not unusual, as Psal.10.4 chap.5. 11.& 10. 2. Hos. 1.6. as also in the Greek of the New Testament, Rom.8.29. 1 Cor.18. Jam.2.5.

but they shall be for the sending forth of oxen; &c.] They shall all lye open for cattle of all sorts to graze upon, and trample down at pleasure.

but they shall be] Heb, and it shall be, and, for, but: as ch.6.13.& 29. 13. or, shall also be, as Jer.1.3. to wit, a place, which, though wanting, as 2 Sam.7.11. King.18.12. some also put here into the text : or, without any such insertion; and those hills, &c. (that where so carefully fenced, and kept before that no cattle, little or great, could have accesse to them, nor bryar or thorn appear in them, but it was presently weeded out) shall each of them be for. &c. a frame of speech, like that, ch.6.10. of which, see there.

for the sending forth] Or, sending in; as others render it. For sending out, or putting of beasts, to wit, there to feed freely, as in places lying open, and unkept; for cattle to graze on, (as, for bryars and thorns, ver.23.) as not reserved for any other use.

of oxen] Heb. oxe, as chap. 1.3. ver.21. and so afterward here the like.

and for the treading] Going to and fro, into any part of them, without let, or restraint.

of lesser cattle] Of sheep, or Goats. For the word comprehends either, Exod. 3.5. They shall range and graze freely, after their wonted manner, in those places from whence they and their ownership had formerly been ejected and excluded, by the violent oppressions and undue enclosures of the richer and greater sort, ch. 5.17.

CHAP. VIII.

Vers. 1. MOreover the Lord said, &c.] Here beginneth the sixth Sermon, or Prophecy, of Esay, in this book recorded; contained in the five chapters next ensuing, which make all but one continued discourse: and that of the same nature, and subject matter, for the most part, with that next before going, chap. 7. for it consists partly, of denunciation of judgments against Aram and Israel, and partly of a prediction of such evils and calamities, as should befall Judah by Assur, together with a mixture of such matter of comfort, as might support the faithfull under the same, and give them ground of hopeful expectation of a gracious issue of them: but the former directed unto Ahaz, and his Courtiers; this, directed, and in writing therefore publikely exposed, to the people.

Moreover] Heb. And. But so also rendred, Jer. 3. 1. & 33. 1. by some other here, For, as ch. 9. 11. & 63. 4, 5. But because it is no prosecution of any former narration, but a relation of a new after-revelation, or vision : I suppose it should rather be rendred, Again: as Ezek. 16. 1.

the Lord said] Or, as some, hath said; as if it were a speech delivered at one and the same time with the former; but of that there is no likelihood.

unto me] In a vision, or by special revelation. See chapter 1. ver. 1.

Take thee] As Gen.6.21.& 14. 21. So, go thee, Gen.12.1. and, Ask thee, ch.7.11. See there.

a roll] Or, a Volume; that is. such a parcel of velome, or paper; as being fitted for writing, and written in, might be rolled up, and unrolled, as occasion was to make use of it. See of such rolles, Jer.36. 2, 23. Rev. 6.14. Howbeit, when I say, velome, or paper, my meaning is not, that the roll, which the Prophet made use of, was either of velom ,that is, some kind of parchment, such as we now use; or of paper, such as we now commonly so tearm; for the invention or either of these, seemeth to be far later then Esayes daies; before which the most common and general use for such purposes, as we now use those, was the strip of an Egyptian cane, or reed, which the Greeks and Latines call papyre, from whence our English word, paper; though our paper be of another matter and manner of making, then that was. See on chap. 19. 7. by these terms therefore, I here mean, such materials then in use, as were correspondent to those now in use with us. Howbeit, the word here used, is by some questioned; whether it signifieth such a roll, or no. And some would have it rendred, not a roll, but a pattern, in allusion to that of the open instrument, Jer. 32. 11. or, a page, because the Talmudists so term the margent of any writing; that is pure and unwritten: the reason is, say they, because the word here used, comes not from the word, that signifies to roll up, as that doth, Jer. 36. 2. but from one that signifies, to reveal, or, lay open : of which, see more on ch. 3.23. but the Hebrew Doctors go the former way, and derive it from the same root with that other, from which, although it doth not so regularly succeed, yet it so falleth out in that language, that oft-times words from the signification, not of their own proper root, but of some other neer unto it, in sound rather, then in sense. Nor doth it hinder, but that it may well be styled, a roll, albeit, the words have no such proper notation, the use of such rolls being so common in those times, Ps.40.7. Ezek.2.9,10. Others choose rather to render it, a table, chap. 30. 8. Hab. 2. 2. and their reason is, because he is willed to write, or engrave on it, with a stile; which, say they, on parchment, or paper, is not done; but with a pen, or quill. And they suppose it therefore to have been a table of marble-stone, or of brass, or lead: or the like, Exod. 34. 1. Job 19.24. Jer. 17. 1. but the word may as well signifie, a writers pen, as a graivers tool, as hereafter shall be shewed: and the word, write, not engrave, carries it rather to a book, or roll: then such a table as these talk of. Nor do we read, that the Prophets did any of them engrave their Sermons on such, nor do those places produced, prove it. See on ch. 30. 8.

a great roll] Because much matter to be written in it, and that in a fair and large letter. For this Prophecy to be therein engrossed, was longer then ordinary: as that also which Jeremy by Baruchs hand, wrote in a great roll, being a draught of all his former Prophecies, ver. 36.2.

and write] That being so written, and exposed to publick view, it may the better be weighed, and the more seriously confidered, as such things are generally deemed to be weighty, which are solemnly engrolled, as also, that being by means thereof, commonly read and known, the truth of the Prophecie, upon the event thereof, might the more fully be cleared and confirmed; the Prophet having, as it were, pawned his credit thereupon, Deut. 18. 21, 22. Jer. 28. 29. And lastly, that it might, as upon record, remain unto posterity, Deut. 31. 19, Job 19. 23. chap. 30. 8. Jer. 32. 10, 11, 14. Hab. 2. 2, 3.

in it] Heb. upon it ; as we use to say, write upon parchment, or paper, Yet the phrase is elsewhere, to write in a roll, or a book, Job 19.23. Ps.40.7. But the former particle is here rather used; because the latter followeth prefixed unto the next word, taken instrumentally; as Job 19.24, Jer. 17.1.

with a pen] Either of quill, cane, or reed. For such also were the pens, anciently in use. The word here is no where else found: but another word that answers it, signifies as well a Scriveners, or Writers pen, Psal. 46. 1. Jer. 8. 8. as a graver, or carvers tool, Exod. 32. 4. Jer. 17. 1. So may the word also, here found, he used for either. And here the rather for the former, for the reason above rendred.

a mans pen] By this some of the Iewish Doctors understand to be meant onely, a material pen; fo tearmed, in opposition to that imaginary pen, that he saw in the vision, like that razor that Ezekiel saw in the same manner, Ezek. 5. 1. which was not a mans razor, no more then this a mans pen. But this is a meer groundless fancy. For it appears not, that either Isaiah, or Ezekiel had any such apparition representing that, as in some visible or imaginary form, that is here or there mentioned, but by a secret suggestion, or instinct, which was sufficient, an injunction to do the same : as when a man would have a Scribe, or Notary, to draw some instrument for him, he need not shew him a pen, or paper, but give him instruction onely, what he would have him to write. Others therefore understand it, not so much of the pen it self, as of the letter, or the style, as we also tearm it. Some of the letter, that it should not be written in some strange character, that few could read, as that doom passed upon Balthasar, Dan. 5. 8, 15. but in a plain familiar letter, in an ordinary hand; such as any one might easily read; and that also so fair and large that it might be read aloof off, and without any long stay, Hab. 2. 2. Some again of the style, to wit, that it should be conceived and delivered, not in an obscure, and dark enigmatical, or symbolical manner; as that few capacities should reach it; that part of it especially, concerning the matter of Ahaz his fear, the overthrow of his two potent adversaries, by the King of Assyria, & the scourging of him & his, after ward with the same rod. For they deserve no regard, who would have it meant to be so written, that no brutish party, but a man indeed, a man of wiledome and understanding, Psal. 37. 17, 22. & 92. 6. Prov. 30. 2. Mic. 6. 9. should be able to conceive it; as the number of a man, Rev. 13. 18. The word Enosh, here used, (of which, see on chap. 2. 9.) will not bear it. Nor doth that seem so found, which some have, who would understand it, neither of the letter, nor of the frame of speech, but of the subject matter of Gods injunction; that it should be transacted, not according to the style of the Court of heaven, where there needs no mere, then Gods own will, for the passing of ought, Psal. 115. 3. & 135. 6. Dan. 4. 35. Ephes. 1. 11. but according to the style, or manner of proceeding in humane Courts, wherein witnelles are wont to be produced; and nothing done is firm, or of force, without them, Deut. 19. 15. 2 Cor. 13. 1. and so the Prophet also carried the busines, by God enjoyned him, vers. 2. But that phrase of the style, of this, or that Court, is of too late an edition; nor hath it age enough to give authority to such an exposition.

concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz] Or, for Maher-shalal-hash-baz, as Ezek. 37. 16. for Judah, and for Joseph. Or, as others, without either, onely Maher-shalal-hash-baz, because the particle here used, is not after ward repeated, vers. 3. This latter way many, yea, the most run; supposing that there was nothing more written in this great roll, but these four words. Which, because it seems very improbable, they add, some of them, that it is called, a great roll, not from the bigness, or largeness of the volume, but because it was to contain great mysteries: and others of them, that Princes patterns, though never so short, are wont to be engrolled in large paper, or parchment, and great letters. But not to insist on the forced construction of the one, and the unusualness of such brevity in the other: beside the improbability of the thing it self, it would not reach the main intent, and purpose of this diuling it in writing, which as fcarce any one, the prophet himself excepted, would be able to understand what were thereby meant. The former, therefore, that render the particle, concerning, or, for, suppose this whole Sermon, or Prophecy, was to be engrolled in it; and that, as they conceive, after the usual manner of the Prophets, who used to put their Sermons in writing; and having so done, to affix them on some gate of the Temple: whence, after they had hung there certain daies, the Priests took them down, and so laid them up, if they were by them approved, and so they were laid up, and came to be preferved for posterity. Now what they say concerning this particular prophecy, is acknowledged. But what is affirmed concerning an ordinary custom herein, is groundless, and nothing probable. It appears not, that the Prophets used commonly, by writing, and affixing them in any publick place, for the view of all, so to divulge them. The very places that they produce for proof of it; this, and ch. 30. 8. & Hab. 2.2. rather intimate the contrary. For what need was there to give order for some special prophecies in this kind, if that were the ordinary dealing with all. Neither is it to be believed, that if most of the prophecies, both of Jeremies, and divers others, had been so affixed, the Priests, that then were, would have taken them in, and had such care of them; and not rather have pulled them down, and torn them in pieces; especially having so maliciously and eagerly persecuted the Prophets, as false Prophets, for delivering them by word of mouth, Jer. 20. 1, 2. & 26. 8, 11. & 29. 26. This prophecy therefore, as some few other, was by a special command of God, thus written, and divulged; which, with other, the like, was not usual.

concerning Maher-shalal hash-baz] That is, concerning thy son Maher-shalal-hash-baz; so to be named; for as yet he was not, but is by that name, here so styled, in way of anticipation; of which there are many the like examples in Scripture. See Gen. 12. 18. with Gen. 28. 19. & 13. 10. with 9. 22. & 33, 17. Exod. 16. 3. Job. 7. 24, 26. Judg. 15, 19. The participle is used for of, or concerning, Gen. 20. 13. 31. 31. Psalm 91. 11. Howbeit a late learned writer would have it rendred here, as it most usually signifies, to him, or for him; as if the discourse written, were to be inscribed, and dedicated to him.

Maher-shalal-hash-baz] These words are very variously rendred. Some in malam; speed to the spoil, be hastneth the prey. Some, to make speed to spoil; (as Exod. 12. 33.) and haste to prey. Some, to the speedy spoyler; make haste to prey. Some a speedy robber: an hasty spoyler; or, a speedy spoiler; and one that hasteth to the prey. Some, make speed to spoil; hasten to prey. And they are as diversly understood. For (to let pass all other) some take them as a name intended, not for the Prophets son; but as the name Emmanuel, in the fore-going prophecy; for Christ, who at his coming in the flesh, seized on the strong man, that held possession of mens hearts before, and prevailing against him, as one stronger then he, 1 Joh. 4. 4. dispossessed him, disarmed him, dispoiled him, and divided his spoils, Luk. 11. 21. Ephes. 4. 8. Col. 2. 15. and they would have them to be the words of God the Father, speaking unto the Son, as encouraging him thereunto. Somewhat like unto those, Psalm 2. 8, 7. And this way, as by sholes, run the ancient Fathers, and most Popish Writers; and some few others also of no small note. But others, and fo the most and the soundest, understand it, as having reference to the King of Assyria; as intimating what he should speedily do unto Israel and Syria: that which both the subject matter of the foregoing chapter, and fo the sequel of the context here leads us unto, verf 3, 4. Howbeit, I cannot subscribe to the curious nicety of those of them, that would divide the words into two branches; the one containing the inscription of an Epistle, that the Prophet should be enjoyned to write unto the King of Assyria; as Jofin to the seven Churches of Asia, Rev. 1. 11. the other of them, the Epistle it self. To the speedy spoyler, there is the inscription. Make haste to prey; there the Epistle it self. Nor to those that would make them to be distinct names; Maher-shalal, the one; and Hash-baz, the other.

V. 2. And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record] Or, Then, as Gen. 18. 10. & 22. 21, 22. Or, wherefore, as Neh. 2. 2. Jer. 1. 17. & 6. 11. & 7. 16. Heb. I will cause to attest to me witnesses: the future for the preter-imperfect: as Ps. 18. 36, 37.

faithfull witnesses] That which some comment here, concerning witnesses, used in marriage contracts, as if the Prophet were about taking him a new wife, is nothing to the purpose. And further yet do they stray, that would hence infer, that all here spoken, as those things also related, Hos. 1. 2, 3. & 3. 1. were done onely in vision, as if the persons here mentioned, were intended to be witnesles of the Prophets companying with his wife. witnesses were used by him, because the matter was of much importance, 2 Cor. 13. 1. and faithfull, or, firm witnesses; that is, persons of credit, in regard of their place and authority, and such, as no exception could be taken against; as if they should herein collude with the Prophet.

to record] Or, bear witness. Both of the name that the Prophet imposed on his child, (which was usually done, at the time of circumcision, Luk. 1. 59. & 2. 21.) either being lately born; as fome: or, as yet unborn; as others. (for fo alfo before birth, fome have been named, 1 King. 13. 2. chap. 45. 1. Mat. 1. 21. Luk. 1. 13.) And of the reason why that name was, by God, enjoyned to be given him, see ver. 3. Though some fo understand it, as if these men were called in to be prefent, at the Prophets affixing at the draught of his Prophecy on the door of the Temple; or in fome other public place, to bear witnes of the fame: which needed not, when, as his name, without question, was in that writing expressed, and annexed thereunto.

Uriah the Priest] Here fome move a question, how this Uriah should he termed, a faithfull witnes; when as he was a man unfaithful to God in his place, and complyed with the King in his idolatrous courses, 2 King. 16. 10, 11, 15, 16. But to this is anfwered. First, that a man may be a good witnes, though he be not a good man. He may be firm to man, thoub he be not faithful to God. Secondly that the word firm, or, faithful, is not ufed to imply the approved goodnefs, or piety of the party mentioned; but their fitnefs for fuch a bufinefs, in regard of their eftcem with men. Thirdly, that Uriah, for ought appears, might not, as yet, carry himfelf otherwife, then was befitting his place and profeffion; albeit, that afterward he revolted. Fourthly, fome fay, which yet I make fome doubt of, that the Prophet of purpofe, knowing what manner of man he was, made choice of him for the one; becaufe he would have witneffes of both forts; thereby to intimate, that this Prophecy was fuch, as neither good, nor bad, or bare a fhew of that dict. Fifely, that whether he were good or bad, or bare a fhew of that which indeed he was not, he might be very fit for this bufinefs, in regard of his intereft with Ahaz, whom the fame did fo nearly concern.

and Zachariah the son of Jeberechiah] Who this Zachariah fhould be, is uncertain. The Jewifh Doctors, according to their idle dotages, (whom yet fome of ours alfo, herein, follow) tell us, as of Uriah, that prophefied under Jehoiakim, Jer. 26. 20. So of thofe two Zacharies, the one that prophefied under Joafh, 2 Chr. 24. 20. the other, that prophefied after the return from the captivity; Ezr. 5. 1. Zach. 1. 1. And that thefe are mentioned, as witneffes, becaufe their Prophecies, for the matter of them agreed much with this of Efay. And if it be objected, that the one of thefe was dead long before, 2 Chr. 24. 21. the other two were, as yet, unborn. They would put this off, by affirming that all this was done but in a vifion; and nothing therefore hinders, but that fuch might be induced as witneffes, who, at that time, were not in being. And thofe of ours, that herein concur with them, alleadg Mofes, and Elias appearing with our Saviour, at his transfiguration; as if that alfo were but fome imaginary matter, Matth. 17. 4. But leaving thefe frivolous furmifes to their authors; there is no doubt to be made, but that this Zachariah, as well at the former Uriah, was one that then lived. And it is deemed by many, (nor is it altogether improbable) that it was that Zachariah, whole daughter. Abi, or Abijah, was wife to Ahaz, who, by her, had Ezekiah, 2 King. 18. 2. 2. Chr. 29. 1. And this Zachariah, they fuppofe to be joyned with Uriah; that by two of principal note, the one in the Eccleſiatical, the other in the civil State, this weighty matter might be atteſted. Others deem it to have been that Zachariah the Prophet, that prophefied under Uzziah, a great part of his time; and is faid to have been a man of underſtanding in the viſions of God, 2 Chr. 26. 5. and fo the two witneſſes might be a Prieſt, and a Prophet. But this I fuppofe to be the leſs probable; for that the holy ſtory ſeems to imply, that this Zachariah deceaſed before the fall of Uzziah. Nor is there any ground for that which others gueſs, of one Zachariah, a Levite, of fome note, in Ezekiahs daies, 2 Chr. 29. 13. fave that he lived in thoſe times.

Zechariah] Heb. Zecharjahu. For which the Greek, uſually, hath Zacharias, Luk. 1. 5. We in Engliſh, commonly, Zachary. See chap. 1. 1.

the son of Jeberechiah] Heb. Jeberechjahu; as before, inſtead whereof, the Greek and old latine read, Barachias: The latter, in likelihood, the rather, becauſe they found Zachary the ſon of Barachias, mentioned, Matth. 23. 35. However the names differ little, and with divers others, both father and ſon, might have the ſame names, as Joſeph the ſon of Jacob, Gen. 30. 24. and Matth. 1. 16. and Zorobabel, the ſon of Salathiel, Matth. 1. 12. & Luk. 3. 27. for they ſeem not to be the ſame.

V. 3. And I went unto, &c.] From hence ſome of our chief Interpreters collect, and are ſomewhat ſtiff in it; that all that is here mentioned, was done in a viſion. And ſome doubts and difficulties, indeed, ariſe from the words thus read; though not ſuch, as may neceſſarily enforce any ſuch matter. But they may all be cut off, by reading the words thus, (which the hebrew will well admit) For I had gone into, &c. As rendring a reaſon, or relating the occaſion what therefore, or wherupon God ſhould give him this charge, concerning his child that was to be named, to wit, becauſe his wife was lately delivered of a ſon. So both the verb, and particle, are in conſtruction a like uſed, Gen. 12. 1. For the Lord had ſaid unto Abraham.

went unto] Or, had gone in to; as ſome render it. A modeſt form of ſpeech, expreſſing the marriage duty, very frequent in Scripture, Gen. 6. 4. & 29. 29. and the ſame more fully, as opening the ground of the phraſe, Judg. 15. 1. I will go to my wife into the chamber; to wit, where man and wife uſe to be private. But the Hebrew word here uſed, ſignifies properly to approach; to approached, or, had approached unto, &c. and ſo it is uſed, Gen. 20. 4. Lev. 18. 6, 14. Ezek. 18. 6.

the Prophetesse] That is, a virgin, ſay ſome, endued with the gift of prophecie, as Mary, Deborah, and Huldah are ſaid to have been Prophetesſes, Exod. 15. 22. Judg. 4. 4. 2 Kin. 22. 14. grounlefly dreaming, that the Prophet ſhould wed him a new wife: and that this ſhould be that virgin, the mother of Emmanuel, before mentioned, ch. 7. 14. But the Prophetesſe here, is no other then the Prophets wife: the ſame, in likelihood, by whom he had Shear-jaſhub before ch. 7. 3. So it is obſerved, that in divers languages, the wives are ſtiled by their husbands offices, and dignities; as Duke, Dutcheſſe, Count, Countes; Mayor, Mayoreſs, &c. and she conceived] Or, had conceived: or, was with child. See on ch. 7. 14.

and bare a son] Or, had born a ſon. Was now delivered of a male-child, to wit, before ever he received this viſion from God, or the charge was given him concerning the naming of the child, and the engroſſing of the prophecy, intimated in that name, together with it.

a son] The ſame, ſay ſome; mentioned, ch. 7. 14. A fond conceit, better befitting Jews then Chriſtians.

Then said the Lord to me] That is, after the Prophetefs was delivered of the child. Heb. And; but ſo it is rendred, alſo, ver. 2. And ſo alſo, Neh. 2. 2. Job 13. 22. & 40. 3. Hoſ. 1. 9. Yet it may be retained here, in his firſt and proper ſenſe; as in the like, Hoſ. 1. 4, 6.

said] As ver. 1.

Call his name] Call him; as ch. 7. 14. Let this be the name whereby he ſhall be called; as Jer. 23. 6. & 33. 16.

Maher-shalal-hash-baz] The Hebrews uſed oft-times to give names, as well to perſons, as to places, conſiſting of divers words. So Gen. 16. 13, 14. & 22. 14. and 35. 28. Judg. 6. 32. 1. Chr. 1. 20. & 3. 19, 20. & 4. 30, 31. Jer. 20. 3. of the ſignification of this name, ſee on v. 1. Of the reaſon of impoſing it, ſee ver. 4. Howbeit, they ſwerve far from the truth, and the intent of the Prophet, that would have one and the ſame child have two names; Emmanuel, to intimate Gods aſſiſtance of them, againſt thoſe their two enemies, Rezin, and Pekah, ch. 7. 1, 5. ver. 10. and Maher-ſhalal-hash-baz, to ſignifie the killing and ruinating of them; and that ſpeedily, by the king of Aſſyria, ver. 4. The name conſiſts of two parts, both in divers words, but of the ſame ſenſe, implying the ſame thing; and that by reduplication thereof, to intimate the infallibility of it, and the nearneſs of its approach: as Gen. 41. 32.

V. 4. For before the child ſhall have knowledg, to cry, My Father, and My Mother, &c.] In this verſe is the reaſon given, why God would have the child ſo called, to wit, thereby to intimate, the ſpeedy diſpatch and deſtruction of thoſe two kings, and their chief cities, by the Forces and followers of the king of Aſſyria.

the child] This child, that is lately now born, and ſo named: not chriſt, as ſome; nor a child, that is any child indefinitely, as others. See chap. 7. 16.

ſhall have knowledg] Heb. ſhall know; or, ſhall be able. So is the word of knowing, oft taken: as ch. 56. 11. Jer. 6. 15.

to cry] Or, to call, as v. 3.

My father, and my mother] Or, My father, or my mother: either of both, as Exod. 21. 15. He that ſmites his father, and his mother, for, father, or mother: and children begin, uſually, to call mother firſt; becauſe moſt frequent about them in that age: and the children therefore moſt familiar with them. The meaning is, before the child ſhall be able to ſpeak, and to diſtinguiſh his parents from ſtrangers. And this ſeems a ſhorter time, then that, chap. 7. 16. before the child know to refuſe evil, and chooſe good. For children are ſooner of ability to ſpeak ſome few familiar words; then of diſcretion, to underſtand what belongeth to good and evil: and the reaſon of the diverſe form of ſpeech uſed, concerning either, is; becauſe the one, to wit, Shear-jaſhub, might then be ſome two, or three year old: whereas Maher-ſhalal-hash-baz, was but newly now born; and yet might be as ſoon able to ſpeak, as the other might be to conceive difference between good and evil. See further, on ch. 7. 16.

The riches of Damascus, and the spoyl of Samaria ſhall be taken away] The two Kingdomes of Iſrael and Syria, ſhall be ſtript and ſpoyled of their wealth, and treaſure, by the King of Aſſyria.

the riches of Damascus] The head City of Syria, chap. 7. 8. and a place of great wealth: or, as others, the power of Damaſcus. The word ſignifieth either: and riches are one principal thing, wherein the ſtrength of a State conſiſts.

and the spoil of Samaria] The head City of Iſrael, ch. 7. 9.

the spoil] Not the people. For he ſpeaks rather of a diverſion, in the kingdom intimated, done by Tiglath-Pileſer, under Pekah, 2 King. 15. 29. then of an utter depopulation, made by Salmaneſer, under Hoſhea, 2 King. 17. 6, 14, though ſome people alſo were in that former invaſion captived.

ſhall be taken away] Heb. he ſhall take away, or, one ſhall take away. The verb being taken indefinitely, or imperſonally, (the form of ſpeech, ſee on chapter 2. 19.) and therefore well here rendred.

before the King of Assyria] As Conquerors are wont to ſend their rich ſpoiles oft-times, into their own Countrey before them, to give notice of their victories and ſurprizals, to their people; or to cauſe them, as the uſual manner of the Romanes was, to be carried before their ſtately chariots in triumph: yet ſome would have it to be a defective ſpeech, and render the words thus, he that is, or ſtands, before the Kings of Aſſyria; that is, his Officers, Miniſters, or attendants, (for ſo are men ſaid to be, or to ſtand before the face of them whom they ſerve, or attend on; 1 Sam. 16. 16. 1 King. 1. 2. & 10. 8. & 17. 1.) ſhall carry away. But the former ſeems the more familiar.

V. 5. The Lord ſpake, alſo unto me again, ſaying] Heb. And the Lord further added to ſpeak unto me, as chap. 7. 10. Here beginneth a ſecond part of this Chapter. Wherein, as in the latter part of the former, from. ver. 17. he foretelleth what evils ſhould befall the land, both of Iſrael and Judah; from the King of Aſſyria, on the one, for their ſcorn, and contempt of their brethren, and confederating with the Aſſyrians, to work their overthrow; on the other, for their diſtruſting of God, and relying upon the Aſſyrians, by whom they ſhould alſo ſuffer; withal, admoniſhing the godly among them, to be cautious, and to reſt upon God alone, and his Word, who had promiſed to ſecure them in thoſe calamitous times.

V. 6. Forasmuch as this people, &c.] Who the people here ſpoken of, ſhould be, is very doubtful. Some underſtand thereby, the people of Judah, or a great part of them, who conſidering how low their State was brought, and diſtruſting thoſe wonderful promiſes, as they eſteemed them, that their chief City had to maintain a ſiege againſt two ſuch potent Princes, as were combined together againſt them, deſired to have one of thoſe two to govern them; as that Son of Tabeel before mentioned, chap. 7. 6. to be ſet over them, and had under-hand, ſome treacherous compliance with them, to that purpoſe. So the Hebrew Doctors, whom alſo many of ours follow. But of this we find little ground, either in the ſacred ſtory or elſe-where, in this Prophecy. Others therefore, rather ſuppoſe the people mentioned, to be the people of Iſrael; who ſlighted, and ſet light by the kingdom of Judah, as having been by the incurſions both of the Syrians and themſelves, ſo exceedingly impaired, and by Rezin and Pekah now joyned in one, made full account to make full conqueſt of it, chap. 7. 6. For, as for thoſe that interpret it, of the Jewiſh people in general, that not contenting themſelves with Gods promiſed protection, reſted upon the Aſſyrian: they are enforced, for the making good of this their interpretation, wherein, few, or none follow them) to offer over-much force to the text.

this people] Spoken, as in contempt of them, who ſo ſcorned and contemned Gods people, as not deſiring once to name them. See the like of the other, ch. 6. 9.

refuſe] Or, rather, deſpiſe, contemn. For in that, or the like ſenſe, is the word here uſed, conſtantly taken. The word of refuſing, though coming neer to it, doth in a letter differ from it.

the waters of Shiloah] A fountain called alſo Gihon, 1 King. 1. 33. iſſuing forth from the foot of mount Sion; and yielding a rivolet, that watered the lower city, Pſal. 46. 4. Neh. 3. 15. Joh. 9. 7. See ch. 7. 2. put here, as fome, for the houſe of David, now at a low ebb; or rather, for ſuch defence, as Jeruſalem, and the State of Judah then had. Which they ſlighted and feared, as if they had nothing but ſuch a ſorry rivolet, as that was, to ſtrengthen and ſecure their head City; not conſidering the power of God, by ſu. h weak means, though no other were able to protect it. See ch. 33. 21. albeit. I ſuppoſe they wander wide, that would have Siloah here put for Gods protection it ſelf.

that run softly] Spoken, in way of oppoſition, to great Rivers, that run with a ſtrong torrent, and ſtiff ſtream. This rivolet, or the waters iſſuing from this fountain, are therefore deemed to run ſlowly, or ſoftly, partly, becauſe the current was not great; and partly, becauſe in its own courſe it went not ſtreight forward, but with many windings to and fro, in manner of a Serpent, that moves ſlowly, and ſtily, creeping, and crooking, ch. 27. 1. ſuppoſed therefore by ſome, to be termed, the dragons well, Neh. 2. 13.

and rejoyce in Rezin, and Remaliahs son] This ſome expound of thoſe male-contents, in the Jewiſh State, that deſired, and would gladly be under another government, either Rezins, or Pekah's, or, of both joyntly. Others, of thoſe, to the Jews ill affected in Iſrael, that vaunted much of, and promiſed themſelves great matters from the conjunction of thoſe, two Kings, ch. 7. 1. and rejoyced greatly in their ſucceſſes. The Hebrew, word for word, runs thus, And joy is with Rezin, and the ſon of Remaliah, or Remaliahs: as alſo, chap. 7. 4. which ſome fill up, as if it were a defective ſpeech, on this manner; and joy, is to them, of fighting with Rezin &c. as if he had ſaid, they re joyce, or would fain be fighting with Rezin, and Pekah; relying on the aid they looked for, from the King of Aſſyria: by whoſe help they doubted not, but to be able to bicker with, and beat them both. But this expoſition, as before was ſaid, offers too much violence to the context. The meaning therefore is, rather, that Rezin and Pekah, as they joyned together againſt Judah; ſo it was matter of much joy to them, to ſee it ſo weakned: as thereby conceiving undoubted hope, to prevail, at pleaſure, againſt it. See ch. 7. 7, 8. And this expoſition is moſt agreeable to the tenor both of this, and the former Chapter.

rejoyce] Or, joy is. The noun ſeems rather to be uſed, then the verb, to make it ſound like the former word of contempt. For with ſuch ſimilitude and neerneſs of ſounds, in terms ſpecially of divers, or adverſe notions, our Prophet ſeems to have been much delighted; and they have an elegancy in them. See ch. 3. 24. & 5. 7.

Remaliahs son] So ſtill the Prophet in contempt ſtyles him, as one unworthy to be named, or termed king of Iſrael, being ſprung from baſe parentage, and having by murther got the Crown: See ch. 7. 4.

V. 7. Now therefore] Heb. And as therefore; or, in like manner. For a retaliation is implyed; as they intend, and deſire, to be eſt-ſoon doing with Judah: ſo by a ſtronger one, then either Judah, or themſelves, ſhall they be deale with.

behold] Look for it, and that ſoon, and ſuddenly; though you neither expect, nor will eaſily believe it: yet it ſhall both ſurely and ſpeedily be accomplished. See ch. 3. 1. & 5. 26.

the Lord bringeth up] Heb. is making to aſcend; or, bringing, as Jer. 3. 7. and, as taking away, ch. 3. 1. he is even about to do it; it will out of hand, begin to be done. See v. 4. bringeth up] Spoken, ſay ſome, of the Jewiſh Doctors eſpecially who would have their land to be the navel of the whole earth, (as buſieng to that purpoſe, a paſſage, in Pſalm 74. 12. Ezek. 38. 12.

and the higheſt land in the world) in regard of the ſituation of the Conntrey of Aſſyria, in relation to the holy land, as lying far lower then it. See chap. 7. 1. but it ſeems rather, to have reſpect to the riſing of ſome great river, ſurrounding the lower grounds. See on Jer.49.19.

upon them] Or, over them. The people before ſpoken of, ver. 6. not thoſe of Judah, (for of them afterwards, ver. 8.) but of Iſrael, on whom this ſtorm firſt fell;& were in the firſt place over-whelmed with it, 2 King. 15. 29. & 17. 3. See ch. 7. 20. It is here oppoſed to Shiloah, a ſmall rivolet, running quietly, without much noyſe, or ſtrong ſtream, ver. 6. which they therefore ſet light by, as unable either to do any hurt to their land,or to impeach them in their paſſage and approaches to Jeruſalem: inſtead whereof, God would ſend in upon them a great river,ſuch an one as had water ſtore,and ran with a ſwift,and a ſtrong current, which uſed to break through, or ſwell over his banks, and ſo ſurround the land neer unto it.

even the King of Aſſyria] See chap. 7. 17. The King of Aſſyria ſhall break in upon them; not like the waters of Shiloah; but like the ſtreams of Ephrates,his own Country river.So are mighty Commandors with their forces invading of ſome land, reſembled oft to rivers breaking in upon the lower grounds. See ch. 28. 2,& 59.19. Jer. 50.44.Dan.11.22.

and all his glory] Or, with all his glory; as chap. 5. 14. His armies, or forces, conſiſting of valiant Souldiers; and led by brave Captains and Commanders, ch. 10. 16. in whom, he much gloried, and of whom he ſo much vaunted,ch. 10.8. & 36. 9. & 37. 25. and that made a glorious ſhew generally,in the eyes of the people; becauſe by them,he ſubdued ſo many Countries,ch.10.9,10,13,14 and 30.18,20.& 37.11,12,13,18.

and he ſhall] That is, the King of Aſſyria ſhall; or, as others, it ſhall, to wit, the river before mentioned, the Aſſyrians followers, and forces: becauſe in that metaphor the Prophet proceeds.

ſhall come up] As before; the Lord is bringing up. See there.

over all his channels] Whereby moſt underſtand all the valleys, or lower parts of the land, invaded by the Aſſyrian, and over-run by him.But whether they take the word to ſignifie channels,as ſome; or ſtreams, or rivers, or, ſtreams of rivers, as others; from Pſal. 18, 15. & 42. 1. & 126, 4. It ſeems no very fit, or handſome expreſſion, to repreſent the direption, or deſtruction of a land, or ſtate, by overflowing, or,(if I may ſo ſay) drowning of ſtreams, or rivers: (which may rather be deemed an increaſing, and enlarging of them) or, of channels, and water-courſes, which is rather a filling them, and ſupplying them, if they were empty, of what they wanted before. Some few other therefore underſtand it of the great River Euphrates its own channells; for it divided it ſelf into divers branches, and ran conſequently in many channels, or ſtreams. But then to ſay, that a river ſhould come up over his own channels,ſeems as improper a phraſe,as a reſemblance of the former. The reading therefore would be altered; and the words rendred, either, with all his ſtreams, as the particle is uſed,Exod. 35.22. where the words are, the men with the women: and Job 38. 32. Arcturus with his ſons: or, from off all his channels: With ſupply of a particle,ſometime deficient, and left to be ſupplyed, as Gen. 4.1. I have gotten a ſon from the Lord:and Pſ.81. 5. when he went forth from off the land of Egypt. The defective form of ſpeech, the Prophet ſeems the rather here to have uſed; that there might be the more exact correſpondence between the two members of this latter clauſe.The meaning is, that the King of Aſhur ſhould bring all the forces he could make, along with him; as before it was ſaid,he ſhould come with all his glory:or,rather,ſhould take people,(compared to waters, Rev. 17. 15.)to ſerve him in this expedition, out of all parts of his dominion,which branched it ſelf out into many countries;as Euphrates it ſelf alſo into many channels and ſtreams.

over all his banks] His own banks,as Joſh.3.15.& 4. 18. & 12.15. to wit, thoſe of the river beforementioned. For they ſeem much miſtaken,who apply this alſo, as the former, to the land, whether of Iſrael, or Judah, invaded; and by banks, underſtand high places, fortreſſes, and fenced Cities, that ſhould no more eſcape the Aſſyrian forces,then lower,leſſer,and leſs fortified places,2 King.15. 29.& 17. 16.& 18.10,13. nor do they ſeem to underſtand the Prophet aright, who by ſurrounding of banks, ſuppoſe breach of oaths and covenants,to be meant,though that be true in the ſtory,2 King. 18.14,17.ch.33.7.but it ſeems not ſo fit here.

V.8. And he ſhall paſſe through Judah] Or, It (to wit, this flood, v.8.) ſhall paſs through alſo(as ver.5.) unto,or,into Judah: as Num. 16.21. The King of Aſſyria having ſubdued Iſrael,the ten Tribes, ſhall make his way by them ſo ſubdued,and pierce through, as a ſtiff torrent,with full ſtream,into the land of Judah. See 2 King.18.10, 11,13.and of the Chaldees,Hab.1.11.

he ſhall over-flow, and go over] Heb. it over-floweth, and paſſeth over, or, through. It ſwelleth, and goeth on, carrying all away before it, and riſing higher and higher. See the ſame form of ſpeech, ch. 28. 15,18.Dan.11.10,40. Some would have the former word of paſſing,and this here, though divers terms,to intend the ſame thing. Others diſtinguiſh them over-nicely.The difference,I ſuppoſe,in the uſe of them, is no other then this, that the one denoteth the enemies paſſage to, and entrance into Judea; the other his progreſs,in the conqueſt of it.

he ſhall reach even to the neck] Or, it ſhall; to wit, the inundation. So ch. 38. 28. an over-flowing ſtream, reaching to the midſt of the neck: And the like, Hab. 3. 13. It is a metaphor, ſay ſome, taken from thoſe that go into the water by degrees, firſt up to the knees, then to the waſte, and ſo on, till they have gone up to the neck. But it is rather taken from thoſe, whom waters breaking in upon, in a deluge, riſe and ſwell ſo high with them, that they can hardly keep head above water. The meaning is, that all Judah ſhould be in danger of being utterly loſt; as the whole body is in danger to be drowned, when the water comes up ſo neer the head. Thus it was under Ezekiah; when Sennacherib having ſurrounded the whole land almoſt, even to the wall of Jeruſalem, their head City, (ſee Jer. 34. 1.) and ſurprized the moſt of their cities, did much diſtreſs it, and had, queſtionleſs, carried it, had not God vouchſafed them an unexpected, and extraordinary deliverance,ch. 36.1,2,12. & 37.3,35,36.

and the ſtretching out of his wings ſhall fill the breadth of thy land] Or, as ſome, and it ſhall be, that the extenſions of his wings ſhall fill the breadth of thy land. So they render it, becauſe the verb is ſingular, the noun plural. But the Hebrew will well bear another conſtruction; to wit, The fulneſſe of the breadth of thy land, ſhall be the extenſion of his wings; as ch.6.3. the fulneſſe of the whole land, or, earth, is, or ſhall be, his glory; or,inſerting one particle,which the former place alſo will well admit. The fulneſſe of the breadth (that is, the full breadth) of thy land, ſhall be for the ſtretchings out of his wings.The meaning is,that the Aſſyrian troops ſhould overſpread the whole land,from the one ſide to the other; like a mighty river, or vaſte Sea, that not breaking in,at ſome gap,or narrow breach,in the Sea-walls, or damms, but with full breaſt, all along at once, ſurrounding its whole banks, doth with a joynt ſtream ruſh on, as it paſſeth forward,over-whelming the whole breadth of the Country before it. See chap. 9. 15. & 11. 14. and of the Chaldee forces the like, Hab.1.6.

the ſtretchings out of his wings]. Some ſuppoſe that the Prophet here paſſeth to a new ſimilitude, whereby he deſcribeth further, the Aſſyrian invaſion, as reſembling the king of Aſſyria by ſome mighty Eagle, that ſpreadeth his wings over the prey, that he either intends to ſeize on, or hath already ſurprized. And it is true, that great Kings going forth with great Armies, are oft compared to ſuch, Jer. 48. 40. & 49. 22. Ezek. 17. 3, 7. and it is likewiſe acknowledged,that military Troops, or Companies, as well of foot, as of horſe,are here termed wings,in alluſion to the wings of fowles, the larger ſort of them eſpecially,which in ſome ſort,they reſemble; though the word be otherwiſe taken in that other place, chap.18.1. which ſome of them here produce for it.But it followeth not thence, that the Prophets intent here is,to compare the Aſſyrian king,to ſome mighty fowl of prey, becauſe he calleth his troops, wings; no more then Daniel had to decipher Antiochus, as ſome vaſt Gyant, when he calleth the forces, that ſtood on his ſide, and fought for him, arms, Dan. 11. 31. They onely expreſs the companies of either,by a common figurative term, whereby ſuch are wont to be deſigned.

O Immanuel] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to Chriſt, whoſe land the Country of Judah is ſaid to be, becauſe he had a more ſpecial intereſt in it, as being not to be born onely in it, but to ſit on Davids Throne, ſometime King of it, Jer. 30.9.Ezek.34. 23. & 37. 29. Luk. 1,32.& 2.11. as alſo wherein he had the royal ſeat of his Kingdom, his Church at preſent, Pſ. 2.6. which by his power therefore was to be protected, relieved under, and delivered out of this great danger and grievous diſtreſs, v. 10, 14. Of the name it ſelf, and the perſon ſo named,together with the notation of it, and reaſon thereof rendred, See ch. 7. 14.

V. 9. Aſſociate your ſelves, O ye people] Having made mention of Emmanuel, now as confident of his aſſiſtance, he heartens, and encourageth the faithfull to depend upon him, with hopeful expectation of ſecurity and protection from him; amidſt thoſe common calamities; and a comfortable iſſue of them in his due time. To which purpoſe, alſo, he makes entrance into this part of his Sermon, by turning his ſpeech to their adverſaries,that conſpired, and plotted together againſt them, willing them, as in way of deriſion, to proceed as unanimouſly, as politickly, and as powerfully, in their combinations, conſultations, and preparations, as they could; but withal, aſſuring them, that all their aſſociations ſhould be diſſolved, their counſels fruſtrate, and their attempts returned back upon themſelves, to their own ruine and confuſion. See the like, Pſalm 37. 12, 15. Mic. 4. 11, 13. chap. 45. 11, 12. & 54.15,17.

Aſſociate your ſelves]. So, the Chaldee, and ſome of the Jewiſh Teachers, and ſo the old Latine. For the Greek trod awry, by miſtake of a letter, wherein oft they have ſlipped. Yet moſt of the Hebrew Doctors render it, either break, or, Break your ſelves, Be broken. Whom ſome of ours alſo follow, becauſe it is of the ſame form with that, Pſ.2.9. ch.24.19. But it is well known,that verbs of neer affinity for letters and ſound,though divers in notion, do in the holy language oft enterchange forms.And ſo it is here, for the word that ſignifieth to aſſociate, Prov. 24. 21. & 19. 9. having ſome affinity in ſound, with that which ſignifies, to break in ſunder; as may appear, where they are both found together, Prov. 13. 20. doth ſometime borrow forms from this, which are not regularly its own. That,which they that ſtumble hereat,might have, found, not here alone,but elſewhere,Prov. 18.24. Thoſe, the Prophet intends, as well,that had now combined themſelves, under thoſe two kings of Iſrael and Syria, ch. 7. 1, 2. as alſo,that joyned themſelves unto Sonnacherib,in the invaſion of Judah,ch. 36. 1, &10.8.

O ye people]Heb. Peoples,in the plural,as chap.10.13,14.&.11.10. For there were two peoples, that conſpired together. Syrians, and Iſraelites,againſt, Judah under Ahaz, ch. 7. 2. and the army conſiſted of divers Nations, that Sennacherib led againſt them under Ezekiah,ch.7.18.

and.Or,but:as ch.7. 12.

and ye ſhall be broken in pieces]As Jer.50.2. Heb. and be broken in pieces. So, and live,and dwel. For,and you, or, ye ſhall live, and dwel,Gen.42.18.Pſal.37.27.Jer. 25.55.for the imperative is oft put for the future,as on the other ſide, the future for the imperative,ch. 6.9.Deut.5.17,20.All ſhall turn to your ruine. See this fulfilled,ch, 37.36,37.

and give ear all ye of far Countries]Heb. all the remote perſons,or, parts,of the earth. Let all, far, and neer take notice of what I ſay, ch.33. 13. as giving warning to thoſe forreign people a far off, to take heed what they did, in adjoyning themſelves to thoſe that invaded Gods people, leſt they periſhed together with them: though ſome underſtand it, as the former: ſpoken in way of deriſion; like that,to the youngſters,Eccl.11.9. as if the Prophet ſhould ſay,hearken to the King of Aſſyria, inviting you to joyn with him; and prepare your ſelves ſo to do, if you deſire your own deſtruction.

gird your ſelves]Arm your ſelves; fit, and addreſs your ſelves, for warlike expedition,as Ezek.38.7. alluding to the uſe of the military belt,of which,ſee as ch.5.27.ſo 2 Sam.22,40.1 King.20.11, Pſal.18. 32.ch.45.5.

and ye ſhall be broken in pieces]Heb. and be broken in pieces, as before. And there is an emphaſis in that form of ſpeech, implying, that the one would inſtantly and inevitably follow upon the other Yea,that by doing the one, they ſhould be ſure to bring upon them ſelves the other.

gird your ſelves,and ye ſhall be broken in pieces] It is thrice repeated,to work it the deeper into the minds and hearts of thoſe that ſhould hear,or read it,and to give the ſtronger aſſurance of it. See ver.4.ch,7.17.So Pſal,96.13.and 98,7.

V.10.Take counſel together]Heb.conſult a conſultation, to wit, about invading Judah,and ſurprizing Jeruſalem,as they did,ch.7,5 .6. So Pſal.38.3.

and it ſhall come to nought] God bringeth to nought the counſel of the nations, Pſal. 33. 10. and the devices of the crafty,Job.5. 12.

ſpeak a word]Conclud ſomewhat,determine a thing, reſolve upon ought, what you pleaſe, a word, for, a thing: as Job 22. 28. thou ſhalt decree a word,or,a thing,and it ſhall ſtand;but contrariwiſe here.

and]Or,but;as ver.9.

it ſhall not ſtand] See ch. 7. 7. Ye ſhall not be able,by all the power ye can make,or policy ye can uſe; to prevail againſt thoſe whom God protects,Pſal.62.3,4.& 64.5, 8.

for God is with us]And if God be with us,and for us, what need we care, who be againſt us yea, who can ſo oppoſe us, as to prevail againſt us? Rom. 8. 31. they muſt prevail firſt againſt him,before they can prevail againſt us, 2 King.6. 17.& 2 Chron.32.78.Zach.4.5. 1 Joh. 4. 4. he alludeth to the name of Emmanuel,ch.7.14.and declareth in part, what it imports, and promiſeth,in regard of Gods people, Gods conſtant preſence with them, to aſſiſt and protect them againſt all oppoſitions and aſſaults. Pſal. 125.1,2,Yet I cannot aſſent to thoſe,that render it,becauſe Emmanuels land it is; though that be ſaid, ver. 8. But it is not neceſſarily therefore repeated here.

V.11.For the Lord ſpake thus to me]The Prophet proceeds to confirm the godly party,againſt ſuch groundleſs fears, as the diſtruſtful ſort of them were ſurprized with; and dehorted them, from taking ſuch courſes,as they did,and that by relating to them, what charge God,in a more ſerious and ſolemn manner ,then ordinary, had to this purpoſe,delivered to him;

For] A confirmation of what he had before delivered,concerning the iſſue of thoſe counſels and courſes, that the adverſaries of Gods people ſhould take againſt them,verſ.9,10.

with a ſtrong hand]The neer ſhape of two letters in the Hebrew, hath as elſe-where oft,ſo here,bred a divers reading,but ſuch, as alters not the ſenſe. Some reading the text,as with, ſome without that note of ſimilitude. Where,by hand,the Jewiſh Doctors, whom moſt of ours follow,underſtand the Spirit of Prophecy, according to that, the hand of God was upon me, Ezek, 1.3. & 3.14, 22.as if he had ſaid,the hand of God made a ſtrong impreſſion upon me, what time he gave this in charge. Added,here,both to give fuller aſſurance of what he was to deliver from God to them: and to make his words carry the more weight with them. The words are in Hebrew, with ſtrength of hand, as Dan.11. 2,or, as ſome render it, by apprehenſion of hand. That is, taking and holding me by the hand, to confirm and ſtrengthen me,as 1 Sam. 23.16.ch. 45.1 & 51.18. Pſal.73.23.Or,taking me by the hand, to cauſe me to mark what he ſhould ſay to me; or,taking me by the hand, and drawing me neer to him,as men uſe to do thoſe, whom they have ſome ſecret to impart unto,or are to have ſome ſpecial conference with, Act.23.19. or laying hand on me,as a School-maſter on his Scholler, that would fain be gone from him,and by force, as it were, (as Ezek. 34. 4.detaining me with him,and reſtraining me from ſuch courſes,as the people of theſe times commonly took: according to which laſt, there ſhould be a trajection in the words,thus to be read; and, or , when, with a ſtrong hand, he curbed me, or,kept me in. And of ſuch trajections we have indeed ſome examples in the Scripture, 2 King.2. 14.Job 23.12.Prov.23.24.& 24.27. but it fitteth not ſo well here; and the pauſes oppoſe it.

and inſtructed me]Or, when he inſtructed me,and,for when, as ch. 43.12.Jer.34.1.

inſtructed me]The word ſignifieth properly,to chaſtiſe,as Pſal.118. 18.and becauſe the end of correction is inſtruction, Pſal. 35. 11.& 94,12. Prov.29.15.in the next place, to inſtruct,Prov.31.1. ch. 28. 26,here,as ſome would have it, to conch, or keep within compaſs, I ſhould rather render it, by inſtructing warned me. A form of ſpeech,notunlike thoſe, noted on, ch 1.4.alienated backward. The meaning is,by informing me of the iſſue of ſuch courſes,he warned me, both to refrain them my ſelf,and to teach other ſo to do.

that I ſhould not walk in the way of his people,ſaying] Heb. from walking:as 1 Sam.30.21.2 Chr.25.13.Lam.4. 18.That I ſhould not take ſuch courſes,as they did,concerning the ſafeguarding,and ſecuring of themſelves againſt thoſe two kings that came to invade them.See Jer.10.2.

this people]The people of Jeruſalem,ſo affected, as was Ahaz their Soveraign,ch.7.2,12,13.

V.12.Say ye not,a confederacy, to all them to whom this people ſhall ſay,a confederacy]He declares here more expreſly, what the peoples way was,that he would have them to avoid. Do not thou,nor the other faithful that follow thee,enter into any ſuch confederacy with the Aſſyrian, or any other forreign force, as the main body of this people, therein following their heads, do; for the ſecuring of your ſelves. Such confederacies never proved ſucceſsful to Gods people; 2 Chr.16.1,3,9. & 28.16,20.ch.20.6.& 30.4,5. Jer.2:33,37. Yet ſome of note expound this of the confederacy of Iſrael, and Syria, againſt them,the fear whereof ſo much poſſeſſed their minds, that there was nothing elſe in their mouths,but a conſpiracy,a conſpiracy. Two great and powerful Kings and States have conſpired together againſt us,and they will utterly ruine us: and this they ſuppoſe confirmed,by the words next enſuing. But neither do the words of the text it ſelf ſo well bear this expoſition; nor thoſe following neceſſarily infer it.

Say ye not a confederacy]Heb.Ye ſhall not ſay, as, This ſhall ye ſay, for,thus ſay,ch 30.4,& 37.10. Say not a confederacy,that is, Think not on a confederacy(as Exod 2.14.doſt thou ſay(that is,think) to ſlay me;and 2 Sam.21.16,he ſaid(that is,thought) to ſmite David;or, Say not a confederacy,for,make no confederacy: as Pſal. 35.3. ſay to my ſoul,(or,to me,as Pſal.3.2.) I am thy ſalvation,that is,ſave me and, ſay to wiſedome,Thou art my ſiſter,for,make wiſedome thy ſiſter,Prov.7. 4.and ſaying to a ſtock,Thou art my father, for, making a ſtock thy father,Jer.2.27 to all them]to whomſoever;as Pſal.145.18.Joel 2.32.Rom.10.13. as if he had ſaid, do not follow this people in their unſetled courſes, ſeeking to link themſelves in league, one while with one, and another while with another,Jer.2.18.36.make not a confederacy with ſo many as they do,or rather,to any of them:as Job,1, 11, touch any thing,or,ought, that he hath, and Ezek. 18.13.hath done any of theſe. For ſo thoſe places would both be rendered; make no ſuch league with any of thoſe, Aſſyrian,Syrian,Egyptian,or other,whom this people combine with.

to them]Or, concerning them;and ſo,to whom, concerning whom; as Pſal.91.11.Eſth,3,2.

to whom]Intending, ſay ſome, the Syrians and Iſraelites, whom they moſt exceedingly feared, and many deſired to joyn with, (ſee on ver,6.)or,the Aſſyrians rather principally, (though not waveing any other, that they might look after) whom, for fear of thoſe ſo combined,they ſought to for ſuccour,2 King.16.7.

neither fear ye their fear]Fear not thoſe,whom they fear. Stand not in ſuch fear of thoſe two kings, as they do, ch. 7. 2. Jer 10,2.

their fear] Taken here ſubjectively, for the fear, wherwith they fear: but by the Apoſtle Peter alluding unto this place effectively, for that fear, wherewith they affright, 1 Pet. 3, 14.

nor be afraid] Be not frighted, or terrified. The word ſignifies ſuch a fright, as cauſeth a concuſſion, makes one ſo to ſhake and quake, every joynt of him, as if he ſhould fall aſunder. The word is uſed,ch,2.19,21. See a pattern of it,Dan,5.6. and in this Prophet, ch.7.2.the words are doubled, the more to hearten and encourage; as Deut, 1. 29.Joſh.1.9.1 Pet.4,14.ch.7.4. And becauſe this latter, ſeems to import more then the former,ſome would have it rendred, not,nor,as moſt verſions have it,but much leſſe be ſo affrighted,as this people are,ch.7.2.

V.13.Sanctifie the Lord of hoſts himſelf]Heb. the Lord of Hoſt him ſanctifie. It is a ſpeech redundant; but yet not without ſome emphaſis Phasis: like that of our Saviour in the like case, Luk. 12. 5. fear him, that hath power to cast into hell-fire him. As our Saviour there, and Matth. 10. 28. so the Prophet here having shewed, whome they should not fear, doth now further advise, and admonish, them whom they should fear.

sanctifie] Glorifie, give honour to him, by fearing him, and not man, against whom he promiseth to secure you, by trusting in him, and not seeking to such for safety, as are not able to help or save you, Psal. 60. 11. by yeelding your selves wholly into his hands, to be swayed and disposed of, as he shall see good. So Levit. 10. 3. Numb 20. 11. and. 27. 4. Deut. 32. 51. Ezek. 20. 40, 41. and 36. 23, 27.

sanctifie] As magnifie, Psal. 34. 3. not to make holy, or great, but to acknowledg, or make known, that we deem and esteem such. So 1 Pet. 3. 15.

the Lord of Hosts] See ch. 1. 9. Some here more specially apply it to Emmanuel, or Christ, called the Prince, that is, principall Captain, or Commander in chief of the Lords hosts, Josh. 5. 14.

and let him be your fear] He shews more particularly, how they should sanctifie God, by fearing God, and not man: Or God, rather then man, ch. 51. 12, 13. by fearing none so, as God; nothing in comparison of God: by making him ever the chief, in some kind, the only object of their fear: by fearing nothing, that he forbids them to fear, when the fear of him drowns all other fears. Fear not these two great kings; but fear him that is above them both. See 2 King. 6, 16. 2 Chr. 32. 7, 8.

your fear] The object of your fear, the party whom ye fear; and so in the next branch; thus: Jacob sware by the fear of his father Isaac, that is, by that God, whom his father Isaac feared, Gen. 31. 35.

and let him be your dread] The word answers that other, verse. 12. and signifies, properly, one that terrifieth, or affrighteth: and the sentence is repeated, for the more emphasis and stronger encouragement, as there, so ver. 3, 9, 10.

V. 14. And he shall be for a Sanctuary] The issue of this their fear of God; and their confide nce in him.

And] Or, Then; as ver. 3. and so the Greek expresseth it, if ye trust in him.

he shall be] To wit, unto you. A defect of the Pronoun; as ch. 1. 15. & 3. 10.

for a Sanctuary] The word here used, say some, signifies, both sanctification, and sanctuary. And they render it here, therefore, following the Greek, in the former way, as they do another also neer of kin to it, Psal. 114. 2. Judah was his Sanctification. So here, He will be for Sanctification or, He will be your Sanctification, as he saith elsewhere, that He will himself them, that honour him, 1 Sam. 2. 30. so he will sanctifie them, if they sanctifie him. But albeit, that word used in the Psalm, signifie as well sanctification, or holiness rather; as a sanctuary, or holy place; and in this latter way also, some render, that in the Psalm, Judah was his Sanctuary: Yet the word here used, neuer signifies other, then as our English renders it, He will be for a Sanctuary, that is, a sacred and inviolable place of retreat, and refuge, whereunto they may freely resort, and wherein they may safely, and quietly repose themselves amidst all commotions and combustions whatsoever, and have therefore no cause of fear. So, Ezek. 11. 16. I will be as a little Sanctuary to them, in the countries whereto they come. See ch. 4. 5, 6. Psal. 46. 1, 2. Prov. 18. 10. See also ch. 62. 18. where both words, above mentioned, are found together. How beit, true it is, that a Sanctuary implyes, aswell sanctification, as salvation; as well sanctity, as safety. Nor are these ever severed the one from the other. Rom. 6. 22. 1 Thess. 2. 13. Rev. 20. 6. See ch. 4. 3, 5, 6, & 6. 13.

but for a stone of stumbling, & for a rock of offence] Having shewed what God will be to the godly, to wit, a Sanctuary, strong house, or Temple of stone, surely founded upon a rock: which who so trusteth to, need not fear, ch. 28. 16. he now proceeds to shew what he will be to the wicked and ungodly, both in Judah and Israel, that refuse to be ruled by him, and to rely on him, he will be as a stone in their way, for them to stumble at, or their mischief and overthrow, as a snare to catch them, to their destruction.

but] Heb. &, as verf. 9, 10.

for a stone] That is, as a stone, for a stone, or, simply, a stone; as Ezek. 44. 12. They were for a stumbling block; instead whereof, chap. 7. 19. It was a stumbling block. So afterward, for a snare, as Josh 23 13. They shall be for a snare, instead whereof, Hos. 5. 1. Ye have been a snare.

a stone of stumbling] Heb. a Stone of striking, smiting. Such as lying in the way, the foote may smite or strike against, and a man receive some hurt and harm, some maim or mischief ther eby, Psal. 91. 12. Prov. 3. 23. forbidden therefore to be laid in the blind mans way, Levit. 19. 14. and commanded to be removed out of the way of Gods people, ch. 57. 14. See Jer. 6. 21.

a rock of offence] Not a bare stumbling stone, or, block: only such an one, as a man, yet discovering, may make some thift, either to shun, or to get over; or, though he chance to stumble at, yet he may but fall forward, it may but cast him upon his face, so as, without much hurt he may yet rise, and recover himself again: but a rock of offence such as comming in a mans way, he cannot possibly a void, no more. then he is able to remove a rock out of his way; which if a man, or ship run upon, or rush violently against, it will cast the man down backward, ch. 28. 13. and lay him on his back: as our Saviours words did those that come to apprehend him, Jch. 19. 6. and the tidings of the Ark taken did old Eli, 1 Sam. 4. 18. It will split in sunder, and drown the one, batter in pieces, and destroy the other. Matth. 21. 44. This is applyed in the Gospel to our Saviour, whose mean condition, to outward appearance, made many to refuse and reject him, to their own ruine; as did this people here, the means of safety that God offered them; but they refused to rest in, and rely upon, Matth. 21. 42. 44. Luk. 2. 34. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 8.

to both the houses of Israel] Heb. to the two houses of Israel. These termes some of the Jewish Doctors refer, as to be understood by way of distribution; partly unto the former branch of the words, before-going, concerning a sanctuary, and partly, unto the latter branch, concerning a stumbling stone, and a rock of offence. They suppose two sorts of men in the kingdome of Judah to be meant by those two houses: the one, of those that trusted in God, and were faithful to the house of David: the other of those that were treacherous, and did under-hand complot with Pekah, and the Assyrians now: or with the Assyrians in Ezekiahs time: of which sort, say they, were Shebna, and some others: and that God here promiseth to be a sanctuary to the former, but threatens to be a stumbling stone, and rock of offence to the latter. The want of the pronoun, denoting those whom the Prophet spake unto, not observed in the heft method of the verse; led those Doctors aside, and made them much to mistake the Prophets mind: wherein few therefore follow them. The most, as well of theirs, as ours, understand by the two houses of Israel: those two kingdomes, which the whole body of the people of Israel the twelve tribes, were divided into, under Rehoboam; ten falling off from him, and two only cleaving to him; when as before, under David and Solomon; they made but one State, as one house, acknowledging but one head, 2 Sam. 5. 3, 5. & 8. 15. 1 King. 2. 12. & 11. 42. & 12. 16, 17, 21. The main body of both which, being grown very corrupt, unfaithful, and disobedient, God threatens them both to bring these heavy judgments upon them, though he would withal secure, and save those that were godly, and faithful among them, Psal. 125. 1, 5. 2 Pet. 2. 5, 7, 9. Of Israel, see chap. 1. 2, 3.

for a gin, and for a snare, unto the Inhabitants of Jerusalem] One of the Jewish Doctors, whom the Greek also, and some of the Latines, in part, concur with, conceives these words not as intimating what God would be to Jerusalem, but what others should be to them and what God would be to such, as were so to them. For thus doth the great Rabbine, joyn this branch to the former. God will be a stumbling stone, and a rock of offence unto those two houses of Israel, that come to be a gin, and a snare to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem; that is, to Pekah, and Shebna, with their consorts, saith he; to the Israelites, and the Syrians confederate with them, say others, both which laid trains for the taking of Jerusalem. But these are over-bold in filling up the text, with stuff of their own. The meaning is plain, that God would be as a gin, or a snare to them also, implying, that it was not either the royal feat, or Gods own Sanctuary there, that should secure them, but that they also, for their impiety, should suffer with the reft. See Lam. 3. 47. from whereto the similitude, passing from the former, to another, taken from the practice of Fowlers and Hunters, that set gins, and snares to catch birds and beasts; (the like whereunto, see Psal. 35. 7. & 91. 3. & 119. 110. & 140. 5. & 141. 9. & 142. 3. chap. 24. 17, 18. Hof. 5. 1. & 9. 8.) as some suppose, in way of mitigation, as intending a milder manner of dealing with them, then with the reft; and intimating, that though they should be caught in a snare, yet the snare should be broken, and they escape out of it, Psalm. 124. 7. But the words ensuing, verf. 15. shew, evidently, the same thing to be intended in either. See verf. 19. chap. 5. 13. And others therefore, would have it to intimate rather, that neither by might, nor flight, they should be able to go beyond God, or to escape his vengance; he would meet with them in either kinde, Jer. 13. 21. Cor. 3. 19.

V. 15. And many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken] The issue of the judgment before threatned, described in teams suitable to the two former, similitudes, wherein it was denounced and laid down, ver. 14.

And many shall] Or, That many may, as Joh. 5. 11. Psal. 78. 11. Mal. 1. 9. noting either, the issue, or the end. See Jer. 6. 21.

many] Not all. For God will ever reserve a remnant, ch. 1. 9. & 4. 2. & 6. 13. But the most are still the worst, Jer. 5. 1.

among them] Of both houses, before mentioned, verf. 14. Hof. 5. 5. Others read it, against them, or at them, to wit, the stone, and rock, before, mentioned: But that construction is more harsh.

shall stumble, and fall, and be broken] These respect the former similitude of a stone, and a rock.

stumble, and fall] A man may trip at a stone, or stumble either, and yet not fall. But those that light on these stones, shall so stumble, that they shall not escape a fall. So Psalm. 27. 2. They stumbled, and fell, ch. 31. 3. & 46. 6. & 59. 32. See ch. 3. 8.

and be broken] As running upon, or rushing against a rock; ch. 28. 13. Matth. 21. 44. Luk. 20. 18.

and be snared, and be taken] As beasts, or fowl are taken in a net or snare, Eccl. 9. 12. Luk. 21. 35. This answers the latter branch of the fore-going verse, concerning a gin, or a snare. So ch. 28. 13. & 42. 22.

V. 16. Binde up the Testimony] The words of God, as all agree; as some some, more specially of Christ, to the Prophet, informing him further what he should do, both concerning the visions of God, and the sacred mysteries therein revealed unto him, and concerning the doctrine of Gods word in general.

Bind up the Testimony, seal the Law among my Disciples] These two branches, some conceive to have respect unto two sorts of persons; as if the Prophet were enjoyned to bind up the Testimony, in regard of the one, to seal the Law, in regard of the other. They suppose, that the Prophet stood, hitherto, before Ahaz and his people, (which yet appears not) with that roll, mentioned, ver. 1. untolded, and spread abroad in his hand, out of which he read, and withal expounded to them, what was therein contained, therefore called here the testimony, or contestation, because solemnly entred, and engrossed before witnelles, v. 2. But considering that neither king, nor people regarded what he faid, God now bad him roll it up again, and fasten it that they might hear no more of the matters contained it: Alluding to the manner of such volums, as being so rolled up, nothing written in them, can be seen, or read, Rev. 6. 14. Yet withal hat he should open them, and confirm the truth of them, in privat, to the faithful, his followers, that were capable of such mysteries, and ready to receive them, Prov. 23. 9. Matth 7. 6. 1 Cor. 2. 6, in the word of sealing, having respect to such things, as for secrecy are wont to be sealed up, that they may be kept from common, either use, or view, Cant. 4. 12. Rev. 5. 1, 3. Others suppose them to concern both the same persons. Some, the Prophet himself, principally; that though few regarded his ministery, yet he should continue constant in the execution and exercife of it Both by careful keeping in minde, and observing of it himself: and giving assurance of it also unto others: and confirming them in the truth of it, an allusion, as some of them suppose, to such ligatures, as men use for the memorial of ought, that they may not forget it, Deut. 6. 8. Prov. 3. 3. As others to waxes, that merchants do first wrap up, and bind about with cord, and then seal also for more security: As others again, to letters that are first bound about with thread, and afterward sealed: to which God should compare his word delivered unto the Prophet, as matter of anthentick truth, having Gods seal stamped on it, Esth. 3. 12. & 8. 8. Others deem it to have special regard to the Prophets scholars and followers; that by diligent instruction he should prepare, fashion, and frame their hearts, to be fit tables for the receit of the divine testimony, the truth of God to be written, in them, and both to be sealed up to them, & to be sealed unto by them Jer. 31. 33. 2 Cor. 1. 22. & 3. 2, 3. Eph. 1. 13. & 4. 30. Heb. 8. 10. in which places, they suppose, the Jewish manner alluded to, of taking depositions; a draught whereof being made, under the hands of those that were deposed, was after signed also by those that took them. Others, lastly, suppose the words only to intimate, that these mysteries, especially concerning the Messias, should be, as recorded; so shut, and sealed up, to be reserved for posterity, unto whom, in future ages they should more clearly be revealed, ch. 30. 8. Dan. 12. 4, 9. Rev. 10. 4. Or that they should be like letters closed, and sealed: neither read, received, nor conceived by any, but such only, as were inwardly enlightned, ch. 28. 11. 12. The meaning seems to be no more, but that God would not have the Prophet to deal further, in this kind, with these faithless and prophane Scoffers; but reserve such sacred mysteries to be imparted to the faithful; who would with due reverence religiously receive them.

Binde up] As Deut. 14. 25. 1 Sam. 25. 29. Or, fashion, frame, as Exod. 32. 4. Or, keep, as Prov. 3. 21, & 6. 20, 21. The first here seems fittest.

the testimony] So is the word of God, in general, oft styled in Scripture, twenty times, at least, in one Psalm, Psal. 119. & it is so learned because thereby God not only maketh known his will to us, but by a solemn, and severe sanction also, doth attest thereunto, 2 King. 17, 15. Neh. 9. 34. And so also is the word taken hereafter, verf. 20. but in this place it seems rather to note that special word of God, that God by the Prophet had, not without such like sanction, not delivered only to them, but also prescribed upon them at present. Nor doth it hinder, but that it may well be taken to here; albeit that it be ufed more largely there.

seal] For immunity, as Dan. 6. 17. or safe custody, as Matth. 27. 66. or secrecy, as Cant. 4. 12. or assurance and certainty, as Joh. 3. 33. & 6. 27. Rom. 4. 11. Eph. 4. 30. of either of these two latter, the term may well here be taken.

the Law] Either the word of God in general, as Psal. 19. 7. & 119. 97. or the Law of rites and precepts, the law of Moses, Mal. 4. 4. Matth. 11. 13. Joh. 1. 17. or that particular meslage, or doctrine, that Esay had at this time delivered, or was further, to deliver to the faithful: and thus it seems to be here taken, as also chap. 1. 10.

among my Disciples] As ver. 11. among them, or, with my Disciples, as Ezr. 10. 17. or, for my Disciples, as Neh. 13. 14. for their behoof; reserve it, to be imparted to them, for the stay and support of them in their calamitous times.

my Disciples] Or my taught, or learned ones. Such as have been taught of God, as the Prophet speaks, chap. 54. 13. (where the same word is used) such, as have learned Christ, and been taught of Christ, as the Apostle speaks, Eph. 4. 20. 21. But ye not so, ye have learned Christ, if so be ye have heard him, and have been taught of him; (for so the words would there be read) The word doth not properly signifie, a disciple, a Scholar (save, as we use to say, a Scholar, for wise skilful, or learned,) or a learner, though a learn ner unto it, to whom such an one, and is therefore well rendred, a scholar, 1 Chr. 25. 8. but that word is of an active form: this is of a passive: and signifies properly, not a learner, but one learned, one, that hath been taught, hath learned, and by learning, is become skilful, and learned, as the word is well rendered, ch. 50. 4 See more hereof there.

V. 17. And I will wait upon the Lord] The Prophets words, professing his resolution of constant depending, and patient attending upon God; not withstanding the present tokens of his wrath and displeasure towards his People: and notwithstanding the discouragements that he received from them, by no part of his Minstery prevailing with them, for their good. For, to me, they seem to strain the text unreasonably, who make them the words of Christ speaking to the Prophet; and by his own example; encouraging him to constancy and perseverance in his ministry, with patience; as he doth his Disciples, Joh. 15. 20. Heb. 12. 1, 2.

And] Or, Yet, rather, as Jer. 2. 32 35. Some render it, Then I waited, as if he had said, being thus confirmed, v. 11. I resolved to wait, and so did. But the ufe of the particle, altering the prelent to the future, can scarce it rather the other way.

I will wait upon the Lord] Word for word, I will stay for the Lord. For to the word properly signifies, 2 King. 7. 9. & 9. 3. Job. 32. 4. I will stay his time. So Psal. 33. 20. & 130. 6. 13. ch. 30. 18. Hab. 2. 3. Zeph. 3. 8.

that hideth his face] That sheweth himself to be displeased with his people, by these heavy judgments, partly inflicted, and partly further menaced; and as some also, by commanding the roll to be wrapped up and concealed, ver. 16. It is a metaphor taken from the practice of men, who being displeased with a party, with draw themleves from him, and will not be seen of him, nor spoken to by him, 2 Sam. 14. 24. See the like, Psal. 10. 1. & 27. 9. ch. 45. 15. & 54. 8. & 57. 17, & 64. 7.

from the house of Jacob] See ch. 2. 5, 6. v. 14.

and I will look for him] I will with patience and hopeful expectation, depend on him, both for support amidst these sad occurrents, and a comfortable issue of them in his due time. So Iob. 13. 15. & 14. 14. Psal. 40. 1. ch. 25. 9. Jer. 14. 22. Mic. 7. 7.

V. 18. Behold, I, and the children &c.] These words also, many would haue to be, not the Prophets words, speaking at all of himself, but Christs speaking to the Prophet, and relating to him, what his own condition would be & the condition of his followers, when he should appear & live, here below, in the flesh; and the reason they build upon, is, because the Apostle produceth these words, as spoken, either of, or by Christ, Heb. 2. 13. But the consequence is not necessary. For so in instance the like: It followeth not, that those words, 2 Sam. 7. 14. I will be his father, and he shall be my son, were not spoken by God, to David, of Solomon, as David himself telleth him, 1 Chr. 22. 10. because the Apostle applyeth them to Christ, Heb. 1. 5. or that those words in the Apostle, the very next before these, I will trust in him, whether they be taken out of Psal. 18. 2. as some of these would have it, who are her cin the fifteft; or, whether they be drawn from the Greek of this Prophet ver. 17. which I rather incline to; were not spoken either by David, or by Esay, of themselves, because they are by the Apostle, in the same place, carried up unto Christ. Many speeches of the Prophets, concerning themselves; and many Prophecies concerning Cyrus, and others, who were types of Christ, are in the New Testament applyed unto Christ: being one way, and in the one manner verified of them, and another way, and in another manner also, many times, fulfilled in him. Of himself then, there need no doubt be made, but that the Prophet speaks in this place; albeit the thing spoken of him, he also verified and fulfilled in Christ, and that in another sort, then with Esay it was. And others therefore, not a few, take them to be the Prophets own words, and those, first, and primarily affirmed, concerning himself, and his own, either children, or disciples; either complaining of the peoples vile estimation of them; or the ineffectualnels of that service, whereunto God had assigned both him and them, or both: and yet withal, professing a readinels to undergo either.

Behold] Spoken, as those who make the words following Christs; as in way of admiration, that he and his should be so reputed, and that by his own people, Joh. 1. 11. So in way also of inst gation, to stir the Prophet up seriously, to consider it, that he might with more content of mind endure, and undergo the like. See the like, Ier. 25. 29. & 45. 5. & in those that conceive them to be the Prophets, as in way of Lamentation, and complaint; that it should be so with him, and his, or that, so little good was done by what they sustained as Ier. 17. 15. Ezek. 33. 32. so withal, in way of profeition, or protestation of a willingnelle to do and endure whatsoever, in this, or any other kind, God should pleale to call them to, or to employ them in, or exercise them with, as ch. 6. 8. or by way of exhortation to Gods faithfull people, inciting them to look on him, and his children; and to consid er his constancy, and undaunted resolution, and what the mysterious names, imposed on them, did import, and might assure them of.

I and the children] By children, some understand disciples, whether Christs; or Esay's, such as were before mentioned, verse 16. that is, either such as were termed the children of the Prophets, because the Prophets their Instructers, were as fathers to them, 1 Sam. 10. 12. & 19. 20. 2 King. 2. 3. 5. Amos 7. 14.

7.14.or,such,as by his ministery he had begotten unto God, 1 Cor. 4.15.1 Tim.1.2. Tit.1.4. Philem. 10. But others rather understand the Prophets natural children, born to him in Wedlock by his lawful wife, whereof mention also was made before,ch.7.3.ver.3.that,which must be in another manner understood, when applyed unto Christ, Heb.2.14.as Solomon being Gods Son,Heb.1.5.

in whom the Lord hath given me] When applyed to Christ,whom the other hath,for life eternal,given to him, Joh.6, 37. 39, 65. When to Esay, whom God had made him an instrument to convert,or whom by his blessing on the marriage-bed, God had bestowed on him,They are the children, saith Jacob,that God hath given me, Gen. 33.5.& 48.9.and,I, saith God,give Jsaac unto Abraham, and unto Isaac, Jacob and Esau, Joh.14.3,4.

are for signs and wonders in Jsrael]1, and my followers, are accounted as monsters,and are matter of wonderment,as that manner of creatures are wont to be,among this people.David et himself, I am as a monster unto many, Psal.71.7. and, Thou Jehova,and thy fellowes,that sit before the,are men of wonder, or men wondered at, Zach. 3.8.or,I, and my children, are propounded by God for strange and unusual signs to this people : and indeed, so they were:the Prophet himself is expressly said, to be,ch.20.3. See the note on the place; and so were his children : as hath been shewed on ch.7.16.& ver.3, 4.and this also,no doubt, together with the names thereupon given them, did expose them to the scoffs, and pointing at, of the prophane multitude:There goes Maher-shalal-hash-baz, and the like.

from the Lord of hosts]Heb. from with the Lord. That is,by his appointment : That which seems to carry this branch the latter way,v.3.ch.20.2.for Lord of hosts, See on ch.1.9.

who dwelleth in Mount Sion.] Where his Temple, his principal place of special residence on earth,and amongst his people,is,Psal.76. 2 & 132.13,14.See ch.2.2,3.

V.19. And when they shall say unto you] To let passe the great variety of strange and strained connexions,and coherences,that sundry Interpreters give of this passage,with the former context. The occasion of this caution here inserted, seems to be this. The example of Saul,and others,sheweth how prone people are in times of streights and difficulties,to seek unto Sorcerers, by such hoping to receive information of what is like to be, and advice what course to take for their own safety, 1 Sam.28.7.15.& Hag.1.2.This way, therefore,it is notunlikely that many were looking after,in these troublesome times, (especially,being otherwise much addicted thereunto,ch.2.8.) and inciting others also thereunto. Against whose enticements, the Prophet therefore endeavours to arm the faithful;partly,by discovering the vanity & impiety of such courses: & partly,by directing them unto whom upon all such occasions,they ought for advice,to resort.

when they shall say]when any shall say,or,when it shall be said. For the verb is here put indefinitely,or impersonally,without designation of,or reference unto, any special, or particular person, or persons, as Matth.24.26.though it may be presumed,that none but the unfaithful sort of people would so speak.

Seek unto them that have familiar spirits] Or, Enquir of them (as Deut.18. 11. 1 Sam.28. 7. 1 Chr.10.13,14.)for advice andhelp.

that have familiar spirits] The term here used, comes from a word, that signifies,a bottel, Job.32.19.and the word is put, sometime, for the familiar Spirit it self, as the text in our version here speaks, as where the witch of Endor is termed,the owner of such an one, (for so the original hath it,1 Sam.28.7,8.) that is, one, that had such an one at hand,to make use of. Where the witch, and the spirit,or familiar, are distinguished the one from the other : as also they are, Act.16.16.but sometime it is put for the witch her self, one that hath,or is possessed of such an one:as where it is said, that Saul had put away,and cut off the witches,1 Sam.28,3,10. and so is the word also used in this place. And these witches are deemed so to have been at first termed,because the evil spirits,that possessed them, when they gave answers by them, used to swell and blow up their bodies,their breasts and bellies especially,like a bladder,or a bottle, as of the Pythian prophetesses, or witches rather, is recorded : and to cast them withal into a kind of frenzy:during which also,they delivered the oracles by them, with an hoarse, or hollow voyce, as if they spake out of their bellies, (whence another name is in Greek given them) or out of a bottle. Howbeit , the Spirit,or familiar, which the Witch of Endor made use of, seems to have been rarified by her,but not to have spoken in her ; or through her. The word is used again,ch.19.3.& 29.4.

and] Or,or,as ch.10.14.

unto wizzards] Or,cunning men,as some cal them ;the word is not a miss to rendered.For it comes of a word, that signifies,to know, to have skil,or cunning;as 2 Sam.14. 16. 18.one that knoweth,that is, hath skil,or cunning,to handle the harp, and ch.29. 11. 12. one that knoweth a book,for,one that hath skil in it,and,one that knoweth not a book,for,one that hath no skil in reading. So these men were termed wizzards,or,skilful,cunning men, because they pretended much skil and cunning, in discloshing of hidden matters, and foretelling future events. For, as for what the Jewish Doctors tel us, of a strange bird, as some, or beast, as others whereof these should have their name,they seem to be meerly fabulous. The two words here used,are found commonly joyned together in Scripture, as well in historical relations,as in legal prohibitions, Exod. 19 31. & 20.27. Deut 18.11.1 Sam.28,3,9.2 King.21.10.& 23.24.2 Chr.33.6.

that peep]Or,chatter,as it is rendered, ch.38.14. The word properly signifies,such a puling voyce,as foul,in general,ch.10.14,bird, or great,such as swallows, and cranes, ch. 38. 14. are wont to make: and it seems,that these familiars used, in such a broken, and scarce articulate sound,or in such an hollow, low, whispering manner, to give out their answers,that those by whom they spake,or that made use of them,were to relate them more plainly,and expound them unto those that consulted them. See ch.29.1.

and that mutter.] This word seems to import a more doleful and mournful tone,or a more dreadful and hideous grumbling,then the former:For it is used, sometime for that bemoaning kind of noyse, that Doves use to make, ch.38. 14. & 59. 11. sometime, for that grunting,or grumbling, rather, then roaring noyse, that a Lion is wont to make over his prey, when he is possessed of it,chap. 31.4. And such noyses, it is not unlikely, that these impostors also sometime made ; to strike a kind of awe and dread of them, into those that repaired to them. Though others also,and to the old Latine, understand it of such muttering, and murmuring, or mumbling,as their inchanters,or charmers,in their spels and charms used, and are not unusual with them, at this day. Some of the Rabbines affirm them to be so called, because they used to set men a musing. And the verb indeed signifies commonly,to muse,or, to meditate :and although the notation seems somewhat far fetch'd yet it the originall of the word, Magi,used both by the Greeks, and Latines,be not Persian;(as is most probable) but Hebrew,and be derived, as many deem, from the word here used; I should suppose , that they are to termed, not as mutterers, which some have imagined, (for it is not likely,that they should style themselves, by a title of disgrace,)but as musers,a more honorable apellation : nor was the name anciently otherwise esteemed,Matth.2.1. But to leave this,I cannot concur with those,who would have the word of peeping here,to be referred to the witches,the word of muttering,to the wizzards:as if the one peeped,but muttered not; the other muttered, but peeped not : whereas the words seem joyntly and indifferently to have relation to either. See ver.19.& ch.5.30.ch.59.13.

should not a people seek unto their God?] The Prophet here,enforms the faithful,what answer they should return to those,that endeavoured thus to seduce them:and there would therefore,for more perspicuity,these words be inserted,Say ye,or,the like, as Phal.115. 15. & 132. 14.where the defect is in the latter branch:as the like in the former, Psal.27.8.Ier.10.11.

should not,&c.]Heb.shall not,Or, will not. Whence some render the word thus,will not any people seek unto,for,enquire of, as before: the their own God ? as convincing them, by the general practice of all people,like that, Jer.2.11. Hath any nation changed their Gods ? and that,Mic.4.5. all people will walk each in the name of his God. But that,Mic.4.5. all people will walk each in the name of his God. But we need not alter our reading: the future is frequently used,to signifie,not what will,or shall,but what would, or should,be done. So 2 King. 3.27. He sacrificed his Son, that Shall reign(for,that should reign,or,should have reigned)in his stead : Mal.1.6.A Son will(that is, should)honour his father. And the Prophet seems to argue, rather, from matter of right,and due, then of fact:from office, and duty : then from practice : And it agreeth better so, also, with the next branch. It is a thing agreeable both to reason and religion, that whom people profels to be their God,him they should ask for advice and direction,resort to. So Elias to the Israelites,If Jehovah be God,follow him.1 King.18.21.and so Ahaziah's Messengers;Is it not because there is no God in Jsrael,that ye go to enquire after the god of Ekron? 2 King.1.3.

for the living to the dead] Or. as others render it, from the living to the dead, either way the speech is defective,to be from the former branch thus supplyed. Should men go to enquir, for, or from the living to the dead ? And according to the latter reading the meaning should be: Should men go from the living God,and his Prophets,to seek for advice unto the dead, either idols,or idolaters? Hos.3.12.or,to men deceased,whom these Sorcerers, therfore called Necromancers,have dealing with, Deut.18.11.1 Sam. 28. 8,12. But I find not where the particle here used,is found in that sense. I know some alleadg:Gen.26.8. He looked out from a window.And, He fell down from a lattice,2 King.1.2. but it would rather be rendered, at a window,in the one place,and through a lattice, in the other : as Joel.2.9. they shall enter in at, or,through the windows. The former reading therefore, which our last translation hath,seems the fairer,because the particle is frequently found used in that sense to signifie, for,or,in behalf of,as 1 Sam.7.9.& 12.23. 2 Sam. 12.16.1 King.13.6. Jer.11.14. and oft else where. And so it is, as if the Prophet had said, Should men go to seek help and advice in the behalf of the living,and for their safety, from the dead, who neither have any notice of them,nor are able to afford them any succour? Job 13. 21.ch. 63.16.Howsoever,the opposition is principally between living, and dead,as Eccl.9.4,5.Nor will the text therefore admit the exposition of some,though of prime note: who would have the word rendered, from the living to the dead:as depending on the fore going branch, from the living to the dead:as depending on the fore going branch, without any supply,and as a parallel phrase to that, Gen.6.7. from man to beast, implying that God alone is all sufficient both for quick and dead.as he is said to be,Lord of quick and dead, Rom. 14.9.and Judg of quick,and dead,2 Tim.4.1. for neither are the particles in either from the same:nor hath either of the particles here read,ever that use,nor was there occasion here, of enquiring ought, concerning ning the dead; but concerning the living only.

N.20. To the Law, and to the testimony?] Let them seek ; or, At the Law,and at the testimony,let them enquire. For that is to be supplyed out of the verse fore-going ; as there, also,in the latter branch, out of the former.He-the wch now, whom, for ayd and advice, they should repair unto;as before,to whom they should not.By the Law, and the Testimony; some would here understand that doctrine only, and those particular predictions and directions,that the Prophet had from God at present imparted to them. Of which before, ver. 16. But these seem to straiten the words over-much. Others therefore understand by these two terms, the Word of God, in general, either contained in the sacred Volumes already written, and then extant, or delivered to them by word of mouth, through the ministry of this Prophets, as 2 Chr. 20.20. & 34. 21, 22. not excluding those precepts, predictions, or promises, that the Prophet had delivered unto them at prefent. So Abraham sends them, in the parable, To Moses, and the Prophets, Luk. 16. 29. Howbeit, I suppose, they go over-nicely to work, who by the Law, here conceive to be meant,the writings of Moses; and by the Testimony, the Prophetical Revelations;as if the former were not Gods Testimony, as well as the latter: when as, indeed, the name of Testimony, was first, and primarily, given unto the Law, written in the two tables ; in regard whereof also, was the Ark called, the Ark of the Testimony : & so often and fro,but meeting with no means of succour or relief,either from above,or below,they shall be at their wits end, like those at sea in a storm unavoidable and unsupportable, Psal.107.26, 27. So Ier. 14.18.

And] Or, For,as Pf.108.12.

they shall passe] Heb. he shall passe. Which some of the Jewish Doctors understand of the King of Assyria, passing with his Army, through the land of Judah. But their exposition we may well let passe ; and so may we as well theirs also,of the morning light, before spoken of,that it should pass away from them, and not abide with them.It is meant, of the wicked Jewish people, either,as some,compelled to passe out of their land, which they made full account to dwell in for ever;as God had promised they should, so long as they continued loyal to him, Jer.35.5.or,as others rather, constrained to flit to and fro in the land,where they had quietly dwelt before, to seek succour in their distress;by occasion of forraign foes, and their forces breaking in upon them,and hunting them from place to place, Jer.16. 6. it is in the singular number,because spoken of the people, as one body ; and withal,to shew how it should be, with each one of those wicked ones. See ver.20.

through it] Or,to and fro in it;the land of Judah, as chap. 9.1. & Gen.48.9.in thus,to wit, land, or place. For they seem to fetch it too far, that render it, for this ; as implying the cause, for which they thus suffered ; their impiety, mentioned , verse 19.

hardly bestead] As the word is used, Gen.25.16,17.where it is said of Rachel, that she had hard labour ; or, word for word, was hardly bestead in her childbearing:and Job 30. 35. where Job saith, he wept for the man,that had an hard day,or time, of it, that was at any time hardly bestead.They render it amiss,that translate it,hardened.Understanding it of men either hardened in sin, or grown senseless of the evils they sustained: The one suites not with its yoke-fellow, hunger, a corporal evil ; the other crosseth the main course of the context, describing men exceeding senfible of their calamitous condition.

and hungry] Destitute,as of all necessaries ; so especially of food, Pf.107.5.See ch.5.13.& 9. 20. This some refer to Hezekiah's time, ch.36.12.come to Zedekiahs,Ier.38.9.& 52.6.

that when they shall be hungry,they shall fret themselves] Heb.when he shall be hungry,and be shall fret himself,for,that he shall fret himself, as Amos 9.1.Mal.1.9.They shall grow extreamly impatient in their necessity and distress. It hath a metaphor in it, taken from a pot, that boyleth with the heat of the fire under it, and casts up its skum and filth, chapter 64. 2. Jer. 1. 13. Ezek. 24. 3, 5. Rev. 16. 9, 10, 11. It runs on still in the singular number, as before.

and curse their King]They run far from the text, that would have it meant (as some Jewish Masters) of the Assyrian Souldiers, that should curse their King,for want of provisions : the contrary whereunto,see ch.37.25.It is spoken of the Jews,as before; that should in their miserable curse,not the King of Egypt: as some of the Jewish Writers,for not helping them, chap. 30. 3, 5, 7. nor of Assyria, as others, for breaking covenants with them, chap. 33. 4. called their King, because they had linked themselves to him : but their own King, for not protecting,or relieving them; or imputing, to him, the cause of those their calamities,which they suffered from the Assyrian,either,by calling him in,or rebelling against him,or not compounding with him,2 King.16.7,8.& 18,7,13.& 24. 20. 2 Chr. 28. 16,20.& 36.13.See ch.7.10.

and their God] Either the true God,who deservedly brought these plagues upon them,and by his Prophets foretold, what would befall them,as those,desperately wicked wretches under the beast, Rev. 16. 10. Or, his Gods, (as it is said of the Philistine, that he cursed David, by his Gods, 1 Sam. 17. 43.) that is, his idols, whom they now find unable to help them, and falle in that, which by follow the directions of his Word. See Sauls case confirming this, 1 Sam.28.18,20.1 Chr.10.13,14.

there is] Or, shall be : as Pf.37.10.ch.19.7. For the negative here used,admits as well time future as past,or present.

no light]Heb.no morning,or no dawning.For the word properly signifies day-break,or,the dawning of the day,Job 38.12. put here for the light,that then appears;as ch.58.8. Hos.6.3.Joel 2.2.Amos.4.13. as if he had said in Jobs language, the eye-lids of the morning,or,day dawning, they shall never see.They shall be pursued with perpetual affliction and calamity, without any glimpse of comfort:light, for joy and comfort, Esth.8.17.Pf.97.11.& 112.4.morning light, more specially,for such as comes,upon some foregoing, more then ordinary affliction,or distress,as the morning succeeds the night, Job 11.17.See ch.21.12.

in them] Heb. unto him,or unto them.For the number is oft changed,as ch.2.10.& 3,8.10.and the singular number is used collectively,as having reference to the body of a people.So ch.5.26,30. & 6. 9,10.where the pronouns are all singular,though rendred not amiss (as some of the verbs also are)plural.

V. 21. And they shall pass through it] The evil followeth more largely described, that shall betide these defeaters of God, and his ayd graciously offered them, betaking themselves unto unrighteousness and abominable courses; to wit, that they shall in their distresses flit to and fro,but meeting with no means of succour or relief,either from above,or below,they shall be at their wits end, like those at sea in a storm unavoidable and unsupportable, Psal.107.26, 27. So Ier. 14.18.

And] Or, For,as Pf.108.12.

they shall passe] Heb. he shall passe. Which some of the Jewish Doctors understand of the King of Assyria, passing with his Army, through the land of Judah. But their exposition we may well let passe ; and so may we as well theirs also,of the morning light, before spoken of,that it should pass away from them, and not abide with them.It is meant, of the wicked Jewish people, either,as some,compelled to passe out of their land, which they made full account to dwell in for ever;as God had promised they should, so long as they continued loyal to him, Jer.35.5.or,as others rather, constrained to flit to and fro in the land,where they had quietly dwelt before, to seek succour in their distress;by occasion of forraign foes, and their forces breaking in upon them,and hunting them from place to place, Jer.16. 6. it is in the singular number,because spoken of the people, as one body ; and withal,to shew how it should be, with each one of those wicked ones. See ver.20.

through it] Or,to and fro in it;the land of Judah, as chap. 9.1. & Gen.48.9.in thus,to wit, land, or place. For they seem to fetch it too far, that render it, for this ; as implying the cause, for which they thus suffered ; their impiety, mentioned , verse 19.

hardly bestead] As the word is used, Gen.25.16,17.where it is said of Rachel, that she had hard labour ; or, word for word, was hardly bestead in her childbearing:and Job 30. 35. where Job saith, he wept for the man,that had an hard day,or time, of it, that was at any time hardly bestead.They render it amiss,that translate it,hardened.Understanding it of men either hardened in sin, or grown senseless of the evils they sustained: The one suites not with its yoke-fellow, hunger, a corporal evil ; the other crosseth the main course of the context, describing men exceeding senfible of their calamitous condition.

that when they shall be hungry,they shall fret themselves] Heb.when he shall be hungry,and be shall fret himself,for,that he shall fret himself, as Amos 9.1.Mal.1.9.They shall grow extreamly impatient in their necessity and distress. It hath a metaphor in it, taken from a pot, that boyleth with the heat of the fire under it, and casts up its skum and filth, chapter 64. 2. Jer. 1. 13. Ezek. 24. 3, 5. Rev. 16. 9, 10, 11. It runs on still in the singular number, as before.

and curse their King]They run far from the text, that would have it meant (as some Jewish Masters) of the Assyrian Souldiers, that should curse their King,for want of provisions : the contrary whereunto,see ch.37.25.It is spoken of the Jews,as before; that should in their miserable curse,not the King of Egypt: as some of the Jewish Writers,for not helping them, chap. 30. 3, 5, 7. nor of Assyria, as others, for breaking covenants with them, chap. 33. 4. called their King, because they had linked themselves to him : but their own King, for not protecting,or relieving them; or imputing, to him, the cause of those their calamities,which they suffered from the Assyrian,either,by calling him in,or rebelling against him,or not compounding with him,2 King.16.7,8.& 18,7,13.& 24. 20. 2 Chr. 28. 16,20.& 36.13.See ch.7.10.

and their God] Either the true God,who deservedly brought these plagues upon them,and by his Prophets foretold, what would befall them,as those,desperately wicked wretches under the beast, Rev. 16. 10. Or, his Gods, (as it is said of the Philistine, that he cursed David, by his Gods, 1 Sam. 17. 43.) that is, his idols, whom they now find unable to help them, and falle in that, which by and look upward] The Jewish Doctors, whom some of ours also here follow, run most in a track; supposing this to be spoken of men returning to God, and resting on him, when they perceive all other means to fail; as Ps.107.5,6,12,13,18,19,27,28.ch.10.20. & 17.7, 8. But it is rather a description of one, in a forlorn, distracted, and desperate condition; at his wits end, looking one while upward, and another while downward: now this way, now that way: and it might more fitly be rendred, when they look upward, to wit, either toward the Kings house; or towards heaven: and for, when; as ch.43.12. Jer. 34.1.

V. 22. And they shall look to the earth] Which way soever they cast their eye, or whithersoever they betake themselves, they shall meet with nothing, but matter of anguish, and much discontent.

they shall look to the earth, and behold] Or, when they look to the earth, behold, &c. as ch.5.30. So Zach.11.8. & 2.1. I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold; for, when I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, behold, Rev. 5.6. I beheld, and behold; that is, when I beheld, behold.

to the earth] Downward, 2 Chr.20.18, as before, upward, to heavenward, ver. 21. ch. 40.26. or, abroad, into the land, as ch.5.30. though some of the Rabbines understand it of the land of Egypt, whence they looked for some relief, 2 King. 17.4. & 18.21.ch.20.5,6. & 30. 1. & 31.1.Ier.37.7.

behold] What they least looked for; as ch.5.4,7. & 8.7.Ier.3.16.

trouble, and darkenesse] the darkenesse of trouble: as ch.4.5,6. As light, is put for joy and comfort, ver.20. so darkness, for affliction, distress, and discomfort, Ps.112.4. ch.5.30. & 9.1. & 50.10. Ier.13.16. Mic.7.8.

dimness of anguish] The same thing in other terms. So some of the Jewish Doctors; though others suppose it to be in a new form; dimmed, or darkned with distress. See ch. 9.1. and so it would be translated; and he is, or, they are (for the want of the copulative, the Rabbines also observe) dimmed, or, darkned with distress.

dimness] So for variety. Otherwise the word seems to import, utter, or extream darkness: for so his fellows of the same family, Job 10.22. Amos 4.13. And so Job 11.17. where the words would be rendred, though thou shalt have been never so much darkned, thou shalt be as the morning: directly contrary to what is there read. For as for those, who harping upon another signification of the root, whence the word ariseth, would have it understood, calamities flying swiftly to them, and encreasing with them, they swerve much from the tenour of the Prophets speech, and detract much from the elegancy of it.

and they shall be driven to distress] Heb. and a mist driven; as some one affliction following on the tail of another, and pursuing them whithersoever they go: but the Genders agree not; which yet some would salve; as the like Amos 9.14. by deeming it to have respect to the same word, in a masculine form. But others rather, and driven into a mist; or driven on in a mist. For a mist, or fog, the word properly signifies, Exod.10.22. and consequently, the dark, Prov. 4.18. & 7.9. this and the former, are both joyned together, Job 10.22. So the sense is, they shall be driven on into further miseries and extreamities, as men in a mist, either forced into it, or driven on in it; as Job 18.18. he shall be driven out of the light into the mist, or the dark. And Jer. 23.12. They shall be driven on in the dark. See also, Ps.35.5. Many words of the same notion are heaped up; as Job 10.22. to express the great extreamity of their distresses.

CHAP. IX.

Vers. 1. Nevertheless] The first words of this verse, which way soever they be taken, do evidently shew that this chapter hath dependance upon that before-going; and is a continuation of the Prophets discourse, concerning the mind and message of God therein delivered. It containeth, for the support of the faithful, a gracious promise, both concerning a comfortable issue to them of the forementioned calamities; and concerning the restauration of the Church by Christ: yet concluding with a renewed denunciation of sad, and dismal occurrents against the obstinate wicked, because not amended by what was past, v.8.&c.

Nevertheless, &c.] This verse, or some part of it, some joyn to the former chapter, as a confirmation of the sad and forlorn estate of the persons there spoken of; and they render the particle here, for; as Ps.12.1. Others, make it an entrance into a new relation, importing some allay of the calamitous condition there mentioned: and they render it, as ours here: or, Yet, as Job 5.7.

the dimness shall not be such, as was in her vexation] Some, conceiving the word translated dimness, to have a notion, rather, of flight in it, as before, chap. 8.22. read the words, According to the old Latine, in part thus, No flight, or escape shall be to him, that is swerving therewith, as rending a reason of the perplexity that the persons should be in, that were spoken of before. But there is no doubt to be made, but that the word used here, hath reference to that which was made use of there, whereof enough hath been said already. And the Prophet may well be deemed to have retained the same word, the rather, because it sounds sweetly with another here also used: the elegancy whereof cannot, in our language be expressed. On which ground also, comes not unjustly to be rejected, the interpretation of some other, who read the words thus; For no defatigation shall be to him that sleigheins, or afflicteth them: That is, say they, (and they are some of the Jewish writers) the Assyrian King, who is to afflict the land, shall never be weary, or give over vexing; but shall be invading them, again, and again. See chap.29.2,7,8. Or, as some other, and those of ours; Yet defatigation shall not be to those that are in straits: That is, those that shall be straitly besieged, to wit, by Sennacherib, yet shall not be tired out, and so constrained to give up. These suppose the word to be a noun, or verb, (which yet is not likely) coming from a root, that signifies to be weary. For though verbs of those forms, do oft enterchange, as elsewhere hath been observed, ch. 8.1. Yet regard must be had to the tenour of the context, in words that are ambiguous, and not extant elsewhere: and that observed, will not easily admit that sense in this place. The most therefore, both Jewish, and ours, read the words much after the same manner, as our version exhibites them. And in the Hebrew it runs thus: Is shall not be darkned unto her, whom, or with whom, it shall be straightned. That is, the land (for that all acknowledg is meant, and agree to be supplyed, as before, chap. 8.21.) that shall be in such streights, as hath been said, shall not be so darkned as in some former times, hereafter mentioned; that which is by divers diversly; yea, two contrary waies understood. For some take it, as spoken in way of aggravation; as if it were said, No marvel, if people shall be in such perplexity, as hath been described; for this affliction, when it comes, shall darken the land otherwise, in a far more grievous manner, then was done in the former invasions, or inroads made into it. Others deem it to be delivered in way of mitigation, and allay of the former dreadfull denunciation; that though it should go hard with the land of Israel, or Judah, and the inhabitants thereof, in the judgment here threatned; yet it should not be so grievously afflicted, as in those former invasions it had been. Which to me seems, well weighing both the terms, used here, of those former incursions, the one of them especially, and the tenor of the Text, not so probable to be the meaning of the Prophet in this place. I rather adhere therefore to the former sense. See chap. 7.17. For as for those that would read the words, It shall not utterly, or totally be darkned: as they force that into the Text, which they find not there: so they are met with in that which immediately follows, as, when at first, &c. unless they will grant, that it was utterly darkned in those times fore-passed, which the Prophet here points to.

dimness shall not be] Or, it shall not be dimmed, or darkened. For some make it a Noun, and some a Verb. See on ch.8.22.

in her vexation] Or rather, unto her, or, it; that is, or shall be so vexed, or straitned. Heb. unto whom it is first tried to her, or to it. Or, to whom distressed, or straits, is, or shall be. Taking the word, as some do, for a Noun; unto whom, or to her, or to it. A substantive in that language, very familiar; as Gen.1.19. Pl.1. That the word tzad is understood, all grant; but some understand by it, the land of Judah, strictly so reatmed: and conceive the affliction, here foretold, to be meant of the invasion made by Sennacherib, under Ezekiah, (which seems most probable) or by Nebuchadnezar, under Zedekiah, which not a few hold. Others suppose it to be the land of Israel, or the ten tribes, because mention is made of some parts thereof, in the words ensuing. I see not why they may not be both included, since that greater troubles were to befal either of them, then as yet there had: nor was there fit access for the Assyrian, to the one but through the other.

vexation] The vexation (or straits, rather, or distress) here intimated, hath reference to that spoken of, chap. 8.22. and there rendred anguish: and is not to be carried on, as our English doth it, to the next branch where mention is made of fore-passed times and troubles. For the Prophet layes not the comparison between the vexation, or distress; but between the dimness, or darkness, that had in former times been, and that then should be. And though dimness, or darkness, and vexation, or distress, may amount much to one; yet for the right rendring of the Text, and keeping close to the context of the Prophets discourse; they are here to be distinguished: and the reading to be, not, the land shall not be so vexed, or distressed, but shall not be in that manner, dimmed, or darkned, as formerly it had been. See v.2.

as—when at the first he lightly afflicted] Heb. as in, or at the first time he made light; or, according to that first time, wherein, or when he made light; (for there is a want of the relative) as Gen. 3.4. chap.42.1.) or dealt lightly with, which some expound fondly, of lightning the land of its inhabitants, by carrying them away captive, 2 King.15.25. as the ship is said to be lightned, by casting out the wares, Ion.1.5. but this, (to say no more of it) is by the opposite branch of aggravation, sufficiently refuted. By making light, therefore is meant, lightly visiting, or afflicting, or dealing more lightly with them; as the false Prophets are said to have cured the hurt of Gods people; as if they were but lightly hurt, Ier.6.14.

when he lightly afflicted the land] That is, when God lightly afflicted, or visited it. Or taking the word indefinately, and impersonally, when the land was lightly afflicted, or visited, See on ch.2.19. When this first lighter visitation, or affliction was, and by whom inflicted, is not so clear. Some expound it of the invasion made by Tiglath-Pileser, under Pekah King of Israel, and Ahaz King of Iudah, 2 King.15.29. Which to help out, some of them tell us, of a twofold inroad made into the land, by this king. But I rather with with one of the Jewish Teachers, understand it of a former invasion, of which he points to, though mistaken in the time, made by Pul king of Assyria, in the reign of Menachem, or Manes king of Israel, and Uzziah king of Judah, 2 King.15.19.1 Chr.5.26. laid here to be but a light affliction, to speak of, because the King of Israel, having, with a great sum of money, compounded with him, he stayed not long in the land, 2 King.15.20.

the land of Zebulun, and the land of Naphtali] In which it is probable, that Pul quartered his forces, when he invaded Israel.

and of ye land did more grievously afflict (ether) Heb. and, or, (rather) and of ye mard did more grievously afflict, or made heavy (as the former branch) when (as before) he aggravated, or made heavy (as ch. 8.1. Yet regard must be had to the tenour of the context, in words that are ambiguous, and not extant elsewhere: and that observed, will not easily admit that sense in this place. The most therefore, both Jewish, and ours, read the words much after the same manner, as our version exhibites them. And in the Hebrew it runs thus: Is shall not be darkned unto her, whom, or with whom, it shall be straightned. That is, the land (for that all acknowledg is meant, and agree to be supplyed, as before, chap. 8.21.) that shall be in such streights, as hath been said, shall not be so darkned as in some former times, hereafter mentioned; that which is by divers diversly; yea, two contrary waies understood. tali, Deut.33.13. not observing that the lower Galile was not in Naphtali, but in Zabulon. Others suppose that the upper Galile, is here intended, called, as they deem, Galile of the Gentiles, Because it was much replenished with heathen people, and divers forts of them mixed with the Israelites in it; partly, in regard of some Cities in it, made over, by Solomon, to Hiram, 1 King. 9.11. And partly allo, because it lay, some part of it, neer upon the confines of Tyre and Sidon, Matth. 15.21. Mar. 7.31. and had therefore by reason of their vicinity, much commerce with them. And so is Hazoreth, called Hazoreth of the Nations, or Gentiles, Judg. 4.1. in regard of the remainder of the Canaanites there: And Tidal, King of Nations, Gen.14.1. As also another King likewise, so styled, Ioth. 12.23. in regard of a mixture of diverse Nations in their Cities, or territories; and so under their command. Nor doth the Evangelists relation of our Saviour Christs preaching, and conversing much about the Sea of Tiberias, where he took up for his followers, some of those that exercised fishing there, Matth. 4.18,22. or his abode at Nazareth, situate in the lower Galile, Matth. 2.23. & 3.13. any whit crosse, or contradict this, as some imagine. For it is said expresly, that upon the report of Johns commitment, he departed into Galile, and leaving Nazareth, (where he had formerly made his abode) he repaired to Capernaum a city situate in the confines of Zabulon, and Naphtali. Matth. 4.12,13. and consequently of the upper, and lower Galile, so situate, as was before said, & lying within the limits of the tribe of Naphtali, is justly therefore esteemed to belong, rather to the upper, then to the lower Galile. Besides, it is said further, that upon our Saviour went preaching about all Galile, Matth. 4.23. That is, as well the upper, as the lower; and as well that, as this, because it is added, that thereupon the fame of him went throughout Syria, Matth. 4.24. which confines upon the upper Galile. Howbeit, I suppose, they are mistaken, who suppose the whole circuit of the holy land, here described; as having its Western-bound, the midland sea: its Eastern, Jordan, its Northern, the upper Galile. But of the sea before. And though that were admitted, yet a fourth, at least, wants. Nor can I accord with those, that rent this latter part of the verse from the rest, and annex it to the next; reading the words without any dependance upon the former: as beginning a new period, on this manner. The way of the Sea, (that is, those that live by the sea side, the Naphtalites, and Zabulonites especially, Gen.49.13.) beside Jordan, (those that dwell on either side of the river) Galile of the Gentiles: (the inhabitants of the upper Galile, neer to the heathenish country) people that had walked in darkness, have seen a great light, &c. And this tearing of the text asunder, they build upon the Evangelists citing of the text of this Prophetical passage, Matth. 4.15,16. But the Evangelist gives no warrant for any such, either divulsion of this branch from the former, or agglutination of it to the next. For first, in this allegation, they are forced and severed, just as they are here. Secondly, we may as well upon the same ground, tear off these words, the land of Naphtali, and the land of Zabulon, from the former branch, (which yet none do, nor with any colour of reason can do) as these words from this latter: since that the Evangelist joyns those also with these. The Evangelist picks out only so much of the Prophecy, as might concern his present discourse, to apply it thereunto. And mentioneth therefore those parts of the whole, and those parts of them especially, pointed to by the Prophet, to intimate, that in those places, on which the darkenes of affliction had first seized, in those times, there the spiritual light of joy, and life, had, by our Saviours preaching, first sprung forth, Mat. 4.13.14.

V.2. The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light] Here, I suppose, beginneth the comfortable part of this discourse, promising light (notwithstanding the formerly denounced darkness) to the godly and faithful; partly by a good and comfortable issue of their present troubles, and deliverance out of their incumbent distresses; and partly, by that spiritual deliverance from the thraldom of sin and Satan, by the promised Messias: and the abundance of joy and comfort, that should accrue unto them from thence: whereof that of two that was a type.

The people that walked in darkness] Heb. The people that were walking. The noun is singular; the participle plural, because the noun is collective. See ver. 9. By the people here mentioned, some understand the ten Tribes, who were to suffer more grievous things, then formerly they had done; partly by Salmaneser, 2 King. 17.3,6. and partly by Esarhaddon, Ezr. 4.2. because mention is made of them, ver. 1. See ch. 8.7,8. Others, and those most of the Jewish Doctors, whom many of ours also concur with, understand them of the Jews, and the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, first straitned by Sennacherib, ch. 7.17,20. & 8.8. afterward surprised, sacked and depopulated by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 18.17.& 19.1,3. & 24.1,2,11, ch. 36. & 37. Jer. 5.39. & 52.1. I suppose we may well understand both houses, (see ch. 8.14,15.) in regard of the story, and acts of those times, and the calamities that befell them; which did typically resemble the sad and forlorn estate of persons, continuing in that utter want of all light or grace, and that slavery of sin and Satan, wherein by nature they are, untill they be effectually illightened, and converted by Christ, Eph. 2.1. & 5.8. 1 Joh. 2. 9,11.

walked in darkness] sate in darkness, Mat. 4.16. and so afterward here, that is, lived, and abode in it; because in places, where they

they abide, men sometime walk, and sometime sit, at home; as of mutual conversing one with another, (without any such mysteries,as some here, and there make) Psal. 1. 1. & 26. 4,5. Yet it may well have reference to walking in the dark, without vse or help of light, as both discomfortable and dangerous, Joh. 11. 9, 10. & 12. 35. 1 Joh. 2. 11.

darknes] For distres and discomfort, ch. 8. 22. & 50. 10.

hath seen a great light] This was in part fulfilled to the Jewish people, in those and the ensuing times; first, at the defeat given to Sennacherib, and the breaking up of his siege,ch. 30. 31, 32. & 37. 36, 37. and after ward, at the overthrow of Babylon, and the deliverance of them out of the Chaldean captivity, Psal. 126. 2. ch. 14. 3. & 52. 9. Jer. 31. 4, 5, 7. & 33. 7, 11. & 50. 4. & 51. 48. But most fully and principally, by the ministery of the Gospel, whereby people are delivered from that spiritual blindnes, and darknes, wherein formerly they abode, Matth. 4. 13, 16. Luk. 1. 78, 79. & 2. 32. Joh. 12. 35. Act. 26. 18. Ephes. 5. 8. and refected out of the servitude of sin and Satan, whereof that Babylonian bondage was a type, Joh. 8. 32, 34, 36. great light] Much joy and comfort; for Light, is put for joy and comfort; as Job 18. 5, 6. & 30. 26. & 38. 15. Eſth. 8. 16. Ier. 3. 9, 14. & 40. 5. to abide, and dwell in a place, is more then to paſs, or walk through it: as Pſ. 24. 4. & 66. 12. So Joh. 12. 46. abideth not in darkneſs, and 1 Joh. 3. 14. abides in death, and Gods wrath abides on him, Joh. 3. 36.

Extremity of diſtreſs, and miſery, compared to ſuch a dreadful ſhade, or darkneſs, as with the horror of it, may ſtrike a man even ſtark dead, Mat. 28. 4. or that ſhadow and darkneſs, that is ſaid to be in the grave, with thoſe that are laid up in the bowels of the earth, and are lodged in in the chambers of death, Iob. 10. 21, 22. Pſ. 88. 6, 12. and to men dead and buried, are thoſe uſually compared, as a calamitous and hopleſs condition, Pſ. 88. 4, 6. ch. 26. 19. Ezek. 37. 11, 12. Dan. 12. 2. See further of this phraſe, on Jer. 2. 6.

upon them hath the light ſhined] They are, or, ſhall be (for it is ſpoken in way of prediction) in as comfortable a condition, as thoſe, unto whom, after a dark, or tempeſtuous night or ſeaſon, of ſome continuance, at ſea eſpecially; or at land, in ſome hazardous, and harbourleſs place, the clear day-light, or bright Sun-ſhine, at length ſuddenly ſhews forth it ſelf, Act. 27. 20, 39. So Pſ. 37. 6. & 112. 4. See ch. 60. 1, 2. Mal. 4. 2.

V. 3. Thou haſt multiplyed the nation, and not encreaſed the joy] Theſe words, as ſome, are by an Apoſtrophe directed unto Sennacherib, who came with a vaſt army to beſiege Jeruſalem; but was fruſtrated of his purpoſe, and retired back with ſhame: As if the Prophet had ſaid to him; Thou haſt multiplyed thy forces indeed, but ſhalt have little joy of them at laſt. See ch. 36. & 37. But this ſeems not ſo ſuitable unto that that follows. The moſt therefore are of opinion, that the words are ſpoken unto God: but in expoſition of them, they are much divided. Some refer the words to what was paſt: And of theſe, ſome underſtand them of the Gentiles, ſtrangers from the common wealth of Iſrael. That howſoever God had multiplyed them, as he did Iſrael, and his ſeed, Gen. 17. 20. yet had not imparted that his grace to them, that is the only ground of all true and ſound joy, Eph. 2. 12. Others rather apply them to the Jewiſh people: and of theſe again, ſome read them on this wiſe; Thou haſt indeed multiplyed this people, (the Jewiſh Nation, according to thy promiſe unto Abraham, Gen. 15. 5, & 22. 17.) or, thou haſt magnified them, (becauſe the word ſignifies, as well great, and mighty, as many, Pſ. 45. 11, 20. and the verb to magnifie, or to make great, as to multiply, Gen. 32. 16. to wit, by many benefits and bleſſings beſtowed on them, victories atchieved, and miracles wrought for them) but yet thou haſt not made their joy ſo great; that is, haſt not given them ſo great cauſe of joy, as thou wilt do hereafter, in the deliverance of them from the Babylonian captivity, Pſ. 126. 1, 2. but eſpecially in the ſpiritual deliverance by Chriſt, ch. 35. 10. Others, Novas ſince thou multiplyedſt this people, didſt thou give them ſuch matter of joy; or, in multiplying of them, thou gaveſt them no ſuch occaſion of joy, as hereafter thou intendeſt to do. Thus thoſe of them that refer them wholly to the time paſt; excepting only, what they annex to them themſelves. Thoſe that underſtand them of the future, either in whole, or in part; do, ſome of them, apply them to the Iews, thus. Thou haſt multiplyed this people, or, Thou wilt multiply them, at Chriſts coming, yet little, or no joy will there be of it; becauſe, either ſo few will receive him, and believe in him, ch. 53. 1. Ioh. 1. 11. & 12. 37, 38. or, becauſe, though at firſt many flocked to him, and followed him, Matth. 15. 30, 32, 33. Luk. 12. 1. Ioh. 4. 1. & 11. 48. & 12. 19. yet afterward they fell as faſt away from him, Ioh. 6. 26, 66. Matth. 21. 9. with 27. 22, 23. Others to the Gentiles, Thou haſt multiplyed thee Nation, by acceſſion of the Gentiles called in to them, by the Miniſtery of the Goſpel, ch. 54. 1, 3. Gal. 4. 27. Rev. 7. 9. but thou haſt not thereby encreaſed, their joy, becauſe this vexed and troubled the Iews, Act. 11. 2, 3. & 13. 45, 50. & 22. 21, 22. 1 Theſ. 2. 15, 16. and becauſe upon the coming in of the Gentiles, they were rejected, Rom. 11. 8, 12, 19, 20. Others again, both to Iews and Gentiles, indifferently, that though God be pleaſed to multiply, or magnifie the body of the faithfull, conſiſting of both Nations incorporate into one, Gal. 3. 16. Eph. 2. 14, 16. & 3. 6. yet, he will not afford them any great meaſure of ſuch joy, as the world affords, Ioh. 14. 25. & 16. 2, 33. or, as worldly men here enjoy, Pſ. 4. 6, 7. & 17. 14. Thus ye ſee how many ſeveral ways this Scripture is writhed, (and yet divers ſenſes given it, nomitted) and how many tillings are inforced, to make the ſame to be notione. The main difficulty ariſeth from the negative particle, which of ſelfe, therefore, ſome would have the words read by way of interrogation, by which manner of reading, ſome Scripture-ſcruples, are ſometime by ſome deemed, to be happily removed; as Iob 14. 14. Pſal. 105. 28. Hoſ. 4. 14. Mic. 5. 2. Eph. 4. 26. and to here they ſuppoſe, that the words being thus read, Haſt thou not encreaſed their joy? all the difficulties will be diſſolved. The denying interrogative being equivalent to an affirming enunciative. For the ſenſe, I concur with them; but I raiſe it from another ground: The Hebrew Criticks, commonly called Maſorets, have obſerved divers readings in ſundry places of Scripture, about no one word ſo many, as about the word, Lo, which in Hebrew, according to a diverſe writing in that language, ſignifieth one while, Not, another while, To him. This diverſity concerning it, is found, as Exod. 21. 8. Lev. 11. 21. & 25. 30. 1 Sam. 2. 3. 2 King. 8. 10. 1 Chr. 11. 20. Eſa. 4. 2. Iob 15. 15. Pſ. 100. 3. ch. 49. 5. & 63. 9. o in this place: the reading therefore being doubtful, whether not, or, to him, or, it; I follow rather this latter; though by ours ſo generally renounced: not becauſe thoſe Jewiſh Criticks preſer it; but becauſe it ſuites better both with the ſcope of the place, and with the ſequel of the context: & read the words thus: Thou wilt multiply this nation, thou wilt encreaſe their joy. The main exception which one of prime note taketh to it, is this, that the pronoun in the Hebrew is wont to follow the verb, where as here thus read, it leadeth. But ſo it doth alſo, Job 13. 15. where yet moſt go with the keri, the lame with this here. And he that takes this exception, yet approveth the ſenſe, only readeth the words in an interrogative tone, wherein the negative aſſimileth.

Thou haſt multiplyed] Or, Thou wilt multiply. For the Prophet runs all along here, in a prophetieall ſtraint ſpeaking of things future, as preſent, or paſt.

the nation] Or, this nation. For the particle is dictical: as ch. 26. 15. thou haſt added to the Nation, to this people, the Iewiſh. Thou wilt cauſe them to multiply, and thrive again, when they ſeem to be almoſt worn out, after the ſpoil of them, made by Sennacherib, ch. 37. 31. after their return from the Chaldean captivity, Ier. 31. 27. Zach. 2. 4. in the daies of the Meſſias, by confluence of people out of all parts, that ſhall joyn themſelves unto them, Pſ. 47. 1, 9. ch. 2. 3. Mic. 4. 2. Zach. 8. 20, 23.

and not encreaſed the joy] If ſo read, it ſhould rather be rendred, but, then and: for it is a diſcretive, at leaſt, if not an adverſative. But for not, I read, to it, or, to them: the word, nation, whereunto it refers, being a collective: as ch. 5. 25. & 6. 9.

encreaſed] Heb. magnified, as Gen. 19. 19. encreaſed the joy, or, joy to them, that is, their joy. Thou wilt give them abundant matter of joy, in delivering them from the Aſſyrian ſiege, when they ſhall be unable to hold out, ch. 37. 3, 36, 37. in bringing them back from the Babylonian captivity, when they ſhall ſeem to be paſt all hope of recovery, Ezek. 37. 11, 12. and principally, in ſending the Meſſias unto them, the fore-ſight of whoſe day, ſo long before; ſo much rejoyced Abraham, Joh. 8. 56. and whom all the faithful of former times had ſo earneſtly expected, to inſtantly longed for, Mat. 13. 16, 17. Luk. 2. 25, 30, 37, 38. to deliver them from the thraldom of ſin and Satan, Luk. 1. 69, 70. and 2. 10, 11. whereof thoſe former deliverances were but ſhadowy reſemblances; and were alſo exhibited to them, both by him, chap. 63. 9. and for him, in whom all Gods promiſes, are yea, and amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. See ver. 6.

they joy before thee] As thou wilt give them occaſion of much joy, ſo will they take notice of it, lay it to heart, and in way of thankful acknowledgment thereof, rejoyce in thy preſence. Ye ſee how naturally this floweth from the former branch; and what ſtrength is hence given to the interpretation thereof before delivered. So Pſ. 9. 2, 3. & 20. 5. & 21. 1. & 35. 9. ch. 12. 3.

they joy] Heb. have rejoyced, or, ſhall rejoyce: as before.

before thee] That is, ſay ſome, inwardly, ſincerely, in thy ſight, and ſo the phraſe indeed is ſometime uſed, ch. 38. 3. Luk. 1. 6. to diſtinguiſh, as they would have it, this inward and ſpiritual joy, from that that external, worldly, and carnal joy, that worldly mens hearts rae ſo much taken, and taken up with, Pſal. 4. 6, 7. denyed to them in the former branch; Luk. 6. 21, 23. 25. but of that branch, and the reference that this hath to it, ſufficiently hath before been ſpoken. The meaning of the words here, rather is, in thy preſence, in thy Sanctuary, in the Aſſembly of thy people, the place of thy face, or ſpecial preſence, as it is termed, Pſal. 42. 2. in reference to that place, where ſometime God appeared to Jacob, and the therefore named it Peniel Gen. 32. 30. So the phraſe is uſed, Deut. 16. 11. 14. Pſalm. 68. 3.

according to] By two ſimilitudes is the greatneſs of this their joy further amplified, the one taken from one of the greateſt ordinary occaſions of joy, in times of peace; the other in times of war.

the joy in harveſt] The joy, not ſo much of hirelings, that reap for others; but of the owners of the grounds, and the grain thereon growing, whether the richer ſort, whoſe revenues conſiſt much in the graine of the earth, Gen. 26. 12, & 27. 28. Pſal. 4. 6, 7. or, thoſe of the meaner rank, the husbandmen, that having taken much pains about the tilling of their grounds, whereupon the livelyhood of them and theirs depends, and with long patience and much ſolicitude expected the return & receit of it, Jam. 5. 7. are exceedingly rejoyced, when they ſee their labours ſeconded, and their expectation anſwered with a plentiful crop, and a ſeaſonable harveſt, Pſal. 126. 5, 6. and are wont therefore with much ſolemnity, and jollity, to bring in their grain, as the principall fruport of their life, Gen. 47. 15, 19. 25. See ch. 16. 9, 10. Yea, by Gods appointment, were ſolemn feaſts of rejoycing, upon the bringing in of the fruits of the earth, Exod. 23. 16. Levit. 23. 10, 16, 17, 39, 41. Deut. 16. 9, 11, 13, 14.

and as men rejoyce when they divide the ſpoyl] Heb. as they rejoyce (the word put imperſonally, as ch. 2. 19.) in their dividing the ſpoyl: (the wars put impertinently, as the former, when harveſt comes well as no greater joy, in times of peace, then when harveſt comes well in, do, nor in war, then when victory, after an hazardous fight, ſpecially is atchieved, and rich ſpoyls and booties withal obtained, to be allyas atchieved; and rich ſpoyls and booties withal obtained, to be ſhared among thoſe that were in the fight, as Num. 31. 9, 27. Judg. 5. 30. 1 Sam. 30. 16, 19, 20, 22, 23. 2 Chr. 20. 25, 28. Pſal. 68. 12. See Pſal. 119. 162.

V. 4. For thou haſt broken, &c.] Having declared the greatneſs of their joy, he proceeds to ſhew the ground of it; their deliverance, and freedome, from the ſtraits and thraldome of their enemies. as well corporal, as ſpiritual, So we read the words, when, (as Joh 3. 22.) thou ſhalt have broken. But we need not alter the received reading.

thou haſt broken the yoke of his burden] This ſome underſtand of the breaking up of that ſiege, wherewith Sennacherib begirt Jeruſalem, ch. 36. & 37. and of the further deliverance from future vexations and oppreſſions, from that State then declining, as ch. 38. 6. See Nah. 1. 13. Others, of the diſſolution of the Babylonian captivity, Ezr. 1. 1, 2. it may well include both; but both ſtill, as looking further, to the redemption wrought by Chriſt, of whom, ver. 6. broken the yoke] Thou haſt ſet them free. For when the yoke is taken off, Hoſ. 11. 4. or broken aſunder, Ier. 5. 5. the beaſt is at liberty. So Jer. 28. 2. 11. & 30. 8. I will break his yoke from off thy neck.

The yoke of his burden] That is, his yoke which is a burden; as the ſign of circumciſion, that is, circumciſion, which is a ſign, Rom. 4. 11. or rather, h s yoke of burden; that is, his burdenſome yoke: as, the hill of his holineſs, for his holy hill, Pſal. 15. 1. and his idols of gold, for his golden idols, ch. 2. 20. the ſyntax is in either place alike: a yoke, is in Scripture, put for any grievous or heavy preſſure of what kind ſoever, becauſe a yoke, both reſtrains a beaſt of his will, and lyes heavy alſo on his neck, Deut. 28. 48. 1 King. 12. 4, 9, 11, 14. Lam. 1. 14. more eſpecially, for ſervitude, and thraldome; becauſe the beaſt by it is conſtrained to do man ſervice, Jer. 27. 2, 3, 6, 7, 8. & 31. 18.

of his burden] Not which he laid on others; as thy fathers yoke, 1 King. 12. 4, 9. but which he was by others laid on him, and where with he was burdened: as our yoke, 2 King. 12. 4, 10. See chap. 5. 14.

and the ſtaff of his ſhoulder] Or, ſhoulders. So ver. 6. the ſtaff wherewith God formerly ſmote them, and laid them, as it were, over the ſhoulders, ch. 10. 5, 24 & 14. 29. a metaphor from the manner of ſome hard and cruel maſter, that ſtands over his ſervants with a ſtaff, or a cudgel, ready ever and a non to be laying them on: but this ſtaff, it is ſaid, God hath broken, as ch. 14. 5. The Lord hath broken the ſtaff of the wicked. thereby intimating, that now his people ſhould not be any longer, as ſlaves, under the ſtaff of ſuch, as formerly they had been.

the rod of his oppreſſour] Heb. the rod, or ſcepter of him that exacted on him. Or as ſome render it, from him, as Ezek 43. 18. So Job 3. 18. chap. 5. 12. The word properly, ſignifies; either a taſkmaſter, that impoſeth a taſk of work: and requires, accordingly, a ſtrict account of it, Exod. 5. 6, 8 chap 58. 3. (whence alſo it is ſometime put for a driver. Iob. 39. 7.) Or an exacter of tolls and tributes, 2 King. 23. 35. and ſuch burdens did foreign Princes, the Aſſyrians, and Babylonians, eſpecially, impoſe on, and exact from Gods people, 2 King. 16. 18. & 18. 14, 15. Hence, in ſome verſions, gold-thirſty-Babel, chap. 14. 4. but now it is promiſed, that the rod, or ſcepter, that is, the power, or authority, as Pſal. 2. 9. & 45. 6. & 110. 2. of theſe exactors, ſhall be broken, that Gods people may no more be ſubject to ſuch theirs exactions or oppreſſions. To which purpoſe it is ſaid, that the exact ſhall ceaſe, & that they ſhall exact from thoſe, who exacted before from them, ch. 13. 3. 4. See Zach. 9. 8. & 10. 4.

as in the day of Midian] What time (as ch. 3. 18. & 4. 1.) God, by Gideon, overthrew the Midianites, Judg. 7. 22. ch. 10. 26. who had been grievous oppreſſors of Gods people, Judg. 6. 2, 6. Unto which overthrow, the Prophet is, by ſome, thought to liken the deſtruction of Sennacheribs army, becauſe it was not affected by the force and valour of thoſe that went forth againſt them, but by a ſudden fright in the night, Iudg. 7. 19. 21. all was of God, nothing of man, in either. Others ſuppoſe, that Chriſts ſpiritual conqueſt is there unto compared, in regard of the trumpets, and the lamps in earthen-pitchers, Judg. 7. 16. reſembling the trumpet of the Goſpel in the mouth of Gods Meſſengers, chap. 58. 1. Joh. 5. 24, 25, 28. and the miniſters, or meſſengers themſelves, though ſhining, as lamps, in their miniſtery, Joh. 5. 35. whereby they hold out the light of Gods word, Phil. 2. 15, 16. Yet carrying this precious and powerfull light, in earthen veſſels only, that the efficacy of it may, appear to be of God alone, not of them, 2 Cor. 4. 7. But theſe things ſeem a little too curious.

the day of Midian] Day, for time: as chap. 3. 18. & 4. 1. But in more ſpecial manner, the day of ſuch an one, is uſed, for that time, wherein ſome more remarkable thing befalleth ſuch a perſon, or people, either for evil, or for good. So the Day of Jeruſalem, Pſal. 137. 7. the time when the was beſieged, ſurpriz-d, and ſacked. The day of Gideon, Hoſ. 9. 9. when for their abominable wickedneſs, and obſtinacy therein, they were deſtroyed. In the day of thy brother, that is, of his calamity, diſtreſs, captivity, deſtruction, as it is there expounded, Obad. 12. 14. And ſo here, the day of Midian, that is, of his overthrow.

V. 5. For every battle of the warriour is with confuſed noiſe, and garments rolled in blood, but this ſhall be with burning, and fuel of fire] ſo muſt read this verſe, both of the Hebrews, and ours; as conſiſting of two members, oppoſed the one to the other. And ſome of them underſtand it of the overthow given to Sennacheribs army at the ſiege of Jeruſalem: that whereas, in other battels, victory is not wont to be atchieved, and the enemy over-thrown without much tumult and noiſe, and uſe of a mes, and blood-ſhed, on both ſides. Or beſmeering, at leaſt, of mens bodies, and their apparel with blood, Pſal. 68. 23. ch. 63. 2, 3. Here ſhould be no ſuch matter, but they ſhould be ſuddenly ſmitten, as with a blaſt of lightning, itt the dead of the night, without any noyſe, or uſe of ſouldiers, or arms. See chap. 10. 16. Others underſtand it of Chriſts ſpiritual ſouldiery, and his conqueſts, which are carried on and atchieved, not with ſuch weapons and conflicts, as others are, 2 Cor. 10. 3, 5. but with the ſword of his Word and Spirit, whereby he both ſubdueth the hearts of men, to himſelf, unto their ſalvation, chap. 11. 4. & 49. 2. & 59. 19. Matth. 10. 34. Luk. 12. 49. and will one day alſo deſtroy his obſtinate enemies, to their eter nal confuſion, Pſal. 50. 3. & 97. 3. ch. 11. 4. & 26. 11. Jer. 5. 14. Matth. 3. 12. 2 Theſ. 1. 8. & 2. 8. Rev. 1. 16. & 19. 15. Another going much the ſame way, but this rendering the words. For all the conflict of the conflictent was, indeed, with noiſe and vaiment defiled with blood, and yet was it to combuſtion, to meat for the fire; That is, although the enemy of Gods people, did with much fury and rage aſſault them, and bedewed their garments with the blood of thoſe whom they ſlew of them; as ch. 63. 2, 3. Rev. 12. 11 17. & 13. 7. yet in fine he ſhall fail of his conqueſt, being himſelf and together with his raymentſo ſtained with the blood of Gods people, become matter for the fire, chap. 26. 11. Rev. 17, 6. 16. & 20. 9. 10. And thus they that divided the words of the Text into two diſtinct axioms. But others read the whole verſe, as one continued ſentence; at leaſt, as ſpeaking of one, and the ſelf-ſame matter. And among theſe, ſome of the manner of the overthrow given the Midianites, and their complices, with that which followed thereupon. And they render the words on this wiſe: whan the whole con flict of thoſe that conflicted, or that conflagrations were rolled in blood, and it was concuſſion, or tumult, and garments were rolled in blood, and it became, or ended in burning, even, fewel for the fire. All which they underſtand of the tumult, or combuſtion that was in the Midianites camp, and the ſlaughter that they made one of another; ſo great and ſuch abundance of blood thereby ſpilt, that both the bodies of them, that lay weltering in their own blood, and their garments there with, polluted, and ſpoiled, were fain to be burnt together, the one with the other. See ch. 14. 19. Others underſtand it of the proceedings of Chriſt, come in theſleſh; as rendering a reaſon, why his deliverance of his Church was ſaid to be like that, in Gideons time, of the Iſraelites from the Midianites; to wit, becauſe of the preaching, and light of the Goſpel, like the lights, and trumpets then uſed, Iudg. 7. 20. The enemies thereof ſhould be frighted and ſlighted, Rev. 6. 15, 16. The world filled with war and blood ſhed, Mat. 24. 6, 7. Rev. 6. 4. and all, at laſt, conſumed with fire, 2 Theſſ. 118. 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10. 12. But as the latter reading ſeems more plain and ſuitable, both to the frame of the Text, and to the courſe of the context, then the former; ſo the former expoſition of the latter reading, ſeems to me more agreeable to either; as more familiar alſo then the latter.

For] Or, when; as Pſal. 77. 2.

every] Or. the whole. See the like ambiguity, ch. 7. 4.

battel of the warriour] They are both words of the ſame root; as if battel of the warriour] They are both words of the ſame root; as if ye ſhould ſay, war, of warriour, or fight of the fighter. The word is no where elſe found, in regard whereof, ſome other far-fetched not ons notions,are, by ſome given to it; but with ſmall probability.

with confuſed noiſe]ruſhing,or ruſtling, Ezek. 11. 12. & 37.7,or, commotion,or,concuſſion,1.King. 11.12.ch. 29.5.Jer.10. 22.Ezek.38. 19.

garments]Heb.garment.The ſingular taken collectively;as ch. 3. 6,7.and,as before,warriour;for warriers; and man,for men, ch.2.20. Some would have the word ſignifie, properly,a cloak,or.mantle, ſo tearmed; becauſe the skirts of it uſed to be caſt over the left ſhoulder,that the right hand,and arm might be at more liberty. But it is uſed for apparrel,in general.

rolled]As of Amaſa,2 Sam.20.12.

in blood]Heb bloods,Gore blood,blood ſhed in fight, or by other violent means,ch.1.15.& 4 4.

but]Heb.and.

but this ſhall be]Or.and it was,or,became:or,which became; to wit, the rayment ſo polluted.For the copulative, is ſometime put for the relative.See ch.3.6.& 5.4.

with burning]So the particle is rendered,Pſal.147.20.and may wel be,Job 17.5.or for,unto burning,as,for, or,unto deſolation Joel,3.19. See Gen.11.3.

fuel]Heb.meat;or,food:as ch.10. 26.Put,by appoſition to burning, or having reference to the verb-ſubſtantive. The whole verſe may thus be rendered; when the whole battel of thoſe that were in battel, was with claſhing of arms,and rayment rolled in gore-blood;which, by burning became food for the fire, That is,was, made fuel.For, fuel for the fire,is a meer tautology.

V.6.For unto us a child is born] That theſe deliverances of Gods people,and the ſubduing and pulling down of ſuch mighty Potentates,whether ſecular,or ſpiritual, may not ſeem impoſſible and incredible; the Prophet now proceedeth to declare, who it is, and what manner of perſon, by whom all that hath been ſaid, ſhall be effected:even the Meſſias, the Eternal Son of the Eternal Father, whom God ſhall raiſe up to be the King and Governour, of his Church. This paſſage of Scripture,howſoever the ancienter of the Iewiſh Doctors. whom the Chaldee Paraphraſt alſo followes, (as thoſe alſo teſtifie,that have been verſed in the monuments of that Nation,)acknowledg to concern the Meſſias;yet their later Writers, by all means, labour to darken the light of ſo clear and pregnant a prophecy, by endeavouring to divert it, and to turn it over to Ezekiah.Whom albeit, we deny not, in ſome things to have been a type of Chriſt:(of which,ſee chap.32.1.)yet the names given unto the party here deſcribed,are, ſome of them, ſuch as cannot agree, either unto Ezekiah,or unto any other meer man, as we ſhall afterward ſee. The words may well be rendered; (as before verſ.5. as having reference to the deliverance, mentioned,ver.4.(a child is born to us. Not, that ſuch deliverance was not, in part,before exhibited;but becauſe it was then more fully compleated; and he manifeſted in the fleſh, by whom, and for whom,all had been done that was formerly effected, a child]Not Ezekiah, as our new Rabbines would have it, who was born ſome good ſpace of time before the date of this prophecy, yea,before his father came to the throne;for he was five and twenty year old at his fathers death,who reigned but ſixteen,2 King.16. 2.& 18.2 :but Emmanuel,the Virgins Son,not as yet born,but to be born,chap.7.14.though in Gods purpoſe, as born already. A child, at his birth,in,regard of his humane nature,Mat.2.11.Luk.2. 11,21. 34.though the ſon of God,from eternity,in regard of his Deity,Pſal. 2.7.Prov.8.24.25.& 30.4.

unto us a ſon is given]A ſecond branch concerning the ſame child, adding ſome emphaſis to the former.

a ſon]As noting his ſex, Luk.2.7. and ſo pointing at his twofold Nature;being both Son of man, and Son of God, alſo, in one and the ſame Perſon,Mat.16.13,16.

is given]Not paid,or returned to us,in way of payment;(for who hath given ought to him,that he ſhould be repaied?Rom.11.35.)nor ſold to us,in conſideration of ought to be pay'd by us,(for what can we return to God,that is not his own already,Gen. 32,10.1Chro.29.11, 12.Rom.11.36.)but given, freely beſtowed, without any reſpect of ought in us,that might invite,or induce him thereunto.Rom.5.6,8, 10.Tit.3.5. without expectation of ought from us,that might be beneficial unto himſelf,Job.22.2.3,& 35.5--8. Pſal. 16. 2. Again,not given,only,as Iſaac was given to Abraham,Joſh. 24. 3. but in a far more eminent manner,in regard whereof, he is,in way of excellency,and in a peculiar manner, tearmed Gods gift, Joh.4.10.and ſaid to be given by the Father, Joh. 3. 16. & 6. 32. 33. See chap.49. 6, 8.

unto us]Both unto us,and for us;to effect our ſalvation,Rom,8. 32.See ch.3.6,11.

and the Govrrment ſhall be upon his ſhoulders]Not the power and authority only,of ruling,and governing Gods people,is by God his Father,whoſe Son he is, devolved wholly unto him, Pſal. 2. 7. 8. But the whole care,and charge of protecting his Church,and procuring of all things neceſſary for the ſafety of it,either corporal or ſpiritual,temporal,or eternal;is undertaken of him;and born,and ſuſtained by him,chap.11.4.& 40. 11.& 42.1,3. &49. 5.6.&65.15. 6.35.&15.16.

Goverment]Heb.Principality,or, Princedome, and ſo ver.7. It denotes here that place of authority, whereby Chriſt is made,as Viceroy to God his Father,and his Lievtenant-General, Pſal. 110,1,2.1. Cor.15.25.27.Col.1. 18,19. eſpecially, in regard to,and behalf of his Church,for the ſafety and welfare of it,Matth.28.18,20.Eph.1. 20,22.

ſhall be]So, not amiſs;yet the Hebrew Syntax requires rather,is, or,hath been, and ſo both the Greek,and Latine render it, but the form is prophetical,as in the reſidue;wherein, either the one expreſſed,or the other intended, would, without ſhift,or change,be conſtantly obſerved.

upon his ſhoulder]There ſeems ſome alluſion here, to what was before ſaid of the burden,and the ſtaff upon the ſhoulder,ver.4.though the Jewiſh Maſters make no very good uſe of it, who to prove this meant of Hezekiah,ſay,the rod,and the ſtaff,(they might have ſaid, the yoke,& the burden too)were on Ahaz his ſhoulders, becauſe he was but a tributary to the Aſſyrian,2 King. 16.8.2 Chr, 28.20.21. whereas Hezekiah his ſon ſhook off the Aſſyrian yoke, and refuſed to be as his vaſſal,which his father before him had been,2 King.18. 7.but it is not enough,for the faſtning of this Prophecy upon Hezekiah,to pick out ſome piece of it,that may be applyed to him:and another manner of regiment is here intimated,as appears, ver. 7. then Hezekiah's ever was. But that we may the better underſtand the phraſe here uſed,we are to conſider, that the ſhoulder is the ordinary part of the body uſed for the bearing, of heavy eſpecially, and weighty burdens. Gen.21. 14.& 24.15. Exod.12.34,Joſh.4.5. Judg.9,48.Ezek.12.6,11.Now there is a two-fold burden,there is a baſe burden of ſervitude,Gen.49. 14,15. Exod.2.11.and this burden Chriſt takes off from the ſhoulders of his. Pſa.81. 7. ch.14.25.and there is an honourable burden of care and charge, which attendeth on,and belongeth unto thoſe that are in place of authority ; in regard whereof,the ſame word in divers languages,that ſignifies honour is of neer affinity with that which denoteth burden,and govrrment is therefore by the wiſer and better ſort, juſtly deemed no other, then a more honourable kind of ſervice,1 King. 12.7. Nor indeed is this a light or ſmall; but a great and weighty burden, if it be well weighed;conſiſting in a conſtant care, ſollicitude , and ſedulity, of procuring , and providing for the ſafety and welfare of thoſe that live under their charge,ch. 32. 1, 2.2 Cor. 11. 28. 29. that which, howſoever Princes and great Perſonages, oft-times neglect,and regard not,contenting themſelves with the State-ſervice, and revenues,which they receive,and perceive from their people, without regard of their good : yet Chriſt doth not ſo : but as he taketh the burden of ſervitude from off their ſhoulders: (though not the burden of free ſervice neither from off their ſhoulders:) Zeph. 3.9, no more then the yoke of willing obedience from off their neck,Matth.11.29) ſo he taks the burden of care and charge for the providing for them, ſuſtaining of them and accommodating them with all neceſſaries, both concerning this life, and a better,and layeth it upon his own ſhoulders;Pſal.37.5.& 55.22.&84.11.Heb.13.5,6.1Pet.5.7.See ver. 7.in regard whereof,alſo,he is called,not God ſervant only, ch.42. 1 & 53.11.but a ſervant unto Gods people too, Matth.20.28.Luk.22. 27.Rom.15.8.Phil. 2. 7. What ſome report of a key carried on the ſhoulder of ſome Officers in Court, as here alluded unto, ſhall be further conſidered,on ch.22. 22.For the alluſion that ſome ſuppoſe here unto Chriſts carrying his croſs, Ioh.19. 17.(not unlike that, which others have,of Iſaac's carrying the wood,for the ſacrificing of himſelf,Gen.22.6.as a type of the ſame) to more ſerious Authors, ſeems too light.

ſhoulder]For,ſhoulders,as ver.4.

and his name ſhall be called]That is,he ſhall be called, or, this ſhall be his name. to wit, that which followeth; not that he ſhould be ſo commonly ſtyled;but that he ſhould be known,and acknowledged to be ſuch,as theſe titles all of them import. So ch.7.14. Jer. 23 .6. Ezek.48.35.Heb.he ſhall call, as Mal.1.4.they ſhall call them. The active taken very frequently, in an imperſonal manner, moſt aptly expreſſed by the paſſive; He ſhall be called, they ſhall be called.Howbeit,the Jewiſh Doctors,ſome of them, take occaſion hereby,moſt miſerably to rent,and tear a ſunder the text;that they might,if it were poſſible, by force or ſlight, wring it out of our hands : yea,and the hands of their predeceſſors, by applying it to,Hezekiah. But they do but as the Madianites,one croſs and cut another : and no other weapon needs to refute what one offereth, then what is lent us by another. The verb, ſome of them will by no means have to be imperſonal.For God,ſay they,is expreſly ſaid thus to have called Ezekiah:and this to juſtifie,they read,or rend, rather,the words, on this wiſe.He who is wonderful in counſel, and the mighty God, and the Father of Eternity ſhall call his name(to wit,Ezekiah's)the prince of peace; becauſe it is ſaid,yet ſhall peace be in my days;c.39.8.But another of them obſerving, that in ſuch ſpeech,of calling ones name, thus,or thus the nominative,or the name-giver,never followeth;but where it is expreſſed, goeth ever before the verb ;and the accuſative referring to the perſon named, and containing the name given, doth alwaies follow next after:he runs a croſs, and hunts counter to his fellow Doctors. And the right is, ſaith he, that all that is ſubjoyned, belongs, to the

the party named,to wit Ezekiah, he ſhall ſo name Ezekiah. Then to make this Good,he pulleth aſunder the terms,whereof both the whole entire ſtyle,and each title contained in it,doth conſiſt:and ſo tireth himſelf in ſtrugling againſt the bright ſun-ſhine, to ſhew how they may all be applyed to, and verified of Ezekiah. That,whereein the former do directly contradict him,in affirming them to be as indeed they are, the peculiar attributes (ſome at leaſt among them)of God:and not applyable therefore to any other,then to him that is God. But hereof more,in diſcuſſing of the ſeverall titles.

Wonderful,Counſellour,]Theſe as two diſtinct titles, thoſe of the Jewiſh Doctors divide, who apply them to Ezekiah, and they ſay, that he is termed wonderfull ; in regard of that ſtrange wonder of the Suns going backward, wrought in his dayes,and at his requeſt, 2 King.20.2,6--11.and Counſellour,in regard of the counſel,which he took with his Princes, concerning the ſervice of God, and the ſafety of his City,and the good counſel he gave in either,2 Chr.29 4--11.& 30.19,& 32.3--8.Many alſo, yea, the moſt of ours, herein concur with them, though not in applying of them to Ezekiah, (which others,alſo,of their own, diſlike and reject,)yet in disjoyning them,and making them two ſeveral titles. And true it is, that they may be ſeverally applyed unto Chriſt, and are verefied in him. For how can he but be deemed exceedingly wonderful,with whom God and man,the Divine and humane nature, do in one perſon ſo miſteriouſly,and miraculouſly concur, that the very Angels themſelves, who do therefore adore him, among other things, admire this in him,as a myſtery,even beyond their reach,1 Tim.3.16,Heb 1.6.Eph.3.10,11.1 Pet.1.12.or, how can the title of Counſellour be denyed unto him, who is the moſt inward of privy-Counſel with God his father; and imparts unto his,of them, from him,whatſoever is neceſſary to be known of them ? Joh.1.14.18.& 3.13.& 5.20. & 15.15. But thoſe other Jewiſh Writers, that expound them of God,joyn them together, as making up joyntly,one title:and ſo do divers of ours, alſo, who apply them unto Chriſt. And indeed to me it ſeems, that they ought to go together,as the other three following, go alſo by pairs. For the meaning of them : The word rendred Wonderfull, is not an epithet, but a ſubject,or ſubſtantive: and it ſignifies properly,a miracle,or a wonder,ſuch,as being beyond, or above,the courſe of nature, and the power of the creature, God alone is able to effect,Pſal.136.4.ſo that to render it,word for word, it is as if one ſhould ſay a wonder, or miracle of a Counſellour, that is, a moſt wonderful,or miraculous Counſellour,as we uſe to ſay,a mirrhor:and a miracle,or,a wonder of woman-kind, for a moſt remarkable,wonderous,and even miraculous woman,and a miracle of man, or,a monſter of man,for; a monſtrous, or miraculous man : and it is the uſual manner of the Hebrews, in way of amplification, to put the abſtract for the concret:as deſolation,for moſt deſolate,ch.1.7. abomination,for moſt abominable,Deut.18, 12.pride,for,extream proud, Jer.50.31.Our bleſſed Saviour therefore, is not unfitly here ſo ſtyled;as one ſo exceedingly ſtrang and wonderful,in all his counſels, and courſes,eſpecially for his,both in ſecuring them,and in defeating the deſigns and attempts of others againſt them, as no ordinary phraſe,or form of ſpeech,is able fitly,much leſs ſufficiently,to expreſs it:but what is ſpoken of Chriſt herein the noun abſtract, that we may the better underſtand whom the Attribute belongs to, is by this our Prophet,afterward delivered of God,the Lord Jehovah, in the verb active He that maketh counſel wonderful ; or, doth wonderfully in counſel,ch.28 28.which place,as it helps to cleer this : ſo it ſeems to add ſtrength to this latter reading, that joyns the two terms together. And indeed,if we take Counſellour alone, without Miracle,or, Wonder,here, as Mighty alone, without God in the next, the Title would not ſeem to contain any ſuch extraordinary,or remarkable matter,as were ſuitable to the reſt,

The mighty God.]Or,A Mighty God,(for there is no article prefixed to any of the Titles,) Theſe two terms thoſe Jewiſh teachers pull aſunder,that apply them to Ezekiah. Howbeit,they would have them to ſignifie one and the ſame thing,as if we ſhould ſay,Mighty ſtrong,as Ezek.32.21.the ſtrong of,or,among,the mighty, and ſo, ſay they,was Ezekiah, and his name imporreth as much,ſignifying, the ſtrength of God,or,ſtrong,and mighty, from,or through God, as David Pſal.18,1. But againſt this we object , not only the accent in the Hebrew,that carrieth on the voyce without ſtop, or ſtay; and inhibit the disjunction of the one from the other : but beſides that which they cannot be ignorant of, that the word,el, howſoever: in the plural number, ſome once or twice,it may ſignifie great ones: as Job 41.25.Exod. 15.9. Pſal,89.6.(which two latter places, being in ſubſtance the ſame, are alſo queſtionable, and may intend Gods as well as great ones,)yet in the ſingular number it is never uſed,but for God ; and it is both repeated,chap. 10. 21. and in three other places found with the ſelf-ſame adjection ;the great and mighty God, ,Deut. 10. 17. Neh.9,32. Jer.32.18. And the Title fitteth well to Chriſt,who hath all the names of the Diety,given to him, in Scripture:Adonai,Pſal.110.1.Matth.22.44.Heb.1.13. Elohim,Pſal.45 6 Heb. 1.8.Jehovah,Jer.23.6.& 33.16 .Mal.31.Matth.11.10.Pſal. 83.18.Luk.1 76.God,Joh.1.1,14. the true God,or very God, 1 Joh. 5.20.the great God,Tit.2.13.the ſame in effect, with The mighty God, here,as joyned together, elſe where: and,God above all,to be bleſſed for ever,Rom.9.5.Nor can I paſs by the wrong done,both to Chriſt, and this Scripture, by a profeſſed Chriſtian, but too much addicted to Iewiſh fancies: who to help out the Rabbines in turnnig this over to Ezekiah, teareth one term away from the former title, and glewing it to this,would have the words read: The Counſellour of, or,conſulter with the mighty God.Thus he dares do that,which none of them durſt attempt: The ſtop that ſtayed them, was no bar to him. But the reaſon that he gives, why this ſtyle,or Title,ſhould be given to Ezekiah;to wit,becauſe he ſhould in all his affairs,conſult with God,and ask counſel of him,by his Prophets,2 Chr.29.15. 25. ch. 37. 2. may well ſtop his own mouth. For the word in the Hebrew here uſed,(which we agreeably,both to the Greek,and Latine,render Counſellours,he,becauſe that Latine term is more ambiguous, rendereth Conſulter.) doth never ſignifie throughout the whole Scripture, one that takes counſel of another: but one that giveth Counſel to another, and ſo to ſtyle Ezekiah, or any meer man, Gods Counſellour,is blaſphemous. See ch. 40. 13,14.

The Everlaſting Father] They that would have it meant of Ezekiah,render it, ſome, the Father of an age, or,a long time,and would have him ſo ſtyled, becauſe his life was prolonged, when he was at deaths door,ch.38.5.Others,the Father of a generation, becauſe, ſay they,he had an ample poſterity. But as for the former,if this Title ſhould have had reſpect to any ſuch thing, he ſhould rather have been termed in Scripture phraſe, the Son of a long time, then the Father of it. For ſo ſpeaks the Scripture conſtantly, ſuch an one was the Son of ſo many years,Gen.5.3.6, &c. And as for the latter, neither can it be ſhewed, where the phraſe,or term,is ſo uſed. Nor if it were found ſo uſed, would it be any peculiar character of Ezekiah,more then of any other, that had a continued line of iſſue, after him:yea,of him the leſs, becauſe for ought we find upon record, he left behind him only one Son. The Hebrew hath it (as is not denyed by thoſe of their Writers,that expound it,either of the Meſſias, as the Ancienter of them:or,of God,as thoſe latter ones, that ſay, he names Ezekiah here)much to the ſame effect, as we render it : A Father of Eternity, as the word is alwaies taken where applyed to God,and his Word,and his Reign,Exod.15.18.Pſal.111.7,8.ch.26. 4.& 57.15. Chriſt then is called the Father of Eternity; not as the ſame in perſon with the Father : For though they be one in nature and eſſence,Joh.10.30.Yet are they diſtinct in Perſon,Matth.28.19. 1 Ioh.7.5.not ſo much,in regard of that kind and tender affection, that he bears unto his,and fatherly care he hath of them.Joh.13.1. & 14.18.& 17.12.& 18.8.9.but more eſpecially and principally,becauſe he is the Authour of Eternity,that is,of life everlaſting, begun in this world,and to be conſummate in the next,unto all thoſe that believe on him,and have intereſt in him,Joh.6.39,40.47.51.& 8.51 & 10.28.& 11.25,26.Heb.5.9. &7.25.

The Prince of Peace]Of this Title applyed to Ezekiah, we ſpake before:and though the fore-part, and latter part of his reign, were proſperous,and peaceable,2 King.18.7.8.&.29.19. yet the mid-part was very calamitous and unquiet,2 King.18.13--17, ch. 36.1 But unleſs the whole ſtyle, contained in, and conſiſting of, all theſe four Titles, will ſuit with him, as well as this,in part,and in ſome ſenſe,may, all their ſtrife to carry this Prophecy over to him, is but frivolous. But unto our Saviour, as all the reſt; ſo this alſo, well ſuits. As his Father is tearmed the God of Peace,Rom,16. 20.Phil. 4.9.ſo is he fitly ſtyled, A Prince of peace. For he is our peace,Mic.5. 5.Eph.2,14,and he makes our peace with God,ch.53.5.& 57,19. Eph. 2.17.Col.1.20.and his Goſpel is a Goſpel of peace, and his Miniſters and Meſſengers,are Embaſſadors of peace,ch.52.7.Rom. 10.15. 2 Cor. 5.19.20.Eph.6.15. and he gives unto all his peace outward,inward, temporal,eternall,Mic,5.5.Zach.9.10.Joh.14.27.& 16.33.Rom.5.1.& 8.16.& 14.17.2 Theſſ.3.17.See ch.2.4.& v.7.

V.7.Of the increaſe of his Government, and peace, there ſhall be no end]From the laſt Title given to the Meſſias, whoſe birth he foretold,he takes occaſion to relate, both the amplitude, and the continuance of his principality, and the proſperity accompanying it. All which,how the latter Jewiſh Expoſitors, and ſome other treading in their ſteps,ſtrain their wits to apply unto Ezekiah,will be needleſs to waſte more words.

of the encreaſe]Or. unto the amplitude. See v.3.of the large extent of Chriſts Kingdom,into all parts of the world ; ſee theſe predictions,Pſal.2.8.& 72.8-11.ch.2.2.3Dan.2.35.& 7,27. Matth. 24.14. Rom.10.18.In the word of Increaſe, (no where elſe found, as a noun,but fitted here to the term of Government)there is a cloſe m in the middle,where an open one is wont to be;and on the other ſide an open one is found,in the end of a word, Neh. 2. 13. where a cloſe one ought to have been. Whence, divers, both Jewiſh, and others, pick out hidden myſteries. Some, that the cloſe and ſquare letter ſignifies firmneſs and entireneſs,in the one place; or as the cleft or open one,a breach,or rupture in the walls of Jeruſalem ; in the other place,Neh.1.3.& 2.13.others, that Chriſt ſhould be encloſed in the womb of a Virgin,ch.7 14.See Jer.31.22. Others,that his Dominion ſhould extend it ſelf to the four corners of the world, Matth.24.31. See ch.66. 19. Others, that by this letter, is deſigned. the year of Chriſts incarnation to be 600.year after the delivery of this Prophecy;but they miſs 100.years at leaſt,in their Chronography Yet, ſome would hence fiſh out, the name of his Mother. But ſuch frivolous toyes of wanton wits,the more ſerious and ſober-minded reject and deteſt.The negligent Scribe, in likelihood, forgat to cloſe up his letter,in the one place: and to leave a cleft in the other : which your Jewiſh curious Criticks,when they found in ſome Copies,that they followed,being ſuperſtitious of changing ought, retained ſtill,as many of his Government] Heb. Principality, or, Princedome, as v. 6. anſwering to the word Prince, alſo, there uſed.

By other slips of the Scribes Pen, only giving a note of it in the margine; or over the word in the textit is no more, then as if with us, an s or an ſ ſhould be in the middle of a word, and an S or an ſ in the end.

and peace] Heb. and to, or of the peace, For the particle is again, for the more emphaſis, expreſſed. The word, peace, is taken from the cloſe of the former verſe: and it includes, as there, ſo here alſo, not peace, barely, but all proſperity, ch. 48. 18. the meaning is, that all abundance of peace ſhould accompany Chriſts Government in all places, whither it ſhould be extended, and were entertained, Pſal. 72. 7. & 116. 165. ch. 54. 3.

no end] The phraſe here uſed, in this place, implyes, not continuance, or length of time; but largeneſs rather, or extent: as ch. 2. 7. Matth. 2. 10. & 3. 3. 9.

upon the throne of David] A defective ſpeech, which the Latine ſupplies, putting in, he ſhall ſit, Luk. 1. 32. God ſhall give him the throne of his father David, He ſhall, as heire to David, of whom he came; Matth. 1. 1. Luk 2. 4. Rom. 1. 3. Sit upon that throne, whereof David was a type, Act. 2. 30. and. 13. 23. 32, 33. in regard whereof, alſo, he is called by the name of David, Ezek. 34. 23. and. 37. 24.

and upon his kingdome] Or, and he ſhall be over his kingdom, as Gen. 41. 60. The Church of God conſiſting of Jew and Gentile, whereof David's kingdom was a type, Pſal. 2. 6, Ezek. 37. 22. Luk. 1. 33.

to order it] Or, diſpoſe it, To ſettle it, and the Government of it, 1 Cor. 12. 28 Eph. 4. 11. 12. as David, and other religious Kings types of him according to their places, had formerly done, 1 Chr. 23–29. 2 Chr. 29. and 30. & 34. and 35. 2 King 23.

and to eſtabliſh it] Or, ſupport it, Or, uphold it. So the word properly ſignifies, Pſal. 94. 18. and. 119. 116. 117. Prov. 20. 28. Other Princes are upheld by their people: Chriſts people are upheld by him, ch. 28. 16. Matt. 16. 18.

with judgment, and with juſtice] Theſe two are thoſe, whereby every State, is both a right, ordered and upheld. Of David it is ſaid That he fate executing judgment and juſtice. 2 Sam. 8. 15. 1 Chr. 18. 14. and juſtice, and judgment, are ſaid to be the inhabitants of Gods throne, Pſal. 92. 2. Judgment, in taking vengance on the enemies of his Church, Pſal. 76. 8, 9. and on obſtinate ſinners, Pſal. 68. 21. Luk. 19. 27. and in chaſtizing of his own people alſo, when they do amiſs Jer. 10. 24. & 30. 11. 1 Cor. 11. 3–32. Juſtice, in righting the wrongs of his people, and rewarding them for their wel-doing, 2 Theſſ. 1. 6. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Heb. 6. 10. For that which ſome have here of righteouſneſs imputed, and imparted; I ſuppoſe, belongeth not unto this place. See ch. 1. 27. & 16. 5.

from henceforth even for ever] Heb. from now, and for ever. Unto all eternity; for, the Lord ſhall reign, as King for ever, and of his kingdom ſhall be no end, Pſal. 9. 7. & 145. 13. & 146. 10 Dan. 2. 44. & 4. 34. & 7. 27. Zach. 9. 10. Heb. 1. 8. & 12. 27.

The zeal of the Lord of Hoſts will perform this] The eager reſpect that he hath to his own honour, chap. 42. 8. & 48, 11. Ezek. 36, 22. 23. & 39. 25. and the tender care, and affection that he beareth unto his people, ſhall cauſe him to effect, what hath here been fore-told. ch. 48. 9, 10. & 49. 15. Joel. 2. 18. Zach. 1. 14. & 2. 6, 8. & 8. 2. So alſo, ch. 37. 32. Of the Lord of Hoſts See ch. 1. 9.

V. 8. The Lord ſent a word into Jacob] After theſe comfortable promiſes interlaced, for the ſtay of the faithful; the Prophet here retiuns, again, to relate the calamities that ſhould, for their exceſs of ſin and obſtinacy therein, befal the people of Iſrael, and the Syrian king their confederate.

ſent] Or, hath ſent, as a man, ſends a meſſage by ſome ſervant, or officer, as Neh. 6. 8. So Zach. 7. 12. ſent by Eſay himſelf, as ſome, by Amos, as others, The word ſignifieth alſo, to caſt, as a man doth ſeed, Eccl. 11. 1. Or to ſhoot, as a man, doth a ſhaft, 2 Sam. 22. 15. which ſome think, here alluded to, in regard of what follow-eth.

a word] Of prophecy, concerning evils to betide them, chap. 7. 8, 16, & 8. 4. The Greek renders it a plague, and with other points or vowels, the word ſignifies either, with two ſhort ees, a plague, with two long ees, a word: which latter reading, there is no cauſe to waive for them, whoſe verſions is ſo full of groſs miſtakes.

into Jacob] Or, unto, as ch. 8. 8. & 10. 20 Jacob, the ten tribes, diſtinct from Judah, as Hoſ. 10, 11. See ch. 2. 5.

and it hath lighted upon Iſrael] Heb. and it ſhall fall upon Iſrael. For the copulative turns the form, into the future; as ch. 31. 3. and ſo v. 9. It ſhall fall, as grain, not light, that may be blown away with the wind, ere it come to the ground, but weighty, that falls into the furrow, and there takes. Matth. 13. 8. Or, as the ſnow, or hail, or rain, that falls on the heads of thoſe that are abroad in it; or on the ground, not without ſome effect, one way or other, Joſh. 10. 11. Pſal. 11. 6. ch. 24. 18. & 35. 10. 11. Jer. 30. 23. 24. Or, as the ſhaft, of a skilful archer that miſſeth not, but lights full on the place deſigned, hits the mark that it aymed at, Iudg. 20. 16. 2 Sam. 1. 22. The arrow of Gods word, lights ever there whither it is ſent, and never fails, ch. 55. 9. What God hath denounced, againſt perſon, or people, they ſhall never be able to ſtiffe off, or avoid, ch. 14. 27.

Iſrael] The ſame with Jacob. The Prophets manner is, in divers ſcarmes, for variety, to deliver the ſame things. So Pſal. 78: 71. See c. 1. 3.

V. 9. And] And whatſoever they now conceive of it; and ma ke account, either to ſhift it off, or overcome it, and do well enough with it, they ſhall all of them, by woful experience, feeling the ſmart of it, find my words to be truer, then they now imagine.

all the people ſhall know] Heb. and they ſhall know this people, or, this people ſhall know, for the verb is plural, becauſe the Noun a collective, as ch. 49. 26. all of them, or, all of it.

the people] Or, this people. For the article doth here ſingle out, and ſpecifie a particular people. It points us, as by the finger, to the people, before mentioned, v. 8.

ſhall know ik now it. A defect of the Affix, or pronoun; as ch. 1. 3, 15. & 3. 9. Rev. 1. 1. They ſhall know the word to be true, which they will not now believe. They ſhall know it to be no vain word, whatſoever they now think of it, Deut. 32. 46. 47. Ezek. 5. 13. & 6. 10. Or, they ſhall know it experimentally; that is, feel it, that is, the evils continued, and threatned in it. So, to know evil, for to have experience of evil whence the Tree of Knowledg had its name, Gen. 2. 16, 17. and to know evil, for, to ſuffer evil, Eccle. 8. 5. and to know ſin, for to have ſin, 2 Cor. 5. 20. See Jer. 23, 19. 20.

all] Heb. all of it. Where people, or all of them, as ch. 8. 21, 22. all places with them, verſ. 12. and all ſorts among them, 14. 15. even the proudeſt, and the ſtouteſt of them, ch. 3. 9. 11, 12. 17. & 5. 15.

even Ephraim] The royal tribe. That which was of chief preeminence with them; and denominating, therefore, oft the whole. See ch. 7. 2. and the inhabitants] For, inhabitants, as ch. 5. 3.

of Samaria] The royal ſeat, and cheif city of that kingdom. See ch. 7. 9. No place ſo ſtrong with them, that ſhould be able to hold out, c. 8. 4, 2 King. 17. 5, 6.

that ſay in the pride and ſtoutneſs of heart] That out of their proud and ſtout ſtomacks, make full account, eaſily to repair whatſoever damage, or detriment they have ſuſtained, or may hereafter ſuſtain, from the incurſions made by the Aſſyrians, into their country, and their tribes; and raiſe themſelves again, to a fairer, and more ſtately condition then before. See the like of the Edomites, with the like ſucceſs, Mal. 1. 4.

in the pride] Heb. in pride. Or, out of pride; as Matt. 12, 34. out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeakes. So Pſal. 10. 2. The wicked out of pride, oppreſſeth the poor: or, with pride, proudly, that ſpeak with pride or, proudly, Pſal. 31. 18. Either, pride, without the, or, their pride, with a defect ſupplyed as before.

and ſtoutneſs] Heb. and in greatneſs, as ch. 10, 9.

ſay] Intend, purpoſe, make full account: as Gen, 27. 41. Pſal. 30. 6. ch. 47. 7. Heb ſaying, lay. See the like defect, Jer, 3. 1. Howbeit a learned late Annotator refereth this, not to the Iſraelites, as ſimply relating their ſpeech, but to God, as relating the word ſent by him, v. 8. which they well knew; and checking them for what they ſay, and would turn the words read by way of interrogation, ſhould it be thus ſaid of you: Or, is it meet for you, ſo to ſay? But this, to me, ſeems an over ſtrained Syntax.

V. 10. The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewen ſtone] Whatſoever the enemy hath ruined, we will repair, and re-edifie in firmer, and fairer manner, then before. As it is ſaid of one of the Romane Emperors, that he found Rome, a brick-city, but he made it a marble one.

bricks] Of which their ordinary buildings were. Gen. 11. 3. bricks for houſes built of brick; as bricks for alters built of brick, ch. 65. 3.

are fallen down] Not decayed of themſelves; but over thrown by the enemy, Amos. 3. 15.

but] Heb. and, as ch. 8. 9, 10.

build] Them; (a defect of the Pronoun; as verſ. 9.) or, other in room of them, Mal. 1. 4.

with hewen ſtones] Heb. cutting, or hewing, for ſtones of hewing, or cutting, as it is more fully expreſſed, 1 Chro. 22. 2. Exek. 40. 42, that is, hewen ſtones. Such were the great mens houſes, in Samaria, built with, Amos. 5. 11. and ſuch they built with, both for ſtrength, Lam. 3. 9. and for beauty, 1 King. 7. 9. 11.

the Sycomors are cut down] The Sycomor, a kinde of wild fig-tree, Luk. 19. 4. as the fruit, Amos 7. 14. ſo the timber whereof was of ſmall reckoning, and it is ſaid therefore, of Solomon, that he made cedars to be as Sycomors, for the abundance of them, in his dayes, 1 King. 10. 27. but here, not for the trees themſelves; the felling whereof had been no ſuch great loſs; but for the houſes built with the timber of them, (as cedars, for houſes built with cedar, Jer. 22. 13, 15. Zach. 11. 1.) which the enemy had, or might deſtroy. Yet ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, underſtand it of the trees themſelves, and the ſpoyl made, in the country, of them, by the enemy; (like that by the ſtorm in Egypt, Pſal. 78. 47.) as the former branch of the havock, made, of their houſes, in the city. But that which follows, of putting Cedars in room of Sycomors, croſſeth this conceit; Cedars growing, commonly, on the hils, 1 King. 5. 6. and Sycomors, on the Plains, 1 King. 10. 27. Howbeit, being both this, and the former, proverbial forms, it is no great matter whether way we take; though the former ſenſe be the more probable.

but] Heb. and as before; and as Mal. 1. 4.

we will change them into cedars] Heb. we will change cedars for them. Or, by change ſubſtitute cedars in the room of them. A defective form of ſpeech, like thoſe, chap. 38. 17, 20, 22. See there: inſtead of Sycomore-timber, that our houſes were formerly built with, we will now build them with Cedar; the choiceſt timber for building in thoſe parts, in thoſe times; wherewith Solomon built, both Gods Temple, and his own Palace, 1 King. 6. 9. & 7. 2, 3, 7, &c.

V. 11. Therefore] Heb. And; as chap 3. 17. as denoting the cauſe of the judgment following their inſolency, mentioned, ver. 9, 10. Or, For, as ver. 13. ch. 64. 5. as declaring the means and manner, how the judgment, before denounced, ſhould be inflicted; from whom, and in what ſort it ſhould light on them; as he had ſaid, ver. 8. and ſo further confirming what was before delivered, verſ. 8, 9.

the Lord ſhall ſet up the adverſaries of Rezin, againſt him] Or, the Lord will ſet up, &c.

ſet up] Raiſe up, ſtrengthen, proſper, and make to prevail, as Pſ. 20. 11. & 59. 1. & 69. 29. & 92. 14. & 107. 41.

the adverſaries of Rezin] The Aſſyrians, who invaded Syria, the Kingdom of Rezin, ſubdued it, and ſlew him, 2 King. 16. 9. the rather mentioned here, becauſe the Iſraelites, were in confederacy with him, and truſted much to his ſtrength, ch. 7. 1, 2, 5, 6.

againſt him] To wit, Rezin. Who being deſtroyed before them, they might well expect to fare as he did; or, againſt them, the people before ſpoken of: for of them, the pronoun runs ſtill in the ſingular number: as ver. 9. God will bring in upon them; and cauſe to prevail againſt them, the Aſſyrians who having ſeized upon Syria, ſhall not long after do the like with Iſrael, 2 King. 15. 29. & 17. 3–6.

and join his enemies together] Heb. and will mingle his enemies. The word is but twice found in Scripture; and uſed in either place, to a diverſe purpoſe: in the one place, to mingle men together in fight, and conflict one with another; as in the Heb. proud, and contentious people, are ſaid to mingle ſtrife, Prov. 15. 18. & 28. 25. & 29. 22. and we uſe to ſay, that ſouldiers join in battle: and plaintiffe, and defendant are ſaid to join iſſue in Law: and ſo the word is uſed, ch. 19. 2. and ſo would ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors alſo have it taken in this place. But they ſtrain the text too much; here it ſignifies rather, to mingle men together in league, confederacy, and agreement. God will make their adverſaries, though bearing little love or good will one to another; yet to conſpire, and joyn together in one againſt them.

his enemies] Or, th. ir enemies. Not Rezins; (for ſome of them were his people) but Iſraels: which confirms the expoſition before given, of the words, againſt them. Theſe enemies are the Syrians, and Philiſtims, ver. 12.

V. 12. The Syrians before] The Syrians, on whom they ſo much relyed; being now ſubdued by the Aſſyrian, and become his Subjects, ſhall come under his conduct, mingled among his forces, to help to ſurprize and ſubdue them. Heb. Aram. See ch. 7. 1.

before] Heb. from the Eaſt, or, Eaſtward. See chap. 2. 6. 2 King. 13. 17.

and the Philiſtines behind] Heb from behind; or, from the weſt, weſtward. For ſo the Hebrews term Eaſt, and weſt: the one, the fore; the other, the back part of the ſkie, or the world: the South, the right ſide; the North, the left, Deut. 11. 24. Iob. 23. 8, 9. Now the Philiſtines lay on the Weſt to Iſrael; as the Syrians on the Eaſt. See ch. 2. 6. & 11. 14. both being ancient enemies to Gods people, were ready upon any occaſion, to infeſt them, and to be uſed as inſtruments againſt them.

and they ſhall devour Iſrael with open mouth] The land of Iſrael ſhall on either ſide be ſo beſet by them, that there ſhall be no way for them to eſcape; but they muſt of neceſſity fall into the hands, or, into the mouth rather of the one, or the other.

devour with open mouth] Heb. with whole mouth. A metaphorical ſpeech, taken from ravenous beaſts, lyons, bears, and the like; that open their mouths as wide as they can, to take in, and ſwallow down their prey, Pſ. 124. 3, 6. See ver. 16.

for all this his wrath is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] So ch. 5. 25. See the notes there. The firſt words are repeated here from the cloſe of the former branch, though our Engliſh expreſs it not as if he had ſaid, though with all this mouth they devour Iſrael; yet with all this is not Gods wrath ſatisfied; an utter riddance muſt be made of them: the Aſſyrian muſt ſweep away whatſoever they leave. See 2 King. 17.

V 13. For the People turneth not unto him, that ſmiteth them] The reaſon, why Gods wrath is not pacified, notwithſtanding the forementioned judgment inflicted, but further, & greater, are threatned; becauſe the former have not that work on them, for which God ſent them, to wit, to reclaim, and bring them home to him. That, which is ſo much complained of, about the ſame time, both by Hoſhea, Hoſ. 7. 10, 14, 16. and by Amos, Amos 4. 6–11.

For] Or, Becauſe, Heb. And: as ver. 11. ch. 64. 5.

the people] To wit, of Iſrael, ver. 9.

turneth not] By repentance, and reformation; Prov. 1. 23. ch. 55. 7. Act. 13. 19. Gods wrath is not turned from them; becauſe they turn not unto him, Jer. 5. 3.

unto him, that ſmiteth them] Heb. him. As ver. 11. unto God, that ſmiteth by theſe, who were but as the Aſſyrians, his rod, and his cudgel, ch. 10. 5.

neither do they ſeek the Lord of hoſts] They ſeek not, by prayer and ſupplication for remiſſion of ſin, and removal of evils thereby procured, unto him alone; who is able to relieve them, ch. 55. 6. Zeph. 2. 2. but ſeek abroad for ſuccour to ſuch ſorry helps, as cannot ſtand them in any ſtead, Hoſh. 5. 13. & 7. 14. Aſa's fault, 2 Chr. 16. 12. and Judahs too, ch. 22. 11. Of the title given God here, ſee ch. 1. 9.

V. 14. Therefore the Lord will cut off from Iſrael, head, and tail, branch, and ruſh, in one day] He will make an utter riddance of them; and of all ſorts among them, head and tail, branch and ruſh, ſeem proverbial forms of ſpeech, not unlike that, the tree with the fruit; or, the ſtalk with the grain, Jer. 11. 19. See the ſame again, ch. 19. 15.

Therefore] Heb. And. but ſo rendred, ver. 11. ch. 3, 17. yet, it may be retained in his native notion, here; as in the like place, ch. 5. 26. reading the words in a continued ſeries, from ver. 12. His hand is ſtretched out ſtill; becauſe the people turneth not, &c. ver. 13. (incloſed in a parenthеſis) And the Lord will cut off, &c.

branch] The word is found only in this Prophet, and Job 15. 32. and the plural, with change of a vowel, Lev. 23. 40. put here in likelihood for iſſue, or children, that are as branches, ſpringing from their parents, as from a ſtock, ſo Pſ. 128. 3. See ver. 17. or, for their better faſhion, that beautifie a State, as branches do a tree, ch. 10. 33. & 18. 5. Ezek. 17. 8, 23. and being of more might, ſeem to be the ſtrength and ſupport of it. See ch. 3. 1. 2. as branches of trees, afford ſtaves to ſtay men up; Zach. 8. 4. and Scepters to rule with, Ezek. 19. 11, 14.

and ruſh] So called of the pools, or ſtanding water, wherein it is found, put here for the poorer, meaner, and baſer ſort of people, because it grows commonly, in the mire, or mud, and is therewith fed, Job 8. 11. and is a matter of no ſtrength or worth, Job 41. 2. ch. 58. 5. And we read indeed, that in the deportation of Judah, the poorer and meaner ſort were many, if not moſt of them, left to till and manure the ground, 2 King. 25. 11, 12. but in the depopulation of Samaria, there is no mention of any ſuch reſerve, of any one ſort more then another: but the main body is ſaid to have been carried away, & other from forreign parts, placed in their room, 2 King. 17. 6, 23, 24.

in one day] Heb. one day. Not on ſome one day, or other; but, in one day. The particle is wanting, as Pſ. 56. 3. but to be ſupplyed: as ch. 10. 18. that is, at one and the ſame time; together one with another: day, for, time; as ch. 7. 24.

V. 15. The ancient, and honourable, he is the head] The application of the former proveibial ſpeech.

ancient, and honourable] Heb. eminent of countenance: as ch. 3. 3. men of account, for age or office. See ch. 3. 2. 3.

he is the head] Or, without he, is the head. For the pronoun is in Hebrew oft uſed for the verb ſubſtantive, Pſ. 44. 4. Eccl. 1, 5, 10. & 5. 9. ch. 10. 5. is the head: is meant by the head, reſembled thereby. So Gen. 41. 26, 27. and ſo, This is my body, Matth. 26. 26. Nor do the Hebrews ſpeak otherwiſe.

and the Prophet that teacheth lyes, he is the tayl] Heb! that teacheth a lye, (as ch. 32. 7.) he, or, is the tayl: as before, the falſe Prophets are ſo termed: partly, in regard of their baſe and abject conditions, (for ſuch, it is likely, many of them, as well as their Priests, were, 2 King. 12. 31. 2 Chr. 13. 9. Ier. 23. 11, 25.) and partly, in regard of their vile and baſe flatteries, whereby, as dogs with their tayls, they fawned upon the great ones, eſpecially for their own behoof, & ſoothed them up in their ſins, ch. 56. 10, 11. Jer. 8. 10, 11. & 23. 14, 17. Mic. 3. 5. ſo rather, then, as ſome that ſuppoſe, an alluſion to a ſerpent, that gliding toward a man, as in kind manner, getteth within him, and then ſtingeth him; or to ſuch dogs, as come fawning toward men, as playing with them, untill they have faſtned upon them, and then worry them. Nor do I think, that the Prophets intention was to compare the body of that State, as, ſome hence. infer, to a beaſt: becauſe he mentions a tayl, as well as an head; no more, then, where he uſeth the ſame phraſe of the Egytian State, ch. 19. 15. it being a common proverbial ſpeech. See ch. 8. 8.

V. 16. For the leaders of this people cauſe them to erre] Heb. And the leaders of this people, or, thoſe that bleſs this people, as alluding to the falſe Prophets, that ſoothed them up in their ſins, ver. 15. have been miſleaders; ſuch as haveled them out of the way, and made them go aſtray, See ch. 3. 12. Some read it, as a prediction, ſhall be ſeducers, that is, ſay they, ſhall appear to be ſuch. But that ſeems ſomewhat too coact.

For] Or, becauſe: as ver. 13. as rendring a reaſon, why God would cut off, head and tayl, &c. ver. 14. becauſe the people by their bad leaders, had been led into ſuch by paths of error, and bad life, as muſt needs end in deſtruction.

and they that are led of them] Or, bleſſed by them; that is, pronounced to be in an happy and bleſſed condition, as Mal. 3. 15. Jam. 5. 11. whom they ſooth up in their ſins, Ezek. 13. 22. but I rather approve the former.

are deſtroyed] Heb. are ſwallowed up, as Lam. 2. 2, 5. a metaphor, from ravenous beaſts, or great fiſhes, that ſwallow down the bodies of thoſe creatures, which they prey upon, Jer. 51. 44. See ver. 12.

V. 17. Therefore the Lord shall have no joy in their young men] The Lord will spare no sort of them; he will have no regard of sex, age, or State, ver. 9, 14. Deut. 32, 25. 2 Chr. 36. 17. Jer. 6. 11.

have no joy in] As ch. 17, 6. what comfort can I have in such? he will take no delight in them, as he is wont to do in his people, Psal. 147. 10, 11. ch. 62. 7. & 65. 19. and having no joy in them, taking no delight in them, will take no care of them, have no regard to them, his affect. on being disjoynted and disjoyned from them, Jer. 6. 8. or shall have no joy in them, by a phrase of diminution, for he will detest, and abhor them, as ch. 2. 6.

for shall have no joy] for, shall have much grief, Prov. 17. 21. and, if any love not the Lord Jesus, for, be maliciously affected towards him, or, out of meer malice let himself against him, 1 Cor. 16. 22. a place, much mistaken, and by too many misapplyed, to the wounding of many weak ones, and to, can I have comfort in them? No, they are as smoke in my nose, very troublesome to me. ch. 65. 5.

their young men] Heb. choyce young men, or, choyce ones; as chap. 40. 30. young men, as some, because such lovely, Ruth. 3. 11. as others, because such cheerful, Eccl. 11. 9. Lam. 5. 14. Zach. 9. 17. and God is wont to delight in the prosperity of his servants; as a father or master, to see those of his family cheerful and merry, when they do well, Jer. 35. 27. or, young men, & such young men; because such are the strength and stay of a State; and the goodly, and beautifull branches before spoken of: which God there threatned to cut off, and hew down, ver. 14.

neither shall have mercy on their fatherless and widows] I suppose it would more fitly be rendred, nor will have mercy, &c. and so before: as those of the branches, the strong ones; fo these of the rushes, the weak ones, ver. 14. He will have no compassion on any of them whatsoever, ch. 27. 11. such as these, being the most usual and eminent objects of pity and compassion, both with God and man, Deut. 16, 11, 14 & 24. 19, 20. Psal. 68. 7. & 82. 3. c. 10. 2. He that commands, and pleads pity for them; will himself have no pity on them; because they are all alike extreamly wicked. So chap. 1. 4. and 2. 6. 9.

because every one is an hipocrite, and an evil doer] They are all exceeding faulty, and corrupt in their carriage, both towards God and man.

every one] Heb. all of him, or, whole he; that is, the whole people, the whole body of them: as ver. 9. high and low, great and small, mighty and feeble ones: the excels of sin is general.

an hipocrite] So some of the Rabbines, one inwardly evil; and outwardly good: & the main, if not the whole stream of our translators, and Expositors, runs in this track; but it is not likely, that any profession of piety & true devotion, about which hipocrisie is most conversant, ch. 48. 1, 2. and 58. 2. Tim. 3. 5. should be so rife, among those that were generally idolaters, and worthipers of the calves and other idols, 2 King. 17. 7–12. the word doth properly signifie prophanesse; as the verb from whence it commeth, to pollute, or prophane, Num. 35. 33. Psal. 106. 38. chap. 24. 5. Jer. 3. 1, 2, 3, 9. & 23. 11. Mic. 4. 11. Dan. 11. 32. nor is it ever used otherwise. So would, therefore the noun epithet also be accordingly rendered, prophane, Job. 8. 13. & 13. 16. & 15. 34. & 17. 8. & 20. 8. & 27. 8. & 34. 30. & 36. 13. as also ch. 33. 14. and in this place: for there is no reason in any of these places, to force the word from his native notion, / cleer reason requiring it to be so rendred, Psal. 35. 16. and the noun substantive thence deduced, prophanesse, ch. 32. 6. as it is also rendred, Jer. 23. 15. And this being the genuine notion of the term used, it is here put for all abusive, and dishonorable carriage towards God, his Sacred Majesty, and holy rites, or ought consecrate unto him, and his service.

an evil doer] As ch. 1. 4. a race of evil doers, or, is doing evil, as making it their practice to do mischief and evil to others, Prov. 17. 4. Some would have it, a maker to do evil, one that not only is evil himself, but incites others thereunto, like Joram, 2 Chr. 21. 11. but I find not the word so used. If here comprehendeth all injurious and noxious dealings with, and carriages towards man; as the other, all pontumelious and irreligious demeanour towards God. The evil in either kind, is so universal, that the whole body of the people may seem to be, as one prophane person, as one evil doer, the manner of speech implyes as much.

and every mouth speaketh folly] Or, villany; as it is rendred, ch. 32. 6. & Jer. 29. 21. lyes, faith the Chaldee. But the word is of larger extent, and includes all vile and shameful wickednesses, Gen. 34. 7. 13. 31, Deut. 22. 21. it is taken from flowers, fruits, leaves, or branches of plants, or trees; that being fallen, shed; and withered, do not only grow unlefs, and of no worth: but do putrifie and rot, ch. 5. 24. & 14. 19. & 64. 16. such vile and rotten stuff, is all their talk. Eph. 4. 29.

for all this, his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still] As before, v. 12.

V. 18. For wickednesse burneth as the fire] Or, because wickednesse burneth as a fire. So some read it, as rendering a reason, why Gods anger is not yet pacified, but continueth still incensed against them; to wit, because they continue still in sin, and wickednesse groweth with them more and more, as a fire, that spreadeth, and ariseth higher and higher, as it meeteth with combustible matter. Others rather, For wickednesse shall burn as a fire, that is, your wickedness shal kindle such a fire among you, as shall consume and burn up all before it, as confuming what was said before, of the continuance of wrath. So ch. 24. 6.

wickednesse] By wickednesse, some seem to understand wicked ones, as the rod of wickedness, Psal. 125. 3. others, the punishment of wickedness, as Prov. 13. 6. wickedness overthrowes the sinner: and indeed, sin is oft used in Scripture for punishment, as Gen. 4. 13. Levit. 20. 17. but we need not go from the propriety of the word: wickedness is said to burn as fire; as the rust of their gold and silver, is said, to eat the flesh of covetous persons, and cruel Oppressors, as fire, Jam. 5. 3. because it kindleth Gods wrath upon them, that shall torment and consume them as fire, Num. 11. 1. 3. Psal. 37. 20. & 106. 18.

as fire] Grievous judgments, are commonly compared to fire, that wasteth, as we say, without mercy, Deut. 32. 22. Psal. 97. 3. chap. 10. 16.

it shall devour the briars and thorns] Or, it may be read and rendred, with reference to the former words, as fire which devoureth, &c. for the omission of the relative is very frequent, see ch. 10. 1. The dreadful wrath of God, procured by their wickedness, is here resembled by such a fire, as either by lightning from heaven, or by some negligence, or casualty, or other purpose, being kindled, in a great wood, or forrest of large extent; first takes hold of the under-woods, the low bushes, and shrubs: after that, leizeth on the great timber trees, where they grow thickest together, and having now surprized them, mounteth up aloft, and over-spreads all, with a thick cloud of smoke. So Psal. 83. 14. Ah. 10. 17, 18.

devour] Heb. eat up, as Psal. 56. 3. c. 26. 11. hence, a toung of fire. c. 5. 24.

briars and thornes] The under wood, the meaner and weaker sort, compared before to rushes, ver. 14. which in such invasions and calamities, as are here intima ted, do usually suffer first: briars and thorns, indeed, are wicked men compared to 2 Sam. 23. 6. ch. 7. 4. Ezek. 28. 24. and so some understand them here. But they are here taken, in another notion, as oppoled to the thicket after-mentioned. See ch. 10. 17.

and it shall kindle in the thickets of the forrest] Or, and kindleth, or burns upon the thickets, &c. that from the lower thrubs, gets up to the taller trees, especially, where they grow thick together, and their boughs are entangled one with another; and do the more readily therefore take fire one from another. The great ones, by such branches resembled, ver. 14. See chap. 10. 34. the judgment thus deciphered, will take hold of the flouteft, and loftieft of them, ver. 9.

and they shall mount up, like the lifting up of smoke] Or, so that they mount up, or, go rolling up, with a pillar of smoke. For he goes on in the comparison he began with, comparing their Country to a forrest fired, that nothing can, aloof off especially, be seen for smoke, or but smoke, mounting up from it, as Josh. 8. 20. 21. Judg. 20. 40. Gen. 19. 28.

and they] Or, so that they, to wit, the thickets: and, for, that, or, so that as Psal. 78. 7. Jer. 14. 19 shall mount up] Or, do mount up, or, they go rolling up. The word is no where else read; but it hath neer affinity, with a word, that signifies to wrestle, Gen. 32. 24, 25. whence, some take it, to signifie, a going up with rolling together, as the limbs, arms, and legs, of those that wrestle, are in a confused manner twifted together. Others, because a word, that signifies small dust, such as men, in wrestling raise, and were wont anciently made use of, comes from the same root, Deut. 28. 24. Exod. 9. 9. ch. 29. 5. Nah. 1. 3. render it, go to dust, or, fye up into dust. See ch. 5. 24. but the former fuits better with the Prophets comparison.

like the lifting up of smoke] So most read it, and the Hebrew Commenter observes a defect, of the fimillitudinary particle, which is not unusual, Psal. 11. 1. ch. 21. 8. but it needs not here; it is in the Hebrew, pride of smoke, as Psal. 89. 9. the pride of the Sea; where we say, the raging of the Sea, in which place it denotes, not barely a lifting up of the Sea water; but a lifting of it as with State, in great abundance, and with much force and might: fo pride of smoke, implyes not barely, a lifting up of smoke, a small pillar of smoke, afcending up from some tunnel of a chimnie, but such a large quantitie of it, as arising from some Town, or Forrest fired, as that mounts up amain, rolling to & fro, as it riseth, and over-spreading all the aye about and above the place, whence it riseth; so that it darkneth the skie, and prevails against the day-light; such a smoke, as rose from that bottomless pit, Rev. 9. 2. or from Sodom and Gomorrha and those Towns of the plain destroyed together with them, Gen. 19. 28. and it may well therefore be rendred, with a vaft pillar of smoke. See ver. 19.

V. 19. Through the wrath of the Lord of hosts is the land darkened] Or, shall the land be darkened. But the ftyle is prophetical, speaking of things future, as already in being. For he proceeds in purfuit of the calamitous condition, that should betide this people, together with the ground of it.

Through the wrath of the Lord] Incenfed by their wickednels, v. 18.

The land] Of Israel, the ten tribes. ver. 1, 8. ch. 8. 22.

darkened] The Chaldee rendereth it, desolated, or, as others read it, burnt up, as Joel 2. 3. but the Hebrew Doctors from the Arabick, expound it darkened, as we do: darkened: that is, over-spread, & over-whelmed with calamities and afflictions, as ch. 8. 22. & ver. 1. the effects of the fire, and smoke, mentioned, ver. 18. which he hath here an eye unto. For what divers Divines of note have here and the people ſhall be as fuel of the fire] Heb. as meat, for it; as ver. 9. the people of the land ſo darkened, ſhall be conſumed by that fire of Divine wrath and vengeance, before mentioned, ver. 18.

no man ſhall ſpare his brother] Or, they ſhall not ſpare one another. For ſo the Hebrew phraſe is very commonly uſed; without reſpect to kindred, alliance, or any other the like relations, Gen. 26. 31. Exod. 16. 15. Numb. 14. 4. Ezek. 47. 14. they ſhall, as men that are in the dark, and as it falleth out in a tumult, when an houſe or city is on fire, and all ſhift of ſmoke, fall foul one upon another; and as if they wanted enemies from without, fall out among themſelves at home; or plunder one another, prey one upon another, devour and conſume one another, Gal. 5. 15. See Jer. 13. 14. Yet there, the neareſt bonds of nature ſhould not reſtrain men from wronging any, or preying upon any, in thoſe civil combuſtions among themſelves, or, in the times of difficulty and diſtreſs otherwiſe. See ver. 19. The inteſtine broils here deſcribed, ſome ſuppoſe to have been in thoſe conſuſſions of the State, by the change of their Kings murthered ſucceſſively one by another. Shallum by Menahem, Pekajah by Pekah, and Pekah by Hothea. 2 King. 14. 16, 25, 30. Of the laſt whereof, it may be not improbable. Of the reſt it cannot be, becauſe they were before the time of this Prophecy, which was delivered in Pekah's reign, and began to take effect ſhortly after, not long before his death. See ch. 8. 4.

V. 20. And he ſhall ſnatch on the right hand, and be hungry; and he ſhall eat on the left hand, and they ſhall not be ſatisfied] They ſhall plunder and ſpoyl one another on every ſide; and yet never have enough; like men ſick of that diſeaſe, which they call the dogs-ſs deſire, who though they eat never ſo much, yet are no leſs hungry, then as if they had fed, but in a dream, ch. 29. 8. & 56. 11. Prov. 30. 15, 16. Howbeit, there want not, that expound it of extremity of famine, that ſhould be in the land. So that as it is ſaid of thoſe, in time of ſcarcity, they did eat, but were not ſatisfied, having not ſufficient to free them from hunger, Hag. 1. 5. ſo theſe perſons, with all that they could rap and rend from others, yet ſhould not get enough to anſwer natures neceſſity. But this ſeems beſide the ſenſe of the place.

And] Or, but: as ver. 10.

ſnatch] Heb. eat, or, eat away, or cut off; as ch. 53. 5. vend, or take away by force, as Hab. 3. 16. or, as ſome, know; becauſe of eating the ſpeech is.

on the right hand] right, and left; for this ſide, and that ſide; either ſide, or, any ſide, indifferently, Gen. 13. 9. Pſalm 91. 7. Prov. 4. 27.

hungry] Unſatisfied, in regard of their greedy deſire of more: they ſhall be in their rapines inſatiable, Eccleſ. 5. 10.

eat] Spoil, waſte, conſume, as we ſay, eat up one. So Jer. 50. 17.

Aſſur ate upon him, made a ſpoyl, and prey of him.

they ſhall not be ſatisfied] A change of the number, as ver. 13. because the former was ſpoken collectively.

they ſhall eat every man the fleſh of his own arm] That is, ſay ſome, for extream famine, they ſhall eat their own fleſh, as chap. 49. 26. But rather, as before, they ſhall prey upon thoſe that are neereſt unto them, and whom they have moſt need of, untill they have even conſumed them, The like in another kind. See Jer. 19. 9.

every man] Heb. man, only, for, each one, or every one: as ch. 14. 18.

eat the fleſh] Devour the ſubſtance, conſume their means, as Mic. 3. 3. they eat the fleſh of my people.

his own arm] His brethren, or neer kindred: as ver. 19. See Jer. 19. 9. brethren, as arms, that belong to, and ſpread out from the body; or, arms, thoſe, that might be means of ſtrength, and ſupport unto them; a mans ſtrength lying moſt in his arms: So an arm of fleſh, 2 Chr. 32. 8. and, that makes fleſh his arm, Jer. 17. 5. But the former ſeems moſt probable.

V. 21. Manaſſeh Ephraim; and Ephraim Manaſſeh] The ſpeech being deficient, muſt be ſupplyed from the former. Manaſſeh ſhall eat, or devour Ephraim, and Ephraim ſhall eat, or devour Manaſſeh. The poſterity of theſe two, though brethren, the ſons of Joſeph, Gen. 41. 51, 52. yet ſhall one help to ſpoil and conſume another, being divided into Factions among themſelves, either ſtanding ſome for one head, and ſome for another; (as it falleth out uſually, when by treachery, or other evil courſes, thoſe aſpire to a crown, that have no right thereunto, 1 King. 16. 21, 22. and ſuch an one was Hoſhea, who ſlew, and ſucceeded Pekah, 2 King. 15. 30.) or, ſome complying with the enemy, whom others oppoſe. See ch. 8. 6.

and they together ſhall be againſt Judah] Or, as ſome read it; though they together be againſt Judah; or, though both of them riſe up together againſt Judah: whoſe brethren alſo they were, Gen. 49. 8. the word, riſe up, is ſupplyed: as chap. 3. 5. though they were divided among themſelves, yet ready enough to combine together againſt Judah; as thoſe, that were otherwiſe at enmity among themſelves, againſt Chriſt and his Church, Pſal. 2. 2. & 83. 5–8. chap. 7. 2, 5. Luk. 23. 7, 8, 11, 12. Act. 4. 27.

for all this, his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] As before, ch. 5. 25. ver. 12. 17.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. V*Vo unto them that decree unrighteous decrees*, &c.] The firſt four verſes of this chapter would have been joyned to the former, as ſome report, that anciently they were. For they contain matter concerning the houſe of Iſrael, or the ten Tribes: and deliver in a charge, with a denunciation annexed unto it, againſt them, wherein they are attainted of oppreſſion, and wrong, in matter of judicature, as one of the reigning, and crying ſins among them; for which Gods hand was, and would ſtill be ſo heavy upon them. Yet ſome ſuppoſe them to concern the kingdome of Judah, which to me ſeems not ſo probable.

woe unto them] Some of the Jewiſh Commenters, and of ours alſo, read the words, as ſpoken by way of compellation: Ho they that, &c. (Ho they, for, O you: as o he, for, O thou, Job 18. 4.) and ſo carry it not to thoſe words, ver. 3. what will ye do? the Syntax, ſo conceived, is very like that in Job. See ver. 5. & ch. 18. 1.

that decree] Or, draw up. For the word ſignifies properly, to portraye, Ezek. 4. 1. or paint, Ezek. 23. 14. or, engraver, ch. 22. 16. or, write, ch. 30. 8. or, delineate, circumſcribe, as with a compaſs; ſet, or limit out, as by line and level, Prov. 8. 27, 29. hence it is tranſlated to matter of judicature, Prov. 8. 15. and ſome tranſlate it here, preſcribe; becauſe, judiciary ſentences, are not only wont to be drawn up and deſcribed, or engrofſed, but to preſcribe alſo what men are to do, or to endure; and circumſcribe them, or keep them within compaſs. The change therefore is againſt ſuch wicked Rulers and Judges, (for to thoſe in authority is this tickle given, in regard of their legislative, or ſentencing power, Gen. 49. 10. Numb. 21. 18. Judg. 5. 9.) as enact injurious and cruel decrees, or ordinances; or deliver dooms and ſentence of that nature, to the grievous affliction and vexation of poor people, Pſal. 58. 1, 2.

unrighteous decrees] Heb. decrees of iniquity, or, wrong; as Pſal. 36. 12. Or, of vexation, or, affliction; as Job 5. 6. & 15. 35. chap. 58. 9. & 59. 4. Such as wrongfully vex, moleſt, and afflict.

and that write grievousneſs, which they have preſcribed] Or, and to the writers, that write grievous things. Or, unto thoſe, that writing write ſuch things: or, and to thoſe, that make to be written grievous things which they have preſcribed; that is, of their own preſcription. Or laſtly, to thoſe that write grievous things, which they, that is, the Judges have preſcribed, or appointed to be written. For, all theſe waies is this clauſe rendred.

and that write] Theſe, moſt Interpreters, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian, diſtinguiſh from the former, according to thoſe divers readings, before ſpecified. And ſome would have them to be the Scribes, or Regiſters, ſuch under-officers, as fate, ſay they, at the Judges feet; (Gen. 49. 10. though that place, neither imports any ſuch thing, nor would make for them, if it did) drew up their ſentences, and entred them, Ier. 8. 8. Others, take them to be ſuch Scribes and Lawyers, as expounded the law to the people; or to thoſe in authority, when called upon for their advice, Matthew 2. 4. Luk. 11. 44—46. But it ſeems to me, to be no other, then a repetition of the former; in terms exactly way equivalent, the one to the other: if ſave, that a little more emphaſis may be in this latter branch: as if he had ſaid, that do not enact them only, but enter them; cauſe he had ſaid, that they ſhould be recorded; and ſuch they ſhould be entred, that they may not be reverſed; but duely, and ſtrictly executed. Dan. 6. 8, 9.

grievousneſs] That is, decrees, or acts of grievance; as juſtice, for decrees, or acts of juſtice; juſt ones, Prov. 8. 15. and ſo here grievance, for grievous ones. This word, and the former, as they are oft joyned together, Numb. 23. 21. Job 4. 8. & 5. 6. & 15. 35. Pſ. 7. 14. & 10. 7. & 55. 10. & 90. 9. ch. 59. 4. Hab. 1. 3, 13. ſo they are in effect and ſubſtance, the ſame. The Pſalmiſts words, rightly rendered, afford a pregnant parallel of this place. Pſ. 94. 20. Shall the judgment ſeat of vexations, have fellowſhip with thee? or, he that frames grievance, inſtead of an ordinance.

which they have preſcribed] The deſect of the relative is, in Hebrew, very frequent, ver. 3. Gen. 39. 4. Exod. 13. 8. Pſal. 71. 18. ch. 42. 5. Yet I ſuppoſe, there is no neceſſity of ſupplying it here. Since that the words may be rendred well enough, as was, among the reſt, above hinted, and that writing, write grievous decrees. That are not affraid, or aſhamed to cauſe their cruel and injurious decrees to be entred, that they may remain, as a publick monument of their injuſtice and oppreſſion, upon record. There is a double emphaſis, both in the doubling of the middle letter, (in which form the verb is no where elſe found) and in the doubling of the word,

V. 2. To turn away the needy from judgment] Some read the words, To pervert the judgment ſeat, or the judgment of the needy. And ſome-To pervert the judgment ſeat, or the judgment of the needy. And ſome-what the like phraſe of ſpeech is found, Prov. 17. 23. where it is ſaid, that a wicked man draws a bribe out of his boſom, to pervert the way of judgment. And other places of the ſame nature might be produced; whereof, ſee on chap. 29. 21. Howbeit, ſince that concerned; whereof, ſee on chap. 29. 21. Howbeit, ſince that concerning the word that they here render judgment-ſeat, or judgment no other place yet appeareth, where it is ſo uſed, nor any ſuch like form produced; I leave it to the conſideration and judgment of the learned. Others yield it, To make to decline the needy from judgment. And indeed, the word signifies, in its first form, to decline or turn aside, used of Balaams asse, Num. 22. 23. and applyed to matter of judicature, Exod. 23. 2. In which sense, to to make to decline, or turn aside used of Balaams casting his ass to decline, or turn aside, back again, in the same place. So that to turn aside the needy from judgment, or from their suit, or cause, (for that the word primarily signifies, Jer. 30. 13.) is to stop them from proceeding in their cause, or bringing it to any good issue; as we use to say, to put them beside it. The righteous, saith Solomon, knows (the meaning is not, takes notice of, or considereth the case or condition; as Psal. 31. 7. & 41. 1. but hears, takes cognizance of the cause, or suit of the needy, (the very words, here used,) but the wicked knows it not. He refuseth to give them hearing, or to take cognizance of their cause; ch. r. 23. Which if it be a wicked part in a Judg, how much more, upon hearing, to turn them away without relief; or, by an unjust doom, to force them from their right, as it is in the next branch more fully expressed. How beit it is well observed, by some, that the words may well be rendered, not, To turn aside, &c. as denoting the end of that they were said to do, v. 1. but in turning aside. And so in the next branch In taking away: as importing the manner how, and matter wherein, the vexation and grievance, before mentioned, was committed, and did consist. See of the like use of this form, c. 38. Deut. 22. 21. & 28. 63. 1 Sam. 12. 17.

the needy Heb. the attenuated, or thin ones. See ch. 17. 4. and to take away the right from the poor of my people.] The same thing, in effect, repeated in other termes; as the manner of our Prophet is, but with some emphasis added to it.

take away] The word signifies, to snatch, pull, or tear away, by force As a mans cattle, or chattles are by an hostile hand, Deut. 28. 31. Or the flesh, or skin of a beast is torn away, or pulled off, by Beasts, or Butcher. Mic. 3. 2.

the right Heb. judgment. That which of right, should, by judgment, have been affigned them. So Pf. 9. 4.

from the poor] The word properly signifies afflicted, and is distinguished from poor, Pf. 35. 10. & 94. 21.

of my people] Hence, some would infer, that this prophecy should not concern Israel, but Judah, because the prophet teameth them, his people. But the Prophet seems to speak, rather here in Gods person, then in his own, as ch. 3, 12, 15. and God had his people, no doubt, as well in Israel, as in Iudah. 1 King. 19. 18. Nor doth God forbear, notwithstanding their revolt from him, which made them desperately, not to be deemed his people, Hos. 1. 9. Yet, in regard of his right of interest in them, their former profession, and present duty, to style them still his people, Hos. 4. 6, 12.

that widows may be a prey, and that they may rob the fatherless] He shews here, who the needy, and poor, or thin, and afflicted ones were, that he spake of before as oppressed by them, in matters of judicature; the widows, and the fatherless. Fit objects, rather of mercy, ordinarily, in regard of their misery, and want of help, and whom God, therefore, had given them special charge to see righted and relieved when they should be wronged and oppressed, by others. See ch. 1. 17, 23.

widows] That is, the houses, lands, and livelyhood of such.

their prey] Esteeming what they strip them of, as lawful purchase, like prey taken from an enemy in War, Ezek. 38. 12. chap. 49, 44.

and that] A defect of the particle, intimating the end. See ch. 5. 11. & 7. 25.

rob] Make a spoil and prey of them; a warlike tearm, as the former; both joyned together, chap. 8. 1, 3. verf. 6. The Assyrian was to do to them, what they did to their own people, chap. 8. 4.

V. 3. And what will ye do? &c.] Their wickedness went before; their punishment now follows. Those that read the first words of the chapter, as uttered, in way of compellation, render these, Now what will ye do? &c. Of which use of the copulative, see on chapter. 8. 1.

what will ye do in the day of visitation?] How think ye to escape the the just judgment of God? as Matth. 23, 33. Rom. 2. 3. Or, what course will ye take, when he comes to reckon with you? as Job 31. 14, 23.

day of visitation] Visitation, and day of visitation, is twofold; in mercy, or offers of mercy, Luk. 1. 6. Luk. 1. 68. & 19. 44. And in wrath and judgment, Jer. 10. 15. & 11. 23. Ezek. 10. 1. Hos. 9. 7. the latter is here meant, and therefore follows.

and in the desolation, which shall come from far] Which shall be effected, by a people that comes from a country, far remote: That is, by the Assyrian, ch. 7. 17. & 8. 7. & 9. 11. v. 5, 6. whole countrey far from the land of Israel. c. 5. 26. & 7. 18. a defect of the relative; as v. 1 ch. 9. 18 to whom will ye flye for help?] Ye shall be more helpless, then those are, that in vain seek for help and relief, unto you. They have God to help them, Pf. 9. 9. & 10. 14. & 68. 5. but none shall be able to help you, again st him, Hos. 7. 13. & 7. 11.

and where will ye leave your glory] Where will ye find any place of security; where you may with safety, dispose of your wealth, and your bravery, wherein ye now so much glory, chap. 28. 1. Amos. 6. 13. But neither shall ye know then, where to bestow it, nor shall it be able to stand you in any stead, Prov. 11. 4. Ezek. 7. 19. Jer. 22. 23. See chap. 15. 7. His exposition is scarce worth the mentioning, who would have the words rendred, where will you quarter your vaunting souldiers then? and requires the former passages to be underflood, not of judiciary abuses; but of wrongs done by enquartering of louldiers, and their Commanders; the sense of those calamities that thence accrued to his own countreymen, and many, at present, are sensible of with us; did so much transport him, that he is so bold, as confidently to avouch, that they do all wrest the text besides its genuine sense, who interpret it otherwise. Of whom, notwithstanding, I must needs acknowledg, my self one, till I see better ground for his exposition thereof, then I yet do.

V. 4. Without me they shall bowe down under the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain.] This passage hath undergone many interpretations; whith, in part, arise from an ambiguity in the first word of the verse: That some suppose to include in it a pronoun, as our verfio renders it, and as sometime it doth; as Hos. 13. 4. And these two waies expound it. 1 Some, But for me; that is, If I did not support them, they would come to extream misery, either be murthered, or captived. Others, Without me, that is, because they have left me, and I have withdrawn my self from them, they will come into ruine, Hos. 5. 6. & 7. 13. Or, without me; that is, any fault of mine, it is, that those evils befal them; their affliction is of themselves, Hos. 13. 9. But the greater part of Interpreters, both Jewish and Christian, condeive the negative, or exceptive particle, to be simple and single, without the pronoun affixed to it, and so indeed it is most frequently used: And herein they agree but in exposition are much divided. To pass by the rest, I and to point at some one, or two; what are deemed to carry more probability with them, then the rest. Some would have it to be in nature of an oath; as if God did, in a defective kind of speech, declare, that no other way, or course, should serve the turn with them, but to be either bound, or slain. But I find not any oath in Scripture, conceived in the form, here used. Others render the words, But that ye bow down below the bound, and fall below the slain: That is, say they, there will be no way for you to save your selves, save by the most base submission to the enemy, that can be imagined, described here in an hyperbolical speech, of bowing lower then men in bonds, and falling lower then the dead; not unlike that, ch. 57. 9. Thou didst debase thy self, even unto hell: which yet, some other, to allay, render it, As if they were bound, as if they were dead.) And they understand it of Ezekiahs submiss seeking to Sennacherib by his messengers, 2 King. 18. 14. But we need have no recourse to such rank excesses, where the letter will endure a familiar sense. Nor doth the text seem to be so fitly applyed. Others therefore, retaining the same reading, understand it, not of any means of escape, or attempts to save themselves, but that there will be nothing for them to do, or to endure; but as high and great as they now are, to stoop under their fellow-prisoners, thrust, and crowded together, and to ly under slain, heaped, and piled one upon another. Lastly, the ancient Greek, and old Latine, referring it to the two first branches of the verse, next before-going, the former whereof, (some here repeat) under the words, That ye may not be bowed under bonds, or fall among the slain: As if it were said, What will ye do thence to whom will ye flee for help? &c. That ye may not be either taken prisoners, or put to the sword? As much as to say, ye shall by no shift of your own, or help from others, be able to escape, either the one or the other. And this to me seems to be the plainest sense of the place, and most agreeable to the tenour of the context. Only, for under bonds, would rather be among the bound, or prisoners, as after among the slain. or, to come more neerly, and exactly home to the proper sense of the particle, in the place of the bound, in the place of the slain, as, Am I in place of God? Gen. 30. 2. & 50. 19. See v. 16.

they shall bow down] Heb. he shall bow down. Indefinitely, used for one, or any one, or each one of them. bow down. as ch. 2. 20. & 6. 2.

prisoners] Heb. prisoner. Collectively, as chap. 24. 22; & 42. 7 and] Or, or; As Exod. 21. 15. Some of them shall be carried away captive, some killed.

still] To the ground; as the blood, and bodies of men are wont to do, 1 Sam. 26. 20. & 31. 8. 2. Sam. 1. 19, 25. & 3. 34, 38. Judg. 3. 25.

slain] By the enemy.

For all this, his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still! The close of the denunciation against Israel begun ch. 9. 8. and continued hitherto; where it is shut up with a commination of further wrath, again repeated. Of which, see before, on ch. 9. 25. & 9. 12.

V. 5, 6 O Assyrian! Because the Assyrian king, had been formerly declared, to be the instrument that God would use, as well for the scourging of Judah, chap. 7. 17. 20, as for the sweeping away of Israel, ch. 9. 11. 14. God, therefore, by the Prophet, for the support and comfort of his faithful ones, those of Judah especially, inserts here a denunciation of destruction to befal that king, when God had done his work by him, and a gracious promise of deliverance of his people from him, and from those evils, that either by him they had suffained; or were likely further to sustain.

O Assyrian!] Or, Ho Assyrian; as spoken by way of compellation, ch. 55. 1. as calling upon him, to come, and take his commission; and undertake his charge, v. 2. And so most of the Jewish Commenters. Others, and so some of them, Ah, or, Alas, as delivered in way of commiseration. God, thereby, expressing his grief for those calamities, that, that by the Assyrian, were to be inflicted on his people; ch. 1. 4. 5, 24. Others, by way of denunciation; as v. 1. Woe to the Assyrian. See ch. 18. 1.

Assyrian] Heb. Ashur. The name of Shems second son, Gen. 10. 22. from him was so named, the country he lived in, Gen. 2. 9. 11. and his issue, Psal. 83. 8. It is here put for the king of that people, and countreyand more especially for Sennacherib, together with his forces: as v. 24. Ezek. 31. 3.

the rod of mine anger] Or, my rod of anger. The rod, or instrument that God is wont to make use of, for the chastizing, and punishing of those with whom he is angry, ch. 30. 31. for his rod of wrath, or, wrathful rod, Lam. 3. 1.

and the staff in their hand, is mine indignation] That is, as some expound it, all the power they have to smite, and afflict, is mine indignation, where with they come armed. Staff, for power, as Psal. 110. 2. ch. 14. 5. Others read it, though, or albeit the staff in their hand be mine indignation. The copulative, for the disceretive, as Hos. 5. 2. That is, albeit I make use of him, yet we be to him, verf. 12. Others again. For the staff, which is in their hand, is my wrath; as rendering a reason of the former branch, the copulative, for the causative: as Pf. 60. 11. Our two ancient versions seem to have come neerest the right. They render the whole verse thus, O Athur, which art, or wo all to Athur, which is the staff of my wrath; and in whose hand is the rod of my indignation, or my punishment. Which version is also backed with the authority of some of the Jewish writers, and with a small fupply, will thus, I suppose, exactly come home to the original, wo to the Assyrian, who is the rod of mine anger, or my rod of anger: and the staff in their hand, (that is, in the hand of him, and his forces) is mine indignation, or my staff of indignation. The relative, the staff of mine indignation, or my staff of indignation. The relative, is wanting, as ver. 1. the pronoun put for the verb substantive; as ch. 9. 15. the word staff is supplyed, in the latter member, as is usual in the like form, Dan. 4. 33. his hairs were grown like eagles] for feathers of eagles] and his nails, like birds; that is, as nails, or claws for the same word, in Hebrew, signifies either feet or birds. See the like also, ver. 10. I shall add what one of the Jewish writers hath, because I finde it followed, and approved by some of ours. He thus renders it, The staff that is sent, or that is to be sent (supplyed from, v. 6.) into their place, that is, into the land of the Israelites in mine indignation. For it is true that the word signifying an hand, is in Hebrew, sometime used for a place, Deut. 23. 12. Jer. 6. 3. but that seems not to have place here. The same thing is related again in the latter branch, that was mentioned in the former; as ver. 1. but with some aggravation. For the staff seems an heavier, and sorer instrument of correction then a rod, which may be but a twig: And indignation a degree above anger, ch. 30. 30. Mal. 1. 4. There is a staff to slay, Ezek. ch. 3. 1. and a staff to strike with, Numb. 22. 27. and this latter, is the staff here alluded to. See ch. 9. 4.

V. 6. I will send him] The commission, wherewith God would furnish the Assyrian king to go up, and proceed with, against his own people for their sins and excesses. Not that God did intimate any such matter unto him; (albeit he pretended as much, ch. 36. 10.) but that God would by his secret, and unsearchable providence, so dispose things, that he should, though upon other grounds, and for other ends, invade that people, ver. 7. So 2. King. 17. 2. & 24. 2. 2. Chr. 33. 11. & 36. 17.

against an hypocritical nation] Or, rather, a prophane nation, or, a polluted people, See ch. 9. 17.

and against the people of my wrath] Which, by their wickedneffe, are become liable to wrath, and with whom, for the same, I am highly displeased, ch. 47. 6. & 57. 17.

will I give him a charge] By a secret instinct; and an unseen, yea, unperceived, but efficacious dispofal, Ier. 34. 22. & 49. 14. & 50. 21. 2 Sam. 16. 10.

to take the spoyl, and to take the prey] Heb. to spoyl the spoyl, and prey on the prey; as Ezek. 38. 12. that is, to spoyl, and plunder to the purpose. For such repetitions, either in the same term, or, in words of the same notion, are wont to amplifie, and exaggerate; as Psal. 76. 5. they slept their sleep; that is, were cast into a deep sleep; and 1 King. 1. 40. they rejoyced with great joy, that is, exceeding great joy: and Jer. 33. 11. the voyce of joy, and the voyce of gladness that is, of much rejoycing. See ver. 16. And we have here an interpretation of the name, given to the Prophets son, Maher-shalal-hash-baz, ch. 8. 3. and a just retaliation of judgment, on those wicked wretches reproved, and threatned before, ver. 2. a spoyling of them by strangers, who had spoyled their own brethren. The spoyls that they had taken, together with the rest of their substance, being surprized, and carried away by the enemy; and that fulfilled, that is afterward threatned, to those also, that now spoyl them; woe to thee, that spoylest, when thou wast not spoyled; when thou ceasest to spoyl, (being interrupted by the enemy) thou shalt then be spoyled thy self, ch. 33. 1.

and to tread them down like mire in the street] Heb. to lay them (to wit, the people before mentioned) as the mire, or, dirt of the streets, So Psal. 18. 42. ch. 41. 25. Mic. 7. 10. not to make havock of their goods only, but to seize on their persons, and to use them in most cruel and despightful manner; to beat them down, and trample on them, and even batter them to pieces, ch. 18. 3. 18. 2 King. 9. 33. Dan. 7. 7. & 8. 7. which barborous cruelty, though God approved not in them; yet was he pleased to make use of, for the punishing of this prophane and wicked people, Lam. 3. 34-39.

V. 7. Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart thinke so] He intendeth nothing less, whatsoever he pretend. ch. 36. 7, 15. then the doing of my work, and the fulfilling of my will.

Howbeit] Or, Yet. Heb. And: as v. 4. Hosh. 1. 10.

meaneth not] Heb. imagineth not. For is finiheth properly, to conceive an image, fimilitud, or likenesh of a thing in the imaginative faculty: A term, taken from artifters, painters, sinners, gravers, or builders, that are wont to draw models of those works, that they intend to shew their skill in. See ch. 14. 24. and chap. 46. 18. 25.

neither doth, &c.] The same thing conceived, and expressed in other terms.

but it is in his heart to destroy, and cut off nations, not a few!] His intent and purpose is, onely, to satiate his cruel, odemous, and ambitious desires, by conquest of Countries, and making havock of people: Which yet God is said to use off by him, as by a tool.

it is in his heart] That is, it is in his purpose: as 1 Sam. 13. 1. 1 Chr. 28. 2.

V. 8. For he saith] In his heart, or, to his people, fay the Rabbines; as Lamech to his wives, Gen. 4. 23. but the former rather; he thinks with himself: as, the fool saith in his heart, Pfal. 14. 1. and, I said in my prosperity, Pf. 30. 6. For, to God the heart is known, and the thought of it he hears, Matth. 9. 3. 4. Heb. 4. 12. 13.

Are not my Princes altogether Kings?] A vaunting speech, attributed to the Assyrian King, expressing his inward insolency, arrogancy, and impiety, much of it in effect related again, as delivered from Sennacherib, by his Messengers, to Ezekiah, ch. 36. 9. 13, 18—20. & 37. 10, 13, 24, 25. whereby it appears, that Sennacherib and the Invasion made by him, into the land of Judah, even unto Jerusalem, is here principally pointed at, chap. 36. 1, 2. His meaning in this branch seems to be, that they held now of him, as their Soveraign; and served under him, as their Commander, who had before been absolute Kings; but having been subdued by him, were now but as his Princes. And he might well be termed a King of Kings as Nebuchadnezzar is stiled, Ezek. 26. 7. Dan. 2. 37. or that his Princes and Favourites, were for place, power, and authority, as good, and as great, as Kings; so Rabshakeh calls them, as the meaneft of those, that took charge under him, being Compeers with Ezekiah, ch. 36. 9. who as an every word, therefore, in mention of him, names him, The great King, ch. 36. 4. 13.

Is not Calno as Carchemish?] Have not I subdued all these Kingdoms, and places, as well one, as another.

Calno] Called Calneh, Gen. 10. 10. & Amos. 6. 2. one of Nimrods great Cities. Some have supposed it to be the same with Calnisium, a city mentioned by Ammiane, l. 23. situate upon Euphrates; but that seems to have been by a flip of some Scribes pen, Callinisium, for Callicinum, as in other Authours it is found termed. It is rather therefore deemed to have been that, which was in latter times termed, Ctesiphon, fometime the head city of the Parthian Kingdom, situate upon Tigris the region thereabout from the ancient name of it, being commonly called Chalonitis, Strabo. l. 11. and 16. and Plinie, l. 6. ch. 26. 27.

Carchemish?] Of it, see 2 Chr. 39. 20. a City situate upon Euphrates, Jer. 46. 2. called in latter times, Cercusium.

is not Hamath?] This name hath its Amathus in Arabia, mentioned by Herodotus, l. 2. & 3. But others, rather, take it for a Town, belonging to Syria, and situate not far from some of the others, here mentioned; all neer upon Euphrates, 1 Chr. 18. 3, 9. thence the Hamathites, deriving their pedigree from Canaan, Gen. 10, 18. 1 Chr. 1. 16. It is mentioned, as a boundarie of the Land of promise, Numb. 34. 8. Josh. 13. 5. 1 King. 8. 65. 1 Chr. 13. 5. and as Joseph the Jew wrieteth in his Antiquities, l. 1. c. 7. it retained this name with the Natives unto his times; though by the Greeks and Macedonians, termed Epiphania, from Antiochus Epiphanes, the re-edifier of it. See ch. 63. 19.

as Arpad] Of this place, are the Arvadites supposed to have been; joyned with the Amathites, both of the posterity of Cham and Canaan, Gen. 10. 18. called by Ptolomy Aradites, and placed in Syria: See ch. 36. 19. & 37. 13. It is by Joseph the Jew, te. med Arphas; by Isidore, Arfa, and in the Register of the Romane Empire, Arefa.

is not Samaria as Damascus?] Of these, see chap. 7. 8, 9. & 8. 4.

V. 10. As my hand hath found the Kingdoms of the idols!] He promiseth himself conquest of Judah and Jerusalem, in spight of God himself, from the success that he had attained against other kingdoms, cities, and countries, maugre all the power of their tutelar gods, ch. 36 15. 20. & 37. 10. 12.

my hand] My power, my might; as Deut. 8. 17. Judg. 7. 2, See ver. 13.

hath found] Hath reached, gotten, taken, subdued; as Levit. 12. 8. and 14. 21. Numb. 32. 23. Prov. 1. 13. So v. 14.

idols] Heb. idol, collectively. See chap. 2. 18. So he accounteth the gods that other Kingdoms and Nations worshipped, because they were not able to protect their people against him and his forces, ch. 46. 7.

and whose graven images] Heb. and their graven images, for and those, whose graven images. A defect of the antecedent: as Ruth, 1. 16.

2.16.1 7.2. Chr.1.4.or,though their graven images,and,for,though, as Gen.8.21.See on v.5.

did excell them of Jerusalem and Samaria]Heb.were before Jerusalem,and Samaria,before,for,better,more excellent;as Prov.22.1.Eccl. 7.1.Heb.12.24. Jerusalem,and Samaria, for, the idols of Jerusalem, and Samaria. Of which manner of defective speech, see on v. 5. Thus this blasphemous boast, not onely ranketh and rangeth God among idols;as v.11.2 Chr.32.19. but preferreth the base idols of other people before him, who is the only true God, Ier.10.33.--7,8--10.

V.11.Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria, and her idols;so do to Jerusalem,and her idols?]Or, *May I not?*I will assuredly do it:or, who can hinder me from doing it? why should I not do the one, as well as the other? Of the succes's of his predecessors Tiglath-Pileser,and Shalman.eser,against Samaria,see 2 King.15.19.& 17.5.6. for what was done by them, he takes to himself, as succeeding them in their power,and having no less then they had. All he esteems idols,in respect of his god Mithras, the Sun,whom the Assyrians worshipped.

her idols]The latter term here used,comes of a word,that signifies to put to pain,and grief. Whence Jabez had his name,1 Chron.4.9. and idols,or false gods, are deservedly so called; not only because God is vexed,and grieved by them, with those that leave him,to adore them,and adhere to them,Psal.78.58.ch 63.10.Ezek.6.9. but also, because they put those that serve them, and trust in them, to much pain,but can do them no good, Ps.16.4. so he made account God would do with Jerusalem,ch.36.12.15. but the issue proved otherwise,ch.37.35, 36. and he speaks of God,as if he were the God of that Nation alone,who in power, and right,is God, and Lord of the whole world,Ps.47.2,7,8.

V.12.Wherefore it shall come to pass,that]Heb. And it shall be.as c. 3.24.

wherefore]Heb, And. The copulative for the illative;as ch.3.17.&9. 11. as connecting together his pride, and his fall;as the cause, and effect,the one of the other, Prov.11.2.& 16.18.&18.12.or.But, the copularive for the adversative;as Psal.64.7. as crossing his presumptuous expectation,which prediction of a sad and unexpected issue: or,For,as some;the copulative for the causative:as ch.9.13.as having reference to vers.1.and rendering a reason,to the two there denounced against Assur.

when the Lord hath performed his whole work upon Mount Sion] When he hath sufficiently chastised his own people,(for with them, he usually beginneth,Jer.15.18.1 Pet.4.17.)he will proceed to reckon with him,and burn the rod,wherewith he chastised them,Jer.30. 23,6.21,23.Lam.3.17.& 4.21.

the Lord hath]For, I have.For is is the Lord that speaks it, the noun for the pronoun:as chap.2.1.with chap.6.1.chap.7.3. 2 Tim.1. 18.

performed]Heb perfected, or,finished, L am. 1. 17. Zach. 4. ver. 9.

his whole work] All that he intends to do, for the chastising of his people,ch.28.21.& 40.2.

upon Mount Sion,and on Jerusalem]As ch.1.27.in the strait siege of her by Sennacheribs forces for some time, and the spoyl made of the Country round about her,ch.36,1.2.&37.1.

I will punish the fruit of the stout heart of the King of Assyria] I will punish him,for this his impious, and presumptuous boasting, and his attempts against my people,chap.37.33, 29.

punish]Heb.visit upon them. Punish him for them: as Exod. 20.5. ch.2.6.14.Jer.50.18.the phrase implyeth,that God neither chastiseth nor punisheth;but with due consideration,and full cognisance of the crime, or faule, for which he doth either, Gen. 11.5.& 18.21.and would have men to do the like,Deut.13.14.

the fruit of the heart]For, from the heart, illieth, what comes forth at the mouth,Matth.12.34.35.& 15.18,19.See ch.59.13.

stout heart]Heb.greatnesse of heart,ch.9.9.

King]Sennacherib,ch.36.1. & 37.36--38.

and the glory of his high look]Heb. the bravery, (ch.3.18.that is, the pride,because bravery both breeds, and bewrays pride)of the loftinesse of his eyes,wherein pride also appears,ch.2.11,12.

V.13.For he saith]Heb.Because he hath said.

by the strength of my hand]See v. 10.

I have done it]A defect of the pronoun:as ch.5.29.

and by my wisdome]What God had done by him, and his Antecessors,as his instruments,ch.37.26.27, that, he arrogates to himself, and ascribes to his own power,and policy. That, which every mans heart is by nature, over-prone to, Deut. 8.17. Amos 6.13.Hab.1. 16.

for I am prudent]Heb, I understanding. I am one of wisdome,and understanding.(Gen. 41.33.) as well as of power, able to dispose mine affairs,to the best advantage for my self. See the like vaunting of wildome,chap.19.11. Jer. 8. 8. but especially, Ezek. 28. 3.

and I have removed the bounds of the people]and,or,therefore;as ch.9 11 ver. 12. By my prudent, and politick carriage,and managing of my designs, I have enlarged my dominions, and took away those bounds, wherewith other kingdoms and territories were before listed and limited, as therewith severed one from another;and excluding others from encroaching and entring in,upon them,Act.17.26. they are said to remove the bound,that encroacheth upon the possessions of others, Prov.22.28.Hos.5.10.

and have robbed their treasures]As the enlargment of his territories, by the subduing of other Countries, and adjoyning them,to his own; so the increase of his wealth, by finding out, and making seizure of their hidden treasures, reserved for future uses, he ascribes as well to his policy, as his power. So Ezek. 38. 4, 5.

robbed]So is the word rendred,1 Sam. 23.1.but in thisplace it would rather, be some other-ways rendered ; because the Assyrian king is personared, as relating his own acts, and atchievements : I have seized,or spoyled,or preyed upon, made a spoyl of their treasures. So it is rendered,Judg.2. 14.Spoylers,that spoyled them : and chap. 17. 14. that spoyl us : and Hos. 13. 15. he shall spoyl the treasures.

treasures]Heb.preparations, or prepared things. For the word it comes of, signifies to prepare, and the Hebrews use the feminine, commonly for the neuter: and it imports therefore such matters of special use and worth,as are wont to be treasured up and reserved against times of necessary use and employment, such as the bidden treasures,that God promised,to make Cyrus master of,chap.45.3.But because the word is no where else found in this form;and the Jewish Criticks, the Masorets, observe some misreading, or mis-writing rather,in one letter of it;and yet whether letter we take, the sense will be the same; one that taketh upon him to be a great Critick, would instead of this femininé, substiture a masculine form, that signifieth,as he saith,rams, or bel-weathers; but indeed,rather,great hegoats,Jer.50.8.distinguished from rams,as oft, Num.7.so Jer.51.40. put here,saith he, for Princes and Potentates: and so oft-times they are,chap.34.6.Zach. 10.3. and,again,because one letter in the other word rendered commonly,robbing, or spoyling,is of an ambiguous found;like that of Sibboleth,and Shibboleth,Judg.12.6.according to the pointing of it,nor is the word read else-where with that ambiguous character,he takes occasion thereby,to solicite the reading, and to bring him home, by aspiring the second letter, to another word much more ambiguous, used Ezek.39.2. which becaule some render there perswade, he would have this here also so to signifie;& so thisbranch of the Assyrians speech, to have reference to his policy,as the next to his power, as if he had said,by my wiles I have perswaded great Potentates to yeeld to me ; and by my might , I have pulled them down from their Thrones. But nor to insist on the improbability of the sense here intended, as coming from the mouth of one that stood so much upon his valour and power ; and whose prudence and policy, would seem to look another way : it is overmuch boldness thus to mangle the text, and to force in such senses,as the words will not admit.

and I have put down the inhabitants]put down,or,pulled,or,thrown down, Heb. made to descend, or, come down:Ier.49.16.Obad.4. or,as a learned man of late,stricken down: as beasts, the greater fort of them,especially,are wont to be by the butcher or slaughter-man: and consequently slain. So Jer. 51. 40. to which purpole they are said to descend,or come down to the slaughter,ch.34.6.Ier. 48.15.&50 27.Hag.2.22.

the Inhabitants]Heb the sitters:those that sit,or,inhabit,as ch. 5,3.9. I have made havock of the Countries subdued by me. Howbeit, here, by sitters,some suppose, may be understood,such, as sit aloft,as ch.6.1.& 9.7.and so the meaning should be,such as fit on the Throne of State. See chap.13. 20.I have pulled them down from their regal power,and made them my vassals.v.8.

as a valiant man] Here also the Jewish Criticks observe some diversity about the text. For instead of that which our printed copies hold out, they with detraction of one letter,put in the margine, as so to be read,cabbir, which word signifies either strong,and mighty, as most take it, or copious, and multitudinous some other render that word. This reading, the Jewish Commenters following, and of ours,also,not a few,refer the word here,to Inhabitants,and expound it : Some,those that sit,or dwell in a strong place : and so the meaning should be-I will pull, or throw down those that dwell,or sit most firmly,that have the strongest,or surest seats, or places of abode. Others,many Inhabitants,as the word is used, ch. 16.14. and whereas it might be objected that the word is singular, whereas that which it is joyned unto, is plural; and that the adjective is seldome set before its substantive:it is answered,in defence of this version,that the word may be taken here substantively:as the word of contrary signification,for the most part,is:and this also, Job.31. 25.and so it may here be rendered,a multitude of Inhabitants,or sitters:to which might be added:that sometime,though seldom,the adjective leadeth. See on ch.9.6.Wonderful. Thus, they that follow the reading, as they term it : others follow the writing,as it is expressed in the text:and render it(not without the authority also of a Rabbine of great note) in the same manner, that our Bibles do, and the old Latine : as a mighty, or, a valiant man. Yea, some of the Jewish Interpreters would make a medly of both expressions, imagining the term here used, to be compoled of two words,cabbir,and abbir:which both they conceive to signifie in substance the same : and to import a man of extraordinary might. But this exposition of that, which the text holds out,is controlled by the forementioned Author. Who upon a general survey of all the places,where the word abbir is found, shews that it is,if not for the most part,yet very frequently,taken,substantively, and that it is oftenimes used,for a great bull, or, an ox, it is apparent by these places,Psal.22.12.& 50.13. & 68.30.ch.34.7.in which sense,he supposeth it to be here used;as if he should say,I have stricken down,and laid along the people of thole places, which with my forces I entred upon, like a company of oxen, or great bulls. The word is singular, but taken collectively ; as oxe, chap. 1. 3.

V.14.And my hand hath found] Hath gotten, or feized on.See before,v.11.13. Yet there seems some emphasis here in the words: in comparing the treasures of the lands, surprized by him, to a birds nest,or eggs in a nest,that are taken,without pains: all the labour is but to find them.

as a nest]Or,or in a nest:as birds,or eggs in a nest,Deut.22.6,7 .a defect of the particles:as Job.1.13, the riches]Or, wealth. The word signifies primarily, strength, whence,men of might,able to bear arms,Gen 47.6. Deut. 3.18 Josh. 10.7.in the next place wealth,Ruth.2.1.Job.20. 15. because that is esteemed the strength and support of an estate, either publike, or private:they seem to strain the text needlelly, who read it,as a birds nest, the nest of their riches, the particle is observed to be divers times used as a note of the accusative. So 2 Sam. 2.30. Jer. 40.2.

of the people]Heb, Peoples. Of many people . as chap. 2.3. and as one gathering eggs,that are left]To wit,by the dams forsaking them for fear.

have I gathered all the earth] I have conquered the greatest part of the world,commonly known,and brought it under my commands: so moft Interpreters. But the speech is here of seizing of wealth, and gathering of treasures; and that with as much ease and small difficulty, as a man, would take eggs out of a birds nest. I should therefore rather chuose to read it, have I gathered the wealth of all the land:the whole country whersoever I come,or,(as in a vaunting manner,such a vain-glorious boaster might speak)or all the earth,of the whole world. The like defect, and supply, from the foregoing words See Gen.1.16,Job.31.3.& 36.33.

and there was none that moved the wing,or opened the mouth, or peeped] None, that did so, that is, none, that durst so do. There was none that durst stir; in way of opposition , against my forces, when I sent them to surprize and take away their treasures, 1 King.20.5,6.

move the wing]He persists in his former similitude from birds,that are wont to strik with the wing, at those, that offer to disturb them in their sitting. and to meddle with their eggs, or young under them;or,when they are driven off their nest,yet hover and flutter to and fro about those that take them away ; and in a mournful manner,cry and make a noyse after them.

moved]did move,or,wag,for,durst move,or wag:as,did lift up head for,durst lift up head,Zach.1.21.

the wing]For,with the wing. So some of the Jewish Criticks,because the verb is not transitive; or, as some therefore, no wing that wagged.Yet other of them say,that these neuturals have sometime a transitive notionas the like to this,ch.1.30.

or]Heb.and,as ch.8.19.

opened the mouth]See the like expressions,Exod.11. 7. Josh. 10. 21.

or peeped] Spoken not of the young, as some would have it;but of the dam, bemoaning them. See chap. 8 19. and 38. 14.

V.15, Shall the ax boast it self against him,that heweth therewith?] Hither to were the Assyrian kings insolent and arrogant boastings. Which,in these words, the Prophet controlleth,shewing the unreasonablenels,yea the absurdity and senselesnels of them. Is it equal, or fit,that those,who are but Gods instruments, (as all,even the wicked themselves are,ver.5.Jer.51.20.)and have not their action only from him, (as the ax, or saw, from the workman;the rod, or staff, from him that smites with it)but their power also to act,and strech for such use,as they are applyed unto, and employed in;should such advance themselves against him,whose instruments,and such instruments,they are, as can do nothing without him,and without such power as they have received from him?Joh. 19.11.

against him]Or,as Some,above him. The word will bear either: against him,by threatning to deal with him, as with the idols of other people,ver.11.above him, by arrogating to himself what God hath done by him,v. 13.

or shall the saw magnifie it self against him that shaketh it]Or,moveth it.The sawyer,that saweth with it.An instance of the like stamp with the former.

as if the rod should shake it self,against them that lift it up]Or,according to some, as if the rod moved him,that lifted it up ; or, (to pass by many other version)as some other,when one shaketh the rod, (that is, when the rod is shaken) should it boast, or magnifie it self,against those that lift it up:a supply from the former branches, neither unusual,nor unfit. See v. 14. Some of the Jewish Doctors make it, an application unto God,and the king of Assyria;as he being the rod, ver. 5. and God the person,that smote by him:is but by way of excellency,spoken of in the plural number:as Josh.24.29. Eccl.5.8.and the ground of the action,proceeding not from the rod,but from the hand that smites with it.

as if the staff should lift up it self,as if it were no wood]Or,or if the staff should lift up it self,as if it were not wood: and this verfion might peradventure receive some strength from that of the Estrich in Iob,Iob 39.16 She hardeneth her self towards her young ones, as if they were not hers,or,as to not hers;save that there is a particle in the original there,which is not here. But see chap. 40.14,where the Syntax feemeth the same with this here. The Hebrew hath no more but this:as lifting up a staff,or when one lifteth up a staff, not wood,which some render, as if the staff did lift up (either it lelfe,or him,that held it)and were not wood, or, as if the staff,because it is lift up,were not wood,or,as if the staff should lift up it self,against not wood,that is,against him,who is not wood,but able to move,and stir of himself. The Jewish Writers,when the staff is lift up, it is not the wood;to wit, that lifteth it up, but the man that holdeth it. Some of ours,when the staff is lift up,the wood is nothing:no regard is had of it,be it wood,or ought elle;but of him that smiteth with it. Others lastly,or,when the rod is lift up,is it not wood?doth it not ftill remain as it was before,a forry piece of wood, unable to stir,or,to act ought of it self? and this laft, without any strain at all flowes most fitly from the text. So the heathen idols are vilified, that they are no better,many of them, then a parcel of fearwood, chap. 44.13.--20. Jer.2.27.Hos.4.12.in like manner, the king of Assyria, though raised up by God,and used as a baftinado, to cudgel his own people and others with,yet is ftill a poor,forry,mortal,corruptible creature,luch another piece of flesh, as before he was,Psal.82.6, 7. & 146. 3.4. Eccl.6.10.ch.2.22. Jer.28.9. But all these expolition and readings also,a late Writer of great note controlleth,conceiving them all to be mistaken in the word,hatzin,which they take for a verb,fignifying; to lift up,when as indeed it is a noun, that fignifieth mountains; and renders the words,as if the staff,were mountaines,(applyed usually to men haughty and high-minded)not wood.I ftall,having propounded it;leave it to the judgment of others.

V.26.Therefore shall the Lord, the Lord of hosts,&c.]His folly convinced,and laid forth,his doom from God follows, to wit,the fudden and unexpected destruction of the main body of his forces, wherein he so much confided; and Whereof he so much boasted.Of the titles here given God,see ch,3.1.Howbeit,it is by some of the Jewish Writers well obferved,that the ftyle is for more special end, here given unto God,to wit,to intimate, that the succesles, which the Assyrian kings,as well as others,had in the field,was not from themselves;but from him, who is their Lord, and the Lord of hosts : and from him therefore,both safety,and victory in fight is, Psal.24.8.& 33.16.17. & 44.3,5,6.& 60.11.12.& 144 10.Prov.21.30,31.

send among his fat ones leanness]The Lord will waste his great forces,wherein he so much gloried,v.8 ch 36,9. as the body of man, or beaft,is by a consumption wasted,and brought to extream leanness, So ch.17.4.Zeph.2.11.

among his fat ones]Heb,upon his fatnesse,his fat ones,the chief,and choyce ones in his army,for all Interpreters generally : as Judg.3. 29.Phil.3.1.compared with. Psal.106. 15.So they,from whom I must crave leave here to dissent. The word here used,is an abstract, not a concret.It is word for word,his fatnesses,as ch.17.4.the fat, or, the fatnels of his flesh,and, the fatnesses of the earth,Gen,27.28,39.&, of the Provinces,Dan,11.28.by his fatnesses, therefore I here understand,not so much his fat ones,as his great and vast army, likened to the body of some creature overgrown with flesh, and fat, which God threatens here,to abate, and take down, by casting it into a consumption,by sending that upon it. that should make it thin and spare.The complement hereof,see ch 37.36.

leanneſſe]That is, death, faith the Jewish Doctor, for that latter place of the Psalmist before mentioned.But the leanneſſe, here mentioned,is not so much appliable to the bodies of the particular persons dest royed,as to the b dy of the army consisting of them,as limbs and members; which by the lols of so many thousands, could not but be much wasted and reduced to a very poor and thin scantling.

and under his glory he will kindle a burning,as the burning of a fire] The same thing repeated, under a new notion, and expressed by another similitude. He will waste his forces,as with a consumption,and consume them as with fire;great, and sudden devastations and destructions, are in Scripture, commonly compared to great fires,Psal.21.9.& 37.20.ch.9.18. & 24.6.& 26.11. Jer.17.27.Ezek. 20.47.Amos 7.4.Zach.11.1.

under his glory]That is, faith one of the Jewish Writers, in the place of his glory,or,glorying, where he glorified himself. Of which use of the preposition,see v. 3. But there seems rather to be an allusion to the manner of thole, that burn dead bodies, which was the custome in old time,both of the Greeks and the Romans, their common use being not to bury as we do,the bodies of the deceased;but to burn them with a pyle of wood kindled under them;and having so done,to gather their ashes and bones,if any remained of them,into an urne, and so lay them up in their places of Sepulture. That which was done with a great deal of cost,huge piles of wood ; yea, and curious fabricks of timber, together with abundance of odoriferous spices, at the funeral rites of great perlons, as well women,as men. Somewhat like whereunto, was also used among the Jews, about their kings,2 Chr.21. 19. and with them also,bodies of men were burnt,when they died , or were slain, in such multitudes that danger of infection might arile from them lying above ground,and the burying of them over-troublelom,ch. 66.24,Amos 6.10,Ezek.

39.9.10. See,chap.30.33.or if respect be had, as it may be,and is afterward,to the burning of a wood,or forrest,as Psal.83.14.under his glorymay be,under this great timber trees:as the fire that takes in the lower shrubs,and the under-woods;and from them,letteth the whole wood or forrest on fire. See v. 17, 18. yet the former seems to me the more probable : and of this passage,more anon, his glory] The same with his *fatnes*s, or abundance of fat before mentioned;not as some would have it, his arms and his bravery: but his army; wherein he glories. See ch. 17. 4.where both these terms are likewise used,as parallel.

he will kindle a burning] Heb. burning, it shall burn;or, there shall a burning burn.or, it shall burn with a burning.For whether it be a noun or verb infinite,is questionable.A great burning shall be, For these reduplications amplifie. See v.6.

as the burning of a fire]Or,as fire burneth,or,like the burning of fire such a burning, as though it have no material fire used in it,yet should have the destroying force and efficacy of fire : and it may well be, that it was done by such a kind of blasting, as Aarons sons were smitten with : who though they were stricken stark dead, yet neither were their bodies consumed, not their garments, Levit. 10.2,5,or,wherewith the people were so many of them taken away in Taberah, Num. 11. 2,3. and there are of the Jewish Writers, who affirm,grounding in part upon this place, that by the stroke of the Angel sent to do execution on the Assyrian Army, the bodies of those that were smitten, were so blasted and burnt, that they were dissolved into ashes. Which was,say they, that so many thousands lying dead on the ground, might not breed some contagion, especially being so neer to the City: and they add hereunto, that though their bodies were dissolved,yet their garments were not burnt, that Gods people might have the spoyl of them, as those had, 2 Chr. 20. 25. to which purpose also, some of them expound those words,under his glory,that is,under their goodly gorgeous apparel,such,as the Assyrians usually wore,Ezek.23.12. and that men are wont much to glory in,called therefore their glory,Ps.93.1.Matth.6.29. But these things are of no certainty.

V.17. And the light of Israel shall be for a fire]Or, For,&c.as ch.8. 21.& 9.11. God who is a light to his people,and will be so at this time,and upon this occasion, by giving them occasion of much joy upon their deliverance;as Esth.8.16.Psal.84.11 chap. 9.2. & 60.1, 2,20.Mic.7.8.shall be a consuming fire to destroy his,and their adversaries;as was intimated,v.16.So Deut.4.24.& 6.15.Psal.97.3.ch. 26.11.& 30.30. See the like divers,yea, contrary use of that pillar, that conducted the Israelites in the wilderness,Exod.14.20.24.See also Zach.2.5. The Jewish Doctors here dote, who would have by the light of Israel, to be understood, either the destroying Angel,or king Ezekiah; as to be called from his constant study of Gods Law, Prov.6.23.

and his Holy One for a flame] The same thing, is in other terms repeated.but as usually,with some amplification. For flame,is somewhat more then fire,ch.29.6.& 30.30. See the like, ch.9.10.20 .v.15, 7,14,16. Here shall need no other fire, or fuel, to destroy and consume them,save God himself.See ch.30.27,28.Of the title Holy One. See chap. 1.4. and it shall burn]To wit,that flame before spoke n of.

his thorns, and his briers]by that the Jewish Doctors, some of them understand the great ones in the Assyrian army,because, such are wont most to be, as pricking thorns, to vex and grieve others. Which some of ours also approve ; supposing that the slaughter might begin at them. But the slaughter, it is evident, was sudden, and executed in an instant,as that in Egypt,Exod 12. 29. with that expedition, that little notice could be taken,nor regard needed be had,with whom it should begin. Rather,according to the similitude which the Prophet still pursues of a fire; and here of a fire taking in wood, thorns, and briars, may have reference to the under woods, where the fire is wont first to take, opposed to the tall timber-trees, vers.18.and should therefore resemble the meaner sort of his souldiers,See chap.9.18.Howbeit, thereby may be signified his whole army in general,and the ingrosse of whom it consisted,being all,as thorns,and briars: to annoy Gods people, against whom they lay in siege,and whom they had before done much mischief to,in all parts of the land, chap. 36.1.See the like, Josh.23. 13. Ezek. 28.24.

in one day]In an instant; at one and the same time; together, at once,1 Sam.2.34.chap.47 9. Zach.3.9. Or,in one night,ch.37.36.being part of the natural day.Gen.1.5.Levit.23.32.Luk.24. 29.33.36. compared with Joh.20.19. his great army, that required. no small time,for the gathering,framing,fitting,and furnishing of it,destroyed in an instant.So ch.15.5.

V.18. And it shall consume the glory of his Forrest,and of his fruitful field] Heb. Carmel. The proper name of a place; of which name, were two mountains, the one in Judah ; of which Josh. 15. 55. where about Nabals dwelling was,1 Sam.25.2.the other situated in the confines of Asher,and Issachar Josh.19.26,where Elias slew Baals Prophets,1 King.18.19,20.and it was neer to the sea,1 King.18. 42,43.Jer.46. 18. Now these mountains did not lye open, forrest like,or run wild,as Lebanon,but were enclosed,manured, tilled, and cared,or planted with great variety of fruitful trees,vines,olives,figs, and the like;and had much fat, and fertile soyl, and arable ground. (whence a green ear of corn, also is so called, Levit.2.14.& 23.14.) both upon them, and about them; whence it came to pass,that from the one,or both of them,the word Carmel was used, for any fertile, and fruitful place indifferently, whether higher, or lower ground,a mountain or plain;as chap.16.10.where mention is made of Moabs Carmel,and ch.29.17.where Lebanon and Carmel,are oppos'ed;and so it seems to be here taken. Hence therefore, some would infer, that by the Forrest,as a wilde place,should be understood the meaner sort of Sennacheribs souldiery ; by the Carmel, his chief Commanders. Others imagin,that the desolation, or destruction of his State, and country is threatned;and as of persons of all ranks,high and low,rich and poor;so of places of all sorts. But this seems to divert too much from the Prophets present scope. I suppose rather,with others,that by his Forrest, and his Carmel, is meant the main body of his army, that seemed to resemble some great forrest, or mountain, whether wilde,or manured bethwacked with trees,whether for timber,fruit,or fuel,as thick as they can stand one by,another,and by the glory thereof,the choice persons of command in it;as by his glory, ver. 16. was meant his glorious army,or his army wherein he gloried:so here,by the glory of that his glory,those that were the more glorious part of it,or of the more eminency in it,his stout and valiant Warriours,and his rich and stately Princes;which some also suppose to be respectively meant;by the Forrest,the one:by Carmel,the other. See Jer.46.22. 23.Some conceive that there is mention here of Forrest and Carmel in regard that his army,being of large extent,was encamped,some in the higher,and wilder places;some in the lower,and better manured. I should rather think,but that it comes after, (and yet why might not the Lord have an eye to that, that in his Oracle himself would afterward speak?)that some respect might in these terms,be had to Sennacheribs brags of surprizing Lebanon and Carmel,chap.37.24. as intimating, that his own Lebanon and Carmel, should be destroyed, before he should come to effect, what he threatned them with.

both soul and body]Heb.from the soul, and unto the flesh, as Jer.9. 10.from the fowl,and unto the beast;for, both fowl, and beast,and Jer. 50.3. from man, and beast; for, both man and beast. Some would have the meaning to be, that they should be destroyed, both body and soul. Others, that they should he so smitten inwardly, that the evil yet should not stay there ; but proceed also to the consumption of the outward parts of the body,because the soul is set in friction contrary to the manner of material fire;which, in burning of bodies,seizeth first upon the flesh,or outward parts, and from them piercetn to the inward. The meaning is;rather,as one of the Rabbins well observeth,that it should so seize on them, that it should, as fire is wont to do, with living creatures that are burnt, or persons condemned to the fire,not consume their flesh only,but take life away too,Leuit.20. 14.& 21.9.The soul is commonly taken for the life,Gen.9.4,5.Levit. 17.11, 14.It is a proverbial speech intimating a total destruction of his army,not unlike those of head and tail, branch and rush, chap.9.14. for the Prophet returns here to the former similitude of a body, vers. 16.but he pursues it with a further amplification.It was leanness,or a consumption of flesh,that was there menaced; as ch. 17.4.which may yet be without loss,or danger of life:but here vitals,and all are wasted and consumed, as with fire : the very soul and spirit of this vast body, together with the fat and flesh of it, is utterly gone.

and they shall be,as when a flanderd-bearer fainteth]Heb.and he,or, it shall be,or,it shall be with him,as chap.29.7.8.as when a flanderd-bearer melteth, as alluding to the similitude before used. This some expound of the Assyrian king himself : He shall be like such a flanderd-bearer,whose heart melting with in him:(as Psal.22.14. Nah.2. 11.)when he seeth his colours forsaken, he casts a way his standard, and betakes himself to flight.So did Sennacherib,chap. 31. 8.& 37. 37.But some go further,adding, that he shall not be able to recover himself,or raise a new army again, no more then an army is able to recollect it self, when the Standard-bearers are overthrown. Some such assurance seems to be given by God to Ezekiah, chap. 38. 6. Others,rather understand it of his army, or the remainders thereof:it shall be with his forces, as with an army, when the Standard-bearer faints,and is falling,the whole company is,together with him,quailed and quelled. Or,as when he having cast away his colours, the whole regiment is disordered,and soon routed by the adverse party: and so it was with Sennacheribs great hoste, they were suddenly, a great part of them,utterly destroyed;and the relidue of them that survived, when in the morning they saw their camp full of dead corpses, chap.37.36.their hearts also melted within them,and they fled away with their Lord.Of the army,the same tearm is used, that it melted, away,chap.31.8.

V.19. And the rest of the trees of his forrest shall be few] Very few shall remain of that his vast army,that seemed formerly,to be innumerable.

the trees]The several souldiers in his army, of all sorts,the greater among them,as well as the meaner.Heb. tree , But the word is here collective;as Ezek.15.6.

his forrest]His forces compared to a forrest ver.18.

few]Heb.a number,That is,a few. For, though with us, a number be used,to signifie a multitude;yet in the Hebrew phrase,it importeth, fewness:so it is used,Deut.33.6.Let his men be, or,(out of the foregoing branch,supplying the negative)not be a number:that is,few. And dayes of a number,or,a few dayes,Numb.9. 20.Contrary to which,is Jer.2.32.dayes without number : And Job.16.22. years of a number are few, for few years:So men of a number,for,few in number,Gen.34.30.Deut. 4.27.Ps.105.12.Jer.44.28.Ezek.12.16.And the reason of the phrase is,because a small company,may be easily numbred ; a small number,such as cannot be counted. In opposition therefore, whereunto, is that former soon counted. In opposition therefore, whereunto, is that form of speech,without number, commonly used,Iob 25.3.Psal. 40. 12.& 104. 25. & 105.34.Joel 1.6.Yet there seems to be a kind of defective speech, as in that of Moses, His men a number,for, his men,men of a number. So here, the tree, or, trees of his forrest a number, for the trees of his forrest, trees of a number : a very small company that may soon be told.See ch.21.17.

that a child may write them] That is,as some, count them, and in counting point them out, describe them. Or, rather, as others,take counting point them out, describe them. Or, rather, as others,take a tale, or make a list of them : for he seems to allude to the Clerk of a Band, or a muster-master, whose office is, to take a list of those, that are to be enrolled for service. It is as if he should say,there shall not need any Officer to make a book of them ; they shall be so few, that any child, that hath but learned to make his letters, may soon set them down, either the number of them, or their names. Hence our Jewish Doctors, or doaters rather, gather that of Sennacheribs army there were but ten left; because the letter jod; that stands for ten in Hebrew, as it doth also in Greek, is the least letter in the alphabet, which children therefore are first taught to write:and again,because children are seldome able to tell beyond ten,and so far they can count upon their fingers ends. But these niceties we,leave to such,whose lips suit with such letice.Heb. and a child shall write them,the copulative for the finitive:as Job. 5. 11.& 7.15,19.Jer.14.19.and the future for the potential,as chap.33. 23. Joh 9. 3. Jer. 2.23. & 13.23. Matth. 12. 25. with Mark 3. 24. & 3.25.

V. 20. And it shall come to passe in that day, that, &c.] Hitherto of Gods judgment, that should be inflicted upon the Assyrian king, for his pride, insolency, and arrogancy. When God had finished this work,that he intended to bring about by him. Now followeth both of the distress that God brought the whole land into by him,and his forces, and of the deliverance of some small parcel of them, by the judgment executed upon him and his army,to wit, the destruction of many wicked ones among them, and the reformation of the rest.See the like,ch.1.24,25.Of the phrase,or manner of speech, see ch.4.1,2,3.

the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob] Those of them, that shall escape and survive the Assyrian Invasion : to wit, principally, the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, and such as for succour had reforted thither, chap. 37. 35. as also, some other, in other parts of the land, though surprized and over-run by him, chap.36.1.for Israel,here, is put for the people of Judah, as chap.1. 3. and the house of Jacob,the same with Israel: as chap. 2. 5.Howsoever, some would over-curiously distinguish them, and by the Israel, understand Judah, that held still the faith of Israel: by the house of Jacob, the ten tribes, that fell from it, and were of Iacobs family ; but not of Israels faith, were not right, and true Israelites, Joh. 1. 47. Rom. 9. 6. but this seems not found. See verse 21,22.

such as are escaped] Heb. the escapement, or, escapings: as chap. 4.2.

shall no more again stay upon him, that smote them] Being amended by the hand of God thus upon them,and better advised then before, by their late sufferings,they shall not seek to,or rely upon the Assyrians,for succour and support,as in former times they had wont to do, 2 King.16.7.Hosh.5.13.& 14.3.

no more again stay] Heb. no more add to stay: chapter 7. 10. Ier. 2.4.

stay] As a man stayes and upholds himself, by leaning on a staff, ch.36.6.& 50.10.See ch.3.1.

him that smote them] The King of Assyria, (not Egypt, as some of the Jewish Teachers) by whom God had smote them, chap. 9. 12. using him,as a rod,or staff,wherewith to chastise and correct them, ver.5,24.

but shall stay upon the Lord] This being the end of Gods smiting them, not to drive them from him; but to reclaim and draw them home unto him, chapter 9. 13, 12. and by discovering to them the vanity of all other shores and supports ; and their folly in relying on them, to their own hurt and ruine ; to cause them to rely and rest now on him alone, chap. 17. ver.7,8.

the holy one of Israel]See ch.1.4.

in truth] In sincerity,as Ps.145.18.(so Jer.24.7.)not faindly, as those,Ps.78.34,37.Jer.3.10.

V. 21. The remnant shall return] Or, A remnant shall return. Alluding to the name of the Prophets son, Shear-jashub, ch. 7. 3. and shewing what was therein intimated : a remnant ; denoting the paucity of those,that should escape and survive, in comparison of the whole,ver.22.

even the remnant] Or, but a remnant : a remnant onely, ver. 22. as before : otherwise the remnant might impote so many as escaped, were they fewer or more. So a small remnant,ch.1.9.and a feed,Rom. 9.29.

of Jacob] Of the main body of the people, called the house of Jacob, ver. 20.

unto the mighty God] The name given to the Messias, as part of his flattely style,ch.9.6.they shall return after the siege of Jerusalem, broken up upon the slaughter made by night in the Assyrian Camp, chap.37.36,37. not to their possessions and wonted places of abode only, out of which they had formerly by the Assyrian forces, been forced, or whence for fear of them,they had fled; but unto God also, whom formerly they had disregarded, and were fallen from : but now upon so pregnant,proof and experience,had, and exhibited of his gracious goodnesse towards them, and powerfull protection of them, they should more carefully seek after, more faithfully cleave to, and more firmly depend upon,Psal.81.17,18. Ier.32. 40. See ch. 1.27.

V.22. For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the Sea, yet, a remnant of them shall return] As of Sennacheribs vast and numerous host, but a small number escaped,upon the judgment by God inflicted on it, yet so,as of the innumerable multitude of the Jewish people, but a small remnant in comparison,was to escape, and so did in that heavy judgment by the hand of Sennacherib, inflicted on them from him.

though] Heb, if : and so Rom.9.27.for,though,as Iob 14.7,8.& 16.6.

thy people Israel] Either, thy people to wit, Israel:as God speaking to the Prophet:or,rather, thy people,that is thy posterity,O Israel, as turning his speech to their Progenitor Iacob.

as the sand of the Sea] As was promised unto Abraham, that his seed should be, Gen. 22. 17. fulfilled accordingly, Heb. 11. 12. and hyperbolical phrase, and proverbial form of speech, used commonly, to signifie an innumerable multitude, Iudg. 7.12.chap. 48.19.

Yet a remnant of them shall return] Or, but a remnant in them, or, among them, shall return : (for Shear-jashub name is again alluded unto) that is, shall be saved, as the Apostle renders it, Rom. 9. 27. that remnant so delivered, and temporally saved, from the sword of the Assyrian, being a type of Gods Elect among that people, to be saved by Christ: See Rom. 9. 27, 29. & 11.5.

the consumption decreed shall over-flow with righteousnes] The reason is here rendred,why he said,but a remnant : because God had determined in his just judgment, to bring in upon them a general inundation that should sweep away the greater part of them. This some of the Rabbines understand of the ten Tribes carried captive by Salmanaser, 2 King.17.6.in regard of whom the other two were but as a remnant.But the course of the context seems to carry it another way.

the consumption] Or, a consumption : there shall be a consumption among the Jewish people,before that consumption in Sennacheribs army,ver.18.So ch.28.22.

decreed] Heb. decided, determined, 1 King. 20. 40. or, precisely, cut out, Iob 14. 8. as infallibly, and unfailably, or Irrecoverably decreed, so exactly limited how far forth it shall proceed. So Dan. 11.36.

shall over-flow] Heb. shall be over-flowing. He compares the Assyrians invasion of the land, with his over-spreading army, to a great inundation, overflowing the whole Country. See chap. 8. 7,8.

with righteousnes] Or, in righteousness ; as the Apostle renders it, Rom. 9.28. that is, through the just judgment of God ; as noting out the ground of Gods both determining to inflict, and inflicting those judgments on them : as Psal. 9. 8. and vindicating of him from all aspertion of injustice in so doing, Neh. 9. 33. Lam. 1.18. Dan. 9. 7, 14. or, as Some other, with judgments, and punishments, the effects of his justice, as chap. 5. 16. Howbeit the main stream of Interpreters runs here another way ; expounding the place ; Some of the superabundant benefits, that God would heap upon them, after that he had brought them thus low. For righteousnes, is put sometime for beneficence, Psal. 112.3.9. chap. 66. 12. Others, of that righteousness, and holiness, that should abound in the remainder of Gods people,now reclaimed and refined in the furnace of afflictions, ch.48.10. wherewith the Land should now flow, and that for it is to fill the whole world,chap.33.6.so,that by the consumption cut out, they would, many of them, have to be understood the remnant left,which should cause righteousness to over-flow. But besides that, the consfuction seems overharsh ; the Apostle referreth these words,in righteousness,to Gods finishing,and cutting out,or,concluding short: and I adhere therefore to our version, and the sense of it first given.

V. 23. For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined in the midst of all the land] the same thing is repeated, with the Author of it expressed, and some further amplification from the extent of it,For the style here given God,see on ch.1.9.See also ver.16.

shall make]Or,will shortly make.Heb.is making;as ch.5.5 & 43.19. See ch.3.1.

even determined] Or, and that determined;as it is rendred, Dan.9. 27. See the like syntax, Mic. 2. 10. Heb. cut out, as before ; for both words are from one root. Yet some would have this word to be a substantive, as well as the word consumption: but so, as that the sense should not much vary; consumption, and determination, for, a determinate consumption; as ch. 1. 14. iniquity, and congregation: for, a wicked congregation: or, rather, as ch. 4. 5. a cloud and smoke, for, a smoky cloud. But I suppose it rather an adjective, as both the form of it theweth, and the use of it also, Dan. 9. 26. in those words, a determinate desolation; the same phrase is again found, ch. 28. 22. Now, because instead hereof the Apostle hath, retaining the Greek version, a word, or, speech, abbreviated, or abridged; as they commonly render it: hence most of our ancient Interpreters, and many later ones, Popish Writers especially, do hence pick out much mysterious matter. Some of the Messias, the word contracted, and made flesh, Joh. 1. 14. Some, of the doctrine of salvation, drawn into a narrow compass, in the Gospel, Mark 1. 15. Joh. 3. 16. Rom. 10. 9. Some of one thing; some of another. All which to recite, is both needless, and would also be too tedious. Only, concerning the Apostles Greek, the term by him used, as that He brew one, which it answers, signifies as well words, as word, (which in Latine also, is held to come from the other in Greek; opus from coeo; or, rather, from the Greek word signifying either, as the verb whence it comes, signifies either, both to speak, and to work;) and as well matter, as speech, (as the Hebrew term also doth, chap. 1. 1. Dan. 10. 1. Luk. 1. 37. and in Latine, res, held to come from the Greek ἐιρεω) besides the word used by the Apostle, and those ancient Greeks, signifies, as well an account, or a reckoning, as any of those two before mentioned, Matth. 18. 23. & 25. 19. Luk. 16. 2. Phil. 4. 17. and the Apostles words may well therefore be thus rendred; The Lord will make short work, or, a short matter of it. He will make a soon, and sudden consumption. It will neither be long before it comes; nor long in doing, when it comes: Or to come more nearly, and fully to the Prophets intendment: The Lord will make a short reckoning; alluding to a reckoning, where the matter is cleer, the account is soon made: or to a bill of receit and disbursments; which though it be long, yet being aright, ballanced, the foot of the account, or the remainder of the reckoning, may prove a very small sum: and so it would be, yea and fell out so here, when God had finished his work, and done his reckoning with his people, ver. 12. And thus much by by the way for the clearing of that phrase, though not found in the text.

in the midst of all the land] Heb. earth. Which some taking hold of; apply all this (as was in part, also, before hinted) unto Christ: of whom also they expound that in the Psalm, of working salvation in the midst of the earth, Psal. 74. 12. Others refer it to the contracted number of the remaining, and returning faithful, ver. 21. or, the Apostles and others by them typified; who by their righteousness in preaching, and practice, should overflow, and fill the whole world with goodness and godliness, Dan. 12. 3. Matth. 28. 19. Mark 16. 15. Joh. 7. 38, 39. & 15. 16. Rom. 10. 18. But the word here used, as the Greek also answering it, signifies, as well land, as earth; and is commonly used of, and applyed unto, particular coasts, and countries, chap. 9. 1. Matthew 2. 6. & 4. 15. and in the midst of the land, is no more, then simply, in the land: as chap. 5. 8. and so the Apostle here renders it, Rom. 9. 28. in the midst of all the land, no more, then throughout the whole land, chap. 8. 8. & 28. 2, 15.

V. 24. Therefore thus saith the Lord God of hosts] Upon this dreadful prediction of the great consumption to be made among the Jewish people, the Prophet in Gods name, and by meslage from him, comforteth those few faithful ones, whom God had special care of among them, against those fears and distresses that might befall them, by occasion of the Assyrian invasion and surprizal of the greatest part of their cities, and that by giving them further assurance of a gracious deliverance from him; and of the speedy destruction of him, that had put them into such frights, and brought them into such distress. See the like, chap. 30. 18--33. of the style given to God here, look back to ver. 16.

O my people, that dwellest in Sion] He directs his speech to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem; (for Sion, is here, put for Jerusalem; as ch. 1. 8, 27. & 27. 12.) partly, because thither had a great party of the better sort fled for succour and protection: and partly, because they were to be in no small distress there, ch. 37. 3.

be not afraid of the Assyrian] Of Sennacherib; for all his proud menaces and vaunts of his forces, ch. 37. 6.

he shall smite thee with a rod] He shall lightly afflict thee; God using him, as a rod, wherewith to chastise his people, ver. 5. not as a sword, to cut them off. He will not handle thee by him, so roughly as he did the ten tribes, 2 King. 17. 6, 27. & 18. 10, 11. Howbeit, the Jewish Writers are divided about the sense of these words. Some say, that they are to be understood of his purposes and menaces only: Others, of matter of fact also, and somewhat done by him; and these distinguish not amiss between smiting, and slaying: and true it is, that though no violent irruption, nor forcible assault, was made into, or against Jerusalem, chap. 37. 33. Yet were many of her inferiour Cities, yea, the most of them, taken, ch. 36. 1. the country round about her spoyled; as must needs be, by such an Army lying about it, ch. 36. 2. and the city it self, with those shut up in it, put to many difficulties, and reduced to much distress, ch. 36. 12. & 37. 3.

and shall lift up his staff against thee] So the most render it. He shall not strike thee, fay some, but hold up the staff over thee: as after, he shall shake his hand at thee, ver. 32. he shall shake the staff at thee; but not hurt thee with it. Others, he shall lay heavy taxes and tributes upon thee; and so he did indeed, 2 King. 18. 14, 15. Both suppose a reference here, as to the rod, so to the staff mentioned, ver. 5. Howbeit, some render the words otherwise; to wit, but he shall lift up his staff for thee: but, the copulative, in an adversative notion: as ch. 5. 12. & 7. 12. he shall lift up, or, one (to wit, God) shall lift up his staff; his staff shall be lift up (see chap. 14. 30.) for thee. So is the particle used, 1 Chr. 6. 49. Thus the meaning should be; the King of Assyria shall smite thee with a rod; but the Lord thy God, who is the Lord of hosts, will lift up his staff an heavier instrument, and more grievous, against him; that shall bring deliverance to thee, and destruction to him; as did the staff, that Moses lift up at the red Sea, Exod. 14. 26, 27. See ver. 26.

after the manner of Egypt] Heb. in the way. Which some Jewish Writers taking hold of, expound of Sennacheribs way, either toward Egypt, when he went thitherward to meet with Taracha, or when he returned from bickering with him; what time again he sent messengers in menacing manner to Jerusalem, chap. 37. 9. Others, of Ezekiahs and his peoples way; in sending to Egypt for help against the Assyrian, chap. 30. 4. which occasioned the invasion, partly through the offence, that the Assyrian took at it, chap. 3. 6. & 20. and partly through Gods just indignation against them, for doing therein out of diffidence, against his command, ch. 30. 1. & 31. 1. And this exposition, the former way of it especially, some of ours follow; the rather, say they, because it sorts well with the story: and for the particle here used, it is not that which signifies according to: but in. But neither of these reasons seem valid enough, to put by the received reading. For neither doth either of them suit so well with the context: nor is the use of the particle in the signification here given it in this form of speech unusual. For, so Ezek. 20. 30. in the way of your fathers, is found, for according to the manner of your fathers: and these very words again in this form reiterated, ver. 26. do abundantly confirm it. Here therefore, in the way of Egypt, is, after, or, according to the manner of Egypt; that is as those who understand it of the Assyrian, and his dealing with Gods people, either he shall inflict grievous things on you, as Pharaoh did on your Ancestors in Egypt, Exod. 1. 11--14. or, he shall pursue you, with a purpose to destroy you, as Pharaoh did the Israelites, after they were gotten out of Egypt, Exod. 14. 5--9. & 15. 9. but shall not prevail against you, no more then he then did. But as those, that understand it, of Gods dealing with their enemy, the Assyrian; the same person that then lift up his staff against Pharaoh, for the safety of his people, will now lift up his staff against the Assyrian, to his confusion, and your deliverance, ver. 26. will destroy the Assyrian, as I did the Egyptians, Exod. 14. 26, 27. & 15. 6. and this I conclude with.

V. 25. For yet a very little while, and mine indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction] As in the former verse, were two grounds of comfort to the godly: First, the lightness, in comparison of the chastisement, a rod: and secondly, the gracious issue of it: in the defeat of the enemies intended purpose: so here are two more added: First, the shortness of it, Gods wrath against his people shall not last long; and secondly, the diversion of it, it shall be turned upon their Oppressors. See verse 12.

a very little] Heb. a little little, or, a small little, or, a little of a little. A very short time: as chap. 29. 17. So Psalm 30. 5. but a moment lasts his anger: and, for a moment, a small moment, ch. 54. 7, 8.

mine indignation shall cease] To wit, toward my people. I will no longer be angry, chap. 27. 4. & 54. 9. Ezek. 16. 42. See Dan. 11. 36.

and mine anger in their destruction] This latter branch is diverfly expounded, both by the Jewish Doctors, and our Writers. Some understand it of the Jewish people, and expound it of Gods anger against them, for their sins and excesses: for their detestable enormities, saith one: supposing the word to have the same notion with one in found neer unto it, that signifies beastiality, Levit. 18. 23. & 20. 12. or, inveterate evills, as coming from a word, which in all likelihood it doth, that signifies to wax old. The works, saith one, of lihood it doth, that signifies to wax old. The works, saith one, of the old Adam, Rom. 6. 6. Eph. 4. 22. But others rather understand it of the Assyrian. Mine indignation shall cease (supplyed from the former branch) upon their destruction; or, shall have its end with them. Or, as others, mine indignation, shall be set upon the consumption of them. For the root, whence it springs, hath a notion in it; as of aldueste, so of decay, and consumption, which oldness brings with it, Heb. 8. 13. So Psal. 32. 2. & 49. 14. Lam. 3. 4. the meaning is, that Gods anger being appeased and pacified towards his people, should be now turned again the Assyrians their adversaries, to destroy and consume them, as Psal. 81. 14. The word is no where else found. For, as for those that would read taclith, for tahlith; though it might come home to the same sense, this latter word being found from the same spring, with those other two before used, verse 23, 25.

22, 23. and seem to be also used in the same sense: as Iob 26. 10. yet they go against the general stream of the original copies, which are reported in all approved editions to represent the other term. The change of the number from the singular to the plural, as from the king to his forces, is so frequent, that it need not be insisted on here.

V. 26. And the Lord of hosts] Or, For, chap. 9. 11. Of Lord of hosts. See ch. 1. 9, ver. 16. one greater then his hosts; and that hath other manner of hosts at command, Pf. 103. 20.

shall stir up a scourge for him] Or, will raise up a scourge against him] This scourge is one of his host above, of his Angels, ch. 37. 36. termed Gods hosts, Gen. 32. 1, 2. Psal. 103. 21. here called a scourge, to answer the word rod, ver. 24. the king of Assyria both a rod for Gods people; but God hath a scourge in store for him; to whip him away from them, when he hath by him, as with a rod, chastised them for their folly, ver. 5, 12. See ch. 18. 15, 18.

according to the slaughter of Midian] Heb. stroke; as chap. 27. 7. God will smite him, as he smote the Midianites, and made a slaughter of them, in a strange and sudden manner, in the night, when nothing less was looked for. See ch. 9. 4. and the story, Judg. 7. 22.

at the rock of Oreb] So called of Oreb, a chief Prince of Midian; who after the discomfiture of his army, was in fight taken, and there slain, Judg. 7. 26. Psal. 83. 9, 11. 29 was Sennacherib also, after the defeat of his forces, in the Temple of his idol, chap. 37. 37, 38.

and as his rod was upon the sea; so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt] Or, and according to his staff lift over the Sea; (for so the Hebrew runs in way of connexion to the former clause: nor is the word rod, but staff) so (Heb. and: as ch. 53. 7.) shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt, (Heb. in the way of Egypt; as ver. 24.) at the time of their paffage, out of Egypt, as some; or rather, to destroy the Assyrians now, as he did the Egyptians then. He alludes to Moles his staff held up, over the red Sea, Exod. 14. 26. For there seems no ground for that exposition, that some give, applying this wholly to the Assyrians expedition, to wit, that his staff; that is, his power, or, his army; and he with it, going against the Ethiopian; should pals the red Sea into Egypt: and in his way from Egypt, should return again to Jerusalem; for neither do the relations seem probable; nor doth the exposition well cohere with the tenour of the text. See on ver. 24.

V. 27. And it shall come to pass in that day, that] As ver. 20.

his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck; and the yoke shall be destroyed] Thou shalt not only be freed from thole heavy exactions, that the Assyrian laid upon thee, and delivered out of the present distractions and distresses, that he put thee to by his forcible invasion and siege; but his might shall be so quelled, and his power impaired, that he shall not be able to afflict thee again in like manner. See ver. 12. 16--19. & ch. 28. 6. A type of the deliverance of Gods people in that manner from the tyranny of sin and Satan, that they never come to recover that power again, that they had in them, and over them before, Rom. 6. 6--14. 1 Joh. 3. 8, 9. See ch. 9. 4.

his burden] The Assyrians; by him imposed, ch. 14. 25. burden for all manner of chastisement, and oppression, Exod. 2. 11.

shall be taken away] Heb. shall remove, Pf. 81. 6.

thy shoulder] The part of mans body ordinarily employed for bearing of burdens. See ch. 9. 6.

his yoke] Used in the same notion with burden, but put more specially for servitude and bondage, Deut. 28. 48. See chapter 9. 4.

the yoke shall be destroyed] Or, corrupted, as the Greek; as a thing putrified and rotten, Job 17. 1. and so the old latine renders it; not barely taken off: for it might then come on again: nor broken onely, for it might then be repaired; and being made up again, might afterward again be used as before. But destroyed, so corrupted, and spoyled, as disabled from recovery of the like strength, or made use of to the like purpose again, to yoke and vex any, as before it had done, fulfilled in Sennacherib and his forces, ch. 37. 36--38. See ch. 14. 25.

because of the anointing] Heb. from the face of, or, before, (as Gen. 36. 6, 7. Exod. 9. 11. ch. 7. 3, 15. 16.) the oyl, or ointment: as Eccles. 7. 1. ch. 57. 9. this some refer to the Assyrian yoke, which say they, was corrupted and spoyled, with exceffive fatnels: bodies, say they, overgrown with fat, become unweldy, and purfie, and therefore blow much, and many times are suddenly stifled. Which they apply to the Assyrian, clogged with wealth, Hab. 2. 6. puft up with pride, ver. 13. breathing out blasphemies, ver. 11, 15. 2 Chron. 32. 19. and suddenly brought to nought, ver. 16, 17. But this seems many bows wide from the scope of the Prophet in this place. The Jewish Writers generally carry it home, as the Chaldee also doth to the Messias: but understanding by Messias, not the Saviour to come, but Ezekiah, partaker of that holy oyl, wherewith David, his Progenitor, and other the Kings of Judah, had been annointed, Psal. 89. 20. Nay do some of ours disallow it, acknowledging, that God, at Ezekiahs suit, and out of special favour to him, vouchsafed them this deliverance, 2 Chron. 32, 20, 21. adding further, some of them, that God had therein also regard to his people, his Saints, his annointed ones, among them, and to that precious oyl of spiritual grace, wherewith they are all; in some measure anointed, Psal. 105. 15. 2 Cor. 1. 21, 22. 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27. But unto Christ principally, of whom Ezekiah herein was a type, the true Messias, the anointed of God, in a peculiar and singular manner, far above and beyond all other, Psal. 2. 1. & 45. 7. Dan. 9. 24. Luk. 4. 18, 21. Joh. 3. 34. Act. 4. 27. & 10. 38. Heb. 1. 9. and he, on whom are found all the gracious, both promises of deliverance, and performances thereof, at any time unto Gods people, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and unto him doth this our Evangelical Prophet still carry them up, chap. 7. 14. & 9. 4--6. We need not therefore, with divers Commenters upon this place, stand beating our brains to devise what a yoke, and oyl, have to do the one with the other: one telling us, that oyl takes away the hard knobs, and knotty parts of a yoke: another, that it helps to soften and diffolve the thongs, that fasten the parts of it one to another. Another, that oyl spoyls iron, and that that peradventure an iron, not a woodden yoke, may be meant here; as Deut. 28. 48. Jer. 14. 13, 14. with other the like frivolous and groundless fancies: since, that the mention of oyl here, is not, as of an instrument, or means, whereby the yoke should be broken, and diffolved; but as of a motive, or inducement, in regard whereof, God would vouchsafe to do, what in this case and kind there was to be done.

V. 28. He is come, &c] The Prophet here defcribeth the progress of Sennacherib, with his army marching along from place to place in his several jesses towards Jerusalem; as if it were a thing present; or as if he plainly beheld it, in a Prophetical rapture or vision; or were going along in company with them. See ch. 2. 1. and before hand itheweth, which way he would come; to wit, through the land of Benjamin, whereunto most of the Towns, hereafter mentioned, did appertain. See somewhat the like, of the enemies march towards Babylon, ch. 13. 5. and Jer. 4. 7.

to Ayath] Or, the territory of Ay, Gen. 12. 8. Josh. 7. 2. Ezr. 2. 28. Neh. 7. 32. for the city was by Iosiua utterly overthrown, Josh. 8. 28. & 10. 1. another from that mentioned, Jer. 49. 3.

he is passed to Migron] Mentioned, as belonging to Gibea, 1 Sam. 14. 2.

at Michmash, he hath laid up his carriages] Heb. made to visit his vessels. Either for his baggage there, that he may march on with more expedition; as Jer. 36. 20. or, mustered, and taken a survey of his train, and provisions, that what is any way defective, may be supplyed, as Num. 1. 29. & 2. 33. ch. 28. 10. Of the place, see 1 Sam. 13. 1. & 14. 5. Ezr. 2. 27.

V. 29. They are gone over the passage] Not the fords of Iordan; as some suppose; or some other brook, as others: but the streights between the hills, neer Michmash. Of which, see 1 Sam. 13. 23. & 14. 1, 4, 5.

they have taken up their lodging at Geba] Heb. lodged a lodging. This place seemed to have been on the one side of the forementioned passage, as Michmash on the other. See 1 Sam. 14. 5. & Neh. 11. 31.

Ramah is afraid] The Inhabitants are terrified by the approach of the enemy. Of Ramah, see Iosiua 18. 25. Ier. 31. 15.

Gibeah of Saul] So called, because Saul was from thence, and there dwelt, 1 Sam. 10. 26. & 11. 4, & 15. 34.

is fled] Not the place it self, but those, that dwelt in it, for fear of the Assyrian Army. So ver. 31.

V. 30. Lift up thy voice] Heb. cry shrill with thy voice. See chap. 12. 6. make a grievous outcry, as is wont to be done, upon discovery of some eminent and imminent danger, chap. 15. 4, 5. & 21. 8. Matth. 14. 26.

O daughter of Gallim] Or, O daughter Gallim. Of the place, see 1 Sam. 25. 44. of the phrase, chap. 1. 8. The Town seems to be so termed, from heaps, hillocks, or land-banks, neer unto it, or about it. For so the word signifies, ch. 37. 26.

cause it to be heard] Cause thy voice to be heard, that they may also take notice of the enemies approach. See the like, chap. 15. 5.

unto Laish] A City possessed by the Danites, Iudg. 18. 14, 27. 29.

O poor Anathoth] The place of Ieremies birth and abode, Ier. 1. 1. & 11. 21, 23. & 32. 7. See Iosh. 21. 18. called poor, because supprised of the Assyrians, and plundered by them.

V. 31. Madmenah is removed] Her Inhabitants are gone, as those of Gibeah, ver. 29. Of the Town, belonging to the Tribe of Iudah, see Iosh. 15. 31.

the inhabitants of Gebim] This place seems so termed, from some store of ditches about it. For that the name importeth. See on ch. 33. 4. 1 King. 2. 16.

gather themselves to flee] Or, rather, have retired; are fled, as Ier. 46. & 6. 1. For that appears to be the true notion of the word, from Exod. 9. 19. 20. by comparing the one verse with the other.

V. 32. As yet shall he remain at Nob, that day] Heb. Yet this day at Nob is he to stand, or, stay, as Gen. 45. 1. Deut. 5. 31. Sam. 7. 18. (a place abused, to prove, that David sate at the commencing of that his solemn prayer) he shall make stay this day there: or, as the old Latine hath it, Yet a day for him to stand at Nob, that is, he hath now but a daies journey, to bring him thither, to arrive with his army there. Of the place, see 1 Sam. 21. 1. Neh. 11. 32.

he shall shake his hand, against the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem] Being come to Nob, from whence he might see Jerusalem; Sion especially, the higher part; he shall in contempt of the city, and as in a menacing way, intending to be with her ere long, shake his hand at her (the same word is here used, that was before, ver. 15.) or, as some, he shall so do by his Messengers, when he comes by them before her: and that is the worst he shall be able to do to her, in regard of what he intended against her. He shall threaten and threaten her, and by that means, it may be, affright her: but he shall not so much as assault her, and much less supprize her, chap. 37. 33, 35. Yea, as he wags his hand now, at her; so the after his defeat shall wag her head, in scorn and derision, at him, ch. 37. 22. whereof, also, some would expound this passage; but the words will not well bear it. But a learned Writer gives a different interpretation from others, of this whole verse: Which, having related only, I shall leave to the judgment of others. He thus renders the text, supposing it to be more day yet, then to day at Nob; he shall move his hand toward the Mount of the Daughter of Sion: that is, he shall, by the motion of his hand, as he rides to and fro among his troops, make signs to them, not to stay; but to march on toward Jerusalem. The like haste in the Chaldeans march thither-ward, see described, Jer. 6. 4.

mount] Whereon Zion, that is, that strong fort, and the upper part of the city, called the city of David, 2 Sam. 5. 7, 9. was situate; as threatning her greatest strength, that it should be unable to withstand him.

the hill] For the city stood upon a knole, or rising. See Jer. 17. 3.

V. 33. Behold the Lord, the Lord of hosts, &c.] The passage in these two verses, (which the Prophet begins with a remarkable note, requiting more sedulous attention, and serious consideration; Of which, see ch. 3. 1.) is by divers diversly expounded and applyed. Some expounding it all of the defeat given to the Assyrian: Some, of the havock made by his forces among the people of Judah: Others, the former part, ver. 33. of the one; and the latter, ver. 34. of the other. I shall follow the first, (though contrary to some of great note therein,) as most agreeable to the drift and tenour of the Prophets discourse; who having before encouraged Gods people, those of Jerusalem especially, against the dreadful expectation of the Assyrian invasion; and yet, after that, related his progress and proceedings from place to place with his potent Army; that affrighted and enforced to fly all before him, whithersoever therewith he advanced: and his approaches in menacing manner with it to Jerusalem; because this might minister matter of much terrour, even to Jerusalem it self; and those that should resort thither for succour, he now, that they might not thereby be dishearten'd, enforneth them in the next place, how the Lord would deal with him, and these his forces, wherewith he threatned Jerusalem. He would take them down in an unexpected manner, and disable him and them from doing ought further against it.

Behold] As if he had said, Mark yet, and behold a strange change. Ye have heard of a furious and forcible approach of an insolent tyrant. Wait but a while, and ye shall see his pride pulled down, and his enterprize against you utterly frustrate.

the Lord, the Lord of hosts] One mightier then he, as vers. 24, 26.

shall lop the bough] Heb. word for word, shall branch, or, bough, the brittels, or, bough: to branch, or, bough; for, to cut, or lop off, either, as to root out, for, to root out, Job 31. 12. Psal. 52. 5. See the like, ch. 22. 5. the one word signifies not so much to prune and pare away superfluous or the spray, or the lower wathy branches next to the ground; as to lop and fell the bigger boughs, and great arms, or the loftiest of them that bear the most fruit; which the word, from whence that here used, is specially coined for, this purpose, and no where else read) cometh, doth properly signifie, Ezek. 17. 5, 6. chap. 19. 6. and 27. 10. in regard whereof, the highest cliffs of rocks are by the same term designed, Jud. 15. 8, 11. chap. 2. 21. & 57. 5. the other word imports, not a bare bough, or branch; but a brave bough, or, branch: (for thence the word, bravery, that, 3. 18.) a bough, or branch, adorned, adorned, and beautified with leaves, and fruit, Ezek. 17. 6. & 31. 5, 6, 8, 12, 13. put here collectively, bough, for boughes: as tree, for trees, ver. 19. So that, hereby is meant, that God would cut down the chief and principal, those of greatest state and might, in Sennacherib's army; such, as are likened to high boughs, and tall trees, ch. 2. 13. ver. 18. ch. 18. 5.

with terrour] Or, with violence. In most terrible manner, as the like word is used, ch. 8. 14. & 29. 20. For this word is also without fellow; but comes of one, that signifies both to fear, and to fright.

and the high ones of stature shall be hewed down] As Amos 2. 9. the same in effect, reiterated in other terms; but with some amplification: as if he had said, not the boughs only shall be lopped, but the trees also, even the tallest of them, fell'd, his Princes whom he mated with Kings, ver. 8.

and the haughty shall be humbled] Thus shall Sennacherib's plumes be plucked, and his pride pulled down; as was before threatned, ver. 12. See ch. 2. 11.--17.

V. 34. And he shall cut down the thickets of the forrests] Or, forrest, rather, for so it is in the original; that is, the main body of his army. For might, and multitude, compared to a wood, or forrest full of trees, as before, ver. 18. See also ch. 9. 18.

with iron] Or, as with iron. The note of similitude to be supplyed: as ver. 26. that is, as with iron tools, axes, and hatchets, or the like, wherewith boughs are wont to be lopt, and trees fell'd. See Jer. 46. 22, 23.

and Lebanon shall fall] Hence some would inferr, that this verse at least, must be understood, not of Sennacherib's Army; but of the strength and glory of the Jewish people pulled down by him, because Lebanon was one of the boundaries of their Countrey, Deut. 11. 24. Josh. 1. 4. and is sometime applyed to it and them, and more specially, to Jerusalem, ler. 22. 6, 20, 23. Zach. 10. 10. & 11. 1. But to omit, that Jerusalem, fell not by Sennacherib, being defeated of his purpose: Mount Lebanon abounding with goodly tall cedars, and other timber trees, and famous far and neer; for the fame is commonly used to resemble, as well other States, persons, and people, as those of the Jews, in comparison taken from woods and forests especially. Yea, the Assyrian king, in particular, is called a Cedar of Lebanon, Ezek. 31. 3. and Carmel, though in a Mount of Israel, is in this verse, argument applyed to him and his forces, ver. 18. Lebanon therefore, as the Jewish Rabbines well observe, is no other here then the Assyrian vast host; for might and multitude, likened to that mountain, and the trees that it bore.

by a mighty one] As Psal. 93. 4. or, an excellent one: as the word is rendred, Psal. 8. 1, 9. & 76. 4. or, a goodly one; as Ezek. 17. 23. or, a gallant one, as chap. 33. 21. or, a glorious one, as in the same places that is, by an Angel, ch. 37. 36. or rather, (as most, both Jewish and others agree) then as some; who, by Lebanon, understanding Sannacherib himself, who sustained that army, as mount Lebanon did the trees, that grew on it, would by this great and gallant one, have meant his son and heir, that slew him, which seems not to agree with the story, which tells us, that two of his sons slew him, and a third of them succeeded him, ch. 37. 38. or, as Others, who by Lebanon, would understand the Temple at Jerusalem, built with the Cedars of Lebanon, 1 King. 5. 10, 11. burnt down by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 25. 9.

CHAP. XI.

Vers. 1. And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse] Or, as Some. For, as Chap. 10. 17. whether way we read it, is not much material. The manner of this our Prophet is, as hath formerly bin observed, upon occasion of particular deliverances, and restitutions, more remarkable then ordinary, related or foretold; to rise higher and proceed further, even unto that more general deliverance of mankind, and spiritual restauration, and enlargement of the Church by the Messias at his coming; which is therefore not unduly here annexed unto that, which he had in the close of the former Chapter delivered, concerning the deliverance of Jerusalem and the remainder of Judah, by the defeat and fall of the Assyrian King and his forces; chap. 10. 27, 37, 38. a type of the spiritual enemies of the Church, utterly quelled by Christ, Col. 2. 15. Howbeit, it may well be conceived to be, not in way of bare confession, onely annexed, but by way of declaration also subjoyned, to the former, as rendering a reason, why it was said, that God would deliver and preserve that people, for the anointing, chap. 10. 27. to wit, because of the Messias, who was to come of that people, and that family, which God would therefore have preserved. Some of the late Jewish Writers would draw all this to Ezekiah, wherein some of ours also go too too far, yet not denying, but that Ezekiah is therein considered, as a type of the Messias, of whom also the most, even of the latter Jewish commentators, therein concuring with the ancient Talmudists; expound this place. And among these, some of them give this connexion of this passage with the former. Having there expounded, that excellent, or, gallant one, by whom Sennacherib's forces should fall, to be Ezekiah, for whose pucity, and piety wherein he excelled, being one of those, whom the Psalmist gives that title to, Ps. 16. 3. & 86. the prophet, Jer. 30. 21. (in both which places, the same word is used,) God should upon his prayer, give the enemy that defeat, and vouchsafe those of Judah that deliverance: because, say they, it might be further demanded, yea, but what shall become of those of Israel, that the Assyrian carried captive unto Halah, and Habor, 2 King. 17. 6. to this Prophet here answers unto that the Messias, when he comes, one of the same stock with Ezekiah, he shall gather them together, and bring them back again, and do more wonderful things for them, then ever was done for Ezekiah, alluding to the term of wonderment, used, ch. 9. 6. which they apply to Ezekiah. Thus they acknowledging, not Ezekiahs, but the Messias, to be here meant.

a rod] Or, a twig, such as rods are made of. The word is no where else found, save here, and Prov. 14. 3. where a fooles tongue is termed, a twig of: pride, wherewith he is twitting, and twigging of others, for, for which, by others, he comes to be twigged himself. However therefore, some following, therein the Chaldee Paraphrast, understand by it, a royall scepter, as another word seems to import, used of Christ, Gen. 49. 10. Psal. 45. 6. Yet in this place to me, it seems to have respect rather to the meanness and weakness of Christs appearance in our humane nature, and the low condition, wherein here he lived, rather like to some tender and sorry twig, then to a goodly bough, or a kingly Sceptre, chap. 53. 2.

the Stem of Jesse] Stem, or, trunk, or, stump. For the word signifies properly, the stump of a plant, tree, or shrub, left in the ground, when the main body of it is felled, or cut away, Job. 14. 7, 8. chap. 40. 24. like that in Nebuchadnezars dream, Dan. 4. 15, 23. Whereupon, some suppose, that these words have reference to the lopping, and felling of the Jewish state and people, by the Assyrian mentioned, as they suppose, chap. 10. 37, 38. And so begin the chapter, with an adversative; But, or, Yet. As implying, that notwithstanding that State, compared to a goodly Cedar, were so impaired, and impoverished, that it might justly be deemed, rather a sorry stump, then a tree; yet from it, should sprout out a sprig, that should do strange things. For the exposition of the former passage, and the connexion of this with it, enough hath been already said. But for the term here used, it is not denyed, but that the house of David, and the strength, state, and wealth of it, was much impaired in those times, as well by the defection of the ten tribes, as the invasion of these their brethren, by the Syrians, Assyrians, and others. Nor is it improbable, that the Prophet, had here an, eye thereunto. But withall it is most likely, that he principally respected the mean and low estate, that the family of David was to be brought unto, at the time of Christs birth, when Joseph, his father in law, and Mary his Mother, both of the blood royal, and lineally defended from David, Matth. 1. 1, 16. Luke 1. 27, 32. & 2. 33, 34. were the one a poor Carpenter, and the other of as mean a condition as he, Matth. 13. 55. Mar. 6. 3. Luk. 4. 22. So that the royal stem might then seem to be utterly withered, and in a manner clean away, in regard whereof he saith, not, the stock of David; but the stump of Jesse, a private man of no power or state, nor of any great esteem, 1 Sam. 18. 18, 23. 2 Sam. 30, & 22. 7. thereby to intimate from how mean a condition, in the eyes of flesh and blood, the Messias, as man, should take this his rise, ch. 53. 2.

and a branch shall grow out of his roots] That same in effect (which in this Prophet is very frequent) with the former.

a branch] Or, a sprig, or a scion. Such as they are wont to graff with, ch. 60. 21. and Babel is compared to a rotten sprig, or branch, ch. 14. 19. The Messias indeed is termed a branch, Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 15. Zach. 3. 8. but it is another word that is there used. The word sprig, seems better here to suit with the word twig, that went before, and in found comes somewhat near it, and they go yet further off, who with the Latine render it a flower. Both the word here used, it is by many learned writers deemed, that the evangelists hath, that Christ was to be called, not a Nazarite, such as Samson was, though a type of Christ, Judg. 13. 7. Or, such as those, in the law, that cut not their hair, nor drank wine, nor touched any dead corpse. For what is sirreverior and groundless, and for the latter two, it is certain, first, it is fabulous, and groundless, and for the latter two, it is certain, that he did both drink wine, Matth. 11. 19. & 26. 9. and touch dead bodies, Matth. 9. 25. Luk. 7. 14. (besides, that the word of separation, whence that name comes, is written with a divers character from the word here used,) nor a Nazarene, which signifies one of Nazareth, or, Nasareth, the Town where he was brought up, Mar. 14. 67. & 16. 6. Luk. 4. 34. which is supposed to have had the name, from the word here used, as a place, which being fit for fruit trees, had notice planting of them about it. But a Nazarite, or a Nazarene, (for both readings are found, Act. 24. 5. & 26. 9.) that is, as well the sprig one, here prophesied of, as one of, Nazarenes, breed, or abide, Matth. 2. 23.

shall grow] Or, shall, as it is rendred, Ps. 132. 17. or sprung up, as Ps. 85. 12. ch. 44. 4.

out of his roots] Who these roots should be expositors differ, and some run upwards and fetch in Abraham, Isaack, and Jacob, with all Jesses Ancestors. Others, run downward, and bring in Davkl, and Nathan, with all Jesses Posterity, his sons, and sons sons, as the Chaldee yeilds it. For Jesse say they, was as the grain of salt into the ground, those of his posterity, were as the roots, or stirings of the root, that from the grain swelling in the ground sprout out. The phrase imports the very same, but with further emphasis, that was before said, the stump, there, is the roots, here; the stump, as some small or short part of the stem, or stock above ground, Dan. 4. 15. the root is that, that lyes under-ground, Job. 14. 8. before Jesse, that is, his house or race; whence this twig was to shoot forth, was said to be, as a stump, that is, less neer, but somewhat above the ground, when the main body of the tree is gone. Now it is likned to the root of a plant, or tree, for cut away that nothing of it is left to be a-bove ground; so that the sprig that springs from it, cannot needs rise immediately from the root it self, nothing appearing above ground from whence it might sprout. So did Ezekiah say to proceed from the root of Ahaz his father, whose root, that is, power, had been utterly broken, ch. 14. 29. Yea, so in a spiritual place, where the same terms here used, are found, Dan. 11. 16, 7. of the daughter of the Southern king, given in marriage to the Northern, it is said, that out of a sprig from her roots, one should stand up; when, neither she should retain any power, nor her husband stand; and both he that brought her, and he that began her, (or, as some, whom she beg at) and he that supported her, should all be given up. Wherein the like phrase conduceth much o the clearing of this. See of the small beginnings in shew of Christ and his kingdome, those parables, Matth. 13. 31, 32, 33. Mark 4. 30, 32.

V. 2. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him] He proceeds here, to shew the transcendent excellencies, and endowments of this rod, or sprig, that should rise, and spring up from so poor, and sorry a stock, by means whereof he should be enabled to effect and accomplish, such strange, and unheard of atchievements as are hereafter anentioned.

The Spirit of the Lord] The Holy Ghost, which proceedeth from God the Father, Joh. 15. 26. and which over-shadowed the Virgin in the conception of our Saviour, Luk. 1. 35. though some understand by the Spirit here, God the Father, who is a Spirit also, Joh. 4. 24. and is said to dwell in Christ, Joh. 14. 10. Some, again, the Son, the Second Person, called his Eternall Spirit, Heb. 9. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 18. 19. But that which was given in the first place, seems most probable; because the three Persons are here distinctly propounded, as also, Psal. 45. 6, 7. chap. 61. 1. and as distinctly appeared at his baptism; the Father in the cloud: the Son, in the river: the Holy-Ghost in the Dove, Matth. 3. 16, 17.

shall rest upon him] Not come upon him only, as it did upon his Mother, in the conceiving of him, Luk. 1. 35. nor be upon him only; ch. 61. 1. but rest, and abide with him; take up in a more special, yea singular manner, its perpetual and never interrupted, or eclipsed residence with him, and in him, typified by the Holy Ghost descending in the likeness of a dove, at the time of his baptism, and resting upon him, Matth. 3. 16. the sign given John, who baptised him, whereby to know him, Joh. 1. 32, 33.

and remained upon him] Somewhat like phrase is used, where it is said, that the Spirit of Elias rested upon Elisæus, 2 King. 2. 15. as also of those elders, concerning whom God told Moses, that he would take of the Spirit that was upon him, and put it upon them, it is said, that when he so did, the Spirit rested upon them; and when it rested upon them, they did incessantly prophesy, Num. 11. 17, 25, & 26. yet not on them, or in them, so as on Christ, not corporally, in the Apostles sense, as in him, Col. 2. 9. not fully as in him, Col. 1. 19. but partially; I will take of it, saith God, not incessantly, and unfailably as in him. For though they prophesied incessantly, while the Spirit rested upon them, yet it appears not, that that prophetical Spirit was always so with them, for then should they have done nothing but prophesied; whereas they were sent apart for other employments, Num. 11. 17. 25.

The Spirit of, &c.] The Prophet having said in general that the Spirit of God should rest on him, goes on to recite some heads of the rich of particular endowments, wherewith the Messias, in his humane nature, should be superabundantly furnished, above all creatures, man or Angels, not for his own private use, or honour alone; but for the managing of his spiritual kingdom; and the sufficient supply with the like graces, and endowments, according to their necessary employments, and due proportions of all those, that had interest in him, Joh. 1. 14, 16. 3. 34. & 7. 38, 39. Act. 2. 33. Eph. 4. 13, 15, 16. Col. 1. 18. & 2. 3, 9, 10. for the Spirit is put, sometime, for the Holy Ghost it self, the third person in the Trinity, Joh. 3. 8. 1 Cor. 12. 4, 6, 8. 1 Joh. 22. 27. and so it is to be understood, in the former branch. Sometime, for the graces and spiritual endowments, that are given by the Spirit, either ordinary, or extraordinary, Joh. 7. 39. Which place, would being compared with Acts, 19. 2. help to clear that place, almost generally, much mistaken; as if the persons there spoken of, were wholly ignorant of the being of the Holy-Ghost; whereas the Apostles question, was of some extraordinary gifts of it; and their answer suitable to his demand. So Rom. 8. 23. 2 Cor. 1. 22. 1 Thes. 4. 8. & 5. 19. 2 Thes. 2. 8. and so is it to to be taken in this latter branch, for the graces of the Spirit. And the word Spirit, is prefixed, and repeated again, and again, before these endowments, to intimate, that Christ, should not have these, or the like parts, or gifts, as men commonly have these, either as natural, or acquisite faculties, enabling them to the performance of natural offices, and the managing of worldly affairs; but that they should be in him, of a far more sublime, a spiritual, celestial, and divine nature; as proceeding from the Spirit of God; dwelling in him. Col. 2. 9. Jam. 3. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 4. Howbeit, some take the Spirit, in this branch, also, as in the former, for the Holy Ghost it self, expounding the words thus, The Spirit of wisedome, &c. that is, The Spirit that worketh in mens hearts, those graces; and that should conferr them, in a singular manner upon him; which yet in effect will come home to that, which was before said; for the substance of the matter here intended. Spiritual endowments here mentioned, are six in number, how soever our popish writers, following the old version, thank without due reason, Jumbles some passages together here; and twelve by both from the terms in the original, and the tenour of the context, make seven of them, to answer the number of the seven Spirits, mentioned by John. Rev. 1. 4. & 4. 5. exhibited in the times of the new testament, then of the old. But neither was it the Prophets purpose, to relate all the endowments of

of wisedome and understanding] This is the first pair of those Spirituall endowments: and those two are here distinguished: as also Deut. 4. 6. Prov. 2. 6. & 4. 5. & 7. 4. But how to be limited in their distinct notions, is not easie to determine. Some would have the former such a gift, as fit one to be a teacher: 1 Cor. 12. 8. The latter such a gift, as fits one to be a learner; able to understand that, that is delivered by the teacher. Mat. 24. 15. 2 Tim. 2. 7. Others by wisdome understand, skill, in divine matters; by understanding, prudence in politick affairs. Others distinguish them, as antecedent, and consequent; making wisdome the gift, of illumination, Eph. 1. 18 Heb. 6. 4. & 10. 32. and understanding, the apprehending, and judging of things aright, by help of that light. Rom. 2. 18. 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15, And th is I take to be most probable; though some suppose, the one to be adjoyned to the other, by way of exposition onely. Many other distinctions of them, the Schooldmen deliver: but such, as divers of them groundlesse; and most such, as do not so well fit the text as mine: it is necessary to over-clog this work with. These two, God promised to bestow upon Solomon, as two endowments most needful for the government of his people. 1 King. 3. 12. And these therefore are in a far larger manner conferred upon him who was far greater then Solomon, Mat. 12. 42. and of whose kingdom, Solomons was but a shadow, Psal. 45. 6. Heb. 1. 8.

the spirit of counsel, and might] This is the second pair of endowments, and contains two vertues, very requisite to the managing of a State, ch. 36. 5. to wit, counsel, and courage. Where again by counsel, some understand ability to advise, and direct others, by courage, and ability, to execute advice given by others: as if they belonged to several persons, or subjects. But by counsel, I conceive he meant that faculty, whereby a man is enabled to manage his affairs to the best advantage, and to find out an issue in matters intricate and perplexed, Prov. 20. 18. & 24. 6. Luk. 14. 31. By courage, (for so I would rather render it) that vertue, whereby a man is enabled, resolutly to undertake, and undantedly to go through with, whatsoever his place, or office necessarily requires of him, (seem it never so hazardous, 1 Sam. 14. 6, 13. & 17. 32. 2 Sam. 23. 16. Neh. 6. 11. Esth. 4. 16. Psal. 18. 32. And these two proportionably mixt together, make an excellent composure.

the Spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord] The third pair of spiritual endowments found in Christ; which Some again would so distinguish, as the one befitting a teacher, as importing skill in interpretation of Scripture, Mal. 2. 8. Luk. 11. 52. The other belonging to a learner Deut. 17. 19. Psal. 25. 14. & 34. 11. But that distinction hites not so well with this place, where the Messias is propounded: not so much, as a Teacher, and much less, as a learner; But as a mighty Prince, able directly and righteously, to manage a large dominion, and to over-reach, and overpower all the enemies thereof.

knowledge] How to distinguish this from the two first, many much trouble themselves, and so cross one another, that it is hard to find any two that concur, too tedious it would be to relate their dissenting judgments. To leave them therefore to their jarring debates; the rather, because the words are in Scripture oft promiscuously used. By knowledge, we may well here understand the power of discerning the true nature of things, even the most hidden, and abstruse, as the secretest thoughts, and motions of mens hearts. 1 King. 8. 39. Prov. 15. 11. Jer. 17. 9, 10. Act. 1. 24. & 15. 8. 1 Joh. 3. 20. that which is in Speciall manner ascribed to Christ, Matth. 9. 4. Luk. 5. 22. 1 Joh. 2. 17. Heb. 4. 12. Rev. 2. 23.

and of the fear of the Lord] That which Solomon makes after David his father, Psal. 111. 10. the prime part, if not, the principal piece of wisdome, Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10. and Job before them both, wisdome it self, Job. 28. 28. But much doubt is made, how any fear of God should be in Christ; unto whom yet, some such things seems to be attributed, Heb. 5. 7. And if we shall consider, that there is not only a fear of wrath, which even the worst may have. Jam. 2. 19. and a fear of sinning, which even the best must have, while they live here, Eccles. 9. 2. Prov. 28. 13. but a fear of honour and reverence also, that accompanies and seasons all service of God, Psal. 2. 11. & 5. 7. Heb. 12. 28. such as even the blessed Saints and Angels, retain still in heaven, we need not doubt, but that Christ, who adored God, as he was man, Joh. 4. 22. though, he were adored, and that by the Angels themselves, as he was God. Heb. 1. 6. did bear a reverent affection unto his Father whom he worshipped. Matth. 11. 25. Joh. 11. 41. & 17. 1, 2. and whole servant, also, he is said to be chap. 42. 1. and 53. 11.

V. 3. And shall, &c.] Before, were the excellent endowments of Christ; now follows the employment and exercise of these his parts and endowments, in the administration of his Royal power and place.

Shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord] Heb. he shall fast, or, smell; or, it shall make him fast, or, smell, in the fear the Lord. This, some, following the former version, understand of the Party spoken of, on whom the Spirit doth thus rest; he shall fast, or smell, or breath of nothing, but what is pious, and religious. He shall send out such a sweet fent in all his courses, as shall favour of that precious spiritual oyl of piety, and godliness, wherewith he was so abundantly anointed, Psal. 45. 7. Iee Cant. 1. 2. See somewhat also the like of Jacob, Gen. 27. 27. Of Gods people in general, Hos. 14. 6. and of the Apostles, more especially, 2 Cor. 2. 14, 15. but they, so from Christ, through Christ, and the Gospel of Christ, and the knowledge of Christ, which they bare about with them, 2 Cor. 4. 6, 7. nor do some of those, that admit the latter version, depart much from this sense, to wit, that the Spirit resting upon him, should make him to fill all places where he comes, as the Apostle speaks of himself, and his associates, with such a sweet favour, as the sent of the ointment, poured upon his head, filled the whole house with, where he then was, Matth. 26. 7. Joh. 12. 3. But others, rather of those, that take the latter way, understand it of sharpnesse of judgment: the forementioned Spirit, shall make him of quick understanding, or, judgment; not in worldly affairs, Luk. 12. 14. things far beneath his cognisance, Joh. 18. 36. but either in matters of piety and godlines, in discerning of those things, that are agreeable thereunto, and that disagree from the same: whatsoever shew they may have for with them, or gloss may be set on them, Rom. 2. 18. Phil. 1. 9, 10. Col. 2. 8, 23. or, in judging of mens persons and inward dispositions, whether they have the power of piety within them, 2 Tim. 3. 5. whether their hearts be sincere, and upright, or no, Joh. 1. 47. and to discover the hypocrisy of hollow hearted persons, through all those masks and semblances, vails and pretences, under which they shroud, and wherewith they strive to cover and conceal their unsoundnesse, Matth. 22. 18. & 23. 25, 27, 28. Luk. 16. 15. Joh. 2. 23, 25. & 6. 26, 70. It is a metaphor taken from the sense of smelling, which, saith one of the Jewish Doctors upon the place, is surer and less subject to deceit and mistake, where it is quick and vigorous, then either the hearing, or thesight. And it is, as if the Prophet had said, he shall be so quick of sent, in discrying things of this nature, that he will smell out an hypocrite, though he neither see his face, or hear his voyce, though his face promise, or his voyce protest the contrary, Matth. 6. 16. & 7. 21, 22, 23. And this exposition, the words following confirm.

in the fear of the Lord] This term is used in Scripture, Sometime for that reverent disposition that man bears unto God, either as his Soveraign Lord and Master, or as his Father in Christ. 1 King. 18. 3, 12. Neh. 7. 2. sometime, for the service and worship of God, 2 King. 17. 25, 28, 32, 33, 34, 41. because it ought to proceed from it, and be seasoned with it, Heb. 12. 28. Sometime, for all pious and religious affection towards God in generall. Psal. 19. 9. Jer. 32. 40. and so it is taken here; though I accord not with those, who would have the fear of the Lord, here mentioned, to comprehend, Synechdochically, all the endowments before named; rendering the words, his feeling, or, smelling, shall be joyned with the fear of the Lord: the last of those graces, and consequently, (because they hang all on one string, and are links all of one chain) with the rest also of them: and the meaning to be, that he should not judge of things, slightly, and weakly, as the manner of men is; but wisely, understandingly, advisedly, resolutly, knowingly, religiously. Which, though all true, yet flusts too much into the text, because more by much, then the word it self, simply, and singly considered imports.

and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes] Or, So that he shall not, &c. as ch. 10. 19. for this is added, as an effect of his sagacity and expertnesse, in judging aright of matters, or persons presented unto him, to be decided, or tryed by him, that it may keep him free in matter of judicature, from being either deluded with fair shews, and out-sides; or misled by colourable, but false, reports.

after the sight of his eyes] Not with respect of mens persons, 2 Chr. 19. 7. Rom. 2. 11. wherein men, many times are faulty, Psal. 82. 2. Jam. 2. 1, 2. Christ is far from it, Joh. 7. 24. 19. Matth. 22. 16. Ver. 4. nor according to outward shews and appearances, as men are wont oft to do, Joh. 7. 24. 2 Cor. 10. 7. because they cannot pierce into mens hearts, or discern their secret intentions, and hidden dispositions, 1 Cor. 2. 11. as Christ being God and man, thus furnished, can do, and doth, 1 Sam. 16. 7. whom no glittering outside, or goodly semblance, can deceive, Jer. 17. 9, 10. Gal. 6. 7.

neither reprove after the hearing of his ears] As he shall not, in regard of externall shews, and appearances, acquit, or approve any, who is in truth, faulty, or inwardly unsound: so he shall not upon any flying report, or forged suggestion, proceed to the censuring, or misdeeming of any, (as men, even the best, now and then do, 1 Sam. 24. 9. 10. 2 Sam. 16. 3, 4. & 19. 24. - 27.) who is not faulty, but free from that, wherewith he is charged, Joh. 1. 8. - 12. & 5. 31. - 36. Phil. 7. 8. - 10. & 13. 1, 5, 6. & 33. 10. He shall not heed, or regard any reports from others, either for men, or against men, (which them are, of necessity, compelled to do, because they cannot come to the notice of things, otherwise: and by reason thereof, being through untrue depositions, misinformed, do by meer mistake; therefore, many times, accordingly pass wrong judgment) but shall alwaies proceed upon certain knowledg of his own, in whatsoever doom and sentence he shall pass upon any, Gen. 18. 21. Joh. 2. 23, 25. in the judgment by God the Father, commited unto him. Joh. 5. 22, 27. Act. 17. 31. Rom. 2. 17. & 14. 10, 12. 1 Cor. 4. 5. 2 Cor. 5. 10. 2 Tim. 4. 1. 1 Pet. 4. 5.

V. 4. But] Heb. And, as ch. 7. 12.

with righteousnesse] Heb. in righteousnesses, as Psal. 96. 13. & 98. 9. that is, justly, uprightly.

judge the poor] That is, judge for them; give sentence in their behalf, and consequently, execut justice for them, as Psal. 72. 4. Jer. 5. 28. 1. ch. 1. 17. He shall minister justice uprightly, equally, impartially, as well to poor, as to rich, Psal. 72. 2, 4.

and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth] The same thing in effect, that was spoken before, but with some little further explication: for instead of judge, here is reprove, or debate, for the word will admit either, if debate, it is to plead for them: as Job. 13. 19. If reprove, admit either, if debate, it is to plead for them: as Job. 13. 19. If reprove, it is to rebuke for them, by word, Psal. 105. 14. or to punish for them, by execution of judgment, Psal. 94. 10. those that wrong, or oppress them, Psal. 72. 4. for justice, he puts equity, or evenneſſe, the same, see Psal. 45. 6. & 98. 9. a term taken from those, that cut out a thing, in dividing it, to an hair, as we say, or, a thread: for the poor, it is here the meek of the earth, or land, alluding to that peculiar place, wherein Gods people did then most abide. So Zeph. 2. 3. to poor, he adds meek, proverb: (for all poor are not meek, no more then all poor in state, poor in spirit, Matth. 5. 3. with Luk. 6. 20. And contrarily, because where power is, and meekneſſe meet, ill-minded men are usually the more prone to abuse, and wrong that, while they observe them content quietly to bear and passe by those abuses and wrongs, that others will not so easily put up. Howbeit, there want not those of note, that expound this branch, not of Christs dealing for such; but of his dealing with them, and they render the words thus; and he will reprove, or, convict, (as the word sometime imports, Psal. 6. 1. & 38. 1.) in uprightneſſe, or, in evenneſſe, (that is, uprightly, evenly,) the meek of the earth, that is, as they conceive it, he will carry an even hand, between the one, and the other, not sparing either, when they do a miss, nor bearing out either in what they are faulty; as God himself gives in charge, Exod. 23. 2, 3. or, he will carry a discreet, and moderate hand, in rebuking, or chastising the meek, and lowly, so as though to correct, and reclaim them, yet, not to dishearten; much less destroy them, ch. 27. 7. - 9. & 48. 9, 10, Ier. 30. 11. But I adhere rather to the former, See ch. 2. 4.

and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth] This some also understand of Christs dealing with both sorts, good and bad, or so elect and refuse, but in a different manner, by the power and Scepter of his word, subduing, and bringing in and under, the one unto a voluntary obedience, and submission to his Will, Psal. 110. 3. and voluntary obedience, and submission to his Will, Psal. 110. 3. and by the same word again, smiting the obstinate and refractory ones by the same word again, smiting the obstinate and refractory ones by the same word again, smiting the obstinate and refractory ones in their souls and consciences, and thereby, sealing them up, as it were, to condemnation and destruction, Joh. 12. 48. For the word of God is double edged, Heb. 4. 12. Rev. 1. 16. as a Periſcilean ſwiſe, unto those that are corrected and converted by it. Rom. 15. 16, 18. 1 Cor. 5. 5. 1 Pet. 4. 6. for a slaughtering knife unto those that stand out against it, Rev. 2. 12. 16. as a Savour of life, by their conversion unto salvation, to the one; for a favour of death, unto their condemnation, and everlasting destruction, to the other, 2 Cor. 2. 16. But I conceive it rather with others, as well Jews as Christians, to be understood only of his dealings with the wicked, called here, the earth, because earthly minded, Phil. 3. 20. and having their portion only here upon earth, Matth. 6. 20. 21. Luk. 12. 21. & 16. 25. Jam. 5. 5. And they are those, that possess the greatest part of the earth, being in most places, the most in number, in regard whereof, also, they are called the world, Joh. 1. 6. 19. & 17. 9. 25. 1 Joh. 5. 19. and the men of this world, Psal. 17. 14. These it is said, that Christ smites, that is, executs judgment upon them, in the behalf of his poor servants, who in they oppose and oppress: for the effecting wherof, he needs no other weapon, then the rod of his mouth. that is, a word of his mouth; that powerful word of his, whereby, as he created all things, Gen. 1. 3. Psal. 33. 6. Joh. 1. 3. Heb. 11. 3. and upholds all things, Psal. 148. 5, 6. Heb. 1. 2. 3. So is he able to bring all to nothing again, Psal. 104. 29, 30. his word being his will, and his will his work, Psal. 115. 3. & 135. 6. Dan. 4. 35. This, I suppose to be the genuine sense of this clause, which requires therefore, to be brought in with an advertisive, But, as denoting a passage from Christs interposing for the one, to his proceedings against the other.

and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked] The same thing, in other terms, more emphatically repeated. The earth, there is the wicked, here: (the word singular, but taken collectively, as ch. 3. 11.) though, by the wicked, some would understand that wicked one, the devil. 1 Joh. 3. 10, 12. the god and head of all wicked ones, Joh. 8. 44. & 12. 31. & 14. 30. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2. 2. & 6. 12. But the terms seems here more generall; these he is said to smite here, which though it imply no less, as 1 Sam. 25. 38. 2 Sam. 5. 6. yet is it more fully and expresly laid here, he will slay, that which he doth often times with some of them by inflicting of exemplary judgments upon them, Dan. 7. 10. 11, 13, 14. Rev. 6. 15. - 17. and will do with the whole body of them, at the last day, Luk. 19. 27. 2 Thess. 1. 8. And lastly, what was before said to be done, with the rod of his mouth, is now said, to be effected by the breath of his lips; both which some refer to that dreadfull doom to be past upon all wicked ones at the last day, Matth. 25. 41. but it seems rather, to imply the same with the former, that Christ shall not need multitudes of men and store of ammunition, to bring down, and confound the enemies, of himself, and his people: he can do it of himself, with one word of his mouth, as John 18. 6. yea without any word spoken, with a blaft of his breath, or the breath of his lips; the least motion that may be, they are both joyned together, also, Psal. 33. 10. as in creating, there; so in destroying here. See Job. 4. 9. and 15. 30. chap. 59. 19. Zach. 4. 6, 7. 2 Thess. 2. 8. Rev. 1. 9, 11, 15, 16. & 19. 15.

V. 5. And righteousnesse shall be the girdle of his loynes, and faithfulneſſe the girdle of his reines] Or, righteouſneſs alſo, &c. as chap. 8. 8. or, as some, for righteouſneſs ſhall be, &c. as chap. 8. 21. Those that expound this whole prophecy of Ezekiah, (as we have formerly observed, that some both Jews and others, do) understand hereby righteouſneſs; and faithfulneſs; perſons so qualified, men righteous and faithfull, (the like whereunto, See on ch. 42. 2.) and the meaning they suppose to be, that Ezekiah would have many righteous and faithful ones, constantly about him; and would not be attended by any, but such; therein following the example of David, his predecessour, and progenitour, Psal. 101. 3, 7. & 119. 63, 79, 115. & 142. 7. To which purpose also, some others, who understand it of Christ, yet give this same sense, that Christ will have his holy and faithful ones, alwaies about him; and be himself alwaies ever in the midst of them, to protect and support them, Psal. 46. 5. Zach. 2. 5. Matth. 18. 20. Joh. 12. 26. & 14. 24. Rev. 14. 4. & 17. 14. & 19. 14.

girdle] Or, girdle, as the vertues, or endowments of Christ himself, as they simply found without respect to any figure. For the better understanding whereof, we are to consider, that a belt or girdle, is sometime an ensign of honour, Job. 12. 18. Rev. 1. 13. Sometime, an emblem of power, chap. 22. 21. & 45. 5. Psal. 18. 32. & 93. 1. Sometime, a note of preparation to fight, 1 King. 20. 11. Sometime, of readiness for any affair of moment, journey, or handy work, 1 King. 18. 46. Jer. 1. 17. Luk. 12. 35. Eph. 6. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 13. Of Christ therefore it is said, that righteouſneſs, and faithfulneſs, shall be the girdle that he is girt with; to signifie, that he shall not need such external ornaments, as worldly Potentates are wont to wear, his gracious and honourable endowments, shall be sufficient to make him conspicuous and glorious: and from these, shall he be furnished, and enabled sufficiently for the execution of his office, now shall he be idle and slothfull, or loose and dilatory, (as carnelly Kings, and Princes oft are, Eccles. 10. 16. 19.) but industrious in his place, and always ready for employment, in execution of justice, in the behalf of his people, and in faithfull discharge in a constant course of whatsoever is necessary, for the preservement of their good. These are his girdle. These he counts, noble honour. These stick as close to him, as his girdle doth to one's body; and this girdle he never puts off, or layeth down See Psal. 106. 19. Ier. 13. 11. The verse consists of two branches, where the same notion, is in other terms, redoubled, as one of the Rabbines well observes. What is called righteouſneſs, is in the first branch; is termed faithfulneſs, in the latter; faithfulneſs, being indeed a part of righteouſneſs, 1 Joh. 1. 9. (See of Christ, Rev. 1. 4. & 19. 11. though here some would have it to signifie rather firmnesse, 29. 13. Lev. 3. 4. Deut. 12. 14. Psal. 7. 9. & 51. 6. but loynes, as well as this former, and is commonly so rendered; and that in this very argument. Job. 38. 3. & 40. 7. chap. 5. 27. & 32. 11. Jer. 30. 6. and would not therefore have been altered here, unlesse for some other word of the same signification.

V. 6. The wolf also, shall dwell with the lamb] Heb. And the wolf, &c. as ch. 8. 5. but some render it here, wherefore, as also, v. 3. I should rather yield it, Then, as Exod. 9. 29. ch. 8. 3. Here is layd down the strange effect, that this powerful Government of Christ should have upon the soules of those, who by the ministery of the word shall be subdued unto him, and become loyal subiects of his Spiritual kingdom; they shall through the efficacy thereof be so inwardly changed, that they shall seem new creatures, transformed out of beasts into men, Rom. 12. 2. 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Eph. 4. 22. 23. This is set forth by an allegorical illustration, wherein it is said, that such beasts, and other creatures, as are naturally ravenous, and harmfull, as bears, and wolves, adders, and vipers, and the like, should now quietly keep, and converse, with mankind, and with cattel, harmlessly keep, and converse, with mankind, and with cattel, and harmlessly keep, and converse, with mankind, and with cattel, whom they were wont to prey upon, and do much mischief to before; whom they were wont to prey upon, and do much mischief to before; thereby implying, that such persons as had formerly been of a fierce, thereby implying, that such persons as had formerly been of a fierce, savage, untteachable, and unreasonable disposition like to such forementioned creatures, should then become mild and gentle, tame and tioned creatures, should then become mild and gentle, tame and harmless, tractable and teachable; laying down that their former harmless, tractable and teachable; laying down that their former brutish, fierce, forward, and untoward disposition: and that therefore brutish, fierce, forward, and untoward disposition; and that therefore there should be abundance of peace, consequently, and safety, without fear of spoyl and rapine, by one from another, in the kingdom of Christ. See ch. 2. 4.

the wolf dwell with the lamb] That is, abide, stay, as a stranger with his host: (So the word properly signifies, Judg. 17. 7, 9, 10. Jin peaceable and friendly manner; without doing any harm to them whom he had wont to worry, Matth. 10. 16, 17. See ch. 6, 5, 25.

and the leopard shall lye down with the kid] They shall lodg quietly together, without fear of harm from the one to the other. Of the

and the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together] No wealth, or weakness, shall tempt them, to attempt ought one against another Some of the Jewish writers suppose an allusion herein, to the state of the creatures in Noahs Ark; wherein being shut up, they kept all quietly together, dureing the whole time of the deluge; and it may well be admitted, that the Prophet so doth. But that which they add, that it shal be so again, in the dayes of the Messias; that all the creatures shall then do the like again, is a meer fable, and fiction of their own adle brains.

and a little child shall lead them] Heb, leading them, or, their leader, which some have understood of Christ, who is called a child, Luk.2. 12.16. Act.4.27. and was small, and abject in mens eyes; as David a type of him, saith of himself, Psal.119. 141. But the meaning is plain, that those unruly and ravening creatures, should be so tame, that they should not need some stout and strong fellow, for a shepherd, to tend the one, and to defend them against the force and violence of the other; such an one as Sampson, or David, or one of his worthies, that were able to over-master, a bear, or a lion, Judg,14.5,6.1 Sam. 17.35.36.2 Sam.23.20. Any child, though never so small would serve to tend them and to lead them out to pasture, and home again; and not them alone; but those other creatures also, where they were mixt with them, implying how, not harmless only, but tractable, men should be; and how meek, content to be directed and conducted, even by the meanest, that were able aright to inform them of ought, that might be useful for them to know, or concerned them to practise; and to follow their advice and direction therein. See the example of Apollos, Act.18.24--26.

V.7. And the cow, and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lye down together] Or, The cow also, and the bear shall feed together. (supplyed from v. 6. or from the next branch either) and their young ones (Heb. their children, as Job. 38. 41.) shall lye together; they shall not only feed, but breed together; nor shall the regard of their young ones prevail with them, as usually doth with such creaturs, to make them rauenous the rather.

and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.] It is an allusion, say some, of the Rabbins, to the state of Creation; and the harmless food, that the creatures then contented themselves with, feeding only on such food as the earth affordeth them, either herbs, and grass on the ground, or, what the shrubs and trees yielded, Gen.1.29.30. and not preying upon any other living thing, that is, creature endued with sensitive life: for had they so done, say they, at the first, there being but one pair of each made, (which, yet cannot be proved,) a male, and a female, the whole Creation had soon been destroyed. I will not enter into the discussion of this difficult question, requiring larger discourse, then the nature of the present work will permit, especially, being but a by-matter. See ch. 65.25. Some expound it, that great and mighty men, should be content to be fed with the same food of the word and sacraments, that the poorest and meanest feed on, 1 Cor.10.3,4.& 12.13. Gal.3.27,28. But to such niceties we need not descend; an harmless course of life is intimated, and that is enough.

V.8. And the sucking child shall play upon the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand upon the cockatrices den] or, The sucking child, also, shall sport himself, over the hole of the asp; (a kind of serpent, noted for cruelty, Deut.32.33. poyson-ful, Job.20.14,16. and untameable. Psal.59.5.) Yea, the child newly weaned (as chap.23.9. able now to go abroad) shall thrust his hand, out of a childish curiosity, to feel what is there) into the cave or, hole (for the word is of the same sense with the former, and the Rabbine observes, that such serpents holes, in those parts, are oftimes so wide, that a little childs hand may easily enter into them) of the basilisk: without hazard to the one, or hurt to the other Of this latter kind of serpent, See Prov.23.32. chap.14.29.& 9.5. Jer.8.17. Some expound it, that the great ones shall not oppress the mean ones, but great ones, should rather be lions, wolves, and bears, Prov,28.15. Psal.7.2.&11.9. Dan. 7.5. Zeph.3.3. If such particular application were necessary, I would rather say, the meaning were the subtile should not circumvent the simple. For serpents, are of note, rather for subtilty, for slight, rather then for might, Gen. 3.1. Matth.10.16. And for those, that would have devils meant here; because of the terms given him in Scripture, 1 Pet.5.8. Rev.12.3,9. stray a great deal further, from the intendment of the text. The thing intended, seems to be, that men who were formerly maliciously minded, & prone to do mischief unto others, should now be of an innocent and harmless disposition; no fear should be of hurt, from them, to any.

V.9. They shall not hurt, nor destroy, in all mine holy mountain] a Or, None shall hurt, nor destroy, as ch.49.10. Heb. in all my mountain in holiness, as Psal.15.1. Jer.31. 23. mount Zion is meant, a type of the Church. Hence our Jewish Commenters control one another, confuting error with error. All the creatures, saith one, throughout the whole world, shall grow harmless, in the Messias his dayes. No, saith another, that is not so. For, it is not said, in the whole world; but, in all mine holy hill. It is the holy land, only, where no harmful beasts shall be; according to that, Lev. 26. 6. & ch.25.9. or if any come into it occasionally, they shall hurt no body, according to that Iob. 5.23, But it is of men, not of beasts, that the Prophet here speaks: as they were men, not beasts, that our Saviour bid his Disciples beware of, when he talked to them of wolves, Matth. 10. 16, 17. His drift, is to describe, and assert, the innocency and harmlessness of those persons, on whose hearts his word should have its kindly work. See further, ch.2.4.

for the earth shall be full of the knowledg of the Lord] Or, the land. For though it be true, that the Gospel of Christ should be dispensed unto all nations; and the knowledg of God, thereby, dispersed into all parts of the world: Matth.24.14. & 28.18. Mar. 16 15. Act.1.8. Rom.10.18. Yet the Prophet speaking here, of the Church, typified by mount Sion; as the chief part, not of the city only, but of the whole country, Psal.48. 2. should be rendred according to the type, that he entreats of. Here is a reason rendred, and the ground declared, of this strange and stupendious chang, to wit, the word of Christ; that spirituall, powerful spell, Psal. 58.5. by working into their souls, the sound and saving knowledg of God in Christ; (the want whereof is noted, as the main ground of all evill: Jer.9.3. Hos. 4. 1, 2.1 Cor.15.32--34. Eph.4. 18.19.) should purge out of them, their former malignant disposition, and frame them, (as new moulded thereby; and transformed into the image of God, and so made conformable to Christ,) into a clean contrary, both composure of heart, and tenour of life. Joh. 15, 3. & 17.3.17. Rom.6.17.& 8.28.29.2 Cor.3.18. Gal.4.19. Eph.4.20--24. Phil.3.8,10. Col.3.9,10. Jam.1.18.1 Pet. 1.22,23.2 Pet.2.20.1 Joh. 2.3,4. Now this knowledg, was not to be barely, but to abound in the Church, in the dayes of the Messias. Jer.31.33,34. Dan.12.4. Joel 2. 28. Hab.2.13. Act.2,17. Rom.15.14.2 Cor.4,6. Eph.3.19. Col.19,10.

as the waters cover the Sea] That is, the channel, or the bottom of the sea, Job.36.30. Grace and knowledg, shall in those times be as plentiful, as water is in the Sea: The land shall be as full of the knowledg of God, as the Sea is full of water. See the like. chap. 48. 18. Or, As some other, more agreeably to the original, as the waters of the Sea, (for so it is expresly) do cover, to wit, the land. It shall abound, as the Sea-waters are went to do: when having surrounded its walls, or wrought through its banks, it overfloweth, and covereth the whole surface of the land; chap.8,7.8. Jer.51.42. Yet see, Hab.2.14. where the same is almost word, for word, and it seems to go rather, the former way.

V.10. And in that day, &c. [Or, As some render it. For (as chap.9. 11. in that day: that is, at that time. As chap.3,18. The Prophet here, proceeds to declare, that which shall be the main cause, of all this peaceable carriage and agreement; between people, and persons formerly of such different carriages, and contrary dispositions; to wit, the Messias his calling in of the Gentiles, to be co-partners in grace, and salvation with the Jewes; the restauration of his Church, with a very considerable enlargment, consisting of both; and the co-uniting of them by his Spirit, in a neerer conjunction, then ever before either so others.

there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek] Or, It shall come to pass; that (as ch.10.20, v,11. unto a root of Jesse, which shall stand up, for an ensign to people; the Nations shall seek, or, resort.

a root of Jesse] The same, of whom before, v.1. a root, that is, say some, one, who like a root, lay hidden before in the ground; as Job 14.8. but rather, a root of Jesse; that is, a sprig, sprouting out and springing up, from Jesse, as a root, as both Jews and Christians, most of them expound it; and as the word seems likewise used, ch.53.2. Nor is it otherwise to be understood. where Christ is said to be the root of David, as here of Jesse, Rev.5.5.&22.16. See also ch.14.30. Jesse is a root, as Abraham is one, Rom.11.16. And though Christ be the root, that beareth all the faithful, and the stock, where-into they are engraffed; Rom.11.17.18,24. Yet, here, he is considered in regard of the root, or stock, from whence he issued, as a man. See v.1,& Rom.15.12, for an ensign] Not such as is used in fight, for souldiers to follow as some of the Jewish writers understand it; as Psal. 60,4. but such as is used to gather people together, so v. 12. Such an one shall Christ be, being lifted up in the ministery of his word: Joh. 3.14,15. & 12.32. Gal.3.1.

of the people] Or, to peoples, For the word is plural: not some one, but divers sorts of people; people indifferently, out of all parts. So did this ensign, at the very first advancing, or erecting of it, draw together divers sorts of people unto it. Act. 2.5.-12.

shall the Gentiles seek] Or, repair, as the word is used; Deut. 12.5. Though some, to express it, as they suppose, the more fully, repair for advice, and for prayer. because the word, sometimes, imports either, Deut.18.11. chap.8.19.& 55.6. Ezek.36.37. But there seems here, to be the the convention of them, only intended in it; that not Jews alone, but other Nations, shall have recourse to the ensign, thus set up See ch.2.2,3.

and his rest shall be glorious] Heb. glory, that is, very glorious: as abomination, for very abominable, chap.1.13. or, for glory, as chap.4.2. a rest of glory, a most glorious rest. See chap. 10.1. By his rest, here, some understand the death of Christ; because death is as a sleep, or rest, Joh.11.11,13,14. Rev.14.13. which, though ignominious in the eyes of the world; yet was glorions, in regard of the vertue, and efficacy of it; Col.2.15. Heb.2.14. Others understand, his grave, his Sepulcher, because the grave is a place of rest, chap.14.18.& 57.2. And Christs Sepulcher is, by resort to it, and miracles done at it. become famous. So our popish writers, most of them, following the old version, and some of the Ancients. Others, his Ascention, after the conquest of his adversaries, for rest followes, when the fight is finished, and victory is glorious: where, that which some would would have alluded to, to wit, the furling up of the ensign, when the fight is done; and the victory obtained; as if the word, rest, were referred to the ensign, and that were termed its rest; seems more nice and curious, then solid, or agreeable to the text. But, by rest, rather; is here understood, the place of Christs rest, and residence; as the word rest is used, Mic. 2. 10. alluding to that of mount Sion, said to be, his rest, in regard of the Temple, there situate: Psalm 132.8,13, 14. a type of Gods Church, the place of his special residence, and abode among them; said to be glorious, in allusion to both Tabernacle, and Temple; which are said, to have been filled with the glory of God; Exod. 40.35. Lev. 9. 23. 1 Kings, 8.11. as also, unto great Princes Courts, where they keep residence in state, which are usually of great note. 1 Kings, 10. 1, 7,24,25. And such, much more, is Gods Church, through his residing in it, by his word and Spirit, and the effects of his divine power and presence, therein appearing; as also, by strange and remarkable things, wrought on the behalf of his people; for their deliverance, and their safety. 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. See chap. 4. 5. & 60.13.

V.11. And it shall come to pass in that day, that, &c.] Heb. it shall be, &c. So ver.10.

the Lord shall set his hand again the second time] Heb. will add the second time his hand: as, the Lord added to say to me, ch. 8. 5. add his hand, that is, add to stretch out his hand; stretch it out, again, the second time. See chap. 1. 25. what this second time, hath reference to, is questioned: and what deliverance it is, that is, here, foretold. For the former, Some think, this second time, hath reference to the deliverance from the Assyrians, under Sennacherib, invading them, which he had spoken of before, ver.12,24. Others, to the deliverance, from the Babylonian Captivity, after seventy yeares expired, Jer.29.10. But the most and best, both of the Jewish Writers, and ours, to the deliverance out of the Egyptian thraldome; whence, he is said to have brought them, with his hand stretched out, Ezek.20.6, for the setting, or, stretching out of his hand again, for a further deliverance, some understand it of the deliverance from the Chaldean deportation. But that others cross, and some of the Rabbines themselves: and their reason is good, because this is to be done in the dayes of the Messias, ver. 10. though not by such a kind of restitution, as they poor souls dream of; but by calling home unto Christ, the Elect of them, wheresoever dispersed, some at one time, some at another; and also, the main body of the residue, in his own appointed season, Act.2.41.& 4.4.& 21.20. Rom.11. 5,25,26.2 Cor.3.16.

to recover the remnant of his people, that shall be left] Heb, to get, to buy, to purchase. Which Some suppose, to have some respect to Christs buying his with his blood, Act.20. 28. Rev.5. 9. But it seems rather, here to intimate a getting of them into his possession again, which had made defection from him, and were now under the power of Satan; whereof their bodily servitude and restraint, in sundry places, was a type. See Jer. 16. 14, 15. & 23. 7, 8. Zach. 10.10.

the remnant] A small parcel, in comparison of the whole that sometime was, ch.10.21,22.

of his people] Some understand this, of the Elect, both Jew, and Gentile. But the distinction of those here mentioned, from the Nations spoken of, ver.10. doth plainly shew, that the parties, here intended, are of the Jewish people only. See Rev.7.4--9.

that shall be left] The number of them, being much wasted by several deportations, dissipations, oppressions, and evil usage, in the places of their forreign abode, Deut.28.62.

from Assyria] Whither many of them had been carried, 2 King.15. 29.& 17.6.

and from Egypt] Whither no small number of them fled; upon the murder of Gedaliah: whereof very few escaped, Jer.43. 5--7.& 44. 27,28.

and from Pathros] This some, in regard of the like sound of letters, have supposed to be Parthia; and some Petra, in Arabia, whereof Arabia Petrea; See chap. 16. 1. Others, a part of Lybia, inhabited by the Phaurusii, mentioned by Pliny, and Ptolomy, and sited neer the Atlantick-Sea. But it appears to have been a Province in Egypt, by Ier.44.1,15. Ezek. 29. 14.& 30. 14. possessed by the Pathrusim, or, Pathruses, which were of the linage of Mitsraim, or Egyptus, Gen.10.14.1 Chr.1.12. See more of it, on Jer. 44.1.

and from Cush] A people descended from Cush, the son of Cham, and brother to Mitsraim, Gen.10.6,7. of whom, and their place of abode, see further on ch.18.1.

and from Elam] People that issued from Elam; the son of Sem, and brother to Assur, Gen.10.22. 1 Chr.1. 17. Hence the Elamites, or Elymei, possessing some part of Persia, and bordering upon the Medes, joyned therefore together, chap. 21. 2. Jer. 25. 25. there is mention of them in Strabo, lib. 16. and in Pliny, lib.6. cap.26.27,34. Some gather from Act.2.9. that they lay between Media, and Mesopotamia.

and from Shinar] A Region in Chaldea. Of which, Gen. 10. 10.& 11. 2. Hence the mountain Singara, mentioned by Ptolomy, in Mesopotamia; whereof Chaldea was sometime deemed a part, and a Town of the same name in Pliny, lib.5. cap.24. Singara, of Shinar; by such enterchange of letters: as in Gaza, Gomorra, and others. It is deemed by some, to have been so called, of a word signifying to shake out, or, throw out, Job 38.13. because they were thence dispersed that attempted to build Babel: but the Region seems to have had that name, before they began to build there, and the letter S, to be radical; which in that word is wanting.

and from Hamath] Of this place; see ch.10.9.

and from the Ilands of the Sea] Or, the lands bordering upon the Sea, the maritime Countreys. For so is the name Iland, taken very commonly in Scripture; as where Judea, and Cappadocia are termed Ilands, chap. 20. 6. Jer. 47. 4. So chap. 41. 1, 5. Ier. 25 22.

V.12. And he shall set up an Ensign] Not a military Ensign, as many Interpreters imagine, for the conducting an army into the field, or the directing them in fight, when they are in the field; but a civil one rather, such as is wont to be set up, for the gathering of People together, upon any occasion whatsoever. See the like, ch.49.12.& 62.10. as also, before, on ver.10. of this Ensign, what it is.

for the Nations] Or, unto the Nations. To bring them in to Christ Rom.15.16,18,19. or, rather as the Jewish Doctors seem aright to understand it, for them to bring, or send in, the Israelites, that are in captivity with them, or that sojourn among them; as ch.49.22. & 66.20.

and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah] Or, that he may gather up; (the word properly so signifies, Jer.10.17.) or, gather together: (as Numb.11.17.) the use of this Ensign, is, as in regard of the Gentiles before, ver. 10. so in regard of the Israelites, or Jews, whether of the ten, or, of the other two tribes, (for both were to be united, and made one, in and under Christ, Ezek.36.16,19,21.) for the gathering of them together, out of the places of their dispersion, Luk.21.24. Joh. 7. 35. Jam. 1. 1. 1 Pet.1.1. the copulative designing the end of the action: as ch.10. 19.& 11.3.

dispersed] Or, dispersed women. For the word is feminine; as intimating, that no sort, or sex, should, either, be neglected, or rejected, 1 Cor.11.11.& 12.13, Gal.3.27,28. Col.3.11.

from the four corners of the earth] Heb. wings, or, skirts. For it is applyed to garments, as well, as to fowl, Deut.22. 12. Ier.2.34. See chap.18. 1, & 24. 16. so Ezek.7.2. an end is said to be coming on the four corners of the land. The meaning is, that no place should be under heaven, where God would not find them; no country so remote, whence he would not fetch them. The Gospel for this purpose, was to be preached, unto the ends, or utmost parts of the world, Act. 1. 8. Rom. 10. 18. and God had promised his people, that though they were driven away, into the utmost parts of heaven, yet from thence, he would gather them again upon their repentance, Deut. 30. 4. And as God is said to gather his dispersed ones, from the four wings of the earth; so it is said, that Christ shall at the last day, by the ministry of Angels, gather his Elect from the four winds, from the one end of heaven, to the other, Matth. 24.31.

V.13. The envy also of Ephraim shall depart] The Hebrew Commenters, upon this place, take notice of some emulation from the first, between Iudah, and the other tribes in Davids time, 2 Sam. 2.9, 10. & 3. 1. & 19. 41--43. But the envy here mentioned seems rather to have an eye to that, which ensued upon the revolt of them under Rehoboam, from the family of David. For Ephraim, the chief of the ten Tribes, having then the royal seat of that Kingdom among them; there was by occasion thereof, much emulation between it and Iudah, and continual jarres and warres, from time to time thence proceeding, to the great molestation and much mischief of either, and the exposing of them to the incursions, and invasions of other Nations abroad; especially, while they sought help from them one against another, 2 Chr. 16.1--4. & 25.22,23. & 28. 5,8,16,20. See chap.7.1. But this emulation between the house of Ioseph, and the house of Iudah, was to cease, when united, either to other in Christ. See Ezek.37.16. and they were then to be in terms of agreement, and amity, that had been at such deadly feud before, ch.9.21. Luk.9.52,53. Ioh.4.9.

and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off] Those of Israel, say the Iewish Writers, and some of ours treading in their steps, that now are adversaries to Iudah, and have of late put them to grievous streights, (as the word, properly, imports) shall be destroyed; so that Iudah shall no more fear them. But they consider not, that this is spoken of the Messias his time; and the meaning is; that the obstinate enemies of the Church of God, whereof Iudah is reckoned as a principal part, shall by Christ be destroyed. See chap. 60.12.

Ephraim shall not envy Judah] This more plainly sheweth what envy of Ephraim, was before meant, to wit, that, wherewith it envied Iudah: which then should cease. I cannot let slip, the ridiculous exposition, that a great Rabby hath of this place. The Messias, saith he, of the house of Ioseph, shall not envy the Messias of the house of David. The Talmudists tell us tales of two Messiasses: and they find them both, in this Prophecy, ch. 32.20. where mention is of an oxe, and an asse. The oxe, say they, is the Messias of the house of Ioseph, because Ioseph is likned to an oxe Deut, 33.17. the asse is the Messias of the house of David, because he is said to come riding on an asse, Zach.9. 9. such sottish toys, are those silly people take taken with; and yet about the expounding and reconciling of such senselesse absurdities, and abstracting strange and abstruse mysteries out of them, do some of ours spend grave, and serious discourses.

and Judah shall not vex Ephraim] Or, nor shall Judah put Ephraim to streights; as Psalm 129. 1, 2. They shall not in Ezekiahs time, say the Jewish Doctors, revenge themselves upon Ephraim, for the mischief done them by Pekah, 2 Chr. 28. 6.--8. But we are to look, and so should they have done, far beyond Ezekiah's reign, unto the reign of the Lord Jesus; under whom all such former enmities should be abandoned, and such hoslile acts buried in utter oblivion, Jer. 3. 18.

V. 14. But] Heb. And; as ch. 5. 12.

they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines towards the west; they shall spoil them of the East together] Or, they shall together (joyntly) fly upon the shoulder, &c. and spoyl them of the East. They shall joyn, in one, and combine themselves, against the Common enemy.

fly] A metaphor, from some great fowl, as an Eagle; that flyes swiftly, and eagerly to seize upon his prey, Job 9. 26. Hos. 5. 1. Though one of the Jewish great Masters rendreth it, they shall thrust with the shoulder the Philistines, deducing it from another root of that notion, in use with them, but not found in Scripture.

upon the shoulders] Heb. shoulder. Whence Some of the Jewish Commenters, following the Chaldee Paraphrast, expound it, by shoulder, that is, by consent: as Hoth. 6. 9. and as Zeph. 3. 9. with one shoulder; for, with one consent, (or by mutual consent) which some also supply in that of Hoshea; and these thus read the words; they shall fly with the shoulder, (that is, by consent) to smite the Philistines: but the construction seems over-harsh, and the place of Hosea, is ambiguous. Others therefore conceive it to be the Philistines shoulder, that they are said to fly upon; a metaphor, as some think, from a lion, or wooll, that are wont to fasten on the shoulder of the beast, that they prey upon; and why not from an Eagle, also, or some such great ravenous fowl, which seize also sometime, in like manner on the leiser fort of cattel, their young ones especially, the lamb, or the kid? Others understand it, of subjugating and subduing them. The burden on the shoulder, being an emblem of servitude. See chap. 9. 4, 6. & 10. 27. But against this latter is objected that the word shoulder, is not in a form of regiment here: and some use of the shoulder, proper, or tropical, seem to be implyed in their falling upon them. I shall add my conjecture, and so leave it, the word rendred a shoulder, signifieth sometime a side, Numb. 34. 11. Josh. 15. 8, 10. I suppose the text may well be rendred, they shall fly on the one side upon the Philistines westward; the supplies are not unusual.

the Philistines] The ancient ill neighbours and enemies, of Gods people, 1 Sam. 4. & 13. & 17. & 31.

toward the west] Heb. to the Sea: as Josh. 15. 4, 11. that is the mid-land Sea; which lay West from the land of Judah. See ch. 9. 12.

them of the East] Heb. Sons of the East; as Job 1. 3. whence, Some would have the Chaldeans, and Arabians, here meant. But I suppose, rather, the Syrians, as before, chap. 9. 12. whose Country lay East from Judea. See ch. 2. 6. for Chaldea and Babylon is in Scripture commonly termed North, Jer. 1. 12, 13, 14. and Arabia South, Mat. 12. 42.

they shall lay their hand upon Edom, and Moab] Heb. Edom, and Moab shall be the immission, or, laying one of their hands. See the like phrase, ch. 8. 8. to lay hand on, imports, to seize on: as Esth. 9. 10. or, to slay, as Pf. 55. 20. they shall by force of arms surprize their lands, and subdue them; an inbred and inveterate enmity between Esau and Jacob; Edom, and Israel, Gen. 25, 22, 23. & 27. 36, 41. continued in their posterity, Pf. 83. 6.

and the children of Ammon] The off-spring of Ammon; brother to Moab, (Lots incestuous brood, Gen. 19. 36--38.) the style commonly given to the. Annonnites, Jer. 25. 21. and 49. 1. Both joyned with the Chaldeans in the destruction of Judah, 2 Kings 24. 2.

shall obey them] Being subdued by them. Heb. shall be their obedience: at their command, at their service: as 1 Sam. 22. 14. 2 Sam. 23. 23.

V. 15. And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian Sea] The reducing of people to the obedience of Christ, and that spiritual freedome, that thereby accrueth to them, being shadowed by the bringing of the people of Israel back again into their land, out of those Countreys, whither they had been dispersed; the Prophet in this next passage, promiseth from God a removal of all impediments, that might hinder them in that their return. And because he had before, parallel'd this their reduction, with the deliverance of them out of Egypt; as a second-Master-piece of Gods power, and providence shewed in behalf of his people; he describeth this removal of lets and obstacles, that might impeach them in their passage, by the drying up of the red-Sea, which he divided for them, at their departure out of Egypt, Exod. 14. 21, 22. See the like, chap. 42. 15, 16. & 51. 10. & 63. 12, 13. Zach. 10. 11. Rev. 16. 12.

utterly destroy] Heb. make an anathema of it: as Josh. 6. 17, 21. nor divide it only, as Psal. 136. 13 but even dry it clean up, chap. 50. 2. so that it shall be no more, Rev. 21. 1.

the tongue of the Egyptian Sea] Not Nilus, as Some of the Jewish Doctors; but the red Sea, that out of the main Ocean shoots into the land, in form and fashion of a tongue; running up along, between Arabia and Egypt, and growing narrower towards the head: and as Promontories, or head-lands, that strike out into the Sea, are in Latine called tongues of land, so such bays, as shoot in like manner into the land, are in Hebrew termed, tongues of the sea, Josh. 15. 2, 5.

and with his mighty wind, shall he shake his hand over the river] He alludeth here to the course, that God took, in making a passage for his people through the red Sea.

he shall shake his hand over the river] Not Euphrates, of which, ch. 7. 20. though the Jewish Writers, and others following them, so understand it; applying the former to those, that were to return out of Egypt: this, to such, as were to come from Assyria: (for of these, afterwards, ver. 16.) but Nilus, called the river of Egypt, Josh. 13. 3. & 15. 4. Ier. 2. 18. Ezek. 29. 3. because it runs down along through the midst of Egypt, dividing it into two parts, and once in the year overflows it, for the watering of it; to supply the want of rain in those parts, Deut. 11. 10, 11. over this river, or against it, as Zach. 2. 9. it is said, God will shake his hand; as Moses by Gods command, stretched out his hand, with his staff lift up in it, over the red-Sea, Exod. 14. 16, 21.

with his mighty wind] Or, by the might (for which a word is here used without a brother) of his breath. He will do it with ease, by his breath alone: as chap. 59. 19. Zach. 4. 6. See Exod. 15. 8. but alluding to that stiff Eastwind, wherewith he beat back the red-Sea, Exod. 14. 21. Pf. 74. 13.

his wind] As Pf. 147. 18. which he hath at command, Pf. 107. 25. & 148. 8. Mat. 8. 27.

and shall smite it] As Zach. 10. 11. and as Elias and Elisha, successively, smote the river Jordan, 2 King. 2. 8, 14.

in the seven streams] Or, channels, into which, the main body of the river Nilus branching, doth as by so many mouthes, empty it self into the Sea, (see chap. 7. 18.) where it is of the deepest, being neereft the main-Sea, See Pfal. 74. 15. & chap. 19. 4. Of these seven out-lets, for which, Nilus is famous, mention is made by Herodotus, lib. 2. Aristotel de mundo, cap. 2. Strabo, lib. 17. Pliny, lib. 5. cap. 9. and other Authors, Latine and Greek, without number; Geographers, Historians, Poets, and others. So that there is no reason, to divert the streams here mentioned, unto any other river, as some Iewish doaters do to Euphrates, cutting it out into seven streams, to make it passable for the return of the people out of those seven Countries, mentioned before, ver. 11. that which neither suits well with the text, nor with the situation of some of those places: nor doth that of those, fort well with the Scope of the Prophet, who understand this of Cyrus his dividing that river into many channels, for the readier surprizal of Babylon. Of which, see Jer. 51. 31, 32. for this striuting, and drying up, is of another kind, and for a far other end; not to enter upon her: but to come away from her.

and make men go over dry-shod] Heb. and he shall, or, that he may (as ver. 12.) make to go in shooes. Our English, sully expresseth the sense of it; that men may passe over, without boat, or boot; on foot, and in shooes as they use to go, or walk, (for the word is indifferently used for either) on dry land, Exod. 14. 22, 29. Pfal. 66. 6. they shall not need to put of their shooes as they use to do, when they are to wade through some, though but shallow, water. The Prophets words then import, that God would not divide only, the red Sea; as he did for them, at their departure out of Egypt; but dry up that whole bay, for that shole Sea is little better; nor drive back for a while, the stream of such a river, of no extraordinary widenesse, as Iordan, being in divers places ford-able, as he did at their entrance into Canaan, Josh. 3. 16, 17. & 4. 18. & 5. 1. but so smite that vast river Nilus, that all the several streams of it, neer the entrance of the main Sea, (far from which it was that the red Sea was divided) should be clean dried up, to make free passage for his people. The meaning is, that no impediment, or obstacle should be so great, that might hinder those, who were to be brought home to Christ, and his Church, out of all quarters; but it should be removed.

V. 16. And there shall be an high way for the remnant of his people which shall be left, from Assyria] Because mention is made of drying up the red Sea, and Nilus, as for the free passage of those that should come from Egypt, and Pathros, and from Cush, or, Ethiopia, ver. 11. But it might be demanded, what will become of those, that are in Assyria, and those parts? the Prophet adds therefore, that there shall be a course taken, for a fit and convenient passage also, for them.

there shall be an high-way] Or, a causey, chap. 7. 3. such a way made by banks cast up and levelled; as is wont to be done by industry and carefull provision for travellers and passengers, in countries where the wales are deep and miry, or stony and uneven. See ch. 40. 3, 4. & 49. 11. Jer. 18. 15. The Jewish Writers expound it, of a passage through the waters, either of the river, or the Sea; according to that Psal. 77. 19, 20. but neither is this word found there, and the frequent use of it in this argument, by collation of places, carries it rather, the other way.

from Assyria] Whence it may appear that the river spoken of ver. 15. was not to be dryed up for them in those parts.

like as it was to Israel, in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt] These words in the close of all, seem to reflect upon all that before was spoken, of drying up waters, and calling up wales; and to have respect to the whole course of the peoples conduct in their passage from Egypt to Canaan, wherein seas and rivers were divided and laid dry in part for the present; and passages made by strange and uncouth wales through that wide and waste wilderness, that lay between those two lands, as fit and convenient, with supply of all necessaries, as it causeys had been raised for them all the way that they went, Exod. 13. 21. Numb. 10. 33. Deut. 1. 31, 33. & 8. 2, 4, 15. & 32. 10, 11. See chap. 40. 3, 4. & 41. 18, 19. & 42. 15, 16. & 43. 19, 20.

in the day] At that time, as Jer. 7. 22. So ch. 12. 1.

he came up] Or, came simply, for the word is frequently used of passage, or departure, from place to place, without any reference to ascent or descent, See ch. 7. 1.

CHAP. XII.

Vers. 1. And in that day, thou shalt say] That is, at that time, when ye shall be set free, and fetcht home again, then shall ye sing this, or the like Psalm, or Song, as chap. 26. 1. & 27. 2. For this chapter containeth certain formes, framed in Songs, or Hymns, of solemn praise, and thankful acknowledgment, of Gods goodnesse to his people, and gracious workings for them; composed by the Prophet, as ditties fit to be used by them; or a directory, to shew them the way how to bless God upon such occasion, or both. So 1 Chr. 16. 7, 23, 36.

O Lord] the beginning of the first form.

I will praise thee] Heb. confess thee, or, confess to thee, that is, acknowledge thy goodnesse, and my thankfulnesse for it. So David, Pf. 138. 1. and Christ, Mat. 11. 25.

though thou wast angry with me, thine anger was turned away] Or, because, though, or, wherein thou wast angry, yet thine anger is turned away. Heb. because thou wast angry, thine anger is turned away. See the like Syntax, Rom. 6. 7. God be thanked, ye were the servants of sin: but ye have obeyed, &c. That is, that wherein, or, although, ye were the servants of sin, ye have obeyed, or, are now become obedient, &c.

thine anger is turned away] And thou turned from it, Pfalm 85. 3. chap. 10. 25. Dan. 9. 16. contrary to that, chap. 5. 25. & 9. 12.

and thou comfortedst me] By reconcilement to me, mercy shewed me, and good done for me, as Pfal. 90. 15. ch. 40. 2. & 51. 3, 12. & 61. 3.

V. 2. Behold God is my salvation] That is, the Authour of it. So Pfal. 27. 1. whofoever or whatsoever the means or instruments are, my Salvation is from him only, Pfal. 3. 8. & 33. 16, 17. & 44. 6, 7. prov. 21. 31. Jon. 2. 9. To this is prefixed, a note, or term, that calls for special consideration and regard, implying the deliverance of Gods people, to be a matter very remarkable, and a mercy unexpected; considering, in what a low and forlorn condition, they seemed to be in before, as if they should say, either among themselves, or to others, their enemies especially, behold that now done, that was little looked for. So Ezek. 37. 11.

I will trust] Or, I will be confident, as Prov. 28. 1. or, I will trust in him, as Pf. 18. 2. a defect of the promiss, as Job 13. 15. his present deliverance shall make me relye on him for future preservation, chap. 26. 3, 4. 2 Cor. 1. 9, 10. 2 Tim. 4. 17, 18.

and not be afraid] So upon the like ground, Pfal. 3. 6. and 27. 1.

for the Lord is my strength] The authour and giver of it. So Exod. 15. 2. (whence the latter part of this verse is taken) Pfalm 18. 2. & 28. 7. I have it not from my self, or ought else; but from him, Pfalm 62. 7. God, I, I, he doth and will by his powerfull hand uphold me, and enable me to persevere and hold out to the end, chap. 40. 29--31. Rom. 8. 37--39. 2 Cor. 12. 9. Phil. 4. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 5.

and my Song] The subject matter of it, as Pf. 89. 1, 8. & 104. 33. and he that ministres matter for it, Pf. 32. 7. & 40. 3.

and he is become my salvation] Heb. Salvation to me, that is, my Saviour, as Luk. 2. 30. So after Moses, David, Pf. 118. 14. not that he was not so before, but that he hath now manifested it in a more conspicuous and remarkable manner, Pf. 89. 13.

V. 3. Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of Salvation] Heb. with joy, &c. as chap. 10. 12. The effect of this their deliverance, the free and plentiful fruition of those benefits and blessings, that they had been deprived of, and debarred from before. Ye shall have free access now, unto the well-head of all grace and goodnesse, from whence there shall be derived unto you abundance of saving grace, and found comfort; as water drawn by full buckets from an inexhaust well-spring, Pfalm 36. 8, 9. John 4. 14. and 7. 37, 38. Rev. 7. 17. There is in the words an allusion, as some deem, to the state and condition of those, that have been, to the full, unexpectedly afforded them, when they have been grievously vexed and afflicted for want of it, and were even now ready to perish, for thirst, Psalm 107. 35. chap. 41. 17, & 43. 20. So chap. 55. 3. Matth. 5. 6. Rev. 22. 17. and more especially to the rock, that afforded the Israelites water in the wilderness, Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11. or rather to the well, out of which God promised to give them waters, when they wanted it, while they abode about the confines of Moab; and from whence with exceeding great joy and mirth, expressed in Songs and Ditties thereupon compofed, it was received and entertained, by them, Numb. 21. 16--18. Others suppose, that this passage hath respect to a solemn rite used in the Feast of Tabernacles, at which their manner was, in the night time, with great variety of melodious musick, and abundance of mirth and jollity, to fetch water in a golden vessel, from the spring of Siloam, unto the Temple, and there to pour it upon the Altar. See ch. 30. 29. But whether this usage was so ancient as Efays time, is uncertain. See somewhat the like phrase, and as many think, write also, of drawing water, and pouring it out upon the ground, to a contrary purpole, in occasion of mourning, and to testifie thereby their inward remorse, 1 Sam. 7. 6.

V. 4. And in that day shall ye say] Or, In that day, also, shall ye say, as chap. 8. 5. For this is a preface, or passage, unto a new form another ditty, of the like nature with the former; save, that it is conceived, as in way of Exhortation; whereby the faithfull invite, and encite one another unto this office of chearful and constant praising and magnifying God for his mercies. See on verf. 1.

Praise the Lord; call upon his name; declare his doings among the people] See the same, 1 Chr. 16. 8. Pf. 105. 1.

Praise the Lord] Heb. confess to the Lord, as ver. 1.

call upon his name] Or, proclaim his name, publish it abroad, as Jer. 2. 2, & 4. 16. Lam. 1. 21.

declare, &c. Jas Pf. 31. 1.

his doings] The courses taken by him for your deliverance.

among the people] Heb. peoples, not some one people; but the several Nations abroad, throughout the wide world, ver. 5. So Pfal. 57. 9. & 108. 3.

make mention] Or, record it, as chap. 49. 1. enter it upon record, for posterity, Pfal. 45. 17. or, celebrate his name, as Pfal. 45. 17.

that his name is exalted] As Pfal. 143. 13. where it is replied, excellent, but would rather be, lofty, as chap. 26. 5. or high, as chap. 30. 13. exalted, as here, and ch. 33. 5. Howbeit, there is by some objected, and not unfitly, that this whole branch might more fitly be thus conceived, celebrate his name for it is high, or, exalted, as the sentence consisting of two distinct branches, whereof the latter containeth a reason of the former: as Pfal. 99. 3. 5. 9. The word translated make mention, signifies also, to celebrate, as 1 Cor. 16. 4. Pf. 71. 16. ch. 63. 7. and so may it well here.

V. 5. Sing unto the Lord] Sing, or, Play unto the Lord; to his honour and praise: as Pfal. 66. 4. & 47. 6. & 92. 1. or, Sing of the Lord, as Pfal. 66, 2. & 101. 1. & 138. 5. So Numb. 21. 17. chap. 27. 2. The word properly signifies, to make a musicall sound with instruments, of all sorts indifferently, for another word they have for musick with voyces, chap. 5. 1.

he hath done excellent things] Or, done excellently. or, majestically. Heb. excellency, or, Majesty. For to the word signifies, taken in the better sense; as chap. 26. 10, though in the worse sense, pride, 6. 28. 1, 3. So, to do valour, for, to do valiantly, Pfal. 60. 12. & 118. 15, 16. to do truth, for, to deal truly, 1 Joh. 1. 6. to do righteousnesse, for, to deal righteously, 1 Joh. 3. 8, 10.

this is known in all the earth] Or, this is made known unto Israel, Levit. 4. 23. or, let this be made known throughout all the earth, as ch. 8. 13. make all the world ring of it, by your publishing it abroad: as ver. 4.

V. 6. Cry out] Or, cry aloud, or, as Some render it, cry shrill. The word properly signifies, to neigh, as horses in heat, full fed, and lusty, or fitted for fight, Jer. 5. 8. & 8. 16. & 13. 27. & 50. 11. Is is used most commonly for shouting, or hollowing, in token of joy, Esth. 8. 15. ch. 24. 14. & 54. 1. Jer. 31. 7. Yet for crying out, upon affrightment, ch. 10. 30.

and shout] The same words are found joyned together again, ch. 54. 1. Soph. 3. 14. 7.

thou inhabitant of Zion] Heb. inhabitress, as Jer. 21. 13. & 51. 35. because such places, in Scripture, are commonly stylcd daughters, as like to young, chayce, and beautiful daughters, or damosels. See ch. 1. 8. & Jer. 46. 19.

Zion] A type of the Church. ch. 2. 2.

for great is in the holy One of Israel, in the midest of thee] or the Holy one of Israel (of which title, see ch. 1. 4.) who is great of great might and power, Pfal. 48. 1. & 135. 5. & 145. 5.) is in the midst of thee, to preserve, and protect thee. Pfal. 46. 5. Zach. 2. 5, 11. and he hath manifested the greatnesse of his might and power, in the deliverance.

CHAP. XIII.

Vers. 1. The burden of Babylon] Here begin prophecies concerning forreign States: all that went before, being concerning Gods people, Judah and Israel: save what is by the way occasionally interlaced, concerning the two Kings of Syria and Assyria, Rezin and Sennacherib, ch. 7. 8. & 8. 4. & 10. 5--19. 33. 14. the forreign States, whose ruine is in these Prophecies foretold, were such especially, as Gods people either had in former times been, at preſent were, or, in future times ſhould be, much vexed and oppreſſed by;or,ſuch as they had overmuch reſted and relyed on.Of the former ſort,Babylon ſtands in the front, whoſe Kings, beſides what they had formerly done,were to be principal inſtruments of the utter ſubverſion of the Jewiſh Eſtate.

the burden] In this verſe, is the Inſcription of a Sermon, or Prophecy, againſt Babylon, contained in this whole Chapter, and the next, the four laſt verſes of the latter,only excepted : and it is ſtyled as our Engliſh renders it, *a burden.*The word in his tropical uſe;as it is applyed unto matter of inſtruction,or prediction, ſeems to be more general, and to import only a leſſon,a ſpeech taken up, as we ſay, by ſome, or taken from ſome other. As of Balaam it is ſaid, that God put a word in Balaams mouth; and that, he then took up his parable. Numb.23.5,7.And ſo the Greeks render it ; and the Greek writers on Scripture expound it; as implying, documents,or inſtructions,received from God,by the Prophets.Thus it would be rendred,in the title of King Lemuels inſtructions, given him,by his Mother,not the Prophecy:(for there is nothing prophetical in it) but the leſſon,wherewith his mother ſchooled him;as alſo,Lam.2.14.It ſeems to include Sermons, Preachings, or Predictions, in general ; where it is ſaid of the fawning falſe Prophets, that they preached unto the people, Sermons,rather,then Burdens, (for burdenſome leſſons, neither the people liked ; nor they liſted to preach) of vanity. But of that ſee further, on the place. Beſides, it is alledged to this purpoſe, that this title is ſometime prefixed before ſome prophecies, or Sermons, that contain no heavy, but joyfull and lightſom matter, concerning the people concerned in them ; as Zach.12.1. The burden, as it is rendered, of the word of the Lord : or, a Leſſon of the word of the Lord,concerning Iſrael; or, in Iſraels behalf. Howbeit,ſince that the word, in his firſt and proper notion, ſignifies a burden; and it is, in a manner, generally prefixed before ſuch Sermons, or Prophecies,as contain matter of heavy, and ſad occurents, to betide thoſe, whom they concern ; it may not amiſs in moſt places be rendered, a burden; or, burdenſome prophecy : and ſo here, the ſubject matter of this prophecy, as touching Babylon, being altogether of that nature: that which is alſo confirmed, by that which we find in Jeremy, concerning the peoples mocking of Gods Prophets ; with the frequent uſe of this word,in their meſſages, and Gods anſwer thereunto ; Jer.23.33,36.of which ſee on the place. The notation of the word is found,in that ſpeech of Jehu,concerning Joram, 2 King. 9. 25.the lord lifted up,or laid this burden(that is, uttered this ſentence, paſſed this heavy doom)upon him.

of Babylon] Heb. Bavel : Concerning the original of the name, we find, Gen.11.9. that when upon the vain and preſumptuous attempt of people,after the flood,to build a Tower,of ſuch an unheard of height, as might ſecure them againſt a ſecond deluge ; God by dividing their tongues, had bred a confuſion among them, and ſo diſſipated their deſign, the place that they had begun to build, was thereupon, from the Hebrew word Balal, that ſignifies, to confound, termed Babel: not as ſome of the Rabbins, and ſome of ours following them ; as compounded of Ba, and Bel, and ſo ſignyfying, confuſion comes : as Leah ſaid, when ſhe named the Child her husband had by her ſervant Zilpah,Gad,bagad,a troop comes. For though ſhe uſed thoſe words,(of the ſignification whereof alſo ſome queſtion is :) yet ſhe gave him not that name ; but rather, as others, with more plainneſs and probability : (for ſuch manner of compoſitions,are not ſo common in Hebrew:) Babel,ſimply, without compoſition ; for Balbel, confuſion, of Balal : (as Golgotha, in the Greek, and Gugtatha in the Syriack, Matth. 27. 33. for Golgoltha, a skul, of Galal) and from thence with the Greeks, Babylon. Now this Babel,or Babylon, became afterwards a prime ſeat of Nimrod,that great Tyrant,who began to ſettle his principallity in Chaldea; from whence he pierced into Aſſyria,where he built Niniveh, Gen.10.10,11. the head-city of the Aſſyrian Monarchy, at the time of this Prophecy ; chap.37.37. Babylon being both then, and for ſometime after, held by an inferiour Prince, from the Aſſyrian Monarch : as appears by the ſtory of Manaſſes ; 2 Chron. 33. 11. who afterwards,having with ſome other, ſhaken of the Aſſyrian yoke, grew great by the fall of that ſtate ; and ſo ſetled a new Monarchy, called the Chaldean, or Babylonian-Monarchy. Now by this Monarchy, under Nebuchadnezzar, was the Jewiſh ſtate to be ſuppreſſed, Jeruſalem ſurprized, and ſacked, the Temple deſtroyed, and the people of the Land carried away to Babylon; there to remain in captivity, for a long time : againſt the terrour and trouble whereof, to fore-arme the faithful, and to ſupport ſuch of them, as might ſurvive the ruine of their Country ; and remain in that ſervile condition, with an hopeful expectation of their deliverance from thence, and their return, after ſome time, into their own country again ; the Prophet in this Prophecy, foreſheweth the downfall of that State ; and the delivery of his people, by means thereof, out of that bondage, which under it they had endured. See of the ſame argument, Jer. 50. and 51. As for the ſpecial occaſion of delivering, and divulging this Prophecy againſt Babylon ; ſome ſuppoſe it to be, in regard of thoſe grievous calamities, which were foretold ſhould befall the Jewiſh State, in the latter part of the fift, and ſixt Chapters of this Book; which were, ſay they, to be inflicted by the Chaldeans,and Babylonians. But that to me ſeems not ſo likely : becauſe there is no mention of Chaldeans, or Babylonians, at all, there : I ſhould rather deem,that it was revealed to the Prophet,and by him publiſhed, ſometime, after that ſad meſſage that he brought to King Ezekiah, upon his ſhewing of all his treaſure and gallantry,to the Babylonian Emballadours;concerning the evils,that his people,and poſterity, in the age following,ſhould from Babylon ſuſtain,chap.39.6,7. I am not ignorant,that a learned man of great note,would have this prophecy to be underſtood, not of the deſtruction of Babylon by Cyrus; but of a former and nearer at hand,between the times of Sennacherib,and Nebuchadnezzar,by Deioces,and the Medes, of whom by a cunning contrivement he had made himſelf King. But, beſides that I finde no cleer footing of any ſuch conqueſt of Babylon,in any prophane author;nor any foot-ſtep at all of it, in holy writ, there are two main arguments, which the Prophecy it ſelf affords,for the removal of this groundleſs conceit. The one is, that the deſtruction of Babylon, here denounced, is ſaid to be executed on her, for the deliverance of Gods people; and the procurement of their liberty, to return again into their own country : chapter 14. 1,3. nor is there mention, of any deportation of them to Babylon, before the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. The other is, that ſuch a ruine of Babylon is foretold,as ſhould be irrecoverable,chap.13.19.20. & 14. 22, 23. But if in the intervall, between theſe two terms of time,Babylon had been by the Medes ſacked and ruined,as this Author would have it, the Prophets words, of her irrecoverable ruine, could not be true;were not then,at leaſt fulfilled : for it is apparent that under Nebuchadnezzar,ſhe was in a moſt flouriſhing and magnificent condition,Dan.2.37.38.& 4.30. This Prophecy therefore cannot be underſtood of any other overthrow of Babylon,ſave that alone,whereupon followed immediately,the releaſe of Gods people, 2 Chr.36.22.23.

which Iſaiah the ſon of Amos did ſee]See the notes on ch.1. 1.&.2. 1.

V.2. Lift up a banner upon the high mountain] At the entrance into this Prophecy, there is a ſolemn proclamation made, as in Gods name,for the calling together of thoſe people, that were by his appointment, to be employed againſt Babylon. So Jeremy beginneth with ſome-what the like,Jer.50.2.

Lift up a banner] To ſummon men to appear,to call in people,that may be ſet a part and enrolled for this ſervice. To which purpoſe Kings are wont to ſet up their Standard, when they intend ſome expedition,that thoſe of their Subjects,who by vertue of their places,or tenures,are obleiged to ſuch ſervice, and ſuch others as are willing to be that way employed,may know whither to reſort. Of this uſe of an enſign,or banner. ſee alſo ch.5.26.

upon the high mountain]Some render the particle,not upon,but againſt. By the mountain,here mentioned, underſtanding Babylon, ſo termed not from her ſituation; (for ſhee ſtood in a low ground) but for her high towers and ſtately buildings: in regard whereof alſo it is by Jeremy ſo ſtyled,Jer.51.25. and the Epithet here given it, ſome of them interpret,quiet,and ſecure,ſuch as Laiſh is ſaid to have been,Judg. 18. 27. deriving it from a Chaldee word,ſo uſed in the Talmud. Others,plain,as Jeruſalem is called the mountain in the field and the rock of the plain,Jer. 17.3. & 21.13. fetching it from a Syriack word, in that verſion oft uſed : other of them again, dark, and gloomy, whom the old Latine followes, deducing it (but with no very good analogy) from the Hebrew word, that ſignifies the evening, But the greater number of Interpreters render the whole branch,as our Engliſh hath it, upon an high mountain. For ſo I ſuppoſe it would be a little better, and more ſuitable to the original,wherein no article is expreſſed,as not pointing to ſome one ſpecial place;but intending an high, or eminent place, from whence ſuch a ſignall may be fartheſt deſcryed.ſuch as are uſually made choice of for the erecting of beacons, and diſplaying of banners, for that purpoſe ſet up. See chap. 18. 3. and 30. 17. Nor need we make doubt of rendering it an high hill; ſince that we find the word ſo frequently uſed in that ſenſe,Numb.23. 3 .chap. 41.18.& 49.9.Jer.3.2, 21.& 4.11.&7.29.&12.12.& 14.6. notwithſtanding that a late learned Annotator contendeth ſtrongly, to have it both here, and in all thoſe places,to ſignifie a plain,becauſe the like word in Syriack ſignifieth a plain,Luk.3.5.His reaſon here is,becauſe Souldiers are wont to be muſtered, not on the hill, but in the plain. But the uſe of the banner here erected,is to call thoſe together,that may be muſtred afterward in the plain.

exalt thy voyce unto them]Cry aloud unto,or call aloud upon,thoſe that are to be imployed againſt Babylon; that ye may be heard of them,as far as may be.So ch.40.9.Jer.22.20.

ſhake the hand]Becken with the hand, unto thoſe that are farther off, whome your voyce will not reach unto. See on chap. 10. 33.

That they may go into the gates of the Nobles]Heb.and they ſhall go: as chap.11.3. That they may march unto Chaldea, and ſurprize the cities belonging to that Empire,(gates,for cities,as Deut.16.5.) or,(becauſe it is another word, that is commonly uſed in that kind of ſpeech;and this for diſtinction ſake,would be rendred,door, rather then gate,as Ezek.46.3.)to break into the houſes and palaces of the Babylonian Princes,ch.45.1.

into]This particle is not in the text; but it is to be ſupplyed,as Gen.10.11.

chap.10.8.equall to Princes. The word here uſed, anſwers that of the Greek rendred Benefactors, Luk.22.25. and it ſignifies properly men of frank.and free diſpoſition,Exod.35. 5, 22.ſuch as keep great houſes,and are large,and liberal in expence,chap.32.5,8.that which our Engliſh Title of Lord;is in the old Saxon, ſaid alſo to import,as intimating,what men of that rank ſometime were,ever ought to be. Now into the houſes of ſuch great ones, would the enemy endeavour,eſpecially to make entry,partly, becauſe theſe were the heads of the State, and their houſes moſt conſpicuous; and partly, becauſe both moſt and beſt pillage was there to be had, chap. 45. 1,3.

V.3.I have commanded my ſanctified ones] I have by a ſecret inſtinct given in charge,(as chap.10.6.&23.11. Jer.34. 22.& 50.21.) to thoſe whom I have prepared and ſet apart for this ſervice, to wit, the expedition againſt Babylon. For ſo is the word ſanctifie uſed, Jer.6.4.& 12.3.Joh.10.36,& 17.19.a metaphor, from the religious rites, that men were to uſe in way of preparation, when they were to ſet upon any holy duty,any ſolemn part of Gods ſervice,Exod.19. 10,11.1Sam.16.11.2 Chr.30.3,15--19. Job 1.5. Pſal.26.6.and the ſlaughter to be made by theſe,of Gods enemies,was a ſervice of God, and unto him as a ſacrifice,ch. 34.2,6,7. Jer. 48.10. who theſe ſanctified ones are,ſee Jer. 51.27,28, and in part hereafter,ver. 17.

I have alſo called my mighty ones] The ſame thing in other terms expreſſed. For Gods cal,here, is the ſame with his charge before,as ch.41.2.&45. 4. his mighty ones here,with his ſanctified ones there. Such,as he hath fitted and furniſhed with might and ability ſufficient, to go through ſtitch with his work, chap. 5. 27. and 45. 5. and that come armed with his might, chap. 45. 1,2. Joel. 2. 11.

for mine anger]Some refer theſe words to mighty ones,as if themeaning were that therefore,they were mighty,becauſe armed with Gods anger;as God is ſaid therewith to arm himſelf, ch.59.17.See ch.10. 5. But they depend rather upon the verb,called,I have called them, as Some,in mine anger,or,as ours well render it,for mine anger, to execute vengance for me,upon Babylon. So the Lord made the wicked for the day of evill, Prov. 16. 4. the genuine ſenſe of that place.

even them that rejoyce in my highneſs]Such, as ſhall go willingly and gladly about my work:and triumph in thoſe gallant actions, that I ſhall worke by them.So the moſt,rendring the words much to the ſame effect,that our verſion yeelds. But the Hebrew ſyntax well conſidered,may ſeem to run ſomewhat a diverſe way. The word tranſlated,them that rejoyce,is not a participle;but a noun ſubſtantive;and ſignifies exultants,or triumphers,rather,then barely, rejoycers, and it is in a ruling form,taking unto it the word following,rendred highneſſe;but ſignifies,as that of neer affinity with it, chap. 12.5. ſometime excellency,or gallantry,as Deut.33.29.ſometime,pride,or haughtineſſe,as ch.9.9.&.16.6. ſo that the term ſounds, word for word, triumphers of gallantry,or,(if ye will take the term in the worſe part, which here ſuits not ſo well)of haughtineſſe,that is in our language, gallant triumphers,ſuch as do gallantly triumph. There reſts the pronoun,my, which in the ordinary courſe of conſtruction, is to be joyned rather with the word ruling,then ruled,though in the reading,it be annexed to the latter.So chap.2.20.his idols of gold,and his idols of ſilver,not the idols of his gold,or the idols of his ſilver,though the pronoun be there alſo affixed to the latter. and ſo would it be rendered here,not the rejoycers,or, triumphers of, or,in his gallantry, but,as before,his ſanctified,his valiants:ſo here, his brave,or gallant, triumphants.Thoſe his Commanders,and Servitours,that ſhal bravely demean themſelves in this ſervice, and gallantly triumph in their victorious ſucceſſes,v.15.17.

V.4.The noyſe of the multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people]Heb.The voyce of a multitude, or, of tumult, or, tumultuous noiſe,(as Pſal.65.7.Amos 5.23.)is,or,is heard upon the mountains;according to the likeneſſe,or ſimilitude,(as Ezek.13.15.)of the noyſe of a great or,ample(that is,numerous)people. The word, noyſe, ſhould be ſupplyed in the latter branch from the former. See the like,ch. 5.29. There ſhall be heard upon the mountains ſuch a tumultuous and confuſed noyſe as is wont to be in a place, where a great multitud of people are gathered together,Ezek.1.14.In which words,the Prophet,as ſpeaking of a matter in preſent action,and as if he heard the very noyſe,that the companies made,either in their muſter,or in their march,doth in a very lively manner, repreſent unto us, either the great ſwarms of people; flocking and thronging together unto Gods Standard before mentioned,erected on the hils,v.2.or the warlike troops of the Medes and other their aſſociates, paſſing over the mountains to break into Chaldea.

a tumultuous noyſe of the Kingdomes of the Nations gathered together]Heb.a voyce of tumult:as chap.16. 6. or,of a ſtreporous,or, tumultuous company:as chap 17.12, The ſame thing repeated:implying withall,that Cyrus his vaſt Army:wherewith he marched againſt Babylon,ſhould conſiſt:not of one Nation,though one only be named: v.17.but be gathered out of many Kingdoms:See Jer.25.14. & 27.7. &50.41.&51.27.28.

the Lord of hoſts muſtereth the hoſt of the battel] Heb. the hoſt of war;that is his warlike hoſt,as Num.31.14. A defect of the pronoun as if he had ſaid;No marvel,if the army be ſo numerous, and made up of people out of ſo many countries,when the Soveraign Commander of all the creatures,muſters up his forces;as Princes are wont to do,when they are to ſet forth,or ſend out ſome great army.See ch.1 9.

V.5. They come from a far country]From Media and Perſia,places remote from Babylon. For Aſſyria, and ſome other Countries ſevered them.See on Jer.51.46. Heb.from a land of long iniquity,& ſo ch.46.11.

from the end of heaven]That is, of the land,or Country lying under heaven:as Matth.24.30,So Jer.50.26. A common phraſe uſed to ſignifie the people; or countries, moſt remote,of the world commonly known;or with whom any ordinary commerce is,Neh.1.9.Act 2.5.Col.1.23. Nor is it here any hyperbolical ſpeech,as ſome would have it;it is no more then if he had ſaid, from the lands end ; which is preciſely true of the Perſians,the Medes,Aſſociates,and both Subjects to one king,to wit,Cyrus. For their Country is bounded on no ſmall part of it,with the main-ſea,and the Perſian gulf;as is Media alſo on the one ſide with the Caſpian Sea.

even the Lord,and the weapons of his indignation]Or,inſtruments of his wrath. For the word is very general, See ch.22.24.& 23.7. thoſe that he makes uſe of, to execute vengance by, and to puniſh thoſe,with whom he is wroth,ch.10.5.

to deſtroy the whole land] Of Chaldea : whereof Babylon was the head city,Jer.25.12.or, as ſome render it, the whole earth, that is, the whole world. The Chaldean Empire, that had ſubdued a great part of the world then commonly known in thoſe parts; and whoſe Kings in the height of their pride deemed themſelves Lords of the whole world,Jer.27.5--8.Dan,2.37.38. The whole verſe may well thus be rendred, There are coming from a far country from the lands end,the Lord,and his inſtruments of wrath, to deſtroy the whole land. For the Prophet ſpeaks of it, as of a thing preſent;before; as if he heard the noyſe of them thronging together,here,as if he ſaw them,now in their march on-ward toward Babylon.See the like of the Aſſyrians march towards Jeruſalem,ch.28.32.

V.6. Howl ye]The Prophet turns his ſpeech,here, to the Babylonians; and as before he called on thoſe people, that were to be employed againſt Babylon, to meet together, and march thither-ward:ſo now he calls upon the Babylonians,to howl and lament,in regard of the calamities that were coming upon them.So ch.23.1,6. Jam.5.1.

for the day of the Lord]Gods day,that is,his time of viſitation,and vengance, wherein he will come unto judgment againſt Babylon. So chap. 2. 12. and 10. 3. Jer. 46.10,21.and 50.20, 27.Zeph. 1:7.

is at hand]It is neer : becauſe they that are to execute it,are on their way thither,v.5 ſo Ezek.30.3.Joel.1.15.&.2.1.& 3.14.Obad.v. 15.Zeph.1.7.

it ſhall come as a deſtruction from the Almighty]And therefore unavoidable. So Job.31,23.Joel. 1.15. There is an elegancy in the ſound, of the words,in the original; which our Engliſh cannot ſo fitly expreſs. The title given to God here,is Shaddai. Concerning the notation and proper ſenſe thereof, there is ſome diverſity of opinion among the learned. Thoſe that render it, Almighty, derive it from a word that ſignifies to waſte ; and ſo underſtand it, to intimate one,that is able, as a mighty Conquerour, to lay all waſte at his pleaſure. That which ſuits well with the words here,as devaſtation, from the devaſtator. Others derive it from a word, that ſignifies,a teat,that yeelds milk;and ſo it ſhould imply one,that feeds all, and miniſtreth nouriſhment unto all; that which is frequently given unto God in Scripture,Gen.48.15.Pſal.23.1.&104. 11,15.136. 25.&145.15,16.&147.9.Others,laſtly,render it, All-ſufficient,one that hath all-ſufficiency in himſelf, and is able to ſupply and furniſh his creatures with all ſufficiency needful for them, Pſal. 23. 1. and 34. 9, 10. and 84. 11. Luk. 22. 35.2 Cor.9. 8.1 Tim.6.6, 17.

V.7. Therefore ſhall all hands be faint, and every heart ſhall melt] An utter diſcouragement,and failing both of hand and heart, ſhall upon the report hereof,befall the Chaldeans;and no marvel,when, God himſelf is coming in the head of the hoſt againſt them,Pſ. 76. 5-7.Ezek.22.14 See the ſame,Ezek.21.7.

hands be faint]Or,feeble,as 2 Sam.4.1.or,fall down,or, hang down: as they are wont to do when men are ſo weakned, or tired out, or qualmed, upon ſome ſudden affrightment,their ſpirits being quailed that they are not able to hold them up, or make uſe of them for their ſuccour or defence, Exod.17.12. Jer. 6.24. & 50.43.Ezek.7. 17.

heart melt] A metaphor from wax, that melteth when the fire comes neer it,Pſal.22.14.&68.2. or the dew that melteth with the heat of the Sun,Exod.16.21.Hoſ.6. 4. or any ſuch moiſt and flaſhy bodies, as upon ſlight occaſions, alteration of aire, change of weather, a little rain or wet falling on them, and the like;are prone to melt away,and run to water,Exod.15.15.Deut.1.28 Joſh.2.11.& 5. 1,&7.5.&14.8.2Sam.17.10.Pſ.39.11.& 58.7,8.& 112.10.ch.10.17. &19.1.Nah.2.10.

V.8. And they ſhall be afraid]As Job. 21. 6. or. For they ſhall be affrighted : as it is rendred,Jer.51.32.or, troubled,as 1 Sam.28.21. 2 Sam.4.1.or,amazed,as Exod.15.15. Judg. 20. 41.or,diſmayed : as ch.21.3.for the word ſignifies ſuch a fright, as diſturbs,and diſtracts or;

or such a sudden flight,as casts women into travel,and makes them to miscarry,Psal.48.7.6.ch.21.3.

And] Or, For:so Chap.8.21.8.9.11. for a reason is here rendred, why their hands became so feeble,and their hearts so faint. They were surprized with extream fear and terrour.

pangs and sorrowes]shall take hold of them]A defect of the pronoun: as ch.13,14.v,15.

they shall be in pain, as a woman that travelleth] Heb. that is, bringing forth. Such pangs and pains shall seize on them, as are wont to do on women in such cafe. A similitude oft used,to expresa extremity of distraction and distress. So,befides, the places before pointed to,Chap.36.17,18,& 37.3.Jer.6.24.8.22. 23.& 30.6.8.49. 24.& 50.43.Mic.4.9,10.

they shall be amazed one at another]Or, they shall be amazed,looking one at,or,one another,as Gen.43.33,& Jer. 36.16. They shall be distunyed to fee others of their own, and those, such as sometime seemed so valorous and couragious, to be now so faint-hearted,Jer. 50.43.or they shall stand like men,amazed and amated,staring one upon another, as being at their wits end, not knowing what to do; nor having the heart to turn their hand unto ought, whereby to help themselves, or others. So Psal. 107. 27. Chap .19. 14-16.

one at another]Heb.a man at, or,on his neighbour,or friend.A familiar phrase in that language,Gen.11.3.Exod.11.2.Jer.7.5.&9.7.& 22.8.&33.30.Zach.8.16.17.

faces] shall be as flames,] Heb.faces of flames shall,their faces their faces shall be as flames. Now this,here,some understand be. For the syntax:see Lam.4.7. Now this,here,some understand of shame. They shall so blush for shame of their cowardice and distraction,that their faces shall look as if they were all on a fire:as Ezek.7.18. Shame shall be upon all faces. But fuch fear and faintnesis,as is here intimated,usually drowns, and destroys shame : at least hinders such blushing. Others expound it of such illnesis of look, as famine and hardthip,and such calamities as attend war,are wont to produce,making men look many times even like unto Ghosts. So Lam.4.8.their visage is blacker then a coal : and Lam.5.10. our skin is black, as an oven,through famine. And these places indeed,wel expresi the meaning of the phrase,faces of flames. being rather,faces scorched with the flame,Ezek.20.47. such as theirs are wont to be,that work at the forge , and the fire;or such,as mens faces seem to be, when they stand before some kind of fire; that is, pale, wan, swarthy, and discoloured; then as some would have it of the same colour with flame, but they fail in the ground of such kind of visage here implyed. This manner of look here mentioned,proceeding not from those evil effects of war;not as yet produced:but from the fear and dreadful expectation of it,as yet only approaching them, and on the wayto waid them; as Jer.30.6.a voyce of fear,and trembling,every man,with his hands on his loyns,and all faces turned into paleness.Joel.2.6. before their face,people shall be all faces turned into paleness;Joel.2.6. before their face,people shall be all faces turned into or like blackenesse ; and Nahum.2.10.the much pained; all faces shall gather blackenesse ; much pain is in all loynes; and all their faces gather blackenesi. Which places, precisely parallel to this, both cleer the phrase, here used;and hold our allo the ground of such appearance in the face here discribed, the very fame that is here intended,extream fear. Of the sense of the place, shen,there is no doubt;it is clear enough,that they should look pale, or black,in the face;nor need much question be made of the ground or occasion thereof, that it should be out of fear. Howbeit, the phrase seems somewhat harth,faces of flames, for,faces scorched, or discoloured. I incline,therefore, to that,which Some of our Iewish Authors have, to wit,that by the word here used,is to be underflood, not flames of fire;but a certain people inhabiting some part of Africa, of the posterity of Mizraim, or Egyptus, in Scripture sometime termed Lehab m,(the word here used)Gen.10.13.1 Chr. 1. 11,and sometime Lubbim,2 Chr.16.8.Lehabyans, or Lybians,as we commonly style them, coming neerer to the latter; who are for visage not unlike to the Ethiopians,or blackmoors;Jer.13.23 .Amos. 9.7. on the north of whom they border,being tawny-moores at least. And I fee not what should hinder this exposition, their faces,shall be , as the faces of Lybians,inde facies Libyca,Latinadesect theyshal look like blackmoores, tawny moores,for fear; the defect of the note of similitude, is common, Gen. 49. 9. Deut. 33. 22. c.8.

V.9. Behold the day of the Lord commeth] Or,is come,as of a thing present:before,he faid it was neer,vers. 6. he saith now, it is come :So Ezek.7.10. Behold the day,behold it is come, Behold,as chap.10. 33.

cruel]cruel he is,or,cruel it is,either he,or the day,or he, in that day;as they dealt cruelly with Gods people, Jer,6.23. Chap.46.6. So will God then cause the enemy to deal cruelly with them, Jer. 50.42.

both with wrath,and fierce anger]Heb.and wrath; and heat of nose, and for both, as Gen.36. 24. Ier. 17.26--with wrath,as,with thy sword,and with thy hand,Psal.17. 13, 14. compared with v.7.and heat,or fiercour of nose, or, visage, (the word signifies either,)for fiercenesis of anger,as ch.7.4.verf.13.because anger there usually disfigureth it self,Psal.18.15.&34.16. So God saith of himself, Ezek. 38. 18. heat, or fury, or, flame shall rise in my nose, or my face.

to lay the land desolate] Heb. to put the land, (to wit, of Chaldea, as ver.5.) into desolation,as Ier.2.15.and 47.Sce,verf.8.

and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it]As Pf.37.38.&104. 35.See ch.14.23.

V.10. For the stars of heaven,and the constellations thereof shall not give their light]A description of extream horror,without any glimps or hope of relief, counsel, or comfort. When men are in such an horrid confusion, and fourfom condition, as if the light of heaven were wholly taken away from them;all shall be so ful of horror and terrour,that the heavenly bodies may seem to have lost their light. So ch.5.30.& 34.4.Ezek.32.7,8. Joel.2.10.31.Matth.24.29.Mar.13 24.Luk.21.25.a resemblance taken, as some think,from men in distresi at Sea, to whom no light from heaven, for direction, appears Act.27.20.

the stars of heaven]Fixed in the firmament to give light to those upon the earth,Gen.1.16,17. Pfal.83.& 148.3.

the constellations thereof]The word,cesil,whole plural is here used, doth fignifie fome particular and special, either ftarr,or constellation, that is, company of ftars neighbouring and making up one fign or figure; as appeares by Job. 9.9.& 38.31. Amos.5.8.Where this and fome other are reckoned up to, ether. That which croffeth the conceit of those,who suppose Cocab,and cesil to be distinguished, in Hebrew,as after,and aftson,in Greek,Stella, and Sidus,in Latine. The former in each language,to fignifie a fingle ftars, the latter, a compound figure. For to omit, that it might, without much labour,be thewed, that in the two latter languages, the words are oft promiscuously used,the places before pointed to,do evidently evince, the word cesil,to fignifie: not a conftellation, or configuration,in general;but fome particular, either signal ftars,or fuch.. Some of the Hebrew Doctors, suppose it to denote a fingle ftarr, and that to be the Scorpions heart. The Greek sometime render it Antheres,or the eyening ftars, other-where, otherwife. And it is not unlikely, that those there mentioned together in Job,were rather fingle ftars,and why not some of the wandering-ones, as well, as of the fixed, Jof more eminent luftre, of whom more special notice was taken in regard of the times of their appearance,then fuch configurations, as from our Artists we now have, and the Greeks and Latines before us;the greateft number whereof,have their figures and denominations affigned them, from the feigned ftories of the old fabulous Greeks, it being very questionable whether any fuch figures were in Jobs time, invented,or no. Howbeit,moft Writers take it to be, not a fingle ftarr,but a compofure of ftarrs, made up,into fome figure; which some guess to be the Pleiades, or Jeuna-ftarrs, or the bulls head,called by the Greeks, alfo,Hyades, because at their rising, the Arabians call Suhelin,or Suchelin,(for the Latines differ)by a term manifestly corrupted from the Latine;a name given to those seven-ftarrs,by the old Latines, upon a miftake, fuppofing the Greek term Hyades,to have risen, not from the verb hyein, that fignifies to rain but from the noun,hyes that,fignifies fwine. But against this is objected,that this kind a riferh in June; whereas this cesil should rise in the Hebrews nineth moneth, anfwering to our November, in part, which thereof allo is deemed to have it name, Cisleu, Zach.7. 1. Others,therefore(and fo both the old Greek,and Latine,fomes time)render it rather, Orion, a conftellation, conffifting of many bright ftarrs, and rising in the moneth before mentioned. Here, and here only,we have it in the plural number,whereof by the Hebrews two reasons are rendered. Some fay, because of two ftars of the fame name neer to the two poles : a thing,unlikely,that notice should be taken by the Hebrews of fuch ftarrs as in their hemifphere did never appear. Others fuppofe,that it is as plural, compriehending all thofe,that made up fuch a conftellation:one whereof, being of more eminency then the reft, should be termed cesil, and thus with the reft of them ceslim,that is to fay,cesil,and his companions. I fuppofe, that it is plural, to denote, by a metaphorical manner of fpeech, any the brighteft ftarrs, or conftellations, as if it were faid, no cesilt, or,fuppofing Orion to anfwer cesil,no Orions, fhall affford any light. That ftarr, or configuration of ftarrs, being one of the brighteft in the sky. So are proper names, very frequently uled both in our own and other languages,Had we so many Pauls and so many Neftors,and the like;that is,fo many comparable, for piety,to the one,and for policy,to the other. The Prophets words then,may thus be rendered, Neither the ftars of heaven,nor the Orions thereof (the brighteft of them, or of the conftellations thereof) fhall give their light,See Nimrim, Ch.15.6.

the sun shall be darkned in his going forth] When he comes forth, as a bridegroom out of his Chamber;or fets forth, as a man of might to run,a race, Pfal.19.5.he fhall no fooner begin to peep out, but he fhall clafp in againfor,he fhall be eclipfed at his rising; as one ftifled in the birth. See Amos 8.9.Act.2.20.

and the moon shall not cause her light to shine] There fhall be no light with them, either by day,or by night. Gen.1.16. Pfal.136.7--9. And this may seem to have respect,to what is fpoken of the Babylonian King,or State,chap.14.12. where for his goodly, and glorious luftre,he is compared to the bright morning ftarr, and yet,now faid to have no fpark or glimpfe of light ; much lefs able to afford, or make thew of it to any other, fitting in darkneis himfelf, chap. 47.5.

V.11. And I will punish the world for their evill,and the wicked for their iniquity] Heb.and I will visit upon the world evill,and upon the wicked their iniquity. That is,I will in my viftration by judgment,inflict evill upon the world;(that is,upon the Chaldean land, and State,See on ver.5.) and upon the wicked, the punifhment of their iniquity,as Gen.4.13. Or, I will punifh them, for the evill that they have done;and the wicked among them:(as the fewers,before, v.9.)for the iniquities committed by them:to visit, for to punish, as chap.26.14. Jer.5.1.44.and evill, for their evill,a defect of the pronoun,as prayer,for their prayer,Pf.65.2.

and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and lay low the haughtinesi of the terrible]Or,of the roysters; or, tyrants; fuch as in the haughtinesi of the terrible]Or,of the roysters; or, tyrants; fuch as in a bravery,force and offer violence to others,for fo the word properly fignifies, chap. 25. 5.

I will pull down the pride of Babel;who out of her pride and insolency, hath been fo formidable and burdensome to other people, Jer. 51. 55. Pride is one of the fins,that State is taxed for. See chap.14.4,6,13,14. Dan.4. 30.&5.20. and pride, wherelower it is found, fhall be plucked down. Chap.2. 11--17.&10.12.&24.10,11. Luk.14.11.&18.14.The fame thing in divers terms repeated, as verf.12.

V.12. I will make a man more precious then fine gold; even a man then the golden wedg of Ophir] This is fpoken,to intimate, either the fmall number of people that fhould be left, after the Medes had made fpoyl and havock of them, in the city,as things that are rare, are wont to be deemed precious:1 Sam.3.1.Prov.25.17. See ch.4.1. or the eagernesi the enemy fhould have,to make flaughter of them that they fhould not for the beft gold that was, were it tendred them,he hired to fpare the life of a Babylonian, ver. 17. Yet let it be conffidered,whether this may not be underflood; of the difficulty that fhould be,for the Babylonian King to retain men with him,to maintain fight againft the enemy,and to defend his city,when upon their approach, fuch a terrour fhould furprize all forts,even the valiant ones among them,as was before related, verf.7,8. Surely, the Prophet Jeremy foretels,Jer.50.26.& 51.30. that thofe which had been called in,from other parts,to affift Babylon,when they perceived,how it was likely to go with him,fhould begin to withdraw themfelves,and leave her to fhift for her felf:and thefe, it is likely, would not with gold,or filver,be hired to ftay by it, for fear of loling their lives,See ch.13.16. And this I take to be the true intent of the Prophet,in this place.See ver. 14.15.

a man] The words here uled are, Enosh,and Adam;of which,fee on Ch.2.9.They are here uled promifcuoufly: for whereas,fome would have the former,here,to fignifie,a man of price, and worth,the latter a common mans:the notation of the former word will not bear it.

then fine gold] An expreffion oft uled, to shew the excellency of that wherewith it is compared. Pfal. 19.10.&118.119. 127.Prov.8.19. The word here uled,is paz,or phaz, which fome think fo called, because impaz,or,imphaz that is,fined, and by fining (the moftly matter, and base mettal, being wrought out of it) made more folid. For whereas it is faid of Solomon,1 King. 10.18. that he covered his throne,with Mupaz gold : it is faid of the fame, 2 Chr.9.17. that the throne,with Mupaz gold : it is faid of the fame, 2 Chr.9.17. that he covered it with pure gold:yet,others fuppofe it to be fo called,rather, from the name of the place whence it was brought,and from whence fome fuppofe the kingdome of Phez in Africa, to retain its name to this day: and fo gold of uphaz, Dan. 10. 5. they conceive to be gold from uphaz, as it is, Jer. 10. 9. That is brought from thence;as gold of Ophir,that is, gold brought from Ophir : yea they want not,that guefs the word mupbaz in Solomons ftory,to be contracted of meuphaz,that is,from Saphez. But that is not fo probable,and yet the want of that letter in fome words, is not unufual: of which fee on ver. 20. Some make this the fame with Ophir ; the rather,becaufe they find mentioned by Ptolomy, a Bay, called Paft, and a river,called Phaftr,in the Iland of Taprobane,which they conceive therefore to be Ophir. I am not ignorant alfo, that fome, and thofe of no fmall note,would have this word not to fignifie gold,but fome precious ftone:and that the word topaz,is thence derived : the Greek article profixed to it. But the places of Scripture, where it is found oft ufed,evince the contrary,as veffels of pure,Job 28.17.and a Crown of pure,Pf.21.3.But of the feveral names of gold, in the Hebrew,See on Job 28.15--19.

gold of ophir] A place of fpecial note for fine gold.1 Kings,10.11. Job 22.24. Pf.45.9. In the Region feems to have been at firft fo termined; from the poffterity of Ophir, one of Sems iffue, who there feated themfelves, Gen.10. 29. Some of latter times have fuppofed it to be Peru in America ; upon a weak conjecture, from fome letters in other word the fame. But thofe that have made more diligent enquiry into the ftory, of the difcovery of thofe parts, informs us ; that no Region there was ancienty of that name : but that it came to be fo called by the difcoverers, upon a miftake, through ignorance of the country language, from an anfwer rendred them, upon a demand made by them, from the Natives, which they misunderftood. Nor is it likely, that Solomons fleet, or Jehoshaphats, which they manned out for Ophir, ever came neer thofe parts. 1 Kings, 9. 28.& 22.48. Others therefore feek for, and would feat this Ophir elfewhere. Some in Arabia,neer to the red-fea now termed the Arabian Gulf, or in an Iland fituate in the mouth of the Sea.Here,the rather in regard of the gold of Sheba,mentioned,Pf.72.15.and the great quantity of gold that the Queen of that country brought with her to Solomon : 1 Kings, 10.1,2,10. Sheba being held generally to be a region in thofe parts. But that is too neer a place, fo a Fleet fent out from Ezion gaber, on the coaft of that Sea, to make a three years voyage.1 Kings.9.26.28. &10.22. Therefore travel further weftward,to find it in Africa:becaufe ftore of gold,is at this day found in thofe parts;and it is almoft the only trade for it,that we now have : befides, that Africa famous for fine gold, they fuppofe to be Phez, as was before faid. But others run as far eaftward to difcover it in India abel; moft of them,fear it in the kingdom of Siam in Golden Cersonesus,or Peninsula, which yet they fuppofe to be an entire Iland,not oft from the continent, as Sicily from Italy. Though fome of them lately in Zeilam, rather, which they conceive to be that, which was called anciently Taprobane,termed ,as they conjecthat, which was called anciently Taprobane,termed ,as they conjecture,by the Phenicians ,at firft, Tapb-par-vain, or,pravain, that is, the coaft of Parvaim,wherof,2 Chr.3.6.And in procefs of time, Taprobane,wherein alfo they finde a port,called Hippurus, or Pyparus. Plinny,lib.6.cap.22.and Solin, c.4.which they gueis to be the fame with Ophir. In thefe parts,fome fuppofe it the more probable,that Ophir was fituate;becaufe the iffue of Sem, whereof Ophir, and Havilah were two brethren, are faid to have feated themfelves to the Eaft, Gen.10.30.40. And of the land of Havilah, which in likelihood was not far remote from Ophir,it is faid, that it hath ftore of good gold.Gen.2.11,12.Howbeit in thofe Indian quarters, where great ftore of gold, that is found in thofe Indian quarters, where ours trade,we fend much thither,receive little thence. Befides, that they are enforced by the fite of Havilah, Gen.2.11.to make two Ophirs, as well as two Havilahs.Gen.10.7.29. In a matter,therfore, fo abftrufe and ambiguous, I dare not determine.

Howbeit,I cannot approve of what the Rabbines tell us, out of their Legends, rather, then Chronicles;that Darius having ſlain Baltaſar, Dan.5.30,31.reigned one year in his ſtead;yet deſtroyed not Babylon, as is here foretold But in the year following,it was burnt with fire from heaven,as Sodome, and Gomorrah were. To which purpoſe they abuſe a place of Scripture,Jer.51.46.Of which, when we ſhall come to it. But this is but a figment of theirs, whereof there is no ſtore wanting in them. The truth is,that this utter devaſtation of Babylon,was not at once; but began at the conqueſt of it,by Cyrus and Darius,and in the ſucceeding ages was conſummated.

V.20. It ſhall never be inhabited]Heb. It ſhall not ſit for ever:ſit to wit,on a throne,as a Queen,or Empreſs,as c.10.13.or,inhabite, that is,be inhabited by any,(as the word is uſed,Ier.17.6.)or have place to inhabite,Ier.51.41.So Zach.7.7.& 9.5.Not for ever,that is never, as Joh.8.51.&11.26.to wit,after that it is once thus utterly deſtroyed. Nor need we,as Some would have it,expound the words, with a concealed reſtriction,untill the time ſet by God, for her reſtitution and reſtauration.For the ground they build on, taken from a twofold deſtruction of that State,whereof the one is imaginary,(ſee ver. 1.)is but ſandy.

neither ſhall the Arabian pitch tent there] The Arabians are a people,that kept in tents,wherewith they removed from place to place as they met with paſture for their cattle, Jer. 49. 29. called Scenitæ therefore by the Greeks;but in Hebrew they were ſo termed, either from the Plains,whereon they lived,Jer.3.2.(the word ſo ſignifying. See Deut.2.8.&.3.17.)or becauſe their country lay toward the evening quarter,the weſt, (ſee on chap. 59. 19.) between the Perſian gulf,and the red Sea;the utmoſt Weſt of Aſia,or, becauſe they were a mixture,or medely of divers Nations,Jer.25.24. as the word it ſelf alſo ſometime imports, Exod.12. 38.Neh.13.3. For I ſuppoſe that moſt unlikely,)which yet ſome hold out)that in regard of their hew, they ſhould ſo be termed from the raven,Cant.5.11.the one having the ſame radical letters with the other,and becauſe the Kedarenes from their blackneſs may ſeem ſo termed. See on Chap. 21.16.See alſo further of Arabia,on Chap. 21. 13. The word rendred, pitch tent,is obſerved to want a letter,to wit,Aleph:the like whereunto is found, Job.35.11.Prov.17.4.and as ſome,1 King.10.18. See on ver.12. The meaning is, that the place ſhall be ſo waſte, that thoſe wandering-people ſhall not ſit down there,becauſe they ſhall not find conveniency of feeding for their flocks. Though ſome would have it to be, in regard of thoſe harmful creatures, that ſhould rouſt and harbour in the rubbiſh and ruines of the city,ver.21,22.

neither ſhall the ſhepherds make their folds there] Heb. ſhall not make (their cattle)to lye down,(or,lodg(there. So Jer. 33. 11. See the like defect of the noun after the verb.Cant.1.7. The ſame things is in divers terms expreſſed. And we may obſerve a further deſolation denounced againſt Babylon,then is againſt Nineveh,Zeph. 3. 14. for it is ſayd,that the flocks yet ſhall lye down in the one;which is denyed here of the other. The reaſon whereof, ſee Chap, 14, 23. and 17.2.

V.21.But wild beaſts of the deſarts ſhall lie there]He had before ſhewed who ſhould not lodge,or abide there:he relateth,now, who ſhould.

wild beaſts of the deſart] Heb. Tſijim. Such kind of beaſts as are wont to haunt,and abide in Tſijah,that is,in dry places,or, waſts, ch. 41.18.& 53.2. So Chap.34.14.Jer.50.39.It is uſed alſo ſometime for people,that dwel in ſuch regions,Pſal.72.8. compared with Pſal. 68. 6.Some of the Rabbines ſay,that they are ſuch, as we call martens.

and their houſes ſhall be ful of doleful creatures]Heb.Ochim,A word no where elſe found. It is by moſt thought to ſignifie, ſome ſuch kind of harmful creatures,as by biting,or ſcratching,put men to pain: as derived from an interjection of a mornful notion,Ezek. 6.11, & 21.9.Some of the Rabbines ſay,they are ſuch,as aſtoniſh men at the ſight of them: Yet others, again, would have them to be no other then our ferrets.Nor want there of the Iewiſh writers, that ſuppoſe the word to ſignifie,not a beaſt,but a bird:ſome kind of fowl,ſo termed of the doleful tune that it hath. Theſe, whatſoever they were, ſhould lodge in their houſes, being deſtitute of Inhabitants ; or in the waſts, where they ſometime ſtood ; as Chapter. 5. 17.

and owls ſhall dwel there]Heb.the owls daughters:and it is not unworthy the obſervation,that the name here given the owl,is never found in Scripture ſingle,or ſimply;but inſtead of owl,or. owls,is conſtantly ſaid,the daughter of the owl,Levit.11.16. Deut.14.15. or. the owls daughters,Iob30.29.Chap.34.13.& 43.20.Ier.50.39. Mic.1.8. ſave once only,Lam.4.3.where the maſculine plural is found alone. Hence one of the Iewiſh Writers gathers, that the Othim before mentioned,are no other then theſe owls daughters, or young ones which which for want of food in thoſe waſte places, (wherein owls, in the places pointed to, are noted moſt to abide) being forſaken by the dam, (as in that place of the Lamentations is implyed, that they oft are) do make a very doleful,and hideous noyſe.But the text ſeems to relate them, as ſeveral ſorts of wild creatures : and the generality of the form would imply ſome other matter.But theſe among others, were to be as the Inhabitant and free-denizons of ruined Babylon. See Rev.18.2.

and Satyrs] The word here uſed, doth moſt commonly ſignifie a goat, Gen. 37.31. Levit.4.23. So called, becauſe he is very ſhaggy, or hairy. For that ſeems to be the primary notation of the word, Gen.27.11. Hence it is, that it is here rendred, Satyrs. Which were among the ancients, ſuppoſed to be monſtrous creatures, haunting woods, and waſte places, of a mixt compoſure, having viſage, and hands like a man, and going upright, as men do: but horned, and hairy, and cloven-footed like goats ; and Jerome tells of an Eremite, that ſhould meet with one of them in the wilderneſs ; Some ſuch monſters, it ſeems, our Tranſlators thought here intended. To which purpoſe, alſo, one of the Iewiſh Doctors ſaith, that it is a kind of miſhapen wild goats. The word is ſometime uſed for Devils : ſuch, as the idolatrous people in old time adored. So it is taken, Levit.17.7. 2 Chr.11.16.and they ſeem ſo termed ; either becauſe they appeared in the ſhape of goats, unto thoſe that adored them, or had dealings with them : as to witches at their meetings, they are reported oft-times to have done ; or becauſe by ougly, and direfull apparitions, they uſed to ſtrike terror, and horror, into thoſe that behold them, and make their hair, as we ſay, ſtand an end. For the word ſometime, ſignifies horror, chap. 28.2. Ezek.27. 35.& 32. 10. and an horrid tempeſt, Job 9. 17. & 18. 20. ſuch, as theſe alſo, ſometime raiſe, or appear with, Job 1. 19. And this way the Jewiſh Commenters, moſt of them,go, making the ſeirim, here, the ſame with the ſhedim, Deut.32. 17. and Pſal. 106. 37. In which place of Moſes, there is an alluſion to the notation of the word here uſed, in the root, from whence it ſprings, in that clauſe ; with whom their fathers were not affrighted. And this Expoſition may ſeem to receive ſtrength, as from that in Matth.12.43. where the Devil diſpoſſeſſed, is ſaid to haunt waſte and dry places : ſo, from that parallel place,Rev.18.2. where it is ſaid, that Babylon was, upon her fall,become an habitation of Devils ; and an hold of every foul ſpirit. Nor do I doubt, but that that place hath a compliance with this. But that is ſpoken of ſpiritual, and myſtical ; this, of corporal, and material Babel. And I ſuppoſe, rather, the word, here,to ſignifie ſome kind of ſtrange beaſts, as uſed to keep in waſte places : from their horrid, and ougly ſhapes ſo termed : and the rather, becauſe it is ſaid, chap. 34.13.the Seir ſhall cry to his mate : ſee further there. There want not, alſo, that ſuppoſe the Seir here mentioned,to be a kind of fowl,and that of the rank of owls, of a middle ſize, between the leaſt,and the greateſt: called by the Greeks, ſcops : whence alſo,we have our Engliſh word, ſcoff: becauſe it is a fowl full of geſticulation, prone to imitate the geſtures that others repreſent it with, and to act, what it ſees them do : and is by ſuch means, commonly, taken, as the dotterel is with us. The main reaſon, I ſuppoſe, that induced them to entertain this conceit, was the word of dancing, here uſed. Which, of how ſmall force it is, to infer this new notion, will in the opening of it appear.

ſhall dance there] So the verb ſignifies, when applyed to man : as 1 Chron.15.29.Eccl.3.4. but to ſkip, rather, when referred to beaſts, as to rams, and lambs, Pſal.114.4,6. and to calves, and the young of other creatures, ſporting, either by themſelves, or one with another, Pſ.29.6. unleſs we ſhall, with the Rabbines, and the Greek, render it ; and devils ſhall dance there. The Prophet may ſeem, the rather, to have uſed the word, that ſignifies, as well to dance as to ſkip, to comply with the word in the next branch, ver.22. that ſignifies as well to ſing, as to cry.

V. 22. And the wild beaſts of the Iſlands] Heb. Ijim.The word ſignifies primarily Iſlands, chap.11.11. & 40. 15. & 42. 15. here ſuch wild creatures, as breed, and keep in Iſlands, deſtitute of Inhabitants ; or unto which, few or none, have any ordinary acceſs. The Chaldee expounds it, wild-catts ; the Latine, owls. The Rabbines, Some of them, Pies, or, Jays. Some of ours tranſlate it, a terrible, or affrighting wight ; and expound it, a dragon. This they build upon two grounds. The former, concerning the tranſlation, is from the form of the verb, which is ſingular ; and they would have the noun alſo, ſo to be, as derived from the word Ajum, that ſignifies terrible, or dreadfull, whence the Emim had their name, Deut. 2.20. But there is no reaſon to make Ijim, more, then Tſijim, a ſingular ; and of the ſyntax more anon. The other ground concerning the expoſition, is drawn from the Prophets method. He began ſay they, with beaſts, the Tſijim, and Ochim; then paſſed on to fowls, Owls, and Seirs, ver.21. and here he comes to ſpeak of creeping things, or ſerpents. But this they ſpeak without proof. And I ſee no good ground therefore, for this new deviſed notation, and for the expoſition, as little. Our Engliſh renders it not amiſs in the general; the Jewiſh Writers, for the notation, backing them therein ; though in the particular deſignation of the kind, not agreeing among themſelves.

ſhall cry] It is by the Jewiſh Writers obſerved here, that the noun is plural, the verb ſingular : the meaning, ſay they, being, that each one of them ſhall cry. Of which kind of Syntax, See chap. 2.20. The word here uſed, ſignifies properly to anſwer: but it is uſed for to ſing, chap. 27. 2. Hoſh. 2. 15. according to which uſe of the word, ſome of the Hebrews would have it taken here : but to ſignifie, crying aloud, and that, as they ſuppoſe, in a dolefull tune, See Zeph. 2. 14. But the word, when it is applyed to Singers, and ſinging, doth not ſo much import, ſimply, to ſing, as to ſing by courſe, one party, as it were, anſwering another. So Exod. 15. 21. Ezra 3.11. And ſo the Ijim ſhall anſwer (ſo the old Latine renders it) or, cry : each, to others, chap.34.14.the Seir ſhall call, or, cry to his mate. Thoſe of the Jewiſh Writers, that would render it, ſhall dwell, or abide : as derived, from a word, that ſignifies a place of manſion, or abode, Pſal.90. 1. Nah.2. 13. Seem to ſtrain over-far, without example, and that needleſly, having a plain, and obvious ſenſe, at hand.

in their deſolate houſes] Some of the Rabbines read it, with change of one letter, an R, for an L, in their palaces : avouching for it, the like, Ezek.19.7. and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt takes it. But another of them, controlleth this interpretation, affirming, that theſe letters are not convertible, and he renders the words they ſhall cry, there, with their widows : Such of their kind, as have loſt their mates ; as alſo our Engliſh editions, ſome of them, repreſent it there in the margent ; and that of Geneva, hath it in the text : and it is well known, that the word, is commonly uſed for widows, chap. 10. 2. & 54. 4. and doth properly ſo ſignifie. But I find none, that herein concur with this Rabby. Our laſt, here, renders it. deſolate houſes, as in Ezekiel, deſolate palaces, as if he had ſaid, widowed ones, as ſome give it in Latine : which, howſoever, it might well be admitted here in regard of the ſtory ; yet that place in Ezekiel, will not ſo well brook it ; for it ſeems not ſuteable to the reſt of the relation, deſcribing the pranks, that a ſtirring and potent Prince ſhould play, to ſay, that he viſited the deſolate palaces of other : Princes, and laid waſt their cities. I ſuppoſe rather, that both there, and here, it ſhould be rendred, ſimply, palaces, without any ſuch ſuperfluous addition, as our old ancient Engliſh verſions all had it , nor was the old Latine other : and that, either by the ſcribes over-ſight one letter ſlipt in for another, (the like whereunto ſee, Jer. 2. 20. & 15. 14.)or by a kind of liſping pronunciation, the one came to be ſometime uſed for the other.

in their] Heb. in his, to wit, in the palaces of their King, or, of each one of his Nobles, alſo, of whom, before, verſ. 2. So Chap. 32.14.

and dragons] to wit, ſhall cry, (to be ſupplyed, as the Rabbine well obſerves, from the former branch, as Gen. 1. 16. verſ. 6.)after their manner. The word ſignifies the greateſt ſort of fiſh, ſuch as we call whales, Gen.1.21. See on Lam.4.3.and likewiſe the greater ſort of ſerpents, or, ſnakes. : to wit, of ſuch, as wanting feet(which ſome ſerpents, as the crocodile, and others have) glide along, by wrigling of their bodies, to and fro, on the ground, as thoſe great fiſh, whom in ſhape, alſo, they reſemble, do in the water. So it is taken, Job 30.29.chap.34.13.& 35.7.& 43.20.Jer.9.10.& 10. 22.& 49.33.& 51.37.and of the greatneſs of ſome of them, ſee Plinies natural hiſtory.l.8.c.11.14.

in their pleaſant palaces] Heb.in the palaces of delicateneſs, or, delicionſneſs, or, voluptuouſneſs. So Mich.2.9. houſes of pleaſure, or, delight, for, pleaſant houſes, but, here, rather, in the worſe part, for their curious, and delicate, or their voluptuous, their banqueting, and revelling houſes, that is, in the places, where ſuch, ſometime ſtood, See ch.32.13.See the uſe of the word, Deut.20.54,56.chap.47.1.Jer.6.2. the pronoun is wanting, as ver.7.

and her time is neer to come] As ch.56.1.Jer.48.16.Ezek.36.8. Babylons time, wherein ſhe is to be deſtroyed, So ver. 6. where it may be demanded, how this may be made good, when as it was not till about ſome two hundred yeares, after this Prophecy, that Babylon was ſurprized and ſacked, and the Chaldean Empire ruined by Cyrus, and Darius. For this Prophecy was delivered above one hundred year, and upward, before the Babylonian captivity, which laſted full ſeventy years, Jer.25.11, 12. Whereunto (paſſing by that novel, and groundleſs conceit of a former deſtruction of Babylon, of which, on verſ. 1.) anſwer may be returned. Firſt, that what may ſeem long with man, is ſhort with God, with whom a thouſand years are but as yeſterday, Pſal.90.4. or, but as to morrow, for a thouſand years, and a day, are all one with him, 2 Pet. 3. 8. Secondly, that this is by the Prophet thus ſoken, as ſpeaking to them, that were in, and under the captivity, (the moſt of whom, in all likelyhood, were as yet unborn) for whoſe ſupport, and comfort, in that heavy time, this was eſpecially delivered, and for their uſe left upon record, by him. So Jeremy writing to them, in the very beginning of the captivity, in the reign of Zedekiah, Jer. 51. 59. Speaks of Babylons ruine, as of a buſineſs approaching, Jer. 50. 1, 2. & 51. 46, 56. And laſtly, that as to the eye of faith, things future, and a far off, are as preſent, Joh. 8. 56. 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18. Heb. 10. 37, 38. So the Prophet by the Spirit of Prophecy, ſeeing theſe things, revealed unto him, as preſent, or approaching, verſ. 1. doth accordingly ſpeak of them, See verſ.4,5.9. So Jam. 5. 8,9.

and her dayes ſhall not be prolonged] Her dayes ; that is, the dayes of her wel-fare, of her proſperity, and tranquility (So the Hebrews Doctors) ſhall not laſt long, or be prolonged any longer, as Job 9 25.Pſ.89.45.Ier.51.47.Lam.4.18.& 5. 21. Or the dayes of her viſitation, as Hoſh.9.7,no longer deferred;& ſo it is the ſame in effect with the former. The time ſhall not be long,before this be put in execution.God will haſten to effect it,in his due time. It ſhall not be protracted beyond that ſet time, that God hath aſſigned it; See Ezek.12.25,27,28.

and will yet chooſe Iſrael] He will receive them into grace and favour, as if he had made a new choice of them again. So ſome. Others, he will make it appear, that they are ſtill his choſen people, as at firſt they were, Deut.7.6,7. It may be rendred, I will reſiae (as he promiſed to do, ch.1.25.) or,make choice ones of them, again, as the word is uſed;ch.48.10.Hagg.2.23. So the elect or, choyce Lady, 2 Joh.1. And there is indeed a particle in the Hebrew here, that doth uſually ſo ſignifie; but, that particle, in the Syntax of that language with ſome verbs, (this here uſed among other) is either ſuperfluous, or a note of the accuſative caſe only.So here; the main body of the people ſurviving then, intended, and ſo, chapter 44. 1,2. Though ſome expound it, of buying the Babylonians for ſlaves; as they, alſo, well might, from the Medes and the Perſians, that had ſurprized them. The meaning is, that the Tables now ſhould be turned, and thoſe now made Lords over them, whom they had been in ſubjection and bondage to, before; and thoſe in ſubjection to them, that had before Lorded it over them chap. 26.13.Spiritually, moſt interpreters underſtand it, of thoſe people; who by the miniſtery of the Apoſtles were, out of all nations, ſubdued, and brought in to the obedience of Chriſts Scepter. this proverb] Or, by-word, or, taunting ſpeech: as Ezek. 16. 44. ſo Deut.28.37.Jer.24.9. The word ſignifies not a parable, or ſimilitude; only; but any quick ſpeech, or ſentence of ſpecial note, and ordinary uſe: ſo called, as the moſt, from the verb maſhal, that ſignifies to rule, as being ſuch, as doth ſway commonly with men; either in their minds, or in their tongues. Though ſome would by a tranſpoſition of letters fetch it,from the word Shalam: which ſay they, ſignifies to aſſimilate. But neither are ſuch derivations, by tranſpoſitions,over-uſual in the Hebrew;nor do I find,where the verb Shallam,ever ſo ſignifies, againſt the King of Babylon] Inſulting now over him, who before tyrannized over thee: againſt,or,concerning,as ch.1.1.By the King of Babylon,ſome underſtand ſome one King; either Nebuchadnezzer, the firſt Monarch of the Chaldean Empire, who ruinated the Jewiſh State. 2 Chron. 36. or, Baltaſar, the laſt of that Empire, with whom that State fell. But the ſpeech concerneth not,ſo much this,or,that King, as the Kingdome, which ſucceſſively was holden by them.See Dan.7.17,23.

and ſay, how hath the oppreſſor ceaſed] The by-word, and taunting ſpeech concerning him, his State and city; ſpoken not ſo much in way of interrogation, as in way of admiration, and deriſion.So ver. 10,12.

the oppreſſor] Or, exactor:as ch.60.17.

the golden city ceaſed] For, golden; which well ſuites with the golden head. Dan. 2.32,38. and the golden cup, that Babylon is ſaid to be.Jer 51.7. Some render it, gold-thirſty; ſome exactreſs of gold; ſhe that ſtripped other people of their gold; as Aſſyria had done before her. chap.10.14.& 39.6.The word is rather, Syriack; (which language the Chaldees uſed, in thoſe times. Dan. 2. 4.) then Hebrew: the Prophet would have them, taunt that city by a term of their own language; as another, their idols, by a ſentence of the ſame. Jer.10.11. The ſubſtantive is wanting, but muſt be ſupplyed, either city, or State; not King: for the word is feminine; or, the golden one ſimply,without any other adjection.See the like defect,Pſ.73. 10.ch.40.10.Ezek.13.11.

V. 5. The Lord hath broken the ſtaff of the wicked] The anſwer to the queſtion moved, verſ. 4. Not Cyrus; but the Lord by Cyrus. chap. 41. 2.& 44. 48.& 25. 1,2. hath pulled down the power of the wicked King, and State of Babylon: he hath broken the ſtaff, wherewith,the wicked Babylonians did beat Gods people.See ch. 9. 4.& 10.5.& 47.6.

and the Scepter] Or, rod; as the word properly ſignifies:ſee ch. 9. 4.& 10.5,24. and ſo it would, here, be rendred for that which followeth,ver.6.

of the Rulers] The Babylonian Princes,and great ones: ſee Ezek. 19.11.the word,whence that for a proverb,comes,ver.4.

V. 6. He that ſmote the people in wrath, with a continual ſtroke] Or, That ſtruck the people, in wrath, with a ſtroke unavoidable, or, irrecoverable. For the words, ſtrike, and ſtroke, in the original, do here, the one anſwer the other. And ſome underſtand it of the rod, or ſtaffe ſtriking, ver. 5. Others, of the ſtriker, the hand (ſo ſome of the Rabbines) or, the perſon ſtriking with it. And of theſe latter, ſome underſtand the words on this manner: he that ſtruck the people in wrath, his ſtroke, ſhall not depart, or, be removed: or, the ſtroke of him, that ſtruck the people; (Heb. peoples;as ver.2.) *in wrath, ſhall not depart.*He that before,with ſo much fury,and rage, laid load upon many nations,and ſtruck them, at pleaſure; hath now received ſuch a ſtroke,as he was not able to avoid, or hath ſuch a blow given him, as he ſhall not be able to recover. But the former ſeems the plainer way, and to flow moſt naturally from the text. However we take the words,there is a reaſon,therein rendered;why God had broken the rod of Babylon,for the cruelty that had by her,been executed and exerciſed on other people.

he that ruled the Nations in anger is perſecuted, and none hindereth] This reading admitted, would ſtrengthen the latter interpretation of the former branch: for the ſame thing, queſtionleſſe, is after this Prophets uſual manner,(though in other terms expreſſed) intended in either: yet moſt interpreters, (ſome of them, alſo, controlling the points in the Hebrew) render it, otherwiſe; as ſpoken, wholly, of the Babylonian Kings cruelty; not of ought, that had befallen him; thus rendering the words, He that ruled the Nat- ons in anger; that purſued, or perſecuted them, without hinderance, or, none withholding; or, that hindered, or, reſtrained, not thoſe that did perſecute; ruled roughly, and reſtrained not thoſe, that under him did the like. And this verſion comes neer, indeed, to the prophets purpoſe, and intendment: but the words will not admit it; I encline therefore, to that, which I meet with in the Jewiſh commentaries, upon this place; who thus render it: That ruled the Nations in anger, they perſecuted without reſtraint; or out of the former branch, ſupplying, what may make the ſenſe more compleat, (as Gen. 1.16. ch.3.25.) that ruled with anger the perſecuted: that tyrannized over thoſe, whom inceſſantly, none daring to oppoſe,or being able to reſtrain him,he perſecuted.See ch.10. 14. This ſyntax,and ſenſe, the text freely yields, without force.

V.7. The whole earth is at reſt and is quiet] The Inhabitants of the world,who could have no reſt,or eaſe,ver.16.while Babylon ſo reigned,and ruled,as ver.6.are now at reſt,and may ſit quietly in the places of their abode,Zach.1.11.the earth-for it Inhabitants: as Pſ. 98. 4,9.

is at reſt, and is quiet] Heb.reſteth, is quiet. A quick form of ſpeech, having ſome Emphaſis in it.See the like,ch.14.4.& 52.9. Lam. 2. 19.

they break forth into ſinging] So the ſame is rendred, chap. 44.23. & 49.13.& 54.1.& 55.12. and with ſome addition, chap.52.9. break out into joy. For the Prophet ſeems much delighted with this word; in this form and ſenſe,no where found in Scripture, out of his writings; ſave once, Pſal.98.4. where it is rendred, make a loud noyſe; which may ſeem to be the genuine notion of the word. It is once, only, but in another form, uſed,for to break aſunder, Mic. 3. 3. and may ſeem to imply, a widening of the mouth, or a wide opening of the lips, and lungs; the natural inſtruments of voice, to make the louder noyſe. The Jewiſh Doctor ſaith, that in the Arabick tongue it ſignifies to ſpeak plainly,and clearly: ch.32.4. And it may be deemed to imply ſuch a joy (for of no other note is it uſed) as cannot be contained, or kept in, but muſt needs break forth; and by ſinging, and ſhouting,in acclamation and out-cryes, expreſs it ſelf;ſee 1 King. 1.40,45.

ſinging] So is the word rendered, in the places of this Prophet, before quoted; but it is rendred elſewhere, ſometime, joy, and rejoycing. Pſalm 30.5. & 98.4. ſometime triumph. Pſal.47.2. ſometime ſhouting, and ſhouting for joy, Pſalm.35.17.chap.12.6, Prov. 11. 10. it ſignifies a loud cry, in general; as Prov. 1, 20. and, that indifferently; whether an expreſſion of grief,. or of joy: of grief, and ſorrow, in way of exclamation, and ſupplication; as Jer.7. 16. Lam.2.19.of joy,and gladneſs,in way of acclamation and exultation; ſo moſt commonly, and ſo in this place. It may well be rendred, they cry aloud with a joyful ſhout. For there is a defect of the inſtrumental particle, here, as ch.55.12. and oft, elſewhere expreſſed, Pſ.42.4. ch.48.20. The meaning is,that there ſhould be very great joy every where,upon the fall of that great Empire,ch.49.13.& 55.12. Jer.51.48.

V.8. Yea, the firre-trees rejoyce at thee, and the Cedars of Lebanon] He turneth his ſpeech, here, to Babylon; telling her, that the very trees themſelves, the firres, and Cedars, ſhould rejoyce at her fall. By firres,and Cedars, (ſay ſome of the Iewiſh Writers, and others, following the Chaldee Paraphraſt) the Prophet underſtands great Princes, and Potentates, States, and Dominions, compared to, and reſembled by, ſuch, ch. 2.13.& 10.33,34. Ezek. 31.3--9, 16. Hab.2.17. Others ſuppoſe the meaning to be, that the cruelty of the Babylonians had been ſuch, that the very ſenſeleſs creatures themſelves,might ſeem to be ſenſible of it,and to rejoyce, therefore, at her ruine, Ezek. 31.16. Jer.51.48. But the ſenſe is ſimply,and plainly, this, that theſe trees, which had from time to time, ſo frequently, and ſo in great abundance, been felled, to furniſh her with timber, for her ſhipping, and her buildings, might well be glad, had ſuch creatures ſenſe of what befell them, as hoping to be much ſpared,over what they had been, by her fall. See Sennacheribs threats, chapter 37. 24. This ſenſe, the words enſuing confirm.

and the Cedars] A defect of the copulative, as ver.7.ch.37.24.Hab. 3.11.

ſaying] By a figurative form of ſpeech, ſenſe, and ſpeech is given to dumb and ſenſeleſs creatures, So Judg. 9. 8--15. Hab. 2. 11, 12. But the term implying it, is wanting, here, as Pſal. 105. 14,15.

Since thou art laid down, no feller is come up againſt us] We are not felled ſo frequently, as we had wont to be,ſince thy fall, ſince thou waſt felled, Dan.4.14,23.Ezek.31.12.

art laid down] Heb. haſt lyen down, the word ſignifies, properly, to lye down to ſleep, Job 7. 4. but ſometime to lye down, by death, 2 Sam. 7.12. Job 3.13.& 14.12. becauſe death is as a ſleep, Pſal. 13.3. Act.7.60.& 13.36.1 Cor.11.30.& 15.6.and the fall of a State is as its death, ver.15. Ezek.31.15,16. Howbeit, ſome of the Iewiſh Writers take this clauſe, alſo, in a figurative ſenſe, expounding it, of the death of Nebuchadnezzar,termed here, ſay they, the hewer, or, cutter, (which exactly anſwers the Hebrew) becauſe he cut down kingdomes, and either ſlew or enſlaved their Kings whereas his ſucceſſours, made them tributaries only. But this, as hath been ſaid, ſuits not ſo well with the intendment of the text; for the Chaldean eſtate fell not with him.

V.9. Hell from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming] After the joyfull, and gladſome deportment of the whole world here, upon the fall of Babylon, and of the creatures therein, as well ſenſeleſs, as indued with ſenſe and reaſon, rhetorically related;the Prophet proceeds,here, in a lofty, and poetical ſtrain, to deſcribe the entertainment, given in the other world, to the king of Babylon,or to the ſtate thereof;perſonated in the king,by thoſe, who were gone before him.

Hell] Or, The grave, the common receptacle of all that depart hence.See on ch.5.14.So ver.11,15.

is moved] The word ſignifies, ſometime, to tremble, and quake for fear, ver, 3. 15. Pſal.4.4. Joel 2. 1, 10. And ſo ſome of the Rabbines would have it taken here, as if the fear, and terrour of his tyranny, had poſſeſſed even the dead; and put them into a fear,at his coming among them: but this fits not with what follows, verſ: 10, 11. Sometime, to rage, in tumultuous manner, chap. 37. 28. Prov. 29. 9. but that ſuites not here. Sometime, to raiſe up ones ſelf, for ſome employment, chap. 28. 21. ſo rather here. The grave doth rouſe up it ſelf, as upon apprehenſion of the approach of ſo great a State,to give him entertainment,ſuitable,in ſome ſort,to his greatneſs.

to meet thee]As men are wont to go forth,to meet perſons of note and ſtate,Gen.46.29.1 Sam.13.10.& 18.6.a defect of the pronoun, as ch.13.8,15.

it ſtirreth up the dead for thee] So the word is uſed, Pſal. 88. 10. Prov.2.17. & 9. 18. chap. 26. 14. ſo called, of a word, that ſignifies, to be enfeebled, to faint, to remit, to give over, to ceaſe. Becauſe men in dying grow faint, and feeble, being dead, ceaſe to act, and to live, Job 14. 10.and ſo moſt of the Jewiſh Commenters here take it; Yet the Chaldee renders it, mighty ones, from Ezek. 32. 21. or, giants: thoſe (ſay ſome of ours) that lived before the flood: though that name be not given them, Gen. 6.4. the ſons of Anak (ſay ſome of the Rabbines) ſo termed, Deut. 2. 11, 20. who ſeem to have been ſo called,from a people of that name,Gen.14.5.& 15. 20. (who may be deemed to have poſſeſſed that valley near Jeruſalem, Joſh.15.8.& 18.16.)either becauſe of the poſterity of them, or like to them, for ſtature. But the text here,ſeems to intend,neither thoſe, nor theſe; but ſuch puiſſant Princes, as had known, and felt the power of the Chaldean State, being overthrown by it, or living in ſubjection to it,ver.10.

even all the chief ones of the earth] Or, Leaders, Princes, Rulers Chieftains, great ones, that go in and out before the people, Numb. 27. 16, 17. 1 Sam. 18. 13. though theſe places ſeem to allude to the manner of ſhepherds in thoſe parts, going in and out before their flocks. Joh. 10.3,4,10. Heb. great goats, ſuch, as lead, and go before the reſt of the flock, ch. 1. 11. & 34. 6. Jer. 50. 8. & 51.40.

it hath raiſed up] To meet thee, as before.Heb.made to ſtand up: as if they had been ſitting in ſtate before;ſo Judg.3.20.1 King.2.19. Jon.3.6.

from their thrones] He ſpeaks of them, ſaith the Jewiſh Commenter, as if they were living, and ſitting on their thrones, that, here, they had: or, as if they had thrones in the other world, as well as in this. Though ſome of ours, by their thrones, underſtand their ſepulchres, or the ſtately monuments; wherein their corpſes lay interred, verſe 18. But ſome of them, its likely,had no ſuch.

all the Kings of the Nations] That lived under that State; and were ſubſervient to it, Ier. 25. 9. & 27. 6--8. Dan. 2, 37,38.

V. 10. All they ſhall ſpeak, and ſay unto thee] The dead are induced, here, ſpeaking; as the place of the dead, before, beſtirring it ſelf; and with a tart Ironical, and Satyrical ſpeech,entertaining,and welcoming to them this grand Tyranny: not that they ſhould, or could ſo do,but that ſuch things,might truly,and juſtly,be then ſaid. See Ezek.32.21.

ſpeak] Heb. anſwer: as Cant.2.10.Mat.11.25. a form very frequent,both in the old and new Teſtament.

art thou alſo become weak as we] Heb. ſick: as chapter 38. 1. and 39.1. The word imports ſuch weakneſs, as comes by ſickneſs and pain: as we uſe the word, infirmity. Art thou pulled down by ſome mortal diſeaſe,who reputedſt thy ſelf to be immortall? ch. 47.7.

art thou become like unto us]Thou that thought'ſt thy ſelf the only great one;and no other thy compeer,ch.47.8.

V.11. Thy pomp is brought down to the grave] All thy ſtate, and bravery,wherein thou didſt pride thy ſelf,ſee ch.13.11.) is laid in the duſt,Pſ.7.5. not that it accompanied him unto the grave; but that it periſhed with him,when he went down to the grave, Pſ.49. 14,17.& 73.19,20.

and the noyſe of thy viols] The melody of thy muſick, which thou hadſt of all ſorts, Chap.3.5.& 6.18.Amos 5.23. one ſort, put for all. See chapter 5.12. For I ſuppoſe they ſhoot wide, here, who imagine this paſſage, to have reſpect unto ſuch muſick, as was uſed either at funerals, or, beſide,the deceaſed, while they lay in the houſe, laid out; but not carried forth yet to burial, chap. 16. 11. Jer.48.36.Mat.9.23.for the muſick here mentioned, is implyed, to be ceaſed,and ſilenced together with their pomp. See Ezek. 26. 13. Yet it may well be deemed to have an eye to that jollity and solemn festival, attended, and graced, no doubt, with much variety of musick, at which the city was surprized. See Jer.51. 39,41,57. Dan.5.1,30. Some would have it, the noise of thy drums, or, thy bag-pipes, instruments of musick used in war. But we find no such use of the word in Scripture, nor of such military musick in those times. The trumpet, or, cornet, are all of that kind we find mentioned, Numb.10. 9. Josh.6.4. The tabers, and harps mentioned, ch.30.32. seem to be, not of fight, or conflict; but of triumph after victory: the copulative is wanting, as ver.6.

the worm is spread under thee, and worms cover thee] Instead of those costly carpets, that thou satest and trodest on, and those stately rich, and gorgeous coverings, and other bed-furniture, which thou didst formerly make use of, worms, and maggots, will now take up their rooms, and supply their place, Job 7. 5.& 17. 14.& 21.26. & 24. 20. and this the rather with thee; because thou shalt not be embalmed, or put up in cere-cloth, to preserve thy corpse, as Kings, and great ones, ordinarily are, Gen.50.2. 2 Chron. 16. 14. but shall be cast out, and thereby exposed to putrefaction. See ver. 19. 20. There are two several words in the Hebrew; whereof the one, as Some Jewish Authors suppose, signifies, properly, a lesser sort of worm, such, as breeds in flesh, or cheese, and such, as the manna bred, Exod. 16. 20,24. which we commonly term a maggot. The other, either, the greater sort, as the long earth-worm, where they are, as here, distinguished; or any worm, in general, where no such distinction is. The words are both, here, singular; though the verb joyned with the latter, plural; because taken collectively, both; and distributively, also, the latter. Of which Syntax, see chap. 2.20. The text may be rendred, The maggot is, or maggots are spread, or, laid under thee: and the earth-worm, or, each sort of worms cover thee. And let it be considered, whether this whole verse, may not be read, by way of interrogation, as well as those: both before, and after. Is thy pomp thrown down to the grave; and the noyse of thy viols? is the maggot spread under thee, and doth the worm of all sorts, cover thee; for the note of interrogation is in Hebrew, oft wanting: as Job 13.15.& 14.8. Prov.23.5.

spread] The word is applyed, as to bedding, most commonly, Psalm 130. 9. 8. Chap. 28. 20. so to sackcloth, and ashes, that on dayes of humiliation, they were wont to lye in, Esth. 4. 5. ch.58.5.

V. 12. How art thou fallen from heaven O Lucifer] The following passage, many, both of the ancients, and others, understand to have reference to the fall of the Apostate Angels. Wherein, one of the learnedst among the former, doth, not undeservedly, with a little tartness controll them. But it is a continuation of that satyrical, and ironical language, wherewith those deceased ones are feigned to entertain the King of Babylon, at his coming among them, ver.10.

fallen from heaven] From the height of that glorious, and illustrious estate, wherein thou shinedst, so brightly and so conspicuously before, Lam.2.1. Ezek.28.16,17. Matth.11.23. Luk.10.15,18. Rev. 9.1.& 12.4.

O Lucifer] This name some fondly give, by occasion of this Scripture, unto the Prince of Devils; whom the Jews call Beelzebub, Mat. 12. 24. Whence, that, by-word among us, as proud as Lucifer. But the name is no where in Scripture given unto him. It is given unto Christ, by the ministry of the Gospel, shining into mens souls, 2 Pet. 1. 19. Rev 2.28. 2 Cor.4.6. The word signifies the morning-star, one of the seven planets; or wandring-stars, commonly called Venus, in regard of its beauty, and brightness: and the name here given it, comes of a word, that signifies so to shine, Job 25.5.& 31.26. ch.13.10. It is used to represent the conspicuous estate of the Chaldean King, and Empire, that seemed to shine as bright, when it was in its height, as the day-star, it self, in the sky: though there want not, that expound it, of Sennacherib, and his fall, ch.37.38. the rather for what is said, ver.25. whereof in its place.

Son of the morning] So is that bright, and beautiful star termed; because it appears usually in the morning, somewhat before the Sun-rising, thereby giving warning of day approaching, 2 Pet.1.19. as if say some, it were by the morning produced. But the Hebrew phrase is very general, calling every thing, almost, the son of that, which it hath any special relation unto. So, the son of a year, for, one of a year, in his reign, 1 Sam.13.1. the son of stripes: one that deserves whipping, Deut.25.2. the son of death, one that is worthy to dye, 2 Sam.12.5. the son of hell, and of perdition: one to whom hell, and destruction belongs, Matth.23.15. Joh.17.12. the son of this world: one that lives in this world; or, that hath his portion, here, Ps.17. 14. Luk.20.34.& 16.8. and so, to pass by all other: the son of the morning, here, because, wont then to appear: and not so much, as produced by it; but rather, as ushering it, in, or, bringing it along with it.

How art thou] How, is not in the original; but is supplyed, as wanting, from the former branch. Yet may it safely be omitted; and the words without it rendred; thou art cut down: the rather, because the Prophet in this latter clause, passeth from one similitude to another; from a star fallen down, to a tree hewen down.

cut down to the ground] Not cut down close to the ground: as is intimated of that tree, that represented Nebuchadnezzars person, only, Dan. 4. 14,23,24. but, cut down, and cast to the ground, (of which kind of defective speech, see Psal. 7. 5. & 31. 17. & 89. 39, 44. chapter 21. 9. & 22. 18. Jer. 41. 17.) as of the tree that resembled the Assyrian Empire; Ezek. 31.3--14. as this doth the Chaldean, here: importing an utter, and irrevocable ruine of it, as laid along on the ground, never to be reared, or raised up again.

which didst weaken the Nations] Some of the Rabbines expound it, which didst cast lots upon the Nations. Supposing the word here used, to be of the same stock, with one of the same sound, which in their miscellane language they use, for a lot: and this, the rather, they would have it, to signifie; because of the particle, usually, signifying upon, found here, In the text. But neither is the verb, ever used, in Scripture: and the particle is, by other of them observed, to be here redundant, as oft times it is. The word signifies in Scripture sometime, to be weak, or, to weaken, Joel 3. 10. sometime, to discomfit, or overcome, Exod.17.13.& 32. 18. or, to overthrow, or, lay along; as some of the Jewish Writers expound it, Job 14.10. man dies, and is cut down; overthrown; laid along: and so I suppose it would here be rendred, Thou art cut down, and cast to the ground: laid along on it; That didst overthrow the nations: that didst cut down, and lay along others: thou art served now, as thou, sometime, servedst them. See the Assyrians purpose, and practice, chapter 10.7. See also of Babylon, Jer. 50. 23. & 51. 20.

V. 13. For] Heb. And: as chap. 8. 21. & 9. 11. as rendring a reason, why the Babylonian Monarch should so be cut off, and cast down; to wit, for his extream insolency against God himself. Others render it, rather, But; as ch.7.17.& 11.14. or, Yet: as Jer.2. 32, 35. as subjoyned in way of opposition to the fore-going denunciation of his fall, ver.12.

thou hast said in thine heart] Or, thou saidst in thine heart: thou thoughtest within thy self: as Ps.14.1. ch.9.9.

I will ascend into heaven] Not, that he made account to go to heaven, when he died, as the faithfull, 2 Cor.5.1. nor, that he supposed he could, by, climbing, get up into heaven, while he lived. But it is an hyperbolical description of the excessive pride, and insolency of that Babylonian Tyrant, in such an height of impiety, invading, and breaking in furiously upon the Church of God, compared to heaven, and theredy resembled, Rev.4.1,2.& 12.1. and the People of God, the Saints especially, and those of prime note, and place among them, compared to stars, Rev.1.20.& 12. 1,4. and Gods Temple, or Sanctuary, which was as his Throne, or his Chair of State, Ps.99.1. Jer. 17. 12. as if he made account to subdue, and dethrone God himself. See ch.10.10,11.& 37.23,24,29. Dan.8.10,11.& 11.28,30,36. and of that sinfull man, 2 Thess.2.4. And this elegant description, as one of the Jewish Commenters observeth, doth consist of sundry proverbial forms, usual in that language, whereunto, not a few are found, very suitable, both in the Greek, and Latine; used thereby to express a power, or greatness, affected, or advanced, far above all humane height. See Deut. 1. 28. Psalm 36. 5, 6.& 139.8. Joh.3.13. Eph. 4.10.

I will exalt my throne above the stars of God] The stars of Gods making, Gen.1.16. Ps.148.3,5. or, that give light from the heavens, the place of Gods habitation, ch.57.15.& 66.1. or, the stars of greatest excellency: as the hills of God, Ps.36.6. and the trees of God, Ps.104.16. for, the greatest, and highest hills; the fairest, and tallest trees, See Dan.8.10.

I will sit also upon the mount of the Congregation] I will set my throne, on Mount Sion, the place of Gods special residence, his palace, to which his people resorted, there to adore, Ps.20.2. & 68.15, 16,17,24,26,29.& 84.7.& 122.1--4. ch.33.20.& 64.10,11. See Dan. 11.45.

of the Congregation] Or, set, or, solemn meeting. See chap. 1. 14. the word comes from a root, that signifies in its first form active, to set, or, appoint, time, or place. 2 Sam.20.5. Jer.47. 7. in the passive thereof, at such a set time; or, in such a set place to meet, Josh. 11. 5. Neh.6. 2, 10. Hence, the word here used, and thence deduced, is sometime put for a set time of meeting in general, 2 Sam. 20. 5. Dan.11.29. more specially, for the set times of meeting, for performance of holy duties, Levit.23.2, 4. Ezek.46.9, 11. sometime, for a place of meeting, or resort in general, Josh.20. 9. and so the grave is called the appointed meeting-house, for all living wights, Job 30. 23. more specially, for religious exercises; so the Taberacle, is termed the Tent, or Tabernacle of convention; or set meeting: because God appointed his people, at certain times there to meet, for such purposes; and had promised to meet them there, Exod.25.8,21.& 29. 42. 43. & 33.7. and the Synagogues are called, Gods meeting places, Ps.74.8. and mount Sion, is called, here, the mount of Convention, or meeting: because thereon stood the Temple, which, for that sacred use, succeeded the Tabernacle, 2 Sam.7.6,13. 1 King. 8. 4, 6,21.

in the sides of the North] Mount Moriah, whereon the Temple was built, 2 Chron.3.1. stood on the northerly side of mount Sion; but reckoned as a part of it, Psal.48. 2. The Rabby doated, that would have the City of Babylon, here meant, by the mount of the Congregation, in the sides of the North; so termed, in regard of her strength; and stately buildings, Jer. 51. 25. the resort of all people to her, Jer.51.44.& her Northerly situation to the land of Judah, Jer.1.15.& 4.6. For what needed their King to vaunt, that he would set his throne there, where he had it erected already? Dan.4.29, 30.

V.14. I will ascend above the height of the clouds] Heb, cloud, or, thick cloud, (as the word, properly, signifies and is so rendred, Job 22. 14. Psal.18.11,12.) but taken, here, collectively, for clouds in generall: and, heights of clouds, for, the highest clouds: as the heights of the hils, for, the highest hils Psal.95.4, Some think an allusion, in the word, cloud, to the cloud, wherein God manifested himself on Mount Sinai, Exod.19.9. Deut.4.11,22. in the Tabernacle, Exod. 40.34,35. and the Temple, 1 King.8.10,11,12. but to the first of them especially, as if he would set his throne higher, then God, at that time, seemed to have done, above the place wherein God then appeared.

I will be like the Most high] Gods peculiar attribute, Psal.83.18. Eccl. 5. 8. It was our first Parents ambitious affectation, and vain hope, to become like God, that stripped them of the true likeness of God which they were possessed of, at first, Gen.3.5,6,22. and it was this proud tyrants affecting of an equality with God, to sit on even-ground with him, yea, to raise his throne higher then his, that proved the means of his fatal, and irrecoverable ruine. So Ezek.28.2,3. 6-10.

V.15. Yet] As Psal.73.1. notwithstanding these thine haughty conceits of thy power, and presumption of thy future greatness. See ch. 10.6.

thou shalt be brought down] Heb, made to descend (as ver.11.) to hel or, the grave, instead of thy presumptuous conceit of descending up into heaven, v.13.

to hell] As Matth 11. 23. or, to the grave: as ver.9. Psal. 16. 10. & 55. 15. the words following confirm it. See Ezek. 32. 27.

to the sides of the pit] Heb. thighs of the pit, for, sides, as Exod.26.23. Joh. 1. 6. instead of those stately sides of the North, whereon thou braggedst that thou wouldst set thy throne, ver. 13. thou shalt be thrown down, to the sides of some base and loathsome pit, See Ezek, 32.23,24. the pit, for the grave, Psal.30. 3,9.& 88.4. but here, in a larger extent, for any pit, though not made, or intended, for such use, that some vile, and loathsome corpse, might be carelesly cast into, 2 Sam.18.17. the thighes of the pit, the sides, or cheeks of it, on which as on the mouth of it, a stone is wont to be laid, that is born up by them, as the body of man is by the thighes. See Lam. 3.53. Yet because the word, that properly signifies a thigh, in Hebrew, is, sometime, put for the foot of a thing, as Exod.37.17. Levit,1.11. Hence, Some would have it to signifie, not the sides, but the bottome of a pit: some pit of the deepest. See Psal. 88. 6. But this seems to strain more then needs.

V.16. They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee] Or, seeing thee: or, when they see thee: (for it seems to have speciall reference to those before spoken of, ver.10.) shall looke wistly upon thee. The word is used only here: and Psal. 33.14. Cant.2.9. As for what some of the Rabbines say, in way of exposition of it; they shall weigh well how it is with thee, and get understanding by thee, as Jer.23.20. is for the living, not for the dead: and indeed, so some understand it; as spoken by men surving the Babylonian King, and beholding his carcase cast out: see the like, Psal. 53. 7. But it seems more probable, that the Prophet, as in his former parable, spake of the dead.

and consider thee, saying] A defect of the copulative, as ver. 7. and of the participle, as ver.8, Yet this latter may sufficiently be supplyed, if it be rendred, and think, as it is rendred, Job.31.1. and may well, ch.43.18. or, think with themselves (because tho words is in a reciprocal form) of thee, or, concerning thee. For so the particle is oft used, Gen.20.2. Psal.2.7. ch.33.33.

Is this the man that made the earth to tremble] They speak of the State, as of a man; because the king thereof a man, one in nature, the same with any one mean man, Psal. 82. 7. Chapter. 2. 22.

that made the earth to tremble] the earth; for the Inhabitants of it: as v.7. But the figure makes it emphatical, as if out of his pride, and by his power, he had made a general earthquake, throughout the whole world. See Psal.60.2. ch.2.19. and for the word, here, used. See ver. 9. see also Ezek.32.23,24,&c.

that did shake Kingdoms] Or, that made its Kingdoms shake. A defect of the pronoun: as Chap.13.22. but to be supplyed, as it is, ver. 17. that did so shake them, as to unsettle them, and remove them out of their places. See Chap.13.13. Hab.2.21,22. Heb.12.26,27. there is an elegancy, in the sound of the words, in the Hebrew, which, in our English, cannot so wel be expressed; yet may we come somewhat neer to it, if we render the words, that made the earth to quake, and made the Kingdomes thereof to shake.

V. 17. That made the world as a wilderness] That laid all before him waste; as those locusts, Joel. 2. 3. See Zeph. 2. 13.

and destroyed the cities thereof] Either by consuming their Inhabitants or by razing, and burning the cities themselves, 2 King.25. 9.10,11. 2 Chr.36.19,20. Psal.137.7.

the world] Properly, the habitable world, as the Greeks use to style it: or, the fertile world, that that yeelds ought useful, for food of man, or beast: For from a word that so signifies, it seems to be deduced, Levit.26.4. Judg.6.4. which here wants not its emphasis, being opposed, to the wild or waste.

that opened not the house of his prisoners] Of which reading, see on Chap.42.7. Or, that did not loose his prisoners. (as the word is used, Chap.51.14. Jer.40.4.) homeward. That is, and send them home, or let them go home. A defective form, such, as ver. 12 that kept his captives in perpetual restraint, and would not suffer them to return to their own country, and the places of their former abode, Jer.50.33. was not content, in the height of his pride and ambition, to overthrow, and subdue them; but in cruel, merciless, and inhumane manner, after he had subdued them, kept them in perpetual imprisonment, and restraint, Lam.3.34.

V.18. All the kings of the Nations] Other Kings and Princes, ordinarily, or the most part of them, as ver, 9. So is All oft taken, for all in a manner, or the greater number, or most, or many, Exod.9.6,20. Jer.26.7,8,& 44.12,27,28. Mat.3.5. Joh.2.10.& 11.48. Rom. 5.18, 19. Phil.2.21.

even all of them lye in glory] Are laied up in stately tombs and monuments; where they lye, as in their beds. See ver.8. Chap.57.2. It is that, that usually great kings obtain; either by the provision of their Peers, or the care of their Successors, thereby to ingratiate themselves with the people.

every one] Heb. a man, as Cant.3.8. ch.13.14.

in his house] Or, in his place: (as some render the word, 1 Sam. 27. 3. 2 Sam.15.17. Job.8.17. Prov.8.2.) To wit, of sepulture, or burial: In his sepulchre, in his grave. So some of the Jewish Doctors here expound it, following the Chaldee; and alledging that of Solomon, Man goes to his everlasting house, or, his long home, Eccl.12, 5. But it seems rather to have an eye, to the ancient manner of preparing their sepulchers, and burying them in their own lands, grounds, or possessions, where their ancestors had been laid before them, and which, with Kings and Potentates, was usually in some part of, or place neer unto their palaces. See Judg.2.9. 1 Sam.25.1. 1 King. 2. 10,34. 2 King.12.21.

V.19. But thou art cast out of thy grave] Thou shalt miss of that honour that other kings usually have, to wit, a solemn funeral, an honourable enterrement. For thy corpse shall lye above-ground, unburied. So Josh. 7. 26. & 8. 29. 2 Sam. 18. 17. Jer. 22.18, 19.

cast out of thy grave] Heb. cast out from the grave: That is, cast out, and kept from thy grave; as Psal.79.2,3. For the meaning is not, that he should be raked, or dragged out of his grave again, after he was buried; as some, of whom anon, fondly fain. But that he should be cast out, and kept from ever coming to be laid up in that tomb, or sepulchre, which he had, in his life time, prepared for himself, 2 Sam. 18.17,18. Chap.22.16-18. Matth.27.60. Of the manner of speech, see ver.17. This some understand of Sennacherib, who should lye at Ninivch unburied, while his two sons that slew him, held that city. But of this there is neither story, nor probability; they two that slew him, being said to have fled upon it, and a third of his own issue immediately (for ought that appears) to have reigned in his room, ch. 37.38. On the other side, the Jewish Doctors will have it spoken of Nebuchadnezzar. And some they say, have a conceit of him, that whereas he thought, that the palace which he built at Babel, should be, as his sepulchre; that is, he should live a long time in it, as a man doth in his grave; (Psal. 49.11. Eccl.12. 5. Luk. 12.19, 20.) there came an euil spirit, or a malignant blast from God that blew him, or cast him out of his house, and caused him to abide abroade, for some time, among the beasts, Dan.4.31,33. So that he could not rest in his house, as other kings do in theirs, ver,18. Others, and the most of them, tell us, that when Nebuchadnezzar in the time of his distraction, was driven out from his palace, Dan. 4.33. The Peers of the kingdom set up his son Evil-merodach, Jer.52.31. And that Nebuchadnezzar after his wits restored again to him, returning to his palace, Dan.4.34. and finding his son sitting on his throne, committed him to prison, and did not set him at liberty again, so long as he lived. Whereunto they apply what is said, ver. 19. But that, after his decease, when the Nobles brought him forth of prison, and would have him take the Crown again, he refused it, for fear, lest, his father, being not dead, as the Nobles made him believe, should return again, as before he had done, and should then kill him. Whereupon, to give him satisfaction, they should take up his fathers corpse again, and either let it lye, and rot above ground; or else caused it to be devoured by beasts; as did those, Psal.79. 2,3.& 83 10. But these are meer fictions. More likely it is that Baltasar. corps should be cast out, and lye above ground, being slain in the night-time, upon the surprizal of the city, Dan. 5.30. when all was in a combustion, and no man had lust, or leasure to look after him or to take order for his enterrement.

like an abominable branch] Or, as (that it may run alike with the, rest) an abhorred (as 1 Chro.21.6. Job.15.16. (sprig, or, twig, Ch,11. 1. Such a spray, as being not regarded by those that cut it off, or pared it away, in pruning their trees, as matter of no worth, or use; not so much as picked up by women, wherewith to kindle, or keep in, their fire, chap.27.11, is let lye, and lyeth so long upon the ground, that being now corrupted and rotted, is not only not worth the taking up, but too vile and loathsome to be taken up, nor good for ought, save to make soyl of. This some expound of Nebuchadnezzar, supposing an allusion, in the word here used, to the latter part of his his name. Some other underſtanding it of one Darius that ſhould ſucceed Baltaſar, Dan.5.31.& be ſlain by Cyrus, not at Babylon, but far from thence, at Borſippe (concerning which, ſee on Jer. 51. 30, 31.) conceive him, therefore; here ſo termed: as a baſtardly-ſlip, Wiſd.4,3. becauſe not of the blood-royal; but of the Median race, and of mean deſcent, Dan.9.1.& 11.1. But whether any ſuch Darius ever were, or any king of Babylon of that name, after Baltaſar, ſave that Darius who is deemed to have come in together with Cyrus, is very uncertain: and I ſhal leave it to be diſcuſſed by thoſe, whoſe task it ſhall be to deal with Daniels Oracles.

and as the rayment of thoſe that are ſlain] Which are wont to be ſo ſtayned, and polluted with gore blood, that ſcarce any can endure to touch them. See ch.9. 5. The copulative not found in the Hebrew, might here well have been ſpared, there following a third branch of the ſimilitude, and either reſerved for the laſt, or wholly omitted, as is uſual, where the members are more then twins; as Chapter. 1.8.

thruſt through with a ſword] This is added, becauſe men may be ſlain other wiſe (ſuppoſe ſtifled, or dry-beaten to death) without much effuſion of blood. Heb. Thruſt through of a ſword. The word, here uſed, is no where in Scripture read, ſave here, and Gen. 45. 17. where it ſignifies to lade; Lade your beaſts. But the Rabbines inform us that in the tongue of Kedar, that is, the Arabian language, it ſignifies to prick, ſtab, or thruſt through, whence alſo ſome would have it rendred in that place of Moſes; prick on your beaſts, to make the more ſpeed.

that go down to the ſtones of the pit] That are, together with their rayment ſo polluted, caſt, unſtript, into any pit, (ſee ver.15.) or quarry, that comes next hand, 2 Sam.18,17. Howbeit, ſome ſuppoſe an alluſion to the ſtone, or rocks, out of which their ſepulchres were uſually hewen. chap.22,16, Matth. 27. 60. Others, to thoſe heaps of ſtones that were caſt upon the bodies of ignominious perſons, either by judiciary Courſe, or otherwiſe put to death. Joſh. 7. 26. and 8, 29. 2 Sam. 18. 17. See Lam. 3. 53. Ezek.32.29. 30.

as a carcaſe troden under feet] Like ſome vile carrion, or a carcaſe trodden to pieces, and not neglected only, but with miſuſage, ſo bruiſed battered, broken to pieces, and diſmembred, that ſcarce any wel can, much leſs endure to put hand unto it. for the compoſing, and committing of it to the ground, 2 King. 9. 33, 35. 37. Jer. 22. 9.

V.20. Thou ſhalt not be joyned to them in buriall] Heb. united with them; as Gen.49.6. Thou ſhalt not lye in grave among them, nor be buried in ſuch ſolemn and honourable manner as they were, and kings were wont to be, with enbalming, and burning odors for them, and attending their corpſe with great ſtate to the ground, ver. 18. See Gen. 50. 2,3, 7--10. 2 Chro, 16. 14. & 21. 19, 20.

becauſe thou haſt deſtroyed thy land, and ſlain thy people] A defect of the copulative, as ver. 16. Thou waſt not content to deſtroy other Nations, but didſt exerciſe much cruelty upon thine own people, in grievous exactions, and extream penalties, impoſed and inflicted, even to loſs of life, many times, either upon ſlight occaſions, or for thine own pleaſure alone; by means whereof thy cities were ſometime waſted, and ſometime ruined at thy command. This the Rabbines apply to Nebuchadnezzar, alledging the bloody ſentence given by him againſt his wiſe men, when they could not tell him his dream, Dan.2.12. But that this cannot be meant of Nebuchadnezzar in perſon, appears by the words fo llowing, both in this verſe and the next.

the ſeed of evil doers ſhall never be renowned] Heb. ſhall not be called for ever. That is, it ſhall not laſt alwaies, not continue for any long time; but be cut off ere long. To be called, for, to be, to continue. See ch.4.3. Or, to be called, for, to be named, as the ſon of ſuch an one: as God to Abraham, Gen.21.12. In Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called. He ſhall in a more ſpecial manner, as Heir to thine houſe, bear, and propagate thy name. And Jacob, Let my name be called upon by them, Gen.48.16. that is, Let them be called, and accounted as mine. Or, to be called, for, to be of name, and renown; as Numb.1.16. Ezek.23.23. But I ſuppoſe the firſt here intended, for what follows, ver.21. concerning the cutting off of his iſſue. Not for ever, for, not at all; never, as our Engliſh well renders it. So Joh. 8.15,52.& 11.26. A general ſentence, of which ſee Job 18.51,19. Pſal. 21,10.& 37.28.& 109.13. applyed here to Baltaſar, the laſt Chaldean king, whoſe iſſue periſhed together with him; and to the former his predeceſſors, whoſe line failed with him and his. See Jer.27.7.

V.21. Prepare ſlaughter for his children] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to the Medes and Perſians, as from God calling upon them, to prepare, and make themſelves ready for the doing of execution upon the king of Babylon; Baltaſar, and his whole houſe, Children, and Nephews alſo, if he had any; as 1 King.14. 10.& 15.29.& 16.3, 11,12. 2 King 9.8,9, 10. & 10. 6,7,11. And we need not underſtand by his ſons, either the people of Babylon, or his Princes; (though they in likelihood, many, or moſt of them were ſlain together with him, at the ſurpriſal of the city, Chap.13.15--18. Jer.50. 27,35--37.& 51. 39,40.) but this natural iſſue that was cut off with him, ver.22. That which with Nebuchadnezzar did not fall out at his death; for his ſon, and ſons ſon, Evil-merodach and Balataſar, both ſurvived, and ſucceeded him in the Empire, Jer.& 7.27.52. 31. Dan.5.18.22.

for the iniquitie of their fathers] Wherein they imimtate them, or partake with them, Jer.6.11.& 7.18--20. Dan.5.20, 22,23. In regard whereof ſome expound here, the iniquity of their Anceſtors, not done by them, but ſuch as they did, as the ſins of Manaſſeh, for ſuch like ſins, as Manaſſeh committed, 2 King. 24.5. But neither is it neceſſary that that place, ſhould be ſo interpreted, when it may be taken ſimply as it ſounds. Nor can it well be ſo here underſtood, ſince that it includes the whole race of thoſe kings, as well yong as old. (See ver.22.) Whereof, though ſome peradventure were not of years yet to do much miſchief, or had not been yet much in action, yet muſt they ſuffer alſo for their parents, and Anceſtors iniquity, Exod.20.5.& 34.7. Numb.16.27,30, 32,33. Joſh.7.15,23,25. 1 King 15.29,30. Matth.23.25. Which courſe, though man, without Gods ſpecial command, may not take; the rather, God having inhibited him ſo to do, Deut.24. 16. 2 King.14.5,6. Yet may God juſtly do it, and cauſe it to be done, becauſe all perſons, as well children as parents, owe a death unto him; for what either hath been done by them, or is in them, 1 King.8.46. Pſal.51.5.& 130.2.& 143. 2. Pro.21.9. Eccl.7.20. Rom,3.20,23. & 5.12. Which he may therefore without any impeachment of juſtice, take, how, and when, by what means, in what manner; and upon what occaſion he pleaſeth, and doth, oftentimes, inflict upon children, who for their own perſonal corruptions, and acceſſes, ſtand guilty before him, having an eye therein, not to theirs ſo much; as to their parents, ſin, in inflicting of penal things at that time upon them, that he may puniſh their parents in them. See 1 King.14. 9--14.

that they may not riſe nor poſſeſs the land] Heb. they ſhall not riſe and inherit the earth: that is, that they may not riſe, to inherit the earth; as Joſh. 24.9. That they may not ſtand up in their fathers room, to repoſſeſs that land, and raiſe up again that State which their fore-father ſometime held, but Gods pleaſure was now, that it ſhould be irrecoverably ruined, Chap.13.20. ver.23. Howbeit, in the text, I ſhould prefer earth, before land; becauſe world followeth, and that Empire extended it ſelf to lands, and regions, not a few, Jer.27.5,6. The final, or finitive particle is wanting in the Hebrew; as Chap.5.11.& 10. 2. Of which ſee on Ch.7.25. The future is put for the potential; as ch.45. 3. Mal.2.7.

nor fill the face of the world with cities] Heb. and fill. But either the negative muſt be ſupplyed from the former branch; as Pſal. 9.18. Or it muſt be rendred according to the fore mentioned Syntax, to poſſeſs and to fill the face, or ſurface of the world, (the upper part of it which people dwel on; as Gen.6.7.& 7.18,23) with cities. That they may not riſe again, and return to re-eſtabliſh their ſtate, and repleniſh the world again, by diſperſing themſelves into ſeveral regions, and enlarging their dominions with great cities built by them, as Nimrod at firſt did, Gen.10.9--12. And thus moſt take the words. Howbeit the Jewiſh Doctors, following the Chaldee, read it, And fill the world with enemies, or, malignants. And ſo indeed is the word here uſed, taken, 1 Sam.28.16. Pſal.139.20. Dan.4. 19. and as ſome alſo, Pſal.9.6. Mic .5.11,14. But the former ſeems to ſuit better here with the frame of the context; and to ſort better with the words before-going. There is another expoſition of this verſe, found in the writings of ſome of the Rabbines, who ſuppoſing this paſſage to have reference to what was before ſaid of the Babylonian kings, makeing the world a wilderneſs, and deſtroying the cities thereof, ver.17. thus render the words; They ſhall not riſe again; or, Let them not ſtand up again; as continuing the charge given to the enemy) that they may, or men may poſſeſs the earth, or land, (whence they were before, by them expelled) and may fill the face of the world (which they made to be like a wilderneſs) with cities: Re-edifying thoſe which they had formerly ruined. Of the uſe of the copulative before: Of the verb indefinite, that they may poſſeſs the earth, (or, as the word is, inherit it, as Pſal.37.11. Matth.5.5.) and fill the world; (Gen.1, 28.& 9.1,) that is, that the earth may be poſſeſſed, and the world filled; ſee on ch.2.19. The expoſition ſeems neither forced, nor improbable. But I leave it to the conſideration, and judgment of the learned. See on ch. 26. 14.

V.22. For I will riſe up againſt them ſaith the Lord of Hoſts] Heb. And; as chap.53.2. The reaſon, why that which is threatned muſt be executed, and ſhall be effected: becauſe God, who hath all creatures at command, (ſee chap.1.9.) will have it done; will have; not him alone, to be cut off; but his whole iſſue alſo with him. Yea, he it is that comes againſt them, and will, by theſe his ſelected, and appointed ones, do it. See ch. 13.3.

riſe up] Anſwering to what he had before ſaid, in the charge given to the enemy, v.21. I will riſe up againſt his children to ſlay them; that they may not riſe up to repoſſeſs their land, or, repair the ruines of their State; or, re-edifie their cities; as ch. 9. 9,10. Mal. 1. 4.

and I will cut off from Babylon] That is, from the king thereof, v. 21.

the name, and remnant] That is, as ſome, all memory, and remainder, or monument of them; as Exod.17.14. 1 Sam.15.5. Pſal.9.5. 6 .& 83.4. But by name, we may underſtand male-iſſue, 1 King. 14.10. & 21.21. ſo called in Hebrew, becauſe the memory of the ſtock is preſerved in ſuch. As on the other ſide the females, as moſt think, (but of that, ſee ch.3.12.) becauſe it is loſt, and periſheth in them, Numb 27.

27.4. Deut.25.6. 2 Sam.14.7.& 18.18. By remnant, other iſſue, or iſſue in general. Becauſe females, in ſuch caſe, are ſometime neglected, and ſpared, as weak, and unable to make head. See Jer.39.6.& 41. 10. Or as others, kindred: for ſo is the word uſed, Levit.18.6,12,13. See 1 King.16.11.

and ſon and Nephew] Or, even, (as Ezr.1.8.& 8.26.) or both (as Jer.6. 21.) ſon, (as Gen.21.23. and nephew: or, ſons ſon; for ſo the Chaldee, and Jewiſh writers, not as we uſe the word; the whole race of him, Job.18.19.

ſaith the Lord] For more certainty repeated.

V,23. I will alſo make it] To wit, the city of Babylon, or the ſeat of it, the place where it is now ſituate. See chap. 13.19,20. There is in the Hebrew an elegant conſonancy, between the firſt word of the verſe, next before-going, and this, which our Engliſh cannot expreſs.

a poſſeſſion] Or, as ſome, an hereditary poſſeſſion, Num.27.11. Jer.49. 1,2. Or, as here rather, a poſſeſſion acquired by, or upon the expulſion, of the former inhabitants, and poſſeſſors. For the word ſignifies alſo to expel, or diſpoſſeſs, and by diſpoſſeſſion to poſſeſs. Numb.21.32,35. 2 Chro.20.7. Pſalm 44.2. It may well imply either here; both a poſſeſſing of it, by theſe wild creatures, in the room of the inhabitants, either ſlain in it, or driven out of it, and their ſo poſſeſſing it, not for ſome tearm of time; but as an inheritance, or perpetuity to them, and theirs, for ever. See ch.34.11.

for the Bittern] Or, Bittor. A kind of water fowl, that thruſting her bill into the mire, or ſome broken cane, is wont to make therewith a moſt hideous noyſe. And this ſeems not unlikely, as well for what here next followeth, as alſo for that it is elſe-where joyned with another taken commonly for the Cormorant, chap.34.11. Zeph. 2.14. Yet ſome later Interpreters ſuppoſe it, rather, to be an Oſprey, a kinde of Eagle that preyeth upon fiſh, or a Bald buzzard, which (as they affirm) haunt lakes, and pooles, and preyeth upon ducks. And ſome an Owl, that uſeth to abide, and breed in old decayed, and deſerted buildings; peradventure becauſe of ſome fowl of that kind, mention is made, together with this, chap.34.11. And ſuch are ſaid to dwell in Babylons ruins, chap.13.21. Jer.50.39. But this is not ſo likely; though one of the Rabbines, contrary to his own expoſition here, doth, in that other place of this Prophet, ſo expound it. But the moſt of the Jewiſh Doctors make it not a bird, but a beaſt. And they take it generally to be a Porcupine, or an Hedghog: with whom alſo the Chaldee, Greek, and Latine concur; ſave that one of them calleth it, a Torteiſe. For the former they ground their opinion upon this, becauſe, in Arabick, the word ſo ſignifies, including as well the Porcupine, as the Hedg-hog, But theſe are neither of them ſuch, as keep in, or about watry places; the one rouſting in hedges, in hilly places the other. The Torteiſe rather may be meant, becauſe one kind of them keeps moſt, or much, at leaſt in the water. Or, as ſome other, the Beaver, that builds (I may well tearm it a building) on the edge, or brink of lakes and rivers, and feeds on the fiſh in them. Of whom they underſtand it, the rather, becauſe the word it comes of, ſignifies to cut down, or cut aſunder, chap.38.12. Ezek.7 25. That which the Beaver (therein going beyond our Otter) is wont to do with the trunks, or bodies, even of vaſte trees, and to ſhear mens bones aſſunder. See Pliny in his naturall hiſtory, lib.8. cap. 30.

and pools of water] That which confirms the creature before mentioned, to be ſuch, as haunts places ſo conditioned. The reaſon why it ſhould not be for ſheep to lodg in, chap.13.20. The ſite of Babylon, of it ſelf mooriſh, by reaſon of that great river, Deut.1.7.& 11.24. to wit, Euphrates on whoſe banks it ſtood: (ſee on Jer.50.38.& 51.32.) became after the ſurprizal by Cyrus, and in the times ſucceding, much more ſuch; the dams, and ſluces being neglected, that ſhould keep the river within its due compaſs; and the dikes choked that ſhould receive the waters of it, in its accuſtomed inundations.

and I will ſweep it with the beſome of deſtruction] The word here uſed is an Arabick word: which one of the Jewiſh Doctors acknowledgeth that he did not underſtand, until he heard an Arabian chamber-maid ask of her miſtreſs a broom. But the phraſe you may find, 1 King.14.10. It alludeth to the ſweeping of an houſe, wherein all the ſoyl, being ſwept together, is then caſt out of doors. See ſomewhat the like, Ezek.26.4.

ſaith the Lord of Hoſts] As ver.22.

V.24. The Lord of hoſts hath ſworn, ſaying] He hath taken a ſolemn oath upon it, which ſhews the doom to be irrevocable, Pſal. 110.4. & 132.11. He hath ſworn it, and thereby manifeſted his will to have it done, his purpoſe to do it: and he is the Lord of hoſts: and therefore wants no power to effect, whatſoever he wil have done. See ch.1.9.v. 27.

as I have thought, ſo ſhall it come to paſſe] Heb. as I have imagined, (Num. 33. 56. See Chap. 10. 7.) ſo it ſhall be, as Chap. 5.7. and as I have purpoſed, ſo ſhall it ſtand] Pſal.33.11. See chap.7.5.7. ver.26.27. the ſame in other words repeated. That which I have determined concerning the irrecoverable deſtruction of Babylon, ſhall never be diſannulled, or revoked.

V. 25. That I will break the Aſſyrian in my land] Heb, To break, as ch.23.9. or, In breaking: as Exod.14.11. Deut.9.18. Some underſtand this of Sennacherib the King of Aſſyria, whoſe forces Gods deſtroyed in his land; that is, the land of Judah, ſo called, becauſe ſet a part by him, for his own peculiar, as an habitation for his peculiar people, and a ſeat for his ſolemn ſervice, Pſalm 114.2. and, 132.14. and 135. 12. verſe.1,2.) as is recorded, Chapter 37,38. 1. added here, not only to confirm what had been before delivered; concerning the deſtruction of that inſolent King, chap, 10. 33.34. but to give the ſtronger aſſurance thereby of what was here foretold, concerning the ruine of the Chaldean Empire. The like whereunto, ſee Ezek.31. 3--18. Howbeit, it followeth not hence what ſome would infer, that the fall of Lucifer, mentioned ver.12. ſhould reſpect, not the Babylonian; but the Aſſyrian King, and State. Yet ſome underſtand this of the Babylonian King, who ſeems to be termed the King of Aſſyria, Neh.9.32. 2 Chr.33.11. and of the Aſſyrians that ſerved under him, as being taken up by him, their Country lying between Chaldea, and Judah, in his expedition againſt Jeruſalem; and to have been denounced after the fall of Sennacherib. Concerning which latter branch, as I will not contend, ſuppoſing the time of this prophecy to have been later then his fall; and to have been occaſioned by that heavy doom paſſed upon the Jewiſh State, and the royal iſſue, that from the Babylonians ſhould befall them, chap.39.6.9, otherwiſe, there was no ground, as yet, to tell this people of the overthrow of Babylon, from whom they had hitherto ſuſtained no dammage, nor, ſave in regard of that prediction, had cauſe to expect any. So for the turning it away; from Sennacherib, and his forces overthrown in that Country, to the ruinating of the Chaldean eſtate. I cannot concur, ſince that the text muſt endure many forced interpretations, ere it will yeeld to any ſuch diverſion. I ſuppoſe therefore, that the fall of Sennacherib is here ſpoken of, as a thing paſt, and performed already: and here produced, as ſome other in the like manner, chap.9. 4.5. & 10.24.26. for a pregnant example of the certainty of Gods predictions, and purpoſes, to take place, and not fail, which themſelves had late proof of, in the ſtrang, and unexpected deſtruction of the Aſſyrian forces among them: and for a parallel of the undoubted execution of the doom, forepaſſed upon Babylon, in its due time to be effected. And to this purpoſe I ſhould thus read the words, As in breaking the Aſſyrian in my land. Of the uſe of this particle with the indefinite verb, examples were efore given, to which more might be added. See chap.3.8.& 10.2. Gen 2.3.& 3. 22.& 24. 30. Deut.13. 18.& 17.2.& 20.19. 1 Sam 12. 17. Neh. 13. 7. And for the defect of the note of ſimilitude it is very uſual in Scripture. See Prov.25.20,25,28.& 26.9.14,17. 21,23.& 28.15. It is then, as if the Prophet had ſaid; Ye need not doubt of the performance of this doom paſt upon Babylon; for the Lord hath taken a ſolemn oath upon it, that what he hath ſpoken, and purpoſed, concerning it, ſhall be effected; as well as that, which was threatned formerly againſt the Aſſyrian, chap.10.12,16--19,33, 34. which having been lately done in your own land, your own eyes have been witneſs of tread him under foot] Heb. and I will trample upon him. But the future, is oft put for the fore paſt: as Pſal.18.36.37,42, 43. Then God ſeemed to trample in contempt upon him, as he had trampled upon Gods people, chap. 10.5,6. when by the ſlaughter of his people, he enforced him, to fly, with ſhame. So Pſal.44.5. & 60.12. Dan.7.7.& 8.7.10. Rom.16.20. an alluſion to that, that hath in diſgrace, and deſpight, been ſometime done, to perſons ſubdued, and taken, either in war, or otherwiſe, Joſh.10.24. 2 King.9.33. upon my mountains] Not mount Sion, as Some, in way of excellency, ſo termed; as wiſdomes, for, wiſedome. Prov.1.20.& 8.1. becauſe neer to it was the ſlaughter of Sennacheribs hoſt; but the hils rather about Jeruſalem, on which it is likely they lodged, while they lay in league about it, Pſal.125.2. or, the mountains of Judah in general, being a mountainous country, Deut.8.9. Pſal. 133.3. Ezek. 6.2. 3.& 39.2,4,17. called his mountains here; and cap.65.9. as the land before his. The mountains where he had placed his people, called his, here, as thoſe by which they were to paſs, in their return thither from Babylon, ch.49.11.

then ſhall his yoke depart from off them] Heb. And his yoke ſhall depart (as chap.6:1. or, that his yoke might depart, (as Chap.10. 19. & 13.2. and ſo ſome Interpreters of the beſt note, here render it) from off them, to wit, the people of God, the Iews, that had before, with tributs impoſed, and hoſtile Invaſions, been grievouſly afflicted by him, See ch.10.5.6.& 36.1.

V.27. For the Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it?] Or, determined, or resolved, as ver. 26. it, and who can disannul it? the future in a potential notion: as Job 14.4. & 37.23. & 41.13, 29. Matth. 12. 25. with Mar. 3.24. The particle u, having reference to Gods particular purpose, and resolution concerning Babylon, and those that adhere to her, ver. 26. is wanting in the text: as chap. 9.9, Rev. 11. See ver. 24. So Psal. 33. 10. & 11. Prov. 14. 21. & 21.30. Chap. 43, 31.

V.28. In the year that King Ahaz died. Here beginneth another Sermon, or Prophecy, distinct as well in time, as in matter, from the former, that being against the Babylonians, this, against the Philistims. In regard whereof also, some have made a feverall, and intire Chapter of it. For the Prophet having begun with the Babylonians, the greatest oppressors of Gods people, Jer. 50. 17. but more remote, Jer. 6.22. & 8.19. he proceedeth now to their evill neighbours, that were nearer at hand, and of them setteth the Philistines in the front. The time of the delivery hereof, is expressly noted, as of that. chap. 6. the one bearing date, the year of Uzziahs, the other, the year of Ahaz. his death. Of which, 2 King. 16.20. This is expressed for a special reason, of which, ver. 20. But hence Some take occasion here to begin a new book, supposing that the Prophecies here recorded, from Chapter the seventh, unto this latter part of the fourteenth, were all of them, and that against Babylon, among the rest, delivered and published in Ahaz his reign: with whom therein, I cannot accord. See ch. 1. 1. & 14. 25.

was this burden] This heavy Prophecy (See chap. 13.1. against Palestine, or the Philistines. Of whom. See the like. Jer. 47. Ezek. 26. 13, 17.

V.29. Rejoyce not thou whole Palestina] Heb. Pelesheth, or. Palesheth, Psal. 60 8. ver. 31. as Sarai, Gen. 11. 21. Luk. 3. 35. and Sabaoth, Rom. 9. 29. Jam. 5. 4. It is the name of a Country, deemed part of Syria, and bordering Westward, on the land of Judah. Chap. 2. 6. & 9. 12. Whence the whole country thereabout, taking in the holy land, as they style it, is called Palestine at this day: but in Scripture doth design only that particular coast, inhabited by the Philistines people of the posterity of Cham, and Cush, by the Egyptian race, Gen. 10. 14. and were constant enemies, and vexers of the Jewish people their Neighbours. See ch. 9. 22.

because the rod of him that smote thee is broken] By the rod that smote the Philistines, is generally deemed to be meant Uzziah, who prevailed much in his warrs with the Philistines, dismantled many of their strong towns, and built others within their borders, to keep theirs under, and raise contribution from them, 2 Chr. 26. 6. 7. Yet not him alone; but other Kings of Judah before him, that had had the better of them, as David. 2 Sam. 5. 20. 21. & 8. 1, 12. Psal. 108. 9. and the State of Judah, that in the times of those Kings, kept them under. Whose yet, might, and means were so finely impeached, and impaired under Ahaz, God for his sins, suffering other people to break in upon him, and to prevail against him, that their power seemed to be utterly and irrevocably broken: (as Chap. 9. 4.) Now this was to the Philistines, the whole body of them, (as upon the surprisal of Sampson, Judg. 16. 23--25. matter of much joy, to see that State so enfeebled, and at so low an ebb. But the Prophet bidden them not be over-joyed; for their joy should not last long. It is not simlike Davids ironical speech to that countrey, or, the people thereof, Palestine triumph thou because of me, Psal. 60. 8. Of which see the note on the place: or, that of Hoshea to Israel, Hos. 9. 1. Rejoyce not, O Israel, in regard of the late successes God hath vouchsafed to give thee by Jeroboam against the Syrians, 2 King. 14, 27, 28. for, thy joy will not last long, it will be shortned for thy sins.

For out of the Serpents root shall come forth a cockatrice] That is, as most, both Iews and Christians, understand it, one of Uzziahs issue, who did threwdly bite thee, 2 Chr. 26. 6, 7. shall arise in his stead; to wit, Ezekiah, whose great Grand-father Uzziah was, 1 Chr. 3. 12. 13. that shall bite, and vex thee far more grievously, then ever he did: and indeed so he did for he over-ran their whole country, so as neither fort, or fenced citie could escape him, 2 King. 18. 8. Yet one I find, that expounds this whole passage of the Kings of Assyria, understanding by the rod broken, Sennacherib, Chap. 10. 5. & 14. 25. by the Serpent, Tiglath-Pil-eser, whose Successors should be more grievous to the Philistines, then he had been; by the cockatrice, Sennacherib: by the fiery flying Serpent, Nebuchadnezzar, who came from the North, ver. 31. but this is nothing probable; nor suits well with the times of those Kings. For neither could the Philistines rejoyce at the death of Ahaz, in regard of Sennacheribs fall, which was not before the fourteenth year of Ezekiah his Successor, 2 King. 18. 13. nor did Sennacherib ever rule, and recover strength again after that overthrow, Chap. 37. 37, 38. But this to salve, another I light on, that maketh the broken rod, and the Serpent Sargon, Of whom, ch. 20. 1. the cockatrice, Sahnaneser, the fiery flying Serpent, Sennacherib. But neither is there story to confirm this; nor is it faid, upon the death of Sargon, of which, no mention is found; but upon the death of Ahaz, and, consequently, the entrance of Ezekiah, at whole coming to the kingdome, it is not unlikely, that God would have this Prophecy delivered, to make him the more gracious in the eyes of his people, as one that should recover that power, and regain that honour (by repressing the malignant attempts of their adversaries, and his good, yea great succels against them) which his Father had embezzled, and lost by his folly. See Chapter. 32. 1.

Serpents] The word is generally for any sort of Serpents: so called, of their subtilty, Gen. 3. 1. So the verb it comes of, is used, Gen. 44. 15.

root] For progenitor: as Chap. 11. 1. Judg. 5. 14. and it is joyned with the two sorts here mentioned, as a common term comprehending both, Num. 21. 6. Ier. 8. 17. but neither was Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzars progenitor, nor Nebuchadnezzar of Sennacheribs illue.

a cockatrice] Or, basilisk: though some, a viper, that eats out her mothers bowels, say they: but that is a meer fable. Some, an asp, that, comming to be seventy years old, turns cockatrice; and becoms then so deafe, that she can no more be charmed, Psal. 58. 4, 5. but that is a Jewish tale. It is supposed to have its name according to some, by a transposition of letters, from a word, that signifies to wound, for it stings grievously, Prov. 23. 32. where it is rendred, and adder: yet it seems to be a kind of snake, that have their venome, not in their tails, as the Scorpion, Rev. 9. 10. but in their teeth; wherewith they are said to bite, Jer. 8. 17 they are such as burrow in the ground, chap. 11. 8. and bring forth, not young, as doth the viper, the rest indeed having its name; but eggs, chap. 59. 5. The root whence it comes, seems to signifie putting out, or, bringing forth, for thereof come two words, one, that signifies excrements, Ezek. 4. 15. another, that denotes issue, chap. 22. 24. where it is joyned alio with a word, issuing from the verb here used, and of the fecundity or ifa thing common to it, with such creeping things, as lay eggs, it may wel have its name. See Exod. 1. 7.

and his fruit shall be] fruit, for issue, either of man, or beast: though properly, and primarily of trees, or plants, Num 13. 20. 23, 27. Chap. 4. 2. So Deut. 28. 4, 18. Psal. 21. 20. & 132. 11. his fruit, not the cockatrices, as some, supposing it meant of a second descent; but of the Serpent before mentioned, that should breed a cockatrice, yea, worse then so, a fiery flying Serpent: and I should rather render it, yea his fruit shall be: as Neh. 6. 10. Psalm 28. 10. Chapter 3. 9.

a fiery flying Serpent] The word, Saraph, here used, signifies such a kind of serpent, as with extream heat, paineth and kilseth. For it comes of a word, that signifies to burn. Whereof the Seraphim also, Chap. 6. 2. have their name, being the very same with this, used, Num. 21. 6. where it is faid of them, they bit the people, some of them, even to death; and it is of the Greeks, for the same cause, called pyrho The word serpent, is not here in the text; though it be joyned with it, Deut. 8. 14. And it is faid to fly: as here, & chap. 30. 6. either because it is winged, as those Seraphs were, chap. 6. 2. and as some dragons, or serpents, are reported to be, of which kind I have sometime seen one, that had a kind of wing like your flying fish; or, because of their swift motion, whereby suddenly jerking up, they shoot themselves forward, or dart themselves out of trees, on men, or beasts, as they pass by. For of a swift motion is the Hebrew word also used, Psal. 18. 10. & 91. 5, Chap. 11. 14. In regard whereof, some conjecture the Serpent, here mentioned, to be that which the Greeks call Arontias; and the Latine Jaculus, from a javelin, or a dart. Howbeit, I cannot concur, with those that render it, as feathered fiery Serpent, for such feathered ones, I suppole to be figments only. Now to such serpents, as are here mentioned, as Ezekiah compared, not for any fierce, fell, or mischievous disposition, but for the hurt, and damage that he should do to the Philistines, and to this latter also, for his swiftness, and celerity, in over-running, and subduing their country. See Dan. 7. 4. & 8. 5.

V.30. And the first born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lye down in safety] This some suppole added, because by the tearms formerly given him, Ezekiah might be deemed to be some cruel tyrant, to thew, that though he should be such as is thereby intimated, yet he should be carefull of the good, and safety of his own people, whose prosperity and plenty, security, and indemnity he should therby procur. The scope seems to be, to declare what a vast difference there should shortly be, between the State of the Philistims, who now so much flourished; and the State of the Jewish people, at present, so much impoverished: for whole constellation this prophecy was principally intended. Thus God strengthens the stoyl against the strong, Amos 5. 9. For what some would have here intimated of their enlargment, quiet condition, and full feeding, after the Assyrian siege dissolved, Ch. 33. 16, 17, 20. & 37. 30. seems to be without the verge of this.

the first-born of the poor] Those that are brought to extream poverty, as the Jews at that time were. See 2 Chron. 28. The ground of the phrase is, because the first-born was of chief note and place in the family; and had a special portion above the rest, Deut. 21. 17. 1 Chron. 5. 1, 2. with Gen. 48. 16. 22. Hence those phrases, Exod. 4. 22. Psal. 89. 27. Rom. 8. 29. Col. 1. 15, 18. Rev. 1. 5. That especially, that comes nearest to this here, Job. 18. 13. The first born of death: for the cruelest, and most grievous death.

and needy shall eat upon thee: shall despasture thee: who before shall feed] Either shall eat upon thee: shall despasture thee: who before shall feed] Either shall eat upon thee, chap. 27. 10. Zeph. 2. 5, 7. and then there is a defect of the Pronoun, as before, ver. 9. Or, shall then feed to the full, when thou shalt be starved, Chap. 5. 17, & 65. 13. Or, shall feed quietly in safety, (supplyed out of the next branch, as Mal. 1. 10.) being rid of such bad neighbours; or freed, at least, from the fear of them who did formerly disturb them, Zeph. 3. 13.

lye down] It is a metaphor, as the former, of feeding, taken from beastsor cattel, chap. 17. 2. Zeph. 2. 14. that use to lye down, when they have fed, ch. 27. 10.

in safety] Without fear of disturbance, or distraction. As cattel, where no ravenous creature is neer at hand, to worry, or scare them, Ezek. 34. 25. & 39. 26.

and I will kill thy root with famine] Or, but as ch. 11. 4. 14. because the contrary condition of the Philistines here followeth. Heb. I will make thy root to dye. A metaphor from a flock, or tree, whose, not branches, or body onely, but the very root also is dryed up for want of moisture to feed, and maintain it. An intimation of an utter destruction, Pi. 2. 5. c. 5, 24. Hos. 9. 16. Mal. 4. 1. See Hos. 2. 3. Nor need we make any curious enquiry, what the root should mean here, as some that would have to be meant here, by root, the Nobility; and by remnant, in the next clause, the communalty, as if they sprung from the Nobility, as from a root; when as the Nobility rather risseth from them. For no more is meant there, then is elsewhere faid of Ekron, a prime town of the Philistins, 1 Sam. 6. 17. alluding to the name of it. Ekron shall be rooted up, or, rooted out, Zeph 2. 4.

and he shall slay thy remnant] The same thing is said, save that the person is changed. For what was root there, is remnant here. He shall slay, that is, Ezekiah, before metaphorically described, ver. 29. as the most interpreters expound it, Or God rather, as ch. 13. 6. that God speaks this, what instruments soever he should use for the effecting of it. For it was not done by any one man, or at any one time: or the verb being taken indefinitely, thy remnant shall be slain; as ver. 32. See chap. 2. 19. thou shalt be utterly destroyed. See Zeph. 2. 5, 6. a remnant of Gods people is still faid to be reserved, and saved, chap. 1. 9. & 10. 21, 22. but the very remnant here is threatned to be destroyed; that which was not fulfilled in Ezekiah's day. For how could Jeremy, Ezekiel, and Zephany, then, so long after again denounce it, See verf. 31.

V.31. Howl, O gate, cry, O city] The Prophet, upon this direful prediction of utter destruction, turns his speech again, as before the like, chap. 13. 6. & 23. 1. Jer. 48, 20. & 49. 3. Joel 1. 13, 13. Zach. 11. 2. The same thing twice spoken, in divers terms; gate, and city, all one; as chap. 3. 26. Ezek. 21. 15. gate and city, collectively, for gates, and cities; to wit, of Palestine, whereof, in times past, were seven principal ones, 1 Sam. 6. 17. and gate or city, not as lone, the Rulers, that sit in the gate, 1 Sam. 19. 8. Jer. 38. 2. but the people, or inhabitants of the cities in general; as chap. 1. 21, 27. See Jer. 47. 2.

thou whole Palestina art dissolved] Heb. melted, as wax, and metals with fire: or, melowed, and dissolved, as earth, and mould with water. For so the word properly signifies, Psalm 46. 6. & 65. 10. ch. 24. 19. Amos 9. 5, 13. Nah. 1. 5 & 2. 6. applyed to a multitude, when they drop away one from another, as things do when they melt, either with heat, or with moysture, 1 Sam. 14. 16. of particular persons; either when their flesh wasteth, chap. 64. 7. Job 30. 22, or their hearts faints, Exod. 15. 15. Josh. 2. 9, 24. Psalm 75. 3 & 107. 26. Jer. 49. 23. Ezek. 21. 15. It may well be here understood in this latter sense of Palestine, that it should be, either wholly wasted, or wholly dismayed; or, that the state it self should be dissolved, and it is faid, thou whole Palestina, in reference to what was before said, thou whole Palestina ver. 29. thou shalt be wasted, dismayed, and dissolved, as thou rejoycedst all before: thy dread, and desolation shall be now, as general, as thy joy, and triumph was before.

for there shall come from the North a smoke] from the North, that is, say some from Assyria. Of which, Ier. 3. 12. 18. wit, Sennacherib with his forces; but that was after Ezekiah had smote the Philistins, 2 King. 18. 8, 13. Nor do we read of any great mischief that he did to the Philistines: whom it is not unlikely, that he would rather reserve from the Iews, that were planted, or placed among them, to keep them under, whose peace, and quiet abode in their own land, he came purposely to disturb, and so did, chap. 36. 1. contrary to that which is here implyed, ver. 30. from Chaldea, say others, to wit, Nebuchadnezzar, with his vast army, which seemeth to be confirmed, from ler. 47. 2. where the evil threatned the Philistines from the North, is generally acknowledged to be meant of Nebuchadnezzar who is oft times faid to come from the North, Jer. 1. 13, 14. & 4. 6. & 6. 22. but the circumstances here mentioned, will not admit it: that especially, ver. 32. concerning the safety of those, that repaired to Sion for succour. Sion it self being then surprized, and the Jewish State involved in the same calamity with the Philistines. I understand it therefore, with most of the Jewish, and Protestant, yea, some popish also, Writers; of Judea, that flood Northeast from Palestine; and Ierusalem, that was likewise situate in regard of Gaza, and the coasts about it, surprized by Ezekiah, 2 King. 18. 8. for which having so cleer Scripture, and to the subject matter of it, I see no sufficient reason why any should strive to devert it, and to turn it any other way.

a smoke] Some by smoke, here understand a cloud of dust, raised by the footing of horses, and man, chariots, and carriages, giving warning of some great army approaching. Others, the noise of the neighing, and prancing of horses, clashing of armour, rustling of chariots, and rumbling of wheels, Jer. 8. 16. & 47. 3. fore-runners of war, as smoke of fire. Others, of the report of the enemies approach, that should utterly fright and dismay them, Jer. 4. 15: & 6 24. Others fetch in here the boyling pot, with the mouth Northward, Ier. 1. 13. and by smoke, understand here the steam of it, or the like. I conceive smoke to be here taken, not as it is a sign, & forerunner, or fore-warner of fire, Judg. 20. 40. but as it dimmes, or darkens the ayr, or offends, and choaks, Prov. 10. 26. Ezekiahs forces, wherewith he should invade the Philistines, are compared to a great, thick, and stifling smoke, that should overspread all their country, and enter vex, and annoy them, in their dwelling, or expel, and drive them out of the places of their abode: or, that should set all in a combustion with them; make their whole land, as Mount Sinai, sometime, Exod. 19. 18. Josh. 8. 20, 21. chap. 34. 10. and this the rather, for the smoke is said to come with them.

and none shall be alone in his appointed times] Or, meeting places, or assemblies. See ver. 13. Most Interpreters, both Jewish, and Christian, understand this, as spoken of those Jewish forces, that Ezekiah should raise for his expedition, against Palestine, that they should none come a lone; but resort by flocks to him, at his set times, for entertainment of them, or set places, where they were appointed to meet, so willing, and glad they should be, to be imployed against a people, that had so much, and so often molested them. See the like, Psal. 110. 3. chap. 13. 2--4. Howbeit, one of the Rabbines expounds it of the Philistines, that they should not dare, or endure to stay in their meeting places, their palaces, or strong holds, any one of them, when these forces break in upon them: as when a smoke comes, saith he, no man, though alone, can endure to stay in his house, Chap. 6. 4, Of the latter word, see Psal. 74. 8. Of the former, Psal. 102. 7. And this seems more suitable to the tenor of the context, if the words will bear it. The smoke, that shall be driven in upon you, from the fire of Gods wrath incensed against you, shall in all places to pursue you, and annoy you, that ye shall no where be in rest. See Deut. 29. 20. Psalm. 18. 8.

V.32. what shall one then answer the messengers of the nation] Heb. And what shall he answer and, or, then: as, Chap. 8. 3, 14. shall he answer, that is, Ezekiah, say some; as ver. 30. but rather, shall he answered, as ch. 13. 9. & 15. 5. & also, by the messengers of the nation, some understand the Babylonian Embassadours, sent to Ezekiah, chap. 39. 1. but the time accords not with the circumstances of things here foretold. See on ver. 29, 31. Some, the Philistines Embassadors sent, upon unequal terms, to procure a peace: but of this, there is no ground. Others, any messengers sent from any people, to congratulate with the Iewes, upon thefe their successes, as the manner of Princes is, upon such occasions to do, 2 Sam. 8. 10. and take the word heretofore collectively, nation, for, nations, Deut. 28. 49. and others yet more generally, any strangers; that repair to Ierusalem, by occasion of commerce, and business; which though a word thence derived signifies Levit. 11. 13. & 16. 29. yet I find not the word it self, ever so used. I suppole to be meant any messengers in general, that upon any occasion shall come sent unto them, from foreign parts.

that the Lord hath founded Sion] He hath built it, and will so establish it, and protect it, and thofe that repair to it: and that there is little hope therefore for any to prevail against them, or it, Psal. 87. 1, 5. & 102. 13--16. chap. 37, 32, 33.

and the poor of his people shall trust in it] Or, shall betake themselves unto it; as to a place of retreat for surety, and safegard. So is the word used. Judg. 9. 15. Psal. 3. 6, 7. & 57. 1. & 61. 4. & 91. 4. 9. that they may repair thereunto, (see chap. 13. 2.) as to a place by God set a part, and appointed for such purpose. So the noun hence deduced Job 24. 8: Psalm 104. 19. Chap. 4. 6. & 25. 4. & 28. 15. & 30. 3.

the poor of his people] Of whom before, ver. 30. and for whole comfort this was principally intended, see Psal. 9. 9. Iocl 2. 32. Zeph. 3. 12, 13. This answer may be given to the Embasadours of foreign Princes, by them to be returned unto thole that sent them.

CHAP. XV.

Verf. 1 THE burden of Moab] Or burden, see chap. 13. 1. Moab was the son of Lot, begot on his elder daughter in drink, Gen. 19. 33, 37. From him, his posterity, and the country they inhabited, (bordering upon the land of promise, out of which, the Emim were by them expelled, Deut. 2.20, 21. Jhad their name. There were ever bad neibours to the Iewish people, and ill-affected toward them, Numb.22.5,6. Deut. 23.3,4. Judg.3.12-14.2 Kings 13.20.& 24.2. Psalm 83.6,8. against these therefore, as the constant adversaries of Gods people, is this burdensome Prophecy of sad menace s denounced, in this Chapter, and the next. The like whereunto, See Amos 1.4-3.& Jer.48.in which latter place also; are many passages found, borrowed from this Prophet, as in their due places shall be shewed.

Because in the night Ar of Moab is laid waste] The Prophet begins this prophecy concerning Moab, with a relation of the devastation, and desolation of some chief cities, and principal parts of that country; which afterwards he doth more largely, and particularly prosecute; together with the Moabites distraction and vain devotions, thereupon flocking unto their idols, who could do them no good.

Because] So the word most usually signifies; and so the most here take it. Yet some render it here, certainly; and so it is sometime used; as chapter 5.9.& 7.9,16.

in the night] That is, suddenly, unexpectedly, as the day of the Lord is said to come as a theef in the night, 1 Thess. 5.1,2. So Matth. 25.6. Mar. 13.31-35. Luk. 21.34. 35. Eccl. 9.12. or in a night, for there is no article in the text; that is; within the compass of a night; as of Ionas his Kikayon, it is said, that it came up in a night, and was destroyed in a night, Jon. 4.10. though that, by a proverbial speech, be spoken of the celerity, both of the growth, and the decay of that plant. So of a famous city in France, burnt down in a night; an heathen Author saith, that there was but a night between a not able city, and none at all. See Ier. 4.20.

Ar of Moab] Ar, the chief, or mother city of Moab, Num. 21. 28. which seems also to have given the name to the whole region, round about it, and to the greatest part of the Moabites ancient possession, Deut. 2. 9. Some suppose it to be the same with Aroer, mentioned, Num. 32.34. Deut. 2.36.& 3.12. Jer. 48. 19. but of that there is no certainty, yea or likelihood.

is laid waste] Or, spoiled, or, sacked, or; plundered: as Psal. 119.61. he speaks in the present tense, as of a thing already done; or in doing; and so all along afterward. The usual guise of prophetical language; implying the certainty of the things foretold, as sure to be done, as if effected already. See Chapter 3. 1. 1 Kings 14. 14.

and brought to silence] So the old Latine, and so the word may seem to be taken, Ier. 8.14. but that rather from another root. It were better rendred, is cut off, for so it is used, Jer. 47.5. Hos. 10.9,15. Obad. 9. Zeph. 1.11. And if we retain this reading, the copulative, which is wanting in the Hebrew, need not be expressed, but the word without it, rendred, it is cut off, See chapter 14.11,13,19,20. and this seems to go beyond the former, Not sacked, or plundered onely; but cut off, destroyed, ruined; either burnt down, or beaten down.

because in the night Kir of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence] Kir, a city of special note in the land of Moab; called also Kir-heres, and Kir-hareseth, chap. 16, 7, 11. And of Moab here, to distinguish it from another of that name in Media, mentioned, chap. 22.6. 2 King. 16. 9. Howbeit the whole verse, is some other wise, rendred by Interpreters: For the old Latine hath it, concluding the whole sentence within this verse, thus; Because Ar is wasted by night, Moab is distroyed, because the wall (he took the cities name for a common term) is wasted, Moab is silenced. That is, either is destroyed, and brought to the grave, the place of silence, as Psalm. 30.17,18. or, he is become mute: all his rejoycing, and shouting is gone, ch. 16.9,10. Or, all his bragging, and vaunting is ceased, chap. 16.6. Jer. 48.2. Or, he sits still, and dares not stir to make any resistance, as Psal. 4.4. Ier. 8.14. Others, of late, have thus rendred it, Because Moab, is wasted, Ar is cut off, because Moab is wasted, Kir of Moab is cut off: and so carryingi the sentence on to the next verse. The reason why they read it thus, taking in the word Moab, from the fore-going inscription, is, because the verb of wasting is masculine, whereas the names of cities are feminine. But that need not enforce any such supply, since that the genders are not in the Hebrew so commonly observed. So chap. 13.11. where the Nouns are both feminine, the verb joyned to the one, and the participle to the other both masculine. And the like, ch. 16.3. observed there by the Hebrew Criticks. And oft elsewhere See Jer. 2.23.24. Beside that the unevenness of the compositure may be helped, by supposing the inhabitant to be intended, as indeed it is. Ar is wasted, for the inhabitants of Ar: and of Kir likewise. And inhabitant for inhabitants, as chap. 5.3. See chap. 18.2. So chap. 47.11. evil, or adversity shall come upon thee; for the day of evil, or the time of adversity: as is more fully expressed, Psalm 27.5.& Jer. 30.19. Praise, or thanksgiving shall come forth. That is, the voyce of praise, or thanksgiving: as Psal. 26. 7. Jon. 2.9. In all which places, the form of the verb, for the gender of it, agreeth not with the Noun expressed but with that understood. But a late writer of great note, to cut off these difficulties maketh the former verb of waste, an infinitive, thus rendring the words, Surely in the night that Ar of Moab was sacked, was he cut off: surely in the night that Kir of Moab was sacked, was he, (that is, Moab) cut off. Moabwas destroyed in that night, wherein those his two principal cities were surprised and sacked. And this reading seems very probable. The word night, in a regent form, here confirming it. The like syntax, see chap. 30.29. unless a defect of the relative be in either place; as chap. 29.1. How this destruction, where with Moab is here threatned, was inflicted, as some think, by Salmanesser, when he invaded Samaria, 2 King. 17.5.& others, by Senacherib, when he came against Judea, 2 King. 18.13. Or, as others again, by Nebuchadnezzar, after the surprizal of Jerusalem, 2 King. 25.1,4. See ch. 16.14.

V.2. He is gone up] Or, is gone unto. See Chap. 9.1. and 8.7. He, that is, Moab; his King and his people, supplied from the latter part of the verse; as chap. 14.30 they run to, and fro, from idol, to idol; from Temple, to Temple, to seek relief, and succour, but in vain, chap. 16.12.

to Bajith] A city so termed; as an idols House, or Temple, in way of eminency, above all other in that country: or as if the whole city were all but one idols House, or Temple, it is called at large, Beth-baal-Meon; that is, The house of Baals habitation, Josh. 13.17. more briefly, Beth-Meon, Num. 32.38.& Chr. 5.8. and yet cut shorter, Beon, Num. 32.3. here, by the first word in the name at large, Bajith: which yet some here take not for the name, of a city, but for an house, or a temple, and render the words, to the house, or temple; to wit, of Chemosh his chief god, see ch. 16.12. Jer. 48.7, 13. But of this, more anon. See ver. 6.

and to Dibon] Another city of Moab, which was sometime together with Ar, and much of his country surprised, and taken from him, by the Amorites, Num. 21.26.30. By means whereof it came into the Israelites hands, having subdued the Amorite. Num. 32.3. And was possessed first by the Gadites, Num. 32.34.& 33.45. though it fell afterward to the Reubenites, Josh. 13.17. but was, (it seems) again afterward by the Moabites recovered, and by them repossessed, Jer. 48.18, 22. See ver. 9. These two places are deemed to have been unto the Moabites, as Dan and Bethel were unto the Idolatrous Israelites, 1 King. 12.28,29. the principal places of their idolatrous services. See Ier. 48.13.

the high places] Some take these words, as joyned by way of apposition, to the names of the two forementioned places; as if it were said, He is gone to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places: that is, to those high places that are there. Others take it, for the proper name of a city, situate neer to the foot of Pisgah, called sometime Bamoth, Numb. 21.19,20. sometime Bamoth-Baal, or the high places of Baal, Josh. 13.17, and they render the words, and to Bamoth; supplying the copulative, which they suppose is wanting, as ver. 1. But one of the Jewish writers, whom some of ours also follow, goeth a third way; rendring the words to this effect, He (to wit, Moab, that is, the King especially, or the people of Moab) is gone up to the Temple, (to wit, of Chemosh, called his Sanctuary, chap. 16.12.) and Dibon, (that is, the Inhabitant, taken collectively, or the inhabitants of Dibon) to the high places. And this I the rather incline to, because the article is prefixed before, both Bajith, and Bamoth; which in proper names is not so usual; and it suits best with what we finde afterward, Ich. 16.12. See Num. 21.28.

to weep] Heb. for weeping, the noun for the verb: not to sacrifice, as usually; but to weep, that is, to lament, and by prayer and supplication to seek to their idols, for help, and succour, in their present distress, to pray, ch. 16.12.

Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba] Or, for Nebo and for Medeba: as chap. 24.11. Lam. 3.17,18. two cities also of Moab. Nebo, possessed sometime by the Reubenites, Num. 32.3.38. so called, as may seem, from the Mount near to it, on which Noses deceased, Deut. 32.49,50.& 34.1,3. both, as Some, from the prophecies, or oracles, that their idoll there gave. See chap. 46.1. Medeba, a city on the confines of those parts of Moab, which the Amorites sometime took from him, Numb. 21. 30. and became afterward a boundary of the Reubenites portion, Iosh. 13.16. for these, Moab, that is, the Moabite, shall howl, (the ground of their forementioned weeping,)because by the enemy surprised, and sacked. See chap. 14. 31.

on all their heads shall be baldne[s] Or, all their heads shall be bald. Heb. on every his head, or, on his whole head, shall be baldness, as having reference to Moab before spoken; but taken collectively. The lamentation shall be general, because the affliction so also, see ch. 1.5.

on all heads baldness, and every beard cut off] Heb. lops used properly of trees, or the branches of them, Chap. 10.33.& 14.12. Dan. 4. 14. This was to come to pass, either by tearing of their hair, through extremity of grief, and impatiency of spirit, Ezra. 9.3. See ch. 3.24. or, by cutting, and shaving of head, and beard. An usual practice, anciently in times of mourning, and lamentation, Levit. 19. 27,28.& 21.5. Deut. 14.1. Job 1 20. Ier. 7.29. Ezek. 7.18. Amos. 8. 10. Mic. 1.16. And the reason of this practice on such occasion, the Rabbines render, because the hair of head, and beard, is accounted as an ornament to a mans person, and the mangling of it a disgrace, 2 Sam. 10.4. and ornaments in mournings are laid aside, as unseasonable, Exod. 33. 4,5. See the same, Jer. 48. 37.

V.3. In their streets they shall gird themselves with sackcloth] Heb In his (as before, ver. 2. streets, or out-wayes, (because streets comen in afterward. See ver. 5, 19.) they gird on sack. When they come abroad abroad, they shall go clad with sackcloth girt to them: the wonted habit of mourners, 2 Sam. 3. 31. 1 King. 20. 31, 32. & 21. 27. 2 King. 6. 30. & 19. 1, 2. Neh. 9. 1. Esth. 4, 1--4. Job 16. 15. Psal. 30.11. and 35.13. Chap. 3.24.& 20.2. and 22.12. and 37.1, 2.& 58.5. Dan. 9.3. Iocl. 1.8, 13. Amos 8. 10. Rev. 11.3. See Jer 48.37.

on the tops of their houses] On which being flat, roofed, as terraces, or, open galleries, Deut. 22.8. Josh. 2.6. they used to privy, Act 10. 9. as also to repair thither in danger, and distress, for more security, or to look about for reliefe. See chapter. 22. 1. Jer. 7. 29.

and in their streets] The usuall places of common, and general lamentation, and mourning, Eccl. 12. 5. Chap. 24. 11. or, as well those, that run to and fro in the streets, as those that are got up to the tops of their houses.

every one shall howle] There shall be nothing but howling, and weeping, in city and country, both within doors and without, v. 4. 5, 8. See Jer. 48.38.

weeping abundantly] Heb. descending with weeping: that is, say Some, coming down with weeping, and heavy hearts, from their Idol-Temples, whither they went up, v. 2. because they find little hope of help, or comfort there, or, rather, their eyes running down with teats, as Psal. 119. 136. Jer. 9. 1. 18.& 13. 17. Lam. 1.16.& 3. 48.

V.4. And Heshbon shall cry] Or, Both Heshbon, and Elealah, as Psal. 76.6. Jer. 17.26. Or, For as Chap. 13,8.& 5.3.2. For he proceeds to shew by enumeration of particular places, how general the lamentation should be. See Jer. 48.34.

Heshbon] Of this, which was the royal City of Sihon, the Amorite-King, as of the former, see Num. 21.23,26.& 32.37.

Shall cry] Or, cryeth as ver. 1. and Elealeh] Of this likewise, see Num. 32.3,37. by Heshbon, and Elealeh, is meant the inhabitants of either: as Moab for the Moabites, ver. 2. See v. 1.

their voice shall be heard] Or, is heard: as before, cryeth. See ch. 10. 30.

even unto Jahaz] The utmost border of Moabs coun try, towards Sihons land, Num. 21.23. called also Jahaz ah, and alligned to the Levites, out of the Reubenites portion, Josh. 21. 36.

therefore the armed Souldiers of Moab shall cry out] The cry shall be so doleful, and so great, that it shall make not the weak only, and such as are not acquainted with warr; but even the souldiers, that are in arms, and the most courragious among them, to quail, and by crying with the rest, to discover their inward faint-heartedness, and unwillingness to fight, and make resistance against the enemy. See Jer. 48.4, 24, 41.

armed Souldiers] The word signifies properly such as have their garments, and their harnes, or weapons, as sword, and the like, such as they were wont then to war, and to make use of, girt up to them, unto, or about their loins, Deut. 12, 11. 41.& 13.18. Luke. 12.35. as ready to go out into the field, or to enter fight, whensoever occasion should be, Num. 32.30,32. Deut. 3. 18. Josh. 4.13. The word, Souldiers, is not in the text.

shall cry out] Some of the Jewish Writers expound it, Shall shout, as men are wont to do for joy, and in triumph, Judg. 15.14. and as valiant men when they are joyning battle, 1 Sam. 17. 20. 1 Chr. 13. 15, 16. as implying, that though the souldiers should thus bestir themselves, ready and forward to go out against the enemy, yet Moab, the King, and people, should have no heart thereunto. But the shouting here mentioned, as other of them well observe, is not of mirth, nor of alacrity, but of mourning, and dejection of spirit, See Jer. 48, 12, 33. So is the word used, to cry out; for fence of pain, or fear of evil, Judg. 7, 21. 1 Mic. 4. 9.

his life shall be grievous to him] As if it were said, he shall be weary of his life, as Rebekkah, Gen. 27. 46, and Iob. Job. 3. 20, 21. & 6.8, 9.& 7.15, 16. Heb. his soul shall be ill-affected to him, or, for himself. Which the Jewish Writers, some of them expound: Moabs soul shall be grieved for himself; or, each of the Moabites shall be in much grief of mind, for the evil that is like to befall him: and some of them, as if an emphasis were in the last word; he shall have no list to look after any other: but each soul sorrow for it self. The fear, and affliction that shall surprise each party, being so great, that they should mind none but themselves. This latter seems somewhat too nice; yet see Jer. 47. 3. & 49. 5. Others, it shall grieve within him. There is in the text an elegancy in the sound of the words; between this, and that of crying, before used. The vicinity whereof hath made some great Rabbines, and Some of ours, treading in their steps, to expound it; each one shall cry for himself; referring it, some to the whole body of the people, some to the men of war, before mentioned. But the word in that form is not found so to signifie. See Chap. 16.7.

V.5. My heart shall cry out for Moab] Or, Both cry out; or, did cry out; for the tenses are oft promiscuously used. See Chap. 14.25. ver. 1. )For Moab, or unto Moab, as ver. 4, 2 to him, or, for him. This, most, both Jewish, and Christian Interpreters, understand of the Prophets compassionate affection towards that people, albeit so great an enemy to Gods people; their destruction and calamity being so grievous, that the very thought of it moved him to commiseration. Whence also one of the Rabbines observes a difference between the Prophets of God, and the Prophets of Idols; between Esay, and Balaam; the one desired to be cursing Gods people, Numb. 23. whereas Esay was grieved to forethink what evil was to befall Moab. See chap. 16.9, 11.& 21.3. Jer. 47.6. But other; of both sorts understand them, not of the Prophet; but of those, before mentioned, ver. 4. (and infert therefore, as to be supplyed in the text, the word, saying, which is indeed sometime omitted; as Psal. 105.11. ch. 63. 11.) Some of the men of arms, making profession of their forwardnes to fight, and their crying to, and calling upon the people for that purpose; to reclaim them from flight, and encourage them to stand to it. Others, of the Moabites in generall, professing their inward grief, even at heart, for the calamities, and ruine of their country. And this, to me, seems best to agree with the rest of the context, as well fore going, as ensuing. See Jer. 48.31, 32, 36.

his fugitives shall flee unto Zoar] His fugitives. Or as the Hebrew hath it, her fugitives. (and so ver. 8.) as having reference, lay the Jewish Doctors, to the region. Or, whom, some expound the words here used, as our version doth. And as another from the same root, (which generally signifies to flee) doth undoubtedly import, Ezek. 17.11. as also is this here used by many deemed to ignifie, Chap. 43.14. See also, Jon. 1.10. shall flee, is not in the original; but is supplyed from the Noun. Instead whereof, some supply from the former clause, or from what follows, shall cry. And others, shall run crying unto Zoar. The city that was saved, when Sodome, and her neighbouring towns were destroyed. (Of which, and of Lots fleeing thither, whereunto the Prophet is here deemed to allude, see Gen. 19.20-22.) And thither those may well seem to flee, that stood in fear of, or had escaped the sword of the enemy, either hoping there to find shelter, as others at Heshbon, Jer. 48.45. or thereby intending a further escape; (See Jer. 48. 6.) it being a bordering town of that State, Deut. 34.3. Whence also have divers taken occasion (the old Latine among the rest) to render the word here not fugitives, but bars, or bolts; as most commonly, indeed, it signifies, Exod. 26.26, 27. Psal. 107.16. So called, because they shoot, or run through the rings, or hollow places, made for the passage of them, Exod. 26.28.& 36. 33. And some, thereby understand the borders of the land, which are to it, as bars: And read the text, Unto the borders thereof, even unto Zoar, to wit, did I cry. From the former branch supplyed; as Gen. 1.16. But of this use of the word, (though great ones maintain it,) is no example produced. Others therefore and so some of the Iewish writers understand it of the bars of the city gates; which go commonly together, Deut. 2. 5. 1 Sam. 23.7. 2 Chro. 8.5. Iob. 38. 10. Psalm 107. 16. Ier. 49. 31. Ezek. 38.11. As gate, for city, Chap, 3.26. So bar, for gate, Proverbs 18.19. Or strong-hold, Amos. 1.5. As also some take it, Chap. 43.14. And bars said to cry here, saith one Rabbine, as gates and cities to howl, Chap. 14. 31. But another, rather referring it to the former branch, renders it, My heart shal cry for Moab; and for her bars, that is, all her Strength, saith he, or strong holds, because the bars are the strength of a gate, as the gates of a city. And the gate cannot hold out when the bars are broken, no more then a city, when the gate once broke open, Psal. 107. 16. & 147. 13. even unto Zoar; a principal one of them. In this variety of versions, and expositions, (and others also there are, besides these) I suppose with least straining of the text, the words may be thus rendred, Her fugitives shall cry unto Zoar, For of the cry passing to and fro, up and down, through the whole country, doth this passage still speak. And so Jer. 48.34. From the cry of Heshbon, even unto Elealah, even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voyce: from Zoar, even unto Horonaim. Of which, see v. 5. They shall cry thither, that is, carry on the cry along thither: or shall run crying thither. Of which kinde of defective speech, see examples, Gen. 45. 14. Benjamin wept upon his neck, that is, fell weeping upon his neck: or fell upon his neck, and wept; as the former part of the verse, more fully hath it, 1 Sam. 7.2. Israel lamented after the Lord: that is, lamenting fought after him, 1 Cor, 5.2. Te have not mourned, that the man that hath done this deed might be taken away from you: That is, ye have not sorrowing, or being grieved, taken a course for the removing of him from among you: as after there, ver. 13. See also Chap. 14.12. & 38.14, 17. 2 Zi. I shall only add, and leave it to the consideration of others, whether this branch, may not, with the next before-going, be thus knit together, and rendred, My heart cryeth out for Moab, (that is, I my self, as Psalm. 25, 17. & 27. 8. and 28.7. cry out, or I cry out heartily for him) and for his fugitives, (that is, etor to as my voice may be heard) unto Zoar. See Chap. 43. 14.

a heifex of three years old] The words thus rendred, make it ambiguous, unto whom this branch is to be referred. Some refer it to the city Zoar: which, they say, is called here, an heifer of three years old, in regard of her strength and beauty, and the richnes of her soyl, Gen 13.10. Because at those years, an heifer is in her prime: and therefore God bids Abraham take an heifer, and a female Goat, and a Ram, each of that age, for the sealing of Covenants between them. Gen. 15. 9. Yet some of the Jewish authors would have it, a Calf of the third birth: as if such were usually the strongest. And would have Moab, Or Zoar, likened to such a calf, for her wantonnes; as Ier. 31.18. Hos. 10.11. See Jer. 48. 11. But Ier. 48. 34.

years old. And it is there referred, not to the city, but to the cityers, or the cry. I will cry out, as such an heifer, missing her calf, or her company, 1 Sam. 6. 9. 12. Or, the cry of those that flye, shall be such, and so loud, that it should be heard unto Zoar, or it shall pass in that manner over the whole countrey, till it come thither. See v. 4. Of the defect of the note of similitude, see in the like case, Chap. 21. 8.

for by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up] Heb. he shall go it up; or, it shall go up[to wit, the cry; as it is, Ier. 48. 5.) by the ascent, &c. In which words, some suppose a reason to be rendred, why the men of war should cry so loud for the slaying of the people: to wit, because all places should be so full of howrling, and yelling for fear, and grief, that otherwise they could not be heard. Others, why those that fled, should not stay till they come to Zoar; because they found there places, on the way, so full of weeping, and wailing, that they well thereby perceived there was no safe tarrying there. But I suppose rather, that the Prophets intent is to shew, that the cry was gone over the whole countrey, and was arrived at Zoar, by relating the places by which it had past. See Jer. 48. 4. 5.

Luhith] Of this city or town, we find no mention in Scripture, save here, and in Jeremy. The Rabbins tell us, it stood high; which I suppose they gather from the words of the text. Some of ours tell us, that it was situate on an hill, and on that side of it that looked toward Iudah, as Horonaim, on the other. But whence they have that, I know not.

for in the way of Horonaim] Or, to Horonaim. So Jer. 48. 34. From Zoar unto Horonaim. That is, all the way that lyes betweem them. Hence it is thought, that Sanballat was called the Horonite, Neh. 2. 10, 16. The name is in the duall, as you would say, the two Horons. The reason whereof, is by the Rabbins rendred; because there were two of them, the upper, and the lower. And of Beth-horon indeed we so finde, Joth. 10. 10, 11, & 16. 3, 5. & 18. 13. 14. which, by those places, seem to have been situate upon the confines of the Ephraimites, and the Benjamites. And might peradventure be the same with Horonaim, here mentioned: (as Nimrah, and Beth-nimrah, Number. 32. 3, 36.) if the situation of them would admit it.

they shall raise up a cry of destruction] That is, men shall raise such a cry, or, such a cry shall be raised; as Chap. 2. 19. & 14. 30. So some of the Iewish writers, by a transposition of letters, deducing it from a root that signifieth to raise, Chap. 14. 9. Howbeit, others of them say, it is a Syriack word, and signifies to cry. And it hath some affinity with the tearm of shouting, used v. 4. Whereunto also some refer it. And others again to a word, that signifies to break asunder with force or violence, Phal. 2. 9. and render it, They shall break, or rend themselves with crying. A defect of the particle with as Ps. 17. 13, 14. with ver. 7.

a cry of destruction] Heb. of breach, or breaking. That is, either a cry importing destruction; Breach, put for destruction, as Chap. 1. 28. & 14. 23. Or as some, a broken cry: such as vehemency of passion, and distraction, in a tumultuous multitude, doth oft produce. But I incline rather to the former. See Jer. 4. 20. The drift is, to shew, that all places, and passages, high and low, from the one end of the land to the other, should be filled with lamentations, and outcryes, See further, v. 8.

V. 6. For] Or Because. One reason of their cry, the utter spoyl of their pastures, at present, not, as some, their future desolation.

For the waters of Nimrim shall be desolate] Heb. shall be desolations; or shall be brought to extream desolation; as Ier. 48. 34. See chap. 17. That is, as moft, the waters and brooks, neer to that place, that watered the rich pastures, in the plains of Moab, shall be dryed up. As of Egypt the like is said, Chap. 19. 5, 7. But that was there done by diverſion of the main ſtream of the river: whereof here, there is no like likihood; and falleth out oft, in times of drought, 1 King. 18. 5. Ier. 14. 3. But that is not the thing here tore told. Others, therefore, by waters, do here understand that fat, and rich pastures and grounds themselves that lay neer to those waters, as Eccl. 11. 1. waters, for soyl, or land, yvell vvatered, Chapter. 32. 20. For as for that vvhich some of the Rabbines have of the brooks there, that they should be said to be desolated; because they were mixed with the blood of the slain, or choaked up with their corpses. It seemeth somewhat too far fetched. That which others have of the places adjoyning, said to be desolate, because left by the inhabitants, either fled, or slain, is more likely; but suits not so vvell vvith the words following, vvhich speak, not of the towns, but the grounds. See Ier. 48. 34.

Nimrim] There is mention of a town, called Nimrah, Numb. 32. 3. joyned there with divers other of those here mentioned. Called also Beth-nimrah, Numb. 32. 36. (for names are oft times cut short, as Sirim, for Abelsittim, Num. 25. 1. & 33. 49. Hermon, Psal. 133. 3. for Baal-hermon, Judg. 3. 3. Athar, Joth. 19. 7. for Corathan, 1 Sam. 30. Shiv, for Bersheeba, Joth. 19. 2. Salem, for Jerusalem, Psal. 76. 2.) where it is reckoned up among those cities, that the Gadites possessed concerning which see on v. 9. It is here put in the plural number, for the grounds neer to, or about that city. Or, it may be, for such fat pastures, as those about Nimrah were, as if he had said, the fat pastures of the Nimrahs, or Nimrim; Towns so seated, as that was, in rich and fertile soyls. See Sept. Chap. 13. 10.

for the hay is withered away] Or, the grass is withered; as the word is usually rendred, Iob. 40. 15. Psal. 104. 14. & 147. 8. Chap. 37. 27. & 40. 6, 8. otherwise grass withered, in an ordinary cottle, makes hay, and that is nothing amis.

the grass faileth, there is no green thing] Or, the herbage [that properly that is newly sprung up, and sprouted out of the ground, the tender sprout. Gen. 1. 11. 12. Chap. 37. 27. and 66. 14. Jer. 14. 5.) is gone, or consumed, (as Chap. 16. 4. & 24. 13. The green herbage is not. So Gen. 1. 30. and 9. 3. the meaning is, the pastures, as utterly spoiled, either eaten up with the enemies horſe, or trampled on, and stamped down with their feet, and so beaten into the soyl and mire, made of that which grew on them, that there is nothing green to be seen. See ch. 1. 7. Ezek. 34. 18.

V. 7. Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, shall they carrie away to the brook of the willows] Or, Because[as contening another cause of their outcry] the abundance which (the relative wanting should be supplied; as Gen. 42. 28. Exod. 13. 8.) Or, the residue of what (as Deut. 3. 13.) they have gotten. (Heb. made, as Gen. 31. 1. Deut. 8. 18.) and their wealth, (so called, because the owner is as master of it, Ier. 20. 1.) or, their treasure (so tearmed, as by the Grecks also, because want to be laid up, Gen. 41. 36.) shall be carried away[or, is carried away] (as ver. 5.) &c. This some understand of the Moabites themselves, who, either because the waters of Nimrim were dryed up, and no pasture there to be had for their cattel, should drive them away, to seek water and pasture for them; about some willowy-brook, elsewhere. Or, as others, should for feare of the enemy, scarrie away the best of their substance, and of their treasure, so much as they well could, or so much as was left of it, so hide it in some low place by the brook side, yea, or in the brooks; such of it, as might without damnage, or decriment, be there bestowed, in hope afterward to recover it again. But others rather understand it of the enemy, that should seize upon their wealth, and carry it all away, which is here brought in, as the cause of their lamentations, and out cryes: as before the spoil of their soyl, so now the loss of their wealth. And is spoken of, as a thing in doing, or done. This to be the true fence of the place, appears by that of Jeremy, parallel hereunto, Jer. 48. 36. Because the riches that he hath gotten, are perished. See chap. 16. 8. Howbeit, one of the Rabbines, in whose steps the old Latine treadeth, renders the words to this purpose. According to that which Moab hath done, shall their visitation (as Psal. 89. 32.) or, retribution, also be. And so runs out into a large discourse of the manifold kindnesses, that Abraham shewed Lot, and the unkind dealing of his issue, the Moabites, and Ammonites, with Abrahams posterity, for which they were deservedly thus to be destroyed. See Ier. 48, 26, 27. & 49. 1. But the genuine fence was given before.

to the brook of the willows] So is the word used, Levit. 23. 40. chap. 44. 4. that is, say some of the Jewish Commenters, and of ours after them, to Babylon; and so, those that expound the former part of the verse, of a retribution, expound this latter, they shall carry them (to wit, the Moabites) unto Babylon; because they find mention of willows, growing by the water side there, Psal. 137. 1, 2. as if willows grew no where else besides brooks, but at Babylon only: besides, that it appears not, that this Prophecy intends any carrying at all to Babylon: Others understand it, of some brook, in the land of Moab, where the Moabites should hide their wealth, or whether the enemy should carry it, here to share it. But the words may as well be read, unto the vale of the Arabians: Of whom, Chap. 13. 20. either by the Arabians themselves, serving under the Assyrians; or, by the Assyrians sending them thither before hand (for some part of Arabia bordered upon the Moabites country) thence to convey them afterward into Assyria, See chap. 16. 8.

V. 8. For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab] Or, Because[as ver. 9. Heb. border; but taken collectively: as Judg. 11. 22. This appears by the particular recitall of the places, these especially here added to them, ver. 4. 5. Heshbon, being situate on the North-east side of that country; Elealeh, on the North-west; Jahaz, on the South-west; Horonaim, as some say, farthest East; and Zoar, the utmost West.

the howling thereof unto Eglaim] Heb. her howling; to wit, Moabs: as her fugitives, ver. 5. or, the howling of it: that is, of the cry: and howling cry: and so in the next clause: See Jer. 48. 20.

unto Eglaim] This most Interpreters, Jew, and Christian, take for the proper name of a place: and the Rabbines affirm it to be a boundary Town of Moab: but on which side, they say not. The word is no where else found. Yet some late Writers of note take it, for a common term: and will have it to signifie such places, where there is a confluence of divers streams: because the word Egel, Job. 38. 28. (where alone it is extant) signifies a drop. and they suppose it, so signifie, those watery places, that were neer upon the confluence of the brook, or streams of the river Arnon, Numb. 21. 14. which is there said, v. 13. to be the border of Moab, dividing them and the Amorites, who lay Easterly from them, ver. 11. and it is not unlikely, that the place had its name from the springineſs of the grounds thereabouts. To this nature of the Moabitish soyl, the Psalmist seems to have an eye, Psal. 60. 8. where he calleth Moab, not his wash-pot; but his washing pot: his pot, or baſon, to wash his feet in and the howling thereof unto Beer-elim] The word Beer, which signifies a well, Some take here, for a common, or generall term; and so render the words, the well of Elim, as if Elim, not Beer-Elim, were the name of the place; and of that name indeed, we have a place, in the Israelites journeying from Egypt, Exod. 15. 27. & 16. 1. Num. 33. 9, 10. but that cannot be the place here mentioned. It seems rather, that Beer here is part of the name of the place, for which also it is put alone, Num. 21. 16. and may seem to have been called Beer-Elim, that is, The wel of the mighty ones: because it is said, The Princes (who are so termed, Exod. 15. 15. Psal. 89-1.) digged it, Num. 21. 18. This Beer-Elim seems to have been not far from some part of Arnon, Num. 21. 13. 16. between which river, on the one side, and Jordan on the other lay the greatest part of the Moabites country. See Num. 21. 13. compared with Num. 33. 48. & 35. 1. though some parts, it seems, they were at this time possessed of, also beyond Jordan, as Zoar, ver. 5. Of which, see Deut. 34. 3.

V. 9. For the waters of Dimon shall be full of blood] Or, Because they are full, or, are filled with blood(as before, ver. 6. 8.) to wit, the blood of men slain by the enemy. See ver. 6. So Chap. 34. 3, 6, 7. Jer. 46. 10. Ezek. 32. 6. This seems to be here specified, as one cause of this general out-cry, that ran to and fro, from place to place; because the waters that came down from the place here mentioned, being dyed blood, shewed how it went with them there.

Dimon] The Jewish Doctors tell us, that this Dimon is a river in the land of Moab; and that stream, say some, that appeared like blood to the Moabites, in the expedition of the three Kings, against Moab, and was after indeed so dyed with their blood. 2 King. 3. 22. 24. whence they imagine, that it was afterward so called. But it may well be questioned, whether any such stream continued there, after that extraordinary flood, by the Prophets prayer, at that time, in that their extream necessity procured. Some again of ours say, that it is not a river, but a city, that belonged sometime to the Gadites. But we find elsewhere in Scripture none of that name. Others therefore lastly, suppose it, to be no other then that Dibon mentioned before, ver. 2. but by the Prophet here so termed, with change of a letter, not Dibon, but Dimon: (as Merodach, for Berodach, Ch 31. 1.) in regard of the abundance of blood, that should be shed in it. and the dreams about it, or neer unto it, should flow with, a new name, is upon a new occasion given it: as Gen. 17. 5, 15. & 25. 30. & 32. 28. Judg. 6. 32. Ruth. 1. 20.

for] Or, moreovertas ch. 16. 8.

I will bring more upon Dimon] This is spoken, as in the person of God. I will bring, saith he, more. Heb. additions, or, things added: that is, saith one of the Rabbines well, evils added, a defect of the subject as Prov. 18. 23. sheweth answereth, or gives out, rough, or harsh things, that is, rough, or harsh words. The meaning is, I will inflict more, and more evils upon them. See ch. 1. 5. Though others, both of them, and ours, refer it to what was before said of blood, that the river should abound with blood, that should be added to the waters thereof, in great abundance running in, on either side of it; and that the word is plural, in regard of the several streams, that should run divers wayes, not tainted with blood, only, but swelling with it: or, in reference to the story above mentioned, that he would make those rivers to run with blood, more abundantly, then at that time; and yet again with much more, then hitherto they had done. But I suppose rather, that by additions of evils, is here meant, more then had been before mentioned; to wit, the spoyling of their pastures, and the plundering of their goods, ver. 6, 7. even the slaughter of their inhabitants, partly, by the sword of the enemy, and partly also, by wild beasts that shall be sent in upon them: and it may be, that Moab it self, in the next clause mentioned, is here termed Dimon, that is, bloody, in allusion to the name of Dibon, one of her chief cities: as if it were said, all Moab shall be, as one Dibon, or Dimon, rather. It shall in all her streams run with blood; as Jerusalem is called Ariel, because it should be as one Ariel, or altar, in regard of the general slaughter, that should be in all parts of it. Ch. 29. 1, 2. See of Edom, Chap. 34. 5-7.

lions upon him, that escapeth of Moab] Heb, upon the escaping or, escape (as Chap. 10 20.) of Moab a lion; that which some of the Jewish Writers understand of Nebuchadnezzar, compared to a lion, Ier. 4. 7. who should destroy whatsoever had escaped Sennacherib. But the word, lion, seems rather, as some of them also oferves; to be taken collectively, for lions: as chap. 30. 6. Jer. 5. 6. Nah. 2. 11, 12. put here for ravenous beasts in general, such as are wont to prey upon men, ch. 35. 9. 2 King. 17. 25. The meaning is, their land being much of it wasted, and desolate, God would cause wild beasts to abound in it, that should destroy many of those that had escaped the sword of the enemy, Exod. 23. 29. Levit. 26. 22. So that they should be no way able to escape Gods hand, but he would meet with them, either in one kind or another, and by variety of judgments, execute his indignation upon them, Chap. 24. 17, 18. Ier. 48. 43, 44. Amos 5. 9. & 9. 1.

and upon the remnant of the land] To wit, of Moab: the same (saith one of the Rabbines well) in effect, though in other terms, with the former. For why another, of them should say, the remnant of Iſrael in their land; I know not.

CHAP. XVI.

Vers. 1. Send ye the lambs to the Ruler of the land] This Chapter ought to be joyned unto the former; as in some verſions it is, because they make up but one Prophecy, and that no leſs one, of one and the same subject, concerning Moab, who in the former part of it, is admonished, what course she should, and might have taken, for the aversion and prevention of the judgments here denounced against her, to wit, by paying their tribute duly to the King of Judah, and performing kind offices unto Gods people, in the times, especially, of their distress, ver. 3, 4. both which things, because they had not onely failed in, but had carried themselves haughtily and hardly, toward those, unto whome they ought to have performed such offices, ver. 6. they are further again menaced with the judgments before mentioned, ver. 7-13, and a certain time set for the execution of the same, ver. 14.

Send the lamb to the Ruler of the land] Or, Send a lamb the Ruler of the earth; as the old Latine, and those that follow it, expounding it of Christ, that came from Ruth the Moabitesse, Matth. 1. 5. or, Send the lamb of the Ruler of the land, or, the earthe which seems to fitt best with the original. The great variety of expositions, that both Jews, and Christians, give of the words, were too long to relate, and loft labour to refute, they being many of them so absurd. I will pick out of them therefore one; or two only, that seem most probable; and pitch upon that, I deem most proper. Some therefore of yme note expound the words, as if the Prophet should advise, or admonish, the Moabites, to send lambs and the like, for sacrifice to God the Ruler of the whole world, 1 Chr. 29. 21. as Heathen Princes sometime did, Ezr. 6. 8-10. & 7. 15-23. to make their peace, if they may, with him. Which some of them conceive to be spoken seriously, as exhorting them, to come in to God, submit to him, acknowledge him, by sacrificing to him, to be the only true God who is able to protect, and save them: as Chap. 21. 12. which their idols cannot do, ver. 12. Others, as in way of derision, as if, do it, he might, but it should be to small purpose, to seek now to him, whom he had so despised, and disspighted before; and who had now past an irrecoverable doom of destruction upon him. So it should be like that, Mal. 1. 9. But the genuine sense seems rather to be that, which the founder sort of the Rabbines have; and divers of ours also admit: that the Moabites are called upon, to pay that Tribute to Ezekiah, which was due from them, to the Kings of Judah. David had conquered Moab, slain a great part of them, made the rest of them tributary, 2 Sam. 8. 2. this tribute, because they abounded in sheep, and goats, was paid in such cattel: but after the rent made in the State upon Solomons decease, the Kings of Israel got this yearly pension into their hands, and enjoyed it quietly, without refusal, unto Ahabs decease; after whose death, they denyed it to Ahaziah, and to Joram his sons, 2 King. 1. 1. & 3. 4, 5. The Prophet therefore here minds them, of their duty herein, and willeth them to send the Rulers lamb, that is, the present, or tribute due to him, as the Lord of the soyl, to whom of right it belonged, being of Davids posterity, consisting in lambs, with rams, and goats. That which some add, that they are admonished now so to do, because there was no king of Israel now to receive it, Samaria being taken by Salmanesser, and that kingdome diffolved, 2 King. 18. 9, 10. is not so certain; but that more unlikely, that the Prophets words should be spoken in way of derision, and insultation over them, after their destruction, and the desolation of their land: as if she had said, ye refused before to pay your wonted tribute, consisting of so many thousand sheep, send now, if ye can, but a lamb only, as implying, that they had scarce a lamb then left them, of such numerous flocks, as they were late possessed of. But lamb, is here put collectively, for lambs, as lion, for lions, ch. 15. 9. and lambs here, for such cattel, as their tribute consisted of: as lions there, for such beasts, as are wont to kill and devour men. I am not ignorant that one of the Jewish great Masters would have the word, ear here to signifie a swift beast of the Camel kind; pointing us to a place, 2 King. 11. 4, 19. where the words are, the carrim and the runners, which we render, the captains and the guard: as if the meaning were, that they should send in post-haste. See more hereof, on chap. 66. 20. wherein, howsoever I suppose he be far wide, as well for the one place as the other, yet he gives a hint of that, which to me seems to minister an occasion of some doubt, whether the word car and carim, might not better be rendred both here and elsewhere, ram and rams, then lamb and lambs. My reason is, because by carim, chief stains and great ones, souldiers, and men of might at least, are commonly resembled by such; so stiled, Chap. 34. 6. Ier. 51. 40. Ezek. 39. 10. besides that, the word carim, is, it self used for captains and leaders, such as are rams in the flocks; as in that place of the Kings, and for those engins of batterie, which both Greeks, and Latines call rams, Ezek. 4. 2. & 21. 22. yea so the old Latine rendreth the word rams, 1 Sam. 15, 9. and some late interpreters of prime note, leaders of the flock. All that can be objected against this, is, that elim is used commonly for rams, and that elim and carim, are sometime found mentioned together. as Ezek. 39. 18. & 1 King. 3. 4. But hereunto may be answered, that in like manner sheirim and athudim are both used for he-goats, and yet there seems some distinction between them, and the latter, to be the leaders. See chap. 14. 9. & Jer. 50. 8. and the word to be among the sheep, as the athudim among the goats. Besides that in the history which this relateth unto, it is said carim, (so many simply, (which some render fat weathers) and elim with wool? so many. But this I shall submit to the judgment of the learned.

from Sela in the wilderneſs] The Hebrew word signifies a rock, or, a ſtoniness, a fortresse, Num.21.8,10.Chap.31.9 .It seems here to be the proper name of a place, (as is Petra, sometime , both with Greeke and Latines, and so some here render it,)situate in the confines of Moab,and Edom, mentioned, as then in the possession of the Edomites,in Amaziahs time, and by him taken, and the name changed into Joktheel,(of which name we find a city, anciently so called,in Judahs lot, Josh.15.38.) annexed to the crown of Judah; but in after-times,it seems, gained unto Moab,and by them, at the time of this Prophecy, possessed. Some say it was the head city of Moab; and is said here to stand on that part of the land, that overlooked the wilderneſs of Moab,Num.21.11. Deut.2.8. Others say,that it was the head city of Edom: and suppose that here is intimated,the full extent of the whole country of Moab: from Sela(the South end, to Edom-ward unto the wilderneſs, (for so they render the words of the text) to wit, of Jordan : the north end to Judea-ward:as if he had said: Send all of you, out of all parts of the counts,from the one end of your land to the other. Incline to the former,though I doubt whether Sela were the head city of either.See Ar,ch.15.1.

to the mount of the Daughter of Zion]To Ierusalem:where Gods seat was in his Temple,and the kings in his palace,See ch.1.8,&2. 2.& 10.32.& 14.13.

V.2. For it ſhall be,that as a wandering bird,caſt out of the neſt; ſo the daughters of Moab ſhall be at the foords of Arnon] In these words the Prophet foretels them, what will befall them, if they shall not follow the advice before given them, ver. 1.but perish in their rebellion,and refusal to come in:and the things menaced are two especially confusion,and deportation. The words may be rendred; Elſe it ſhall be that as a wandering bird,as a neſt forſaken; the Daughters of Moab ſhall be at the paſſages of Arnon.Or,as Some thus,Or elſe Moab ſhall be as a wandering bird,as a neſt diſmiſſed, and the Daughters of Moab ſhall be at the paſſages of Arnon.

For] Heb. And.As chap.13.8,or,Or; as Gen.2.6. Judg. 11.31. that is,elſe,Other wiſe: as some well render it here.

it ſhall be,that]As chap.7.21.& 11.11.or Moab shall be:as chap. 13.14. Babylon ſhall be.

as a wandering bird]Prov.27.8.that being driven from her nest, hath no place to repair to.See of Babylon, ch. 13.14.Of Ammon, Jer.49. 5.

caſt out of the neſt]Or as a *neſt*that is, a brood, or young ones in a nest.as Deut.32.11.Luk.13.34.) forſaken,(as chap.27.10.to wit, by their dam:having none to protect them)or driven out:or,caſt out:as Exod.12.33.1 King.9.7.See chap.10. 14. And there is in the Hebrew, an elegant allusion to the word of sending,ver.1. as if he had said,Send away your lambs:or elſe your selves shall be like birds ſent out of their neſt, expelled,and driven from the places of your present abode.Job 29.18.

So the daughters of Moab]As,the daughters of Zion, chap.3. 16, 17.and,the Daughters of Jeruſalem, Luk.23.28.that is,the Mo'abitish womentor, as some more generally,the promiscuous multitude of that people. The Jewish doctors understand it of the villages,or lesser Towns, that are as Daughters, to the mother cities: and are in Scripture commonly so styled, Num.21.26,33.& 32.42. But this suits not so well with the tenure of the text:unless we will say,that the people of Moab shal be as wandering birds:and her Towns as a neſt forſaken.But then,why not the great ones,as well, as the less?Of which,chap.15.1.2.

at the fords of Arnon]Or,paſſages(as Josh.2.7.)of Arnon, which bounded their country on the one side,Num.21.13. there shall they be,either flying from the enemy, out of their land, towards the wilderness, Num.21.13.or by the enemy carried captive,beyond the bounds of their country,See v.8. and ch.15.7.

V.3. Take counſel,&c.] The second branch of wholsome advice given the Moabites.for preventing of the judgments denounced against them : the sedulous performance of kind offices to Gods people,in the time of their distresses, wherein they had been much failing,and faulty before, Deut. 23. 3, 4. implying, that had they been careful so to have done,they should not have been now,in the like streights themselves.

Take counſel,execute judgment] Or,call a counſel, (Heb. make a counſel to come:cause a counsel to meet,bring them together:as Pſ. 2.2.)and make a decree,resolve upon a course to be accordingly taken,and put in execution:as chap. 28.7;So Pſal.106.30.Or, as some,deal equally, and uprightly, shew the likeness of Abrahams posterity,as he did to Lot your Ancestor.

make thy ſhadow as the night,in the middeſt of noon-day]Or,at noon-day:as chap.6.12.or,noon-tide,Ier. 20.16.at high-noon,as we use to say. It is a proverbial kind of speech, as one of the Iewish writers well obſerves: whereby God,or men, are said to make midnight,at,or,of noon-day: as on the other side, God is said to make noon-day,of midnight,Pſal.37.6.with 112.4. & 139.11,12. Of some other uses hereof,see chap.59.10. Amos 8.9. Here it is applyed to protection,shelter, refreshment, concealment.The violent and eager persecution of the enemy, is compared to the heat of the sun, at noon-day,that is very grievous to a traveller,or wayfaring man, where no shade,or shelter is to be had, Pſal.121.6.Ion.4. 8.Rev.7. 16.the Iewish people fleeing from it,to such travellers, so distressed:the relief that Moab should have afforded them, to a shade: which is used in Scripture commonly,for protection,shelter,refreshment,concealment,Judg.9.15. Job.32.22. Pſal.17.8.& 91.1 chap. 30.2,3.& 32.2.and the night,being no other then the shadow of the earth interposed between us and the sun: and midnight consequently, the depth of that darkness, caused by the interposition of so vast a body,as the earth is : Hence it comes to pass, that the closest concealment,and the most copious refreshment is here resembled by the making of high-noon, as mid-night. So that in is, as if the prophet had said, after serious consultation, resolve upon some course, whereby ye may afford what shelter ye are able,both for safety,and secrecy,to the distressed Israelites; be both a secure refuge to them, and a comfortable refreshing, See Obad. 14.

hide the out caſts,bewray not him that wandereth]Or,the wanderer but collectively: taken as appears by the former word,being plural, The same in plainer terms,that was before spoken. Harbour, and hide those that are driven from their places of abode,and constrained to wander;lest you your selves undergo the like calamity,v. 2.Luk.6.38.

V.4. Let mine out-caſts] The out-caſts of Iſrael, Pſal. 147. 2. Chap.11.12.& 56.8.For it is spoken in the person, not of the Prophet,but of God requiring this office, as ot duty, in behalf of his people. The out-casts of my people, whom he owneth yet as his, though he had caused them to be driven out of their land, for sins,and excesses,Ezek.11.16.For (I suppose not, as these do)that to be the reason,why he here terms them his out-casts,as being cast out by him,but as whom,though cast out for,yet he accounted, and acknowledged still,as his. See chap. 52.5,6.

dwell with thee]Or, ſojourne with thee.As Ruth.1.1, 2 King.8. 1,2.Harbour ;them for a while.

Moab be thou a covert to them from the face of the ſpoyler] A metaphor, from such places of covert, as beasts use to retire and repair to,when they are hunted,and pursued, So Pſalm 27.5.& 32 7.& 91.1.chap.4. 6. & 32. 2. But who the ſpoyler here spoken of should be,or,when this office was to have bin performed by them, is much questioned.See the next clause:and v.14, for the extortioner] Heb. the milker, or ſucker, or wringer out, Prov.30.33.It is used of the wringing out of milk,by milking, or, sucking.Chap.60.16.& 66.11.of blood,when it is not let out barely,but pressed,and crusht out, Levit.1.15.& 5.9. of water,when it is not suffered to drop,or run out of a cloth,or fleece; but is wrung out,by some force used to it, Judg.6.38.Of drink when not only the liquor,or thinner part of it,or what comes away of it self,is drunk off;but the lees,or thicker pare of it, or what soever remains behind is ſucked out,and so fetched out,that not a drop, as neer as may be,is of ought left,which we usually call a wringing of the pot, or cup,Psalm 73.10.& 75.8,shap.51.17.Ezek.23.34. and it fitly expresseth the nature and practice of an oppressing tyrant, that sucketh and wringeth from the people,over whom he tyrannizeth; not the milk only of their substance,but the blood of their bodies; and leaveth nothing unto them,whereby to subsist.See chap.3. 14. 15.

is at an end]Or,is brought to nought:as ch 29.20,or, ſhall be no more,chap.33.1.

the ſpoyler]One of the Hebrew Doctors makes this word,not in common sense only,but in proper signification also, the same with the former,because the word is used sometime for a Rap,or,a Teat, Job 24.9.Ch.60.16.but there is no place produced where it signifies a ſucker,or a wringer,as the former; but it is used commonly for a plunderer,waſter,or,ſpoyler,Amos 5.9.and for plunder,waſte,or,ſpoyle ch.13.5.&21.4.&59.7, ceaſeth]Or ,is conſumed , is ſpent, is clean gone,as Job 7.9. Pſalm 73. 26. Chapter 15. 6. and 24. 13. or, ſhall be clean gone,as before.

the Oppreſſors]Heb.treader down,or, trampler upon, for the word is singular,as the former,but taken collectively;and the verb therefore plural:or distributively, as if he had said, each one of them, chap.26. 19. a fit expression,to denote a cruel Tyrant, as one that treads men under feet without mercy, Dan. 8. 7.10.Lam.3.34.or that spoyls and makes havock of that which he cannot carry away or make use of; like beasts, that kill more then they can use or devour,Dan.7.7.Mic.5.8. See chap. 15.6 . Howbeit a Jewish commenter,because the word also signifies a creeper, or a worm, Gen.1. 26.30.Pſal.69.34.would have hereby meant beaſts, or noxious and harmful creatures,which are sent oft in judgment upon a Land; See chap. 15.9.but whether he mean properly,or metaphorically so taken ,he tels us not.Such are Tyrants and Oppressors oft compared to in Scripture,Prov.28.15.Ezek.22.27.Zeph.3.3.but the former sence seems the more naturall.

are conſumed out of the land]as Pſal.104.35. or they ſhall be utterly conſumed,there shall be an utter riddance of them out of the Land,to wit,out of Iudah,the land Gods people possessed, For it is commonly conceived,that the scope of the Prophet here, is,to let the Moabites know, that neither the calamities and distresses of Gods people,in regard whereof, the offices before mentioned are in their behalf required of them, shall last long,nor the performance of them, consequently, be over-burdensome unto them:for that Sennacherib with his forces(who by the terms here

mentioned is of the most deemed to be described)should not make any long stay with them, but should be suddenly sent away, and not one of his vast Army left any more to molest them,or to restrain them from returning into their own Country again, chapter 37. 36, 37. But see further hereof, on verse 14.

V.5. And in mercy ſhall the Throne be eſtabliſhed] This is added, to assure the Moabites, that though the Jewish State might seem much impaired and weakned, by means of those calamities before intimated,yet it should be restored to its former strength, and ſtrengthened, again,either by the comming in of Ezekiah, after his Father decease,chap.14.19.2 Kings.18.7. or, by the settling of the Estate again,after Sennacheribs overthrow ,chap.37.17.&37.31.& 38.8. and Moab therefore might do well, to afford them this kindness, that he might expect the like favour again, at their hands the throne] That is,the kingdome; as Pſalm. 45.6.with pſal.145. 13.to wit,of Iudah,or Israel,2 Sam.3. 10. called the Throne of David.Chap.9.7.Jer.17.25.Gods Throne,1 Chron.29.23.as both setled by him,Pſalm 2.6,and a type of his, Dan.7.24, 27.Mic.4.7.Luk.1. 33.

ſhall be eſtabliſhed] Or, ſetled, and restored again to its former strength and lustre.See chapter 2.2.2 Sam.7. 13.& Chr.22.22 23.

in mercy]Or,benignity,or, bounty,Prov.19.22.& 20.6.which some refer to God;by mercy, as it is rendred here, understanding Gods free favour, and goodness:as Pſal.89.33. Chap.54.8.Others to Ezekiah,understanding by it,his kind,and benigne carriage, (opposed here to the cruel courses of oppressors,and tyrants)in relieving, and righting the poor oppressed,Pſal.72.3,6,7,12.14.Prov.16.22.&20. 28.& 29.14.Dan.4.27.

and he ſhall ſit upon it]Or one ſhall ſit upon it:as chap.8.21.& 14. 30.(a Ruler shall not be wanting to it,Pſal.132.11.Jer.33.25,26. Ezekiah a type of Christ,for a time,ch.32.1, Christ himself,for ever,Luk.1.33.

in truth]That is, firmly, ſurely,as having reference to the eſtabliſhment of the throne mentioned.So Prov.11.18.a reward of truth, Prov.30.33.It is used of the wringing out of milk,by milking, or, sucking.Chap.60.16.& 66.11.of blood,when it is not let out barely,but pressed,and crusht out, Levit.1.15.& 5.9. of water,when it is not suffered to drop,or run out of a cloth,or fleece; but is wrung out,by some force used to it, Judg.6.38.Of drink when not only the liquor,or thinner part of it,or what comes away of it self,is drunk off;but the lees,or thicker pare of it, or what soever remains behind is ſucked out,and so fetched out,that not a drop, as neer as may be,is of ought left,which we usually call a wringing of the pot, or cup,Pſalm 73.10.& 75.8,shap.51.17.Ezek.23.34. and it fitly expresseth the nature and practice of an oppressing tyrant, that sucketh and wringeth from the people,over whom he tyrannizeth; not the milk only of their substance,but the blood of their bodies; and leaveth nothing unto them,whereby to subsist.See chap.3. 14. 15.

judging]Or,as Some render it, who ſhall judge: and so after: who ſhall ſeek,and haſten,judging,that is, hearing causes, and deciding them;the special office of Rulers,in regard of their own people, from thence called Judges,Deut.16.18.Judg.4.4.&5.3,10. and so also,Some here render it a judge. Howbeit,to ſit judging,seems here to be mentioned as a note of peaceable times. The ordinary course of judiciary proceedings, being in times of war,and publike disturbance,usually interrupted,and obstructed.So of David,1 Chr. 18.14.

and ſeeking judgment]Or, procuring : as Eſth. 10.3.procuring his peoples good; or, as Some of the Hebrew doctors, not doing justice only to such poor,or other,that appear before him , to crave it,but making enquiry also after such wrongs, as are commited:but concealed and smothered, because the oppressed dare not come to complain,for fear of the power and greatnesse of those that wrong them;that unto such also he may do justice.See Neh.13.10,11. So God is said to make inquiſition for murder, to avenge it,whether it be complained of to him, or no, Pſalm 9. 12. See chapter 1. 17.

and haſtening juſtice]Dispatching and dispeeding causes, without needless delayes,and hastening the execution of it.So a ready Scribe, Ezr.7.6 and,a quick,or,a speedy writer,Pſal.45.1.or, as Some,ſolicitous,or diligent,in the administration of justice:as the word is rendred.Prov.12.29.but that seems implyed in the former branch. See of David,Pſal.25.2.& 101.8.A late learned Annotator would have it rendred,both here,and in those other places, ſhiftful, because the modern Syrians so use the word.But I see,as yet,no necessity of receding from the received version,which suiteth well with the former member.

judgment and juſtice]So of David,2 Sam.8.15.and of Solomon, Pſ.72.1,2.See ch.1. 27.

V.6. we have heard of the pride of Moab(he is very proud) even of his haughtineſs,and his pride, and his wrath] Some suppose these words spoken by the Prophet,in the person of other people,as professing not to wonder at the destruction of Moab, his extream pride, and haughtiness calling for it,and justly deserving no less.Others, as in the person of God,as implying, his taking notice of their insolent and outragious carriages against his people:and so understanding it, the words would be rendred, we have heard, or, do heare

(I know,Jer.48.30.) Moabs pride,and his haughtineſs,and his pride,and his wrath,&c.both his pride,and his wrath.as chap.14.22.that is his rough, and wrathfull carriage toward my people, proceeding from his pride:as threatning the contrary practice of Moab,to that which he was advised unto,ver.1,3,4. together with the ground of it,the pride of his heart, in regard whereof, he scorned so to bow, as to do either of the offices, before mentioned, unto those, whom he so much disdained. Yea we find expresse mention of him, as an assistant to the Chaldees, in their expedition against Iudah and Ierusalem,under Jehoiakim, 2 King.24.2.See Jer.48: 29,30.

but his lyes ſhall not be ſo]Heb.not ſo his lyes, as Job 11. 3.(See chap.44.25.Jer.50.36.)Or, his liverers from a word that signifies to deliver, 1 King. 12. 23.Neh.8.8.Just ſo. An usuall defective form,Gen.48.18.Exod.10.11. Num.12.7.Prov.15. 7.Luk.22.26. Eph.4.20.The meaning is,for all his proud,and swelling thoughts, his vain counsels,false confidences, covert carriages,and cunning devices, shall not take such effect, as in the pride of his heart,he imagineth.So let,48.30.not ſo his lyes,or, vain ſhewes,they ſhall not ſo(that is according to what he conceives)do ought. The Jewish Doctors various interpretations of this clause, I let pass; because they seem too far fetcht,and forced. Only that forementioned late Writer of note, rendereth it,his haughtineſſe,and his pride,and his wrath,are not rightly his barres, they are matters of no might, and in vain for him the reforce to confide in them. The particle is used for Highly, Numb.17.7. 2 King. 9.9. the noun for barres. Exod.25.14.& 27.6. the ſtrength of gates and cities ,Pſalm 147. 13.

V.7. Therefore ſhall Moab howl for Moab]Or, to Moab,as Chap. 65.3.The Moabites shall howl one for another,or one to another, as implying a vicissitude of howling on every side,For to the next branch hath it.

every one ſhall howl]Heb. all of him(to wit,of Moab)ſhall howl, a generall howling there shall be. See chap.13.2.5,8. Ier.40.20. Moab for Moab,or,to Moab:as Egypt againſt Egypt, chap.19.2.and the Lord from the Lord,Gen. 19. 24.and,the Lord with the Lord,2 Thes.1.18 See Jer.48.33.

for the foundations of Kirharaſheth ſhall ye mourn]Or, as Some, of the foundations of it ſhall ye meditate,or,talk.A change of the person as ch.1.6.

the foundations]As Jer.50.15. Ezra.4.12. intimating, that that goodly,and glorious city, was not to be sacked only, but utterly razed,with the very foundations of it, (as Pſ.137.7.)that which none of all the ancient cities of Moab, had escaped in the expedition of the three kings against Moab,2 King.3.25. Howbeit that learned late Writer would have it rendred,for the battles of Kirharaſheth ſhall ye mourn, because the word is so used, Hoſh.3. 1.and those other terms for foundations, he conceiveth to rise from another root:and the words following speak of vines,verſ. 8.

Kirharaſheth]Called also Kir,chap.13.1.and Kir-heres,hereafter ver.11.and signifieth,in all likelihood, the city of the ſun, (as by the Greeks,Ou, in Egypt,Gen.41.50.is called Heliopolis,and Bethſhemiſh among the Iews,2 King.14.11,13.the houſe,or the Temple of the ſun,so named,by ancient idolatrous inhabitants) being so called,because the ſun was in a more special manner there worshiped. Some stately Temple being there erected unto it;which in Scripture it is sometime by a forraign term,as some suppose,) called, Heres,or,Cheres,or,Heſ-ſah,or Cheſ-ſha, Judg.8.13.& 14.18. Job 9.7.Howbeit,Some there are, that would have it so termed, from a word that signifies an earthen pot,or,a potſherd, Levit. 15.12. Job 2.8.Pſal.22.15.chap.30.14.& 48.9.Jer. 19.1.& 32.14.in regard of a number of Potters there resiant,and of the curious earthen ware, there madetor, because the walls of it were built of brick, hardened in the sun,as were the walls of Babel, Gen.11. 3.and of those cities,that the Hebrews built for Pharao in Egypt, Exod.1.11.14. because stone,in those low and moist places, was not so plentiful. But the former seems more probable. See chap. 19.18. and Ier. 15.2.

ye ſhall be mourn]Or,mutter in a mournful manner.See chap.8. 19. So chap,38.14.& 59.11.Howbeit,Some render it, ye ſhall meditate, entertain thoughts of that strong city,as a place for you,to retire unto,as a city of refuge;hoping that that strong piece had yet escaped,as formerly it did,2 King.3,25.and others,ye ſhall ſpeak: of it,or talk,and say of it,as followeth:and the word indeed, doth very commonly import meditation,and ſpeech,or communication from thence proceeding, Josh.1.8.Pſalm.1,2.& 2.1. Job 27.2. chap 33.18. & 59.13.But the reading that our Translators, with other Interpreters of good note,here agree in, seems most consonant to the Prophets purpose;and the word is by him, more then once, elsewhere,so used. Yea,and so some of those, who yet otherwise here expound it,render it,Jer.48.31.a place parallel to this.

ſurely they are ſtricken]or, as Some of those that maintain the latter exposition of the former word;but they are contrite,or deſtroyed,as the words of the Prophet, implying a frustration of their hopes,and expectation of any reliefe there;the very, foundation of that city being utterly ruined. But we need not alter our version in that behalf.The particle is used for a note of asseveration, or confirmation,ſurely,1 Sam.25.31. 1 King. 22.32.Yet instead of stricken, I should rather render it, either lamed, (as the word is used of a lame person, 1 Sam.4.4. & 9, 3.) and unable therefore to sustain their superstructures; or, broken, or, bruised; or (if our English word of a wall of stone-work, or brick-work, would bear it) contrite; as of mans spirit, or mind, it is rendred, chap. 66. 2. instead whereof is used, ch.57.15. a spirit broken, or, broken, or, ground to dust, or powder. Some make them the words of the Moabites, speaking so of them. Others, of the Prophet, importing the cause of their mourning so for that city. So some make, that understandeth the place of bottels; they are broken.

V.8. For the, &c.] Or, Moreover: Or, Also: as chap.15.9.& 32. 13 For the Prophet goeth on in relating the grounds and causes of their mourning, to wit, not the razing of the cities, only; but the spoyl, and waste of the whole land, and countrey about them: as 2 King.3.19.ch.1.7.

the fields] Or, as Some, the vines: because they suppose it so to be taken, and is by divers so rendred, Deut. 32. 32. but thereof there is no necessity, either here, or there. By collation of places, it is justly deemed to signifie fields, not lying waste; but managed; and either tilled for grain, or set with fruitful and useful plants. See 1 King.13.4.Jer.31.4.2. Hab.3.17. in which last place, fields, and vines, are distinct.

of Heshbon] Of this City, see chap. 15. 4. it seems from hence to have been seated in a fat, and fertile soyl. See Cant. 7.4.

languish] A metaphor taken from persons so over-mastered, and quailed, through infirmity, or fear, that they are ready to faint away, with qualmes, and feeblenesse of spirit, Joth.4.3. Neh.4.2.1 Sam.2.5. Psal 6.2. chap.19.8. and it is applyed to plants, chap.24.7. Joel 1. 10. to lands, chap.24.4.& 33.9. Nah.1.4. when their goodly beauty, wealth, fruits, crop, and verdure, is all wasted, and gone; to Towns, and Cities, when decayed, and destroyed, Jer.14.2. Lam.2. 8. the word here used is singular; though the word foregoing it, and conjoyned with it, plural; to denote a general waste of their fields; as if he had said, the fields, each of them languisheth; the very same manner of construction is, Hab.3.17.

and] A defect of the copulative tas ch.14.5.& 15.1. Hab.3.11. or, it may be rendred; as for the vine, &c.as 1 Chr.28.2.

the vine] For vines: as Chap.7.23. & 24.7. to wit, they do likewise languish. Howbeit, Some by vine, or vineyard, understand here, the city it self; so termed in allusion to the vineyards round about it.

of Sibmah] A city sometime taken from the Amorites, and re-edified by the Reubenites, Num.32.38. unto whom also it was assigned, for part of their possession, 13.10. See the note on c.15.2. it seems hence to have been a place of note, for special good wine, which the vineyards about it yeelded.

the Lords of the heathen] Or, of the Nations. The great Commanders of the enemies forces, whether Assyrians, or Chaldeans, and other their associates.

have broken down] Or, beaten down: as Pf.74.6.

the principal plants thereof] her choiseſt plants. Of the term here used, see on Chap.5.2. & 19.9. they have utterly wasted it; for the meaning is not, that they had picked out the choyce plants, and left the residue; but that her plants and vines were generally such; though there want not, that expound the words metaphorically, for the persons of note, and name, abiding in those parts. The whole sentence may well thus be rendred; Those choyse plants of the vine of Sibmah, have the lords of the Nations broken down; for the pronoun is commonly in such constructions, superfluous, save that the use of that language, as a kind of elegancy, admitteth it. So Gen.2. 17.ch.8.13.& 45.9.

they are come even unto Jazer] Or, which reached, (Heb. touched: as Ier.48.32. & 51.9. Mic.1.9.) even unto Jazer: a defect of the relative; as Gen.39. 4. Exod.13.8. ch.41.5. This some understand of the men led away into captivity, and of the waste of the country, carried away out of the land by the enemy, 15.7. Others so ther, of the large extent of the vines; and vineyards growing in those parts, reaching for many miles along, even unto Jazer, a Town situate in the confines of Moab, deemed to be that, belonging to the Tribe of Dan, whereof mention is made, Josh. 21.39.

they wandred through the wilderneſſe] Or, that, (as before) or, and (as ch.14.5.6.) wandred, (that is, winded to and fro; as in wandring to and fro, men are wont to do, untill they reached) to the wilderneſs; to wit, of Moab, Deut. 2.8. ver.1. A defect of the particle, from the former branch to be supplyed.

her branches were ſtretched out] Or, spread abroad. So is the verb used, Num.11.32. Judg.15. 9. 1 Sam.30.16. 2 Sam.5.18,22. Some render it, pluckt up; or pluckt off, and diſſipated, broken, off, and scattered here and there: alleadging, Chap. 33.23. to that purpose; whereof see there. But from the signification of spreading, or stretching out comes the word, used by Ieremy, in this argument, Ier.48. 32. and answering that other word, used by the Prophet here, and no where else in Scripture found, for branches, so termed from shooting out here, as from spreading out, there. See Ezek. 17.6, 7.

they are gone over the ſea] That is, carryed away beyond sea. So most Interpreters; supposing the meaning to be, that all the Moabites wealth (which consisted most, say some of them, in their vines, and their wines, whereof they had great plenty) was carried away out of their country, together with a great part of their people, into a land, far remote from theirs. See chap.15.7. But the words may well, and (as I suppose, with some other) might better be rendred, they passed over to the Sea, (as chap.8.8.& 10.28. Jer.2.10.) that is, to, the dead Sea, the lake of Sodome; whereon Moab bordered. See chap.15.5. or, the Sea of Jazer; as it is, Jer. 48. 32. which some make divers from this. See further hereof, on Jeremy. For they may well be deemed to shoot wide, who, by the Sea, would have here understood, either the Assyrian river; or the Mediterranean-Sea. Mean while, I incline to the latter interpretation of this paſſage; to wit, that not a far deportation of mens persons, or of their goods, and chattels; but a large propagation, and extension of branches, seems here to be delineated. See the very like to this, Pſ.80.9-12. and the very same; but contracted with this, Ier.48.32. both relating the former flourishing condition of the places there mentioned, to move unto commiseration, and to make the lamentation, for their present desolation, the more grievous.

V.9. Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer, the vine of Sibmah] Of this see Chap.15.5. and ver. 11. Among those that thus read and render the words, there is some doubt moved, what the weeping of Jazer should be. And some of them would hence gather, that Jazer was sacked, and ruined, before either Sibmah, or the rest, hereafter mentioned. And so the meaning should be, that he should lament the destruction of these latter, in the same manner as that other had been lamented before. But the words are, by others, diverſly rendred. Some read them, I will bewail the weeping of Jazer: the weeping (supplyed out of the former branch) Of the vine of Sibmah: That is, I will bewail the miseries of them both; or, I will bewail them, as their inhabitants did, when either of them were destroyed. And some again, I will bewail the weeping (that is, the calamity) of Jazer, and the vine of Sibmah. But these take no notice of the particle, which in these forms hath his peculiar sense, and ought not to be disregarded. The words therefore, to avoid all ambiguity, would be thus rendred; I will with weeping bewail (that is, very grievously bewail: as chap. 15. 5.) Jazer and the vine of Sibmah. And this reading, the points in the text confirm, which stay the voyce at, weeping; (for the article answering our the, is not here.) Of the defect of the copulative, see chap.15.1.2. and both of it, the places mentioned, and the occasion of mourning for them, see ver. 8. See also further hereof, on Jer.48.32.

I will water thee with my tears, O Heſhbon, and Elealeh] I will pour down streams of tears upon thee; as the Pſalmiſt, I water my couch with my tears, Pſ.6.6. See also Pſ.119. 136. Jer.9. 1. And there may be some allusion herein, to the famous fishpools at Heshbon, mentioned, Cant.7.4. as if he should say, the should not want his tears to water her, though the had water otherwise in abundance. Both of it, and of Elealeh, which it seems stood not far from it. See on ch.15.4.

for the ſhouting for thy ſummer-fruits, and for thy harveſt is fallen] Or, over thy ſummer-fruits, and over thy harveſt. Such singing and shouting, as those were wont to use, that did reap their corn in harvest, or did cut, and tread their grapes at vintage, either to pass the time with, while they were in work, or to encourage one another, unto work, ver. 10. Jer.25.30. Or the shoutings, and acclamations, that in mirth and sport they used to make, at the bringing in, and housing of their corn, and fruits, their harveſt and vintage, chap.9. 3. shall fail and cease; none such shall be, because no vintage, no harvest, no reaping, no cutting, no bringing in, or housing of oughts the enemy having spoyled, and made havock of all, chap.15.6. ver. 10. Howbeit, some understand it of the enemies shout, and that way most of the Jewish writers go, rendring the words, Because upon thy ſummer-fruits, and upon thine harveſt is a ſhout, or an alarme fallen: that is, because the enemy with a shout, such as is commonly used for encouragement, in joyning of fight in the field; or in way of jollity and triumph, at the surprizal of some place, hath suddenly fallen in upon thy fields and vineyards, to make spoil and havock of whatsoever is found in them. So is the word used, Ier. 51.14. See Ier. 48.32. where instead of the ſhout, it is said, The ſpoyler is fallen upon thy ſummer fruits, and thy harveſt: which confirms the latter sense. And Amos.2.2. ſummer-fruits] Heb. ſummer, Gen.8.22. So 2 Sam.16.1. as harveſt, for crop: and so Chap.17.11.

V. 10. And gladneſs is taken away, and joy out of the plentifull field] Heb. And joy and gladneſs is gathered up out of the carmel. That joy and mirth, that in harvest time they had wont to have upon the return of a plentifull crop, after their fore-going labours, and pains taken in tilling their grounds, Pſ.4.7. & 125.5,6. ch.9.3. & 24. 8. See Ier.48.33.

is taken away] Heb. is gathered up, or, gathered in, Chap, 11. 12. & 10. 14.& 17.5.& 62.9. But the word signifies also, taken away, Ier. 8.13.& 10.17.& 16.5. And it seems here used, with some glance, at the gathering of their harveſt, and the mirth then expected; as if he had said, Your harveſt, and your harveſt-mirth, is all gathered in, before hand, for you. It is all gone, ere you can come to gather it your selves. See ch.57.1.

and in the vineyards, there ſhall be no ſinging, neither ſhall there be ſhouting] ſhouting] Or, in the vineyard, ſhall be neither ſinging, nor ſhouting. No merry note, nor joyfull noiſe, (for such the words, here used import, ch.12.6. Ezr.3.11.) the matter, and occasion thereof, being gone.

the treaders ſhall tread out no wine in their preſſes] Heb. treader; (but collectively put for treaders; as Chap. 63. 2.) and the preſſes; to wit, of the Moabites. They trode out, as at this day, their grapes, not in such presses, as we use now for Sider and Verjuice, with weights and screws; but in open vessels, or fats, with their feet, Judg. 9.27. Neh. 13. 15. and the treaders (Job 24. 11.) used to chant merrily, as they trod, when they tasted the swee: liquor, Jer. 25.30. and 48.33.

I have made their vintage ſhouting to ceaſe] Heb. the ſhout. I have stilled their merry mouth, partly; by taking away the ground and cause of it; and partly, by sending in upon them a sad shout, in the room of it. See Ier. 48.33. Howbeit, some interpreters of note, understand this, as spoken in the person of the Moabites, forbidding any such shout, to be used, which they could not endure to hear. But this seems not so consonant to the parallel place in Jeremy, before cited, where it is conceived, as spoken by God. See Ier. 48. 33,35.

V.11. wherefore my bowels ſhall ſound like an harp for Moab] Out of tender pitty and compassion to Moab, whose miseries are so great and grievous, that they may well move an utter enemy to commiserate his condition; I will make doleful lamentation, such as is wont to be made with mournfull kinds of musick over the dead laid out, and at burials, Ier.9.17--20. Matth.9.23. Or, my bowels, upon the very apprehension of it, as rolling together, tumble, and make a noise within me, as the strings of an harp found; when they are struck with the finger of him that playeth on it. So ch.63.15. Lam. 1. 20. Hoſ. 11. 8. See ch.15.5. ver.9.

and my inward parts] Heb. the midſt of me. That is, my heart, Pſ. 22. 14.& 62. 4. My heart is troubled for him. His misery, and calamity goeth to the very heart, with me; and makes my heart beat within me; Pſ.38.11. Jer.4.19. Lam.1.20.

for Kirharaſh] See ch.15.1. ver. 7. All this would some have spoken in the person, not of the Prophet himself, but of the Moabites, whole confidence was most, of any place, in Kirheres, which they saw now, with all the country about it, wasted and ruined. But the collation of this paſſage, with Jer. 48. 36. seems to infer the contrary.

V. 12. And it ſhall come to paſſe when it is ſeen, that Moab is weary on the high place, that he ſhall come to his Sanctuary to pray] Or, it ſhall come to paſs, (Heb. it ſhall be; as Chap. 14. 3.) or, it ſhall come to paſs, that (as chap. 10. 20.) though (as Chap. 1. 15.) Moab preſent himſelf, (Heb. be ſeen; as Chap. 1. 12.) though he tire himſelf on his high place, and come to his Sanctuary to pray. The courses are here described, that Moab should, or might in this his distress take, to get relief and succour, against the enemy invading him, by repairing to his high places, and idol-temples, and tyring himself out in his superstitious services, and all to no purpose.

Moab] Either the Prince thereof, or the people, Chapter 15. 2.

is weary] Or, tire himſelf; as Chap. 47. 13. Either with running to and fro, from place to place; or by multitudes of sacrifices offered one after another, as he did when he desired to have Gods people cutted, Num.22.39,40,41.& 23. 2, 14,27,30.

on the high place] Put collectively for high places, Or, some place peculiarly so teamed; as Ezek.20. 29. See ch.15.2.

his Sanctuary] Abusively so teamed. The temple of his chief idol Chemosh, 1 King. 11.7. Jer.48.46. which was to that idolatrous nation, as the tabernacle and temple were to Gods people, Exod.25.8. 2 Chr.20,8. Pſ.78.69.

but he ſhall not prevail] Heb. and; as Chap. 13.18. Or, that; (as Chap.13.2.) or, yet; as Chap.17. 6. He ſhall not prevail. Heb. He ſhall not be able. But fo the word is used, Num.22.6,11. Hoſ.12. 4. His god shall not be able to do him any good. Though we need not, as some, insert that into the text. For the Pronoun here hath reference to Moab, before expresly named, not to his idol, not mentioned. See Chap. 46. 7. Jer.48. 13. As for that, which some would have here intended; that he should not be able to reach thither, the enemy either intercepting him, or having already surprized the place where his Idol-temple stood, seems not so well to accord with the rest of the context, whether of the two waies, before propounded, we read it.

V. 13. This is the word that the Lord hath ſpoken concerning Moab, ſince that time] The conclusion of this sad Sermon, or Prophecy against Moab. Not unlike that, wherewith the burthen of Babel is concluded and consigned, Chap.14.26. intimating this doom, concerning the utter destruction of Moab, to be a doom irrecoverable, passed, formerly, with God, and revealed to the Prophet: for the stronger confirmation whereof, there is somewhat further now added, ver.14.

This] That which I have delivered concerning the land, and State of Moab, hitherto related. See the like close, Jer.48.47.

the word] The doom, or sentence; as 2 King. 9. 36. Jeremy renders it, judgment.

concerning Moab] Or, against Moab. Heb. unto; as Jer. 48. 1. & 49.1.

ſince that time] Heb. from then. Or, ſince then; as Pſal. 93. 2. Prov. 8. 23. chap. 44. 8. & 48. 3,5. Now by this form of speech here, some conceive no certain time to be understood; and therefore render it, before time: heretofore: of old; or, from eternity. And so in some of the places pointed to, it seems to be taken. Others suppose that some certain time is thereby designed. Some the time present, and render it, from this time; as also the first words of the next verse, even now; as an exposition of this clause. But most, some time past: (as indeed, the constant and general use of the phrase, requires it) either the time when Balak hired Balaam to curse Israel, Num. 22, 5, 6. Or, the time when God enacted that law against the Moabites, inhibiting the receit of them into communion with his people, Deut. 23. 3, 4. Or when being subdued by David, they became tributary to the Crown of Israel, 2 Sam. 8.2. or since their revolt from it, 2 King. 3. 4, 5. or, when their destruction was foretold by Amos, in the reign of Uzziah, Amos, 1. 1. & 2.1-3. or lastly, from the time that this judgment, past upon Moab, was first revealed to the Prophet; that which followeth, ver. 14. being afterward added thereunto. The like whereunto, See Jer. 36. 32. And of all these, the last seems to me the most likely to be intended; though the words would be rendred, as they found, indefinitely, heretofore, or, ſometime ſince, without restriction, or limitation.

V. 14. But now the Lord hath ſpoken, ſaying] The Lord hath now added somewhat further, to what he had formerly denounced against Moab; to wit, concerning a fore-going judgment to be shortly inflicted upon him, before, and besides that utter destruction, before mentioned; together with the time prefixed, and limited, for the execution of the same.

within three years] About these three years, there is much dissension among Interpreters. Some would have the words read, not within three years; but in, or, for three years. Expounding them, not, as setting a time, at which this misery of Moab should begin, or from whence it should commence; but importing onely, whensoever it began, how long it should continue. That it should not last long, as Babels, before, Chap. 13. 19--22. it should not exceed a three years term. But this Interpretation, hath but few followers: and other places, parallel to this, as Chap. 7. 8. & 21. 16. (though a little difference there be in the particles used there, and here) carry it, rather, the other way, to wit, as designing a certain time, when this calamity should befall Moab. But among those also, that go this way, there is no small difference about the time therein designed. For some would have these three years, to commence from the destruction of Jerusalem, by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 25.4--10. Their reasons are these: First, Esay and Jeremy, prophesie of one and the same destruction of Moab; for Jeremy useth many words and sentences, the very same with Esay. Secondly, Jeremy saith that Moab had not been stirred to any purpose nor captived till then, Jer. 48. 11. Thirdly, Josephus relateth, in his Antiquities, lib. 10. cap. 11. That three years after the destruction of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar invaded the Moabites. But to this it may be answered: First, That though Esay, and Jeremy, use many the same terms, and that of the devastation of one and the same land; yet it followeth not necessarily thence, that they speak of the same time; yea, or the same particular destruction: In the Book of the revelations are many forms and expressions borrowed from the writings of the ancient Prophets, yet applied unto the stories of other times, then those whereof those former Prophets spake. Secondly, it appears that Moab had been dispossessed of much of his land; not onely before the times that Jeremy points at; but long before the times that Esay lived in: See Num. 21. 26--30. Jeremies words imply onely, that he had been long at rest, before the overthrow then denounced; nor had endured, and undergon such a general deportation, as either the ten tribes, or the other two of Gods people had done. Thirdly, Josephus saith not, that three year, but that five year, after the fall of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar invaded Celosyria, and after that subdued, fet upon the Moabites, and Ammonites, and made a conquest also of them. And lastly, (though it were granted, as I suppose it well may be) that the fore-going Prophecy of Moabs utter devastation, was by Nebuchadnezzar to be accomplished; yet could it not be necessarily thence inferred, that the three years, here mentioned, might not commence from a nearer tearm, then the times of Nebuchadnezzar. There is no necessity therefore of drawing the period of these three years, so low: nor is there ought to countenance such a vast divulsion of them, from the time of the delivery of this Prophecy. Whereunto other, with better ground of reason, reduce them; though they also are at much disagreement among themselves. For some would have them to commence from the first year of Ezekiah; supposing this prophecy to be of the same date, with the next before it, denounced against the Philistines, Chap. 14. 28. and that Salmanesser in the fourth year of Ezekiah, when he came to besiege Samaria, 2 King. 18. 9. took the Moabites land in his way. But this seems not so well to fort with the advice given to Moab, by the Prophet, for the prevention of this judgment; to succour, and harbour Gods people driven out of their country, ver. 3, 4. there being no occasion given, of shewing any such kind office to Gods people, during the three, or four first years of Ezekiah's reign. Others therefore, drawing down these years a little lower, suppose this Prophecy delivered in the fourth Year of Ezekiah, what time Salmanesser fate down before Samaria, which having taken, after three years siege, 2 King. 18. 9, 10. he then fell, as they suppose, upon the Moabites. And this might then fell, as they suppose, upon the Moabites. And this might carry with it a little more probability, then the former; because many, out of the ten tribes, might seek relief and shelter among the Moabites, in that Assyrian invasion. But it is deemed rather, that they were of the Jewish people more peculiarly so termed: in the behalf of whom, those offices are required by the Prophet. Otherstherefore, go yet lower. Some fixing the date of this Prophecy, much about the eleventh year of Ezekiah's reign, in whose fourteenth, Sennacherib came up against Judah; 2 King. 18. 13. and withal executed on Moab, what was here denounced against it. So, the three years should come about, just together, with Sennacheribs invasion of Judah. But this opinion labouring of the same difficulty with the former; some to salve it, make them to commence from Sennacheribs siege of Jerusalem, three year after, which, they imagine that Sennacherib invaded Moab; deservedly spoiled and plundered, through Gods just judgment by him, for their harsh and unkind carriage toward his people, that had sought shelter among them, when their own countrey had been not long before over-run by him. And this indeed might well suit with that, which was from that paſſage of this Prophecy, objected against the former. But there is another difficulty arising here, instead of that hereby removed. For Sennacherib, by that blow given him, while he was minding, and attempting the siege, rather, then besieging, as yet, of Jerusalem, was so weakned and disheartned, that there is little probability, that ever he attempted ought that way again; especially being so soon after it, cut off by the hands of his own sons, ch. 37. 37, 38. Amidst these differing opinions, concerning this place, I shall crave leave to deliver my conjecture, concurring much with the last; but supposing the judgment, here denounced against Moab, which these three years relate unto, to have been executed, Neither by Nebuchadnezzar, (albeit the utter devastation of Moab, before denounced, were by him to be effected) nor by Salmanesser, nor by Sennacherib; but by his son and successour, Esar-haddon: who after his fathers decease, having recovered some strength, it is not unlikely, but that he might again make towards those parts, and invade some of the neighbouring States, and Moab, in particular; expecting some opportunity to be dealing with Judah, in revenge of his fathers quarrel. Which albeit, warned by his fathers defeat, he durſt not attempt, during the reign of Ezekiah; yet after his decease, in Manasses his successours reign, he did; when also, the better to clear his way thereunto, he swept away the remainders of Israel and Samaria; as was before shewed, on Chap. 7. 8. from Ezr. 4. 2, I conceive therefore this prophecy to have been delivered about the fourteenth, or fifteenth year of Ezekiah; and that, in particular, which is in this last verse denounced, to have taken effect, about the eighteenth, or nineteenth year of his reign, being put in execution, by the Assyrian king Esar-haddon. To expreſs my mind herein more fully; I suppose that the utter destruction of Moab, here before denounced, and by Jeremy, long after seconded, to have been executed by Nebuchadnezzar. But as the Lord useth sometime to give assurance of the complement of some prophecies, of longer date, by some other predition of a nearer tearm; (whereof see ch. 7. 8, 16. & 8. 4. & 14. 25. Jer. 28. 16, 17.) in like manner he seems to me, here to have done. For, having in the fore-going Prophecy, threatned the utter ruin of the Moabitish-State, which was many years after to be effected; he doth here, to give the stronger assurance of the complement of the same, fore-tell that within three years after the promulgation of this prophecy, the State of Moab, by the Assyrian King, Esar-haddon, should exceedingly be impoverished, and empaired. That which being then affected, though at present, it may be, little expected, might help, to confirm the truth of the former denunciation, though not so speedily to take effect.

as the years of an hireling] That is, three years precisely. Because hired servants are wont to keep a precise account of the time and tearm of years, for which they are hired; the expiration whereof, also, they are wont earnestly to expect, Job. 7. 1. 2. & 14. 5. so ch. 21. 16. For, as for that which the Jewish writers, and some others, would from this place compared with Deut. 15. 18. Collect, that the Jews, either might not, or used not to hire any for above three years; neither doth that place of Moses, necessarily, prove any such matter; and that the phrase, here used, implyes nothing less, may hereby appear, in that it is there also used, where mention is made onely of one year, Chapter 21. 16. See further there.

and the glory of Moab shall be contemned] Or, it shall come to pass, that (as chap. 14. 3, 4.) the glory of Moab shall become mean, of light esteem, or of no reputa: as 1 Sam. 18. 23. opposed to honourable Chap. 3. 5. and there is in the words an elegant notion, though such, as cannot so well be expressed in our language; for the word glory, in Hebrew, hath an inclination of weight in it: alluded to, by the Apostle, when he saith, a weight of glory, 2 Cor. 4. 18. and the latter word of contempt; hath affinity with that, which signifies, lightness, 1 Sam. 18. 26. chap. 49. 6. And they are both used promiscuously, Num. 21. 6. Job 40. 4. Nah. 1. 14. So that it is, as if he had said, the great weight, that Moab now beareth, shall then become light. He that weighs down so much now, shall then bear no weight, but flye up in the ballance. For the metaphor is taken from moneys, or wares, brought to the beam to be weighed; as in payment, and sale, they used to be. See Jer. 32. 9. Hos. 12. 7. So Psal. 62. 9. Dan. 5. 27. The like elegancy is found, 1 Sam. 2. 30. And not unlike it, is that which Luke hath, where he saith of the Apostles, that they went from the consistory, where they had been ill entreated, rejoycing that they had been so much honoured, or, graced; as to be dishonoured, or, disgraced for Christ, Act. 5. 41. for so the words there run.

with all that great multitude] Or, with all that multitude, (whereof the now so much glorieth; and wherein he so much prides himself, ver. 6. the glory of a State consisting in the multitude of people, Prov. 14. 28.) that is great, or, that is now so great. For so the article redoubled ought to be, and is sometime, rendredias chap. 15. 16. which not observed, lesseneth the emphasis of it. See 2 Chr. 20. 12, 15. See Jer. 32. 18. A late Writer rendereth it, with all his much abundance, or, great wealth, or, his glory consisting in the great abundance of his wealth. See chap. 5. 13, 14.

and the remnant] Or, so that the remnant as ch. 10. 19) that shall be left of that multitude before so great. See ch. 10. 22.

shall be very small] Heb. little small. The notion redoubled, though in two different terms, to intimate, the great paucity that should be left of them. So chap. 10. 23. See chap. 24. 6.

and feeble] Heb. not many: as the margent hath it: or, as others, not mighty. See Chap. 10. 13. few in regard of what they had been; the copulative is wanting: as chap. 14. 5. & 15. 1. The meaning is, that Moab should be brought very low; and his main multitude much diminished.

CHAP. XVII.

Vers. 1. THE burden of Damascus] Another heavy, and sad sermon or Prophecy, called therefore a burden (of which term, see Chap. 13. 1.) is in the former part of this Chapter (or the three last verses are of a diverse subject) related, concerning Damascus the head city of the Syrians, Ch. 7. 8, who had been from time to time fore enemies to, and grievous vexers of Gods people, on whose country they bordered East-ward, 2 King. 13. 17. See Judg. 3. 8. 2. Sam. 8. 3, 5. 1 King. 11. 24, 25. & 15. 20. & 20. 1. 2 King. 6. 24, 25. & 8. 12, 13. & 12. 17, 18. & 13. 22. & 15. 37. & 16. 5. & 24. 2. Chap. 7. 1, 5, 6. & 9. 12. The like burdensome Prophecies against Damascus, see ch. 49. 23. Amos 1. 2. Zach. 9. 1.

Damascus] Heb. Dammesek, Gen. 14. 15. and sometime also, Darmesek, 1 Chr. 18. 5. (as Nebuchadnezer, for Nebuchadnetzer, Jer. 21. 2.) and so the Syrian calls it Darmesak, Act. 9. 2. Some of the Jewish Doctors would have it so called because Abel was there slain, and the ground there drank in his blood, Gen. 4. 11. Others, Because Adam was there made out of the earth, the mould thereabout, being of a ruddy kind of clay, apt to be moulded into any shape, such as his body was framed of, Gen. 2. 7. Others would have it so named, as a sack, or bag of blood, from the abundance of rich wine, that the country thereabout yeelded, called the blood of the grape, Gen. 49. 11. Deut. 32. 14. Whence the heathen also feigned, that their drunken God lay hid there, sometime, in a bottle. But these are meer fictions and fables. It is most likely, that the city had its name from the first founder of it; yet not Eleazar Abrahams servant, as some have supposed; who is said to have been of Damascus, Gen. 15. 2. as descended from parents, inhabitants of that city; and in all likelihood born, not in Abrahams house, but there: Beside, that the city had been built; and bare that name before that time, though how long, uncertain, as appears by the story of Abrahams pursuit of those Kings, that came against Sodome, Gen. 14 15. Being the chief city of Syria, it is put here for the whole country. ver. 3. as Samaria, for the land of the ten tribes, 1 King. 13. 32.

Behold] This note of attention, and consideration, is prefixed, partly to intimate the improbability of that which he was to deliver concerning the ruine of Damascus, in the conceit of those, that apprehended the Syrian principality, as a State, not like suddenly, or easily to be conquered, and that city, as an impregnable peece; and partly to give assurance of the certain accomplishment thereof, whatsoever conceits men might have, either of the impossibility, or improbability of it. See ch. 3. 1. & 7. 14.

Damascus is taken away] This was effected, partly by Tiglath-Pileser, who took it, and sacked it, 2 King. 16. 9. but more fully afterward, as some suppose, by Salmanesser, after he had taken Samaria; as others by Nebuchadnezzar, after the destuction of Jerusalem, Jer. 49. 23.

from being a city] Heb. from a city: as 1 Sam. 15. 22. from a King; for from being a Jer. 48. 2. from a Nation, that is, from being a nation. It is so ruined, that it shall be no longer a city.

and it shall be a ruinous heap] Or, but (as chap. 16. 12.) it is become (for the Prophet speaks in the Prophetical strain, as of a thing already done. So chap. 15. 1.) Heb. an heap of ruine. See the like, Psal. 79. 1. Chap. 25. 2. & 37. 26. Jer. 26. 17. Mic. 1. 6. & 3. 12. There is in the original, an elegancy in the terms of city, and heap, the latter wanting but one letter of the former; and the Prophet using a word here, not else-where found in that form, to bring it up home to the former word, with the particle prefixed to it.

V. 2.

V. 2. The cities of Aroer are forsaken] The cities situate in that whole tract, beyond Jordan, along by the brink, or neer to the banks of Arnon, Deut. 2. 36. & 3. 12. the ancient possession of the Amorites, Josh. 12. 2. but held afterward by the Reubenites, and again, by neighbouring people, the Moabites one while, the Ammonites another, Judg. 11. 26, 33. and the Syrians another while, 2 King. 10. 33. & 14. 22. and 16. 6. Jer. 48. 19. Now hence some of the Rabbines would gather three Aroers, one belonging to the Moabites, Josh. 13. 16. Jer. 48. 6, 20. another belonging to the Ammonites, Josh. 13. 25. a third in Syria, here mentioned: but some others, to take that conceit away, say rather and better, that Aroer coasting along upon the river Arnon, lay on the confines of Moab and Ammon; and was held sometime by the one, and sometime by the other; and at this time by the Syrians: and after by the Assyrians; as in the next note. For as for that Jewish Doctor, that would by Aroer, have Damascus it self here meant; so called, because it was to be as Aroer, Jer. 17. 5. or as Aroer, Jer. 48. 6. in the wilderness; Of which term, see on those places; it is by the generality of them justly rejected.

forsaken] The Inhabitants of them (whether Syrians, or Israelites who were in confederacy with them) being expelled, and carried away captive by Tiglath-Pileser, the King of Assyria, 1 Chr. 5. 8, 26. See chap. 16. 12.

and shall be for flocks] The Hebrew word comprehends as well herds of greater cattle, as flocks of less; as appeareth, Gen. 32. 15-17. cattle shall graze freely, where Towns, and Cities before stood. ch. 32. 14. Zeph. 2. 14.

which shall lye down] Heb. and they shall lye down: as ch. 4. 6.

and none shall make them afraid] Heb. none shall be frighting. They shall rest quietly there, the country being so depopulated, that there shall be none to disturb them, or chase them away: A defect of the pronoun, in such speeches frequent, Levit. 26. 6. Deut. 28. 26. Job 11. 19. Jer. 7. 33. & 30. 10. & 46. 27. Ezek. 34. 28. & 39. 26. Mic. 4. 4. Nah. 2. 12. Zeph. 3. 13.

V. 3. The fortress also shall cease from Ephraim] That is, from the ten Tribes. See Chap. 7. 2. Their fortresses (for the word is collective; as Amos 5. 9.) shall not be able to hold out against the enemy; but they shall be surprized, slighted, and dismantled by him. Heb. they shall have their sabbath, or time of cessation, and rest: as Levit. 26. 43. Now the ten tribes are here mentioned, and threatned together with the Syrians, Ephraim and Damascus together; not so much, as some Interpreters would have it, either to give the Syrians to understand, that if God spared not his own people, he would much less spare them: as Ier. 25. 29. or because that Samaria was first to be destroyed by Salmanesser; and thereby the Syrians might know what should in the next place betide them; but because they were linkt together in a joynt confederacy against Judah, and the ruine of them both, therefore, by the King of Assyria, is, as in some former Prophecie, so here again joyntly foretold. See ch. 7. 1, 5, 6, 8, 9. 16. & 8. 4. as also 2. King. 15. 29. & 16. 5, 9. The time therefore of this Prophecy seems mistaken by those, who suppose it to have been delivered after the death of Ahaz, about the second, or third year of the reign of Ezekiah: as if that date of the Prophecy against the Philistines, ch. 14. 28. did relate, not to that alone, but to the other also ensuing Sermons: or, that those, that follow it, in the book here, upon record, must of necessity follow it, in course of time also. See ch. 1. 1, 2. and the Kingdome from Damascus] Damascus shall no longer be a royal city; nor Syria a Kingdome; but a Province. So Ezek. 30. 18. and 33. 28.

and the remnant of Syria] Heb. Aram. So Chap. 7. 1. either, and from the remnant of Syria; as intimating, that such of them, as remained, should have no royal power left among them, their King being slain, and none to succeed in his stead, 2 King. 6. 9. or, the sentence being continued, and this branch joyned (as it may well) to that which followeth.

the remnant of Syria, they shall be as the glory of the children of Israel] Or, shall be without they; which in the text is not expressed. The meaning is, that the Syrians, and Israelites, the joynt enemies of Gods people, should both of them, be alike brought low, and stript of their former state and dignity, ch. 7. 16. & 8. 4.

saith the Lord of hosts] As Chap. 3. 15. & 5. 9. the Prophets usual close, to assure the effect of the word delivered, ch. 14. 24.

V. 4. And in that day it shall come to pass, that] Or, For (as ch. 16. 2.) in that day, &c. as chap. 7. 11. For the Prophet seems in these words, to render a reason of what he had said, ver. 3. that the State of Syria should be as the glory of Israel, to wit, because they should both be exceedingly impaired; and that much about the same time.

the glory of Jacob shall be made thin] Or, exhaust. See ch. 10. 2. the word is used of rivers, when their waters are spent, either drawn off, or drained from them, Iob 28. 4. chap. 19. 6. or, of the bodies of man, or beast, when their moisture, flesh, or fat, is so wasted, that they are grown thin withal, and are nothing but skin, and bone, Gen. 41. 19. 2 Sam. 13. 4. their might, and multitude, wherein they gloried, should be much diminished, and abated. So Judg. 6. 6.

Jacob] As Israel, ver. 3.

and the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean] The like metaphor, Isa. ch. 10. 16, 18.

V. 5. And it shall be, as when the harvest-man gathereth the corn. and reapeth the ears with his arm] Or, And he (that is, Jacob, ver. 4. or, Israel, ver. 3. the ten tribes) shall be. It shall be so with him. See the like manner of syntax, ch. 29. 7, 8. Mat. 25. 14. They shall be cut down, and carried away captive, the main body of them, some few onely left, as the corn is cut down and carried away out of the field, where it grew, by the harvest-workmen, that leave onely some few gleanings behind them, Levit. 19. 9. Deut. 24. 19. they being no more able to stand before the enemy, then the corn before the reapers, Rev. 14. 15, 16.

the harvest man] Heb. harvest, for, man of harvest; as prey for, a man of prey, Prov. 23, 28. and, peace, for, a man of peace, Psl. 120. 7.

gathereth] See ch. 16. 10. Deut. 16. 13.

corn] The word properly signifies standing corn, Deut. 23. 25, 26. Judg. 15. 5, but there is in it, an ellipsis, of the substantive; standing, for, standing corn: as parched, for, parched pulse, 2 Sam. 17. 28. full, for, a full cup, Psal. 73. 10. sure, for, a sure covenant, Neh. 9. 38. strong; for, a strong hand, Chap. 40. 10. fruitfull; for, a fruitfull vine, Gen. 49. 22. or, olive tree, ver. 6. See ch. 5. 2.

reapeth the ears with his arm] A defect of the instrumental particle: as Psal. 17. 13, 14. or, his arm reapeth the ears. Gen. 41. 7, 8, 23, 24. Ruth 2. 2.

and it shall be as he that gathereth ears] Or, picketh up ears. The former word is used of harvest-workmen, that reap, and gather by armfuls, or lapfuls; Psal. 129. 7. this of gleaners, that pick up ear, after ear, Levit. 19. 9, 10. Deut. 23. 22. Ruth 2. 2, 3, 15-18. See chap. 27. 12. Hereby is implyed, that there should not onely be a sweeping away of a great part of them together; but a second gleaning of them also, as is said of the Benjamites, Judg. 20. 45. See the like, chap. 6. 13. That which was affected first by Tiglath-Pileser, 2 King. 15. 29. then by Salmanesser, 2 King. 17. 6. these as two harvest-men: and lastly, by Esar-haddon; as one that gleaned after them, Ezr. 4. 2.

in the valley of Rephaim] A fertile valley, having good store of corn ground, lying on the West side of Jerusalem, Josh. 15. 8. & 18. 16. where it is rendred, the valley of the giants; and the word indeed seems so to signifie, 2 Sam. 23. 16, 18, 22. Deut 3. 11, 20. But the valley may well be deemed to have had that apellation, from the name of an ancient people called the Rephaites, that Inhabited there about, Gen. 14. 5, & 15. 20. The Prophet mentioneth it, here, because a place commonly known to the people whom he spake to.

V. 6. Yet gleaning grapes shall be left in it] Heb. And. as ch. 8. 9. or, Yet, a remnant of clusters shall be left in it; because the verb is singular, and the noun plural: and the noun is included oft in the verb: as Gen. 50. 26. with ver. 2. The meaning is, that though God should cause them, by whole multitudes, at several times, to be carried away captive by the enemy, and of those that they had left, some again, to undergo the like calamity; yet he would not make an utter riddance of them, Ier. 30. 11. he would deal with them, as he had enjoyned his people to do, in gathering their grapes at vintage, Levit. 19. 10. Deut. 23. 20. some few clusters should be left, Chap. 65. 8. a remnant should still be reserved for a Church, chap. 1. 9. & 6. 13. & 7. 3. & 10. 21, 22. for even those also that glean, leave some behind them, Judg. 20. 45, 47. Ier. 49. 9. Obad. 5. See chap. 25. 13.

as the shaking of an olive tree] Heb. according to the shaking of an olive tree; or, as in the shaking of it. The word signifieth properly, not so much a shaking of the tree, as a shaking off, or, striking down of the fruit, by beating of the tree, Deut. 24. 20. the law here alluded to. See ch. 24. 13.

two, or three berries] A defect of the disjunctive; as 2 King. 9. 32. chap. 38. 14. a very small number, Matth. 18. 20. to wit, are left, of the uppermost bough] So called in the Hebrew here, and ver. 9. (for it is no where else read) because it is first up above the rest, Psl. 94. 4. ch. 61. 6. where, by reason of the height, they cannot easily be reached.

four, or five] As before, a small number, 2 King. 7. 13.

in the utmost fruitfull branches thereof] Heb. in the boughes (ch. 27. 10. properly, side-branches; or, spreading-branches, Ezek. 31. 6, 8. See Chap. 2. 21.) of her fruitfull tree: such an one, as hath great store; and where the more, therefore, might well be spared, and left; a defect of the substantive: as Gen. 49. 22. See ver. 5.

saith the Lord God of Israel] Jehovah; who both can, and will fulfil what he saith, chap. 1. 20. & 14. 24, 27. and the God of Israel fulfil what he saith, chap. 1. 20. & 14. 24, 27. and the God of Israel still, (but not of the Syrians) notwithstanding these heavy judgments inflicted, as well on the one, as on the other. See Deut. 30. 1. 10. Levit. 26. 44.

V. 7. At that day shall a man look to his Maker] The residue of Gods people, refined, and reformed, by these forementioned calamities, people, refined, and reformed, by these forementioned calamities, shall then, abandoning their idols, repair unto God, seek to him, trust in him, and depend upon him. So ch. 10. 20, 21. Gods end in the chastising of his, being, not to drive them away from him; but to reclaim them from their wandrings, and to bring them home to him, chap. 19. 22. & 27. 9. This was in part fulfilled in the reign of Ezekiah, 2 Chron. 30. 11. and of Josiah, 2 Chron. 34.33.

look to] That is, trust to depend upon; as Ps. 25.20. & 34.5. & 121. 1, 2. & 123.1,2. & 141.8. ch. 8.17. & 45. 22. Because what men trust to, that they are wont frequently, and wistly to look after, and to have their eyes much fixed upon. See the contrary, where with Gods people are upbraided, ch. 22.11. & 31.1.

his maker] Whom therefore he oweth all duty unto, and ought wholly to depend upon, Deut. 32.6. Ps. 100. 3. and 149. 2. Eccles. 12.1.

and has eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel] The same notion, in other terms. See ch. 1.4.

V. 8. And he shall not look to the Altars] Erected for Idolatrous worship, as ch. 27. 9. Jer. 11. 13. & 17. 2. Hos. 8. 11. Nor to service, chap. 27. 9. Jer. 11. 13. & 17. 2. Hos. 8. 11. Nor to the idols, for the worship of whom they were erected, chap. 30. 22. and were placed therefore near to them, but above them, 2 Chr. 34.4.

either the groves, or the images] Heb. and the groves, and the images, both the groves and the images; as Psal. 76. 7. But the copulater is here put for the disjunctive; as Exod. 21, 17. Neh. 5. 8. These two words, rendred groves, and images, we find divers times joyned together, 2 Chron. 34.4, 7. chap. 27. 9. Of the former whereof is less doubt, or difference among the Learned. Yet the word seems to be sometime used, not only for a grove, or a company of trees of lower growth, and less stature, growing thick, and close together as on a cluster; of which kind, they were forbidden to plant any neer to Gods house, or his altars. Deut. 16. 21. But for a model, or curious piece of workmanship of gold, or other precious metal, resembling such a cluster of trees. For some such, in likelyhood, was that grove which Josiah found in the Temple; but brought forth of it, 2 King. 23. 6. And dealt with it, as Moses did with the golden-calf, Exod. 32. 20. and Ezekiah with the brazen-serpent, 2 King. 18. 4. not unlike to the golden vine, and platane, that the Lydian Lord is reported to have represented Darius with, Herodot. lib. 7. Either of both may be teamed, the work of mans hand; because planted by mans industry, the one; and framed by mans workmanship, the other; whence the phrase of making groves, here alluded to, 2 King. 16. 33. 2 King. 17. 16. & 21. 3. Howbeit, as before, the word altars, seemed to be put for the idols, worshipped at those altars; so here the groves, for the idols worshipped at, or in those groves. But, concerning the latter word, there is no small question: The word is not found, but in the plural, Hammanim, or Chammanim. And is derived from a Noun, that signifies primarily, heat, Psal. 19. 6. And in the second place, those Sun, (unto whom it is also there, by the Psalmist, applyed) so called, in regard of his heat, Job 30 28. Cant. 6.10, ch. 24. 22. & 30. 26. The Chaldee paraphrast renders it, Temples: and so also doth the Greek, Ezek. 6.4, 6. And some of the Rabbines, on Levit. 26. 30. say that it signifies, houses, or Temples, dedicated to the Sun. But this seems not so probable, by the collation of other places, whence it may appear that they were rather some kind of images, then Temples. For of Josias it is said, that he brake down the altars of the Baalim and cut down the Hammanim, that were aloft above, or beside them, 2 Chr. 34. 4. Others therefore, of the Jewish Doctors, do with more probability, conceive them to have been images. And wooden images, say some of them; as also the Greek renders the word, Lev. 26. 30. because there is mention made of cutting them down, 2 Chro. 34, 4, 7. Ezek. 6. 6. but that is but a wooden ground. For the word, that is there used, is applyed, as well to metal-materials, as to wooden, or green-fabricks; as to bars of iron, Psal. 107. 16. chap. 45. 2. But the images, so teamed, are by the Jewish Writers, generally supposed to have been images of the Sun; or such, at least, as were erected in honour of him, and whereby to worship him; as the heathen most of them did, Deut. 4. 19. & 17. 3. 2 King. 23. 5, 11. Jer. 8. 2. & 7. 18. & 44. 17, 18. Ezek. 8. 16. And Joseph Ben-Gorion, in his Jewish story tells us, that this Hamman was an image, and made like a man of a middle age, with horns on his head, like an Oxe, and a chin, or beard, like a Dog. But other of the Jewish-writers say, it was a picture made round, to represent the Orb of the Sun, like our signs of the Sun. And Benjamin the Jew, in his travels, tell us of a Town he met with, inhabited by Cuthites, neer whercunto were abundance of altars, and images, resembling the round Orb of the Sun, whom that people worshipped; which, by magical arts, at the Sun-rising, when people, men and women, came to burn incense to them, shined very bright, and made a great noise. And I remember to have read in Hero, a Greek-writer, his wind-works; how, by artificial device, an image may be so framed, that the Sun shining on it, may cause it to yield some kind of sound. But I suppose this to be but a fiction of that Jewish author: whereof he hath not a few. Howbeit, from this Hebrew Hamman, it is not unlikely that the Phenicians had their idol, from whom the Greeks and Latines had their, Jupiter-Hammon, or Ammon; of whom they tell many fabulous tales. But Macrobius relateth, Saturnal, lib. 1. cap. 21. that the Lybians worshipped him, not at the Snarishing; (as those Jews, Ezek. 8. 16. and those other people the Jew speaks of) but at the Sun-setting; and represented him with the horns, not of an oxe, as the son of Gorion, but) of a ram on his head, thereby representing the rays, or beams of the Sun: As both, in Hebrew and Greek the words of horn, and of glittering light, are of neer affinity, the one with the other. See Exod. 34. 29, 30, 35. (whence the grosse error of painting Moses with horns) and Hab. 3. 4. It seems therefore most probable, that these Hammanim were images, of what matter, or figure soever, made, thereby to adore the Sun. Nor can I therefore readily assent to that, which some later writers have conceived this teamn to import. The idolaters, say they, had divers places for the worship of idols, according to the diverse seasons of the year, and conditions of the weather; their groves, and shady-places, which they used in heat of summer: and their sun-images, set in sun-shine places; which they made use of in colder weather; so called, say some, because they stood in the sun, and were sun burnt. And these two sorts, say they, are joyned together, as including all sorts of idols, and idolatrous services, being reduced to these two heads. But for this distinction, I find little ground, either in Scripture, or elsewhere. Groves were commonly used, by the superstitious heathen, for idolatrous employment, in regard of a kind of awfull dread, that such shady, and solitary places are wont to surprise people withall, especially pre pollcied with a superstitious conceit of some deity dwelling there. Nor were they wont to make use of them, more at one time then another; the cloudinesse of the trees, in them, affording, as well the heater, in the winter time, as shadu in the summer. And statue sun-dials, as they render the word, signifying images set in the open air; having no covert, but what heaven afforded: seems not to be well feared for winter service, or for use, suitable to cold and blustring weather. I adhere therefore to the former; and I suppose groves, and thele Sun-images, to be joyned together; because these idols were oft placed, as well in their groves, and high places abroad, as in their temples, and houses within doores. See 2 Chr. 34. 4.

V. 9. In that day] At that time, (as ver. 4.) when God shall execute the judgment before denounced. For to that the Prophet now returns again, illustrating it further, by the procuring causes of it, ver. 10. and the sad effect of it, ver. 11.

Shall his strong cities be as a forsaken bough] Heb. his cities of strength, (as Prov. 10. 15. & 18. 11.) shall be as the leaving a side-bough, or branch; such as makes a shade, Ezek. 31. 3. answering not unfitly to that other word used, ver. 6.) Or, of a wood or, thicket. For the word, here used, also sometime so signifies, 1 Sam. 23. 15, 16, 18. 2 Chr. 27. 4. As a bough or a branch that is left behind, to wit, by those that did lop, or thred a tree: or; as tree left for a Nander, when the whole wood about it is felled. For the word forsaken, doth not well suit here. in regard of birds or fowl, that nest, or rouss in a tree; or, in regard of beasts that had shade and shelter, formerly, from it; may a tree, or bough, be faid to be forsaken, Ezek. 31. 4, 12. Dan. 4. 12, 14. but not properly by the husbandman, who when he loppeth a tree, leaves some bough or branch, either neglecting it, or because he cannot well come to it; or because he hath no need of it; or hath further uses there for it. And cause he hath no need of it; or hath further uses there for it. And although the cities, here mentioned, might in the former respect, be compared to a forsaken bough, because left by their inhabitants, being driven away from them, as birds chased from a tree, which was before their wonted harbour, chap. 16, 2. Yet that seems not to be the thing that the Prophet here aims at; but that their strong cities should stand stanfast, left alone and desolate; (such of them, at least, as were not utterly razed, as Damascus was, ver. 1. and some of Israel, it may well be, were) the whole countrey, and smaller towns and villages, round about, being utterly wasted and ruined. See chap. 1. 7, 8.

and an uppermost branch] As ver. 6. A standing bough, that is left on the top of a tree, when the rest are all lopped away, naked and bare. Though some expound both this, and the former, of boughs and branches of fruit-trees, left naked and bare; and many times also broke and mangled, dispolled wholly of their beauty, when the fruit is all beaten down. But the former seems to agree better, both with the Prophets scope, here, and the like elsewhere. See ch. 30. 17.

which they left for the children of Israel] That is, which the enemy left; God in his providence, so disposing things, out of his gracious affection to his people, of whom he had reserved a remnant to himself, ver. 6. that yet some places should be spared for them, when the residue should be destroyed. The verb is impersonal, and may well be rendred, which shall be left (See chap. 2. 19.) for the children of Israel; as for the anointing, Chap. 10. 27. Howbeit, some interpreters turn it another way, reading the words, which shall be left, or, forsaken by the children of Israel; as ch. 7. 16. And others, yet, a third way, supposing this last clause to have some reference to the ancient Inhabitants of the land of Canaan, in Joshuah's time, and their leaving the land, upon the Israelites entrance thereupon; and this way the Jewish Doctors generally go; and divers also of our interpreters, Some reading the words, as they left them. The note of similitude supplyed before the relative; as Exod. 34. 18. Jer. 44. 8. Some, which they left, (to wit, the Amorites, and Canaanites) before the children of Israel, that is, for fear of them, as Exod. 2. 15. Chap. 21. 15. That which some understand of their leaving their tillage, and their fruits, (because one of the words, before going, hath affinity with another word that signifies plowing, and the other belongeth to a tree (and betaking themselves to their strong Forts, and fenced cities for fear, Exod. 23. 27, 28. Josh. 2. 9, 11. & 5. 1. Others, of the leaving of their Forts themselves, and their fenced cities, being by the Israelites dispossessed of them. And thus moft of the Rabbines. Some, also, making the two words, in the fore going sentence, rendred, bough and branch, the proper names of two cities, in the land of Canaan, called Horesh, and Amir, whereof yet we find no record in Scripture. But these latter interpretations, though not wanting great authors, seem somewhat too coact;

and there shall be desolation] as chap. 6. 11. Or, it shall be desolation, that is, most desolate; (see chap. 1. 7.) to wit, Samaria, the royall city, faith one Rabbin; the land of Israel, saith another. I suppose it hath reference to the first words of the verse, His strong cities, &c. each of them shall be desolate, See chap. 20. 2. and 26. 19.

V. 10. Because thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation] The procuring cause of this their calamity, their forgetting, neglecting, disregarding, and rejecting him, that might, and would have saved them, had they been mindfull of him, and faithful to him, Deut. 8. 14. Psalm 106. 13, 21. Jer. 2. 32. & 3. 21. & 13. 25. & 23. 27. Ezek. 22. 12. & 23. 35. Hos. 8. 14. & 13. 6. The person is changed; as chap. 14. 3. and the words are in the feminine, directed to the land, or State of Israel, as to a woman, or a wife, that had forgot her duty and loyalty to her husband, Prov. 2. 17.

the God of thy salvation] Or, thy saving God. God thy Saviour. So Psal. 18. 46. & 25. 5. & 27. 9. & 62. 1, 2, 7. as, the God of my mercy; or, my God of mercy that is, my merciful God, Psalm 59. 10, 17. And the God of my righteousness; or, my God of righteousness; that is, my most righteous God, Psalm 4. 1.

and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength] Or, thy rock of strength. Thy strongest rock; as the cities of thy strength, or, the cities of strength: thy strong cities, ver. 10. So Psalm 62. 7. He that would have protected thee more surely, then all those thy strong-holds, which thou didst mind and trust to, when thou mindest not him, for the one of them is here opposed to the other, see Deut. 32. 4, 30, 31. Psalm 31. 2, 3, 4.

thy vine shalt thou plant pleasant plants] Heb, plants of pleasant; to wit, flowers, or fruits; as Gen. 30. 14. Cant. 7. 13. with chap. 2. 12. A defect of the substantive, as there, in the Canticles; and here before, ver. 5.

and shalt set it with strange slips] Heb, and with a slip of a stranger, or, forraigner shalt thou sow it. A defect of the instrumental particle; as ver. 5. & slip, for slips, collectively; as Ezek. 8. 17. and plant, for plants, ver. 11. It is ufed, more especially, for a branch, or, slip of a vine. Num. 13. 23. Ezek. 15. 2. & slip of a forraigner, for forraign slips, that were brought out of forraign parts, and in that regard, of more esteem. Shalt thou sow, or, set: for the Hebrew useth the same word for both, Levit. 19. 19. Deut. 22. 9. It, to wit, thy vineyard, or thy garden, the Pronoun, for the Noun; as 2 King. 25. 4. Chap. 30. 8. He compareth the State of Israel to a curious Lady, that delight eth in beautiful flowers, affects choice fruit, desires forraign plants, is careful to procure them, to plant her places of pleasure with them, and sedulous in nurfing and tending of them there; as the next words imply, ver. 11. See a strang vine, in another sense, Jer. 2. 21.

V. 11. In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow; and in the morning shalt thou make thy seed to flourish] All the pains thou shalt take and all the cost thou shalt be at, in making provision for the maintaining of thy State, and the continuance of it, in a plentiful, beautiful, and flourishing condition, shall come to nought; it shall be spoiled, and destroyed all by the enemy. There is seems an eye had to that threatning in the law, Deut. 28. 29, 30, 33.

In the day] In the day time: Day by day, as Psalm. 42. 8.

make thy plant to grow] The single word signifies, to grow much, or apace, Job 8. 7, 11. & 12. 23. & 36. 26. Psalm 73. 12. & 92. 12. But here it is in a redoubled form, as importing a double desire, endeavour and diligence, constantly employed, by all means that might be, to strengthen and advance their estate. See Chapter 9. 10.

in the morning] A phrase implying commonly much sedulity, and industry in pursuit of a busines, Psalm 5. 3. & 127. 2. Eccl. 11. 6. ch. 5. 11. & 27. 3. and it may here be referred, as well to the hastening of the growth, and putting forth of things, set, or sown, as to the early and constant care used about them: in allusion to Arons rod, that being a dry stick over-night, was found budded, and blossomed next morning, Num. 17. 8. or, to the practice of those, that use artificial means, and helps, for the forwarding of plants and fruits, See Ezek. 17. 24.

make thy seed] As before; thy plant. That which thou hast set, or sown. See ver. 10.

to flourish] Or, bud, or, blossome: as Num, 17. 8. Chap. 27. 6. & 35. 1, 2.

but the harvest shall be a heap in the day of grief, and desperate sorrow] This clause is by divers, diverfly both rendred and expounded. Those that read the words, as they are here rendred; do thus expound them: that in the day, or at the time of their calamity, and irrecoverable grief, which they shall sustain by the enemy, all that they had gotten together, should be suddenly confumed, as a small heap of corn is, when a great multitude, or a whole army that have been long pinched with famine, shall light on it: or all that ye have have taken so much pains for, shall be laid together on a heap, for the enemy to divide, and share among themselves. See Chap. 15. 7. or, shall all be spoiled and destroyed, as such choyce and precious matters are wont to be, when they are regardlelly jumbled together, and so cast upon an heap. See chap. 33. 4. & Jer. 48. 12. And this I suppole the genuine sense of the words. Which one of the Jewish Commenters obferves to have been a proverbial speech among them, concerning labour in vain. Your crop is come to an heap, or, your whole crop is all on a heap. But some others, and so of the Jewish Teachers, render the words far otherwise, to wit, The crop, or, the branches shall be removed in the day of inheritance, and there shall be deadly grief; or, The heap of the crop, in the day of inheritance, shall be a heap and deadly grief: That is, as some, thy children, whom thou hast with so much care, and cost, brought up, as others, thy wealth, which with so much pains and travel, thou hast raised, and brought to an height, shall be taken all from thee, and carried away, when thou shouldest come to enjoy it, and reap the fruit of it, which shall be as deadly pangs, and pains unto thee; it shall go so neer to the heart with thee, Deut. 28. 54. O. all the fruits, or crop, that for all thy forepalled care, and cost, shall accrue unto thee, shall be nothing else, but an heap of hearts-grief, and sorrow, Eccl. 2. 11, 17, 18.

but] A defect of the adversative; as Psal. 119. 63, 70, 78.

the harvest] Or, crop; as chap. 16. 9. Joel 3. 13. yet, according to others the branch, For so is also the word used, Job 29. 19. and branch for branches, or boughs; as Job 14. 9.

in the day of grief] Heb, of grief: a defect, as the Jews that go this way, note, of the substantive, plague, or stroke, expressed, Jer. 14. 17. & 30. 12. or, wound, or breach; as Jer. 10. 19. Nah. 3. 19. the like defects, see chap. 5. 24. ver. 5, 10. Jer. 17. 16. Ezek. 13. 14. Howbeit, the same word, but descending from another root, doth ordinarily signifie an inheritance, or possession, Num. 18. 23, 24. Chap. 54. 17. & 58. 14. and so some would here take it: and the time of harvest, termed the day of inheritance, or possession; because the fruits of the earth, and of mens labours are wont ever to be inherited, and injoyed. Deut. 16. 13, 14. Joel 1. 5. but so little difference there is, in the vowel points, between the word, in the one sense, and in the other.

and desperate sorrow] Or, deadly pain, So Jer. 30. 19. from the same root is man termed Enosh, miserable, or mortal. See chap. 2. 9. some suppose the copulative here to be, but a meer expletive; as 2 Sam. 13. 5. and so they knit the first words of the clause, with these last: The heap of the crop shall be deadly pain, or grief: In which sense if we take it, it may better be rendred: The crop shall be an heap, and deadly pain, or grief; that is, an heap of deadly pain, or grief: as a cloud and smoke, for, a cloud of smoke, chap. 4. 5. Others make it, a distinct branch, and there shall be deadly pain as the last clause of ver. 9.

V. 12. Woe to the multitude of many people] Some would knit the ensuing paffage, to the foregoing part of this Chapter; as if in these words were contained a reason of the desperate grief mentioned, ver. 11. to wit, the multitude of strange people breaking in upon Gods people; which the Prophet should here lament. But by the most, and best, they are deemed to belong to a new Sermon, or Prophecy, in regard wherof, some interpreters, stent off the three verses following from this Chapter, and glue them on to the next, as if this parcel, and that Chapter, made up one entire Prophecy, or Sermon. The reason they give of it, is, because these three verses contain a denunciation of judgments, against whole people of several countries that assisted Sennacherib, and served under him, in his expedition against Judah, and Ierusalem; and the eighteenth Chapter is against the Ethiopians, whose destruction God would have before hand denounced, that Gods people might not expect any ayd from them, or any means to be us'ed by them, to divert the Assyrian, from his intended invasion of it. But this seems but a weak ground, to make them one Sermon: being of so divers subjects. Howbeit these words seem to begin a new, but short argument; and clearly to intend the downfall of those forces, that Sennacherib led against Gods people. See chap. 30. 28. & 36. & 37. Although there want not, that understand them, of such nations, as joyned with the Syrians, and accompanied them in Ahaz his time, in the oppugnation of Jerusalem, Chap. 7. 1. But the stenour of the text, and all the circumstances of it well weighed, carry it rather the former way.

Woe] Of this particle see ch. 3. 11. & 10. 5. & 18, 1. Some would have it rendred, Alas: as Joel 1. 15.

the multitude of many people] Or,as some, to the tumult,or, noyse, of many people,(for the word is plural, as intimating,a variety of people, out of several countries, that served under the Assyrian.So Chap.10.13,14.)that is,fay they,to the many tumultuous people,and it is true indeed,that the word rendred multitude,is sometime used for tumult,or noise,as chap.31.4,ler. 47.3.Amos 5.13. as also,that it is derived from a word,that hath a notion of noyse, or tumult,used in the very next clause; because multitudes meeting are commonly tumultuous:but neither doth it always necessarily imply,or import noyse,and tumult:as Gen 17.5. nor is there any need here to depart from the ordinary reading, and most general acception of the word,designing here the vast multitude,or number of them,joyned in one body:as the other addition of many people,the multiplicity of nations,whereof that body consisted.However,because the ensuing parallel member may seem to plead for the former translation : to accord both members,it may well be rendred more fully,the prepotent,or tumultuous multitudes implying both their multitude,and the manner of their demeanour. See the next clause, and the next member : and Ezek. 30. 10.

V.3.The nations shall rush,like the rushing of many waters] Rush, that is,break in with rage:or rushet:break in with much noyse.They shall break in with such an hideous noyse,as the sea,or,some great river is wont to do,when it hath broken through, or got over its sea-walls,or banks,as if they would with a rage,and violence irresistible,bear down,and carry away all before them,chap.8.7,8. & 59.19.Jer.51.42.See in what a blustering,and boystrous manner, the Assyrian brake in.Chap.36.1-20.

V.14.And behold]Take notice of,and consider seriously:a most strange,and sudden change,See chap.3.1.& 7.14.

at evening tide trouble,and before morning he is not] There is in the Hebrew, a transposition of one copulative;as Gen.22.4. and the defect of another:as chap.16.14.which makes the sentence the quicker. And it is indeed a brief, and concise, but quick, and lively description of a great and sudden alteration,within the space of a night,both in the condition of Ezekiah, & those besieged with him;and of Sennacherib,and his forces,that lay without in siege against them.

at evening-tide trouble]Or,terrour, as it is commonly, and constantly rendred elsewhere,Job 18.11,14.& 24.17.& 27.20. & 30. 15.Psal.73.19.Ezek 26.21 & 27.36.& 38.19. All within Ierusalem overnight affrighted,and damped,with Rabshakehs blusterings, and menaces, together with the confideration of the State of the whole country,about them,and a puissant army of so many thousands set down before them; so that well they may be deemed, to have been even at their wits end,ch.22.2,5,7.& 33.7,8.& 36.1,22. & 37.3. before morning he is not]Ere morning appear,he,and his,are all gone,there is not an enemy to be seen,chap.37.36,37. Thus weeping at even,and joy in the morning, Psal. 30.5. And hee seems to compare the Assyrian to a tempest of wind, that riseth, and blustereth towards the evening, but is laid again,before the next day.Though some understand the whole of the Assyrian forces,that they were frighted in the night,by that sad, and sudden work, that the Angel made among them;and fled away in the morning. So evening should be taken for night: as Gen.1. 5, 8. But the former seems more, familiar.

this is the portion of them,that spoyl us,and the lot of them,that rob us]A sweet and comfortable close to Gods people;but sad and dismal to all their oppostes.Such succefs are they all like, yea- fure in fine to have,that maliciously oppose, and impugn Gods people. Verse.1. VV*O to the land*] A new Sermon,or prophecy, here beginneth,as most generally agree,but against whom it is denounced,or whom it specially concerneth,is much questioned by many. Some understand it,as menacing the ruine of Egypt which others reject:because the very next is peculiarly, and directly addressed against that State. Others suppofe, that it threatens the Ethiopians,whom they deem to be described in the first,and second verses. Others would have it meant of the Romanes, by whom Ierusalem was destroyed. The Jewish doctors,of Gog,and Magog, to be destroyed in the dayes of their Messias, Ezek. 38,4. And lastly,some Spanish Writers,of the Inhabitants of the new-world in America,whom they vaunt of, as their converts. I suppose the Prophecy to contain a denunciation of destruction against the Ethiopians,to be inflicted by the Assyrians, chap. 20.4. (with a promise of future restitution,ver.7.in the times of Christs Kingdome) but directed to the Egyptians,as their neighbours,Ezek.29.10.and confederates,Ezek.30,5.advising them by their Embassadours to advertise the Ethiopians, of their ruine approaching, Ezek. 30. 9.

wo to the land] As spoken by way of denunciation,like that, chap.17.12. But they who so take it,observe not,that the denunciation of evils here mentioned,is darted, not against the land, or ciation of evils here mentioned,is darted, not against the land, or people,in this verse,described;but against the people decipbered in the next verse,whom, they are there willed to send a message to,to acquaint them with,as appears by verse 7. For those,and no other,are threatned with destruction in the one place, unto whom restitution is promifed in the other. I suppofe rather therefore,that the word is here used in way of compellation:as ch. 55. 1. Zach. 16.and so both the Jewish Doctors,and some of ours also, here take it;rendring the words not,wo to the land,but,Ho the land, &c.to wit,of Egypt. the land Shadowing with wings]This many Interpreters apply to Ethiopia;or some part of it,reading the words,the land of Shaddow of wings;and understand thereby,some,a land shadowed, with a circle of mountains environing it. Others therefore,and so the old Latine, render it,the land of a cymbal. Which title,or term,some suppose, Verse.1. VV*O to the land*] A new Sermon,or prophecy, here beginneth,as most generally agree,but against whom it is denounced,or whom it specially concerneth,is much questioned by many. wo to the land] As spoken by way of denunciation,like that, chap.17.12. But they who so take it,observe not,that the denunciation of evils here mentioned,is darted, not against the land, or people,in this verse,described;but against the people decipbered in the next verse,whom, they are there willed to send a message to,to acquaint them with,as appears by verse 7. See the like diversity of expofition,ch.10.5. & 29.1.

the land Shadowing with wings]This many Interpreters apply to Ethiopia;or some part of it,reading the words,the land of Shaddow of wings;and understand thereby,some,a land shadowed, with a circle of mountains environing it. Others,with locusts, and flyes, that abound in it, chap. 7.18.Joel 2.10.or, with flights of fowl, that at time of year,out of the colder regions, fly in great flocks thither.Others,a land shadowing,either the sea, which it lay upon, with the sayls of their ships, which to them, are as wings, or the countreys they trade into with wares,and commodities, cap.45.14. or,the lands,they invade,like locusts,Judg.6.5.2. Psalm 91. 1. Eccl. 7. 12.and wings Deut.32.11.Psalm 91.4.and Shadow of wings,Psalm 17. 8.& 36.7. & 57.1.are emblems of protection, and the word Shadow,is here, say they,in a double form,to denote the amplitude of protection, that Egypt was wont to promise.But because the word here used is no where found,so to signifie:but is used commonly,and constantly,for a cymball,or such like musical instrument, that makes a tinkling,or jingling-sound,being shaken, or stricken with the hand, 2 Sam.6.5.Psalm 150. 1. Others therefore,and so the old Latine, render it,the land of a cymbal. Which title,or term,some suppose, rather,to the Ethiopians,to inform them of the Assyrian preparations against them,and the evils,that from them they were like to sustain.

Embassadours]As Iosh.9.4.Ch.57.9.Jer.49.14.or, Messengers; for the word is general , Prov.13.17.& 25.13.Howbeit, because the word is found used for images,chap. 45. 16. Some would have it here so to fignifie,understanding this pallage,not of sending messengers;but of sending Osiris his head;as Lucian tells the tale : or an Epistle,as some of the Greek Fathers(to bring it neerer home to their Version)concerning the reviving of Adonis, put up in an earthen pot,and so cast into the sea,to arrive beyond sea,at Byblos, which by the Devils help,within a few dayes,it used to do. But neither is this relation of any certainty,nor is there any mention of images in it:nor appear therein the papir-boats spoken of in the text:and what is called Ffir.m here,is in the next branch termed mateahcim , which is, questionless , messengers, and small reason therefore to depart from the version received.

by the sea]The red-sea,that runneth along by the Coast of Egypt,and Ethiopia,on the one side:and of Arabia, on the other side:called therefore, the gulf of Arabia, as that other beyond it, the Persian-gulf. See Ier.49.14.

even]Heb,and.But some suppose the copulative to be here redundant;as ch.17. 11.

in vessels of but-rushes] Heb. of rush. For the word is general, of all kinde of rushes,Iob 8.11.so called, of a word that fignifies to drink,Gen.24.27.because rushes require moisture,a nd thrive not, but in miry and watery places,Iob 8.11. chap. 35.7. But it is here taken collectively,for rushes:as Exod. 2.3. And some suppofe it to be used here,in way of derision, as scoffing at the aid that the Egyptians should undertake to afford the Jewish people, against the enemy,whoever he were,as if it were faid.You will lend them supplyes in vessels of rush,or,in paper-boats,as we use to say, (for their paper was a kind of rush(the matter of your shipping, and the supplies ye send in them,will be the one like the o.her.But he seems rather to speak here of their ordinary manner of sending messages, and passing to and fro,in those parts,in boats,or vellels made of paper,(not such as we now use, but such as was anciently used; for writing,and was most plentifull in Egypt) and of other the like kinde of rush,and reed,whereof they had great store,Ch.19. 6, 7. And of such kinde of vessels they had much use, both in Ethiopia and in Egypt;partly,for expedition,and partly,for safety, in shallow waters especially,in regard of shelves and rocks, and in deep downfals,and stiff streams of rivers,which other vessels,of matter less pliant, would not so well brook. The,both the Ethiopians,and Egyptians,much used,in the downfals of Nilus,as Strab. lib.17. The rather,because they could easily draw them a thore, carry them on their shoulders over land, and put them beneath into the water again,Plin.lib.5.ch.9.The Egyptians very much,alsoin that river,as Plin.l.7.c.56.but especially in their yearly deluge,when their whole country,the cities only and higher ground excepted,lay all under water,and was,generally,on float;as Lucane, lib.4. Of these paper-barks,Theophrast.lib.4.c.9. Strabo,l. 17. and Plin.l.6.c.22.& l.13.c.11.Though Herodote,l. 2.speaks of another kinde of shipping,that they had for burden;and of some earthen-boats of potters work,that they used sometime in the river, Strab. l.17.and Juvenal,sat.15.

upon the waters] Heb. upon the face, or, surface of the waters; as Gen.1.2. & 7. 18. Here the phrase is the rather used,because these kinde of boats or,barks,did rather float, and glide on the top of the water,then dive any thing into it,nor drawing much water, as those of plank and timber usually do, saying]This word is not in the originall.Yet either the same as Pf.105.14,15.Act,7.32.or somewhat,the like,as Pl.27. 8.is necessarily to be supplyed.Those that suppofe the words following to be spoken in the person,either of the Ethiopians, or Egyptians themselves, as delivering instructions to those that they sent, supply,saying. Those that take them, as spoken in the person of God, or the Prophet from God,supply,fay,as enjoyning,or adviling the Egyptians; what message God would have them send to their friends and allies, as ch.32.15.

Go ye swift messengers]]Heb.light;as ch.19.1.Either alluding to the lightnels of their pallage-boats,above mentioned Or, because lightnels is a means of swiftnels, as heavinels of slowness,in motion. In whose person they are spoken , was before specified.

to a Nation]The Assyrians,say some, the Israelites, say, others : but neither fore finde any mention what their message should be : and so difpatch messengers without a message. I suppofe it rather, the nation,here described,to be the Ethiopians, whom the Egyptians should send to.

scattered]Or,as some,out-spread. Heb. protracted, drawn out at length.Used of time;as Prov.13.12.Ch.13.22.Ezek. 12. 18. Or of place,as Iudg.4.6.ch.5.18.That which the Iewish doctors understand of the Israelites driven out of their country,and dispersed by the enemy.Some of ours,of the Assyrian,drawn far away from his country,and in war now against Iudea,ch.5.27.But others, rather, of the Ethiopians,called,a scattered,or dispersed people;in regard of the large territory, or land over spread with them, reaching part o it from the Persian gulf to the red sea, and part of it again from the red sea, to the main ocean. Though some expound it in a future notion, as spoken by way of prediction, to be dissipated, and dispersed. The like whereunto, see Psalm. 137. 7. ch. 27. 13. Nor want there, that expound it people of long stature, from chapter 45. 14. But I finde not the word any where so used.

and peeled] Or, as some, to be peeled; as before: that is, stripped of all. A metaphor taken from the pulling off hair; either from head, or beard, Ezr. 9. 3. 10. Neh. 13. 25. ch. 50. 6. which some apply to the present estate of the Jews; some to the future, of the Ethiopians; by the Assyrian to be despoiled. Some to the Assyrian, as exhaustd, and left bare of their souldiery. But it may well, in his native and proper sense, be understood of the, Ethiopians, being a peeled, and beardless people. For the word imports a want of hair, Levit. 13. 40, 41. Little whereof is found on Ethiopian bodies, by reason of the heat of their country. For the word polished, by which some render it, because it is of iron and brass, and instruments made of either, so used, 1 King. 7. 45. Ezek. 21. 9, 10, 11. 2. 8. is not so fit here.

to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto] Heb, from him: or, from that, and further. The phrase is used, either of time, as Levit. 22. 26. Num. 15. 23. Or, of place, as 1 Sam. 10. 4. & 20. 22. Some take it, here, in the latter sense; and of these, some understand it of the Assyrians, that were terrible to other nations, as well on this side, as beyond them. Others, of those Ethiopians that dwelt farthest in the inland parts, more remote from the Sea, and from society with other people. And therefore, as the more black and grim, so more horrid and savage. But the meaning seems to concern the Ethiopians in general, not any special part of them. Others therefore, following the Latine, read it, Beyond whom there is no other. Either in regard of situation, fay some, or in regard of fierceness, say others. But I see not how the text will bear either. Those that take the phrase in the former sense, understanding it of continuance of time, as our English, and many others do, apply it, some to the Jewish people, who were terrible to other nations, from the time that God first made a nation of them, and long after, in regard of those strange works, that God, at several times wrought for them, Deut. 4. 34. Josh. 2. 9, 10. & 5. 1. 2 Chr. 20. 29. or in regard of their dreadful judgments, that at sundry times he executed upon them for their sins, such as might well strike a terror into all that saw, or heard of them, Deut. 28. 18, 37. Jer. 18. 16. & 19. 8. & 24. 9. & 25. 9, 18. as some would have it. Or, as some of the Jewish writers, in regard of both. But other again, understand it of the Assyrians, who had anciently been a terrible people, and subduers of other nations; the Assyrian monarchy, or tyranny rather, being of the greatest antiquity of any, at least, since the flood, Gen. 10. 8-11. and endured, in like lyhood, as long as any. But those that so apply it, may do well to consider, that the first founder, and raiser of that kingdom, was an Ethiopian, or a Cushite, Nimrod the great hunter, the prime son of Cush. Nor was it called the Assyrian monarchy, at first, as founded, or possessed by Athur, the son of Sem, Gen. 10. 22. or any of his issue; but might so be called, because Nimrod the Cushite, having in his conquests, (after the interruption of Babel, in which intended structure, he seems to have had a chief hand, pierced into that country, which Assur and his issue, at first, quietly possessed, did therein build the city of Nineveh, and made it the head-city of his dominions, and so is that of Moses to be understood, Gen. 10. 10. 11. This application, therefore, of these words to the Assyrians, leadeth us home, as by the hand, to the right owners of it: and directly pointeth, as with the finger, to the persons intended in them: To wit, the Ethiopians, or Cushites, a terrible nation from the first: and no other also, in succeeding ages: The greatest number of men, being brought into the field by their king, that is read of in Scripture, or, I suppose, in any the like. See 2 Chr. 14. 9. & 16. 8. There is an ellipsis, in the phrase; from that: that is, from that day, or time. As it is more fully expressed. Numb. 15. 23. 1 Sam. 18. 9. Ezek. 39. 22. as having relation to their first original, since they began to be a people.

a nation meted out] Heb. a nation of line line. And the word signifies sometime a line of letters, figures, or words in a book; as Chap. 28. 10, 13. Whence some of the Jewish Commenters, applying this to their own people, whom they imagine to be here intimated, would have it to contain a reason of their low condition, because they had no more knowledg of God and his law, (Chap. 27. 11.) then little children; (Chap. 28. 9.) that must be taught, line after line, and letter after letter, Chap. 28. 10. But neither is the phrase here and there alike; nor doth it suit so well here, either with the foregoing, or the ensuing branches. But the word most usually, importeth, a measuring-line, as in that very place also, Ch. 28. 17. and elsewhere, Job 38. 5. Jer. 31. 39. Ezek. 47. 3. And this was used, sometime, to build by, Zach. 1. 16. Or, to rule, square, and cut out by, ch 44. 13. in which sense some take it here. A nation that taketh upon it to give laws, and rules to others; applying it to the Assyrians, as usurping a power of command over other people. Sometime it is used to destroy by, to mete out, who, or what, how much, or how many, shall be destroyed: or having pulled down lofty and stately buildings, to lay the places, where before they stood, level with the other Ground, 2 Sam. 8. 2. 2 King. 21. 13. Psal. 60. 8. Ch. 34. 11. Lam. 2. 8. and so here some take it, but understanding it, some actively, a nation, that meteth out other people to destroy them: Others, passively, a nation meted out, or, shortly to be meted out to consultation, or destruction. To which purpose also, one of the Jewish writers, affirming it to be a proverbial speech with them, and joyning this, and the next branch together, expoundeth it, by little and little to be destroyed, and another of them, as implying the cause of their destruction, as in way of retribution, measure vy measure: the evil of punishment being meted out unto them, according to the measure of the evil of their sin, which they indeed apply to their own people; but may with better ground, and more agreeably to the scope of the text, be understood concerning the Ethiopians, as designed by God to destruction: letting pass these latter niceties. I am not ignorant, that some of ours understand it of these, render the words, dispersed here and there, as having reference to the manner of the Ethiopian habitations, having no cities, but villages, scattered here and there, Hab. 3. 14. which I should not reject, if the words of the text would yield it.

and treaden downe] Heb. and of conculation, or, treading down: as Chap. 22. 5. rendred also destruction, 2 Chro. 22. 7. Now the nation here mentioned, is termed, a nation of treading down, either actively, as some, understanding it of the Assyrians, because they trode down, that is, vanquished and subdued other people, Chap. 10. 6. & Psal. 44. 5. & 60. 12. or, as others, rather, passively, a nation trodden down by others, as the Jews expounding it of themselves, Chap. 5. 5. & 51. 23. or, a nation to be trodden down very shortly, understanding it of the Ethiopians, to be subdued, and captived by the Assyrians, Chap. 20. 4. Or, lastly, as some other, an abject people, kept under in extream slavery, both at home, and abroad: but the former, concerning their condition shortly to ensue, seems best to suit with the Prophets intent here.

whose lands the rivers have spoyled] The form of the verb here used, being singular, and no where else found, hath in part, occasioned variety of expolitions. Some supposing it to be the same with a word used, Chap. 17. 14. & 42. 22, 24. that signifies to spoyl, and plunder. Others, with another word used, Chap. 37. 22. & 49. 7. & 53. 3. that signifies to flight, to despise: again to some, they seem to be part of the description of the nation before mentioned, whereas others deem them, to be the sum of a message sent to them. Those that take it the former way, applying it to the land of Israel, read the words, as we render them; and expound them of such disruption, and spoyl, as the Assyrians, and other their enemies, had made among them, chap. 5. & 36. 1. but those of them, that understand it of Ethiopia, read the words in the present tense, whose land the rivers spoyl, or tear asunder; and expound it of the great rivers, Niger, and Nilus, that cut through their land, and by their frequent inundations, wash away the fat of their soyl. Howbeit, this may seem not so probable, because with the Egyptians, those deluges have a contrary effect, making their country, by the more watering of it, the more fat and fertile: the abate and restraint whereof, is therefore menaced, as a judgment, and a curse, ch. 19. 5-10. Ezek. 30. 12. As for those that take this passage, as the content of the message, sent by the messengers, before mentioned, they, some of them understand them, as to be delivered from the Ethiopians to the Assyrians, and read, according to the latter signification of the word, above noted, to tell them, (as in way of contempt and defiance) that the rivers (to wit, of Ethiopia) of which v. 1. that is, the people of that country) despise(contemn, and set light by) his land: howsoever dreadful and terrible he may appear unto other people. Not unlike to that, ch. 37. 22. But other of them, conceiving it as a message, sent by God, direction, from Egypt to Ethiopia, read and render it, according to the former signification of the word, to tell them, that the rivers, or floods will spoyl their land: that is, that the forces of the king of Assyria, Ch. 20. 4. breaking in upon them, like the flying streams of some great river, ch. 8. 7, 8. will overflow their land, not as Niger and Nilus, or Astaboras, and Astapus use to do, to water and enrich it; but to plunder and spoil it; to sweep all away before them, as great land-floods are wont to do. Ch. 28. 2, 17. This, the rather, I conceive with, because I find the like in Ezekiel of messengers, by Gods appointment, to be sent unto the Ethiopians, informing them of great pains that should come upon them to make them affraid, Ezek. 30. 9. The relative for the conjunction, that, as Deut. 4. 40. Neh. 2. 6, 7. For I cannot assent to that learned writer, who supposing the message to be sent, not from any one nation to another, but by God himself to one and the same people, described, v. 1. 2. would have the subject matter of it to be related, ver. 3.

V. 3. All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth] after this warning, or advertizement, willed to be given unto Ethiopia, by Egypt, concerning those calamities that were to befall them; the Prophet turneth his speech unto the wide world, as in the name of God, calling upon the inhabitants thereof, to consider, and observe the manner of his proceedings, and the passages of his providence, when he shall begin to muster those forces which he purposeth to employ, for the effecting of the judgments denounced against that people, and to expect the issue of it. See the like, Psalm. 46. 8. Chap. 33. 13. to thereby with all-al giving assurance, that the execution of the same should be so remarkable, and so conspicuous, that notice should be taken of it, throughout the whole world; that the whole world should ring of it. See the like, Jer. 49. 21. & 50. 46.

see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains] When God calleth those together, whom he meaneth to make use of, as by an ensign to that purpose, set up on the top of some high hill, ch. 5. 26. & 13. 2. For the Hebrew Commenters are wide, when they expound it of Gods gathering his people together out of the places of their captivity: as ch. 11. 12. or, as when an ensign is lift up upon a mountain, ye shall see it. The judgment executed upon them, shall be so conspicuous, that ye shall as easily see it, as a banner erected on the tops of a mountain, for any special use, & purpose, is of all seen, far, and near.

when he lifteth up an ensign] That is, when God shall lift it up, as most expound it, or when I shall lift up, as some render it. The Hebrew is, as in lifting up; according to the lifting up of an ensign; for the infinitive in the Hebrew, is also as a gerundthat is, as when one lifteth up an ensign, or, when an ensign is lift up. So 1 Sam. 15. 22. as in obeying the voyce of the Lord; that is, as when one obeyeth the voyce of the Lord, or, as when the voyce of the Lord is obeyed. See also, ver. 5. ch. 64. 2. Ier. 5. 26.

on the [mountains] Or, upon a mountain: a defect of the preposition; as Deut. 33. 19. ch. 17. 13. and mountains, for, mountain: as Gen. 8. 4.

see ye] Heb, ye shall see it. A want of the pronoun; as Psal. 37. 34. & 91. 8. ch. 9. 9. Hosh. 8. 4.

and when he bloweth a trumpet] When God bloweth his trumpet to summon his souldiers, and servitors, to make their appearance, as Jer. 4. 5. & 6. 1. or, to set them on upon their service, as Zach. 9. 14. for the Jewish Writers are too far out of the way, in expounding it, of the trumpet mentioned, chap. 27. 13. The Hebrew is, as in sounding a trumpet; that is, as when one bloweth a trumpet: or, as when a trumpet is blown; as before.

hear ye] Heb, ye shall hear, to wit, it; as before: that which is now foretold you, ch. 12. 5.

V. 4. For so the Lord said unto me] Or, Thus hath the Lord said unto me. God hath, in these words, acquainted me with his counsel, and purpose herein; to wit, in letting out the rein unto the Assyrian, for some space of time, and permitting him to subdue, and make havock of many people, ch. 10. 5-10.

I will take my rest] Heb. I will rest, or be quiet, ch. 7. 4. & 14. 7. & 57. 20. I will sit still, not offering to interrupt the Assyrian, but suffering him to proceed in his deligns, and attempts, for a time. See Psa. 83. 1.

and I will consider in my dwelling place] Though I seem to sit still, as an idle spectator of what is done in the world; yet from the place of mine heavenly habitation, I behold and take notice of the courses and carriages of men on the earth, Psal. 2. 4. & 11. 4, 5. & 33. 13, 14. or, but, or, yet, I will look to, or, upon my dwelling. I will have an eye to my Church, the place of my special residence on earth, to Jerusalem, and mount Sion, where my Temple is, to protect, to rescue, to relieve, to refresh it, Psal. 132. 13-17. Chap. 37. 29-35.

consider] Heb. behold, look to, or, look after, it implyes a providence, and care, employed for the good of the thing looked to, or looked after, Psal. 102. 19. chap. 57. 15. & 66. 2. or, look upon. So the rather, in regard of what followeth, I will lift up the light of my countenance upon it, Psal. 4. 6. I will cause my face to shine on it. Numb. 6. 25.

my dwelling place] Heb. set, or, settled dwelling; and this, with God, is heaven above, 1 King. 8. 39. 43. 49. his Sanctuary, a type of his Church, on earth, Exod. 15. 2, 17. 1 King. 8. 13. Dan. 8. 11.

like a clear heat upon herbs] Heb. as some of the Jewish Doctors, upon the herbs: as they take the word, Chap. 26. 19. 2 King. 4. 39. as other, of them, and so the most; upon rain, or after rain, as they suppose it to be used, Job 36. 31. & 37. 11. See chap. 24. 15. The meaning is, that the Lord would look out, and shine forth upon his Church, though he suffered them, also, to be for a while under a cloud; as the clear sunshine, (for from the word here used, hath the sun its name, Chap. 24. 22. & 30. 26. See on chap. 17. 8. (upon tender herbs, and plants, after a shower of rain; which is wont to make them suddenly to sprout out, and shoot up. See 2 Sam. 23. 4. Psal. 72. 6. Hos. 14. 5. and of the complement, ch. 37. 31.

and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest] a cloud of dew, or, a dewy cloud, not of rain, or rainy: such as may relieve the harvest man in the heat of the day, and yet not hurt the corn, chap. 25. 5. See chap. 45. 8. for rain in harvest is hurtful, Prov. 26. 1. See Jer. 5. 24. Nor can I here accord with them, though men of great note, that turn the text a clean contrary way, understanding the words; the former of such a dew, or rain, as coming in harvest time, out of season, when heat rather is needful, for the ripening and hardening of the grain, doth corrupt, and spoil the crop. Prov. 25. 13. & 26. 1. which they expound, some, to be a threatning of famine; other of them, a prediction of such evils, as from the Assyrian King, should befal Gods people: and other again, of that destruction, that from God should befall the Assyrians. And to this purpose, a late Writer of note thus readeth the whole passage, Should I rest, and look on in my place? (to wit, while the adversary maketh untimely havock of my people, before my judgmenes are come to maturity, ver. 5.) that would be as parching heat to herbs, as clouds sending down dew, or, rain, in harvest, all then would be spoiled. But the words seem to me clear for the former sense.

V. 5. for a fore the harvest, &c.] He returneth, here, to shew the effects of Gods sitting still, and looking on, while the Assyrian proceeded in his atchievements; to wit, the unrimely ruine & destruction of the Ethiopian estate, while it was yet in such a flourishing condition, as might seem to give great hopes of further growth, and afford fair promises of long continuance. and this set forth, by the resemblance of a vine, or other plant, that is pruned in an unseasonable time; or, a tree, that is lopped, and cut down, ere her fruit come to maturity, when the is ful of leaves, and bloffoms, in the prime of her pride, Job 15. 33. 33. & 18. 16. Psalm 37. 2, 35, 36. & 49. 14. & 52. 5. & 55. 23. & 73. 18-20. & 92. 7, 12, 13. & 94. 23.

For] Or, But yet: as Psal. 118. 17. Chap. 9. 1. Though I have an eye to mine own; yet this people, whom I will have to be destroyed, I will leave to the enemy.

a fore] before harvest come; as 1 Sam. 9. 15. before Saul came: & Job 3. 24. before my meat, that is, before I eat Heb, at the face of harvest, that is, as some take it, when the harvest is coming, is neer at hand, as Prov. 18. 12. at the face of destruction, that is, when it is approaching: according to which acception it might be rendred, toward harvest time, but the former sense is the plainer, & more common.

the harvest] The word includes, as well the time of plucking fruit, and gathering grapes, as of cutting, and inning corn: as well vintage, as harvest, strictly so named. See ch. 17. 10, 11.

when the bud is perfect] Or, as when(for ver. 3.) the bud is gone, (as Deut. 3, 14. for the word signifies either) as when the bud that first appears, is become a perfect, but a green, and unripe grape, which, saith the Jewish Doctor, is with them, in the moneth Sivan, which in part, answers our May.

and the sour grape is ripening in the flower] Or, and the unripe, or, green grape is producing (to the word is used, Num. 17. 8.) its flower, or, the flower, See Gen. 40. 10. Cant. 6. 11. & 7. 12.

he shall both] Heb, and he shall, as chap. 14. 22. or, the copulative is redundant, as Zach. 2. 6. Howbeit, I suppose, it may well stand in his native notion, and use, as a copulative, the words being thus rendred; But yet afore harvest time, as when the bud is past, and the green grape is about producing its flower, and one cut off (that is, if one cut off) the sprigs, and so forth.

cut off the sprigs with pruning-hooks] Or, the sprigs (the small tender twigs; the word is no where else used) shall be cut off with pruning-hooks; so called from that use of them, chap. 2. 4. that which is not wont to be done with vines, or other plants, by those that prune them, for the bettering of them, and to make them the more fruitful, Joh. 15. 2. at such time, when their fruit is green upon them, and making on to maturity; for that were to destroy both fruit and plant: and the cutting therefore here intimated, being thus described, appears thereby to be intended, for the destruction of them, against whom it was denounced, not for their correction, or cure. The verb is impersonally, and indefinitely here used, of which manner of speech, see on ch. 2. 19. & that we need not supply either the Lord, with some; or the King of Assyria, with others. Though it is true, that God, and by him, would do it, chap. 10. 4. much lefs, as some others do, to put in the vine-dresser, who is not wont to dress his vines, on this manner.

and take away, and cut down the branches] Heb. and the branches (to wit, the great spreading boughs, resembling the better, or greater sort of persons with them, Jer. 48. 32. the will take away, and cut down, or, remove by cutting down: this latter word, is no where else read in Scripture. But the Jewish Commenters upon the place, tells us, that which their Talmudists it is used for to cut off, or, to take away, as when they say, to cut off, or, to take away one's head, and a word drawn from it, for an evil spirit, that takes men's wits away from them: according whereunto, the words may be here rendred; the spreading branches he will remove, and take away; that is, they shall be removed, and carried away: the verb is, as the former, indefinite. So Gen. 41. 13. Luk. 12. 20.

sprigs, and branches] Both the small, and the great ones, ch. 9. 14. & 10. 33.

V. 6. They shall be left together, unto the fowls of the mountains; and to the beasts of the earth] To wit, the sprigs, and branches, so cut off, and cast away, like matter of no use or worth; as the cuttings, or shreddings of a vine, or other plant, oft times are, by those that regard them not; ch. 17. 9. & 27. 10. Ezek. 15. 2-4. especially, when the fruit that is on them, is immature, and unfit for mans food, and are let lyd therefore, on heaps, not looked after, for birds to fly, and beasts to browze on, and both to make meat of; the birds of the fruit, and the beasts of the branches, Ezek. 31. 12.

left together] One with another, without respect had to their former, either meanness, or greatness, as if they made all but one heap, Chap. 17. 11.

fowls] Heb fowl, as Ezek. 39. 4. properly, fowl of prey, Gen. 15. 11. 1 Sam. 14. 33. & 25. 14. chap. 46. 11. Jer. 12. 9.

of the mountains] On which fowl of prey, especially, do usually breed, and abide.

beasts] Heb. beast, as Ier.15.3. and as fowl before.

and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the field shall winter upon them] That is, both the one and the other, shall abide by them, find harbour with them, and feed upon them, all the year long. For we are not to conceive it, as if the meaning were, that the fowl, and the beasts should divide the year between them; that the fowl should summer, but not winter with them; the beasts should winter, but not summer with them, but that both winter, and summer, either of them, should make their abode with them, finding matter sufficient, such as they desire, & delight in, to detain them there, from summer to winter, and from winter to summer, from the one end of the year, to the other. Of such like distributions, in this Prophet very frequent, see on cap.5.1.4. and we need not therefore stand upon that nicety of some of the Jewish Commenters, of fowl abounding more in summer time, and beasts in winter. The words import a great, and continued waste: Which some understand of the wealth of the land, and the people therein abiding, being exposed as a prey, to those by whom they were subdued, or to the spoyl of theeves and robbers, either of their own, or from abroad. Others, of the carcases of men slain in great multitudes, and so left to be devoured by birds and Beasts, Psalm 79.2. Thus they, who expound it of the Ethiopians. For I pass by those of the Jewish Writers, and some also of ours, who understand it, either of the host of Gog, and Magog, Ezek. 39.4. or of Sennacherib's army, chap.37.37. neither of which I conceive to be probable. Both the verses I suppose, may be thus rendred, and knit together; But yet, with those other people, it shall be, (see the like ellipsis, Matth.25.14.) as when a fore harvest-time the bud being gone, and the green grape about producing the flower, and the sprigs be cut off with pruning-hooks, and the spreading branches be removed, and taken away, they are left together; (to wit, those sprigs, and branches, so cut off) or, (as some other likewise render it) So shall they (to wit, those people, like to those sprigs, and branches) be left together, &c.

V.7. In that time] That is, after this judgment executed upon the Ethiopians, in the dayes of the Messias: as chap.11.11. & 19.18. 19. A Prophecy of the conversion of the Ethiopians unto Christ, by the ministery of the Gospel: the first-fruits whereof, we have in that noble Courtier instructed by Philip. Act. 8. 27. 39.

Shall the Present be brought to the Lord of hosts] The Ethiopians shall yeeld up themselves to God, (whom they shall then know, and acknowledg, to be the Lord of hosts, Psal.24.8, 10. Ezek. 30. 8. and to his Christ; and shall shew, and manifest their submission by spiritual sacrifices, and oblations offered unto him, Psal. 68. 31. Zeph. 3.10. Mal.1.11. Act.8.27.37. as subjects declare their homage, and allegiance to their soveraign, by Presents, 2 Sam.8. 6.2 King. 17.4. 2 Chr.17.11. Psal.68.29, & 72.10. & 76.11. Chap. 16. 1. That which yet some expound of the prey taken from Sennacherib's army, ch. 33.23. confecrated to Gods service: as Num.31.28-47.50-54. see Ier 51.44.

Of a people scattered, and peeled] Or, from a people scattered, and peeled, the word, from, here wanting: as ch.52.2. is supplyed from the next clause: as ch.13.13. & 30.17.

from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto, a nation meted out, and trodden under feet] See of all this, v.2.

whose land the rivers have spoyled] That being now effected, whereof before they were advertised, v.2.

to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts] To the place, where Gods worship shall then be settled: as sometime it was at Jerusalem, Deut.12.5.11.14. Act.8.27. Joh.4.21. 23.

the mount Zion] A type of the Church, ch.2.2.3.

CHAP. XIX.

Vers. 1. THE burden of Egypt] An heavy Prophecy concerning Egypt. See ch.13.1. As the Prophecy in the foregoing Chapter, was against Ethiopia; so this is against Egypt: and the next after it, against both jointly, in regard of their vicinity, and mutuall confederacy. See likewise against Egypt, Jer.43. 10. &44.30. & 46.2.13. Ezek.29.& 30.& 31.2.18.& 32.

Egypt] Heb. Mitsraim. So termed, from one of Chams sons of that name, Gen.10.6. whose posterity seated themselves in that country: the name, Egypt, we have from the Greeks, whose Grammarians and Historians say, some of them, that it had that name from an ancient King, that there reigned: Others, from the river Nilus, that runs through it; as being at first the name, not of the country, but of the river; and that from the colour of the water thereof, black like a vulture. See Sihor, ch.23. 3. Jer. 2. 18.

Behold] An usual beginning with the Prophets, this especially; requiring attention to Gods messages, brought by them, and stirring up mens mindes to a serious and sedulous consideration of the matter therein contained. So ch.7.14.& 24.& 32.1. The Chapter consists of two parts; the former, concerning the calamities and ruine of the Egyptian State: the latter, concerning their restitution, and return unto God, v. 18.&c.

the Lord rideth] A description of God coming in judgment against Egypt, together with the sad and dismal effects thereof.

the Lord rideth] Heb. riding, as speaking of a thing presentias ch. 3.1. and a thing that he saw, Chap.2.1.2. as if he beheld the Lord riding in pomp and State toward Egypt, as Judges use to do unto the places, where they are to hold their session, or assise, Judg. 5.10. & 12,14.1 Sam.7.16. or, in a warlike manner, leading his troops, and riding before them, as Princes do, when they go out into the field 2 Sam.18.9. Psalm 18.10.& 45.4. Hab.3.8. Rev.6.2.& 19.11. 14.

upon a swift cloud] Heb. light, as chap. 18.1. Jer.2.23. because lightnes causeth swiftness. God is said to ride, as upon the heavens, Psal.68.4,33, &c. to make the clouds his chariots, Psal. 104. 3. and here, to come riding into Egypt upon a cloud, as to intimate an impossibility of keeping him out, from entrance upon any land he comes to invade: who comes riding not on the ground below, but aloft in the air Psal.18.11, 12. Matth.24.30. Rev.1.7. to more especially here, to note his sudden and unexpected coming against Egypt, because clouds nuuft needs be very rare in those parts, where ordinarily it never raineth, Deut.11.10,11. See Exek. 30. 3. and, not on a cloud only, but on a light, or swift cloud, as elsewhere, upon the wings of the wind, Psal.18.10.& 104.3. thereby to signifie, the speedy execution, and accomplishment of the judgment against Egypt, here denounced. So chapter. 13. 22. Ezek. 12. 27, 28.

and shall come into Egypt] Or, as the word may well be rendred, and coming into, or entering upon Egypt, yea, or, coming against Egypt as Gen.33.1. behold Esau coming, for the preposition is wanting: as 2 King.8.7.& 10.17.1 Chr.19.15. and the Prophet speaks it, as if he saw God, in some visible but stately, and majestical manner, either marching on against Egypt, or sailing in upon it, not unlike one of the levant fleets, as they commonly call them, where ina vast cloud full of water, suddenly falleth, and beateth down all that it lights upon: peradventure alluded to, Ezek. 30. 18. where mention is of a cloud, that should cover Egypt. See the like expressions of things; as in prefent view, chap.7. 14. & 10, 28—32. & 13, 4, 5.

and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence] There were two things that the Egyptians trusted much unto; the multitude of their idols, and the might of their men, but the Prophet here tells them, that neither of these should stand them in any stead. For that the one of them, to wit, their idols, should be shaken and shattered; and the other, to wit, their mighty men, should faint and fail.

idols] Of the word, see on ch.2.8.

Shall be moved at his presence] Or, shall tremble, or quake: as chap. 7.2. or, stagger, or reel, as chap.24.20.& 29.9. (for so the same word is in those places rendred, and would rather so be here, to expresse the emphasis of it) before, or, from his face, as the Hebrew hath it: that is, because of him: as it is rendred, Psal.38.3. or, for fear of him, as chap.21.15. The Egyptian idols shal be no more able to stand before the face of God, then the Philistine Dagon before the Ark of God, 1 Sam.5.3,4. See Exod.12.12. Jer.43.12,13.& 46.25. Ezek.30. 13.

and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it] That is, the courage of the Egyptians shall be utterly quailed, ler.46.5, 12,15,21. heart] For courage. Whence also that English term, 2 Sam. 17. 10.

Egypt] For Egyptians: as v.2.

melt] As chap.13.7.

in the midst of it] within them: as Psal.22.14. v.3.

V.2. And I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians] The Prophet now speaks, in the person of God, who in these words, threatens to set the Egiptians at odds, and disagreement, to destroy one another, by intestine jars, and wars, among themselves: as he did the like, sometime, with other nations, that came to invade his people, Judg.7.22.1 Sam.14.16,20.2 Chr.20.23. Chap.49.26. This some suppose to have been done under Pfammeticus, who living about these times, and being a petty King, among others, of a particular Province in Egypt, upon some indignities offered him, by the Princes of the other Provinces, to revenge himself upon them, called in some forraign forces, and by help of them, over-powring the rest, at length made himself Lord of all Egypt, Herodot. lib. 2. Diodor. lib. 1. Others imagine it, to have thus fallen out upon the Assyrians invading the country, some being willing to receive him, and another party opposing them: as Some also deem the like to have been, on the like occasion, in the State of Judah, chap.8.6. But the former seems more probable.

set] Heb. mingle, sometime in confederacy: as ch.9.11. sometime in war, and jar, and so here. See on chap.9.11.

the Egyptians against the Egyptians] Heb. Egypt against Egypt. as Moab for Moab, chap. 16.7.

and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour] They shall war (so the Hebrew) one with another, and seek one to destroy another, without any regard had, either to vicinity, or alliance, chap.9.19.20. Jer.31.34.

city against city] As city of city, 2 Chr. 15. 6. and house against house, Luk.11.17. but there house against house, is an house against it self: here city against city, is one city against another.

and Kingdome against Kingdome] One Province against another. For Egypt before the war raised by Pfammeticus, consisted of twelve Provinces, Herodot, l.2. Kingdome against Kingdome, one against another, as Matth.24.7.

V.3. And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof] Not their courage, and valour only, ver.2. but their wisdom, and policy also, shall faile: and fail, ver.11,13. God will infatuate them, and turn their wisedom into folly, 2 Sam.15.31. Job 5.13, 14. & 12.17, 20,24,25. chap.44.25. Rom.1.21, 22. 1 Cor.1. 20, 25, 27. & 3. 19.

fail] Heb. be emptied, as chap.24.3. Jer.19. 7. it is as if he had said; their wits shall be drained: alluding to their folly, in draining, and diverting the course of their river, and thereby causing the waters thereof to fail them, v.5.6.

and I will destroy the counsel thereof] Heb. swallow up: as chap.3. 12.& 20.7. that is, either bereave, and deprive them of that faculty, by which they might be enabled to give any prudent and wholsome counsel, for the safety and welfare of the State, called the spirit of counsel, Ch. 11.2. ver.11.13. or, overthrow, defeat, and frustrate their counsels, that they shall never take effect, Psal.33.10.11. Pro. 31.30. ch.8.10.

and they shall seek to the idols] When they are thus, either puzzeled in their counsels, or defeated in the issue of them, being at their wits end, they shall betake themselves to their idols: as Moab to his, chap.15.2.& 16.12. but with like success, both, and to their Magicians, as Pharao did. Exod.8.18.& 9.11. but neither of them shall be able to afford any ayd or advice to them: no more then in the like case unto Babylon, ch.47.12.

and to the charmers] The word here used is no where else found; and is by divers therefore diversly rendred. The Jewish Doctors here give us little light, only one of them tels us, that his Father told him, that it was an Arabick term, signifying some kind of Magicians, it seems to come from a root that hath a notion of doing things quietly, softly, gently, Gen.33.14.2 Sam.18.5.1 King.21. 27.ch.38.15. Whence some conjecture, that it should import some such kind of witches, as did disturb, and endamage men, when they were at rest in their sleep. Others, such as used fair, smooth, and gentle words, as some are said, by praising, and blessing things to bewitch them. It may rather be, that they had this name given them, from that soft, and low, or slow-and drawling speech, that they used, either in their spels, or in their answers to those that consulted them. See chap.8.19. For I cannot concur with them, that hold it to be the name of some idol.

and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizzards] Of these two, see on ch.8.19.

V.4. And the Egyptians will I give over into the hand of a cruell Lord; and a fierce King shall rule over them] These words the most, both of the Jewish, and ours, generally, expound, of those forraign Kings, by whom Egypt should be subdued. Some, and so the Rabbines unanimously, of the King of Assyria: 2 o.4. Others, of the King of Babylon, Jer.43.10.& 44.30.& 46.13. Ezek.29.19.& 30.10.24. Others, rather, of their own Kings, by their cruelty, and folly, rigorous courses, & unadvised projects, oppressing their subiects, weakning their Kingdoms, and by intestine jars working them ine one of another. That which the sequel of the context seems most fitly to agree with.

give over] Heb. shut up, or, close, Gen.8.2. Psal. 63.11. The Jewish Writers expound it, by another of neer affinity to it, and of the same with it, 1 Sam, 24. 18. & 26. 8. Psal. 31. 8. Nor seem wholly improbable, the conjecture of those, that suppose the Prophet made use of this word, rather then the other, though more usuall, in allusion to the sluces, or flews rather, mentioned, ver.10. wherin the Egyptians used to keep their fish: as intimating, that the Rulers here spoken of, should keep them shut up, and restrained, as they kept their fish in their flews.

into the hand] In the power: as Psal. 78. 61.

of a cruel Lord] Heb. Lords, in the Plural, hard, Deut.26.6, in the singular. Which yet the Jewish Writers, as our version hath it, understand but of one, as if it were said; some one hard, and harsh Lord, or other, or, an hard Lord simply, alledging divers places, where the word is in a plural form; though speaking but of some one, as Gen.24.29,& 42. 30. Exod. 21. 4, 6. 1. King. 22. 17. 2 Chr. 18. 16. which they expound of Sennacherib, as Others, also, of ours, do, of Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. 46.6. and some of Pfammeticus before mentioned, whom also each of them respectively understand to be the fierce King spoken of, in the next clause, the same thing, but in divers words, being intended in both. But on the other side, there want not, that take the word in a plural, as well notion, as form, and read the text; Lords hard, or harsh, each of them, a manner of speaking in Scripture very usuall. Of which, see on ch.2.20. So Pf.78. 15.& 119.137. Chap.16,8. and they understand it, to be spoken of those twelve Princes, or Lords, who as petty Kings, ruled Egypt, divided amongst them, into so many Provinces, after the death of Sethos, who had been King of the whole country before. See Herodot, lib.2.

a fierce King] The Hebrew epithet is sometime taken in the better part, for powerful, and strong, Gen.49.3. Num. 13.28.& 22.24. cap.25.3. sometime, in the worse part, too fierce, and cruel, Gen.49.7. Deut. 28. 50. and thus here. This fierce King, is by some supposed, to be Pfammeticus, the Father of Nechoh, by whom the good King Josias was slain, 2 King.23. 29.

saith the Lord, the Lord of hosts] See chap.10.16.

V.5. And the waters shall fail from the Sea] There were two principal means of upholding the Egyptian Estate, in wealth, and plenty; their traffick by sea, and the overflowing of Nilus, that instead of rain, which they utterly wanted, watered their ground for them; and by such slimy stuff, as it brought down along with it, made the soyl, which it overspread, exceeding fertile, and fruitful. In regard whereof, the inundation of it was anciently celebrated, and is yet to this day, with a great deal of solemnity, and a yearly account was taken, and kept, how high the river was risen; the expectation of a plentiful, or penurious crop, much depending thereupon. See Pliny, l.5.c.11.& l,35.c.7. But with the failing of both these, their principal props, and means of support, are the Egyptians here threatned. The former, some suppose to have been effected, partly, by the hostile incursions of the enemy, partly by their own jars, and divisions among themselves; and partly, by Pirats of other people, lying upon their coast, and disturbing their trade. Of which, talling out, much a bout these times, see Herodot. l. 2. The latter, by the folly of their own Princes, and Rulers of which, further hereafter. I am not ignorant, that some late Interpreters, refer all that is here said, to the latter only; reading the text, Sone, For they shall destroy the waters from running into the Sea, Others; For they shall diminish the waters from the Sea, or, of the Sea, that is, of the river Nilus; all great waters being by the Hebrews termed Sea. See chap.9.11.) For that the river shall be dryed up: Which they understand of the fond, and unadvised practice of those twelve Rulers, who for the making of a vast lake called the lake of Moeris, and the building of two stately Pyramides, in the midst of it and Labyrinth neer unto it, for bignels, and workmanship almost beyond belief; (and all this, only out of an ambitious humour, to leave a memorial of themselves and their greatnels, to posterity) both put their people to excessive labour and pain; and so weakned their river, by water drawn from it, that it could not so freely, and plentifully water the country, as formerly it had wont to do, and for this they cite Herodot. l. 2. And it may well be, that somewhat of this kind may be intimated in the latter part of the verse: of which, more anon. But for the former part of it, I adhere unto that, as most probable, that was formerly propounded.

the waters shall fail from the Sea] Or, shall be dryed up: as some of the Jewish Doctors expound it, from chap. 41. 17. and so the old Latine rendereth it. They shall be deprived of their Sea trade, it shall be no more beneficial to them, then as if the Sea had no access to them. See somewhat the like of Tyrus, chap.23.1,4. See also, ch. 11 15.

and the river shall be wasted, and dryed up] the river, to wit, Nilus called the river of Egypt, Amos 8.8.& 9.5. because it runs down abines unanimously, of the King of Assyria. 20.4. Others, of the King of Babylon, Jer.43.10.& 44.30.& 46.13. Ezek.29.19.& 30.10.24. Others, rather, of their own Kings, by their cruelty, and folly, rigorous courses, & unadvised projects, oppressing their subiect, weakning their Kingdoms, and by intestine jars working them ine one of another. That which the sequel of the context seems most fitly to agree with.

give over] Heb. shut up, or, close, Gen.8.2. Psal. 63.11. The Jewish Writers expound it, by another of neer affinity to it, and of the same with it, 1 Sam, 24. 18. & 26. 8. Psal. 31. 8. Nor seem wholly improbable, the conjecture of those, that suppose the Prophet made use of this word, rather then the other, though more usuall, in allusion to the sluces, or flews rather, mentioned, ver.10. wherin the Egyptians used to keep their fish: as intimating, that the Rulers here spoken of, should keep them shut up, and restrained, as they kept their fish in their flews.

into the hand] In the power: as Psal. 78. 61.

of a cruel Lord] Heb. Lords, in the Plural, hard, Deut. 26. 6, in the singular. Which yet the Jewish Writers, as our version hath it, understand but of one, as if it were said; some one hard, and harsh Lord, or other, or, an hard Lord simply, alledging divers places, where the word is in a plural form; though speaking but of some one, as Gen.24.29,& 42. 30. Exod. 21. 4, 6. 1. King. 22. 17. 2 Chr. 18. 16. which they expound of Sennacherib, as Others, also, of ours, do, of Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. 46.6. and some of Pfammeticus before mentioned, whom also each of them respectively understand to be the fierce King spoken of, in the next clause, the same thing, but in divers words, being intended in both. But on the other side, there want not, that take the word in a plural, as well notion, as form, and read the text; Lords hard, or harsh, each of them, a manner of speaking in Scripture very usuall. Of which, see on ch.2.20. So Pf.78. 15.& 119.137. Chap.16,8. and they understand it, to be spoken of those twelve Princes, or Lords, who as petty Kings, ruled Egypt, divided amongst them, into so many Provinces, after the death of Sethos, who had been King of the whole country before. See Herodot, lib.2.

was that ditch,or water-course, digged, after the reign of those twelve,by Psammetichus,as some; Strabo, lib.17.or by Necho his son,and Successor,as others Herodot. l. 2. attempting thereby, to make a free passage by water, from Nilus, into the red sea; in the pursuit of which attempt,Herodot. reports, that he lost an hundred and twenty thousand of his people ; and at length left the work unaccomplished. And to the impairing of the river, and the impeaching of the State,by such vain and fond courses as these,the Prophets word may wel be deemed,to have reference,in this place. See ver.6 .

V.6. And they shall turn the rivers far away] This seems to confirm the latter exposition of the words before-going. For who are they that should do this,the sons of men, saith one of the Jewish Interpreters,and those in likelyhood here intended,that drew away the streams of the river, into places far remote,from the main channel,it ran in. How beit,the werb being taken indefinitely,the text may be read,the rivers,or,streams,shall be turned far away:or,shall go backe:to wit,by the falling of the water : as some here render it. See ch.2. 20.

rivers] For,rivers,or the streams of it:as chap.11.15. or,as some, the water-courses drawn from Nilus, for the watering of their grounds:but the former seems more probable.

and] The copulative is not in the original:but were it to be supplyed,it might rather be rendred by the finitive, so that ; as chap. 11.3.& 13.2. If it be supplyed, as a copulative, it should rather have been inserted before the last branch of this verse, or at the beginning of the next.

the brooks of defence] That is,say some, the rivers, or streams of Egypt,in general:Egypt say they,being elsewhere so termed. And true it is,that the word here used,is in sound,and letters,somewhat like to that name, that Egypt bears in Hebrew. But neither are they the same,nor of the like form, nor in likelihood arising from the same root:for as for those other places;(which yet in effect are but as one) where the very same words are found, that are here used,to wit, 2.Kings.19.24.& ch.37.25.Though some of the Jewish Writers would by Matsor there, understand Egypt;yet others, of their own,therein controll them: and there is little reason,in either place,so to expound it. The word signifies,either obsession, as Deut.28.52.or mutation:as Deut.20.20. And Some therefore by the brooks,or rivers here mentioned,understand such water-courses, as environed strong cities,or holds,in regard whereof, they could not be so eatily supprized; termed therefore rivers of obsession,or siege,say some;because as places encompalled by them,could not be stormed nor taken, but by long siege ; or, of munition, and defence, as others; because they were no small strength unto those places;yea,were the main strength of Egypt,Ezek. 29. 3. & 30. 2. Howbeit, others understand them of water courses, kept in with banks,and dams;and they render the words, some of them,rivers of obsession,or siege,because enviroued and befet with those banks,as cities beliged are with the enemies camp. Others, rivers of munition,because fenced and mounded,by such works raised about them, to preserve and keep them from diminution, and decay.v.10.See Chap.22.11. Of whether of the two we take them,they could not but be wasted,when the main river,that fed them should fail.

shall be emptied] Or; wasted,or drained:or,exhausted.See chap. 19.3,& 17.4. Some render it,they shall waste,or exhaust the waters,to wit,the persons before spoken of. But the word is never used actively.See Job 28.4.Psalm.79.8. & 116.6,& 142.6.and it is no where else found:

and dryed up] As ver.5.and so constantly,Gen.8.13. Job 14.11. Pf.106.9.Ch.44.27.Ier.12.4.Hof.13.15,and it is amiss therefore rendred by some,they shall dry up,as before:the verb being never active, in the form here used.

the reeds and flags shall wither] Or,decay. See chap. 33.9. Those water-plants,or shrubs,must needs fade, and decay,when the waters,that nourished them,failed. So of the like, Job 8.11.and these were of much use with them;for of them,were their boats and barks usually made.See chap.18.1.In regard whereof,some Interpreters suppose,that a decay of shipping is here denounced : of these also, were matts for their beddings,weels for their fishing, and baskets of all sorts,commonly made with them.

the reeds] Heb.reed,or cane:for so is the Hebrew,and ours, from it.ch.3.6.& 42. 3. and flags] Heb.flags,or,veins:such as grew about the brink of the river Nilus,Ex.2.1. 3. and other,the like water-courses. Whereof also,the read-sea hath its name,in Hebrew.See chap.18.1.

shall wither] So chap.33.9.Lebanon is withered. The word is no where else found:though some render it,both here,and there,ere downa.But the former seems the more probable.

V.7. The paper reeds by the brooks,by the mouth of the brooks] To wit shall wither away.For that is here intended:& may be supplyed, either from the verse before going;or from what followeth in this.

paper reeds] The word is no where else found in Scripture:and is in that regard the more ambiguous.The most expound it,grass,insteancing for proof thereof,in a word neer unto it, Judg.20.33.or green things,as having reference to a word used,Pfal. 37. 35. and this way the Jewish Criticks generally run; with whom ours also have formerly unanimously concurred. Howbeit, the places they point us to,seem rather to look another way. And some latter Interpreters, whom our version follow,understand by it,the paper reeds, or canes,or rushes,(for a kind of bulrush also some make it)so called, because they afforded sheets of paper to write on:before linch paper, as we now have,or parchment,were for that purpose, in use.Now this kind of shrub being peculiar to Egypt,proved a rich commodity to that State, all civil people desiring to have traffick with them for it. Nor is it likely,therefore, that the Prophet would omit the tailing of such a waterplant,for which the land was so famous,and that was so advantagious unto it.The Hebrew word they suppose to be deduced from a word, that fignifies an hide, or,skin, Gen.3.21.Exod,34.30. because the sheets of paper were made of the rind,or coat of it.I should rather derive it from a word,that fignifies to strip,or make bare,ch.3.17.& 32.11,because it was stripped to make writing-sheets for books,and tables,and other the like uses as hemp,and flax,is,to make linnen in these times;though after a far diverse manner.See Pliny,lib.13.ch.11,12.

by the brooks] Heb.brook,or river,either the river Nilus it self, as some here understand it,so termed,Gen. 41.1.2. Exod.4.9.& 7.15. 18.or,the water-courses,derived from it:(the word being taken collectively) of which before,ver.6.or both.

by the mouth of the brooks] Heb.brook,or river,as before;that is, say some,by,or,about,the fountain of the river Nilus;at which the water issueth out,as at a mouth;where,if moisture fail, it cannot be expected in the places more remote, that must have all their water thence:and so infer hence, a stupendious waste, and consumption of that river,reaching up to the very first head of it. But this seems nothing probable,nor doth the Prophet seem to speak, here, of the river it self alone, but, as our version rendreth it, of the streams, and water-courses also, derived from it. Besides that the mouth of the river might seem rather to import those streams, or channels, whereby it disgorgeth it self into the sea, (whereof,see chap.11.15.)being in other languages so termed:and being applyed to the water-courses,therein derived,those passages, whereby the water of the river made its entrance into them, or whereby they emptied themselves again into the river. But by mouth, I suppose simply to be understood the brinks, or banks of either,called as here,the mouth,so elsewhere,the lips,Gen.41.3.Exod. 2.3.Ezek.47,6.7.and the two brinks,as lips,on either side, seem to make up a mouth,are at least,to the river, or water course,as lips to the mouth of man,or beast.

and every thing sowen by the brooks,shall wither] Heb. every thing sown beside the river,or brook,shall be dryed up:Places neer to rivers and brooks,are wont to be most fertile,and fruitful,and neer them men desire usually to sow,and plant,Chap.32.20. alluded to, Eccl. 11.1. But the things there sowen, and planted, must needs fail, when the water fails,that made the places adjacent so fertile. This comprehends such grains,herbs, roots, and other useful plants, as hemp,flax,and the like,as they used to set,or sow there. See Exod. 9.31.32.Num.11.5.ver.9.as the former,those that grew there of themselves;v.6.

be driven away,and be no more] Heb.and not be:as Pfal. 37. 36.& 39.13.shall so fade away,that they shall be, as if there never had been any such thing there. Though there be, that understand it of the spoyl that the enemy shall make of them : but the course of the context seems to carry it the other way.

V.8.The fishers also shall mourn] As chap. 3.26. Because the fish shall fail: as they must of necessity,when the element fails,out of which they cannot live;& which formerly did abundantly furnish them with fish,Num.11.5.

and they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament] the same thing in other terms.

cast angle] Heb.hook:as Job 41.1.Hab.1.15.there being two kinds, or courses,of catching fish,most commonly used; by hook, or, by net, the one is pointed at in this branch ; the other in the next.

the brooks] Heb.brook,or,river,as before,ver.7.

and they that spread nets upon the water shall languish] All sorts of fisher men shall be disheartned, and much grieved, because their trading shall decay, nets] Heb.nettas:Hab.1.15.16. and as hook before.

upon the water] Heb.upon the face,or,surface of the water:as Gen. 1.2.Eccl.11.1.

V.9.Moreover] Heb.And:as chap.7.10.& 8.1.

they that work in fine flax, and they that weave net-works shall be confounded] Because the materials shall fail,that should set them on work.

in fine flax] The epithet given to the flax here mentioned,is ellewhere used of vines,and their branches:and is deemed to import the choyceft of them,chap.5.2.& 16.8.and in like manner, being here applyed to flax,it seems to imply the fineft, and choiceft sort of it,as in Arabick,the choiceft sort of silk,is by some of the Jewish Criticks,reported so to be termed:though some of them render it, with the Chaldee,combed,or dressed flax; because the Talmudists commonly use the word in that sense.But that which one of them adds,that of it they made nets to fish with, is as ridiculous, as to imagine,that men should use to fish with silken nets, or to angle, as he said sometime, with golden hooks. That fine linnen and linnen yarn,was a principal commodity in Egypt,appears,1 King. 10.28

Prov.

Prov. 7. 16. Ezek. 27. 7. Of the several sorts whereof, and the gain that Egypt anciently made thereof, see Pliny, l.19. ch.1.

net-works] The word here used, is by some supposed to come from another,that fignifies an hole,Chap.11.8.Ezek 8.7.and some of them,therefore,understand by it,nets, to fish with, so called because full of holes to let the water pass at,while they hold fast the fish:this the rather , because,fay they,it followeth,verf.10.the nets are broken:but of that,when we come to it. Others of them, with more probability,conceive it,to import cloth,or garments,wrought or woven of purpose,with many holes in them, such as our net-works, cut-works,and loom-works ordinarily are. See chap. 3.18. But others deducing it from a word,that fignifies white.Esth. 1. 6. & 8.15.render it,white-works:that being one special commendation of linnen,lawn,and the like,to be pure white:and such,therefore,were men of chief note wont to be clad with,Esth.8.16. Dan. 7.9.whereof also,the name taken from this,is very frequently given them in Hebrew,1 King.21.8,11.Neh.2.16.& 4.14.Eccl. 10. 17.ch.34.12.Ier.26.19.& 39. 6. and this to me seemeth the most probable.

V.10.And they shall be broken in the purposes thereof,all that make fluces, and ponds for fish] These words are very diverfly rendred, and expounded,in regard of some terms in them very ambiguous ; we will first therefore discuss the words, and then draw up the expositions,that seem to be most probable.

in the purposes]The word fignifieth foundations,Pfal.11.3.Hence some expound it,projects, or,purposes. Which are wont to be the foundation and ground of action,and practice. Others, the walls,and mounds,or,dams,and sluces, raised and built, to keep in the water,in the stews,or ponds, hereafter mentioned. The one of these two,seems to be most likely here intended. For little skew or colour of reason is brought for their opinion,by those,that render it nets:and yet not a few are they,that go this way:and they derive it from a wrong root, that translate it, ivregnous, or well-watered places:as if it came from a word,that importeth drinking, which the analogy will not bear.

thereof] Or, of it, to wit, of Egypt, their kings,and Rulers,of whom before,v.5.6.and hereafter,v.11,13.

all that make] Or,of all that make.

sluces] Or,dams. So some render it;as from a verb,that fignifies to shut,or stop up,Gen.8.2.Pfal.107.42.Others,for here,or; gain, as the word is very commonly used,ton.1.3.Mal.3.5. the preposition for,supplyed:as Mal.2.5.

and ponds]Or,stews,to keep fish in;either for sale,or,to make use of other wise,when they please.

for fish]Heb.of soul, ponds of soul, or. of souls, that is,living things:the word taken collectively, for ponds of fish; according to that,Gen.1.20.let the water bring forth gliding creature of soul : or, ponds of desire,delight,or pleasure:as Gen.23.8.if it be beyour pleasure ; and Deut.23.24. thon mayest eat according to thy desire,or, pleasure, ponds serving for delight and pleasure. The whole verse then, may thus be rendred,And the dough her,or,their projects, they shall all be broken that make fluces,or dams,for ponds of fish:Or, her, or their banks,or dams,shall be broken,with all those that make for fure,or; gain,ponds;or,that make gain of ponds,or,stews,of fish,or,for pleasure. Whether way we render it, the meaning is, that all the pains and cost that men had been at, about the making of ponds, and stews,to keep fish in and about dams and sluces, to secure them, should come to nothing,the water being drained away from them, neither yeeld them any gain, nor stand them in any stead:and in a word as before he intimated,that there should be no catching of fish,ver.8.so here,that there should be no keeping of fish with them.Howbeit,some expound it,as if the meaning were, that the people were worn out,by working about those lakes, and watercourses,above mentioned,and all to no purpose:the like whereunto, see Ier.51, 58. But the other sense before given, suits better with the main current of the context.

V.11.Surely the Princes of Zoan are fools:the counsel of the wise counsellers of Pharao is become brutish] The Prophet,in these words, diredeth us unto one main cause of the calamities of the people and State of Egypt,before related;to wit,not to much any forraign hostility,or invasion from abroad,as their own folly; the witless carriage of their Nobles, and Counsellers at home, who by their fond flatteries,foothed up their Kings, and put them upon such inconsiderate designs,as tended to the impoverishing of the land,and the ruinating of the state.

Zoan] Heb.Tsoan,a very ancient city in Egypt,Num.13.22. one of their King seats,that gave the name unto the whole Province about it. Pf.78.12.it was from the Syriack form,by the Greeks, called also Tanis,by the loss of a letter,as of Tsor, or Tsur, Tsoos and Tyrus:and from it,the Tanaitick diuision, and the Tanaitick stream, one of the principal ones,by which Nilus makes its way into the sea. See Herodot , l. 2. Strabo. l. 17. Pliny.l. 5. ch 9. 10.

the counsell of the wise counsellers] Heb.of the wise of the counsellers of Pharao the counsel,That is,the counsel of those that are the wiseft among them;as the wife of women, Prov. 14. 1.that is, the wifer fort of them;such as are wifer then many,or the moft,ordinarily are,Prov,31.10.Eccl.7. 28.and, the wick'd of the earth. Ezek.6.11.for the wickedeft upon the earth. The fierce of the nations,Ezek.28.7.for the fierceft among them.They impair the force of the sentence,that render it with a needless interpolition,the wise; or wife men and counsellers ; there being no copulative in the text.

is become brut ish] Nor foolish only, but fottish: such as might be better feen brut beasts then men endued with common sense. See Ier.10.14.51.17.

How say ye unto Pharao] The Prophet turns his speech unto the king of Egypts counsellers and Nobles, taxing them,by way of expostulation,for their groundless opinion, overweening conceit, and vain vaunting and boasting to their king,of their wisdom coming unto them,as by descent,and the antiquity of their houses; thereby to commend themselves,and their advices,to him; and to procure the greater regard to what they suggested. Or,as some, for their gro's and palpable flatteries, wherewith they wrought into their king,the like vain conceit of his own extraordinary wisdom, as derived to him from his ancestors; and of the antiquity of his flock,drawn down by a continued line of many descents, through a multitude of ages,and a vaft number of years. from some of their imaginary deities.

say ye]Or,can ye say,as Ier.2.23.with what face can ye say it ? So Ier. 8.8.

say]Or,as some,I relate.Put such words, as these, into your kings mouth,as 2 Sam.14.3.

unto Pharao]Or,as some,of Pharao,as ch.37.33.

Pharao] An common name of the kings of Egypt,in the most ancient times,it being,as it may seem,a term of Sovereignty affixed them,Gen.12.15.& 40.2.& 41.10.& 41.10.& Exod. 1. 8.11. For he may justly be doubted,whether they shoot not wide,that give the word,either an Hebrew,or a Chaldee original. Yet,by some other peculiar furnames,they were wont to be distinguished,as Pharao Necoh,2 Kings 23.29.and Pharao Hophra,ler.44.30.In latter times about the time of the Macedonian Empire,they came to be called, Ptolomeys, not in regard of any worldlie disposition, from a Greek poetical tearm, so fignifying,as some have imagined ; but from a name of great antiquity,in those Eastern,and Southern parts,Talmais:which among others,one of the sons of Anak bare,Num.13.22. Iosh.15.14.So the Talmudists call Ptolomy, that caused the law of Moses to be translated into Greek, and from thence the Apostle Bartholmew,had his name, Bar-talmai,or Bar-tulmai, as the Syriack pronounceth it.Mat.10.3.that is,the sons of Talmai;or, Ptolomy, after the Greek phrase;as Bar- Jona the sone of Jona,Mat.16.17. and Bar- Jesus,the son of Jesus,Act. 13.6. and Bar-Timeus the son of Timæus,Mat.10.46.Both names,it may be, came at first, from some great one of special note,in those places, of that name;as the name of Abimelech,to the kings of Palestine,Gen.20.2.& 26.1. Pfal.34.1. and of Benhadad to the kings of Syria,1 ker.49.27. Amos 1.4.of Candace,to the Queens of Ethiopia, Act.8.27.(See Plin lib.6.ca.29.) and of Cesar,to the Romane Emperors, Mat. 22.17.Luk.2.1.Joh.19. 12.Act.11.28.& 17.7.& 25.10.Phil.4.22.Being,through ufe,a note and title of Soveraignty, but having otherwise no notion of any such thing in it selfe,as the name, Abimelech,hath.

Pharao]The Pharao,here mentioned,some suppose to have been Sethon,a foolish king,fay they as Heredot us shews; who yet saith little of him,fave that he neglected his military men. See further of him,on ch.37.37.Others with more probability, take him to be Psammetichus,spoken of ver.4.and under whom, and those twelve, between Sethon and him,the calamities here threatned,as those former affirm,were to befal them. I suppose, it need not be restrained to any one particular king,but may well extend it self unto those kings in general,that ruled Egypt in those times, and those more specially,by whose fond and unadvised counsels these mischiefs were procured;of which number,Sethon appears not to have been any.

I am the son of the wise] Heb.a son of the wise:as a son of the gods,Dan.3.25.& a son of man,Rev.1.13. for to those places should be rendred,Or,a son of wise ones. That is, wise men;a desect of the subject,as ver.12.Gen.4.18.expressed,Deut.1.13.15.) and having their wisdom by inheritance. The words are either of the kings counsellors,concerning themselves, or his own,suggested to him,in parasitical manner,by them, concerning himself. Yet it is somewhat over-harsh to render it,as some would, a son of wise ones; thou art,or he is. The Egyptians,anciently,for wisedom and learning,arrogated much to themselves,Act.7. 22. And out of other remote parts,many that were greedy of knowledg, and variety of learning,did,for their better satisfaction,therefore,travel into Egypt, to have,conference with the wise men there. See Diodor.lib.1.Pla in Timæo , Clemens, Strom. lib. 1, and Eusebius *præpar.*lib 10.

the son of ancient kings] Heb.a son of kings of antiquity,as Deut. 33.15.Chap.23.7 .The Egyptians vaunted much of the antiquity of their nation,their Kings and Priests, especially, who re nored themselves,about these times,to have records of their descent from the gods,that in humane shape sometime,governed there,by 341. generations,under no fewer kings,containing 10340.t.years, beginning at their first king of that divine stirp, unto Sethons decease; and that within that period of time,the Sun had four times changed his course, from East to West twice:and twice back again, from

West

West to East, Herodot.lib.2. But these fabulous relations were but meer fictions, devised by their Priests, to puff up their princes, and to gain credit to themselves.

V. 12. where are they? where are they wise men?] A tart and sarcastical interrogation; like that, 1 Cor.1.20. What is become of thy wise counsellors? Why do none of them appear, to acquaint thee with these evils that will betide thee; For so it follow-eth.

and let them tell thee now] The copulative, some deem here, redundant; as Gen.36.24. Exod 1.1. Levit.7.16. Others suppose a defect of some word, to be supplyed: Let them now appear, or arise (as the usual phrase in Scripture is, Jer.2.27.28.) and tell thee. See the like, Zach.2.6. But the words may well be rendred, That they may now tell thee; as ch.11.3.& 13.2. See the like speech to Babylon, ch.47.12.13.

and let them know what the Lord of Hosts hath purposed against Egypt] Or, that they may know, or, simply with reference to the former branch, that they may tell thee, and know themselves; or, or know; as Gen.2. 6. Judg.11.31. (in both which places, in the margent of our Bibles, there wants an or) That they may either tell thee, or take notice themselves, as having that taught them, which they were before ignorant of, and which all the great wisdom they boast of is not able to acquaint them with, ch.41.22,26,28. & 47.11. Or lastly, by telling thee, make known. See Jer.9.13.

the Lord of Hosts]ch.14, 27.

hath purposed]Heb. consulted, or counselled, as Jer.3..20.30.49. Here, the rather to answer the term counsellors, ver.11. and because they pretended to be of counsel with their Gods, and to be acquainted with such matters as were concluded in the Court of Heaven, as false Prophets also usually did, 1 King.22.6,24. Ch.36.10.& 40.14. & 47.13. Jer.23.18. 22.

upon Egypt] Either against, as ch.5.30. Or, concerning Egypt, as ch. 1.1.

V 13. The Princes of Zoar are become fools] Or, dote, as it is rendred, Jer.50.36. where the same is said of the Princes, or Wizards of Babel. See the like of other the heathens, professed wise ones, Rom.1.22. The word is, by some, deemed to import, a wilful, or obstinate disposition in, or course of folly, or, a presumptuous folly, because the same word, in another flexion, signifies, sometime, to will, Hos.5.11. sometime, to presume, Gen.18.27,31. Of Zoan, see on ver.11.

the Princes of Noph] A famous city in Egypt; built, as some say, by their first king Menas, Herodot.lib.2. Though others ascribe it to a latter; Diodor.lib.1. It might be founded by the one, beautified and, enlarged, made in some sort, a new, by the other: but agreed on to be one of the goodliest, and famousest cities in Egypt, where in their kings, therefore, many of them, held their ordinary residence. It is mentioned by this name also, Jer.2. 16.& 44.1.& 46.14,15. And is, by some, deemed to have its appellation from an Hebrew word signifying, a wall, coall, or, region: (as a word of neer affinity with it imports, Josh.12.23. 1 King. 4. 11.) rendred situation, Psal.48.2. And for its situation, some highly commend it. But to force Egyptian tearms to Hebrew notations, is not proper. It is elsewhere, in Scripture, called, Moph, Hos. 9.6. whereof the Greeks, and Latines, have framed their Memphis. Howbeit, Strabo, lib.17. informs us that there were two several cities in Egypt, the one called Memphis; and the other, Momemphis, (peradventure, Memphus:) that their sacred Ox Apis, was kept in the former; their holy Cow, in the other. Whether Noph, might not be the one, and Moph the other. I leave it to the consideration and conjecture of others. For as concerning the mountain, Mophi, whence some would have Memphis to be called, Moph) with his mate Crophi, between which Nilus his head-spring should rise; and run in one channel, to Ethiopia, in another, toward Egypt; they are both alike figments, having no existence out of the brain of the Temple tre a furer, that to Herodot related it; nor doth he profess to esteem any other wise of them. Noph, or Memphis, formerly so tearmed, is, by some, deemed to be that most populous city, which we commonly call, Grand Cairo, as the great city, (ay some; though others, render other reasons of that name. The Arabian writers are reported to call it, Mesr-hadith, that is, New-Egypt. Zoan, and Noph, are by some, supposed, to be specially here mentioned; because the one, to wit, Noph, was situate near to the utmost border of Egypt, upward, toward the land of Ethiopia; the other, to wit, Zoan, in the nether part of the country, toward the fall of the river into the Midland-sea, which, for the latter, is true enough: (See on ver. 11.) but for the former, seems not so. For though Memphis be situate about some twenty miles above the head Delta, where the river Nilus divideth it self into two main channels, (See on ch. 31.9.) which afterward brancheth into seven several streams; ch 11. 15. yet is it some hundred of miles distant from Siene and Philes, the confines of Egypt and Ethiopia. See Strabo, lib.17. and Plin. lib.9.ch 7. But these two, seem rather here to be mentioned, because they were principal and royal cities, and might therefore fitly comprehend all the rest. See the like, Jer.2.16.

are deceived] The pride of their hearts hath deceived them: as God, of Edom, Obad.3.

they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are the stay of the tribes thereof] Or, the stayes, or, Princes of the tribes thereof have seduced Egypt. That is, their Princes, and wise counsellers, either by their ill grounded advices, and flattering suggestions; or by their vain and false predictions, and promises of prosperous successe, have deluded the whole land, and led them into courses destructive to the State, which they ought to have supported. See ch.3.12. & 9. 16.

the stay] Heb. corner. So the word properly signifies, 2 Chr.28.24. Job 1.19. Jer.31.40. Then a stone, laid in the corner of a building, where two walls meet, and are therewith united, Eph. 2.14, 20, 21. called therefore the head of the corner, Psal.118.22. and the corner-stone, Job.38.6. Jer.51.27.& a corner, simply, Zach. 10.4. See chap. 28.16. And because such stones, so placed, are a principal stay, strength, and support to a structure, hence it comes to pass, that the same tearm is used, as for towers, or, bulwarks, 2 King. 26.15. Zeph. 1.16.& 3.6. So for Princes and Rulers, or persons of prime place; for to them also it is given, Judg.20.2.1 Sam.14.38. There, in the plural, number; here, in the singular; but joyned to a verb plural, to comprehend them all, and take in each of them, See on ch. 2.20. Some would have the word, here used, to signifie, not to much a corner, as an end, and render the text, unto the end, or utmost part thereof: as implying, no province, or region throughout the land, to be free from this seducement. And it is true, that the corner of a building, is the utmost part of it. But beside a needless addition to the text, I find not where the word is used in that notion, for as for Judg. 20. 2. & 1 Sam. 14. 38. The extremities, or utmost ends of the people, seem to sound somewhat harsh in either place.

of the tribes thereof] The Prophet speaks here of Egypt, according, not to their language, but his own country dialect; with whom the several tribes had this tearm. The word signifies a rod, Chap. 10.5.15.& 14.29. But this commonly used, where it is rendred a rode, for the a number of people united into a body, as descended from any of Jacobs twelve sons; whose posterity therefore was divided into twelve tribes. And this appellation therefore given them, as some think; because they were as rods, shooting forth, and branching out from one stem, or stock, the prime Patriarch Jacob, or in reference to those rods, on which their names were written, Num. 17.2. But the tearm seems more ancient then so, Gen.49.16.& 28. 1 rather suppole, that this denomination was given to the tribes, in regard of the judiciary power and government belonging to each tribe respectively, and residing in the head, or heads of it. For the word signifying, not so much a walking, as a ruling rod, a scepter, as we say, Psal.2.9.& 110.2. implyeth power, and authority, Psal.45 6. Ezek.19.13,14. And this these words of Jacob seem to impore where he saith, Dan shall judg his people, as one of the tribes of Israel, Gen.49.16. As our Prophet therefore calleth Cyrus, Gods anointed, Chap.45.1. in way of allusion to the right of anointing kings among Gods people, 1 Sam.10.1.& 16.13. though no such ceremony was in use among the Persians: so in reference to the Jewish tribes, he gives this title, to those several Nomi, as the Greeks call them; or precinctt, and prefectures, as the Latine tearm eth them, into which the land of Egypt was divided; the rather also, for that they were just as many in number, about those times at least, as the Jewish were. See Herodot. lib. 2. and Pliny, lib. 5. chap. 9. though some other reckon many more. See Strabo, lib. 17.

thereof.] This addition overthroweth the interpretation of those, who understand the last words of this verl. the stay of tribes, or the corner-stone of States, as spoken of Egypt, who professed her self to be a stay and shore to other States. Of which, see on ch. 18.1. for it shews evidently, that the speech is of those, that either were, or ought to have been, in their several places, and within their several precincts, respectively, the supporters of the State, Psalm. 75.3.

V.14. The Lord hath mingled a perverse spirit in the midst thereof] The Prophet here declareth a principal ground of this distraction, in the Egyptian Estate, the unadvised counsels, and courses, that their Princes took, and the calamities, that by means thereof, the whole Country sustained; to wit, a secret hand of God; his just judgment following them for their pride and insolency; and infatuating them in their projects, and purposes, See v.10. So Rom.2.11 22.24.26.

mingled] Or, poured out, given them to drink. Of the use of the word, lee on chap.5.22. Gods judgments in Scripture, are oft-times resembled by a cup, containing such liquor, as being strong and heady, so distempers men, that it makes them either so brain-sick and giddy, that they turn round or stagger with it, as not able to stand steddily, or so out-ragious, that they fare like mad-men, and mischieve both themselves, and others. See Psal. 60.3.& 75.8. ch. 51.17. 21, 22. Ier. 25, 15, 16, 27, 28. Lam. 4. 21. Ezek. 23. 32-34.

a perverse spirit] a spirit of error, or seductement, as the Chaldee, and the Greek render it, or, of giddinesse, as the Latine, either of which, suits well with what here ensueth: The Hebrew word, no where else found, comes from a verb, that signifies to pervert, turn away, or make crooked, chap.24.1. Lam.3.6. it is plural, and of a duplicate form: as if he had said, a spirit of extream perverse ties. Instead of that spirit of wisdome which they so much boast of, God hath made them drunk with a spirit of stupidity, and erroneousnesse, which being being possessed with, they run headlong into perverse and crooked courses, whereby they carry all things away, unto the great disturbance of the State, chap.29.10,14. Rom. 11.8. See Ezek. 21. 32. where a word of neer affinity to this, is thrice repeated. This is supposed to have been fulfilled, a great part of it, in the time of whole twelve, that shared the Kingdom among them, after Sethons decease; who falling at variance among themselves, did exceeding-ly distract, and disturb the whole land, until Pfammetichus, at length, over-powred and mastered them all, and so made himself absolute Lord of all. See v.4.

in the midst thereof] Or, into it, to wit, Egypt, her Princes especially, or, among them, as ver.3.ch.5.8.

and they have caused Egypt to erre, in every work thereof] The effect of this spirit of error, and giddinesse, wherewith the Princes were possessed, redounding to the prejudice of the main body of the whole State, and disturbing all employments. When the head is distempered with drink, the whole body staggers, and no member is able to carry it self steddily, in any work, or office belonging unto it, Chapter 24.19, 20. and 29. 9. Psalm. 107. 26, 27. Jer. 23.9.

as a drunken man staggereth in his vomit] Heb. wandereth: that is, walloweth, or, rolleth to and fro, and cannot get out of it, Job 12. 24,25. Jer.48.26. like a wandering man, that hath lost his way in a wood, or a wilderness, where he can find no issue out, Gen.21.14. Pl. 107.4. See ch.28.7.8.

V.15. Neither shall there be any work for Egypt, which the head, or tail, branch, or rush, may do] All Estates and conditions, shall be so distracted and disturbed, that they shall have no mind, nor opportunity, to mind or attend ought. So 2 Chr. 15.5. Zach. 8.10. head, and tail, rush, and branch: a proverbial speech, for high, and low; strong, & weak. See ch.9.14.

V.16. In that day] In those times, wherein this judgment shall befall them ch.17.9.

shall Egypt be like unto women] The Egyptians, their men, yea their military men, shall turn milk-sops, shall become as faint-hearted as women, ver.1. Jer.51.30.

and it shall be afraid, and fear, because of the shaking of the hand of the Lord, which he shaketh over it] Heb. from the face of, &c. as Psl. 38.3. Joel 2.6,10. By reason of the judgment before mentioned, by the Lord inflicted on them, ver.14. illustrate here by an allusion to Moses stretching out of his hand, at Gods command, over the red-sea; tobring the sea back on the Egyptians, to drown, and destroy them; Exod.14. 24,25, 26-28. It shall not be like Sennacheribs shaking his hand at Jerusalem, ch.10.32. that proved unsuccessful; but as God shaking his hand over the Egyptian troops, in time past, that took effect, to the ruine, and overthrow of them; (see ch.10.24. & 11.15.) and as his shaking of it over the Assyrian forces, chap.30. 32.

V.17. And the land of Judah shall be a terrour unto Egypt] Not that the Iews should put Egypt into any such fear, or slight, in regard of ought by them done, or attempted against it, but that the judgment of God executed and inflicted on the Jews, whom the Egyptians had undertaken to protect, ch.20.5,6.& 36.6. shall, besides their intestine broyls and combustions, further exceedingly dismay them: they shall tremble for fear, when they see the land of Judah, that relyed on them, chap.30.2.& 31.1. over-run, and distressed by the Assyrian forces, chap. 36. 1. as expecting the like to betide them too; partly in regard of their confederacy, which between those two States, was ever quent, and constant; chap.30. 4,5. 2 King.17.4.& 18.21. Jer.2.18.& 37.5. Ezek. 17.15. and partly also, of their vicinity, Ioth. 13.3.& 15.4.1 Sam. 27. 7.8. the Philistines land only lying between them and it: and the rather so, here, for that the hand of Judah lay in the Assyrians way to Egypt, 2 King. 23. 29. which being subdued, therefore, by the Assyrian, would make his passage unto Egypt the more free. So Ethiopia is said to be affrighted and afflicted at the fall of Egypt, in regard of their neernels to them, and conjunction with them, Ezek. 30.9, 10. and other neighbouring nations, at the fall of Tyre, chap. 23.5. Ezek. 26.15-18. Beside that the Egyptians might justly expect the like, or worse, from the hand of God, when they should behold, and consider how he had dealt with his own people, ch. 7.17,19.& 8.7,8. See Jer. 25.19. Howbeit, some draw down this Prophecy lower, to the destruction of Judah and Jerusalem, by the Chaldeans, Jer. 37. 10.& 39. 2,8. and the conquest of Egypt also by them, Jer. 43.10-13.& 44. 30.& 46. Ezek. 29.19, 20.

a terrour] The word here used, but no where else found, (a condition common to it, with many others, in this Prophecy, as if the Prophet had of purpose coined them, to make his stile the more emphatical) as a noun verp regnant: and signifies such a trembling, quivering, and quavering, as is wont to befall men, when being surprized and overmastered with fear, they cannot stand still, but go, as it were, dance with their feet, and their hears seems likewise to dance within them, the very same, that the term of trepidation, in Latine, doth in its original import. For as that, so this comes of a word, that signifies first to dance, as at feasts is usual, 1 Sam. 30. 16. and then to situate such a dancing, through fear, Psal. 107. 26. where it is applyed to just such a disposition, in persons distressed, and distract ed, as is here intimated; and resembled by the same similitude that is here also, ver. 14.

every one that maketh mention thereof, shall be afraid in himself (Or, rather, every one, (to wit, of the Egyptians) that calleth her to mind, with himself, (that doth seriously call to mind, and consider with himself, what is befallen the land of Judah) shall be afraid, or, shall fear, the very thought of it, shall strike a terror into him: and to this reading, the points in the text lead. So 2 Chr. 17. 10.& 20.29. Act. 5. 11.

because of] As ver. 16. or, for fear of. Heb. from the face of as ch. 21. 15.

the counsel of the Lord of hosts, which he hath determined] Heb. is consulting, or, decreeing See ch. 14. 24, 26.

against it] Heb. against it, or, concerning him: either the Jewish people, which the Egyptians themselves, shall then see executed; or, the Egyptians expecting thereupon, their own turn to come next. See v. 12. Some suppose an allusion in this clause, to the acknowledgment of Gods hand against them, Exod. 14. 25.

V. 18. In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt speak the language of Canaan] A gracious prediction of the conversion of Egypt, unto the service of the true God, in the latter times, after the judgments here denounced, fulfilled, and executed on them. See the like comfortable clofes, Chapter 6.13. and 17.7. and 18.7. and 23. 17, 18. and in particular, concerning Egypt. Jer. 46. 26.

In that day] Nor while these calamities lye thus heavy on them; but in after times, when these evils are over. So are the same words used, chap. 4.2.& 18.7. This some suppose to have been fulfilled, not long after the time of this Prophecy, in the dayes of Ezekiah, when upon Sennacheribs invasion of the land of Judah, many Jews fled into Egypt, and having liberty there for exercise of their own religion, were the means of converting many Egyptians to God, (not unlike to that, Act. 8.4.& 11.19, 21.) being the rather wrought upon, and prevailed with, upon that miraculous, and most remarkable defeat, given by God to Sennacheribs forces, and the deliverance of Jerusalem. For thereupon it is said, that many strangers brought gifts unto the Lord, to Jerusalem, and Presents to Ezekiah, Chr. 32.23. So Esth. 8.17. Psal. 138.4, 5. chap. 59.19, 20. as Others, (and so the Iewish Writers) that many Egyptians, that serving under Sennacherib, having escaped in that mighty slaughter, and being kindly used by Ezekiah, (as those Syrians by Joram, 2 King. 6.23. at their return into their own country, abandoned their wonted idolatries, and addicted themselves wholly to the service of the true God; as did Naaman, 2 King. 5. 17. But because there is little footing found of ought in this kind, in the records of antiquity, either sacred, or prophane, (for as for that, which one of the Rabbines produceth, from c.45.14. seems little to this purpose;) It is rather to be referred unto the times of the Messias, under whose Kingdome, the Gospel was planted in those places, and as well in Ethiopia, Chap. 18. 7. and in Assyria, as in Egypt, verse 23.25.

five cities] A certain number, for an uncertain; as all generally agree: five for many, say some: but in Scripture, five is more commonly used for a small number, especially, when five are either called out, or opposed unto ten, many more as Levit. 26,8. Chap. 30. 17. 1 Cor. 14.19. in which last place five be reckoned, as a very small number, in regard of thousand, and of ten thousand much more five five cities of Egypt, must needs, consequently, be deemed a very small scantling, in regard of that whole country, which by some Authors is reported to have had above ten thousand, by some twenty thousand cities. See Herodot. l. 2. & Mela. l. 1. c. 10. To this, therefore, some lay, that as there were among the Philistines, five principal, or head cities, though many other in feriour, and less ones besides, 1 Sam. 6. 4. so there were five mother-cities in Egypt, Memphis, Tanis, Alexandria, Bubastis; and Heliopolis. Which they would gather out of Ezekiel, 30. but there are more then six mentioned in that Chapter, ver. 13, 14, 16, 17, 18. Others, that the meaning is, that five cities, only, or simply, are not meant, but five of six, as if five cities for one should come in unto God, or one city of six only, should flie unto God, and perish in, and for their sin: but how the text will bear this, I see not. Albeit, therefore we need not admit that excessive number of cities, which from their Priests report, these Authors relate to have been sometime in Egypt, no more, then we are bound to believe those thousands of years, that they affirmed their State, in a succession of Kings and Priests, to have stood; nor again on the other side, have we any good ground, to reduce their prime cities to so precise, and narrow a number, as bare five: Yet it is not improbable, that their principall cities, and royal seats, were not very many, suppose some twelve, as they might well be, about this time, when into twelve principalities was all Egypt divided. The meaning of the Prophet then may well be, that a considerable number, (such as is five of twelve) of the chiefest cities in Egypt, should embrace the faith and service of the true God: and that the Prophets intent is to design a number of such, appears by his expresse nomination of Heliopolis, in particular, to be one of them, speak the language of Canaan] What is here meant by speaking the language of Canaan, is questioned. That there is an allusion to the Hebrew tongue, as we term it; the language wherein God was then served by his people, is generally agreed on: but there is some controversie among the learned, why that tongue should be called the language of Canaan. The common, and almost generally received opinion, both of Jews and Christians, hath been, that it is so termined, because it was the native language of Gods people, who then were poſſeſſed of, and lived in, the land of Canaan, and in that language, then, and there, ſerved God; which language being that which our firſt parents ſpake, and was in general uſe before the divi-on of tongues, Gen. 11.1. remained ſtill in the line of Sem, among the poſterity of Ebers poſterity, (whom a ſpecial mark is ſet upon, as th. prime man in Sems iſſue, there recorded, Gen. 10. 21. with a memorable note alſo, ſubjoyned, concerning Peleg his ſon, that in his days, the earth, or, world, was divided, Gen. 10. 25. and from in his days, the earth, or, world, was divided, Gen. 10.25. and from whoſe name Abram, is called an Hebrew, Gen. 14. 13.) and was termed Hebrew, becauſe continued conſtantly in his family: Howbeit, in theſe latter dayes, ſome men of great note have no ſtuck to affirm, that the Hebrew tongue is termed here the language of Canaan, becauſe it was the native language of the poſterity of Cham, deſcending from him by Canaan, who firſt inhabiting and peopling thoſe parts, both retaining that language in the diviſion of tongues, and tranſmitted it to their poſterity: and that Abram was wholly unacquainted with it, as being not his native language, untill leaving his kindred, and Fathers houſe, where he was born, he came to live in the land of Canaan. But this opinion, though maintained by great authors, ſeems to me very improbable, that the ancient tongue, ſpoken commonly, yea, generally, before the building of Babel, which procured the enſuing diviſion, ſhould be loſt in that family, that in all likelihood had no hand in that buſineſs, and ſhould continue in the line of thoſe that were moſt deeply engaged therein; and in all probability, drew others thereunto, Gen. 10. 10. The arguments brought to confirm this new conceit, ſeem very weak, and inconſequent, and would require longer diſcourſe to diſcuſs, then the preſent work will well afford. Suffice it may's for our preſent purpoſe, that the Hebrew tongue, in ordinary uſe with Gods people then reſiding in Canaan, is the language, if not intended, yet alluded to in this place: called alſo the Jews language, Nch. 13. 24. chap. 36. 11, 13. A new queſtion ariſeth, what is here meant by ſpeaking this language; And there want not, that underſtand it, of ſtudying, learning, and making uſe of the Hebrew tongue. Which ſome Writers, therefore, teſtifie to have been very common in ſome Egyptian Towns, bordering upon Paleſtine, and to have continued, though not without ſome alteration, even unto their times, and the meaning is, faith one of ours, as if it were ſaid of ſome perſons or places, in Hungary, or Tranſylvania, that the people are ſo affected and taken with the Mahometan Religion, that they wholly addict themſelves to the ſtudy of the Arabick tongue; becauſe Mahomets Law is written in it, and ſo here of the Egyptians, that out of love and affection to the Jewiſh Religion, and the worſhip of the true God, they ſhould deſire to learn, and make uſe of that language, wherein the Law of God was written, and wherein he was ſerved by that people. But the Prophets intendment ſeems rather to be, though alluding indeed to that language, that the Egyptians converted by the miniſtery of the Goſpel, ſhould, what ſoever language they ſpake in, make the ſame profeſſion, and confeſſion of their faith, with other of Gods people, that were before them, in Chriſt, Rom. 10. 9, 12, 18. & 15. 6, 9-11. 2 Cor. 4. 11. their ſpeech and communication, ſhould now be no longer profane, as it had been, but circumciſed, and pure, chap. 6, 5. the very ſame that is prophecied, and promiſed, Zeph. 3. 9. that after Gods judgments there before denounced, and when executed, he would turn peoples lip, (that is, language, as it is alſo here,) and give them a pure lip, that is, a pure language, that they may call all upon the name of the Lord, and ſerve him with one ſhoulder: that is, with joynt conſent they ſhould all concur in praiſing of God, as if they all ſpake with one mouth, Rom. 15. 6. or, had all but one lip, ſpake all the ſame language; as before that unhappy diviſion of tongues, the whole world did, Gen. 11. 1. lip, for language: as Job 12. 2. ch. 28. 11. Jer. 33. 49.

and ſware to the Lord of hoſts] Not, ſware by him, Jer. 4. 2. & 5. 2. and not by falſe gods, Exod. 23. 13. Joſh. 23. 8. Jer. 12. 16. though that be mentioned, as one prime piece of Gods royal prerogative, to be ſworn by, and a principal part of mans duty to him, to ſweare only by him, Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 20. Pſ. 63. 11. chap. 65. 16. but ſware to him: as Pſ. 132. 2. that is, bind themſelves by ſolemn oath to depend upon him, and be loyal Subjects unto him, 2 Chr. 15. 14, 15. Ezr. 10. 5. Neh. 10. 29. Pſal. 119. 106. (as people, and Princes alſo, are wont to do, their liege Lords, and Soveraigns, 2 Chr. 36. 13. Ezek. 17. 13, 18.) abandoning their former idolatries, and ſuperſtitions, 2 King. 5. 17. Act. 19. 19. See Ch, 45. 23. Zeph. 1. 5.

one ſhall be called the city of deſtruction] There is a double reading here, in the Hebrew. Some read Heres, with He, which ſignifies deſtruction, or overthrow: and though that word it ſelf is no where elſe read, yet a word, not much unlike it, is in that ſenſe found, ch. 49. 19. Amos 9. 11. deſcending from a verb that ſignifies commonly to pull down, or deſtroy. This reading our Tranſlators follow, though the former verſion, in received uſe, before the Geneva, render it, by way of interpretation, the city of deſtruction ſhall be called one of them. But by thoſe that maintain this reading, the words are diverſly expounded. Some, that a ſixt city, remaining unreformed, when five of her neighbourhood were converted, ſhould be allotted to deſtruction, for not following their good example Others, that each one (as chap. 6. 2.) of the five, before mentioned, ſhall be a city, ſaved from deſtruction, Heb. a city of deſtruction, as wine of lees, for, wine, drawn off the lees, cap. 25. 6. Other read the word Hheres, or, Cheres, with Het, or Ch. as the Greeks commonly render it; which the old Latine, and ſome others, among which our ancient and eſt Engliſh follow, and the word ſignifies, ſometime, an earthen pot, Levit. 6. 28. Jer. 19. 1. or, a pot-ſherd, Job. 2. 8. chap. 45. 9. and ſo ſome render it here, oſtracina, the Earthen city, as earthen veſſels, 2 Cor. 4. 7. but the word there uſed ſometime the ſun, Job 9. 7. Jer. 19. 2. and thus the old Latine, and not a few others, here underſtand it, rendering the text, Heliopolis, or, the city of the ſun ſhall be, or, ſhall be accounted one. Heb. word for word, the city of the ſun ſhall be ſaid to one: that is, the city of the ſun ſhall be called one of that number, ſhall be reckoned up among them: as Pſ. 87. 5, 6. So. ch. 62. 4. forſaken ſhall not be ſaid unto thee, that is, thou ſhalt not be ſo called, or accounted. There were divers cities in divers countries, conſecrated to the Sun, and that bare therefore his name, being deemed one of the heathens principal gods, 2 King. 23. 5, 11. Ezek. 8. 16. Sc. chap. 17. 8. Of this ſort was Bethſhemeſh, among the Canaanites, Judg. 15. 10. & 19. 38. Kirh-eres, and Kir-Haereſheth, among the Moabites, chap. 16. 7. 11. and among the Egyptians, Heliopolis, as the Greeks term it, being for ſignification, the ſame with thoſe other, (of which ſee many more in Steven of Byzantium) and by the Latines, Solis oppidum, Pliny, l. 5. c. 9. and l. 6. c. 29. in Scripture it is ſometime called by the Egyptian appellation, On, Gen. 41. 45. and ſometime, by an Hebrew, of the ſame ſignification, in effect with this here, Bethſhemeſh, Jer. 43. 13. and Aven, Ezek. 30. 17. though this latter, it may be, by an Hebrew term of ill preſage, coming near the Egyptians, the like whereunto, Hoſh. 4. 15. and 10, 8. as if he had ſaid On, that may well be termed Aven, as Amos 5. 5. Bethel ſhall become Aven, that is, vexation, or vanity, or, a thing of nought, this city ſo called anciently, but in latter times, Damiata, was a city much addicted to idolatry, and is reckoned by Herodot. for one of the ſix, unto which the Egyptians uſed, at ſome ſet times, out of all quarters, to repair, as the Jews to Jeruſalem, becauſe there was their famous Temple of the Sun, and there was kept Mnevis, one of their ſacred Bulls, which they worſhipped for a God, as Apis, the other of them, at Memphis; ſo that the Prophets intendment, is, to intimate, that even ſome of thoſe Egyptian cities, that had with idolatry, been moſt polluted, ſhould receive the ſincere ſervice, and worſhip of God. Howbeit, Joſephus is much miſtaken, who imagineth, that this Prophecy was fulfilled under the Ptolomies, when Onias the Jewiſh Prieſt, being driven out of his country, built a ſtately Temple, with an Altar, not unlike that at Jeruſalem, within the principality of Heliopolis, in Egypt, to draw other of his country men into thoſe parts. See Joſeph. antiquities, l. 13. c. 6. and of the Jewiſh war, l. 7. c. 30. The Chaldee Paraphraſts, l. 13. c. 6. and of the Jewiſh war, l. 7. c. 30. The Chaldee paraphraſt takes in both readings here, thus rendring the words, The city of Bethſhemeſh, which is to be deſtroyed, ſhall be ſaid to be one of them: the like doth the Greek, ch. 16. 1.

V. 19. In that day] In thoſe times as ver. 21.

ſhall there be an altar to the Lord, in the midſt of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof, to the Lord] The meaning is, that the true worſhip of God, preſcribed by him in his word, ſhal be as amply ſetled among the Egyptians, as it was then among the Jews. See Joſh. 4. 21-24. deſcribed here, as ſufually elſewhere, by the rites & ceremonies and manner of ſervice, that by Gods appointment, was among Gods people, then in uſe. So. c. 28. 7. & 60. 7. & 66. 20. 21. Mal. 1. 11.

an altar] Not for ſacrifice, fay ſome; for that might not be out of Jeruſalem, Deut. 12. 13, 14. and yet upon extraordinary occaſions, was by Gods, not permiſſion only, but approbation, and ſecret inſtigation, if not manifeſt injunction, at ſometime, built elſewhere, 1 King. 18. 30, 32. but for memorial, and reſemblance only, ver. 20. not unlike that of the Reubenites, and Gadites, Joſh. 22. 10, 11, 23-26. But why not an altar for ſacrifice, then, when the Jeruſalem altars ſhould be all, not demoliſhed only, but out of date? Jer. 3. 16. Heb. 9. 9, 10. for why not a ſpiritual akar, for ſpiritual ſacrifices? v. 20. c. 56. & 60. 7. Ro. 12. 1. & 15. 16. Phil. 2. 17. Heb. 13. 10, 15, 16.

in the midſt of the land of Egypt] As Jeruſalem ſtood in the heart of the land of Canaan, for the more eaſie reſort unto it, out of all parts, Pſalm 122. 4. ſo in the land of Egypt, among the Egyptians as Chap. 51. 12. ver. 20. 24. But here rather, in the former and ſtricter ſenſe, integrard of the next branch.

and a pillar] Evident tokens and ſigns of Gods true Religion, ſetled with them, As alſo allution to ſuch altars, and pillars, as the ancient Patriarchs, in times fore-paſt, erected for the ſolemn ſerviceand worſhip of God, in all places where they came, but in thoſe more eſpecially, where God appeared unto them. Gen. 12. 7. 28. 18. 22. & 31. 13. & 35. 7, 14. Exod. 17. 15. & 24. 4. where mention is of twelve pillars in one place: and pillar, may be for pillars, in this place as it is alſo there at the border thereof] Alluding to that, Joſh. 22. 10, 25. where it is ſaid, that at the borders of the land of Canaan, by Jordan, that altar was built: The meaning is, that monuments, and evidences of piety and devotion, ſhould be frequent among the Egyptians, not in the heart of the land onely, but in the skirts of the Country, ſo that, no ſooner ſhould a man ſet his foot on Egyptian ground, but he ſhould perceive how plouſly, the people were affected, and to what Lord the land now belonged. See Zach. 14. 9, 20, 21.

to the Lord] Not to idols, and falſe gods, as formerly unto which imaginary deities pillars were in Egypt very rife.

V. 20. And it ſhall be] To wit, that altars and pillars, or, thoſe altars, and pillars, ver. 19.

for a ſign, and for a witneſs to the Lord of hoſts in Egypt] To ſignifie, and teſtifie, that the Lord the only true God, the ſole Soveraign, of heaven and earth, Gen. 2. 1. Pſal. 146. 6. is there acknowledged and ſerved. An alluſion to that altar built by the Reubenites, Joſh. 22. 24. 27. and to that ſtone, or pillar, erected by Joſhua, Joſh. 24. 26. 27. of both which, the ſame in effect is ſaid. Yet there are, that refer this, not to the verſe before going; but to the words here enſuing to wit, that Gods hearing them, and ſending deliverance unto them, when they called upon him, in their diſtreſſes, ſhould be an evidence and argument of Gods favour towards them, and reconcilement to them; not unlike that, Pſal. 41. 11. & 147. 43. But the former more naturally flows from the text. That which followeth, ſeems rather to be here intimated, as a motive and inducement to them, to ſerve him, and adhere unto him, of whoſe powerfull and ready help, they had had ſo pregnant proof. So Exod. 15. 2.

for they they ſhall cry unto the Lord for the oppreſſors] Or, when, (as chap. 1. 3. or, becauſe when, (as Jer. 4. 30. & 12. 15.) they ſhall cry, that is, ſay ſome, when the Jews ſhall cry to God, being by Sennacherib beſieged, and diſtreſſed, chap. 37. 4. 15. 2 Chr. 32. 20. But few herein concur. The tenor of the context ſheweth, that it is ſpoken of the Egyptians, who being, by reaſon of thoſe that oppreſſed them, grievouſly afflicted, and diſtreſſed, when they found no relief from their idols, or their wizzards, ver. 1. 3 as it was with others, in the like cauſe, ch. 16. 12. they ſhall then, leaving them, ſeek unto the true God, with better ſucceſs. So Judg. 10. 16 ch. 10. 20. 21. & 17. 7, 8. Pſal. 107. 6, 13. 19.

for their oppreſſors] Or, becauſe of Heb. from the face of: as ver. 16, 17. as the Egyptians ſometime made the people of God among them, to cry unto him, by reaſon of thoſe that then oppreſſed them, Exod. 3. 9. ſo ſhould they themſelves be enforced to the like, in regard of thoſe that ſhould oppreſs them. For the ſame word is uſed in both places, and the Prophet may ſeem here to glance at that ſtory.

and he ſhall ſend them a Saviour, and a great one, and he ſhall deliver them] Or, he ſhall then ſend them (as ch. 8. 3. 14.) a Saviour, and a great one, that is, a great Saviour: as a cloud and ſmoke, for a ſmoky cloud, chap. 4. 5. a great one to be their Saviour; or, even a great one: as Jer. 17. 17. ſuch an one, as in regard of his power, and greatneſs, ſhall be able to effect what he undertakes to do for them, ch. 63. 1. What great ones were, by God, at ſeverall times raiſed up in ſucceeding ages, from time to time, as there were for his own people, Judg. 2. 16. & 3. 15, 31. 2 King. 14. 27. Obad. 21. Mic. 5. 5. to give them ſome eaſe and relief, from their oppreſſors, which might be, as a preface, and ſome ſhadow of their future ſpiritual deliverance, and in whom this Prophecy might, in part, be fulfilled, is not ſo clear by the records of antiquity, ſacred or prophane; eſpecially, while the Aſſyrian, and Chaldean Monarchies ſtood; of which times we have few monuments of worth and credit, remaining. Howbeit, to paſs by what ſome have conjectured of the converſion of many of them, upon the defeat given to Sennacherib; it may well be deemed, that ſome notice of the God of Iſrael came in among them by the Jews commerce with them, and in the latter times, under the Ptolomies, eſpecially, after the law of Moſes was tranſlated into a language, which the Grecian Empire had, in thoſe parts, made more familiar; and divers temporal deliverances, might, from God, be vouchſafed them, in regard of his faithful ones among them; as in Ethiopia, we know alſo that ſome Proſelyres there were, Act. 2. 5. 10. & 8. 27. But certain it is, that the Lord Jeſus, that great Saviour, Tit. 2. 13. is here principally intended, by whom they were delivered from the ſpiritual ſervitude and bondage unto ſin and Satan; under which they had long lyen, as other Gentiles alſo were, through the miniſtery of the Goſpel, Act. 26, 17. 18. & 1 Cor. 6. 9-11. & 12. 2, 3 Eph. 2. 2, 3. Col. 1. 13. 1 Theſſ. 1. 9. Mean while, they ſeem to ſtray from the text, that expound this of the Angel, who, by the ſlaughter made in the Aſſyrian camp (delivered thoſe of Jeruſalem out of their preſent diſtreſſe, chapter 37. 37.

V. 21. And the Lord ſhall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians ſhall know the Lord] He ſeems to ſay the ſame thing in a diuers form, or frame of ſpeech. Yet two diſtinct things may be implyed, their notice of God, and their acknowledgment of him. Firſt, that their ſervice of God ſhould not be an ignorant devotion, a blind obedience, like that of thoſe at Athens, Act. 17. 23. but God ſhould manifeſt, and make himſelf known unto them, Pſal. 9. 16. & 76. 1. Ezek. 29. 8. 15, 16. The knowledg of him, being the ground of all true devotion, and ſincere ſervice of him, Jer. 31. 34. Hoſ. 6. 3, 4. Rom. 16. 25, 26 2 Cor. 4. 6. Gal. 4. 8. Eph. 1. 17. & 3. 19. And then, that God being made made known unto them, (becauſe man may know a thing, and yet refuſe to be acknown of it, for to make profeſſion of what he knows, Joh. 12. 42.) they ſhall make acknowledgment of him, whom now they knew, but were ignorant of before, Gal. 4. 8. 1 Theſſ. 4. 5. by their perform ance of ſervice to him, ſuch as he himſelf requires, Deut. 26. 17, 18. Ioh. 17. 3. Rom. 10. 9, 10. To know, for, to own, or, acknowledg, Pſ. 30. 7. & 142. 4. c. 59. 12. Jer. 3. 13. Mat. 7. 23. & 25. 12.

in that day] As ver. 18, 19.

and ſhall do ſacrifice, and oblation] The word, here uſed, in the Syriack dialect, ſignifieth, indeed, to make, or to do, as Dan. 3. 1. & 4. 35. but in Hebrew, moſt generally, to worſhip, or ſerve, Deut. 4. 19. & 6. 13. & 10. 12. See ver. 23. It would rather therefore, be rendred: And ſhall ſerve, or worſhip him with ſacrifice and oblation. Of the difference whereof, ſee on chap. 1. 11, 13. Not both here, as the one there, and the other, Pſal. 51. 16. and elſewhere collectively, for ſacrifices, and oblations: metaphorically, for ſuch ſpiritual ſervices, as were thereby ſometime, typified, and are correſpondent thereunto. See ver. 19. Zeph. 3. 10. Mal. 1. 11. And this is that, whereby, they ſhould acknowledg God for their Soveraign, and their Savior: our, and teſtifie their duty and engagement unto him, 2 King. 5. 15. 17. A defect of the Pronoun, him, as Hoſ. 6. 3. Joh. 3. 34. Of the particle with, as ch. 17. 5. 10.

yea, they ſhall vow a vow unto the Lord, and performe it Heb. and they ſhall, &c. Look what vows they made unto God in the time of their troubles they ſhall perform, and make good, upon deliverance by God, vouchſafed them. Pſal. 66. 13, 14. & 116. 8, 16, 17. Another evidence, and acknowledgment of their dependance on God, and loyalty to him. Of the former, by making vows now to him, as to their falſe gods they did before. Vows being a ſpecial part of religious worſhip, in thoſe times, eſpecially. Gen. 32. 20. & 35. 1, 3. Levit. 27. 9-26. Numb. 6. 2-21. The latter, by their due paymen, and performance of what they had vowed, Deut. 23. 21. 22. Pſal. 65. 1. & 76. 11. Eccl. 5. 4, 5. Mat. 5. 33.

performe it] A defect of the affix, or pronoun, as v. 22. ch. 9. 9. Hoſ. 8. 4.

V. 22. And the Lord ſhall ſmite Egypt, he ſhall ſmite, and heal it] Heb. ſmiting and healing. It may therefore be thus rendred, Thus (after this manner, as Jer. 7. 34. Prov. 17. 3.) the Lord ſhall ſmite Egypt, ſmiting, and healing it. The particle is ſupplyed; as ver. 21. God ſhall ſo afflict them by the evils above mentioned, as that he ſhall yet, by thoſe afflictions, work a gracious work upon them, give a good iſſue of them, and deliver them, not out of thoſe alone, but out of others alſo, worſe then them, Deut. 32. 39. Pſal. 60. 2. ch. 6. 10. Hoſ. 6. 1. and they ſhall return even to the Lord] Or, for (as ch. 13. 8. & 16. 4.) they ſhall return to the Lord. Have recourſe to him for mercy and deliverance, in their diſtreſſes, ver. 20.

and he ſhall be entreated of them] As he was of Manaſſes, 2 Chr. 33. 20.

and ſhall heal them] By vouchſafing, as well ſpiritual health, as temporal deliverance, unto them, chap. 57. 18, 19. Jer. 3. 22. See Jer. 46. 26. Ezek. 29. 13, 14.

V. 23. In that day] As ver. 19, 21.

ſhall there be an high way out of Egypt to Aſſyria, and the Aſſyrians ſhall come into Egypt, and the Egyptians into Aſſyria] Whereas there had been much diſtention, and bloody wars, between the Aſſyrians and the Egyptians, 2 King. 17. 24. & 18, 19-21. & 23. 29. & 24. 7. Jer. 44. 30. & 46. 2. Ezek. 29. 19. & 30. 10. They ſhould now, being both converted unto God in Chriſt, abandon all ſuch hoſtility, one againſt another, and maintain free commerce, and friendly entercourſe, either with other. See chap. 11. 13. Some ſuch thing, ſome deem to have been in Pſammetichus his reign; but it was more fully accompliſhed in the kingdome of Chriſt, Act. 2. 9, 10. Rom. 10. 18.

an high way] Or, cauſey, as ch. 11. 16.

and the Egyptians ſhall ſerve with the Aſſyrians] They ſhall both ſerve, that is, worſhip, as ver. 21. One, and the ſame God, with one and the ſame worſhip, in one and the ſame manner, ſuch as he requires, ch. 2. 2, 3. & 45. 22. Zach. 8. 23. Joh. 4. 24. The old Greek and Latine, read the words, The Egyptians ſhall ſerve the Aſſyrians. That is, ſay ſome, not as the Iſraelites did the Egyptians, Exod. 1. 14. & 14. 12. but as Chriſtians do one another, with the voluntary ſervice of love, Gal. 5. 13. But the former is the better. For why ſhould Egypt ſerve Aſſur thus, rather then Aſſur Egypt? The entercourſe before was mutuall, the ſervice now joynt; as Zeph. 3. 9.

V. 24. In that day] As ver. 23.

Iſhall Iſrael be the third with Egypt, and with Aſſyria] That is, ſay ſome, the Jews, in the latter part of Ezekiahs reign, ſhall be in peace and amity with both of them, on either ſide, 2 King. 20. 19. But, nor doth any ſuch thing appear, yea, or is likely, nor doth that place imply it. The meaning is, that whereas the Jews were formerly diſjoyned from other Nations, who lived then without the pale of Gods Church, and without that knowledg and worſhip of God, which, as a ſpeciall priviledg, the Jews, in thoſe times, enjoyed, Deut. 4. 7, 8, 33, 34. & 7. 2, 3, 6. Pſal. 76. 1, 2. & 147. 19, 20. & 148. 14. Act. 10. 28. & 11. 3. Rom. 3. 1, 2. & 9. 4, 5. Eph. 2. 12. Now the pale being plucke up, and the partition wall pul'd down, the hatred abolished, and both in one body reconciled, there ſhould be no more any diſtinction of Jew, or Gentile, whether Egyptian, Aſſyrian, or other, but they ſhould all be in a ſpiritual confederacy, & communion, one with another, Zach. 8. 23. Act. 10. 28 & 11. 18. & 15. 9. 1 Cor. 12. 13. Gal. 3. 28. Eph. 2. 13-19. Col. 3. 11.

the third] Heb. a third. Which becauſe it ſeems to be in a feminine form; Some would have underſtood Egypt and the word inſo the text. a third ſiſter; as Cant. 8. 8. Jer. 3. 8, 10. Ezek. 16. 45, 46, 48, 51. 52. & 23. 2, 4, 31-33. But this ſeems not neceſſary; becauſe of States, Nations, and Countries, the Scripture uſeth to ſpeak promiſcuouſly, ſometime in the one form, and ſometime in the other. See chap. 15. 1, 4, 5. But what if we render it, Gods third? as Gods tenth, ch. 6. 13. See the note there; as alſo, Jer. 2. 31. where a word of the ſelf ſame form and notion, is found, with Egypt, and with Assyria] These two people are supposed to be more specially mentioned to shew a conjunction of the posterity of Cham, (from whom the Egyptians were descended, Gen. 10.6.) with the race of Japhet, and both of them with the posterity of Sem, according to Noahs prediction, Gen. 9.27. But here is no mention, at all, of any of Japhets issue for Ahuz was of Sems race, Gen. 10.22. 28 well, as Arphaxad, from whom Israel descended, by Eber, & Abraham, Gen. 11.13, 16, 26. It seems rather to intimate, that even the most accursed people that were in the world, should, in Gods good time of grace under the Gospel, partake in the blessing by Christ, Gen. 12.3, and 22.18.

even a blessing] This may seem to have a special respect to Israel and is then to be understood actively, as a means of conveying, and imparting a blessing unto the other two; as the word is used, Gen. 12.2. Phil. 2.1.6.& 72.17. and that partly, in regard of the Messias, to descend from them, Rom. 9.5, in whom they were to be blessed, Gen. 22.18. And partly, in regard of Gods Church establisht among them, and, in former times, confined to them in respect whereof, they are said to partake of the blessing by their abode in Sems tents, Gen. 9. 27. and adhering unto them, Deut. 30. 20. Zach. 2, 8. Zach. 2.11. or if it be extended unto all three, it must be taken passively, for one that hath a blessing bestowed upon him, or partaketh of, and in, a blessing, as ch. 65.8. Zach. 8.13.

in the midst of the Land] Or, earthist. Gen. 13.3. For this blessing extends it self unto the whole world, chap. 49.6. in the midst of it] either on earth, in the world; as Psal. 74.12. See ver. 19. Or, if there be some emphasis, more then ordinary, in the phrase, I should say it were, not as some, because these lands lie all three in the middle of the world, which God would have, to be as leven, to spread into the whole lump of it, on every side, Matthew 13. 33. for two of them, Israel and Egypt, coast on the Sea: but because the land of Judah lay in the midst, between Assyria and Egypt, see ver. 17. For, as for that frivilous and ridiculous conceit of the Jews, wherein the Chinois are said to contend with them, that their country and Jerusalem, more especially, could be the navel of the world, alluding to that purpose, some passages of Scripture, Pf. 74.12.& Ezek. 5.5.& 38. 12.) it is scarce worthy taking notice of.

V. 25. whom the Lord of Hosts shall bless, saying] Or, For the Lord shall bless him That is, each one of them, as chap. 2.3.20. The relative for the conjunction causal, as 1 Sam. 15.15. Or, whom, each one, the Lord shall bless. That is, both of pronounce, and make blessed, chap. 61.9.

Blessed be my people] The title that Israel engrossed before, Deut. 7.6. Pf. 28.7.1. but should now be common to the Egyptians, with them, Deut. 32.11. Hos. 8.13. Rom. 9.26.

and Assyria the work of my hands] As Israel is so called, not as created only, at first in Adam, but as made, and moulded into a State, Deut. 32.6. chap. 29.7.& 44.2. Pal. 138.8, 9. so are the Assyrians here termed, as being new moulded, & now created by him, in his Church, 2 Cor. 5.17. Gal. 6.15. Eph. 2.10.& 4.24.

and Israel mine inheritance] My portion, my peculiar people, Exod. 19.5. Deut. 4.20. Pf. 74.2.& 135.4. See Jer. 12.7. A privilege, not now not to be appropriated to them alone, but to be extended unto people, in all parts abroad, Pf. 2.8.& 82.8. Eph. 3.6. All these relations used, for variety and elegancy, come home, in effect, and tire to the same.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 1. In the year that Tartan came to Ashdod] In the eighteenth Chapter, was a prophecy of exils to befal Ethiopia in the nineteenth, of the like to befal Egypt. Now in this Chapter, is a prediction of a damnick that both of them, were, from the Assyrians, joynly, to endure, with a more special intimation of the time, in which this prophecy was delivered, prefixed in this verse.

Tartan] A Commander of some forces, under the king of Assyria, one of the three, that Sennacherib sent unto Ezekiah, to summon him to a surrender of Jerusalem, 2 King. 18.17.

Ashdod] Or, as the Greeks and Latines learn it, Azotus, Acts 8.40. Ashdod] Or, as the Greeks and Latines learn it, Azotus, Acts 8.40. A chief city of Philestine, or the Philistines country, famous for their idol Dagon, who had his Temple there, 1 Sam. 5.1, 2, &c. 6.17. Yet it seems to have been long, sometime, after the Israelites and to have been part of the portion, and possession of the posterity of Judah as also, some other, of the Philistine cities, Josh. 13.3. &15.47. See Jer. 25.20.

(when Sargon the King of Assyria sent him)] Who this Sargon should be, is made questionless. The most suppose him to be Sennacherib, and to have had two names as many others, in like manner mentioned in Scripture. See 2 chap. 21.18. Jeriah. Though, beyond all probability, they multiply the matter, who tell us, from Jerom, that Sennacherib had no less then seven names in one, some of the Jewish writers, fay eight: and mould the Assyrians Monarchs; many of them, into one. But there want not those, who deem this Sargon to have been, not Sennacherib but one of his predecessors. And some of them, thus reckon the succession of the Assyrian Rollers, Phul, 2 King. 15.19. 1 Chr. 5.26. Tiglath-Pilneser, 2 King. 15.29. 1 Chr. 5.26. Salmaneser, 2 King. 17.3.& 18.9. Sennacherib, 2 King. 18. 13. Others, unlikely, Shineab, thus order them: Phul, Tiglath-Pilneser, Sargon, Salmaneser, Sennacherib. See on Chap. 14. 29. But, let it be justly be doubted, whether Sargon, who, in the first year of Ezechiel is reckoned after Phul and Phileser, were not ancienter then either of them? I suppose, it will better suit with the course of the sacred Story, (for fortifying it self in a manner here, chiefly with all to place this Sargon) between Salmaneser and Sennacherib: as the one successor of the one, and predecessor to the other. The name seems to be the same with Silling, or Sillin, the name of Abrahams Grandfather, Gen. 11.22. Saruch, Serug, or Sarug, Nachor, Thara, 31. 29. Tarchon, Joshua 24.2.3. Tarah, Acts 7.4. and the like.

did Tartan, against Ashdod which it is] This some suppose to have been done in the expresse year of Ezechiah, under Sennacherib, when he sent him, thither against the strong cities of Judah; among which, they suppose Ashod to have been one, as being lately (from the Philistines) recovered, by Ezechiah, 2 King. 18.8. Others, and so some of the Jewish Doctors, draw it down to the fourteenth of Ezechiah, at which time, they say, Sennacherib hearing of Tirhakah, the King of Ethiopia, coming against him, chap. 37. 9. sent Tartan to take Ashdod, and went himself to meet Tirhakah, whom having discomfited, and subdued Egypt and Ethiopia, within the space of three years, he returned, with double the host he had received of them, to the siege of Jerusalem. But this, no way suits well with the Scripture story. Which, to help it, we do, some say, thus: the Ethiopians, led by Tirhakah, made an inroad into Assyria, about this time, in Sennacheribs absence; after whose departe, Belat-Dans dies, who succeeded him, made war upon them. Ethiopia does, and could no way of their captive, together with such Egyptians as were Assistant, to them. That which carries, indeed, more probability with it, then the former. But neither carry up, that highest, the date of this prophecy, unto the fourth year of Ezekiah, and the 6xc of Hosea, in which time they suppose, that this warlike Sennacherib, preded cessor, invaded Palestine, and sent Tartan to besiege Ashdod: was taken. Yet leith the Assyrian King or Assyrian, whether Asshdon did not yet submit himself to Israel; and chap. 11. 13. And it is apparent, he never did nor durst do it, because he could not induce Ashdod to course them, which otherwise he, would have done, concerning some hope to prevail, if he could have drawn Ashdod to do so. Numb. 21. 5, 6. But the meaning of the place is, he spoke and wrought, that is, he was sent and installed, or attempted to do it, but never did. So Mal. 3.13. Your new believes, God: and he will be gracious unto us. Heb. so, words for words, the very same in the original. The Prophet chooses to utter nothing, nothing, but what God, by his revealed, would do: and plainly with his people, in contenting his wrath towards them, incensed by their sins, wherewith they themselves had been principal promoters & abetters, to be effectually appeased, and wholly: which he promises, to us for others, and very unlikely to prevail in their behalf. But the Scripture meaning is, as our Bibles do right render it, Because God that he will be one to be gracious unto us and so, he spoke, and wrought, that is, wrote, that he might work, & to that end, and the like might be here. However, unless ought could be produced, whereby it might appear, that Ashdod was hardened by the attempt, we need not decline that sense of the words, which is most ordinary and common. And since, that in such like words we have to handle; no little light of necessity, we must of necessity go by conjectures, as those before mentioned, and worst all no; Whall make bold to add my own, (such thoughts also to theirs. Suppose, therefore, this prophecy was delivered about the eighth or ninth year of Ezekiah, when Salmaneser, who, in his first year had taken Samaria, & carried Israel away captive, 2 King. 18. 10, 11. being now dead, Sargon, his successor, desirous to professe himself a conquerour, and to enlarge his dominion, began to set upon the Philistines, that bordered upon them, on the West, (see ch. 9. 12.) and began with Ashdod to the relief whereof, the Egyptians, their next neighbours, together with the Ethiopians, their own federates, coming in no small companies, were by the Assyrians discomfited, and carried captive, in such scornful and despiteful manner, as is here after described, yet, with a purpose, to be revenged upon the Egyptians, because they had so lately before, been assistant to the Philistines against the Assyrians, in the reign of Salmaneser, and an occasion of their revolt, 2 King. 17.4. And the siege of Ashdod might well continue three years, as well, as that of Samaria, 2 King. 17.5. being one of the strongest cities in Palestine; nor is it unlikely, that Sargon, the ganer attempted this city, if it were one of those that Ezekiah had subdued and regained, that he might pick a quarrel with him, and so be dealing with him, as his predecessors had done with the, other ten tribes before; that which might also, for the rather, move Ezekiah, to seek to shake off the Assyrian yoke. 2 King. 18.7. thereby discovering their ambitious and tyrannical inceptions. But Sargon, it seems, being taken away, before that his purpoled design could be effected, Sennacherib, his successor, came on with the same, 2 King. 18.13. and this my conjecture. I leave, to the consideration of others, ready to yield unto any, that can bring fairer grounds, or afford better light. The Egyptians, after their wonted manner of ascribing to their kings conquests, atchieved by others, seem to attribute this taking of Ashdod to Pfammetichus, who, about these times, reigned in Egypt, reporting of him, that invading Syria, he fate down, not three, but thirty years, wanting one, before the strong city of Azotus, which endured the longest siege that had been known, and at length took it. See Herodot. lib. 2.

V. 2. At the same time spake the Lord by Isaiah the son of Amoz, saying] Heb. by the hand (that is, the ministery, as Hag. 1.1. Mal. 1.1.) of Isaiah the son of Amoz, See chap. 1.1. That is, by me, and to me; of Isaiah the son of Amoz, See chap. 1.1. Gen. 19.24. Gods will and the Noun, for the Pronoun; as chap. 2.1. Gen. 19.24. Gods will and commands, were sometime made known to the persons, that were to put them in execution by others; as 2 King. 9. 1, 2. Sometime immediately to themselves; as Jer. 19.1, 10. And so to Esay here; who is enjoyned, not only to do somewhat that might shadow out that which he was to deliver; but to tell his people, withal, what was thereby defigned, ver. 3, 4.

Go loose the sackcloth from off thy loyns] An act enjoyned the Prophet, that was symbolical and significative; not unlike that, Ezek. 12. 3-7. fore-shewing, in what sort, the Egyptians and Ethiopians should be carried captive, by the Assyrians, ver. 4.

Go] The word in these kind of injunctions doth not alwaies imply some motion from place to place; especially, when the thing enjoyned, may without any such absence; after a whole separate, last-duels does, who succeeded him; made war upon him. Ethiopians, and scoll an army of them captive, together with such Egyptians as were Assistant, to them. That which carries, indeed, more probability with it, then the former. But neither carry up, that highest, the date of this prophecy, unto the fourth year of Ezekiah, and the 6xc of Hosea, in which time they suppose, that this warlike Sennacherib, predecessor, invaded Palestine, and sent Tartan to besiege Ashdod: was taken. Yet leith the Assyrian King or Assyrian, whether Asshdon did not yet submit himself to Israel; and chap. 11. 13. And it is apparent, he never did nor durst do it, because he could not induce Ashdod to course them, which otherwise he, would have done, concerning some hope to prevail, if he could have drawn Ashdod to do so. The Egyptians, after their wonted manner of ascribing to their kings conquests, atchieved by others, seem to attribute this taking of Ashdod to the application of it, so that which was to befall these two people; to wit, the Egyptians, and the Ethiopians, is in the next.

my servant] Not in general only as are all men, yea, all creatures; in regard of creation, Pf. 119. 91. or, in somewhat more speciall manner, in regard of a voluntary addiction, and obstriction; as are all, that are in speial covenant with him, Neh. 1. 11. Pfal. 79.2. & 116.16. but in a more special rank yet, in regard of his place, and office, as a Prophet, as Num. 11.7, 8 Ier. 7.25. So, Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ; Rom. 1.1. Phil. 1.1. that is, an Apostle, 2 Cor. 1.1. Eph. 1. 1. a servant of God, & an Apostle of Christ, Tit. 1.1. the one explicates the other.

three years] Concerning these words, there is much discrepance of opinion among Interpreters. Some annex them to the foregoing sentence, and apply them to the Prophets carriage. And of these, some suppose, that all this was done in a vision; as, for they; those things of Ezekiel, his lying so long on either side and making, and baking his bread in such and such sort, Ezek. 4.4.& 6.10.15. and doing of a thing three years together, might, by a vision, be represented in a moment. Other of them, affirm it to have been really done, and exhibited. How else could it be a sign and wonderment unto any? yet are these also divided; for some of them suppose, that he went constantly thus, as well within doors, as without, for three years together; other, that he went so during that time, only then when he went out about the discharge of his prophetical employment. Thus they, that affix these words to the former, understanding them of the Prophets continuance in that habit. But there want not, that prefix them to the clause ensuing, for three years a sign, and wonder, or, a three years sign, and wonder, upon, or, concerning the Egyptians and Ethiopians: conceiving them to be meant, not of the Prophets act, but of that which was thereby designed: and this reading is strengthened by the pauses, in the Hebrew, the middle distinction concluding at the word next before-going. However, these again, are not all of one mind, concerning the thing thereby designed. For some suppose that thereby is implyed, when this calamity should befall those two nations, which is the more probable (to wit, three years after the publication of this Prophecy: as the like, chap. 7.8. & 8. 21. 16. Others, how long it should continue; to wit, not above three years, as the like, chap. 23.15: & 31.10. the like difference of opinion, concerning the same terms of years, which some also draw to this. See on chap. 16. 14. However, the question is with these again moved, how long the Prophet was to walk thus naked? the rather, for that the text thus read, seems not to determine it: and they deem it unfitting, that the typical act should be of equal extent, for term of time, with the thing it self, thereby typified; no example in Scripture exhibiting any such parallel. Some of them therefore conceive, that one day might suffice for him, to walk abroad in that manner; there being no time limited in the injunction that God gave him. As Jeremies wearing a yoke on his neck, but for a day, might suffice to denote a captivity of seventy years continuance, Jerem. 25.12. and 27. 2. and 28.10. Others would have it done by him, three dayes, correspondent to the three years designed, either unto the commencing; or, for the consummating of that, which by the Prophet was denounced. This is most agreable to the usuall manner of Scripture, a day for a year, so forty dayes, for fourty years, Num. 14. 33, 34. Ezek. 4.6. and 390 dayes, for as many years, Ezek 4.4.5.

three years] Some would have it read, a third years sign, &c. because the cardinall number is put sometime for the ordinall, as they term it, as one, for first: Gen. 1.5. Matt. 28.1. but I find not, where any cardinal so used is joyned with a substantive plural: and that enallage, therefore; can have no place here.

a sign, and wonder] These two words of 1 joyned together, Deut. 6. 22.& 7.19.& 13. 1, 2.& 26.8. & 28.46. Neh. 9.10. Pfal. 135.9. Jer. 32.20. Chap. 8.17. arc as genus, and species; the former of larger extent then the latter. For the former may be, where nothing future is foretheworn as Num. 2.2. Ezek. 20.12. whereas the latter is ever, for the foretelling, and ascertaining of something to come, 1 King. 13. 2, 3. the former may be some common and ordinary things 7.9.2 Chr. 32.24. yet strange, and unusuall, at least, Ezek. 4.2, 3.& 12.3.6, 11.& 24.16, 17, 24. and so for here. See chap. 8.18.

upon Egypt, and upon Ethiopia] Or, concerning Egypt, and Ethiopia: as chap. 1.1. concerning what was to befal the Egyptians, and Ethiopians. See on ver. 1.4. yet concerning the Jews also, unto whom it was exhibited, to dillwade, and deter them, from relying upon these two people; which they were over prone unto. See verse 5,6.

V. 4. So shall the King of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners; and the Ethiopians captive, young, and old, naked and barefoot] An exposition of this strange, and unwonted demeanour of the Prophet, and application of it, to the fad, and sorry condition of the Egyptians, and Ethiopians, which, within a short space of time, they were from the Assyrians to sustain.

the King of Assyria] Whether Sargon, or Sennacherib, or Esarhaddon, his succellor, uncertain. See on ver. 1.

lead away] As men are wont to lead, or drive beasts, and cattel: for of such it is most commonly used, Gen. 31.18. Exod. 3. 1. 1 Sam. 30. 20. 1 King. 4.24. ch. 11.6. and where alufion is thereunto, Pf. 78. 52. & 81.15.

& 81.1. And it is therefore, not unfitly applyed to poor captives, that are led, or driven, like beasts, Gen. 31.26. Deut. 28. 37. ch. 61. 11. Lam. 3. 2.

the Egyptians prisoners, and the Ethiopians captives] Or, captive. Heb. the captivity of Egypt, and the captivity, or deportation of Cush: captivity, for captives: as Neh. 1. 2, 3. Jer. 24. 5. For we must not imagine, that the one were prisoners, and not captives; the other captives, but not prisoners; (see on chap. 5. 13.) for both the words in the original, import one and the same thing: variety of terms, is for the greater elegancy only used. This the King of Assyria should do, either having discomfited their joynt forces, or subdued their countries, bordering the one upon the other. See ver. 1.

young, and old] Shewing no mercy to any, in regard of tenderness, through years, or weakness through age. See 2 Chr. 36. 17.

naked, and barefoote] Stript of their apparel, and left, in a manner, stark naked, in base rags, scarce able to cover their nakedness: that which is wont to be the lot of captives in fight taken, and pillaged by the enemy, Deut. 28. 45. ch. 3. 17, 24. Job 24. 7, 10. Jer. 2. 25. Amos 2. 16. See ver. 2.

even with their buttocks uncovered] Heb, fundament; a word not unusual with us for it is of neer affinity with that, which signifies foundations, Psal. 11. 3. that part, which mans body sits upon, and rests on in sitting. The meaning is, having not rayment, so much, as to hide their shame. See on ch. 3, 17. So in despight were Davids messengers used by the Ammonites, 2 Sam 10. 5. And herein, sure, the thing signified out-stripped the sign; for the Prophet, doubtless, walked not so naked, as to have his shame seen, Rev. 16. 15.

to the shame of Egypt] Who assisted them, and in likelihood, undertook to protect them. See on ch. 18. 1.

shame] Heb. nakedness, 1 Sam. 20. 30. Exod. 32. 25. because nakedness, since mans fall, is shamefull, Gen. 2. 25. and 3. 7.

V 5. And they shall be afraid, and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory] The event of this overthrow given by the Assyrian, unto the joynt forces of the Ethiopians, and Egyptians; to wit, that it should strike a terrour into those, that had fought to them for aid against the Assyrian, and make them ashamed, that they relyed so much upon them for relief. See ver. 6.

they] That is, say some, the Jews; who trusted too much to them, chap. 30. 2. & 31. 1. & 36. 6. Ezek. 29. 6, 7, 16. See chap. 19. 17. Others, the Philistines, and Athdodites, that expected relief from them. It may well be both, and such others, as they undertook to protect. See on Chap. 8. 1. wings; for the word is used indefinitely; as others of are, Chap. 2. 19. Mal. 3. 4.

afraid] Because they shall have no hope of ability to hold out against an adversary so potent, and prevalent; whom the joynt forces of two such Kingdoms were not able to withstand, 2 King. 10. 4. and it is matter of dread, to see supporters, and confederates to fail, chap. 19. 17.

ashamed] To find their expectations frustrate, and those defeated, of whose help, they had been over confident, and had much gloried therein before, chap. 30. 5. Jer. 2. 36.

their expectation] The people from whom they expected succour, and safeguard. Heb. their looking unto, or, looking after: and so ver. 6. for the word is no where else found, but the root it comes of, is used oft in that sense, Psal. 34. 5. & 142. 4. and so other words of the same notion: expectation, for, persons, from whom ought is expected, Psal. 71. 5. Jer. 14. 8. & 17. 13.

their glory] glory, for them, of whom and their help, they gloried; So Psal. 3 3. with 49. 8. Chap. 10. 3. & 17. 4. yet expectation is not here so appropriated to the one, and glory to the other, as if they did not, as well expect help from, as glory in, either. But it is an elegant form of speech, very usual with this Prophet, intending the same thing of either; Of which, see before; ver. 4. & chap. 5. 13.

V. 6. And the inhabitant of this Ile shall say in that day] inhabitant, for inhabitants: as chap. 5. 3. in that day, for, at that time, as ch. 9. 18. But the question is, what the Ile, or Iland, here spoken of, should be. The word is deemed, most properly, to signifie an Iland, that is, some land on every side enuironed with water, as lake, some great water encompassed with land; whence ariseth that question, among the ancient Geographers, whether the earth were an Iland, or the sea a lake, that is, whether the sea encompassed the land, or the land the sea, and hence in Scripture, the Ilet of the the Sea, Esth. 10. 1. chap. 11. 11. and, the Ites in the Sea, Ezek. 26. 18. but it is used also, as is generally agreed on, for such countries, and regions, as lay upon the Sea-coasts: so it seems to be taken, Jer. 25. 22. Ezek. 37. 3. 15. Hence some gather, that the Philistines country should be here meant, because it lay upon the midland Sea, See Jer. 47. 7. but so did the land of Israel too, Josh. 13. 4. 12. 47. and that reason some of the Rabbines render, why it should here be so termed: nor is it a sufficient argument to prove, that the Jewish land should not be here intended, because that their country had no where in particular, this name given it, when as the word is granted to be of so large an extent, as to take in all regions bordering on the sea, as theirs did. Yea it is used yet more largely, for lands, or countries in general; and for inlands, as well as islands; See chap. 41. 1. 5. & 42. 4. 10. & 49. 1. & 51. 5. & 66. 9. Jer. 47. 4. And this land may seem rather to carry it: to those, unto whom, then to the Philistines, of whom, he spake.

Behold, such is our expectation, whither we flee for help, to be delivered from the King of Assyria] and how shall we escape ?] See on ver. 5. Thus it fareth with those, on whom we relyed, or expected help from. Nor do these words evince, that this is not spoken in the person of the Jewish people; because Ezekiah trusted not, on Egypt, but on God alone; and Jerusalem therefore was delivered: but Athdod, which trusted to the Egyptian aid, was not. For it is not unlikely, that Ezekiah, though a good king, and one that trusted in God, 2 King. 18. 5. as well as Ahaz, who did so also, 2 Chr. 14. 11. & 26. 7, 8. might be somewhat faulty this way, as well as another way, that favoured of some diffidence, upon the very same occasion, 2 King. 18. 6. 14-16. see ch. 3. 2, 4.

from the King of Assyria] Who shortly after, surprized a great part of Judea, Chap. 36. 1. Heb. from the face of: as Chap. 21. 15.

and how shall we escape ?] Or, how should we escape? What hope can we have to be secured by help from them, who are not able to save themselves, 2 Psalm 60. 11. & 146. 3, 4. their shame appeared in the former branch; in this latter, their fear. See ver. 5.

CHAP. XXI.

Verse. 1. The burden of the desart of the Sea] Here begins a new Prophecy, another Sermon. Of the word, Burden, see on Chap. 13. 1. That this Prophecy concerneth Chaldea, and Babylon, appears evidently, as well by the name of it expressly mentioned, ver. 9. as also by the Nations precisely named, by whom it was to be destroyed. But here are two questions moved concerning this Prophecy. The former is, why the Prophet should have another Sermon against Babylon, when as he had so large an one against it, before. To which it is answered; for two causes especially: First, because the people of God were too prone to trust to, and seek amity with, as the Kings of Assyria, though they smarted for it, 2 Chr. 28. 16, 20, 21. to the Kings of Babylon, who afterward stood up in their stead, 2 King. 20. 12, 13. chap. 39. 1, 2. And again, because they were to sustain very heavy things, at their hands, 2 King. 20. 17, 18. chap. 39. 6, 7. The Prophet therefore, of God rather, by the Prophet, doth the rather oft mind them of the ruine of Babylon; partly, to withdraw them from relying on a State that was to fall, to be ruined; and partly, to comfort them, in regard of those evils, that from that City and Kingdome they were to endure. For the same cause, may seem to many predictions to have proceeded from this our Prophet, of the Assyrians downfall, chap. 10. 5-20. 24-34. & 30. 27-33. and of the Egyptians, as from the same Prophet, chap. 19. 8. 20. & 30. 3. & 31. 3. so also from Jeremy, Jer. 43. 8-13. & 44. 29, 30. & 46. The latter question is, why Babylon, or Chaldea, should be tearmed the desart of the Sea. To this, a late writer of some note, answers, that though the Prophecy concerns Babylon, yet by these terms is designed, neither Chaldea, nor Babylon; but Idumea, or the Country of the Edomites, who inhabited the desart of Sur, or Etham, Exod. 13. 20. & 15. 22. Numb. 33. 8. But had he shewed how this sad Prophecy had concerned these Edomites, or where any mention had been therein made of them, there might have been some colour of ground for the turning of it that way: now having produced nothing from the matter of it, to back, or second this his conceit, we see little reason to afford entertainment unto it, and taking that for granted, that others, as well Jews, as ours, generally agree in, to wit, that it is Babylon, or Chaldea, at least, that is in these termes described; we shall proceed to consider why it should be so termed and because the word desart, is first in the text, we shall begin with it. Chaldea therefore is here termed a desart, as most interpreters imagine, for two causes; the one historical, or geographical, not because it was a wild, or waste country: For it was a very rich, and well watered soyl, but because there lay a large desart, or wide wilderness, between Chaldea; wherein Babylon stood, and the countries of Media, and Persia; by the people whereof, it was afterward invaded. The other Prophetical: not because it was at present so: because it was in time to come to be laid waste, and desolate, chap. 13. 19-22. and as it had made the whole world a wilderness, ch. 14. 17. in like manner, by way of just retaliation, to be made a wilderness it self. So Psal. 137. 8. Jer. 51. 29, 36, 37, 43. I shall make bold to add mine own conjecture, and leave it to the learned. The Hebrew word signifies as well a plain, as a wilderness, chap. 63. 13. Jer. 13. 24. Lam 4. 19. & 5. 9. and the noration of it, from a word, that is in the Chaldee, more common, signifying to lead cattle out to the places where they are to feed, carries it more specially, unto such plains, as had pasture grounds in them, or consisted of such. So the word seems to be taken, 1 Sam. 17. 28. & 14. 1, 3. & 25. 1, 15. Psal. 65. 12. 13. Jer. 9. 9. Joel 1. 19, 20. & 2. 22. Luk. 15. 4. compared with Matt. 18. 12. I suppose therefore, that Chaldea hath this term given unto it, not as a desart, but as a plain: and such indeed that country was, wherein the building of Babylon was first set set on foot, as Moses testifieth, Gen. 11. 2. in regard whereof, also, it is commonly deemed, that the Chaldeans proved so skilful in Astronomy, the situation of their country, which lay all in a Plain, without any noteable interruption of hills, or mountains of height, affording a great help to the more exact observation of the motion, as well of the fixed stars, as of the planets, and the times of the rising, and setting of either. And thus much for the former term of desart, or, plain: and the reason why Chaldea might be so termed. The latter word, is that of the Sea. Now this term is given to Chaldea, or Babylon, as some think, metaphorically, a Sea, that is, a the Sea, in regard of that great abundance of wealth, that Babylon was stored with, as we use to say, a Sea of gold (all the kingdoms, and countries under that vast Monarchy, Jer. 27. 5, 6. tending in their treasures to Babylon, as all rivers empty themselves into the Sea, Jer. 51. 44. some also, in regard of her unfathomed craft, through receiving all, yet having never enough, as the Sea is never the fuller, for all those waters, that out of all parts are swallowed up in it, Eccl. 1. 7. See Jer. 51. 13. and Herodot. 1. 1. Some also prophetically, in regard of those manifold, and immense evils, that were to befall her, as we use to say, a Sea, or, as ocean of evils, the Sea is broke in upon Babylon, Jer. 51. 42. or, because the seat of the City was to become as a Sea, to be turned into water-pools, chap. 64. 23. Thus they, but, as to me seems, with no great probability; for neither the land of Chaldea, nor the city, are here termed the Sea but the desart, or, plain of the Sea, as, the Ilet of the Sea, Esth. 10. 1. for lands situate in, or beside, the Sea See on chap. 20. 6. Others therefore rather deem Chaldea, or the seat of the city, so termed, in regard of the situation of it. And here, in regard that the Sea, in Scripture language, is very commonly used, for the west, Gen. 13. 14. & 28. 14. Exod. 10. 19. chap. 49. 12. Ezek. 48. 17. the reason whereof is, because the midland Sea lay to the West of Judea, and was the western border, or boundary of it, Josh. 15. 12. Deut. 34. 2. Some of the Rabbines therefore would have it so called, because it lay west or northwest, from the land of the Medes, and Persians, by whom it was to be destroyed. See chap. 41. 25. But this seems rather, to others, a little too far fetch: who rather suppose this tearm to allude to the situation of Babylon, and the plain whereon it was built, standing the one, and lying the other, situate either, of them, neer unto, or upon the banks of, the great river Euphrates, as it is styled, Gen. 15, 18. Deut. 1. 7. and the vaste lakes made out of it. For any great confluences, or receptacles of water, are in the Hebrew tongue termed Seas, Gen. 1. 10. hence the Sea of Galilee, chap. 11. 11. Matth. 4. 18. & 15. 29. which yet was but a lake, Luk. 5. 1. and the great laver belonging to Solomons Temple, is called, a Sea, 1 King. 7. 23, 24. Jer. 52. 17. The country of Chaldea, therefore, that part of it especially, that lay neer to Babylon, is not unfitly termed, the plain of the Sea, in regard of those meers, and pools, the country lying all on a flat, that that great river Euphrates, that ran round about Babylon, as also, through the midst of it, made on every side of it, which yet in part to remedy, two Queens especially, were at infinite cost: the one of them, to wit, Semiramis, by raising mounds, and banks of strang height, and strength, on either side the river, to keep it, so much as might be, within compass, the other, to wit, Nitocris, who came long after her, (besides what in this kind, the also did, even to wonderment) partly, by diverting the course of the river from his direct paffage, and through new channels of great depth, by mans industry sunk, winding it to and fro, and enforcing it to fetch many compasses, before it came down to Babylon, to break the violent force of the stream, running down right before, and partly, by digging a lake neer unto it, three hundred and twenty furlongs broad. Of which things, see Herodot. l. 1. Strabo, l. 16. Plin. l. 2. c. 26. 27. Hence is Babylon said to sit upon many waters, Jer. 51. 13. Wherunto may be added, what Abydenus an ancient writer, cited by Eusebius, in his Evangelical preparative, l. 9. c. 41. reports, to wit, that it was by tradition commonly received, that the whole country about Babylon was all water, a very Sea, until Belus (supposed to be Nimrod, Gen. 10. 9. 11.) having drained it, divided it, and built Babylon upon it: as also what God himself saith by the Prophet, speaking to Babylon. I will dry up thy Sea, Jer. 51. 36. And thus much for the title, or inscription of this Prophecy.

As whirlwinds in the South passe through; so it comes from the desart, from a terrible land] Or, As whirlwinds in the South; he passeth. A prediction of the Medes and Persians, their violent irruptions, in a furious and tempestuous manner breaking into Chaldea.

whirlwinds] Or, as some, Some one grevious whirlwind, or, tempest, the plural, by way of eminency, used for the singular: as Prov. 1. 20. & 9. 1. Mic. 5. 2. Yet in a plural sense, it may well stand here; as another word of the same notion, which, with it, is used, Zach. 9. 14. though in that form, this word be no where else found, wind, in such similitudes, is a note of swiftness, Psal. 18. 10. & 104. 3. a whirlwind, such as whisking about, involveth all on every side, and beareth all down before it, a note of vehemency, and violence forcibly breaking thorow, and beating down all opposition, Psalm 83. 15. Prov. 1. 27. Chap. 5. 28. and 29. 6. Jer. 4. 13. Nah. 1, 3.

in the South] Of, whirlwinds of the South, is mention made also, Zach. 9. 14. Howbeit, the word here used, is ambiguous. For albeit, that it be frequently used for the South, or Southern parts, Exod 26. 18. & 27. 9. Numb. 34. 3. Josh. 15. 1, 2. Judg. 21. 19. yet it seems properly, and primarily to signifie high-lands, or dry-lands, opposed to the time to the vale, or, lower grounds, Josh. 10. 40. Jud. 1. 9. Jer. 17. 26. sometime to the spring, and well watered lands, Josh. 10. 40. & 15. 19. Judg. 1. 15 and the Southern parts are so termed, because commonly such, as being neerer to the scorching heat of the Sun, either may here be meant: partly, because the Southern winds are oft in those parts tempestuous, Job. 37. 9. as also, for that in such uplands, the wind is wont to have the greater power, Jer. 4. 11.

passe through] Heb. to passe through; that is, are apt, or are wont to passe along, without stop, or stay; there being nothing in finally in such places to hinder, or to restrain them; Jer. 9. 22.

so] A defect of the redditive particle: as Prov. 25. 14. and 26. 11. but here it needeth not, the text being rendred as before.

it cometh] To wit, the calamity of Chaldea, or a tempest upon it: Or, he cometh, that is, Cyrus with his forces breaking in fiercely and furiously upon it, Jer. 50. 42. 44. and 51. 28. 30.

from the wilderness] Either, because winds oft blow suddenly and fiercely, from waste places, Job 1. 19. Jer. 4. 11. 12 or in regard of a wilderness, that lay between Persia, or Media, and Chaldea; which Cyrus and his forces, must of necessity pass thorow. Xenophon, l. 3 or, of the Country it self, both of Media, and Persia, the naturall place of either, wherein their souldiery was most bred, being much of it waste, and mountainous, Herodot. l. 1. and Strabo, l. 11. and 15.

from a terrible land] To wit, out of Media, the people whereof, the Babylonians much feared, and their Queen Nitocris, therefore, above mentioned, a woman of prudence, and providence, above her sex, by all means, endeavoured to keep them from having any commerce with her people, by the Assyrians, that lay between them and the Medes, Herodot. l. 1. Of their fierceness, see ch. 13. 17. 18.

V. 2. A grievous vision is declared unto me] Grievous matters concerning Babylon, are, in way of vision, revealed unto me: and this Prophecy therefore is not without good cause, entituled, a burden, ver. 1.

grievous] Heb, hard, hasty, or, cruel, ch. 19. 4.

the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the Spoiler spoileth] Heb. The treacherous dealer, a treacherous dealer; or, dealing treacherously, and the Spoyler, a Spoyler, or Spoyling. These words some joyn with the words going before; reading them on this manner, A grievous vision is declared unto me, for the perfidious person dealeth perfidiously, and for the Spoyler, that Spoileth: as spoken of the Chaldeans, and pointing to their sins, for which they were to be destroyed, to wit, their treachery, and their inhumanity, chap. 47. 6. Hab. 2. 5. Or, a treacherous one, dealing treacherously: and a Spoyler Spoyling. Understanding it of the Medes and Persians, their dealing with the Chaldeans, thus, in either kinde, as the subject matter of this Prophecy. Others fasten it unto that which followeth, as spoken in way of compellation; O thou treacherous dealer, and notable Spoyler, thou Elam, I mean, go up; thou Media besiege: as inviting them to go instantly about the businesse affigned them. But most read them, and so they run best, apart by themselves. Yee some on this wise, much to the same effect with the first of the former: This perfidious person dealeth perfidiously, and the Spoyler Spoileth. That is, the Babylonian that perfisteth in his impiety, (so understanding the former branch, Dan. 3. 5, 6. & 5. 3, 4, 22, 23. and in his oppression, ch. 14. 16, 17. Dan. 4. 27. Othe rethus, The perfidious person, that is, the Babylonian, dealeth perfidiously, and the spoyler, or, plunderer; that is, the Mede or Persian, plundereth, or Spoileth. God, for her perfidiousnes, punisheth Babylon by the Persian sword. Or, which fence seems most natural, The treacherous dealer, hath found a treacherous dealer; and the spoyler, one that Spoileth. The perfidious plunderer, the Babylonian, is now paid in his own coyn: hath now met with his match; is, through Gods just judgment, now dealt with himself, as he had dealt before with others. See chap. 33. 1. Jer. 50. 15. That which some expound of Cyrus, and Darius, whom they suppose to have been, if not, in some fort, under the Babylonian Monarch, yet in confederacy, at least, with him; yea, as some say, thought without all colour of probability, guests with him at table, in that fatal supper, wherein he was slain. But others, deeming it to be too great a blemish to so generous a person, as Cyrus seems to have been, and to cast a wrongful aspersion upon him, (besides, that the last branch of it, hath no footing in story, sacred or other, but is refuted, rather, by either) they expound it rather of such, as fled over from the King of Babylon, to Cyrus, of whom Gadatas and Gobryas, were two principal ones, who being of the first that entred the city, and well skilled in the passages, made directly, with their followers, to the kings Palace, whom they there suddenly surprized, and slew. See Xenophon, lib. 7.

Go up, O Elam, besiege, O Media] The Persians, and Medes, joynt subjects to Cyrus, are called upon, and incited to go up, instantly, against Babylon, and to set down before it. See chap. 13. 2-4. 17.

Go up] A military term,uſed commonly of thoſe, that go out upon any expedition unto any place whatſoever. See on chap.7.1. and the like,ver.5.The rather,here uſed,in a way of elegancy,alluding to the name of Elam,which our Engliſh cannot expreſs. The like is,Mic.1.1,14,15.Zeph.2.4.

O Elam]Or,*O Elamite.*The Elamites put for the Perſians, becauſe they held that part of Perſia,which bordered upon the Medes. See on ch.11.11.

beſiege]Beleagure Babylon.The Prophet,as Gods Camp-maſter. Not that the one ſhould march thither,& the other ſit down there, when they were come thither:but that both, joyntly,ſhould do either.Of this manner of ſpeech,very riſe in this Prophet;See on ch. 5.13.& 20.4,5.

O Media]Or,O Mede,as Dan.5.31. For the name of the country, and of the Inhabitant thereof,is, in the Hebrew,all one:and the old Latine here ſo rendreth it, Howbeit, in regard that the verbs, here, are both feminine; the words may have reference to the lands, in the firſt place, Elymais and Media; but put here for the inhabitants of either.Of the Medes, ſee on chap. 13. 17.

all the ſighing thereof have I made to ceaſe]This is ſpoken in the perſon of God; I am determined,by this your ſervice,againſt Babylon,to put a final end to the affliction of my ſervants, which they have,a long time,ſuſtained by their captivity in Babylon.See ch.14. 1,2.He ſpeaks of a thing, as preſent, not in doing only, but even done, though not to be effected,till,170.years after, and nameth the people, expreſly, by whom it ſhould then be accompliſhed.

the ſighing thereof]Or,of her.To wit,of Babylon :Not wherewith ſhe ſighed her ſelf, but wherewith ſhe made others, Gods people, eſpecially,to ſigh. The ſighing of people, by her cruelty procured. So,the cry of Sodom;for,the cry of poor perſons,oppreſſed by Sodom, Gen.18.20.And,my terror;not wherewith I am terrified,but wherewith I might terrifie thee,Job.33.7.And,your fear, and your dread; for,the fear and dread of you,Deut.11. 25. Not wherewith you fear, or dread others,but wherewith others ſtand in fear of you. For they ſeem to ſtrain it overmuch,who expound it,of her, that is, of my people; as if the Pronoun had reference to them, of whom no mention is made before.Or,that underſtand the ſighing, here mentioned,of the ſolemn mournings wont to be made at the ſolemn exequies of great perſons,Which the king of Babylon ſhould want, ch.14.18,19.

V.3.Therefore are my loyns filled with pains]Theſe words are,by ſome,conceived,as the Prophets words,concerning himſelf,exceedingly terrified with the dreadfull apparition,in a viſion repreſented unto him,of the ſurprizing and ſacking of Babylon.So Hab.3. 15.Some,again,make them the ſpeech of Gods people,relating the ground of their ſighing,the great miſery they endured in the Babylonian captivity,Pſal.66.11,12.Lam.1.2,3,12.But others,rather, ſuppoſe them to be ſpoken in the perſon of the Babylonians, intimating in what an heavy and heartleſs condition they ſhould be, upon the ſudden,and unexpected ſurprizal of their city;ſee ch.15.5. & 16.7,9-11.Ezek.21. 6,7.

my loins are filled with pains]Diſeaſes,and pains in the Loyns are generally,very grievous, and ſuch as diſable, either to ſtir, or to ſtand upright,Deut.33.11.Pſal.38.6,7, 8, & 69. 23. ch.45.1. Ezek. 21.6.& 29. 7. Dan. 5. 6. In this place, thoſe parts eſpecially, mentioned, becauſe pains there, are more eminent in child bearing and birth, here eſpecially aimed at. So,Nah. 2. 10.

pangs have taken hold of me, as the pangs of a woman that travelleth] See the like deſcription of perſons in deſtraction, and diſtreſſe, Pſalm 46.6.Chapter 13.8. and 26. 17. Jerem.48. 41.

I was bowed down at the hearing of it;I was diſmayed at the ſeeing of it]Heb.I am writhed, or,wringed:(and ſo,Pſal 38. 6. with hearing; I am afrighted,(as Iob 21. 6.)with ſeeing. It ſhould be rendred in the preſent tence, that it may ſuit with the former. The Pronoun is wanting; as Chapter 9. 9. Hoſ. 8.4.

V.4. My heart panteth]Heb.wandereth,as ch.29.24.& 53.6. Or, ſtaggereth,as chap.28. 7. Or fluttereth to and fro, as another word like,for notion,to this, and in the like caſe uſed, Pſalm 38.10. It is not able, for fear, to keep in its proper place and poſture.

fearfulneſſe affrighted me]Or,horror(as Ier.49. 16.)affrighteth, or, terrifieth me,as Iob 9.34.& 33.7.

the night of my pleaſure hath be turned into fear unto me] The night time, uſually deſired for reſt,yet affordeth me no reſt,for terror and fear,Deut.28.67.Iob 7.4,13, 14. Or, our feſtival night is turned ſuddenly,into terrors;our mirth and jollity being interrupted by the unexpected irruption of the adverſary. For in a feſtival night,in the midſt of their merriment,was the city of Babylon, by Cyrus, ſurprized, Ier. 41. 39. Dan. 5 1, 30. See Xenophon, lib,7.

the night of my pleaſure]Heb.the evening(evening, for, night; as morning,for,day,Gen.1.5.8.)of my deſire;as 1 King.9.1,19. Deſire,for delight; as ch.2.16.& 32.12. though another word be there uſed. Here,ſo,the rather,becauſe the word, here uſed,properly ſignifies a vehemency of deſire,and amorous affection,Gen.34.8. Deut. 21. 11.Ch.38. 17. The revelling night, that we had ſo much longed for,making full account in it, to ſatiate our ſelves with all variety of delights, proved a dreadful, and diſmal night to us.

hath he turned]That is,the enemy,ſay ſome;God, ſay others :and both true. But the word is indefinite; He hath turned it:that is, It is turned;as Gen.15.6.He imputed it:that is,It was imputed,Rom. 4. 3. and they ſhall call them; that is, they ſhall be called, Mal. 1.4.

turned]Heb.put;as Pſ.107.33.

into fear]Or,trembling:for ſo the word, properly,ſignifieth, Gen. 27.33.1 Sam.14.15.Dan. 10.7. And great variety of tearms doth the Prophet here uſe, to ſet forth the dreadfulneſs of that fatal night.

V.5. Prepare the Table;watch in the watch tower;eat, drink;ariſe ye Princes,and anoint the ſhield] In whoſe perſon theſe words are ſpoken,is queſtioned.Some make them Gods words to the Prophet, as enjoyning him to do that,which he was to fore-tel ſhould be done: For what the Prohpets denounce,they are ſaid oft to do, Ier.1.10, & 18.7,9. Others, would have them ſpoken in the perſon of the Prophet,as either in way of deriſion , biding the Babylonians go on with their feaſting;but withal,implying,that in the the midſt of their revelling, they ſhould be interrupted with the clamours of thoſe;that ſhould call upon them to betake them to their arms.Or, as others,admoniſhing them and their king, inſtead of giving order to have their tables ſpread and furniſhed, to ſet a ſtrict watch for fear of the enemies approach: inſtead of eating and drinking,to ſtand upon their guard, ready armed, to receive,and repel any enemies aſſault. Others,laſtly,divide them, making the former part of the verſe,king Baltaſars words,giving command,as for the Royal banquet to be made ready,ſo for a watch withal to be ſet;and inviting his gueſts to make merry,and feaſt without fear,notwithſtanding the ſiege:and the latter of it,the words of the Prophet, as calling upon the Medes and Perſians,not to overſlip the opportunity offered them,but to ſet upon them, and ſurprize them,in the midſt of their drunken feaſt. And this laſt,to me,ſeems to come neereſt to the minde and purpoſe of the Prophet. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe, the words ſhould be rendred ſomewhat otherwiſe, then generally they are:For the verbs, in the former part of the verſe, are not imperative,as thoſe in the latter part,but of an infinitive form.Thus,therefore,the whole paſſage may run, In furniſhing the table, ſetting the watch;eating,and drinking;(that is,while the Babylonians are thus buſied,and thus employed ariſe ye Princes,and anoint the ſhield : Set ye ſuddenly upon them.The like row of infinitives ranked,and ranged together.See ch.59.13.

watch in the watch-tower] Heb. watching the watch. Though ſome of the Rabbines expound it, a light; ſuch as was ſet up in ſome high place,in manner of a Beacon , to give notice, thereby of the approach of any adverſe force : the Noun is no where elſe found. Some underſtand this branch , not of ſetting a watch, or of having an eie to the light, but of Baltaſars eying the hand that wrote his deſtiny on the wall, in the midſt of his feaſt,Dan. 5. 5. as calling on him, to view and conſider well of it. But that ſeems not to ſuit well with the reſt, of the context.

eat, drink] Wonted words of invitation, at feaſts, Cant. 5.1 But it is in the infinitive form, as in the former branches, the like which argues a defect of the ſame verb,in another form, to be ſupplyed : as if it were ſaid, eating, eat, and drinking, drink : that is, eat, and drink, freely. So remembring remember : that is, be ſure to remember, Exodus 20.8.Deuteronomy.5.12.Joſh. 1.13.and ſeeing;I ſaw;for, I wiſtly ſaw, Eccl. 9.11. See Chap. 22 13.

ariſe] A form of ſpeech, not implying, neceſſarily, any alteration of any preſent poſture, but inciting unto the ſpeedy, and ſedulous addreſſing of a mans ſelf, unto ſome preſent deſign, Gen. 13. 17. and 19. 14, 15. See the like, of going up, ver.2.

Princes] Darius Cyrus, and thoſe that command under you:for ſuch alſo are ſo termed,ch. 10.8.

anoint the ſhield]Or,forbiſh the ſhields; ſhield,for, ſhields:as chap. 22.6.Jer.46.3. prepare for fight:addreſs your ſelves to an aſſault. The Hebrew Doctors,ſome of them,under the term,here uſed,ſuppoſe helmet:and harneſs alſo,to be comprehended, as well as target, or ſhield:becauſe they all conduce to the protection of mans body, which the word,in its notation, importeth, ch.31. 5.& 37.35. And for the word of anointing, though they grant it to intend ſcouring, and poliſhing, whereunto the uſe of oyl is well known to conduce; yet they add, that they made uſe of oyl alſo, for another end, to make their arms the more ſlick and ſlippery,that the enemies ſhafts and javelins,might not,ſo eaſily,faſten on them. To which purpoſe, they wreſt that,2 Sam.1.21.The ſhield of Saul is caſt away, as if it had not been anointed with oyl : as they expound that place.Howbeit,others of them,turn this,both anointing,and ſhield,an other way : expounding the words,anoint a ſhield,that is,ſet up another king in the the room of Baltaſar,Dan.5.30,31.For, as God is called the ſhield, that is,the protector of his people,Gen.15.1. Pſalm. 3.3.& 84.11. So Kings and Princes,ſay they,are likewiſe ſo termed,Pſalm 47.9. Hoſ.4.18.(for ſo they underſtand this word in thoſe places)as alſo from another word of the like notion, to wit, ſhelet: (whence our ſhield ſeems to have deſcended.Jer.51.11.Ezek.27. 11.) They are called,ſhalits;or after the Arabick manner,Sultans:Gen. 42.6. Eccl. 10.5.becauſe they either do,or ought to protect their ſubjects,Lam. 4.20.But the ſimple,and plain ſenſe, is here,for either branch, the beſt.The whole verſe runs along, clean through,in ſix members, without any copulative,to make the ſentence the quicker, & to intimate the ſpeedy diſpatch of the buſineſs.See the like, Exod.15.9. Judg.5. 27.

V.6. For thus hath the Lord ſaid unto me] Or, Thus the Lord enjoyned me.For ſo the word is ſometime uſed,1 Sam.16.10. Eſth. 9.Dan.3.20.I deliver theſe things,but confidently,becauſe I have good warrant from God,for what I ſay. [illegible] ver.16.Or, becauſe God,by a ſecond viſion,hath further confirmed,and given me ſtronger aſſurance of what he had revealed to me before. [illegible] 1.5.

Go ſet a watchman, let him declare what he ſeeth] Becauſe the word,in the foregoing branch, is not Jehovah, but Adonai, which ſignifieth,Lord,or Maſter,and is communicable to man,Exod. [illegible] 8.Mal.1.6. Some underſtand theſe words, and all that followeth with relation to that of a watch ſet,ver. 5. Of the watch-maſter,by the kings appointment,commanding a Sentinel to aſcend on ſome high tower, and relate, what from thence he ſhould eſpy, who accordingly,being there ſet,ſhould thence give notice of Cyrus and Darius,their approach, with their forces toward Babylon. But neither doth this ſeem to ſuit well with the courſe of the context, nor was that watch, before ſpoken of,ſet before their approach, but after they had ſate long before the city, the ſame night that it was taken.Others therefore,and ſo moſt underſtand theſe as Gods words to the Prophet,commanding him,as ſome ſuppoſe, to ſet ſome other Prophet on work, to attend on this ſacred and myſterious buſineſs,as a watch-man on a watch-tower , expecting, what, by viſion God ſhould reveal to him;as Jer.6.17. Hab.2.1. And this watchman,ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors,would have to be one of the Prophets Scholars,and ſome of them, by a trick of theirs, (of which more,on ver.8.)to be Habbakuk,the lion there mentioned; becauſe of his ſtanding on a watch-tower,related,Hab.2.1.But ſome of ours from the Greek,(which by a vitious reading,ver.8. for Arjeh, that is, a lion, hath Uriah) would have this watch-man to be the high-prieſt Uriah,mentioned before,chap.8.2.But the conjecture,with the ground of it,may both go together. Others, underſtand it of the Prophet himſelf,as if God had willed him to ſtand,as on a watch-tower,to ſee what he could diſcry.And Gods Prophets are,generally, ſo termed,becauſe,by the ſpirit of prophecy,they are wont to ſee afar off,and foreſee things to come,and that,ſometimes,for many generations after,which others neither by the help of Nature,or Art are able to deſcry and diſcover,Ezek. 3. 17. & 33.2.7. Rev. 1.1.19. as men, ſtanding aloft,can ſee far,and meet many things, which others that are below on the ground, cannot ſee. But I conceive all this to be done in a viſion,as that,1 King. 22. 17. 19-22.and chap.6.1-13. For, to what end is it, to induce a multiplicity of viſions, where one only is related. Sufficient it was for the Prophet, to relate; as chap. 6. what in viſion, himſelf had ſeen.

V.7. And he ſaw]The watchman,ſet in this viſion,ſaw in a viſion, as ch.6.1.Dan.7.2.& 8.2.

a chariot with a couple of horſemen, a chariot of aſſes,and a chariot of camels]He ſaw troops of horſemen, with beaſts,as well for burden as ſervice,approaching to Babylon.

a chariot with a couple of horſemen] That is,ſay ſome, a chariot with two riding in it,to wit:Darius, and Cyrus:or, as others,Cyrus alone with two drivers,the chariot being drawn by an aſſe, and a camel,an emblem of Cyrus,as being a mixt of two nations, a Perſian by his father, and a Mede by his mother,and termed therefore a mule,as one,in a Chaldeick Prophecy of Nebuchadnezzars, as alſo in an old oracle of Apollo, given to the Babylonians, that their city ſhould ſtand till a mule were King of Media ; and ſome ſuch things, though not altogether thus,are related by Euſebius,in his Evangelicall preparation,l.9.c.41.out of Megaſthenes, and Abydenus,and by Herodot,l.1.c.55.& 91.Others deeming it an unfit matter to crowd two ſuch great Commanders into one chariot, ſuppoſe a chariot,to be put for,chariots:two at leaſt, with two riders reſpectively,the one in the one chariot,and the other in the other; or two,to wit,the rider,and the driver in either. Cyrus riding in the one,drawn with aſſes, or mules, which were of moſt uſe in Perſia,and Elymais;Darius in the other,drawn with camels,which the Medes,and the Bactrians their neighbours, moſt abounded in. Others are of the mind, that thoſe chariots of camels, and mules, ſhould allude to a ſtratagem, that Cyrus ſhould put in practice againſt the Chaldeans, who becauſe they were ſtrongeſt in horſe; Cyrus placed in the front of his army againſt their horſe troops, his camels, whoſe ſight and ſent the horſe could not brook, and with them alſo his mules; which in thoſe Eaſtern parts, are famous for ſwiftneſs;as appears by the ſtory of Abſolom,2 Sam.18. 9.& 13.29. But howſoever of camels ſomewhat is related to this purpoſe, with Herodot.l.1.as contrived by Cyrus in his expedition againſt Croeſus;yet neither doth he,or any other author, that I can light on, mention ought in this kind, attempted by him, either with mules or camels in his Invaſion of Chaldea. But to paſs by theſe,and divers other, either over-curious, or frivolous deſcants, upon this Scripture,the plain ſound,or genuine ſenſe of it,is this as followeth. The verb rakab, the root whence this word rekeb,here uſed, ſpringeth, ſignifieth in general,to ride, whether on horſe,aſs,mule,camel,or any other beaſt uſed to bear a rider,and whether in chariot, coach, or litter,indifferent.See Judg.19.4.1 Sam.25.20. & 30.17.Eſth.8. & 8.10.1 King.1.38.chap.66.20.See alſo ch.19.1.and hence rakkab, ſometime for an horſman,Job 39.18.2 King.9. 17. ſometime for a coach-man,1 King.22.34.Hag.2.22. The word rekeb therefore,thence derived,and here uſed,comprehendeth in general,all riding forces, whether on horſeback; and on other beaſts,or in chariots,coaches, and the like,for it is a collective word, as cavalrie in Latine, with us horſe and foot in Engliſh, and in forraign terms,cavallery and infantry;nor is it found,but once,in a plural form, and that in a Poem,Cant.1.9.See Exod.14.7.2 Sam.8.4.& 10.18. Now theſe riding forces are here firſt divided into two ranks; whereof the former as for fight,or field ſervice,ſaid to conſiſt of two troops of horſe or horſmen,and may repreſent the diſtinct companies of Cyrus and Darius,marching as under two Commanders; the latter chiefly for burden,and that again ſubdivided into two ſorts,the one conſiſting of mules,the other of camels; both uſed much for that purpoſe in thoſe parts,Gen.37.25.2 King.5.17.ch.30.6. and a multitude of ſuch beaſts were neceſſarily required to carry along all manner of proviſions for ſo great an army as they led, both in regard they were to paſs through many waſte places, and to continue a ſiege of uncertain length againſt a city of great ſtrength; and having purpoſely gathered into it moſt of that ſtore, which the country round about it afforded,partly to furniſh it for a long ſiege; and partly alſo, to ſtarve thoſe that came to beſiege them. The words therefore may be rendred; and he ſaw a company of aſſes, and a company of camels.

a chariot]. The word is ſometime uſed for a chariot or coach, Exod.14.6.1 King.22.35.ſometime for horſes,that draw in a chariot or coach,2 Sam.8.4. ſometime for waggons, that lade,a wain or a waggon,1 King.13.20.ſometime for an army, or company of riders, in chariots,ſuch as in thoſe dayes were much uſed in war, where from horſemen they are diſtinguiſhed,Exod.14.9.1 King.10.26. 2 Chr. 12.3.and ſometime,laſtly,for all cavalrie, or troops riding, whether on horſe,or in chariots,oppoſed to thoſe,that ſerve on foot,Exod.14.7. 1 King.22.31.2 King.8.21.

a couple of horſemen] The word ſignifies a yoke of oxen,1 King. 19.19.or a couple of oxen,1 Sam.11.7.or of aſſes,2 Sam.16.1.or a couple of men that go or ride together,2 King.9.25. here uſed, for for a couple of troops or companies of horſ-men,horſemen,for troops, conſiſting of ſuch : for ſo the ſingular alſo is ſometime uſed, Jer.4. 29.Ezek.26.10.

and he hearkned diligently with much heed]Heb.and he conſidered with conſideration, even with much : or great conſideration : a defect of the participle with ; as ch. 17. 5. 10. This ſome underſtand of Cyrus viewing of Babylon, when he was ſet down before it, conſidering which way it might beſt be aſſaulted, and moſt ſpeedily ſurprized. Others, of the Prophet Eſay himſelf, making profeſſion of his own induſtry and diligence in attending the buſineſs that God had ſet him about,and promiſing therein to perſiſt. Others laſtly, of the watchman ſet to watch in the viſion ; and upon the repreſentation of ſuch companies to his view,obſerving diligently their motion, which way they bent and what they intended to do ; that which ſeems to be the proper intendment of the Prophet, in this place.

V. 8. And he cryed a lion]Some of thoſe,that thus read theſe words, ſuppoſe that the watchman,whether ſet up by the Babylonians, to keep ſentinel while they revelled it,or by the Prophet, appointed to attend what he could deſcry ; as firſt beheld, but confuſedly, a great company coming on, as in two troops ; after upon neerer approach,and better view, perceived them to conſiſt of mules the one and of camels the other ; and laſtly,upon a third, and more accurate view,ſaw a lion leading them,and by an out-cry,ſignified as much, And this lion ſome would have to be either Cyrus, or Darius, that took Babylon.Dan.5.30.called a lion;for his fierceneſs,Jer. 50. 44. Others to be Chriſt,the Lion of the Tribe of Juda,Gen.49.9.Rev. 5. 5. the deſtroyer of the ſpiritual Babylon, and deliverer of his people : of whom Cyrus was a type, ch. 45. 1. Nor want there, that dream of a lion,that ſhould be coming on the ſtage to affright, and diſturb the Sentinel; who though, by a loud ſhreik,he gave notice of it, yet would not deſert his ſtation ; unlike to the hireling that ſeeth fleeth when he spies the woolf coming, Joh. 10.12. or that some body, to terrifie him, should tell him of alion; as Dalilah Sampson, of the Philistines, Judg. 16.9.12. which yet he should not regard; unlike therein to Solomons sluggard, Prov. 22.13. But the Jewish Doctors have two other readings, the one more light: the other more weighty. For some of them by Geometry, as they term it, or Arithmetick rather, reading the words, and the lion cryed; (wherein some of ours also concur with them, supposing the watchmen, for his vigilancy, to be reamed a lion) expound it, of Habbekuk: And Habbakuk cryed. And if you ask, how they find Habbakuk in the text. The answer is, just as they finde Jacob and Esau, in Ishtō, ot his wife, Gen. 25.23. for because there is a transposition of the words from their ordinary sequel, running thus in the original, Rebbecah, conceived, his wife. They would have in this last word, which is in Hebrew, Ishtō, to be intimated what it was, that the conceived? and if we demand what that was, they tell us, it was fire, and flubbih, and why so? because forsooth, the letters of these two words, esh wesh, that is, fire and flubbih, do make up just the same number, with the letters of Ishtō, his wife to wit, 707. And if we ask further, what this fire and flubbih should be; they tell us, it is Jacob and Esau, for it is said, Obadiah. 18. the house of Jakob shall be a fire, and the house of Eshu, flubbih; and thus you have Jacob and Esau, in Ishtō, said cleer. Scripture for it too. In like manner here, because the letters of the word Jeyish, here signifying a lion, amount just to the same sum, that the letters of Habbakuk alone do to wit, 318. therefore he must needs be the lion here mentioned, and the watchman, consequently, as was before said. Now should I mention the idle dotage, but to shew how these idle brained Doctors, whose mysterious expositions many begin to dote on, and are so much taken with in these dayes, do ridiculously and irreverently wrest and writhe the words of Gods sacred oracles; as if they were declaiming upon, or making sport with some light poem, or satyrical pamphlet, for the exercising of their wanton wits. Mean while, this is no better then that of the Greeks, of which also before, who for Aryth here, read Ariyah, all the difference is, that the one is a gross mistake, the other a studied, but frivolous device. But instead of this fond and far fetched conceit. Others of them give a more solid reading and sense; which the most, or best at least, of ours, also embrace, thus reading the words, And he cryed, as a lion, that is, a loud, like a lion. The neke of similitude being supplyed which is oft times wanting, as Psal. 11.1. Nah. 3.12,13. So Lam. 3.16. Hos. 11.10. by his hideous noyse, implying, and expressing much fear and terrour to those, whom it concerned, from great danger then approaching. So Amos 3.8.

My Lord, I stand continually upon the watch-tower in the day time; and I am set in my watch wobble nights] Or. on the watchtower, Lord, I stand continually by day: for the word Lord, as it is here written, seems to have no pronoun affixed to it, but is in a form commonly deemed peculiar to the Deity. The words are the watchmans words, whether, as some of him at Babylon, set to keep sentinel, or, as others, rather, of the watchman set in the vision by the Prophet, to observe, either, at the most, professing his constant vigilancy, and assiduous attendance in his station, to give the former affliction of what he had been or, as some, complaining that he had so long watched, in contemplation of Babylons downfal, and had not the full accomplishment of it revealed as yet, so him. So Habbakuk seems to complain, that he had long watched, and waited for some comfortable vision, but as yet could see nothing but of affliction and grievance, Hab. 1.2 3. & 2.1. However, the former seems in this place the fitter, well suiting both with the last clause of the verse before going; and with what followeth, ver. 10.

whole nights] Or cherry nights as ch. 5.5.

V. 9. And behold, here cometh a chariot of men, with a couple of horsemen] Some understand these words, as no more then a repetition of what the watchman had seen, and related, before, ver. 7. But others suppose, some what more to be in them, that should more certainly import, and portend the ruine of Babylon. Some therefore expound them, as the former also, of Gods people, making out of Babylon, and marching away by troops, with bag and baggage, on such beasts, as were before mentioned, Jer. 50.8. & 51.45. Others rather, (and to some of the Jewish Doctors also) of the forces before spoken of, piercing into, and entring upon Babylon, part of them, on the one side of it, and part on the other, Jer. 51. 32.

And behold, here cometh] Or. behold, even now we gone in. He speaketh, as of a thing suddenly done: as if he had said, while I am yet speaking this, some of the retinue before mentioned, are gone in, or are in, into the place, toward which they were bound; the chief whereof, I so fadulously, and solicitously had all this while expected, ver. 7. 8. the pronoun here found, is oft vied, to denote a thing, at present done, and fully effected, Gen. 31. 38. 41. Num. 14. 22. 32. 33.

cometh] Or. goeth in, or, is gone in: So the word is oft used, for to go into, or, to go into, Gen. 7.13. 13.8. 16. 21. & 19.23. & 24.31. & 30.3.

a chariot of men] Heb. of mans: as Num. 36. 10. ch. 5.9. chariots of men, (for both words are collective) such as men ride in, to distinguish them from such as were used for carriage. Here by an hypallage, chariots of men, for those men that were before seen riding in the chariots: as silvers of shekles, for, shekels of silver. Levit. 5.15. & Levit. 7. 21. uncleanesse of man, for, a man of uncleanesse; that is, a man unclean. See ver. 7. and Chap. 22. 6.

a couple of horse men] See on ver. 7. the troops under the command of those two great Princes, Darius and Cyrus, either having left their horses, to scale the walls, and so surprising the city; or, after surprisal of it, entring in on horseback, by the gates, set open for them.

and he answered, and said] By the Person here said to answer. Some understand the watchman, further adding, what he was now assured of, that the downfall of Babylon was that, which was in this vision represented. Others, Gods people, who coming out from thence, relate, and publish it to others, Jer. 51. 50. Some the Prophet, Esay himself, assuring himself now, of what before he expected, upon the report made by the watchman, whom, in the vision, he had set, to observe what he could see. And (lastly, which to me seems most probable) God himself, expounding more fully to the Prophet, what this apparition, all, tended to.

answered] The word in Scripture is used, not for the returning of ought to some foregoing question, only; but for adding ought, to somewhat before spoken, Job 3.4. 8. Mat. 17. 17. & 19. 27. & 22. 1. Luk. 5. 5. 22.

Babylon is fallen, is fallen] To wit, by the hands of those, who were seen coming against her, and entring into her, Jer. 51.8. and it is repeated, as for assurance, so in way, also, of rejoycing, Rev. 18.20. So Rev. 14.8. & 18.2.

and all the graven images of her gods, he hath broken unto the ground] All her idols are fallen, and come down with her; being either become a prey to the enemy, in regard of the rich matter whereof they were made, and the ornaments that they were dressed with, or beaten down, and broken, or burnt, in a bravery, by the Conqueror; as seeming to triumph, not over the people, and Princes, only, but their gods, also, ch. 10. 11. & 37. 19. See ch. 46. 1. Jer. 50. 2. & 51. 44. 47. 52.

the graven images of her gods] Heb. the graven things, or, graven works of her gods; that is, her gravened gods: as ch. 30. 22. the gravenings, or, graven works of thy silver; for, thy graven works, or idols, made of silver. So also, Deut. 12. 3. See Chapter 2. 20. graven ones, put for all sorts of them, Jer. 8, 19. Mic. 1. 7.

her gods] Her idols; whom Baltasar, a little before, had so much extolled, when in contempt of the only true God, he drank with his concubines, in the cups taken out of his Temple, Dan. 5.4. 23.

he hath broken] God, say some, Cyrus, say others. But the verb as the Jewish Doctor well observes, parallelling it with that, Num. 26. 59.) is indefinite; and it might well therefore be rendred, and all her graven gods are broken. See chap. 2. 18, 19. and 18.5. ver. 4. broken unto the ground] Or, broken, & thrown down, unto the ground: as Psal. 89.39. ch. 2.12. & 22.18.

V. 10. O my threshing, and the corn of my floor] These words some Interpreters make the words of God, speaking unto Babylon, and foretelling what now should befall her, as if he had said; Thou Babylon, by whom I have formerly threshed, that is, grievously afflicted, and trodden down, other people, (as chap. 25. 10. & 41. 15.) art now thy self to be threshed, or to be made a place, wherein thy Princes, and people, shall be threshed by the Medes and Persians, as corn in a threshing floor, Jer. 51.33. Mic. 4. 13. But others rather suppose them to be the Prophets words, speaking unto Gods people, and comforting them against those grievous afflictions, which they had from the Syrians, Assyrians, or others, formerly satisfied, and were from the Chaldeans, and Babylonians, further to suffer; assuring them, that what he had foreseen, and foreshewed them of the ruine of Babylon and the Chaldeans, was no dream, or relation of his own devising, but what by revelation he had received from God. And indeed the latter part of the verse, which cannot, without apparent force, be pulled away from this, of necessity enforceth to carry it, this way.

O my threshing] How this might be spoken by God, either concerning Babylon, by whom he had threshed, and whom he meant now to thresh, by others: Or, of his own people, whom he had threshed already, and intended further to thresh, though not utterly to destroy them, ch. 28. 28. as he did some others by them, ch. 26. 14, 19. & 41. 15, 16. Jer. 30. 11. it is not hard to conceive. But how the Prophet should speak in this manner, of his people, as to call them, his threshing, there seems some difficulty in it. This to clear, and also, if some would have it understood, not effectively, but denunciatively: as Jeremy is said to build, and pull down, to plant, and pluck up; not by way of execution of ought in that kind, but by way of denunciation, alone, Jer. 1. 10. & 18. 7, 9. so, say they, doth Esay call this people his threshing, not because he himself had threshed them, but because he had from God denounced those heavy judgments, wherewith they were to be threshed, for their sins. But I suppose we need not have recourse unto any such far-fetcht interpretation. It is agreed on: and the very next word enforce is, that by

by threshing, (a word in this place only found) is here meant, not the act of threshing, as by another word of the same stock, the time, the act of threshing, as by another word of the same stock, the time, Levit. 26. 5. but the object of it, as the corn, straw, and grain, so fuch persons, or people, as either have been, or are to be threshed in such manner, as in the words here intended. So captivity, for, captives, chap. 20. 4. escaping, for persons escaped, Neh. 1. 2. chap. 15. 14. now this being granted, I see not what should hinder, but that the Prophet may well call them, his threshed ones, though not threshed by him, as well as he might also have termed them, his afflicted ones, albeit he had no hand in the afflicting of them; and that without reference to any threshing, or affliction by him, ministerially, denounced against them.

and the corn of my floor] The same thing, saith the Rabbine well, in divers terms, Heb. my son of the floor; thou son of the floor, for, the corn that is threshed in the floor: as, the sons of the quick-coal, for, the sparks that fly from it, Job 5.7. the son of the bow, for, a shaft shot by it, Job 41.28. and, the sons of the quiver, for arrows, that are laid up in it, and drawn out of it, Lam. 3. 13. my son of the floor, as my mountain of holiness, ch. 56. 7. and his idols of silver, ch. 2. 20. and, my God of mercy, Psal. 59. 10, 17. in all which places, and many more, the words run in the very same strain, with these here; and it is son, not daughter, as of Babylon he is wont to speak, ch. 47. 1. and so the Psalmist, Psal. 137. 8. and in the feminine form ch. 23. 12. and in the verse next before going.

That which I have heard from the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, have I declared unto you] I tell you nothing, but what God hath told me. It is like that of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 11. 23. The Prophets fidelity, in the delivery of Gods message, without addition, or detraction of ought, Jer. 23. 26. 28. & 26. 2. And the certainty of the matter, delivered in it, to be, in its due time, accomplished: as that which comes from him, who is both the Lord of Hosts, and able, therefore, to effect it, chap. 14. 24. 26, 27. and the God of Israel also; & though he suffer his people, therefore, to be under the threshing instruments in the floor for a while, yet he will not permit them to lye always there: but will send deliverance at length, ch. 27. 7. 9. & 28. 27, 28.

V. 11. The burden of Dumah] The title of another prophecy, distinct from the former: The subject matter whereof, is intimated in the word, burden, to be some sad and heavy tidings: See ch. 13. 1. The object, or land or people, whom it concernath, are described by the word Dumah: concerning which, Interpreters are at some variance. For some fetch it from Dumah, one of Ismaels race, Gen. 25. 14. 1 Chr. 1. 30. His posterity, as his brother Kedars, ver. 13, 16. had betaken themselves in some part of Arabia, which in regard thereof, bare the name of that their ancestor, and is here called Dumah. And we read, indeed, in Ptolomy, lib. 6. of a sea Town in Arabia, called Dumata: also of an inland Town, called Domata and in Pliny, lib. 6. c. 32. out of Juba, the Mauritanian, of a city situate in that part of Ethiopia, which he assigneth to Arabia, as possessed by Arabians, called Dumana. And further also, in Stephen the Byzantine, out of Glaucus his Arabian antiquities, of Dumathes, a city of Arabia, which may well be all one with either of the former, (the manner, both of Greeks and Latines being to mould foreign terms, as they please) and the same with this Dumah: that of Steven cometh nearest home to the Hebrew Dumah; for Dumah, or Alisdumah, for Eleisdumah, Enoch. 6. 13. and Golumah, for Golah, both in the Greek and Latine, 1 Sam. 17. 4. Of this people, therefore, called not Idumeans, but Dumeans, do some writers of note, both among the Jewish and ours, expound this prophecy. Yet others again, by Dumah, understand here Idumea, or Edom: Dumah, for Edumah, by an Aphaeresis, or detraction of the first letter, for Edumea, or Edumea or Idumea, or Idoma, 1 Chr. 1. 9. Job 31. 21. Pseudonimum, 1. ch. 11. 13. for Epsudonimum, 1 Sam. 17. 1. But I find not in the Hebrew Scripture, where the land of Edom is worded, either Edomah, Adomah, or Idumeah, for Edumah, and Idumea, Mat. 3. 8. as Salem, Heb. 7. 1. 5. are words of a foreign frame: And therefore what is objected, that the next prophecy, is concerning the Arabians, and therefore not this; is no good consequence, for this concerns the Dumean Arabians, and that, the Idumean. The main reason of any weight, that may induce to the supposal, is the mention of Seir in the next words, of which more hereafter. How beit I incline to think, that for the whole Province of Idumea; but some Region, or place of it, which lay Southward, and was not above twenty miles distant from the city of Palestine called, in his time, Anthedonopolis, was that meant. Nor is it improbable, that some of Ismaels posterity might seat themselves in some portion of that country, which the Idomites, their kinsmen, in those times, inhabited. Of whatsoever of the two, the word is here used; there may seem to be in the use of it, here, some fetter allusion, to what the word, ordinarily, imports, to wit, either excision; as Ezek. 27. 32. or, silence; but such as is caused by disturbion and destruction, Psal. 94. 17. & 115. 17. See 2 Sam. 13. 20. implying the ruine of that State, which the old prophecy concerned.

He calleth to me out of Seir] The prophecy is as well short, as sharp; wrapt up in two verses; and neither of them of any length: but very obscure: and that the rather, because little light is afforded us, for the clearing of it, from the stories extant of those things.

He calleth to me out of Seir] Or, as the Hebrew runneth, One is calling to me from Seir. Or, a cry, or, A tell is made, or cometh to me from Seir. I am to yeild unto, or called upon from thence, for the speech, is indefinite; as ver. 9. This those that understand this prophecy of the Dumeans, interpret, either of a voice that should come from God to the Prophet, concerning the destruction, that from the Idomites should befall them; as of Edom the like, Jer. 49. 14. Or of a noise, and clamour of warlike preparations, heard from mount Seir; the Edomites intending to invade, and surprize Dumah. But those that, by Dumah, understand Edom, or Idumea; expound it of the Edomites, speaking unto the Prophet, either in jeering wise, or in derision.

How stands Seir was as Shesir, Cant. 4. 8.) the name of a mountain, possessed by Esau, and his posterity, Gen. 36. 8. Deut. 2. 4, 5. Josh. 24. 4. So called, not as Some have thought, from Esau, who was born rough and hairy, which the notation of the word improveth, Gen. 25. 25. or from the roughness, and horridness of that rocky mountain, though allowed many a thing, Jer. 49. 16. but from the ancient lord, and possessor of it, Seir, the Horite, Gen. 36. 20. in whose race it continued, Gen. 14. 6. until the Edomites, or posterity of Esau thence expelled them, Deut. 2. 12. Esau, in likelihood, as first, having got some footing there, by the marriage of Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, by Zibeon, defended from Seir, Gen. 36. 2, 20, 24. 25. which his eye well liking, and loath either to quit the place again, or to be coupled in some border or seantling of it, to the will and pleasure of others, dispossessed the right owners, and made themselves absolute lords of it.

watchman, what of the night? watchman, what of the night?] Some suppose these words to be the Dumeans, who, in regard of the great dangers and fears they were in, having set a watchman to keep sentinel, night and day, as ver. 8. were ever and anon calling on him, to tell them whether he descryed ought; or no, wherby they might be endangered. Or, as others the Idumeans calling to the Dumean watchman, (as sentinels are wont to be set in bordering places) enquiring of him, as being in the like fears with them; and likely, for regard of neighbourhood, to run the same hazard with them, whether ought were reprehended to him, that concerned either of them. Implying as they imagine, that there were hostile forces a broad that had made foule havock in the countries about them; and it might be expected, would do the like with them also. And they likewise not amiss, with the matter of the Prophecy next ensuing, concerning the Kedarens, their neighbours and near allies, ver. 13. 16. which might well be of the same date with this, as well for delivery, as for accomplishment also. Some again would have them to be the words of Isaiah himself, that came as a spie, to view the condition, and see what watch and ward was there kept: but making as if he were one of the country, and had some occasion, either of journey, or of some other business abroad or of some Dumean, that thus called upon the Sentinels, to see whether they were awake, or not; or demanding of them, how far the night was spent; as hoping to be in some more quiet composure, being freed from the fear of a nightly invasion, as more dreadful, and not unusual, where the enemy is neer at hand, and lying in wait for opportunities, and ready to lay hold on any advantage, for assault, Cant. 3. 7, 8. ch. 5. 5. Or of such as were in arms, and stood all night attending the approach of the enemy, enquiring how near it is to break of day, that they might be either relieved, or discharged of that their wearisom employment, Psal. 130. 6. And these are, divers of them, the expositions of the Jewish Doctors; but admitted and approved, the most by some of ours also, among whom, yet, there are not a few, who understand them, as spoken, either by the Dumeans, or Idumeans, to the Prophet Esay himself, and that either in seeking matter by way of derision, as if they had said, You Prophet, that profess your self to be a warder, and to watch for the good of your people, what tidings have you for us? What say you to the calamities of your fellow-Prophets, have so oft said thus and thus to us? You threaten us with nights of affliction, and heavinesse, but we enjoy fair day-light of prosperity, peace and liberty, such that, in Jeshurun-like, we thinke of little else, and so are up and doing at our own ease, King. 8. 10. Or seriously, and solicitously, as being in great difficulties and danger, in regard of a prevailing Conqueror, that bore down all before him, and had seized upon their Provinces, approving near to them, and desirous, from the Prophet to understand what he saw, or sore-saw concerning them or what advice he could give them for even to Gods Prophets, as to God himself, Judg. 10. 10, 13, 14. Jer. 2. 27. Hos. 5. 13, 15. sometimes, in such cases, they thus otherwise did not relish, not regard him or them, were content to repair, 2 King. 3. 12, 13. & 5. 3, 5, 8. 7, 8. & 13. 14. Thus have I delivered, though not all, (for there are are many more) yet the principall, and most probable expositions of these words; leaving them to the judgment of others, to pick out, and pitch upon, which, in a Scripture of so great difficulty, they shall deem to be most likely; onely professing my self to incline to the judgment of those, who suppose them to imply, a distracted and hazzardous condition of those, by whom they were delivered, unto whom soever they were directed.

watchman] The word is not the same, that was used before, ver. 6. that signifies, properly, a seiwer, or a spie: But the word, here used, is one, that, properly, signifieth a warder, an observer, or a keeper, 1 Sam. 1. 13. & 17. 20. 22. That which, therefore, hath given occasion, here, of divers misinterpretations, especially, among the Jewish Expositors. Some understanding here, by the warder, or keeper, God the keeper of Israel, Psal. 121. 4. Some the Ruler of the country, the keeper of his subjects, as the shepherd of his sheep, 1 Sam. 17. 20. Others, some Souldiers; because the souldiery are the keepers of the country; whence Achish to David, I will make the keeper of my head, 1 Sam. 28. 2. But we need not run out to these far-fetcht interpretations, inducing strange senses; which because they have little shew of probability, we have formerly omitted. The word doth here, either imply the Prophet himself, one of Israels watchers and warders, an observer of them, as well as Jeremy, Jer. 6. 27. or, a watcher for them, as well as Ezekiel, Ezek. 3. 27. & 33. 2. 7. Yea, and a keeper of them, as well as their souldiery; the chariots and horsemen of Israel, as well, as either Elias, or Eliseus, 2 King. 2. 12. & 13. 14. Or lastly, some watchman, as the former represented in a vision; so questioned and so answering, as is here expressed. For the word here found is of such watchmen, also used, as the former, Neh. 13. 29. Psal. 130. 6. and our Prophet delighteth much in variety of terms.

what of the night ?] How much of it is past, or yet remains: How far is the night spent? Or, what in the night, by night, as we use to say, hath thou seen, or observed? Of the night, for in the night; as of a book, for in a book, Job 39. 26. and, of the city, for in the city, Psal. 73. 16. or, concerning the night, to wit, of affliction, (as Job 5. 14. & 17. 12. & 35. 10. Pf. 30. 5. & 118. 4.) that at present lyeth heavy on us.

watchman, what of the night ?] The same, as most interpreters redoubled, after the manner of those, that move such questions, unto those, especially, that stand far above them, as doubting whether, at first, they hear, or no, or as those are wont to speak, that are full of fear and follicitude, asking of the same thing, chap. 33. 18. only the contract is put for the entire word, though standing easie, without leaning on any other. Which, as in some other the like, Ethel, for Chayil, chap. 32. Obad. 10. So in this word, Lel, for Layil, is not unusual. See ch. 15. 1. & 16. 3. & 30. 29. Yet, because the word milel, signifieth, sometime to speak, Job 8. 2. Pfal. 106. 2. whence the term millah, that signifies a word, Pfal. 139. 4. Some Interpreters, of good note, render the words here: The watchman, what saith he? (for so lye the words in the text) or, what saith the watchman, as, who would have said to Abraham? Gen. 21. 7. where the same word is found. But the syntax runs more smoothly, the former way.

V. 12. The watchman said] The watchman answer to the question, before moved to him, follows. Which whether it be delivered, as returned by the Prophet himself, to those that did follicite him for advice, (as repeating their words) calling himself by the name, that they before gave him, or, as the watchman, in the vision represented unto him, they whose office consisted of him, either concerning the time of the night or of, ought he saw in the night, is to be taken, as a divine Oracle, intimating, what was to befall that people, whom he spake to.

the morning cometh, and also the night] The watchmans answer consisteth of two parts; conteining an allusion, the one to his office, the other very obscure either; and much canvased by Interpreters, as well Jewish, as others. This former part laid down in these words, must import some sad and heavy tidings to those, whom it concerned. The prophesie else should not answer its inscription, a burden, or burdensom vision or prophecy. The title should not be suitable to the contents of it. Some therefore, expound the words, as if he should say, The morning indeed approacheth; but such a morning, as shall afford you no light or comfort at all, as little comfort shall you have of it, as if it were dark night, or midnight still with you, ch. 8. 22. & 59. 10. Job 5. 14. & 24. 17. Amos 4. 13. & 5. 8. Others, though morning be come as you suppose, with you, having, as Isaak, your great Grandfather foreseen, foretold, shaken off that yoke, where with Jacobs line kept you under, Gen. 27. 40. Yet this fair morning will not last long with you: a night of calamity, and misery, will by the Assyrians, ere long, be cast upon you, worse, then that you were in, under the Aegyptian yoke. Others; I have nothing to imagine unto you, save that, as sure as the night succeeds the day, so certainly will affliction and destruction shortly surprize you: either coming and comprising, or to be accomplished and concluded, within a like compass of time, than entire day, consisting of morning and night: morning, for day, as evening, for night, Vers. 4. and it well suits with that of the Academics, their kinsmen. Vers. 16. morning, and night, for an entire day: and a day, for a year, as Ezek. 4. 6. 9. See, 29. Chap. 29. 3.

if ye will enquire, enquire ye: return, come] As many several senses of these words, are given, as of the former: I will prefer you with one, or two onely. Some knit this clause, to the former branch, as noting the inevitableness of the evill there in menaced; the night, I foretell you of, will come, though (so the particle is found used, Job 14. 7. 8. & 16. 6. & 17. 13. & 27. 16.) ye enquire and enquire never so oft, never so earnestly, and go to and fro, and come again and again; or, retaining the former reading, ye may enquire further, if ye please, and return and come again as oft as ye will; but other answer cannot be returned you. Others, if you will needs be enquiring, enquire seriously, not in mockery, or, enquire of that that concerneth you, and may be for your good; to wit, how you may make your peace with God, before this night seize upon you, Jer. 13. 16. and the only way whereby that may be effected, is by returning to him with sincere repentance of your sins, and adjoyning your selves to this people, ch. 55. 6. 7. Jer. 18. 7. 8. 11. Dan. 4. 27. Jon. 3. 4. 10.

enquire] The word is, by some of the Rabbines, here noted, to be a Syriack; by other, a Kedarene, or an Arabick word: and it is indeed in the Chaldee Paraphrase of the old Testament, and the Syriack version of the new, very frequent. It seems to import an earnest, eager, and ardent inquisition; when a man's mind is restless, and his heart boyles fo within him, that he cannot be quiet, but is continually enquiring after somewhat, that his mind is wholly taken up with: for the word, in his first (as may seem) and original sense, signifieth to boil, chap. 64. 2. whence, as bubbles arising upon the surface of boyling water, so blisters from inward heat breaking forth, and swelling up on the outward parts of the body, have their name in Hebrew, Exod. 9. 9. 10. and that it implieth a very narrow, exquisite, and exact enquiry, see Obad. 5. 6. It is therefore, as if he had faid, since that (so is the particle also rendred, Job 14. 5.) you are so inquisitive, or so eager upon enquiry, enquire, and ask what you please, but so enquire, as that your inquisition be not vain and fruitless. Which that it may not be, return, come] That is, fay some, no more then come again. And indeed the word of returning, oft times, imports no more then a reiteration of that which it is joyned with. So Isaak returned and digged, that is, he digged again, Gen. 26. 18. return, lye down, for lye down again, 1 Sam. 3. 5. 6. he returned and lodged there, for, he lodged there again, Judg. 19. 7. being not yet gone out of the house. But in such forms of speech, the words are wont to be knit together, which here they are not, and imply, therefore, two distinct acts: A return (not, as some, to those that sent them; but) to God, who alone was able to relieve them: And a coming over, (not as some, of the Idumeans, to the Dumeans, either to fight for them, as confederates, craving their aid, or with them, as enemies to be destroyed, but (whether of Dumeans, or Idumeans) unto Gods people, among whom the Prophet abode, and with whom, alone, protection was to be had, ch. 45. 6. 8. 10. 24. & 56. 8.

V. 13. The burden upon Arabia] Another prophecy, concerning either Arabia, in general, whereof Dumah before mentioned, ver. 11. might be apart; or concerning that part of it, more specially, which the Kedarens possessed, ver. 16.

The burden] See on ch. 13. 1.

upon Arabia] As Neh. 2. 12. To be laid upon Arabia, as a burden, is laid upon a beast, ch. 30. 6. Or, against it Arabia, as against Egypt, Exod. 14. 25. (And Arabia, for the Arabians, as Egypt here, for the Egyptians) and against thy neighbour, Exod. 20. 16. and against Moses, Numb. 12. 1. for the particle is the same. And the Lxx in Geneva gosh wide, that rendreth it here, as he should after have done it, in Arabia, as if the burden were not the burden of Arabia, but of some other, that should flee thither for succour.

Arabia] Whence this region had its name, at first, is uncertain. The fabulous Greeks in Eustathius, tell us of one Arabus, of the race of Apollo and Solinus would make us believe, that the word signifieth an holy country, but in what language, he telleth us not. The name in Hebrew hath affinity with a word, that is used for the west, opposed thereto, by some, to be so called, because that it lay toward the Western part of Assyria: ending along over against Ethiopia, and Egypt: as also with another word that signifieth a plain, or a desart, Chap. 40. 3. Jer. 50. 12. which suites well with some part of it: and his heir some of the Rabbines draw that, Jer. 3. 2. in the Arabian in the wilderness. But it rather is to have had this appellation from the name that signifieth a mixt multitude, Exod. 12. 38. Ier. 50. 37. because the region was, much of it, peopled by such, some of Chams posterity, Gen. 10. 7. and some of Abrahams, else by Ismaelites, Gen. 25. 13. and by Hagar, from Ismael, Gen. 25. 15. & being therein intermingled, the one with the other, they became the ambiguity, and variety of readings, and versions, 1 King. 10. 15. & Chron. 9. 14. Pfal. 68. 4. Hab. 3. 8. Zeph. 3. 3. See Jer. 25. 24. & 50. 37. for whofe that imagine, they should be so called of the word, Arab, that fignifies lying in wait, though it carry a fair shew with it, as if the words were the same, and it fair well with the condition of that people, living much by robbery: to this very day. And to that purpose waiting for passengers, to surprize them, Jer. 3. 2. 3. yet the roots of either, in the original, are divers: and the initial letters differ as in Amon and Amar, chap. 17. 1. which not obserued, bread a grosse mistake in the Greek version, Joth. 8. 14. The whole region lying, a great part of it, between the Persian gulf, on the Eastern side, and the Red sea, therein called the Arabian gulf on the West, is commonly divided into three parts, Arabia the fertile, the rocky, and the waste. But Strabo, l. 16. seems to make a dichotomy of it, as nature it self, in a manner, hath done; dividing it into two parts, the fertile, and the barren; which latter may well include those two, which others divide, being for inlecundity much at one; in the wilderneſs whereof, the Israelites so long wandred to and fro, after their cutting the red sea, before they arrived on the coaſt of Canaan, and of this part of Arabia, do most understand this Prophecy, (though peradventure, yet, of a larger extent, because bordering upon Palestine, it is probable, that the Assyrian king over-ran this also, when he invaded that country, ch. 20. 1. Of Arabia, see also on ch. 13. 21.

In the forrest in Arabia shall ye lodge, O ye travelling companies of Dedanim] This prophecy tore telling the calamities that should befall the Arabians, from the Assyrian invading them, relateth how they should be driven, leaving their abode in the champion, to seek their shelter in the woods; calleth upon some of them, to relieve their neighbours in their flight, ver. 14, 15. and prefixeth a time, wherein this disaster, betiding them, should much impoverish their estate, ver. 16, 17.

the forrest] Or, wood; as 1 Sam. 14. 25. wood, for woods: or, forrest consiling of woods, as chap. 7. 2. the woody part of the country, whither, as well men, as beasts, use to betake themselves for covert and retreat, in times of danger and distress, when invaded, or purſued in the plain, or expect so to be, where they lye more open to assault, Gen. 3. 8. 1 Sam. 22. 5. Josh. 17. 18. though it be a wood, or, forrest, apt to the heat, and more difficult therefore to surprize. Not so the particle should there, as after in the same verse, be rendred. The meaning seems to be here, that not only for fear of the enemies, but being stript, by them, of their tents, which they usually lodged, and dwelt in, ch. 14. 20. they should now be compelled to take up their lodging in the woods. See Jer. 49. 28. 29.

in Arabia] The woods that are in that country, or, of Arabia: in Arabia, for, of Arabia: as, the mountains in Gilboa, 2 Sam. 2. 21. for of Gilboa: and in thy people, Exod. 22. 28. for, of thy people: as it is rendred, Act. 23. 5. and in any, as well, be rendred, in Arabia, or, of Arabia shall lodge, as well Inhabitants of Arabia, as woods of Arabia: referring the words in, or, of Arabia, not to the woods, wherein they should lodg, but to the people, that should lodge in them. The Latine, deceived by the neerness of the word, translates it, at evening: and the word that signifies evening, is supposed indeed, sometime, to be put for Arabia, 1 King. 10. 15. but this of Arabia never for evening: and the word is no farther like with that before. As for the Popish Interpreter, he did but play here, (as many of them oft do) who bestoweth the word Arab, in not for its form found from Oreb, that fignifies a crow, or, a raven, (for the word seems to include either, Levit. 11. 15. so called as may be, for his blackneſs, Cant. 5. 11. resembling the Arabians smoky tents, Cant. 1. 4.) would have it here intimated, that the Arabians destiny was, like Tharaabs in other Countries, to be hanged, and made meat for such fowls, Gen. 40. 19. Prov. 30. 17. Thus do wanton wits, as well among professed Christians, as apostate Jews, in prophane abuse daily, and make sport with Gods sacred Word.

shall ye lodge] This some, and so the Rabbines alſo, divers of them, understand of the Jews, who, in the Assyrian Invasion, shall have those parts for relief. Whom the Arabians (here upbraided, therefore, for their inhumanity towards them, as was Moab before, ch. 16. 3. 4.) refusing to entertain, should constrain them to lodge abroad in the wild, and wilde woods. Others understand it, of Caravans, or troops of people, that used to travel that way with merchandize, Gen. 37. 25. 28. Job 6. 19. and to take up their lodgings among them; but now finding the Country full of soldiers, in regard of whom they could not pass with security, and safety, as formerly they had done; (see Lam. 4. 9. or rather, all stilled, and waited by the enemy, should be compelled to lodg, in the woods. But I suppose it rather to be intended of the Kedarites, or Arabians, inhabiting in the lower parts of the Country, towards Palestine, who being expelled from the places of their wonted abode, in the plains, should be enforced to fet up into the higher parts of the Country, to seek shelter there in the woods.

O ye travelling companies of Dedanim] The word here used, signifieth first, and properly, paths, ways, or passages, Gen. 49. 17. Job 6. 18. Chap. 2. 3. and so some Interpreters here understood it: rendring the words, in the ways, or passages of Dedanim, by the ways, that lead thither. The particle is wanting, as Ier. 6. 9. in the way, or upon the way, or, by the high way side to Seoinim, that is, fay they, in the woods, that are about the way toward Dedan. Howbeit, as the word Orcath, arising from the like order, (but once read, Job 34. 8. having a notion of journeying, and therefore also of such, as travel, in society, or company together) doth signifie a traveller; whether alledged for travellers, Jer. 9. 1. and, like a traveller, that turns in to lodg for a night, Jer. 14. 8. so the word Orchoth here used, is by a metonymy deemed to be put for a company, or troop of travellers, that journey together, Gen. 37. 25. 28. Job 6. 19. in which latter place also, waies, or marches, (for so the word properly fignifies, Pf. 68. 24. seems to be put for companies marching, or journeying as another the like also, 2 Sam. 12. 4. where a waie, or, a way, for a man to walk, or journey in, is put for a man of the way, or, by the way, that is, a wayfaring man, and made the same, with orcath, a traveller, there also used. The text therefore may well be read here as our English rendereth it, though I see no necessity of departing from the proper, and most frequent signification of the word.

Dedanim] Or, Dedanites : a people defended from Dedan, one of Abrahams illue by Keturah. Gen. 25. 3. and they are reckoned up with the Temanites, and other people of Arabia, Jer. 25. 23, 24. though among the Edomites also together with the Temanites: as neer neighbours to them, and mixt also: it may be with them, Jer. 49. 7. 8. Ezek. 25. 13. 9 o the Dumeans, and Idumeans, before, ver. 11. See of them and their merchandize, Ezek. 27. 5. 20. & 38. 13. by which places, it may be deemed, that they dwelt near upon the fertiler part of Arabia. Howbeit, from that former place of Ezekiel, some observe two severall people; of Countries far distant one from another, both bearing that name; the one defended from Cush, by Rhamah, Gen. 10. 7. feated Eastward from the Gulf of Persia, on the Indian Sea-coast, where a region is called Didia unto this day, that traded at Tyre, in ivory, and ebony, the wares of those parts, v. 15. The other, as before, descended from Abrahard by Keturah, whole seat was, as hath been laid, and their trade in cloths only, v. 20.

V. 14. The Inhabitants of the land of Temah, brought water to him that was thirsty, they prevented with their bread, him that fled] The Jewish Doctors conceiving these thirsty fleers to be of their own Country-men, understand the words to be spoken with an intimation of Duty, relatively, what they should have done: The Inhabitants of Tema should have brought water to the thirsty Jews, their kinsmen, and should have prevented with their bread, those of them that fled away from the A ſyrians: as some of them would have it, but they prevented them with their bloud, that is, as they expound it, whereas being thirsty, they wanted drink, and they should in the first place have supplyed them with that, they did not, but first tendred salt-meats, that encreased their thirst, and when they had so done, then offered them empty bottles, which putting to their mouths, in hope to meet with drink in them, they drew nothing but wind from them; and so dyed. These are Jewish fictions and fables. As far from the truth of story, do those vain imaginations way, that would have it underſtood of their helping to relieve the Assyrians, their confederates, purſued by the Medes. The words may well be rendred, from the Hebrew, bring forth water, whereto add to meet the thirsty, with your bread prevent those that flee. Which is spoken by the Prophet, to intimate unto the Temanites, what distress their Country men of other parts of Arabia should be in, being constrained to leave suddenly their wonted places of abode, and to flee either to them, or along by them, being destitute of all necessary provisions, in those waste regions especially, to seek for some shelter, and relief elsewhere.

the land of Temah] As Dumah, v. 11. so Temah was one of Ismaels race, Gen. 25. 15. from whom the land, that the people descended of him did inhabit, was so called, Job 6. 19. Jer. 25. 23. They mis-read here Teman, for Tema, with the Greek, who after the old Latine render it The land of the South.

brought] Or, bring. Heb. come: as Jer. 2. 19. and so taking it, in the first form it should be rendred, not, come & water, as some very unskilfully, but, come with water: a defect of the particle, as ver. 7. & 16. as some, and and bring wanting: as Gen. 27. 9. take (that is, take, and bring me) two kids, or, it may be here, in the second, or active form, and then it is make to come with it and so with bring. I rather choose the former, come with water, partly, because the verb hi Jer. 12. 9. (and in this form it is no where else found) so founds, come to eat, and partly, because the Hebrew hath le more fully then our English expreſſeth it, come with water to meet the thirsty : as 1 Sam. 25. 32.

water] A commodity, in those parts, very scanty, Exod. 17. 1. Num. 20. 2. Judg. 5. 25.

thirsty] Heb. thirsty one: as afore weary, in flee: but both these collectively, as chap. 22. 8. & 56. 12. In this condition their neighbours then were, partly, in likely hood, being stript of all necessaries, partly not daring, for fear, to stay to eat and drink, for to take any portion along, as in the meantime they also wandering in those hot, & dry places, such as their country, for the most part was. See 2 Sam. 17. 28. 29.

they prevented] Or, goe to meet: Which however way taken, doth not imply, as the Greek Rabbins would have it, a rendring of meat, or bread to them, before or new, but a speedy, and spontaneous act of beneficence, not staying till they were cryed unto, or called upon for it; but strictly of their own accord, without delay doing it, and with their voluntary tender, anticipating their suit for it. So Deut. 23. 4. & Neh. 13. 2. because they prevented not with the children of Israel, with bread, and with water by the way: and so Hosea 7. 10. rendred in either place, not, being the same, that is implyed in the former branch, by coming to meet, importing a going voluntarily to meet them, before they were come at them, or arrived with them: as Deut. 22. 29. Prov. 7. 15.

with their bread] Or, with your bread: one person for another; the third for the second: as Job 18. 3. O thou that teares thy ſoul in thine anger; (for, thy ſoul, or thy ſelf, with thine anger:) ſhall the earth be forſaken for thee? and Job 17. 10. return ye all them, for all of you.

him that fled] Or, the fleeth. Heb. the flee, or wanderers as Prov 27. 8. Jer. 49. 5. See ver. 15.

V.15. For they fled from the swords, from the drawn sword, and from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war] It is no groundless fear, that makes them flee thus like that, 2 King.7.8. but the dread and terrour of a potent enemy, not making towards them, but fallen in upon them, with an over-powerful army.

they] Which shews the word before going, verf. 14. to be collective.

fled] Or, fle: as Pf.31.22.

from the swords] Heb. from before the swords. that is, for fear of the sword, ready to seize on them: as 1 Chro.11.13.ch.31.8. Joel 2.6. and so in all the branches following, the sword is put frequently for hostile Invasion, Levit. 26. 6. 25. chapter. 1. 20. and 51. 19.

the sword drawn] So the Chaldee. Heb. left, or let go, as the verb sometime signifies, Deut. 32.15. Gen. 31. 28. or rather stretched out, at them: and ready to fall upon them, as the verb is used, Num. 11. 31. 1 Sam. 4.2. chap. 16.8. or, diffused, and spread abroad, over the Country: (so one of the Rabbines) as the particle is used, 1 Sam. 30. 16. and the verb also, Judg. 15. 9. 1 Sam. 4.2. 2 Sam. 5.18. 22. the word is no where else found applyed to a sword: and some therefore suppose netushah, to be put here, for letushah; that signifies sharp, or sharpened. Pf. 7.12. & 52.2. but that is a needless boldnefs.

the bent bow] Heb. the trodden bow, See ch. 5.28. sword, and bow, as elsewhere, so here, for all manner of warlike weapons, being two of the most principall, and in those times most commonly used; the one to smite with at hand, the other, to reach afar off; joyned frequently together, Gen. 48.22. Pf. 37.14. & 44.6. & 76.3. ch. 13.15. 18. & 41.2. Hof. 2.20.

the grievousness of war] That is, a grievous war. Heb. heaviness: as ch. 30.27. heavy, for, grievous: as Gen. 18.20. ch. 36.2.

V. 16. For thus hath the Lord said unto me] See ver. 6. & chap. 31. 4.

within a year, after the years of an hireling, and all the glory of Kedar shall fail] In these words, is a short space of time set, a bare year, within compass whereof this faid Prophecy should take effect; and the heavy doom, in the verses foregoing, clofely, and darkly delivered, now more expreffly, and in plainer terms denounced, should be executed upon the Arabians.

within a year] Heb. in yet a year; that is, while the year, that now is, is yet in being: before a year be come about, or be compleat. A shorter time, then that assigned to the Moabites, chap. 16.14. or, that to the Ethiopians, and Egyptians joyntly together, chap. 20. 3. the Assyrian, whether Sargon, chap. 20.1. or Sennacherib, ch. 36.1. falling in, it seems, sooner upon those parts of Arabia, then upon those people: if those several Prophecies, at least, were delivered about the same time with this. For I cannot assent to them, that conceive this Prophecy, to intend the calamities on this people, inflicted by the Chaldeans, above an hundred year after Essays dayes, foretold by Jeremy, Jer. 49.28. and that the time here mentioned doth not tell when this heavy doom should be executed: but how long the execution of it should laft.

after] Or according to the yeares of an hireling: Who, so soon as his yeares are run out, expecteth instantly his wages. Gen. 29.20. 31. See ch. 16.14.

and all the glory] Or, shall all the glory: For as our English runs, the And is superfluous: within a year, and all his glory shall fail: or, if we retain the copulative, which in the original is not unuseful; it may be rendred: As yet a year, and all the glory shall fail. So ch. 10.25. Jer. 51.33.

all the glory] Their wealth, might, and multitude: or whatsoever it is, that they glory in, or procureth them any note, or name: as ch. 16. 14. Their wealth seems to have consisted most in their cattle, not the greater sort, but the lesser, to wit, sheep, and goats: that will thrive in places, though somewhat bare, and affording but short commons; where they may have scope enough: and some camels, beast, that will endure hard feeding, and hold out long without water: See ch. 60.7. Ezek. 27.21. Jer. 49.29.

of Kedar] The name, of one of Ismaels sons, Gen. 25.13. whose posterity seated themselves in that hideous fertile part of Arabia, as well the wafte, as the rocky: that which this our Prophet intimates, ch. 42. 11. where they lived most in tents, therefore called Kedarens which they were wont to remove from place to place, to procure change of paflure for their cattel, I heard the tents of Kedar, Pf. 120.5. Cant. 1. 5. and their curtains, wherewith their tents confifted, Jer. 49.29. Hab. 3.7.

left] Or, b consumed: as it is rendred, Pf. 39.10. ch. 1.28.

V. 17. And the residue of the number of archers, the mighty men of the children of Kedar, shall be diminished] There shall be a very small company, in comparison, of any might; or fit for military service, left remaining.

The residue] The small remainder, like a remnant of a large piece of Cloth, or the like: See ch. 10.22.

of the number] The word is used sometime as a note of fewnefs, such as may easily be numbred. Deut. 33.6. ch. 10.19. sometime, of multitude, a number not easily told, Numb. 23.10. Pf. 147.4. and so here: as also numbers, in the plural, Pf. 71.15.

of archers] Heb. of the bow, that is, of men of the bow; or, bow-men: as, harvest: for, an harvest man. Chap. 17. 5. See Chap. 22. 3 yet the word may be taken here in his proper sense, without that trope, if we carry on the sentence, without interruption, thus; the number of the bow (that is, of the bows; as ver. 15. for the words, howsoever taken, is collective) of the mighty men, &c. as the very like 15, 1 Sam. 2.4. that is, the residue of the multitude of the bows, that is, the arms; and the might, consequently of their martial men shall be diminished. So Jer. 49.35. I will break the bow of Elam, the chief of their might. The bow was these Kedarens chief arms, therein intimating their ancestor Ismael, that was trained up in that trade: and living in the wilderness, (it is not unlikely) lived much by it, as fift. Gen. 21.20.

of the sons of Kedar] The Kedarens, his posterity. See ver. 16. as, the sons of Lot, Pf. 83.8.

shall be diminished] Not utterly destroyed. So of Moab, chap. 16.14.

for the Lord God of Israel hath spoken it] See Chapter 1. 20. & ver. 10.

God of Israel] The only true God, Jer. 10.10.

CHAP. XXII.

Ver.1. The burde of the valley of Vision] A sad Prophecy against Judah and Jerusalem: as appeareth, ver. 8. 10. Of burden, see ch. 13.1.

the valley] It is here questioned why Jerusalem should be called a valley, when as it seemed to stand upon an hill; whence that, Pfal. 87.1. Her foundation is on the holy mountains, or, hills. To which some answer; that though the city stood, the chief part of it, on a knole, or rising-ground, and might therefore be termed an hill; the Temple built on mount Moriah, whereon Abraham was to have sacrificed Isaac; and Sion the city of David being an hill of some height Gen. 22.2. 2 Chr. 3.1. 2 Sam. 5.7. Pfal. 48.2. & 68.1. 16. chap. 2.2. & 14.13. yet, in regard that the place in which it was seated, was environed with mountains, far higher then it, or any part of it, it is in regard of them said to stand in a vale, and is here termed a valley, See Pf. 121.1. & 125.2. chap. 52.7. Jer. 3.23. . Others would have it so termed, both Jewish, and ours, in regard of the dejected estate, and low condition, that it should be brought unto, by the troubles here fore-told, in regard whereof, it might well be called, not a lofty, or ftately mount, now, as sometime, but a depreffed, low vally. See Jer. 17. 3. 12. & 22. 23. the former seems the genuine sense.

of Vision] It is called the Valley of Vision, as most think, in regard of the abundance of visions, or divine revelations, from time to time, there imparted to Gods Prophets: for Jerusalem, as one well faith) was as a Seminary of Seers: and there was the place from whence God was wont to give Oracles; whence that sacred room, or closet in the Temple, was so styled, 1 King. 6.5, 19, 20. & 8. 6. 8. Some, a little more nicely, proceed somewhat farther, because thence into from heaven, as from an hill, into a vale, did those divine revelations, in great plenty descend. Nor are there wanting, who suppose it might be so termed, not as the subject only, but as the object of such visions; because so many visions either went before, or were delivered concerning it, Exod. 15.17. Deut. 3.25. & 12.11. 2 Sam. 7.10. 13. Pfal. 87.2, 3. & 132.13, 14. According to this first expofition; which seems most genuine, Vision is put for Visions: as chap. 1.1. Howbeit, some think, there is in this title, an allusion to the name of Jerusalem, upon the appartation made to Abraham, in that place named thereupon by him, Jehovah-jireh, Gen 22.14. for Jerusalem, fay they, may well signifie, Salem (so it was anciently termed, Gen. 14.18. Pf. 76.2.) where God appeared; which words both joyned together, make up Jerusalem. Josh. 10.1. 2. Chr. 11.4.

what ayleth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the house tops?] The former part of this Chapter containeth a Prophecy, concerning the distress and distraction, that should befal the Jewish State; and more specially, the Inhabitants of the city of Jerusalem; with whom the Prophet here parleth, demanding of them (for to them he directeth his speech) what the reason might be of so sudden a change with them; that whereas, but a while before they were set wholly upon revelling and jollity, ver. 13, they should now be generally possessed with such fears, and so full of distractions and disturbance. Now some suppose this to be a Prophecy of the surprizal and facking of the city, under Zedekiah, by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. 39.8. 52. Others, of the distress of it, under Ezekiah, by Sennacherib, chap. 36.& 37. and this latter is most likely; because the whole tenour of the Chapter doth most fitly agree thereunto.

what ayleth thee?] Heb. what to thee? that is: what is the matter? what hath betided, or is befallen thee? So Judg. 18. 23. Pfalm 114. 5.

gone up to the house tops] To burn incense to the host of heaven, fay some of the Jewish Doctors: which indeed, sometime, they used to do. See Jer. 19.13. But this is not here intended. To lament, and bewail themselves, fay Others: as chap. 15.3. that, more likely then the former. Or to look abroad, to see what the enemy doth, as those are wont to do, that are begirt with hostile forces: or, to look about, to see whether they can defcry any ayds coming to their relief, Pfal. 121.1. Jer. 3.23. or, to safe-guard themselves there: for unto the higher places, as more defensible, people in such cases are wont to retire, Judg. 9. 51. or, to call thence, for aid aid or advice, to neighbours, or, others neer to them; or, to crave relief and help, at Gods hand, Act. 20.9. For some one, or more, or the most of these ends and purposes, it may be, that this running up to the tops of their flat-roofed-houses at this time, was; importing, howsoever, much fear, and distraction, throughout the whole city.

V.2. Thou that art full of stirs, a tumultuous city, a joyous city] Or, That thou art full of stirs, thou tumultuous city, thou joyous city: What is the matter, that thy note, and tune, is so altered: that thou art now so full of out-cryes, and clamours, that waft so full of mirth and jollity before. See ver. 13.

full of stirs] Or, clamours, or noises. The word is used, sometime for joyful acclamations, Zach. 4.7. sometime, for doleful exclamations: and so it is by some deemed here to fignifie. It may well be taken either way; either, that they had been before full of the one, or that they were now full of the other.

a tumultuous city] Or, thou tumultuous, or, fireprevous, city: For some refer this branch to the former, fuppoing it to denote, in part, her present condition, because the word, sometime implyes a mournful noise, Pfal. 55.2. chap. 11. Other, carry it on to the branch next ensuing, as describing her former condition and eftate; the word is used of such noise, as revellers amidft their mirth make, Prov. 20. 1. Zach. 9. 15. the word seems here to imply, an hideous confused noyse, whether of the one, or of the other. See ch. 17. 12. and. 51. 15.

a joyous city] Or, thou revelling city. See Chap. 5. 11, 14. So chap. 32.13.

thy slain men are not slain with the sword, nor dead in battel] Those that conceive the siege, and facking of Jerusalem, by the Chaldeans, to be here intended, understand this paflage, the former part of it, of those that died with Plague and famine, in the time of the siege, Jer. 14.18. & 38.2. the latter, of those that were slain at Riblah, after the surprizal of the city, Jer. 39.6. Others, these apply it to the Assyrian (whom, suppose the meaning to be, that they were so dismaied and distreatned, that they had no spirit or life in them, then as if they were slain men, ere the sword touched them; ftark dead with fear, ere they came to any fight, Josh. 2.11. & 5.1. 1 Sam. 28.20. Dan. 10.17.

thy slain] Or, that thy slain ones; (for men is not in the text) as carrying the text on in a continued tenor, from the first verse, unto the end of the third. Thy slain; either slain indeed; or, as slain with fear, Pf. 88.4, 5. ch. 59.7. Lam. 2.12.

with the sword] Heb. the slain ones of the sword; as Num. 19.16. Lam. 4.9. For the former word is put substantively, and governs the latter: and the like is in the next clause.

dead in battel] Heb. the dead ones of war, or, battels: as 1 Sam. 18.8. dead of battel, for, dead in battel: as woods in Arabia, for, woods of Arabia, ch. 21.13.

V.3. All thy Rulers are fled together] This perturbation and affrightment, hath seized upon, not the common sort of people alone but thy Captains also, thy Commanders, thy military men, chap. 13.7, 8.

All thy Rulers are fled] Or, That all thy captains do flee; as continuing still the question, at first propounded, ver. 1. Rulers; as chap. 1. 10. & 3.6, 7. Or, captains, Leaders; as Josh. 10.24. Judg. 11.6, 11. Prov. 6.7.

are fled] Or, flee; as Chap. 21.15. Or, wander; as Job 15.23. Prov. 27.8. Either they wander, and run to and fro, as men in a maze, or at their wits end, chap. 8.21, 22. Seeking one while to the Assyrian, to make their peace with him, chap. 33. 7, 8. another while to the Egyptian, to crave aid against him, chap. 30. 2, 4. (so Jer. 2.18, 36.) or, that they flee to Jerusalem, out of all parts, not daring to stand it out against the Assyrian, bearing all down before him, ch. 39.1. (so Jer. 8. 14. & 10.17.) or, (as those that refer it to the Babylonian invasion) they flee out of the city, to shift for themselves, Jer. 6.1. & 39.4.

they are bound by the archers] Or, that they are bound: (carrying the sentence still on) Heb. of, or, from the bow. Which those that apply the Prophecy to the times of Zedekiah, expound, from, that is, of, or, by: as Pfal. 78, 64. the bow, that is, the bow-men, the archers: as chap. 21. 17. and understand it of those that were taken, and bound by the Chaldeans, after the surprizal of the city, Jer. 39.5, 6, 7. But those that suppose it to concern Ezekiahs dayes, expound it, Some, from the bow, that is, for fear of the bowmen, referring it to the former verb, they flee from the bow; and so the words indeed lye in the text. Other of them, referring it to the latter verb, read it, from the bow they are bound: which they expound, by an Hebraisin not unusual, they are bound from the bow: that is, bound from making use of it: as, from speaking, that one cannot speak, 1 Sam. 25.17. from seeing, Pfal. 69.23. that they cannot see, Rom. 11.10. from a King, from being a King, 1 Sam. 15. 22. from ministring as a Priest, Hof. 9.12. that thou shalt no more do it. Thus understood, the sense is, that their hands are so restrained, and tyed up with extremity of fear, that they are not able to manage, and make use of their bows.

all that are found in thee, are bound together] Or, that (as before) all that are found in thee, that is, are in thee, as Est. 1.5. Chap. 39.2. are bound together; either in fetters, Jer. 52.11. or with fear, Pf. 76.5. Though some expound it, of a conspiracy of the Princes of Judah among themselves, not to fight, but to flee, and make their peace with the enemy, ch. 8.12.

which have fled from far] Or, that they fled from far; that is, that they flee hither to Jerusalem, from the farthest part of the country; or, that they flee away, to fast, from an enemy afar off, before he come neer to them: or, simply, that they flye far away; (for so is this word used, ch. 23.7. that they withdraw themselves, and get as fast, and as far as they can, out of the way: as Pf. 55.7, 8. and so it is not unlikely, that divers of them did.

V. 4. Therefore said I, Look away from me; I will weep bitterly: labour not to comfort me, because of the spoiling of the daughter of my people] The Prophets speech of himself, setting himself upon a solemn and setled course of mourning, in regard of the calamities that he foresaw would shortly befall his people: So ch. 15.9. & 24.16. The wonted manner of Gods ministers to mourn, as for the sins, so for the sufferings also of Gods people, Jer. 4.19. & 9.1. & 13.17. Luk. 19.41.

look away from me] So Cant. 6.5 but in another sense, turn thine eyes away from me: here, as if he should say, speaking to his friends about him, endeavouring to take him off from his grief; Look another way, betake your selves to some other employment, and let me alone, leave me to my mourning, whereunto I have with a firm resolution abandoned my self. Whence, also, some here render the word, cease from me: as also, Job 7.19. & 14.9. Pfal. 39. 13. which places are parallel to this.

I will weep bitterly] Or, that I may weep bitterly: a defect of the final particle: as chap. 5.11. & 10.2. Heb. I will, or, that I may, embitter my self in, or with, weeping: a bitter weeping; for, a forc, and grievous lamentation, Jer. 6.29. & 31.15. Ezek. 21.6. & 27. 30, 31. Zach. 12.10. Matth. 26.75. So Exod. 1.14. they made their lives bitter to them: and, God hath dealt very bitterly with me, Ruth. 1.20.

labour not to comfort me] Heb. urge not, or, presse not to comfort me: so the word is used, Gen. 19.15. Exod. 4.13. Ier. 17.16. presse not comfort upon me. So Iacob, Gen. 37.35. he refused to be comforted: and Asaph, Pfal. 77.2. my soul refused to be comforted; and Rachel, Ier. 31.15. Thus passion prevails sometime overmuch, even with the Saints.

because of the spoiling of the Daughter of my people] Because of the spoyl made by the enemies forces, among my country-men, as dear to me, as to tender parents, any daughter, ch. 1.8. Ier. 9.1. Rom. 9.3.

V. 5. For it is a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity, by the Lord God of hosts, in the Valley of Vision, breaking down the walls, and of crying to the mountains] These words relate to, and further dilate, what he had touched upon, and given some hint of, in the close of the former verse. That therefore his so great professed grief might not seem groundlesse, he doth in this verse very pathetically, and rhetorically, lay forth the grievous distresses and distractions, that his people should be in, when these dismal evils should befall them.

a day] That is, a time: as Ier. 30.7. Joel 2.2.

of trouble] So it is rendred, Ezek. 7.7. Prov. 15.16. or, tumult: as Amos 3.9. Zach. 14.13. or, vexation: as 2 Chron. 15.5. Ezra 9.7. or, disconfiture: as 1 Sam. 14.20. or, destruction: as Deut. 7.23. 1 Sam. 5.9. the verb it comes from, used in that place of Moses, fignifies to break, or, destroy: and so ch. 28.28. See ch. 37.3.

of treading down] As ch. 18.2. See ch. 10.6. where Sennacherib hath a commission signed from God, thus to deal with his people: and ch. 14.25. Where with breaking (that is disconfiture) and treading down as a further degree of harth, and difgraceful usage, Sennacherib himself is threatned. See also, ch. 63.6.

of perplexity] As Est. 3.15. Mic. 7.4. it is a metaphor from man, or beast, entangled in a thicket. So Pharaoh, of the Egyptians: they are entangled in the wilderness, Exod. 14.3. there is in the original, an elegant paronthesis, or similitude of found, between this word, and the former; which our English cannot expresse.

by the Lord God of hosts] Who hath given commission for it, ch. 10. 6. and whole instruments and officers they are, who are hereafter mentioned, ver. 6. chap. 20. 5. 15. that which maketh the fevill to be unavoidable, and unconquerable. See chap. 13.6. So Zach. 14.13.

by the Lord] Heb. to the Lords: to him, for, by him: or from him: as Ruth 3.10. 1 Sam. 23.21. Pf. 37.8. & 115.15. Ier. 15.8.

breaking down the walls] Heb. walls: but taken collectively: as 1 Chr. 14.1. where wall-wrights, is put for Masons. Hence a city, or walled-Town, may seem to be termed Kir. See chap. 16. 7, 11. 1 Sam. 6.18. & 23.7. Or, walls, the word here used, not to build up, but to pull down a wall; (as, to branch, for, to lop; or cut down branches, ch. 10.28. See also, ch. 66.3.) and consequently, to destroy, Numb. 24.17. It is that which God here threatneth to wit, that he would break down the wall of his vineyard; & suffer it to be trodden down, ch. 5.5.

and of crying to the mountains] Nor, a noise from the mountains, Ezek. 7.7. either an hollow found only, such as mountaines usually yield; or, a noyse of mirth and jollity, such as in vintage time the vintage men are wont there to make: but a crying to the mountains such loud shreiks, and out-cryes, as shall reach the neighbour mountains, and cause them to ring again with them, chap. 15.4, 5, 8. Ier. 48, 34.

or, a crying of persons making toward the mountaines, for shelter and safety; and crying out unto their friends, and others, after the usual manner of people, in such cases, as they go along; to the mountains, to the mountains: one usual place of retreat and refuge, for man and beast, being here put for all other of like kind, Gen. 19. 17,19. Judg.6.2.1 Sam.13.6.Psal.11.1. and 104.18. Jer.13.16. & 16. 16. Matth. 24. 16. Though there want not, that expound it of the noise of houses, and buildings ruinated, and either beaten, or burnt down; or, of the clamour and shouts of the enemy, falling in, upon, and sacking the city, Ps.137.7. See ch. 16. 9. But the former seems more probable.

V.6. And Elam bare the quiver, with chariots of men, and horsemen; and Kir uncovered the shield] In these words, the Prophet further sheweth what people, among others, were to be employed in this expedition against Judah.

Elam] The Elamites, or Persians: at that time subject unto the Assyrian Monarch; and serving under him in this expedition. Of them, see on chap.11.11.

bare the quiver] Served as bowmen: That people being of special note for archery, in those daies; as appears by Jer. 49. 35. like as the Parthians, their neighbours, have been also, in all ages: and of the Elamites, Strabo, lib.16. testifieth as much.

with chariots of men] Heb. with the chariot of a man: as chap.21. 9. save that the word is Ish there; Adam here. Of which words, see on chap. 2. 9. chariot of man; for, a company of chariots, (as ver. 7.) with military men; Comanders for the most part, in them, Judg.4. 15. 1 King.22.31,34. 2 Chr.35.24. so termed, to distinguish them from such as were employed for carriage of provisions, or other necessaries: and so also, ch.21.7,9.

and horsemen] A defect of the copulative: as chap. 21. 7. See more there.

Kir] not that of Moab; whereof before, chap.15.1. but another city of that name situate in Media, and under the dominion then of the Assyrian, 2 King. 16. 9. Amos 1. 5. The Medes and Persians are here joyned together, being neighbouring nations; as Chap.21. 2. For those that would have this Kir, to be Cyrene, (whereof, yet, some of note seem very confident) consider not well, how far Lybia, wherein Cyrene is situate, and these regions lye asunder.

uncovered the shield] Heb. made naked: or, bare: as ch.3.17. & 32.11. that is, they uncased it, they took off the case, wherewith, out of times of use, and service, arms are wont to be covered, to preserve them from dust and rust; and fitted them for service, chap.21. 5. or, because the course of the context seems to import, not a preparation for war, but matter of present action, (see ver.7.) the words may be rendred, Kir discovered the shield; that is, appeared in the field, with their shields in sight, to the terrour of the other party, before those places which they came to assault. This sorts well with the former branch; Elam bare the quiver, and Kir bare up the shield. For as men may be said to conceal their arms, when they come with sword, or dagger, under coat, or cassock, or with their pistols in their pockets, or when they carry shield or buckler, hanging behind them, at their backs: so they may well be said to reveal or discover them, when they bear them in open view, or advance, and lift them up to make use of them in battle: and so do some of the Hebrew Commenters expound the word here. And, of some such uncovering, and discovering of arms in fight, see Hab. 3. 9. as also of making the arm bare; by stripping of it up to the elbow, for the fitting of it to fight, or smite with. See chap.52.10. Howsoever; they are wide, who taking the word Kir, here, not for the name of a city, or the men of that country, wherein it stood; but for a wall, render the words, either after the old Latine, the shield made bare the wall; that is, the shield-men pillaged the walls of their houses, of all their rich hangings and ornaments: or, after some of the Rabbines, they made the wall bare of the shields: taking them from the walls, where they were hung up before: and those other of this latter rank, no less, that following the Chaldee; and because the verb here used, in their Talmudick language, doth frequently signifie, to adhere, and be annexed unto; though they produce no clear text of Scripture for it, render the words, the shield stuck to the wall; or, they fastned their shields to the wall; to wit, that under the covert thereof, they might with more safety either assault the Defendants, or undermine the walls.

the shield] If it be demanded, why Elam hath the quiver assigned him; and Kir the shield: it may be supposed, because the Elamites were the better, generally, at bow and arrows, and those of Kir, at sword and target. But we are not so to understand it, as if the Elamites were archers onely; and those of Kir, none but swordmen: though it is not unlikely, that the use of the one sort of weapons might be more rife in the one country, then in the other: but that yet there was use of the quiver also with them of Kir, and of the sword with them of Elam. It is an elegancy of phrase, whereby our Prophet is wont, in way of distribution, to assign several attributes, to several subjects; although both common, to them both. See on ch. 5.13.& 18.6.& 20.4.& 21.14. so likewise, ver.7.

V. 7. And it shall come to passe, that thy choicest valleys shall be full of chariots: and the horsemen shall set themselves in array, at the gate] The state and condition, is here described, of the land of Judah, invaded by the people before mentioned, ver.6. and what should be done by the chariots and horsemen there spoken of; to wit, that their rich vales should be spoiled by them, and their cities besieged, and assaulted.

it shall come to pass, that] Heb. it shall be that: as ch.16.12.

thy choicest valleys] Heb. the choice of thy valleys: as, the choice of our sepulchres, Gen.23.6. the choice of his firres, ch.37.24. and, the choice of thy Cedars, Jer.22.7. their valleys which were of special note and regard, as well for pleasure, as profit, ch.28.1,4.

chariots] Heb. chariot, or, company of chariots: as ver.6.

horsemen] Of which before, ver.6.

shall set themselves in array] Heb. shall setting, set: or, disposing, dispose themselves, to wit, in warlike manner, to assault and surprize: as Psal.3.6.

at the gate] Heb. to the gate-ward: as, to the wildernesse-ward, ch. 16,1. So also, ch.28.6. either toward the city; (gate, for, city: See ch.3. 26.) or, toward the gate of the city, (both collectively taken) to force entrance thereby, into the city, Judg.9.44,52. Yet, the meaning is not, that the chariots staid in the valleys, and the horsemen onely approached the cities; but chariots, and horsemen both, spoyled the one; and assaulted the other. See on ver.6. And although true it be, as one of the Jewish Doctors well observes, that the chariots were more useful in the vale, then on the hills: yet it is apparent, that they made use of them, in, and on either, Josh.17 18.

V. 8. And he discovered the covering of Judah] In this verse, and those that follow, is related the courses that were taken by those of Jerusalem, especially, in those calamitous times; the meer worldly sedulity of some, ver.8-11. and the deep security, and brutish sensuality of other some, ver.12,13. joyned with a neglect of God, the one; with a contempt of him, the other.

he discovered the covering of Judah] Who did it, is not expressed. God did it, say some: the enemy say others: the verb seems to be put indefinitely: and it may well be rendred, the covering of Judah was discovered, See vers. 19. By covering, some understand the city of Jerusalem it self: to wich the people had repaired for shelter, ver. 3. but was broken up by the Chaldeans, Jer. 39. 2. Others, the Temple, or Sanctuary, (and the vain confidence they put therein, Jer. 44.) being surprized, and rifled together with the city, Jer.52.13, 17-20. Lam. 1.10. Others, Gods protection, formerly spread over them, Chapter 4. 5, 6. but now withdrawn from them, Exod.32.25. Num.14.9. 2 Chron.28.19. Mich.1.11. Others, their strong holds, and fenced Cities, which were unto them as the covert is, in the forrest, unto the beasts, that there abide, Ps. 29.9. but were now laid open, being seized upon, and dismantled also, it may be, some of them, by the enemy, chap. 36.1. and this I take to be the genuine sense of the place: it being, (as the sequel concerning Shebna, shews, vers.25.) intended for the times of the Assyrian Invasion: wherein, though a main part of the country was over-run by their forces, yet neither was the City of Jerusalem surprized by them: nor Gods protection withdrawn from it, Chap. 37. 33,35. Howbeit, there want not, that by the covering, here, understand their armories, and storehouses, wherein their arms and ammunition were bestowed, and laid up out of sight: which were unlocked, and set open, and the armour, and weapons, brought forth, to be in a readiness, for warlike use: which might sort well with that which followeth, save that the course of the context, duly weighed seems to imply a passage unto the relation hereof, as a divers act from this, and occasioned by it. I should rather prefer, before this, what a Jewish Doctour suggests: to wit, that by covert, should be meant their power, in general, wherein soever it consisted: discovered now, to be but feeble, and unable to stand before so potent an enemy, as was broken in upon them, See chap.37.3.

and thou didst look in that day to the armour of the house of the forrest] When ye perceived that the enemy was broken into your country, and had taken many of your walled cities: Ye supposed it was high time, for you of Jerusalem, to look about you, and bestir you: by making the best preparation that might be, for the defence of your city, 1 Chr.32.1,2.

thou didst look] Ye, (as vers. 9.) the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, 2 Chr. 32.3. did look after those outward means of provision and defence; as your sole, or principal, at least, means of safeguard, See ch.17.7,8. and ver.11.

in that day] At that time, as ch.17.9. when the Country was full of forraign forces, ver.7.

of the house of the forrest] That this was the name of an armory situate within Jerusalem, is generally agreed on. But, whether it were that which Solomon called, the house of the forrest of Lebanon, 1 King. 7. 2. is questioned. For some of note there are, who deem, that house which Solomon built, was so called, because it stood in mount Lebanon; built by him for a summer-house, or house of pleasure, to retire unto when he hunted, or desired to take the air; and that this spoken of here, bears the name of that, because it resembled it, and succeeded it in some sort, and for some use, as for an armory, among others. That situate on Lebanon, being long since lost, and at this time held, if in being, by strangers. But I see no reason, why this may not be the very same with that which Solomon built, not in Lebanon, but in Jerusalem: for, to omit, that by the relation of the structure of it, the porch, wherein his Throne stood, seems to have been adjoyning to it; and his dwelling-house, not far from either, 1 King.7. 2,6,7,8. Certain it is, that the shields and targets of beaten gold, made for shew, not for service, for his guard and attendance to bear about him, in State, were in this house of the Forrest of Lebanon; or, some part of it, laid up, where they might be at hand to make use of, upon occasion, See 1 King.10. 16,17. and there is no reason to imagine, that his guard should run, or ride for them, to mount Lebanon, so oft as the king should please to go abroad in State. Besides, that in his sons daies, after the defection of the ten tribes, the king of Egypt found them, and seized on them, not at mount Lebanon, but in Jerusalem, 2 Chron.12.9,10. Nor is it improbable, but that this may be the same that is called the tower of David, said to be built for an armory; and to be stored with thousands of shields and targets, for warriors, Cant.4.4. So called, either because built in that place by David, at first, or because belonging to the house of David. And if it shall be further demanded, why the house should be so called, the house of the forrest of Lebanon, if it were not there situate? I answer, it is not certain why; but it might well be, in regard of some resemblance it had of mount Lebanon, in wilde walks about it; or, the loftiness of it, or some other circumstance, now unknown: and this is the more probable, because the city of Jerusalem it self, or the royal palace, at least, in it, is sometimes termed, for like reasons, by the name of Lebanon, Jer.22.23. Zac.11.1.

V.9. Ye have seen also the breaches of the city of David, that they are many] Ye viewed and repaired the decaied places, in the upper city; especially, the fort Zion, which had been neglected in time of peace, and not regarded, when no invasion feared, or expected, See 2 Chron.32.5.

Ye have seen also] Heb. And, but may well be rendred also, as Chap.12.4. Ye have seen, or, did view, that it may run in the same tenor with the former branch, ver.8. thou didst look; but that looking, and this seeing, seem somewhat to differ; that looking to their arms, as confiding in them; this seeing, or viewing the breaches, or decaies in their fortifications, to repair and make them up: to see, for, to view, or consider, as Exod.32.9. Job 34.21. Rom. 11.22. Some read this whole verse, as in a continued tenor, thus. And considering, that the breaches of the city of David were many, ye gathered together the waters of the lower Poole; as if the former branch implyed no special act of provision, but related onely the ground, or cause of the act, mentioned in the latter. But I take it rather, to be a Zeugmatical term, importing a two-fold act, ye viewed the breaches, to repair them; as Moses viewed his brethrens burdens: to relieve them, Exod.2.11. the plain Syntax of the text, carrieth it this way, and the story it self strengthens it, 2 Chr.3.25. Of the former speech, see Chap.14.12. But they divert this branch of the Prophets words, far away from the main stream of the text, as well as the truth of the story, that render them, on this manner, ye shall see the breaches, of the city of David, to wit, which the enemy shall make in your sight.

the city of David] The fort of Zion, which David dwelt in, after he had taken it from the Jebusites, 2 Sam.5.7,9.

that they were many] Or, for, (as Psal.12.1.) or, because, (as Ps. 14. 6.) they were many, and the more need therefore of diligent view, and due repair.

and ye gathered together the waters of the lower Pool] For the better, both strengthening the city, and supplying it with water, if it came to a siege: as also to withdraw, and derive it from the enemy to themselves, See 2 Chr.32.4,5. Some of the Jewish Commenters, adde, to make brick & morter therewith, for the repair of the walls.

the lower pool] Two pools of note there were near to Jerusalem, Nehem.3,15,16. the upper-pool, 2 King.18.17. Chap. 7. 2. & 36.2. and the lower, of which, 2 Chr.32.30. See on Chap.7.3. & ver.11.

V. 10. And ye have numbred, the houses of Jerusalem; and the houses have ye broken down, to fortifie the wall] Another course taken by them, to make the city the more defensible.

Ye have numbred the houses] Or, ye numbred, as ye gathered, verse 9. or, ye surveyed, for so the word also signifies, 1 Sam.14.17. Job 14.16. Psal.119.26. (so it should there be rendred) Chap.33.18. It is questioned, to what end this numbring of the houses should be. Some say, to take a muster of the men, fit for service, in every family; and to assign each one his employment. Others, to see what provision of victuals they were furnished with; and to know what quantity, both of water, and of bread, would be requisite against a siege. Others, to see which might well be spared, to afford timber and stone, for the repair of the wall. Others, to consider, what houses standing might hurt, or hinder; or be advantageous to the enemy; and which of them stood fit to be imployed, and fortified, for defence. And again, which might be set apart, for the receit of those, whose houses were to be demolished, either without, or, within the city. And these, or some of these, might well be the occasion of this survey.

the houses have ye broken down to fortifie the wall] Or, Ye brake down (as ye made a ditch, ver.11.) the houses, (such of them as ye thought good, or saw fitting) to fortifie the wall; either by making use of the stone, and timber of them, to that purpose; or, because, joyning upon the walls, as Rahabs did, Josh. 2. 15. they could not well come to search, or make up the defects that were in the wall, without removal of them. Though there want not, that understand it, of such houses, as stood without the wall, in the suburbs, which are wont to be, on such occasions, demolished, that the enemy may not find harbour and shelter in them, with more safety, and security, to undermine, or assault. See Jer.33.4.

V. 11. Ye made a ditch, also, between the two walls, for the water of the old pool] For the better, and further, both security, and supply of the city: and that the enemy for want of water, might be the less able to maintain any long siege, 2 Chro.32.3.4.

a ditch] Heb. a receptacle, for confluence of waters, Gen.1. 9,10.

between the two walls] Of which, See 2 Chro.32.5. Jer.39.4.

the old pool] This seems to have been the upper pool, Chap.7.3.& 36.2. from whence water was afterwards drawn to the lower, 2 Chro.32.30. which was made long after, Neh.3.16.

but ye have not looked unto the maker thereof; neither had respect to him, that fashioned it long agoe] Hitherto were the outward provisions they made, for the repelling of hostile assaults, and the safeguarding of themselves, and their city against them: which all so exactly, and precisely, in all circumstances, agreeing with the historical relation, concerning the courses taken by King Ezekiah, his Princes, and the people assisting them, upon the expectation of Senacheribs coming with his forces, to besiege Jerusalem do clearly evince this Prophecy to belong unto, and to concern his times. Nor were these preparations and provisions, of themselves, evil, or unwarrantable: Yea, it would have been a sin in them, and a tempting of God, to have neglected them. But here comes in their failing, in that, as Asa, in his sickness, sought unto Physitians, and sought not unto God, 2 Chron. 16. 12. so that they looked after these outward means, with a neglect of God; as if these means were sufficient to secure them and their city, without him; which yet by experience, afterward, they found, and acknowledged to be otherwise, Chap.37.3. See Prov.18.10,11. Howbeit, Some of the Jewish Interpreters, conceiving this Prophecy to have reference, not unto the Assyrian, but to the Chaldean invasion, propound an objection, in the person of those that should then live; as if they might say to the Prophet; Why do ye tax us for the taking of such courses as these, for the safeguard of our selves, and of our city? did not Ezekiah do the like? And this they suppose the Prophet doth, in way of anticipation, meet with in these words; as if he had said, It is true indeed, that Ezekiah did the same, that ye do; as by the story of his times appears, 2 Chron.32.3-5. But it it is added withall, that he trusted in God, 2 King.18.5. which ye, in Jehojakims, and Zedekiahs dayes, do not. But it is evident enough, as hath been said, what times the Prophecy belongs unto: and though Ezekiah trusted in God, yet might he have many hollow-hearted Princes and Officers, whereof Shebna was one, of whom, hereafter, in this Chapter; nor might the peoples hearts, for the main multitude of them, be so upright with God: beside, that Ezekiahs own faith somewhat faltred, when in such submiss manner, he sent to Sennacherib, and pillaged Gods house, to pacifie him, 2 King.18. 14-16.

looked unto] Sought to, and relyed upon, Psalm 34.5. Chap.17. 7,8.

the maker thereof] As Chap.45.18. or, the doer thereof; as Mal. 3.17. & 4.3. Heb. makers, or, doers. Which, because the word is in a plural form, the Jewish Writers, some of them, understand it of David and Ezekiah; the one that took the fort of Zion, and built about it, 2 Sam. 5. 8, 9. the other, that made those conveyances for water, 2 King.20.20. 2 Chron. 32. 30. these they looked not after, to tread in their steps. But the plural form hindereth not, but that the words may be, and indeed must be, understood of God. For the same word (whether to intimate a plurality of persons in the deity, or in way of excellency and eminency, I stand not now to dispute) is in the same form frequently used of God, Job 35.1. Psal. 149.2. Chap. 54. 5. and though this be in a plural form, yet that in the next branch, spoken, questionless, of the same party, is in a singular. The onely doubt is, what the pronoun, rendred, thereof, or, of it, hath reference unto. Some refer it to God, who in his secret counsel had disposed of these occurrents, and accordingly by the enemy, whoever he were, inflicted on them this judgement, Chap.10.5,6. 2 King.24.2. Others, to the pools, and water-works, before mentioned; which God, by the careful provision of those Kings, had furnished them with; the rather ascribed unto him, because fed much with rain water, which is in Scripture, made his peculiar gift, Lev.26.4. & 28.12. Chap.30.23. Jer.5.24.& 14.22. Joel 2.23. Zech.10.1. Mat.5.45. Others, lastly, which seems most probable, the City of Jerusalem, a type of his Church, which he had setled, and made the seat of that Kingdom, and the special place of his more solemn service and worship, Psal.76.2.& 87.2.& 122.3-5. & 132.13,14. See Chap.37.26.

that fashion'd it] Heb. the Potter of it: or, the framer of it: he that fashioned, or framed it, as the potter doth clay, or the like stuff, to make an earthen vessel of it, Chap 64.8. Jer.18.6. and God is said, here, either thus, to have framed, and fashioned, that is, devised, and produced the evil, that was befallen, or was to befall them; as the like phrase is used, Jer.18.11. or, as to have made, so to have framed the city; to be the maker, and framer, or fashioner of the city; as elswhere, the maker, & fashioner, or framer of that long age] Heb. from afar. The word is used sometime of place, v er. 3, chap. 5. 26. sometime, of time, chap. 25. 1. Jer. 31. 3. long since, as having reference to the first constituting, and setting of that city. See chap. 37. 26. The Jewish Doctors, some of them, refer it to Gods purpose, at the time of Creation, when he had Ierusalem, and his Temple there, in his head. Yea, their Talmudists run higher, and tell us here of seven things that God, framed before he created the world, the garden of Eden, the Law, the just ones, Israel, the Throne of glory, Ierusalem, and Messias, the Son of Dauid. And this the Prophet, if ye please to afford credit to their fancies, had respect unto, in this place.

V. 12. And in that day did the Lord God of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldnesse, and to girding with sackcloth] In the foregoing passages, was described the sedulity of one party, in making of preparations to withstand the enemy, when they perceived that he was bent to come and besiege them, and could not, by such rich Presents, as their King had sent him, be diverted from that his purpose, 2 King. 18. 15-17. 2 Chr. 32. 2-5. together with their neglect of God, whom in the first place, they should have fought unto; as if with these provisions, they might do well enough without him. Now followeth the security, and sensuality of another party among them, or it may be, also, the same; abandoning themselves unto all manner of mirth and jollity, riot, revelling and excess, as deeming themselves now sufficiently secured, by the courses they had taken, against any enemy whatsoever; and that in an open, and professed contempt of God, his messages and menaces, who by his Prophets foretelling what evils hung over their heads, called upon them for humiliation, and repentance of their sins, and reformation of their lives, for the prevention, and aversion of the same. See ch. 5. 11, 12.

in that day] At that time, either when this, or some other the like Prophecy, was delivered, giving warning of such calamities, as would shortly, and suddenly befall them. For to some such Prophetical Sermon, or Sermons, do their words in the next verse, relate: or, when they had dispatched those their forementioned designs, for the safeguard of the city, esteeming themselves now to be sufficiently secured against all occurrents that could be. So ver. 8. For I cannot conjur with those, that make such a distraction between the branches of this Prophecy; as if this calling upon them for humiliation, were not in regard of the evils then eminent; but in regard of those that had befallen them, in King Ahaz his time, 2 Chr. 28. 5-8 17-20. Albeit, it may not amiss be said, that God did call upon them for humiliation and repentance, by those heavy things, that, about these times, befell their brethren of Israel, by Salmaneser, 2 King. 18. 9-12. which they ought to have taken notice of, and to have taken to heart, Jer. 3. 8-10. Amos 6. 6. But in this place, the approach of their own calamities menaced, seems to be the oath mentioned.

call] God is said to call, two waies: sometime by way of operation, and execution; and so it is said, he called for a famine, Ps al. 105. 16. that is, he caused it; sometime, by injunction, and direction; and so here, when by his Ministers, and Messengers, giving warning of evils impendent, he requires means to be used, for the preventing of them, chap. 55. 6, 7. Zeph. 2. 1, 2. though there may be an allusion in the word here cited, to the solemn proclaiming of a fast, which was usual with them, in times of danger, or distresse, 2 Chron. 20. 3. Joel 1. 14. & 2. 15. as implying, that their was just cause for them, so to do. But see an express calling, in those very times, by this Prophet himself, hereunto, ch. 32. 11.

to weeping, and mourning] So Jer. 6. 26. and 9. 17-20. Joel 2. 12, 13.

to baldnesse, and to girding with sackcloth] Signs of much grief and sorrow, ch. 3. 24. & 15. 2, 3.

to baldnesse] Either, by shaving the head, as Job 1. 20. or, by tearing of the hair: as Ezr. 9. 3. But it may be demanded, how God is said here to call for baldnesse; when as, elsewhere, he forms to forbid it, Levit. 19. 27, 28. & 21. 5. Deut 14. 1. To this there are two answers given: 1 That it is forbidden to be done upon private deceases, or departure of friends; not upon occasions of publike lamentation, for calamities of like condition, Mic. 1. 16. 2 That it is not condemned, when it is done out of a deliberate disposition, or out of impotency, and impatiency of spirit; not when it proceeds from a zealous and pious indignation against sin, as in Ezra, Ezr. 9. 3. or from a spirit, furcharged with abundance of sincere contrition, and sanctified sorrowfor sin, and Gods wrath thereby incensed; as it ought to have been here.

sackcloth] Heb. sack: as Chapter 20. 2. See on Chapter 15. 3.

V. 13. And behold] Or, But behold. The copulative for the adversative, as Chap. 5. 28. & 11. 14. The direct contrary practice in this people, to that which God, by his judgments denounced, against them, and ready to seize on them, did then call for; suffered in, not undeservedly, with a note of admiration; astron one astonished at their stupendious security and horrible contempt of God, and his dreadful menaces; behold. So ch. 5. 7.

joy, and gladnesse] Instead of weeping, and mourning, that God called for, ver. 12. abundance of mirth, or, nothing but mirth: two words of the same notion, implying an excess, or eminency of it. So ch. 35. 10. & 51. 3, 11. Jer. 7. 34. & 16. 9. slaying oxen, and killing sheep] To feast, and make merry with, Amos 6. 4.

sheep] The word imports both sorts of lesser cattell, as well goats, as sheep, ch. 7. 21.

eating flesh] Which was not so ordinary with them, in those parts, among the meaner sort especially, save at invitations, and feasts, Gen. 18. 7. Deut. 12. 15, 20. 1 Sam. 2. 13. 2 Sam. 6. 19. Luk. 1. 23, 27, 29, 30.

and drinking wine] Reserved for feasts, and special occasions, Neh. 5. 18. Est. 1. 7. & 5. 6. Eccles. 10. 19. Amos 6. 5. otherwise water was their ordinary drink, Gen. 21. 14. & 24. 17. Exod. 17. 1-3. Deut. 2. 6, 28. Joh. 4. 7-15.

eating, and drinking] Feasting, and making merry together: as Job 1. 4, 18. but here, as Matth. 24. 38. they were eating and drinking; the words imply a constant and continued practice, as if they did nothing else; minded nothing else; but addicted and abandoned themselves wholly to such rior and excess, without regard of ought beside. So ch. 5. 11, 12. Amos 6. 4-6. and the phrase is here emphatical; the verbs running all in an Infinitive form: as ch. 21. 5. & 59. 13. which yet some would have all to be conceived, in an imperative, or invitative notion; as those the like, chap. 21. 5. And, indeed, so divers read and render this last branch; saying, Let us eat and drink: and so the ancient Greek hath it, and the Apostle from them, 1 Cor. 15. 32. which if we admit, there must be a supply of the verb redoubled in the Hebrew: Eating, let us eat; and drinking, let us drink; that is, let us eat and drink freely: as where the word repeated, is expelled; Eating, thou mayst eat, that is, thou mayst freely eat, Gen. 2. 16. See chap. 21. 5. & 56. 12. the word saying, is oft wanting: as Psal. 105. 14, 15. Act. 7. 32. and so ver. 14, 15.

for to morrow we shall dye] Or, we must dye: as it is rendred, 2 Sam. 14. 14. Some understand then, as words of men in a desperate passion, making an account, that there is no way but one with them; that within a day, or two, they shall undoubtedly be swept, or snatched away, an enemy coming on them, whom they cannot escape; and that their best and wisest course therefore is, to enjoy themselves, and make use of that which they have, while they may, and have opportunity so to do. But I suppose it rather to be here, the speech of prophane mockers, and scoffers, that believed nothing lesse, then what the Prophet threatned them with, whose words they esteemed to be no other then wind, Jer. 5. 12, 13. 2 Pet. 3. 3, 4. (see ch. 5. 18. 19.) and speak therefore thus in mockery: The Prophets say we must all dye, and be destroyed ere long, so let us take us pleasure therefore, while we have time for it: and it is the common language of loose and debouched persons; our life is short, and it will soon be gone, (not that they have any serious thought of their end, or ought that ensueth it, which either they believe not, or have no list to think on) and lets be merry therefore while we may. So 1 Cor. 15. 32. See Wisedome, 2. 1-9. and see also ch. 28. 15.

V. 14. And it was revealed in mine ears by the Lord of hosts] So some; as if the Prophet should in these words meet with an objection, that some might make, against what he had charged them with: How do ye know that we thus think, or say? why? God himself, saith the Prophet, hath acquainted me with it, hath revealed it unto me. So Jer. 11. 18, 19. or, it was, that is, this heavy doom that is now to be passed upon you, for this your vile impiety, and horrible prophanesse, was revealed to me from God, it was uttered, by him, in my hearing. The particle, by, is not indeed in the text; but it is set in like manner supplyed: as Psal. 44. 2. Others, supposing that supply here needless, read the words as spoken in the person of God, and thus render them, it is revealed in the ears of me the Lord of hosts; that is, this your height of impiety and contempt of God, and his Word, is ascended up into heaven, and entred into his ears, and doth cry to him for vengeance, as Gen. 4. 10. & 18. 20, 21. & 19. 13. 2 Chr. 28. 9. Ezra 9. 6. Jon. 1. 2. But that which seems the genuine sense, and reading of the words, is this, the Lord of hosts, did in my hearing reveal himself, saying it, as the words of the Prophet, relating what God had revealed to him, concerning those lewd wretches, that thought thus to jest out Gods judgements: in mine ears: for, in my hearing: as chap. 5. 18. where see the like form of speech: saying, supplyed: as ver. 13.

it was revealed] Or, he revealed himself: for the passives are often used in a reciprocal sense: so, God was revealed, that is, revealed, himself, to Samuel, 1 Sam. 3. 21. and, the King of Israel was revealed, or uncovered: that is, revealed, uncovered, laid himself open, to one of those twin fellowes, is revealed, or, laid open, that is, discovereth, and layeth himself open, to his shame, 2 Sam. 6. 20.

the Lord of hosts] See ch. 1. 9.

Surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you, till ye dye] A dreadful, and direful doom, pasted by God himself, upon these prophetical scoffers, and bound with an oath to make it irrevocable, that this high and hideous contempt, and contumacy, offered by them to his Majesty, shall by no meanes be expiated; but that they shall without hope hope of mercy, be destroyed for it. See the like, 1 Sam. 3. 14. Deut. 29. 18 2. 1. Matth. 12. 32. Heb. 6. 4-6. & 10. 26-29.

Surely this iniquity shall not be] Heb. if this iniquity be, &c. a concise form of an oath, frequent in Scripture. Of which see on chap. 5. 18.

purged from you] Heb. propitiated to you, or, expiated for you: and there is, as the Rabbines suppose, an allusion in the word to the solemn day of propitiations, or expiations, Lev. 23. 27, 28. and the legal rites used, for expiation of delinquents, Lev. 4. 20, 26, 35. & 16. 30-33. intimating, say they, that no repentance, no prayer, no sacrifice, should serve, or be available to expiate this sin, Num. 15. 28-31. 1 Sam. 3. 14. Heb. 6. 6. & 10. 28. 1 John 5. 16.

till ye dye] Eternally, saith the Chaldee: captivity shall not serve your turn; but you shall dye by the sword of the enemy, saith a Jewish Doctor: but the former might befall them, as well as the latter, Ch. 5. 13, 14. Amos 6. 6, 7. and the latter might be no lesse bitter than the former, Jer. 22. 10. Lam. 4. 9. the meaning is, that Gods vengeance should pursue them, to their dying day, Psal. 140. 11.

saith the Lord, the Lord of hosts] I have said it, yea, have sworn it; (as Amos 6. 8.) who am the Lord, the Lord of hosts. See Chap. 1. 24.

V. 15. Thus saith the Lord God of hosts] Or, said, to wit, at the same time, Chap. 8. 11. ver. 14. For this Prophecy concerning Shebna in particular, the displacing of him, and the substituting of Eliakim in his stead; seemeth to have been both delivered by God to the Prophet, and by the Prophet published at the same time with the former, concerning the state of those times in general.

Go, get thee unto this Treasurer, even unto Shebna, which is over the house, and say] What this Shebna's carriage was, whereby he procured to himself the heavy doom here past upon him of devestment and defignment, to deportation and destruction, is no where expressed; onely, the Jewish Writers tell us, that he was one that complyed, and had correspondency with the King of Assyria, and drew others into the same conspiracy with him, who should have betrayed the city into Sennacheribs hands; drawing hither those pallages, which of him and his complices they compound, Chap. 8. 2, 11. But their relations are of little esteem, where there is nothing for them but their word. Certain it is, that he was a rotten-hearted man, and one that had much abused his power, and place, being, in likelihood, of mean parentage; and it may be, a stranger by descent. See ver. 16.

get thee unto] It may be questioned, whether Gods meaning were, that the Prophet should repair unto Shebna's house, and there directly, by word of mouth, deliver him this message, as Nathan did to David, 2 Sam. 12. 1. or, only to publish it, that Shebna might hear, or hear of it; as the Apostle saith, say to Archippus, that is, Let this be spoken to Archippus, let him take this as spoken in special to him, Col. 4. 17. However, Gods pleasure was, that this sad message should by some means be made known to him, and to others allo, thereby to be warned of better and more upright carriage, in their places of trust and command.

this treasurer] So most, both Jewish, and others, expound it, supposing that he had the oversight and custody of the Kings monies, provisions, and treasuries; because it cometh of a word, that signifies, to be profitable, or, usefull. Job 15. 3. & 22. 2. & 34. 9. & 35. 3. and from whence a term, that is used for slaves, or, provision, Exod. 1. 11. 1 King. 9. 19. 1 Chron. 8. 4. & 16. 4. & 17. 12. & 28. 18. There want not those that suppose some secret intimation of Shebna's corrupt carriage, wrapped up in the title here given him, as if it were said, the money-man, the man that meddleth so much with money; or, that dangerous fellow; because the root it springs from, is deemed to import danger, Eccl. 10. 9 and so the Rabbines commonly use it, as in that common by-word, A knife in a childs hand is hazardous: Which yet runs not so elegantly with us, as with them. But these I suppose but light and slight conjectures. I should rather incline to that which some of the Rabbines suggest; that it was a name, not of the office he bare; (for his office comes after; and it is not usual to have a man in Scripture, described by two offices;) but of the place where he was born, which they affirm to be a town in Egypt, so termed, as some suppose, from one Sochus, sometime King there, Plin. l. 36. c. 8. of whom the city was called Sochen, and from it Shebna born there, a Sochenite: and this some of ours seem not unwilling to admit. Howbeit, because I find little footing in Scripture, or flory of credit for it; as also, for that names of Gentilisin are of another stamp in Hebrew; and it should according to analogy, have been, not Sochen, but Sochenai: as Keni, Judg. 4. 17. and Canaani, Gen. 12. 6. Therefore I waive it; and if in a point so dubious leave may be obtained, I shall make bold to adde my conjecture: the word is no where found in a masculine form, save here onely, but in a feminine form, it is found, 1 King. 12. 4. where it signifieth an adjutrefs, or, a cherisher, (for they can hardly be cleared from absurdity, that would make Abithaz, Davids Shetreasurer, and so there translate the word) in like manner may Shebna be here termed this, or that co-adjutor: but in way of Irony; as imputing what he profelled to be to his Soveraign, and what in regard of his place, he ought to have been; but implying withall: that in deed and truth, he was nothing lesse than what he profelled, or pretended to be. See the like Psal. 55. 13. Chap. 48. 12. Rom. 2. 19, 20. So I should rather take it, than as some other, who (I suppose from the same ground) render it, the adjutor; and expound it, this favourer, and master of those prophane varlets, before spoken of, ver. 13. or, as others, this fomenter, and cherisher of secret conspiracies, and complliances under-hand with the enemy.

which is over the house] Or, high-steward. By house, some of the Rabbines, here, understand Gods house, the Temple; called sometime, simply, the house, 1 King. 5. 17, 18. and hence gather, that Shebna was the High Priest; or, because no such name is found in the catalogue of High Priests, some of them would have him to be one of those that had the charge of the temple-treasure; of which, 2 King. 18. 15. 2 Chron. 32. 28. Ezra 8. 33. but other of them, and so the best approved Writers, by the house here mentioned, understand the house of David, or, the Kings house; to be over which, was one of the highest places in the kingdome. See Gen. 41. 40. 1 King. 4. 6. 2 King. 10. 5. & 15. 5. and this appears to be here meant by the office of Eliakim, his successor, described, verf. 21, 22.

and say] These words are not in the original; but are to be supplyed: as the like oft, elsewhere, 1 Chr. 18. 19. verf. 13. Chap. 1. 24.

V. 16. What hast thou here? and whom hast thou here? that thou hast hewed thee out a sepulcre here, as he that heweth him out a sepulcre on high, and that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock?] The Prophet is enjoyned here to begin his message from God to Shebna, with a quick and tart expostulation, demanding of him what he meaneth, being a stranger born; and a man come up of nothing, to hew him out such a stately monument for his corps to be enterred in, as if he were a man of great birth, and ancient descent, and made full account to enjoy his prefent dignities, so long as he lived, and to lay his bones there, when he dyed, whereas God had determined to dispose far otherwise of him, to throw him down from his dignities, and to send him packing into a strange country, where he should dye, far enough off from the place where he made account to be laid up, ver. 17, 18.

what hast thou here?] Or, as some render it, what hast thou to do here? as Psal. 50. 16. Chap. 3. 15. implying, fay they, that he was unworthy of that high degree of honour, which, at present, he enjoyed, and should therefore be devested of it, and not retain it; till he dyed, as he hoped, and out of that hope, built him this monument: or, as others, rather, who retain the more received reading, implying, that, being an Alien by birth, though in Ahaz his time, he had crept up under him, and so continued his greatnesse under Ezekiah, and was grown now so powerful, that the good King, though discovering his corrupt carriages, yet could not, or durst not wholly cast him off, yet he had no inheritance among Gods people, nor lawful possession of land, but what might be redeemed, or, at the year of Jubilee, was to be released, Levit. 25. 23-28.

and] Or, or, rather: as Chap. 8. 19. & 10. 14.

whom hast thou here?] Whom to help, or uphold thee, faith one of the Jewish Commenters; but, as other of them rather, what brethren, or kindred? being a stranger born; which is also the more probable, because of the three Courtiers sent by Hezekiah, to practise with Rabshakeh, the other two have their pedigree, or parentage mentioned; but of his there is no word, or his place in Court only, ch. 36. 3.

that thou hast hewn thee out a sepulcre here] As if this were the place where thine Ancestors had lien before thee. (for men of note had places of purpose set apart for the interrement of them, and theirs, Gen. 23. 4, 6. & 9. 20. & 46. 29-31. & 50. 13, 25. Josh. 24. 30, 32, 33. 2 Sam. 19. 37. and were not buried in the common places of burial, Jer. 7. 32. & 26. 23.) and thou madest no doubt, but here to dye, and be intombed in the monument that here thou hast made thee. Yet there are of the Jewish Doctors, that by sepulcre here understand, not a burial-place, but a palace; but that conceit hath no place here, and others of their own, therefore, therein justly control them. See further on the last clause.

here] In the city of Jerusalem, the chief place of the kingdom: though I suppose those Jewish Doctors over-reach, who report that Shebna had made his sepulcre among those of the house of David, the Kings of Judah, 1 King. 2. 10. 2 Chron. 24. 16. which honour yet we find, that Jehojada the high-priest obtained, 2 Chr. 24. 16.

as he that heweth him a sepulcre on high] Great men are wont, and that oft-in their life-time, to build them lofty and flately Sepulcres, correspondent to their greatnesh, and such Shebna it seems would imitate; little deeming, or once dreaming, what is hereafter denounced, of his dishonourable fall, and end; the note of similitude is not in the text, but is supposed to be so suppressed, that it ought to be supplied, by those, that thus read the words; and so it is indeed frequently elsewhere, see on Chap. 21. 8. But the words may be read better, here, another way, without any such supply. O he that heweth himself a sepulcre on high; that is, O thou that hewest thy self a sepulcre on high, a change of the person, just like that of Bildad, Job 18. 4. O he, that teareth himself in his anger; for, thou that teareft thy self, see on Chap. 21. 14. their bread.

on high] Aloft in some conspicuous and eminent place, as ch. 57. 7.

and] The copulative is not in the text, nor need be inserted.

that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock] This some suppose to be spoken also by way of similitude, as well as the former. Thou hewest thee out a tomb, as one that were building him some strong and stately palace, to continue to all posterity, being founded on a rock, Pf.49.11. Mat.7.24,25. Others read the words by change of the person, as before, thou that graveſt thee out a dwelling place in a rock: which some would expound of the sepulcre before mentioned. And of the Egyptians indeed it is reported, that they called, and accustomed, their dwelling houses, their inns; their sepulcres, their houses; and their great men therefore built them more like palaces then places of burial: nor was it a thing unusual among the Jews, to hew them sepulcres out in rocks. Mat.27.60. But wee need not suppose the one put for the other, as well his mansion-house, as his monument, might be built on a rock; and the same rock: for their sepulcres were, usually, either within the walls of, or neer adjacent unto their houses. See chap. 14. 18. His affected magnificence, and ambitious humour of perpetuating the memorial of himself, as well by the one as the other, is commonly detected here to be taxed: but his folly, I suppose, is principally aimed at, in making so full reckoning of that, wherein God was resolved directly to crosse him, and to fruſtrate his desiġnes. So Luk.12. 19,20.

in a rock] On high, before for ſtatelineſs, as Jer.22.23. in a rock, for firmneſs, as Mat.16.18.

V. 17. Behold the Lord will carry thee away with a mighty captivity; and will ſurely cover thee] Shebna's preſumptuous folly, in being ſo confident of a firm, both ſeat and ſepulcre was before tartly taxed. Now followeth the doom of deprivation, and deportation, paſt upon him by God, and diſcovering the vanity of theſe his inſolent preſumptions.

Behold] A note requiring more then ordinary conſideration, is preſixed, as to the relation of a ſtrange and unexpected alteration. So Pſ.37.36.&53.7. chap.17.14.

the Lord] Thou intendeſt one thing, but God purpoſeth another: ſo Luk.12.19,20. Thou makeſt account to live always in Jeruſalem, and there to dye: but God intendeth ſhortly and ſuddenly to remove thee from thence, and to ſend thee far away, to end thy daies elſwhere, ver.18.

will carry thee away, with a mighty captivity] Heb. it caſting, or, throwing thee out, as Ch.3.1. with the caſting, or, throwing out of a man; or, is caſting thee out with caſting, O man; or, O thou mighty man; for ſo the word properly ſignifies. See on Chap.2.9. & Jer.3.1. 22. which they expound, either God will caſt thee out in ſuch a violent manner, as a man of might and ſtrength is wont to throw ought away from him; or, hee will cauſe thee to be carried away captive, with ſuch a captivity as men uſe to be captived with, who are carried away farther commonly then women, and are wont to have leſs favour and mercy ſhewed them, then that weaker ſex oft hath; or, becauſe the former noun of caſting, or, throwing, is abſolute, and ſhould not therefore be conjoyned with the word man, from which the point of diſtinction alſo with-holdeth it: the genuine ſenſe ſeems to be this. The Lord is preparing ſuddenly and ſpeedily to throw thee out of thine offices, houſe, and place of abode, in a violent manner, (that the repetition, or reduplication of the ſame notion, in the noun annexed to the verb, commonly imports, as Pſal.53.5.& 76.5. Chap.24.22. & Zach.1.14.) O thou mighty man, (as Job 38.3.& 48.7.) thou that art ſo high and powerfull in thine own conceit and apprehenſion: ſo Pſ.52.1. where the word deduced from this, and of near affinity to it, is uſed: or, O man, ſimply, and ſo the Italian renders it; Behold O man; as men uſe to ſpeak to thoſe whom they ſet light by, as not deigning to give them their name. And ſomewhat like hereunto is that of the Apoſtle; Thinkeſt thou, O man? and, who art thou, O man? Rom. 2. 3. & 9. 20. But that ſoundeth not ſo well, without ſuch a tranſcition as the text hath not; which ſeems to have put it off, as a more emphatical compellation, to the cloſe of the ſentence. The vulgar Latine renders it, God will carry thee away as a cock is carried. Whereupon a learned Interpreter ſaith, he wondreth whence this cock flew into the text. But the anſwer is ready; It was by Jeromes over-much credulity, in giving credit to his Hebrew-maſter, who told him, that Gaber here ſignified not a man, but a cock. And indeed ſo the Talmudiſts are ſaid frequently to uſe it. And ſo ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters in this place expound it; as if God threatned to drive him away like a cock, that is driven from place to place by the puttock: or to carry him away, as a cock, or capon, is by the countryman carried to the market, with his wings and legs tyed together: a fit emblem of a captive, ſaith a Popiſh writer, to ſet ſome fair gloſſe on this their abſurd tranſlation, which yet muſt not be refuſed, ſince the Pope hath ſet his ſtamp upon it; though it be confeſſed, that the author of it was herein gulled by the Jew. But contrary to all this that hath been ſpoken, concerning the ſenſe of the place, ſome late Interpreters, of no ſmall note, underſtand it, as relating not what God would doe with Shebna, but what he had done for him: For they read and render the words thus, God that covereth thee with a covering, as much as may be for a man; or, (becauſe the article is abſent) God covereth thee with a covering (and becauſe the word is in an abſolute form) even with the covering of a man: that is, God, who now arayeth thee with moſt gorgeous apparel: for rich and goodly apparel is an enſign of honour, Gen.41.42. Eſt.8.9-11. Dan. 5.29. Mat.11.8. and Shebna was in likelyhood the ſecond man in the State, as Joſeph next Pharaoh, Gen.41.40. The ground they give for this interpretation, is, becauſe the word here uſed, doth, as they ſuppoſe, though in another form, ſignifie to cover, Neh.3.15. Where it is ſaid, the gate of the fountain he built, and covered it; Whence alſo the dew hath its name in Hebrew, becauſe it covers the ground, Judg.6.40. and though the word in the Hebrew be not ſo uſual, yet it is found in the Syriack of Daniel, where it is ſaid, the beaſts had covert, or, ſhade, under it, Dan.4.11. and both in the Chaldee paraphraſe of the old Teſtament, & the Syriack verſion of the new, the ſame word is uſed for to cover, and to ſhadow, Ex.40. 21. 1 King.6.9. Pſ.10.10. Mat.17.5. Luk.1.35. But it is well obſerved, that the words uſed, in the moſt of, if not all thoſe places, may well come from another root, that ſignifies a ſhadow: nor is any place produced, wherein it is found applyed to apparel. The ſingle word therefore, being ſo commonly uſed, for caſting, or throwing, 1 Sam.18.11.& Pſ.29.33. Job 41.9. Ezek.32.4. Jon.1.4,5,12,16. I ſee not why it ſhould not in the doubled form retain the ſame ſenſe, or, why it ſhould not be ſo taken in this place, when as it ſuits ſo well with the main ſcope of the place; and the ſingle word is there found uſed, where the ſame judgement is denounced, wherewith Shebna is here threatned, ver.18. Jer.16.13.& 22.26,28.

and will ſurely cover thee] Heb. and is covering, covering thee] The repetition, hath ordinarily, an implication, either of certainty, or of eminency, vehemency, and the like; ſo before, and again, ver.18. This alſo, thoſe latter Interpreters expound as the former, of Gods conferring honour and dignities upon Shebna; rendring the words, and doth clothing, cloth thee: that is, doth fairly, or gorgeouſly cloth thee. And they have the more colourable ground for this their expoſition here, becauſe this word indeed is ſometime found uſed of putting on apparel, 2 Sam. 2 8. 14. Pſal.104.2. & 109.19. Chap.59.17. & 61.3,10. But there ſeems no reaſon of weighe appearing, that ſhould neceſſarily force us out of the way of denunciation, which the Prophet all along here, is commonly deemed to inliſt in. Some therefore read it, he will wrap thee up. So one of the Jewiſh Writers alſo; becauſe the word is ſuppoſed, ſometime, ſo to ſignifie, ſee Jer.43.12. and a man may be ſaid, to be wrapped up in his garments, as wares are wrapped up, in thoſe things wherewith they are covered. See on Chap.3.12. but it is taken, as they imagine, from thoſe that intending to caſt a garmene, or ſome other looſe thing away from them, are wont to wrap it up, hard, and round, that ſo they may fling it the further. But that notion ſeems rather to be implyed, in the branch following, ver. 18. Others therefore expound it, he will chaſe thee far away, into captivity, like a bird. So another of the Jewiſh Commenters ſuppoſing the word to have a notion of flight in it, as indeed ſometime it hath, 1 Sam. 15.21.& 25.14. the people flew upon the prey; and our maſter flew upon them, for ſo the words there are; but then it hath reference to another root, as another of them, controlling this expoſition, well obſerves. Others again render it, he will ſurely, or, to the purpoſe, cover thee, with ſhame and confuſion, in ſtead of that honour thou now enjoyeſt, and makeſt full account ſtill to retain; and ſo much indeed the word imports, where thoſe terms are expreſſed, as Pſal.89.45.& 109.29. but ſo it is not here. The received reading therefore, without any addition, doth well: the only doubt is, what covering is here intended, or alluded unto. And here ſome would have it to be, the covering enjoyned the Leper, Lev.13.45: hence gathering that Shebna ſhould be ſmitten with leproſie, as Moſes his Siſter, Numb.12.10. Gehazi,2 King.5.27. and Uzziah, were,2 King.26.19. And ſuch a tradition ſome of the Rabbins tell us here that the Jews have. But of this there is no great probability. Others therefore referre it rather to ſuch a covering, as perſons fallen into diſgrace, ſurcharged with ſhame, or ſorrow, carried into captivity; or condemned unto death, were wont to have their faces covered with, as unworthy to ſee the light. See 2 Sam.15.30. Eſt.7. 8. Job 9.24. Ezek.12.6,12.

V. 18. He will ſurely turn, and toſs thee, like a ball into a large country] Heb. he will wrapping, wrap thee up, with a wrapping. There is a reduplication of the Verb, as in the latter branch of the verſe next before going; and to that an addition of a Noun of the ſame notion, as in the former branch of the ſame verſe; a defect of the particle with here, as there; and Chap.21.7. The words may well be rendred, He will ſurely, or, ſheightly wrap thee up, and toſs thee like a ball. The ſame word oft-times comprehends a two-fold notion, as take, for, take, and bring. Gen.27.9. receive, for receive and give, Pſal.68.18. with Eph.4.8. ſo here, wrap up, like a ball, for, wrap up, and toſs, or throw like a ball, into a ſpacious land. Heb. a land large of hands, or, ſpaces, as Pſal.104. 25. Chap. 33. 21. He will be ſure to ſend thee far away from the place of thy preſent abode. An alluſion to ſomething made up round like a ball, or to a ball it ſelf, that being toſſed, or thrown, with more then ordinary ſtreſs, from a ſtrong hand, into a ſpatious plain, where there is nothing to ſtay it, runs on an end forward, without interruption, or intermiſſion, untill either the force fail that it was thrown with, through the great length of the way, or it arrive at the lands end.

turn, and toſs] The word, though repeated in a two-fold form, is is but one; and it is no where elſe found, but here, and Lev. 16. 4. where it is uſed of the linnen miter, or, turbant, where with the High-Prieſt was to be attired; ſo termed, either becauſe it was wound up, with many wreathes, as the Turkiſh and Perſian turbants are at with many wreathes, as the Turkiſh and Perſian turbants are at this day. Or, becauſe the head of him that wore it, was therewith enwrapped. See chap.3.23. and 62.3. Now becauſe the word hath ſo neer affinity with ſuch a kind of head-tire, as was uſed moſt by ſo neer affinity with ſuch a kind of head-tire, as was uſed moſt by Kings, Prieſts, and Perſons of Prime note, and place, ſome conceive a bitter taunt, to be cloſely couched in it; as if by it the Prophet had ſaid, God will attire thee, or, crown thee (as the old Latine alſo rendeis it) with a witneſs; with another manner of attire, then that thou now weareſt; he will wrap thee up, in a bundle or fardle of miſeries; and environ thee with troubles; inſtead of an head-band of State. As on the contrary, God is ſaid to encompaſſe the godly with favour, loving-kindneſs, and mercies; as with a crown; &c. the like head-band of State, Pſ. 5. 12. & 103.4. for ſo the word alſo there uſed, imports. Again, Some of the Jewiſh Writers, upon the ſame ground ſuppoſe it to be implyed, that all his treaſure, and honour, ſhall be packed up together with him, and ſo he, and they, both thrown out, or ſent away together. But that ſeems not to ſort ſo well with the ſubject matter intended; it is more likely, that he was firſt ſtript of all, and then carried or ſent bare enough into a forraign country.

as a ball] A deſect of the note of ſimilitude as ch.13.8. & 21.8. the word is no where in Scripture found in this ſenſe; though frequent with the Talmudiſts. Yet there are, that ſuppoſe no ſuch deſect; for that the word dur alone, ſignifies a ball, or, a bowl; and that in the Arabick it is frequently ſo uſed. See ch.29.3.

into a large country] What country this was, that Shebna was either carried captive, or exiled, and confined unto, or upon diſcovery of his evil carriages, and depoſition from his dignities, ſhould flee, and retire himſelf, for ſhelter, is not certain. The Jewiſh Writers, ſome of them, ſay, it was Caſſiphia, Ezr.8.17. ſome, Nineveh, in Aſſyria; ſome, Babylon; and this laſt, ſome of ours ſuppoſe not to be improbable: Yet, not imagining, as they, that he could be carried captive, in the Chaldean Invaſion, firſt, or laſt, under Nebuchad-nezzar; (for he muſt needs be dead long before;) but that together with Manaſſes, ſurviving Ezekiah, he might be thither carried by the Aſſyrians under Eſar-haddon, 2 Chr.33.11.

there ſhall thou dye] Not at Jeruſalem, where thou haſt hewen out thy ſepulchre, ver. 16. as thou madeſt account to do, when thou ſo didſt. The Talmudiſts tell us, that this Shebna, with ſome others, made a defection to Sennacherib; by whom, after the ſlaughter made by the Angel, in his camp, they were carried away, in much diſpleaſure into his own country, where, after ſome deſpightful uſage, he put many of them to death: and this may be as true as what other of them ſay, that with Jehojakim, or Jehojachin, (and why not, as well Zedekiah?) he was by Nebuchadnezzar carried to Babel: or, what others, not that he died indeed abroad, but that being ſequeſtred for his leproſie, he was as a dead man; as of Miriam, or Mary, (for the names are the ſame, Luk. 1. 16.) it is ſaid in the like caſe, Num. 12.12. yet after being recovered, he returned to the city, though not to his former office, and dignity again, now conferred upon another.

and there the chariots of thy glory ſhall be the ſhame of thy Lords houſe] Some of the Rabbines on this place, out of their Talmudick ſtories, tell us another ſtory of Shebna, ſomewhat differing from the former; that when Shebna came alone to the Aſſyrians camp, and they asked him, where the reſt of his conſpirators were, he told them, that they were revolted again, and ſo had deſerted him: where upon they laid hold on him in a rage, and having bored though his feet, they drag'd him, faſtned to horſe-tails, over brambles and bryars: and that this is that, which the Prophet foretelleth him here, of the ſtately chariots, that there he expected to have. But this may well go among the reſt of their fondly-forged figments. Other of them more ſerious, expound the words thus, Thy ſtately chariots, that are now thy glory, ſhall be turned into ſhame, and ignominy, becauſe thou art the ſhame of thy Lords houſe; and ſo in him. ſay they, was fulfilled, what our Maſters ſay, He that ſeeks the ſhame of his Maſters houſe, his houſe ſhall be turned into ſham: or, as other of them, whom many of ours alſo concur with, keeping cloſer to the text; and there ſhall thy glorious chariots, all thy ſtate and pomp, that thou now glorieſt in, dye, that is, ceaſe, and come to an end, O thou that art the ſhame of thy Lords houſe.

the chariots of thy glory] Or rather, thy chariots of glory, that is, thy glorious chariots: thy chariots of ſtate, which as a great man, thou rideſt in, up and down, through the city. So thy Throne of glory, for thy glorious throne, Jer.14.21 and, the eyes of glory, for, his glorious eyes, ch.3.8. his chariots, both his power and pomp: for chariots denote either, Gen.41.43. 2 King.9.25,& 10.15. Joſh.17.18. Judg. 4.3 2 King.2.12.& 13.14.

ſhall be] Or, rather, ſhall dye: ſupplyed out of the former branch: as Job 16.21.& 22.24.& 33.6.

ſhall be the ſhame of thy Lords houſe] According to this reading, the meaning ſhould be, that the honour conferred by the King, upon Shebna, being ſuch an one, as he was, ſhould in fine, prove a diſhonour to his Lord, and to his houſe over which he had placed him. But the old Latine reads it, inſerting a copulative, inſtead of the verb ſubſtantive, and the ſhame of thy Lords houſe. Which ſome following expound the whole ſentence thus, There ſhalt thou dye: and there alſo thy chariots with thee; and the ſhame of thy Lords houſe, to wit, ſhall alſo that ceaſe, though being thrown out of it, whoſe hon our was a diſgrace to it, and a better man being ſet up in thy ſtead, by whom it may recover its wonted honour again. But the proper ſenſe of the place, ſeems, to be that above, O thou the ſhame of thy Lords houſe: thou that by thy corrupt courſes, art a ſoul blemiſh to thy maſters honour, and a diſgrace to his houſe, Pſ.12.8.& 101.4-7. Prov. 28. 12.28.& 29.2. Eccl.10.5,6.

V.19. And I will drive thee from thy ſtation] The Prophet ſpeaks here, as in the perſon of God; in regard whereof; ſome render it, For I will, ſaith he, as (looking back to verſ.15.) drive thee from thy ſtation: and the copulative, is, indeed, put ſometime for the cauſative: as Gen.12.1.& Exod.14.19. for the places are parallel, and ſhould be rendred alike.

drive thee from thy ſtation] Depoſe thee from thy dignity; thruſt thee out of thine office, wherein thou thinkeſt, that thou ſtandeſt ſo faſt: thou ſuppoſeſt thy ſelf ſo ſurely ſeated, that thou canſt not be ſtirred: But they cannot ſtand, whom God delivers, Jer.46. 14, 15. there, is in the word ſtation, a notion of form, ſeeling, and conſiſting, whence a pillar hath its name: notwithſtanding which, as he conceived it, God telleth him, that he would not move him only, but remove him, as the like is threatned Queen Hazzith, that though her name imported the ſame, yet ſhe ſhould be removed, ſhe ſhould be carried away captive, Nah.2.7.

and from thy ſtate he ſhall pull thee down] The ſame thing repeated in other terms; from thy ſtate, that is, thine office: as 1 Chr.2.28. 2 Chr.35.15. or, ſtanding: as the word properly ſignifies. Whence a pillar, alſo hath another name. Now becauſe the perſon is in this latter branch, changed from the firſt to the third; the Prophet ſpeaking before, as in the perſon of God, now as himſelf, ſpeaking of God; ſome read the words, ſaying, from thy ſtation ſhall he pull thee down: and expound it, he, that is, the King, who before advanced thee, ſhall by mine appointment put thee down: and this they ſuppoſe; was in part done, when of High-Steward, he was made Scribe, or Secretary, which was a far inferiour place, chap. 36.3. And it is true, that the word ſaith, or, ſaying, is oft neceſſarily ſupplyed: as ver. 13.15. Job 8.18.& 9.20. But there is no ſuch need here: and they wrong the text, by omitting the copulative, which is of uſe here. Others therefore ſay, he, that is, God: he will do it, whether thy Lord the King do it, or no: Levit. 20,4,5. So Pſal. 52.5. and, ſaith one of the Rabbines it is he will, for, I will pull thee down: one perſon for another, as is the manner of Scripture in many places, 1 Sam. 6.4. 1 King.22.8. Job 17.10. and this God did, ſaith another, by ſmiting him with leproſie, as he did Uzziah, and ſo enforcing him to leave his place, 2 Chron. 26, 19-21. But of that before: nor need we ſtand here, to enquire, who ſhould do it, though whoſoever were the inſtruments, it is ſure that God did it; and no leſſe ſure, that it ſhould be done; that which only ſeems here to be intimated: for the verb may well be taken indefinitely; he will pull thee down; that is, thou ſhalt be pulled down. I will drive thee from thy ſtation, and thou ſhalt be pulled down from thy ſtanding. I will do it; and it is therefore ſure to be done, Pſ.115.3.& 135.6. Dan.4.35,37. Of this indefinite uſe, ſee eſpecially ch.2.19.& 17.13, ver.8.

V.20. And it ſhall come to paſſe in that day, that I will call my ſervant Eliakim, the ſon of Hilkiah] Hitherto was the depoſition and deportation of Shebna. Now followeth the ſubſtitution of Eliakim in his ſtead: after the deveſting of the one, the inveſting of the other.

it ſhall come to paſſe] Heb. it ſhall be: as chap. 2. 2. & 3. 24. & 7. 21.

in that day] At that time ch.2.20.& 4.1,2.

that I will call] Heb. and I will call: as chap. 16. 12. he ſhall not intrude himſelf into thy place; but ſhall be called by God to it. So chap.42. 6. & 48.15. Rom. 1. 1. Heb.5. 4. that which God doth ſometime immediately, as by word of mouth, or inward motion of ſpirit, Exod. 3.2,6,25. ch. 6.8,9. Jer.1.5,7. Matth.4,18, 21. & 9.9. Gal.1.1. ſometime mediately. and ſo ordinarily, by the miniſtry of man, Exod.16. 18. & 11. 24, 25. Act. 6,3,6. & 13,2. and thus, in likelihood, was Eliakim called to this office, advanced thereunto by Ezekiah. Nor amiſſe, therefore, doth one of the Rabbines here paraphraſe it; I will put it into the heart of Ezekiah, to put him into thy place. Who yet, I ſuppoſe, was miſtaken; ſuppoſing great Princes, to be termed called ones, when it is rather renowned ones, Ezek. 23.23. more likely ſo, Num.1.16. & 16.2.& 26, 9. but the word there doth a little vary, and is doubtful too; and by moſt, rendred the other way.

my ſervant] Nor in general; as of large, as are all men; yea, all things, Pſal. 119.91. but in a more ſpecial manner, as one deſigned to do him and his people ſpecial ſervice, in that place, which Shebna formerly had held. So Num.12.7. Pſal.78.70. Phil. 1.1. Tit.1.1.

Eliakim] See 2 King. 18. 18, 26, 37. chap. 36. 3. & 37. 2. the name well ſuiteth with the perſon. For Eliakim importeth one raiſed, or ſetled, by God: as Jehojakim, alſo, doth the ſame. See Jer.22.18.

the ſon of Hilkiah] This is added, to diſtinguiſh him from others, that might be in those times of the same name. For the name Eliakim was among that people, not unusual, as may appear, 2 King. 23.34. 2 Chron 36.4. Nehem.12.41. Matth.1.13. Luk.3.30. and it may well be also, because his Father Hilkiah, was a man of some note.

Hilkiah] Heb. Hilkijahu; as Hanniha is Chananiah, Act.7.2. Of the form, see on Chap.1.1. there are diverse other found in Scripture of the same name, 1 Chr.26.11. Neh.8.4 among the rest, the High-Priest, in Josias reign, 2 Chr.6.13. 2 Chr.34.9. Ezr.7.1. and Jeremy the Prophets Father, Ier.1.1. The word signifies, Gods portion.

V. 21. And I will cloth him with thy robe] God by the Prophet directeth his speech still to Shebna, into whose office Eliakim was to succeed (as the promise, or prediction of the saving seed is directed, not to the woman, but to the Devil, whom it was to destroy, Gen.3.15.Heb.2.14.) to vex him the more; ambitious persons hasting such as are to succeed them; especially when to be deposed from their high and great places; and not enduring to hear the name of a Successor. See 2 Sam.19.13.& 20.9,10.

thy robe] Or, coat: as Gen.37.3,31,32. such a rich and goodly robe, or coat, as thou now weareſt, correspondent to thy place. So Gen.41.42. Eſt.6.8.& 8.15. Dan.5.29. See on ver.17.

and strengthen him with thy girdle] I will give him that power and authority, that thou now hast: or, I will not onely put him in thy place, but I will confirm him also, and strengthen him in it; ver.23. The girdle, and emblem of power. See chap.11.5.& 23.10. & 45.1,5. Prov.31.17. Though an allusion, as some not improbably conjecture, to such rich, as robes before; so girdling here; as great men used to wear; Exod.28.39,40. Rev. 1.13. Howbeit; I suppose they goe to far, who (because special mention is made of Aarons robe, or, coat rather, (for so the word properly signifies, both here, and there) and girdle, or belt, Exod. 28. 4, 39. would hence infer, that Shebna now was, and Eliakim was to be, High-Priest; subsinfer, that Shebna now was, and Eliakim was to be, High-Priest; substituted in his place by Ezekiah, as Zadok, in the place of Abiathar by Solomon, 1 King.2.27,35. But of this, see on ver.15.

girdle] Or, belt. Which may well be deemed to come from thence, by no unusual change of a letter; it is so called in Hebrew, because the belly is girt in with it.

and I will commit thy government into his hand] Heb. I will give: as Joh.9.24. This we find effected afterward in the story. For as Shebna is said to have been over the house here, ver.15. so is Eliakim said to be afterward in that office, 2 King.18.18.chap. 36.3. & 37.2. God, say the Jewish-Writers, revealed his treacheries and covert carriage, to Esay, by Esay to Ezekiah, who thereupon put him beside his place, and placed Eliakim therein.

in his hand] Or, hands; for the word is collective: as Prov.31.20. a metaphor from a coach-man, or charioteer, in whose hands the reins are, that guide and rule the horses that draw in the chariot, or coach, Jam.3.3. or, from a pilot, that sitting at the stern, with the helm in his hand, thereby steereth the ship which way he pleaseth, Jam.3.2. So Pſ.78.72.

and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah] Heb. for a father; that is, a father, simply: as Gen. 17.4. or, instead of a father: as a father, Iudg.17.10. & 18.19.2 Sam. 7.14. As in regard of his command, and the eminency of his place; as all Rulers are styled Fathers, Exod. 20. 12. Num.36.1.2 King.5. 13. so more especially, in regard of his fatherly care of them, and tender affection towards them: as title for a good governour. See 2 Sam. 23.17.& 24.17. 2 Chr.30.18,23. Neh.2.10.& 5. 8, 13-19. The Persians used to say of three of their Kings, that Darius was a trader, Cambises, a Master, Cyrus, a father: Herodote, lib.3. But they ſtain the ſtyle here too far; who would hence infer, that he muſt needs be High-Prieſt. For who elſe ſhould be father, ſay they, to the Inhabitants of Ieruſalem: but either the High-Prieſt, or the King: For they might have conſidered, what the Rabbine on this place ſuggeſteth; to wit, Ioſiphs ſpeech of himſelf, that God had made him a father to Pharaoh, and Lord of all his houſe, and a Ruler throughout all the land of Egypt, Gen.45. 8 See Pſ.105.20, 21. The words yet ſhew, as thoſe of Ioſeph, that the power of the place was not confined to the family, or houſhold ſervants only: but was extended alſo unto other the Kings Subjects. See 2 King.15. 5. Of Ieruſalem and Judah, ſee on ch.1.1.

Inhabitants] Heb. Inhabitan: as ch.5.3.

the house of Judah] As, the house of Jacob, ch.2.5. and, the house of Israel, & the house of Judah, Ier.5.11.& 11.10,17. not to the Kings houſe only, but to the whole body of the people, that were as one joynt family: ſo all the faithful make one family, Gal.6.10. Eph.2. 16.& 3.14,15.

V.22. And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder] Hence it appears, that Eliakim now, as Shebna before, was to be Comptroller, or High-Steward of the Kings houſe, as one of the Iewish Commenters on this place, well obſerveth: and not High-Prieſt, as ſome other of them groundleſly affirm, whom yet ſome of ours follow: and much leſs one, that bare both offices: which yet the Chaldee Paraphraſt aſſerts. It is as if he had ſaid, I will commit unto him, the whole charge and government of the Kings houſe: ſo as there ſhall not be done any thing there, in one kind, or other, without him: nor ſhall any controll him in what he doth, Gen.41.43,44. Pſ.105.21,22.

the key] An emblem of power and authority, becauſe none can come into a place, or go out, without the will and leave of him, that hath the command of the key: and when a man therefore comes to take poſſeſſion of an houſe, thither he is wont to be given him. When rendition of a City, Town, or Caſtle, is made, the keys are commonly delivered. See Matth.16.19. Rev.1.18.& 3.7. & 9.1. & 20. 1,3. key, collectively, for keys, Matth.16.19. as after, shoulder, for shoulders. Some ſuppoſe, that the party who bare this office, either carried a key himſelf; or, had one of gold carried by ſome other before him, as Mages before ſome in high place at Court, are with us. Others, that he had the figure of a key woven into, or ſtaffed into, or embroidered upon his upper garment, as an enſign of his office. But theſe are but ſurmiſes, and groundleſſe conjectures.

of the house of David] See on chap.7.1.

will I lay] Or, put. He brought it as ver.21. Ier. 23.40. Ezek. 37.24, 14,17.

upon his shoulders] See on chap.9.6.

so he shall open, and none shall shut, and he shall shut, and none shall open] The effect of this his authority in the execution of his place. Heb. and he ſhall, &c. which may well be rendred that he may open, or, ſo that he ſhall open, and none ſhall ſhut, &c. as chap. 10.19.& 11. 3.& 19.12. A form of ſpeech borrowed from the office of thoſe, who having the keys of cities or caſtle, committed unto them, the gates thereof cannot be opened, or ſhut, without their direction, and ſpecial order from them. The meaning is, that he ſhall have power to diſpoſe of matters, for the government of the royal palace, and execution of juriſdiction, appertaining to his place, without let, and reſtraint, or power in any other to reverſe what he doth. So Rev. 3.7. Iob 12.14. and the like in ſome kind, Mat.16.19.& 18.18. The Rabbines gloſſe falls ſhort, who expounds it, that he ſhall be of counſell to Ezekiah, who ſhould do nothing without, or, but by his advice. For the place that Eliakim was to poſſeſſe, was an office diſtinct from the place of a Counſellor. See 2 Chro.26,22.

V. 23. and I will fasten him as a nail, in a sure place] To the power of executing what belonged unto his place, (left the due, and impartial execution of his duty therein, might prove prejudicial unto him) God further here promiſeth ſuch an eſtabliſhment of him in it, that he ſhould be ſure to ſit faſt; and be able, not only, to diſcharge his place, ſo as ſhould be both for the Kings honour, and the publike welfare; but to ſupport alſo thoſe inferiour offices, whether ſtrangers, or of kin to him, that ſhould have dependance upon him, contrary to that, which of Shebna is threatned, ver.25.

as a nail] The note of ſimilitude is ſuppoſed to be wanting, as Iob 11.12. Pſalm.11.6.ch. 21.8. Yet I ſuppoſe the more well be rendred without it; I will faſten him a nail; a pin, in a firm place; as, or given as a nail, or, a pin in his holy place, Ezra 9.8. Becauſe the verb faſten, here uſed, is ſometime applyed to the pitching of tents, Gen. 31. 25. Some Interpreters therefore would have this word rendred, as a nail, but a ſtake; ſuppoſing ſuch a ſtake, or poſt, here intended, on whoſe top the pight in the midſt of a tent; beſides that many neceſſaries may be hanged on it, ſupports the whole pavilion. True it is, that the word is alſo oft found uſed about tents; but it then ſignifies not ſuch a poſt, or ſtake, as ſupports it; but ſuch an iron nail, or woodden pin, or ſhort ſtake, (if ye pleaſe ſo to term it) as the cords of a tent are wont to be faſtened unto, chap. 33. 20. & 54.2. as appeareth by the ſtory of Iael, Iudg. 4.21,22.& 5.26. But here the alluſion is rather to ſuch a nayl, or, pin, as is faſtened ſome where about the houſe in the wall, to hang ſuch utenſils upon, as are of ordinary uſe in the houſe; that they may not be caſt about, and ſo wronged; but may there be ſafe out of harms way, as we ſay, and at hand, when occaſion is to make uſe of them, Ezek. 15.3.

in a sure place] That he may not be, either ſhaken, or wrenched out of it, Eccl. 12.11. as thou thalt be, ver.25. Heb. in a faithful place, Num.12.7.1 Sam.2.35. ſuch a place, as will not fail, but hold faſt, as a faithful man, one that failsnot the truſt repoſed in him; but is true and firm to them that confide in him, Deut. 7.9. Prov.14.5.& 25.13. Prov.31. 11. One of the Hebrew Commenters ſuppoſeth a trajection in the words, which he would have therefore to be thus read, or rendred, I will faſten him a ſure nail in the place. But, beſides that the genders agree not, (for the one is maſculine, the other feminine; and the Hebrew points carry the conſtruction the other way: (the repetition of the ſame form of ſpeech, ver.25. doth evidently refute it. See Zach. 10.4.

and he shall be for a glorious throne to his fathers house] As thou waſt a ſhame to thy Lords houſe; ſo ſhall he be a grace, and an honour, not to his Lords houſe alone: but to his fathers houſe too.

for a glorious throne] That is, as a glorious throne: or ſimply; a glorious throne: as, for a father, ver.22. for a glorious crown, and, for a goodly diadem, ch.28.5. Heb. a throne of glory: as 1 Sam.2.8. Jer.17. 12. Some would haue it read, to the throne a glory: underſtanding it of the Kings throne, and conſequently, of the King: that he ſhould be an honour to him, by whom he had been to that hight of honour advanced. But the points in the original, and frame of the context, will not eaſily admit it.

to his fathers house] His prudent and upright carriage ſhall make his whole ſtock and kindred, the whole family he came of, honourable, as was Ioſephs the like to his, Gen.47.5,6. 11. Some extend the

the word family here, to the whole Tribe of Iudah, called the house of Judah, ver.21. but the term here uſed, ſeems narrower here, then that there: and the words following, run rather the former way.

V. 24. And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his fathers house, the off-spring, and the issue] All his kindred and allies, with their iſſue, as well ſmall as great, ſhall partake of his honour, in one employment, or other. So I rather take it, then, as ſome other, who expound it of the generall care, that Eliakim ſhould have in the execution of his office, of doing right to, and relieving, as well the mean, as the mighty, Exod. 23.2. Deut. 16.18.17.2. Chr. 19. 6.7. Pſ.72.2,4,13,14.& 82. 3,4.

they shall hang upon him] they shall hang; that is, there ſhall be hanged, as things are wont to be hanged on a pin, or nail; (for the verb is here taken indefinitely: See ver.19. upon him, or, upon it: in alluſion to the nail, or pin, before mentioned, ver.23. they ſhal have, all of them, dependance upon him.

all the glory of his fathers house] Either the whole family, which by his means ſhould become honourable. See Chap.4.5.or, ſtrictly among them, that are of ſome note, otherwiſe, for wealth, wiſdome, or the like; as ch.10.16.18. oppoſed to the little ones, afterward mentioned.

the off-spring, and the issue] The former of theſe words, ſignifies properly, plants, that grow up out of the ground, chap.34.1.& 42.5. or, branches, that ſprout, or ſpring out from a root, ſtock, or ſtem, ch. 44.3,4. and in the next place, children, or iſſue, Iob 5. 25. & 21.8. & 27.14.& 31.8. chap.61.9.& 65.23. ſo called, becauſe they iſſue, and proceed from the bowels of their parents, of thoſe, that breed and bear them, chap.48.19. The latter in this ſenſe, no where elſe found; but uſed for excrements, Ezek.4.15. is deemed to come from a root of the ſame notion with the former; from whence alſo are words derived, that ſignifie the ſame thing, ch.4.4. Ezek.4.12. ſo termed alſo, becauſe they come out of mens body, Deut.23.14. but this latter root ſeems to imply a more abundant iſſue, flowing out, as ſtreams of water, from a fountain; becauſe it hath neer affinity with another term, that ſignifies ſuch [abundance, Deut.33. 19. Iob 22.11. chap.60 6. And becauſe the former word is of a maſculine form, the latter of a feminine, Some of the Jewiſh Writers underſtand thereby, ſons and daughters, and becauſe it was before ſaid, that he ſhould be as a father to the houſe of Judah, ver.21. Some of them would have the people to be reputed, here, as his children; the men, his ſons; and the women, his daughters: but of that formerly. Other of them, with the Chaldee Paraphraſt, underſtand, ſons, and ſons ſons, or, nephews, as that name properly ſignifies. But theſe are by other of them, not improbably, deemed niceties; ſuppoſing as both words to ſignifie as our Prophet manner is, to uſe oft variety of terms) but one and the ſame thing. For, as for that which a learned late Writer ſurmiſeth, that theſe two ſhould be the names of the keys, that Eliakim ſhould have the command of; the former, of the fore-gate, by which they went in and out, of the word, that ſignifies to go out: the other, of the back-gate, by which they went to the back-ſide; becauſe of that uſe of the word, Ezek. 4.15. it is a conceit, ſo far fetcht, and ſo improbable, that it is ſtrange how it ſhould enter once into any judicious mans brains.

all vessels of small quantity] The Prophet proceeds in the forementioned metaphor, of nails, or pins, on which, veſſels, inſtruments, and utenſils, cared ones eſpecially, as flagons, pots, cups, and the like, are wont to be hanged: and it may be deemed, that the copulative ſhould here be ſupplyed, which is oft omitted, as chap.21.5. ver.6. and all veſſels, (or, utenſils: for the word is of a very large extent) of a ſmall size, as ſome, of little, or, leſs ſize, as others: or the word is here put ſubſtantively: as Gen.44.20. 2 Chr.34.30. and I ſuppoſe alſo comparatively: as Gen.27. 15.42. And ſo this branch will not unfitly anſwer the former: he ſhall ſupport, and bear up, with honour and credit, not thoſe alone of his ſtock, that are perſons of note, and parts, fit for more honourable employments, together with thoſe, that are of their iſſue, and partake therefore with them, in their honours: but even thoſe alſo of them, that are of meaner parts, and leſſe eſteem, who yet, in regard of their alliance to him, ſhould have reſpect given them, and have ſuch employments aſſigned them, as they were found to be fit for. God the more to ſpight Shebna, declares how not Eliakim himſelf alone, but his whole kindred ſhould be graced with him. Some expound the words of the great care that Eliakim ſhould have in his place of ſecuring, even the meaner ſort of people: and not their perſons only, but their goods, and chattles alſo, even to the meaneſt of them. But the former I take to be the genuine ſenſe of the place.

from the vessels of cups, even to the vessels of flagons] This amplification continued in the former ſimilitude, ſeems to argue both the great power, and the fixed firmneſs, that Eliakim ſhould be poſſeſſed of in his place. Even in the meaneſt mens houſes: but in great mens much more, there are many pins and hooks of ſeverall ſorts, to hang utenſils, pots, and cups, of ſeveral ſizes, and weight, on; and they are to be chary of hanging over many on the ſame hook, or pin, for fear of looſening, or breaking it. But this pin ſhould be ſo ſtrong, and ſo well faſtned withal, that it ſhould be able, without fear of danger, either to it ſelf, or the things hanged on it, to bear all the veſſels, or utenſils in the houſe, though never ſo many, of ſeverall ſize, weight, and uſe. Some following the Chaldee Paraphraſt would have the meaning to be, that all thoſe that had any ſacred employment in the Sanctuary, as well the Prieſts, that ſacrificed, as the Levites that ſang, and played on inſtruments, ſhould have their dependance upon Eliakim, ſuppoſing him to be High-Prieſt. Others, that all the Offices in the Kings Court, as well the higher as the lower alſo, ſhould be at his diſpoſal. And others againe, that there ſhould be nothing in the Kings houſe, or palace, that ſhould not be under his power. But the tenour of the context ſeems to run another way, and to admit none of theſe.

from the vessels of cups] veſſels of cups; that is, cups, ſimply, ſaith one: as, an inſtrument of viol, (the very term here uſed) for, a viol, ſimply, Pſ.71.22.& 92.3. veſſels of cups, for ſeveral kinds, or ſorts of cups: or bowls. Some Jewiſh Commenter: becauſe there were, ſaith he, diverſe ſizes of them, differing as well for matter, as for fine. The word is not above twice found elſe where in Scripture, Cant. 7.2. Where the ſpouſes navel, is likened to a round bowl, or goblet, replenished with liquor. Whence it is with good probability deemed, that the word comes from the ſame root with that, which is uſed, for a target, or ſhield. Of which, ſee on ver.6. in regard that the one did, in form, or roundneſs at leaſt, reſemble the other: and Exod. 24.6. where it is ſaid, that Moſes received into baſons, the blood of the beaſts, or bullocks, ſlain, for ſacrifice, at mount Sinai. Whereby it appears, that it was a veſſel, bowl, or baſon of ſome large ſize, and of ſome good competent capacity: thoſe uſed at table, were, in likelihood, of gold, as the Rabbine here gueſſeth, in great mens houſes, or of ſilver, at leaſt, and are mentioned there, as the principall. For thoſe uſed at the altar of burnt offerings, might be of braſſe, Exod. 27.3.& 38.3. and ſo might the like for other uſes, in private houſes: but the former ſort ſeems to be aymed at in this place.

even unto] Heb. and unto: as ch.1.6.

the vessels of flagons] Or, flagons before: and for the cauſe there mentioned. The word rendred flagon, firſt, and properly, ſignifies a bottle: ſuch, as they uſed commonly, to carry or keep wine in: 1 Sam.1.24. & 10.3.& 25.18.1 Sa.16.1. Jer.13.12. they were uſually of earthen ſtuff, ch.30.14. Jer.19.1.10.& 48.12. and therefore of no great value, Lam.4.2. put there for hire, for perſons of the loweſt rank, and leaſt eſteem at the houſe before; for men of ſome prime note, and repute. The one anſwering to the honourable ones, ſpoken of before, the other to the ſmall ones. Howbeit, becauſe the ſame word is alſo uſed for an inſtrument of muſick, a viol, ſo called, becauſe it is bellied, ſomewhat like a bottle, of which, ſee on ch.5.12. Hence, ſome would have it rendred, the inſtruments of viols, underſtanding it of muſicall inſtruments: and the Rabbins moſt of them run this way, thoſe eſpecially, that deem of Eliakims High-Prieſt-ſhip: as alſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, & the old Latine. But this agreeth with the former, to harp, and harrow.

V.25. In that day, ſaith the Lord of hoſts] In this laſt paſſage, wherewith the latter part of this Prophecy concerning Shebna is concluded; the Prophet returneth to relate, as from God, the ruine now, not of him alone, but of all thoſe, that had dependance upon him.

in that day] At that time: as ver.20.

the Lord of hoſts] See ch.1.9.

ſhall the nail that is faſtned in the ſure place, be removed] Or, ſhall the pin[a] as ver.23. That is faſtened in a ſure place, (for there is no article here, more then there is) remove: as Zach.14.4.ch:54.10.or, departs: as Num.14.44. Joſh.1.8. Judg.6.13.ch.59.21. The Prophet reſumeth again the former ſimilitude from a pin, or nayl, driven into a wall, to hang ſome weighty thing on. To ſuch an one ſurely faſtened, that it might be able to hold whatſoever was hung on it, he compared Eliakim before, that was to be Shebna's Succeſſor, but Shebna, now, to ſuch a pin, or nail; as though it might ſeem to be ſurely riveted into the poſt, or wall, yet ſhould fail, and fall out of its place, when it came to the ſtreſs: and not be able to bear, or hold up that, that was hanged on it. For they are very far wide, that underſtand this of Eliakim, that he alſo ſhould be removed, and taken away, as was Joſias, 2 King.23.26,29. for this ſpeaks of the ſame of the people: as alſo thoſe, that refer this to the Babylonian deportation, and expound it of the Prieſthood, that ſeemed then to have failed, Hoſ.3.4.

in a ſure place] As he accounted himſelf to be, when he hewed him out his ſepulchre, ver. 23. as making no queſtion but to live, and dye there: and to hold his place, and ſtate, to his end: as Iob 29. 18.

and be cut down, and fall] See ch.10. 33.& 14 12.

and the burden that was upon it, ſhall be cut off] As he compared Shebna to a pin, or a nail to his favourites, and his dependants, ſuch as reſted, and relyed on him, in regard of his power, and place, (whether thoſe of his family, or thoſe of his faction) to ſome weight of bottles, or other utenſils, that hanging upon ſuch a pin, or nail, muſt needs, when that fails, and falls, fall together with it: and being brittle ware, break to pieces. So ch.31.3.

For the Lord hath ſpoken it] The prophets uſual cloſe. See chap. 21. 17.

CHAP. XXIII.

Ver.1. THe burden of Tyre Of burden*, see c.13.1.Tyre, the place, which this Prophecy concerns, was a famous port, & mart-Town, in Phenicia, the lower part of Syria; from which that whole Country is supposed to have been so termed, (see an ch.7.1.) lying upon the midland sea, and situate like Venice, within the sea, these things signifies a rock, 27.3.4. It is in Hebrew called Tsor, which sometime signifies a rock, Ezek.3.9.because it was built upon a rock, Ezek.26. 4.14. and in that regard very strong, Josh.19.29. in Syriack Tsur, whence Suria, and Syria: but by the Greeks, turning that first double letter into a single T. Tyros, whence the Latine, Tyrus, and our Tyre; and by the Latines again, changing it into a single S, sometime Sarra. See the like Prophecies against this Town, and State, Jer.25.22.& 47. 4. Ezek.26-28. Amo. 2.9. Zach.9.2.4. denounced against it, among other their excelles, for their insolent and injurious carriages towards Gods people, their neighbours, the Jews, Ez.ek.26.2.& 28.24. Joel 3. 4.

Howl, ye ships of Tarshish.] The Prophet beginneth his Sermon against Tyre, with a summons of such as had trade with her, & were maintained by her, to mourn for her, or over her, in regard of her ruine.

Howl.] Make a grievous lamentation, ch.13.6.ver.14.

ye ships of Tarshish.] Either the ships themselves; as by a rhetorical compellation, the senseless creatures are sometime called to mourn, ch.14.31. and said so to do, Lam.1.4. implying what they would do, were they sensible of such occurrents, whereby so much detriment accrues unto them. See Chap. 24. 7. or the ships, put for those that are employed about them, and trade in them, who losing, and missing their former trade, with her, and again that thereby they gat, should make grievous moan for Tyres fall, as being either wholly undone, or much endamaged thereby, Ezek.27.29.32. Rev.18.18.19.

of Tarshish.] That trade there, Ezek.27. 12.25. either of Tartessus in Spain; or of Cilicia; whose chief port Town Tarsus was, (the Cilicians being anciently masters of those mid-land-seas; as Strabo. l.14. and Solinus, cap.41.)or, of the main ocean, or great sea, from the one of those countries, in process of time, generally so termed; (as Pontus, with the Latines, from the like)or, from the colour of the stone called Tharshis, Exod.28.20. Ezek.1.16.& 10.9. as some: but the stone, in more likelyhood, had its name from the Sea. See on ch.2.16.

for it is laid waste] When, or by whom, this calamity befell Tyre is much questioned among Interpreters. The most draw it down to Nebuchadnezzars days; by whom they suppose it to have been effected, Jer. 47.4. Ezek.26.7. Joseph against Apion, lib.1. though other of them say, that it then indeed began; but was not fully compleated until Alexanders time by whom, after a long siege, having been taken with much difficulty, it was utterly sacked, and ruined. See hereof, Diodor. lib. 17. Arrian, lib. 2. Plutareh, in Aelxanders life, & Curtius, lib. 4. Yet some late Writers suppose that what Esay here foretold, was effected and fulfilled by the Assyrian Kings of those times, in which the Prophet himself lived; to wit, by Salmanesser, and Sennacherib. To which purpose, they alledge an ancient record out of the writings of one Menander, an Ephesian, cited by Joseph the Jew, in his antiquities, l.9.c. 14. where in it is related, that under Eluleus (or, as Some out of Ruffinus read it, Eliseus) King of Tyre, the King of Assyria having subdued most of Phenicia, and having taken Sidon, and old Tyre, set upon Tyre it self too; which alone stood out against him; and so besiet them, that they could come by no fresh water, for the space of five year, but what, by digging within the city, they got out of Wels. Now this, saith Joseph, was done, by Salmaneser, whose attempts against it, it is not improbable, that both Sargon, and Sennacherib, might after purse.

it] That is, Tyre; whom this Prophecy concerns.

laid waste] Heb. wasted, or, spoyled, Psal.17.9. chap.33.1. Obad.5. wasted, or spoyled, for, to be wasted, or spoyled. fay some: as Psal.137.8. destroyed, for, to be destroyed: but this nicety here needs not. It is the manner of the Prophets, and their common language, to speak of things to come, as already done. So Babylon is fallen, ch. 21.9. Rev. 18. 2.

so that there is no house] Heb. from house, or. from an house; that is so, fay some, that there is not on house left standing in her, Ezek. 26.4.14. Others no place of receit, or harbour, Job 39.6. Psal. 104. 17. or, from being an house, that is, from being a city: house, for, city, as Beth-shemesh, for Kirheres: the house of the sun, for, the city of the sun, See chap.16.7. her wonted trading and state, thereby upheld, being gone. Of the phrase, see on ch.7.8.& 17.1. Thus the most, which in the latter sense may import no more, then what might by those Assyrian Kings well be accomplished. Some late Writers, in exposition of this clause, go another way, expounding the words, from house & from her domesticks, those that are of her own house, is she spoiled; according to that, Mic.7.6. Matth.10. 36. and so, fay they, it came to passe; when the State of Tyre, being much weakned by long warrs between them and the Persians, their slaves joyned in a conspiracy, surprized the city, slew their masters, possessed themselves of their wives, and goods, and set up such a King as themselves pleased, Justine, lib. 18. But neither doth it appear, at what time this should be done; nor is it likely to be that, that the Prophet here pointed at; and the text founds rather the other way. See the next words.

no entring in] Or, nor entring in, or nor going, to wit, in, or out. For the copulative wanting, as Psal.110.3. would be supplyed: as Hol.9. 11. Heb. from going: as 1 Sam.25.26,33. or from entring: as ch.24.10. 11. Heb. from going: as 1 Sam.25.26,33. or from entring: as ch.24.10. 11. Heb. from going: as 1 Sam.25.26,33. or from entring: as ch.24.10. a place parallel to this, every house is shut up from entring, or, going; that is, so as none doth, or can goin, or out. The meaning is, either Tyre is not frequented with repair of merchants, and traders, that pass to and fro, her wonted traffick being cut off, or decayed: or, it is so besiet, and begirt by the enemy, that there can be no repair to it, or passage for it, or, from it, with safety. For it seems too forced a construction that some here give, to carry on their forementioned exposition, from coming; that is, from men of coming: as wine, for, a man of wine, a wine-bibber, Prov.20.1. wisdome, for, a man of wisdome: a wife man, Mic.6.9. men of coming, strangers: as, the come Governour, Dan.9.26. the Governour stranger: so the meaning should be, Tyre is to be wasted by her own household-servants, her slaves; and by strangers, the Chaldeans, Ezek. 28. 7. But neither is any such phrase found in Scripture; men of coming, for, strangers: nor is the word of coming, or, going, here a noun, but a verb: and besides, that it seems somewhat improbable, that by these two terms, the Prophet should describe two divers manners of devastation, by two several sorts of persons, at two several times, far distant the one from the other; the tenour of the text according to the common phrase of Scripture, whereof the Jewish Commenters, upon the place, afford examples enow, from 1 Sam. 15. 23. 1 King. 15.13. Ezek. 16.41. to which many more also might be added; & the current of the context runs fairely, and familiarly, the former way.

from the land of Chittim] As Tarshish, so Chittim, was the name, at first, of one of Javans sons, Gen. 10.4. from whom those lands, or countries, were afterward called, which by him, or his posterity, were possessed. Now because it is said, that among Japhets, or Javans issue, the Ules of the Nations were divided, Gen. 10.5. Hence it is supposed, that under the name of Chittim, are comprized some of the maritime coasts; bordering upon the Eastern parts of the midland sea, as well on the European, as on the Asian side, and of the Iles that are therein. This they furmise, the rather, in regard of the ancient names of divers places, in those parts, as Cittium, a Town in Cyprus, whence Zeno the Philosopher was, Strabo, lib.14. Joseph, antiquities, l. 1.c.12. & Pliny, l.5.c.31. Cytcum in Candy, Joseph, antiquities, l. 1.c.12. & Pliny, l.5.c.31. Cytcum in Candy, Pliny, l.4.c.12. the Ceteans, a people situate between the Cilicians, and the Pelasgians, Strabo, l.13.6. called, as some think, from the river Cetus; which they lye upon, Pliny, l.5.cap.20. or, from Cetus, whether Cetus; which they lye upon, Pliny, l.5.cap.20. or, from Cetus, whether a town, or Province in Cilicia, of which Ptolomy, l.5. nor want ther a town, or Province in Cilicia, of which Ptolomy, l.5. nor want they, that draw in hither, some parts at least, of Achaia, and Macedonia; called anciently Macetie, as Hesychius informs us; and the Inhabitants thereof Macetians, as Steven the Byzantine, out of Heraclides, as also part of Italy; becaule Suidas, out of some old Author, reporteth, that Telephus the son of Hercules, brought some Cetians out of Asia, and placed them in Italy. Yet some there are, that would confine Chittim to the Ilands about Italy, in the utter, or Western parts of the Midland sea; as Tarshish, to those about Greece, in the inner, or Eastern parts of it: which to me seems not so probable. See Num.24.24. Dan.11.30.1 Macead. 1. 1.& 8. 5. Nor is it unlikely, but that those of Chittims posterity, were dispersed into divers of those forementioned places, out of which Merchants had traffick with Tyre. But this branch of the verse, concerning chittim, is by divers diversly expounded. Yee some refer it to the words beforegoing; and of these, some to the first word, is wasted, or spoyled from the land of Chittim; that is, fay some of them, from Cilicia, by which way Alexander brake into the Eastern parts; whereof, yet, I find no particular mention, in the stories of those times. Others, from Macedonia, whereof Alexander was King, and from whence, at first, he set forth: and so the Author of the Maccabees constantly takes it, whatsoever a learned Writer in his Annotations, affirms, in the one place, by his own version, in his Annotations, affirms, in the one place, by his own version, crossing himself in the other: and these both understand the place of that devastation, that by Alexander, and his forces, befell Tyre. But other joyn this passage to the words next before-going, thus rendring them, so that there is no entring, or coming, in from Chittim, that is, so that the Merchants, who had wont from those parts Chittim, that is, so that the Merchants, who had wont from those parts Chittim, that is, so that the Merchants, who had wont from those parts to Tyre, can now find no entrance thither. Thus they, that annex it to the former words. But most refer it to the branch following, regarding the text.

from the land of Chittim, it is revealed to them] Which yet is diversly expounded. Some, from the Merchants of Chittim, that are neerer at hand, is the overthrow of Tyre reported to those of Tarshish, that are further off. Others by the Merchants of Chittim, trading to Babylon, the Babylonians have been informed of the wealth of Tyre, and incited to invade it: or, the Tyrians have by them been informed of the Babylonians evill purposes against them. Others, from the land of chittim it appears to them: as Chap. 40.1.& 56.1.or, it shall fall suddenly upon them, to wit, the Tyrians to them, for, on them: as Psalm 9. 4. Exod. 15. 15. or, as others, on it: or on her, to wit, Tyre: as Job 10.23. but the pronoun is in both places masculine. Others, lastly, from the land of Chittim is the foundation discovered, or, laid bare, with them. The word, foundation, supplyed, as it is found compleat, Ezek.13.14. Mic.1.6. for, as for those, that following the old Greek, render it, it is, or, she is led captive, or gone into captivity: or, more generally, it is removed, or she is gone: as the word is used, chap. 38. 12. they take no notice of the last particle, unto him, or unto them; (for it may signifie either: as chap.53.8.) which yet is not here superfluous. Amids this great variety, I encline to those, that joyn those words, from the land of Chittim, with the next before them, and understand the passage of all harbour in Tyre, or entrance, into it, denyed unto such as had wont to have recourse thither: to which is added, it is revealed to them, to wit, to those that formerly traded with her; the report is come to them, how it fareth with her, that she is sacked and spoiled, and there is, therefore, nothing for them to do there: and the whole passage may, as I conceive, be nor amiss, thus rendred, taking the initial particle in a double notion: as Jer. 4. 30. & 12.5. (of which, see on Chapter 18, 3.) for that the (Tyre) is spoyled, so that there is no house, nor coming in for those from Chittim, is made known to them: as chap. 22. 14. Dan. 10. 1. So the words run smoothly without rub; and many needless difficulties are taken off, wherein most of the other readings received, do necessarily entangle us. I shall add only, what one of the Jewish Commenters hath on this place; because I find it seconded by a man of great note; to wit, that by the Chittim, or Chittijim, as the are termed, verf. 12. are meant the Chuthei, a people inhabiting some part of Sufiana, to the East of Babylon, called also by the Greeks, Cissia. So the meaning should be, from Chaldea, and the parts adjacent shall this evil befall them. But this I shall leave to the judgments of others.

V. 2. Be still, ye inhabitants of the Ile] It is somewhat doubtful whom the Prophet here either speaks of, or speaks unto. Most interpreters understand by the Ile here mentioned, Tyre it self, so called, because it flood within the Sea, environed round about with it, Ezek. 27. 3,4. & 28.2. untill by Alexander it was adjoyned to the Continent: as Pliny, lib.5.c.19. The Inhabitants of Tyre, therefore, fay some, are here advised to be quiet, and not trouble themselves, about courses to be taken for the defence of their city; since, that all would be to no purpose. See the like, Jer.8.14. Psal. 4.4. But this seems not to suit well with the main current of the context, running all along in the Prophetical strain, in speaking of things to come, as past and done; and of Tyre, as already, either spoiled, or destroyed: and others therefore, on better ground, suppose, that the Tyrians are here called upon, (as were her merchants before) to mourn for her, and to be silent; that is, to leave their boasting of the state and wealth of their city, and their rioting and revelling, that formerly they had used, ver. 7-9. (see the like, chap.22.2,3.) and so sit down in silence after the manner of mourners, Job 2.8,13. chap.47.5. Jer.8.14. Lam.3.28. and this I suppose to be the genuine meaning of the words. Yet some other, among whom one of the Jewish Commenters, on the place, suppose the word, Ile, to be taken here collectively, Ile for Ilands: as land, and house, and ass; for oxen, and horses, and office, Gen. 32.5. 2 King. 1.10. chap.1.3. and the place to be understood of those, who dwelling in Sea-towns, or Ilands, had trading with Tyre; either said here, to sit down, and give over their trade; in the city, with which their chief traffick was, being destroyed. For, they read the words, not imperatively, but enunciatively; not as advising them what they should do: but as relating what they do; they are silent: or, as others, called upon, & advised to forbeare going to Tyre, or looking any more after her, as the word is used, Ezek. 24.17. or, willed to sit down, and mourn with her, and for her, as those, ver. 1.

thou whom the merchants of Zidon, that passe over the sea, have replenished] Heb. merchant that passeth: as Gen. 23. 16. Prov. 31. 14. The Sidoneans being merchants, and trading also by sea, helpe to fill the mart at Tyre with their wares, being not far from her; and finding a good market for themselves with her; though in Ezekiel, they are mentioned rather as her marriners, then as her merchants, Ezek. 26. 8. but they might well be both. Some read the words, the merchants of Zidon, that passe the sea, and fill thee, O Tyre, are still, also, or silent; supplying the verb from the former branch. For Tyre falling, Zidon being so neer it and in some sort, a joynt State with it, could not but fall with it. See on ver. 4. but this Syntax seems over-forced.

that passe over the sea] Or, as we use to speak, that crosse the Sea.

replen shed] Have haunted, and enriched; so Tyre speaks in her pride, upon the fall of Jerusalem. I shall be replenished, Ezek. 26. 2. I shall grow great, and rich.

V. 3. And by great waters, the seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river is her revenue] Tyre further described, as before by her trade with Zidon, ver. 2. so here, by her traffick with Egypt. See Ezek. 27. 7.

by great waters] By the midland sea; by which the wares of Egypt were conveyed unto Tyre, Psal. 104.25.& 107.23. See chap. 18. 1. and some therefore supply here, the word, came, or was brought, thus reading the text, by great waters, came the seed of Sihor, it was brought unto her: and the reading seems not amiss. See the like defects, Jer. 51.25. Behold, I come against thee, Psal. 120.7. I am, or, stand, or, plead, for peace. See ver. 5. Howbeit, the Jewish Writers suppose here a trajection in the text; and by great waters, understand the waters of Nilus; reading the words, the seed of Nilus beside those great waters: as chap. 32.2.0. but the plainer reading seems the better.

the seed of Sihor] The grain of Egypt; and whatsoever else the land of Egypt, being watred by the river Nilus, did afford, as fine flax paper, and the like. Of which, see on ch. 19.7.9.

Sihor] Or, Shichor: as Achor, and Achab. See on chap. 1.1. This Sihor, some great ones would have to be, not Nilus; but a petty river, or brook, that ran between Palestine and Egypt, termed sometime, the brook: or, the river of the wilderness, or plain, Amos 6, 14. the same they suppose, that by sovraign Writers is called Rhinocolura; and the Greek sometime to renders it; though that in those Writers is the name not of a river, but of a town; situate indeed in the confines of Egypt and Syria, in a waste place, not far from the Sea, so called, from the condition of those that were first placed in it. For an Ethiopian King, having, as they report, sometime subdued Egypt, and finding the Kingdome much pestered with theeves and robbers, to rid the land of them, being loath yet to kill them, especially, being so many, only cut off their noses, and placed them in that Town, which there of purpose he built for them. So Strabo. lib. 16. Diodor. l. 1.c. 60. and Steven the Byzantine; Pliny also mentioneth it, l.5.c.13. and Ptolomy, l.4. nor appears it, that this Town flood upon any river of note. For Diodore writes of it, that it had no good water neer it; nor was that very good, that they had from Wells sunk within the city. Sihor therefore, (as this very place alone might suffice, were there no other argument to prove it) is no other then Nilus, as the old Latine also here renders it. For how absurd a thing were it to imagine, that either some sorry riveler, of which scarce any record, because it lay on the skirts of the country, should give the name to the whole Kingdome? as Tamesis to England: or, that the grain of Egypt should be termed the seed of some such petty brook, running along through waft places, where scarce any tillage at all could be had? Beside, that the ancient name; that the river Nilus was known by, intimates as much. For Dionyse the Geographer testifies, as also Pliny, l.9.c. 5. that by the Ethiopians it was anciently called Sirus, that is, as those inform us, who are skilled in that language, according to their manner of forming words, Shihri, or Shichri; which comes very neer to the Hebrew Shihor, or Shichor. Whence also so many names in the Egyptian tongue, of Osiris, Busiris, Petosiris, and the like: for an absurd thing it is, as Eusiathius, on the Geographer, observes, to give Greek notations of Ethiopian, or Egyptian appellations. The Hebrew name Shichor, hath a notion of blackness in it, as appears by the common use of the fountain, whence it springs; and other the issues of it, Job 30.30. Levit. 13.31 37. Can. 1.5.& 5.11. Lam. 4. 8. Zach. 6.2. 6. and the colour of its water seems to have given the river that name. Whence also, the Greeks are deemed anciently to have given it the name of Egypt, (as Eustathius observes, that Homer doth in his Odysses, l.14.) and to the land from it, (which the ancient Writers called the gift of Nilus, as producing all the lower part of it, by the inundation of the river, and the slim it brought down with it, and left there behind it, Herodot. l. 2.) and Strabo, l. 1.) not from Egyptus, a meer figment of a man, such another as Nileus; that should give Nilus his name, Diodore, lib. 1.c. 63: but from the colour of the water, resembling, not so much the Eagle, thence so called by the Latines, as the Pultur, termed Egypius in Greek. To which purpose, also, Eustathius further informs us, that it was likewise upon the same ground, anciently by the Greeks, called Melas, which signifies black: and thence, by the Latines, in old time, Melo; as Festus, and Servius, on Virgil observe: so that both the present text, terming the Egyptian wares, either growing upon the banks of Nilus, or procured, and produced, by the water thereof, bateling the Egyptian soil, the seed, and harvest of Sihor; as also the name, by the Ethiopians, given to the river; the very same, in a manner, with it; and the notation of the name concurring with those, whereby the Greeks anciently styled it: do all joyned together, strongly evince Shihor to be no other then Nilus. All that can be objected against it, is this, that the Egyptian Shihor, or the river of Egypt, is mentioned, as one of the limits of the land of promise, Num. 34.5. Josh 13. 3.& 15. 4.47. 1 Chro. 13.5. within compasse whereof the land of Egypt came not, nor did the Israelites ever possesse so far, as Nilus: To which may well be answered, first, that in like manner, is the river Euphrates recorded, as a limit of the same land, Gen. 15. 18. Deut. 1.7. & 11.24. Josh. 1.4. and yet read we not, that Gods people ever possessed, or inhabited, as least so far. Though of Solomon it is said, that: he reigned over all the Kings, from the river, (to wit, Euphrates: as Ps 72. 8.) even unto the land of the Philistims: and to the border of Egypt. 2 Chr. 9. 26. they attained not to the full extent of the boundaries by God assigned them: partly, through their own negligence and cowardise, Judg. 1.21,27-33. Psal. 10.6.34,35. and partly, through the just judgement of God, who for their transgressions and apostasies, after much of it surprized, refused to out them into further possession of it, Judg. 2. 20-23. Hereunto may be added, that when Nilus is mentioned, as a boundary of the promised land, it is not to to be understood, as if the limits thereof reached as far as the main body of that river, or any branch of it, ran: (for then it should take, in the whole lower region of Egypt: which the river Nilus, as Pliny relateth, l. 5. c. 9. branching it self into several channels doth doth on either side, by her embraces determine, but any such branch of that river, or stream, thence derived, as lay nearest unto the land of Canaan, and bounded Egypt on that side. Now the nearest main channel is that of Pelusium, as that of Canopus, the furthest: out of which a lesser stream issuing, makes the sea, or lake of Sirbonis, of a great length, and vast depth, dividing Egypt from the Edomites; that lay on the upper part of it, and the Philistines, that confined upon the lower: as Herodotus. l. 3. Strabo. l. 14. Diodore, l. 1. c. 30. Pliny, l. 5. c. 13. from whence, as Leo the African, l. 8. c. 1 testifieth, by a narrow passage, the water thereof through wast places, finds out a way to the sea: that which Brocard allo c. 6. attesteth, having been an eye-witness of it: save that following the common errour, he would have this little gut, or gutter, to be that, which is in Scripture termed Sior, and the river of Egypt. So in Scripture, Nilus should never be named; and obscure still, or drill of water, derived from it, instead of it, should; which whether it be probable, let other deem. For howsoever the river without further addition, be in way of eminency, used sometime of Euphrates, ch. 7. 20. Jer. 2. 18. as it is also of Nilus, ch. 19. 5. and in this verse; yet the name of Euphrates; is withal frequently mentioned, Gen. 2. 14. 2 King. 23. 29. & 24. 7. Jer. 13. 4. & 46. 2. & 51. 63. nor doth it seem to stand with reason to imagine, that Nilus, so famous, and so oft spoken of in Scripture, yet should not, so much as once, be therein named.

the harvest] The word harvest, is here taken in a large sense; for whatsoever, either springing out of the ground, or from such plants as grow on it, is for mans use wont to be taken, at certain times, from either. See on Chap. 17. 11. for they seem to cut out the text over-curiously, and needlessly to restrain the terms of it, who by seed, would have understood the flax alone; and by harvest, the grain.

of the river] To wit, Shihor, or Nilus, before-mentioned. For the one branch speaks the same, in effect, with the former: save that the one hath a glance, at the seed-time, and the other, at the harvest: the river, for Nilus: as Ezek. 29. 3, 9. called more fully, the river of Egypt, Amos 8. 8. & 9. 5.

is her revenue] Or, was her revenue: Whatsoever Egypt, by help of her river could afford, it was brought, as commonly, and as plentifully to her, as if it had been, both sowen, or planted, and reaped, or plucked on purpose for her use. The word is generall, for all kind of encrease, of grain, fruits, or the like, Levit. 23. 39. and 25. 23. Num. 18. 30. Deut. 14. 22. and 22. 9.

and she is a mart of Nations] Or. She was a trader with Nations. The word translated mart, signifies properly, not a mart, or market; that is, a place of trade, but trade, or traffick, or merchandise it self ver. 18. Prov. 3. 14. & 31. 18. chap. 45. 14. and some of the Hebrew Commenters, therefore, suppose a defect of a word to be supplyed, a mistresse, or owner, of trade: as, defect cannot be numbred; defect, for things of defect, or defective, Eccl. 1. 15. and spoyl, for, men or masters of spoil, spoylers, Judg. 5. 30. and fraud, for men, or masters of fraud, fraudulent persons, Pl. 109. 2. and, prey, for, men or masters, of prey: such as use to prey upon others, Prov. 23. 28. so trade, for a mistresse, or owner of trade: and mistresse, or, owner of trade, for, a trader: as, a mistresse, or, owner, of a familiar spirit, for a witch, or, a great witch, Nah. 3. 4. And thus is Tyre termed; a trader of, or, for, or, to, or with, nations: (for it may be any of these ways rendred) because she had trading not with one, or two, but abundance of several nations, far and neer, being, in regard of her situation, a most convenient place for them; and was therefore the greatest mart of the known world, in those dayes, for all manner of merchandise. Wherof, see at large, Ezek. 27. 4-25.

V. 4. Be thou ashamed, O Zidon] The denunciations in this Prophecy, are directed, and darted, as well at, and against Zidon, as Tyre: as the like is done also, Jer. 47. 4. because it was a neer neighbour to Tyre, and though it were not under the same government with it; (for it appears, that they had several Kings, Jer. 27. 2.) yet were they so linkt together in commerce and confederacy, that they seemed as one State; in regard whereof, we find them so often joyned in Scripture, Josh. 19. 28, 29. 2 Sam. 24. 6, 7. 1 Chron. 22. 4. Ezra. 3. 7. Jer. 25. 22. Joel. 3. 4. Zach. 6. 1. Mat. 11. 21. & 15. 23. Mar. 3. 8. & 7. 24, 31. Luk. 6. 17. & 10. 13. Act. 12. 20. and the fall of the one, therefore, the more principall especially, must needs prove the overthrow of the other. Howbeit, Ezekiel hath Sermon specially directed apart unto, and against Zidon, ch. 28. 20 24. severed from those severall ones, denounced against Tyre, Chap. 26. & 27. & 28. 1. 10. and vers. 10-19.

Be ashamed] Or. confounded. As Pl. 25. 2, 3 & 119. 6.

O Zidon] Heb. Tsidon. for which the Greeks and Latines have Sidon; as for Tsion, Sion, Rom. 9. 33. & 11. 26. Mat. 21. 2. This city for antiquity, was in like sylhood ancienter then Tyre; for we finde records of it, for ancienter then any of Tyre, Gen. 10. 19. & 49. 13. And it is observed by Strabo, lib. 16. that Homer makes mention of Sidon, but not of Tyre: which being at first but a smal rocky Iland, was not much regarded, until sea-trade was grown rife; and it was then observed to be a place fit to settle a mart in, for the midland seatand as fome forraign histories report, until the Sidonians, being driven out of their country by the King of Ascalon, by shipping, betook themselves unto that Iland, as a place of defence, and thereon built, and peopled it; that lay formerly waste: Justine, lib. 18. And in Joshua's time, though Tyre had the name of the strong city, Josh. 19. 29. yet had Zidon the name of the great city, Josh. 11. 8. & 19. 28. As, though far inferiour to it for strength, yet for ampli-tude, far exceeding Tyre; in regard whereof Strabo tells us, that it was questioned in his time, whether of the two should be reckoned the chief city of Phenicia; mean while they are wide, that from that epithet given to Sidon, would produce us two Sidons, a greater; and a less; as there were two Tyres, the old, and the new: and no less wide are they, who suppose that the city Sidon was so called from the store of fish that it abounded with, through the neighbourhood of the sea: affirming withall, that Sidon in the Phenician tongue, signifies a fish; Justine, lib. 18. But neither doth Sidon in that language, being of neer affinity with the Hebrew, and derived from it; signifie any such thing: nor had the city thence its name, but from Sidon, one of Canaans sons, Gen. 10. 15. 1 Chron. 1. 13. who either himself, or his issue, settled in those parts, founded that city, & called it after his name.

for the sea hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying] Sidon is brought to shame and confusion, because Tyre, of whom she before so much boasted, and upon whose trading she much depended, ver. 2. is utterly wasted and ruined, ver. 1.

the sea] The sea-coast say some, thereabout in generall: or, those that trade by sea, As ch. 60. 5. But the most, Both Jewish, & ours, suppose Tyre to be here so termed, because she was situate, as an Iland within the sea, or, in the heart of the sea, as it is, Ezek. 27. 4. & 28. 2. Or, the sea, at least bordering on it, as lamenting the devastation o Tyre, her chief port, Ezek. 26. 4, 5, 12. f the strength of the sea] Or, sea-fort, as ch. 25. 4. & 30. 3. So is Tyre termed, in regard of her situation, being both fourded upon a rock, Mat. 7. 25. and environed with the sea, See on ver. 1. And it was famous therefore for strength; as well as Sidon for greatness, Josh. 19. 28, 29. and did rule therefore, and command the sea in those parts. But of the strength of Tyre, (see Curtius, l. 4. c. 2.

I travell not, nor bring forth children; neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins] Thus is the midland sea, as some, or that part of it neer about Tyre, as other some, or, Tyre it self rather, as the most and the best, brought in, speaking by a rhetoricall frame, and sinenefs of speech; as in the person of a woman bemoaning her self, and bewailing her present condition; that hath had many children, but now either is wholly bereaft of them, nor is like ever to breed any more: or, hath as little comfort of them, and help from them, as if she never had born any. Some read the words of the text in the present tence, as our version hath them, implying, that howsoever she was plentiful in people, whom the bread up in so great abundance, that with her colonies she peopled many other places: (of which see Strabo, l. 16. Mela. l. 3. c. 6. Pliny, l. 5. c. 19. Just now she was so wasted and worn out, that she was not able to bear, or bring up, or send forth any more, like Naomi. Ruth 1. 11, 12. And this seems the plainest; and most natural sense of the place. Howbeit, others read them in the time past; and some, as spoken by way of interrogation. Have I not travelled, and brought forth children, and brought up young men, and reared up virgins? As complaining, that albeit she had so done, yet that none of them now had come in to her succour; like that of Jerusalem, of all the sons that she had brought forth, and brought up, there is never a one to take her by the hand, ch. 51. 18. And this, fay they, is that, which Sidon is willed to be ashamed of: that she had not offered her self, to the relief of her mother city: but Tyre was indeed rather a daughter of Sidon, then Sidon daughter to Tyre. Others conceive the words spoken, in an optative form and sense: as wishing, that she had rather been alwaies barren, and had never bred or brought forth any: then to breed and bring up children: either for her self, to see the destruction of them, or for them to see her dreadfull and shameful ruine. See Hos. 9. 11, 14. where Tyre and Ephraim are compared together: but this sense, how the letter will well bear, I see not: And others lastly, (to omit all others,) as lamenting her calamitous condition; being as one that had never born, or brought up any children, her people and inhabitants being slain and destroyed, either in the siege, or in the surprizal of the city: of whom what havock was by Alexander made in his rage, after he had taken the city; partly, for the long stay they had put him to in the siege; and partly, for their barbarous breach, of the law of nations, in murdering his Embassadors, and throwing their bodies in contempe into the sea (the violation whereof, so much incensed David against the Ammonites, 2 Sam. 10. 4. & 12. 31.) See Curtius, l. 4. c. 4. See also concerning Nebuchadnezzors dealing with Tyre, (who might likewise be the more enraged against it, because he had spent thirteen years in the siege of it, as Joseph. the Jew, out of the Phenician records against Appion, l. 1.) Ezek. 26, 6, 8, 11, 15. & 27. 34. and foe of Babylon. ch. 47. 7, 8.

I travell not, nor bring forth children] Cities are in Scripture resembled to teeming women, ch. 47. 8, 9. & 49. 19, 21. & 51. 18. & 54. 1. 3. & 66. 4, 5. & 66. 7, 8.

neither do I nourish up young men] Heb. greaten: that is, bring up, till they are grown great (as ch. 1. 2. & 49. 21. & 51. 18.) choice young men. See ch. 9. 17. & 40. 30.

nor brought up virgins] Either reared them up to womans state, till till grown up to height, and made fit for marriage, as of young men the like, in another word before, having in it a notion of greatness, Psal. 144. 12. as this of height, Ezek 31. 5. and so the same thing, though in divers notions should be said of either; or, advanced them, as the word is most commonly used, 1 Sam. 2. 7. Job 17. 4. Psal. 37. 34. Prov. 4. 8. To wit, by giving or placing them out in marriage; that which with our English phrase well accordeth. Both the words, this and the former, are together found, Ezek. 31. 4. and before here, chap. 1. 2. See there. A large illue cannot be atchieved, unless children be as well brought up to maturity and ripness of growth, as before that, bred and born; nor, the-se of the sexual sex especially, in an honest and delireable way, but by advancement of them in marriage; that which it may be is alluded unto, the rather, by the Prophet in these words, because, perhaps broken in their estates, have not now, those means and abilities to prefer their daughters, that formerly they might have had: So it is, as if Tyre had said, I am not able now to breed children, to bring up sons, or to prefer daughters, as I had formerly wont to do. The particle, as well negative as copulative, is in this branch wanting, to be supplyed from the former, as Pl. 9. 18. ch. 28. 28.

V. 5. As at the report concerning Egypt, so shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre] A second effect of the overthrow of Tyre, in regard of others, neighbouring persons and people: to wit, that as her allies and affociates were before smitten with extream sorrow and shame, in regard of the loss and dammage they sustained in their wealth and state, by her fall, Ezek. 27. 34. ver. 1. 4. So both they alfo, and others beside them, should be surprized with sore fear and pain; as not without cause, misdoubting that their turn might be next, at least, they could not sit sure, or be safe, when a place deemed so impregnable, as that, was pulled down. See Ch. 19. 7. Some restrain this effect of Tyres fall, to Egypt only: thus reading the text, when the report (to wit, of the fal of Tyre, came to Aegypt they, that is the Egyptians, were sorely pained, or, much affrighted at the report of Tyre (at the hearing of her downfal:) or according to the report of Tyre, that is, according to the fear and amazement that the Tyrians were surprized with, when they heard of Nebechadnezzars comming against them. The Egyptians, say they, were much amazed and troubled upon the tydings brought them, how it had fared with Tyre; partly, in regard they had much merchandife there; which must of necessity miscarry; and partly, because that black being removed, that lay in the Assyrian, or Chaldean kings way, he should now have freer passage, and readdier access into Egypt; and the particle translated, as, doth sometime also signifie when, or, as soon as, as it is rendred, Josh. 2. 7. and for the defect of the verb, see on ver. 3. And this reading, besides some of the Jewish Commenters, the ancient Greek, and old Latine have, whom many ours also follow: But the effect here mentioned, seems to be more general, as it is alfo by Ezekiel at lang related, Ezek. 26, 15, 18. & 27. 35. To wit, that as the fall of Egypt, or, the overthrow given the Egyptians, did terrifie and affright many neighbour nations; yea, fo many as came to the hearing of it; so should the fall of Tyre affright and astonish those, unto whom the report of it should come. Now against this version and exposition, the only objection is, that by Nebuchadnezzar Tyre was destroyed, before Egypt: as appears, Ezek. 29. 18. 20. To which (besides what might be returned, that it is not so clear; at what time, or by whom, the judgment here denounced, was upon Tyre inflicted;) answer is two wayes returned; First, by some granting it to be spoken of the destruction of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar; that as other people should be affrighted at the fall of Egypt, when it should come: so should others also be, at the fal of this strong city. Secondly, by others it is answered, that what is spoken here concerning Egypt, hath reference, not to that conquest of Egypt by the Chaldeans, but to an over-turning of it, fay some, about Essays time, by the Assyrians, of which see on ver. 1. Or, as others, stiffing far higher, to the fearful judgments inflicted from God, on Egypt by the ministry of Moses, that ended in the destruction of Pharaoh, and all his forces, in the red sea; the report whereof is said to have struck fear, and dread, pain, trembling, and amazement, in the Edomites, Moabites, Philistines, Canaanites, and other people round about, Exod. 15. 14-16. Josh. 2. 9. 11. And this latter way, go the greater part of the Jewish Commenters, who yet some of them, fondly & needlessly busie their brains, in paralleling the ten plagues of Egypt, with those things that befel Tyre, See ver. 11.

As at the report concerning Egypt] The particle as, is wanting, to be supplyed, as Pl. 18. 44. the report. Heb. hearing, as ch. 53. 11. concerning Egypt; as the particle is used, chap. 8. 12. There was much affrightment; or, men were much affrighted, is to be supplyed in this branch, from the next: as in the like speech, the one branch is oft made up by the other, See Job 24. 19. Prov. 9. 7. & 13. 12, 21. Chap. 13. 13. & 18. 7.

so shall they be sorely pained] The note of similitude is wanting, as oft in the latter part of similitudes. See Prov. 25. 12. & 26. 11.

sorely pained] The word properly signifies womens travel, wherein trembling and pain concur, Pl. 48. 6. See chap. 13. 8. The verb is indefinitely here used; they shall be in pain, that is, there shall be much pain, or, men shall be much pained. See on Chapter 2. 19.

at the report of Tyre] Or. according to, as the particle ordinarily signifies. Ch. 1. 7. & 8. 20. & 10. 26. but here rather, as our English reads it.

V. 6. Pass ye over to Tarshish, howl ye inhabitants of the Ile] Whom these words are spoken to, Interpreters are not agreed on. Some conceive them spoken all to those, that had trade and traffick with Tyre: expounding them, ye that carry the tidings of Tyres fall, get ye over beyond the sea; and ye in the Ilands, and elsewhere, that had dealings with her, lament for her, upon the hearing of it. Or, ye Egyptians, and others, that had wont to haunt Tyre, run now over to Tarshish, or Tarsus, and mourn for your losses finished at Tyre, by your wares there surprized, and your trade there at an end, Ezek. 28. 17. Other suppose them to be spoken to the Tyrians themselves, either in whole, or in part, by this kind of speech insinuating what should befall them; as before the like, ver. 1, 2. To wit, either that they should betake themselves to the sea, and by help of their shipping seek places of harbour, and shelter, elsewhere abroad; to which purpose some relate, that in the time of their siege (but by whom say not, they) sent away many of their people to Carthage: or, as others, and to the Chaldee Paraphrast, that they should be carried away captive by the enemy, into transmarine parts, which sorts well with what follows after, ver. 7. nor need we divert from them, to any other, the latter branch of the verse; as if the inhabitants of some other Ilands, which they either pasted to, or passed by, in that manner, should howl for them, as the ships of Tarshish are said to do, ver. 1. when as this their transmigration, would undoubtedly minister matter enough of howling and lamenting, as well, if not much more, unto themselves; as unto others and that they were before here called, the inhabitants of the Ile: to which Tyre stood; whereof, and why it was so called, See on ver. 2. 10.

V. 7. Is this your joyous city? whose antiquity is of ancient days? her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn] The Prophets words insulting over Tyre, and in bitter manner upbraiding the Tyrians, for their vain conceit, and presumptuous vaunting of and confidence in their city, as well the pomp and pleasure, as the antiquities of it; as if having continued so long, in so prosperous and flourishing a condition; she were now past all hazard, or fear of any change; whereas now they might see her in a very mean and sorry condition, compelled to travel on foot, far, at the pleasure of those, in whose hands she was fallen.

your joyous city] Heb. a joyous, or revelling one, unto you, or with you: for city is not in the text, no more then in the next verse, nor ver. 11. yet may well be supplyed, for so it Jerusalem styled a joyous city, Ch. 22. 2. which one of the Jewish Commenters paralleleth here with that, Psal. 48. 2. the joy of the whole earth; as if the meaning were, the city, that you may all the country over glory of, and rejoyce in. But I suppose, well weighing the Prophets words, and his wonted manner of speech, it will appear, that he speaks rather of the city, as of a stately and lascivious Lady, that lives in all manner of bravery, & jollity: Is this your jolly, or revelling Lady, as ye accounted her, that lived in so great plenty & excess? See of Babel, ch. 47. 1, 5, 8. and of Tyre, and her jollity, Ezek. 26. 13. as also of Sidon, ver. 12.

Whose antiquity is of ancient days] Heb. from days before, or days of antiquity, as ch. 23. 6. For the antiquity of Tyre, Joleph the Jew tels us in his antiquities, l. 8. c. 3. that it was built two hundred and forty years before Solomons Temple, that should be about Gideons time. Justine goeth higher, lib. 18. and saith, it was built by Agenor, the Phenician Cadmus his father, and that should be about Joshuah's time; and so for, we are sure of its antiquity: for we find it standing, a strong city in his days, Josh. 19. 29. and how long before it had stood, we know not. For, as for the fables of Annius, his counterfeit Berosus, who l. 5. tels us, that Tyrus (the son of Japher, Gen. 10. 2.) built Tyre, and so brings the founding of it very neer up to the Flood: We give as much credit to them, as to the tale, that the Tyrian Priests told Herodote, as himselfe reports, lib. 2. that their Town had then stood no less then two thouland and three hundred years, & so carry it up above the Flood. But of great antiquity it was, doubtelesly for we have infallible record of about seven hundred and forty years past, when it was found built and a place of special note, before the time of this Prophecy: but a fond thing it was therefore, thence to conceive, that it must need s stand, and continue in that flaunting and flourishing condition, that she had formerly enjoyed. See ver. 13. So Babel. I shall sit as a Lady for ever, Chapter 47. 7, 8.

Her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.] An elegant description of one of the weaker Sex, having lived plentifully, daintily and deliciously: but now led captive into a far country, to live there in a forry and servile condition. She shall not now, as heretofore (like some gallant nice Lady, that out of state and delicacy either feorneth, or will not adventure to set the sole of her foot once to the ground, Deut. 28. 56 (be carryed in her Coach, or Litter: or, to the ground, Deut. 28. 56 (be carryed in her Coach, or Litter: or, or Chaldea, or some of their Provinces: not there to rest, or have any place of setled abode: but to sojourn there as a stranger, in slavery, hurried to and fro,at the will and pleasure of those that have power over her.See of Babel,ch.47. 2.

V.8. who hath taken this counsell against Tyre,the crowning City?] This demand is made in way of admiration,as by some wondring, who either could endure to plot,or put in execution,such a design, against so noble and gallant a City as Tyre was; or was able to effect it,against a place of that inpregnable strength, in which she had so long continued,ver.7.

taken this counsell]Heb.consulted this, that is, contrived it,as ch. 7.5.or,devised it,ch.32.7.or,purposed it, as ch.19.12.or,resolved it, as 2 Chron.25.16.chap.14.27.or, (Which I conceive to be fittest here)taken this course,as Hab.2.10.thou hast taken a course to bring shame to thine house,for all these being the wonted effects,and consequents of counsel,are oft contained respectively under that term; or,are taken in, together with it, so the word, to consult, is frequently used,for,by or upon consultation, that is, counsel given, and taken,to contrive,devise,purpose,resolve,take a course.(Of which manner of speech,see on chap.14,12. and 22,18.)nor is the term of consulting in this notion unusual, as well in other learned languages, as in the Hebrew;for so both in Greek and Latine one is said to have consulted well or ill for himself, when the meaning is, that he hath taken some course, either behoovful, or prejudicial to himself:which being not observed,hath caused a mis-understanding of a proverbial verse, used both in Greek and Latine,whereby, as it is commonly taken,should be said,that evil counsel is worst to the Counsellor, or him that giveth it;whereas the right meaning of it is, that evil courses,or contrivements,are worst to the contrivers,to him, or those,that contrive them,and take them,as Ps.5.10.& 7.15,16.& 9.15, 16.in the first of which places, the word counsel is also found thus used.

The crowning City]Heb.the crowning,or crowned one:for the word City, as before,ver.7.is not in the text:But so is Tyre termed, either as a stately Princess(being a royal City,Jer.25.22.& 27.3.)wearing a goodly rich Crown,Ezek 27.3.& 28.12-14.or,as one that crowneth her followers,and favourites,her merchants, and inhabitants, with wealth and state,Ezek.27.33.

Whose Merchants are Princes, whose trafickers are the honourable of the earth]With whom Kings,Princes,and great Potentates trade; or,that makes those that trade under her,and with her,as rich,and as great as Princes,Ezek.37.21 33.See the Assyrian vaunts,ch.10.8. and of Babylon,Rev.17.2.& 18.3.Cineas one of King Pyrrhus his counsel,said of the Romane Senate, it was a Counsel of Kings. Plutarch in the life of Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus himself of Rome, that it was a City of Kings:Jerome on this place.

V.9.The Lord of Hosts hath purposed it.]An answer to the former demand,ver.8. declaring not onely who it is that hath contrived, resolved upon, and put in execution this design ; (for the Prophet speaks constantly of the overthrow of Tyre , as of a thing already done)but the end, and aym also that he had in so doing ; to pull down the pride and insolency both of Tyre, and of other great States and Persons,that were grown to a great height of haughtiness,the sin,that God most abhors, and can worst brook,Ps.138.6. Prov.3.34.& 6 16,17.ch.2 12-17.Jam.4.6.1 Pet.5 5.

hath purposed it]Heb.consulted it.See ver.8.and his counsell shall stand,Ps.33.11.ch.14.24.26, 27.

to stain the pride of all glory]to stain, or pollute,by pulling down, or throwing down, as some polluted and filthy thing ; to throw it down,as such, or by throwing down, to make it such, when it shall come to be trodden upon,and trampled under foot;so Psal. 89.30. 44.chap.14.12,19.and of Tyre,Ezek.27.16, 17. and 28. 7.in both which places,the same word is used.

the pride of all glory]The word translated pride,signifies first excellency,chap.4.2.then pride,or insolency, ch.13.11. because the one riseth usually from the other:the latter,beauty,lovliness,such as pleaseth the eye,or the eye is wont to be taken with, as Gen.3.6. Ezek. 24.16,21.1 Joh.2.16. of the word; see on ch.4. 2. All such goodly state, as people are wont to pride themselves in : And Tyre is principally taxed for her pride,Ezek.27.3.& 28.2.5,12,13.

and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth] Heb. to make light,properly.1 King.12.4.Jon.1.5. then to set light by,to contemn,Ezek.22.7.or,to cause to be set light by, to make contemptible, to bring into contempt,1 Sam.2.30.See Job 12. 21.Ps. 107.40. Mal. 2. 9.

all the honourable of the earth]or,of the Land,as ver.10.and chap. 5.8.and 9.19.either those of Tyre,and within her territory;as some; or more largely and generally,of a great part of the known world; as others : which the subject matter of the next chapter seems to confirm : And indeed by the Assyrian was much done to that purpose,much about this time,chap.10.9,10.14.& 36.18-20. as after, the like by the Chaldeans.Jer.27.3.8. there is in the Hebrew an elegant antithesis,between light,and weighty;as if he had said. God is resolved to make light, or to bring into light account, all that bear weight in the world:for that the word properly imports. See ch. 3. 5.

V.10. Pass through thy Land,as a river,O daughter of Tharshish] These words some take, as spoken to the Tyrians, or Inhabitants of Tyre advising them with all possible speed,to quit their Country, and to betake themselves to some other place for safety, or implying,as some would have it, that they should pass away before the enemy into captivity. Others rather conceive them, to be spoken to the multitude of Merchants, or traders by Sea, whether of Tarsus, Tartessus,or other places,that had dealings at Tyre,to withdraw them selves from thence,& betake themselves to their own homes. See before on ver. 6.

Pass through thy Land]Or. from thy Land. So those that understand it of the Tyrians,either fugitives or captives : against which is objected,that the particle from, which is not here in the text, is never omitted, where mention is of motion, from place to place; to which may be returned : First, that in somewhat the like passages, as this,it is sometime suppressed, as chap. 18. 7. and 52.2. And again, that the particle from is not of necessity here:through, which our English version hath, will suffice, and is sometime omitted, as Chap.47.2.Jer.2. 10.and lastly,that it may be simply rendred without either. Pass,or Pass over thy Land,like a river.Make no stay in it:for the word of Pass,in this Notion, of a motion from place to place, doth frequently admit an accusative case attending it, Gen. 32.31. Num.35.10.Deut.2.4.the note whereof,is very commonly omitted. But others supposing the text not to speak of the Tyrians at all,but of those that traded with them,render it, Pass away,or depart,or return to your own land,go back to your own Country,as Num. 22.26. Josh.6.7.1 Sam.27.2.2 Sam 16.9. the particle to, or unto being oft times concealed as Exod.4.19.and 10.29.1 Sam.20.6.Jer.20.6.See ver. 1.

as a river] By this some understand, a swift, hasty, and speedy flight,alluding to the current of rivers, or land-floods, that falling by steep passages;from higher grounds, run with a swift and strong stream,chap.59.19.Amos 5.24.or, as a river that doth not stop, or stay, but runs on without intermission until it arrive at the Sea, Eccl.1.7. Others conceive it, to intimate the flight of multitudes (understanding it of those that traded at Tyre) as in flocks, or sholes, in their passage over-spreading the Seas; because the term of a river,is used in Scripture;as also,in other Authors,to note abundance, and plenty,chap. 8. 7. and 48. 18. and the word here used,is not a word that is general,common to all rivers; but peculiar to Nilus, the river of Egypt, (which one of the Jewish Doctors supposeth to be here intended) used of the main body of it, in the singular form,Gen.41.1,2,&c.Exod. 1.22.and 2.3. and 4.9.and 7. 15.&c.and 8.5,7.and 17.5.chap.19.7,8.ver.3.Jer.46.7, 8.Ezek.29. 3,9.Amos 8.8.and 9.5.Zach.10. 11.of the many streams of it,in the plural,Exod.7.19.and 8.8.Psal.78.44.Chap.7.18. and 19. 6. Ezek. 29.3.&c.and 30.12. Now Nilus, though it rise high, and with abundance of water over-spread the Land, Jer.46. 8.Amos 8.8.and 9.5.yet it runs not swiftly,but gently and smoothly,as Pliny, l.5. c 8.Howbeit,all this hindreth not, but that the phrase here may have a notion of speed,and haste,as well as of sholes & multitudes: Since that it is found used in the one notion,as well as in the other :nor is the word here used so peculiar to Nilus, but that it is used also, of other rivers and streams,as well in the singular form, Dan.12,5. 7. as in the plural,Job 28.10.2 King. 19.24. chap.33.21.and 36. 25. nor doth Nilus wholly run so, either slowly or quietly;but as is generally well known,with much violence,and exceeding swiftness in some places, at its falls especially, as Pliny in the same place relateth ; who saith onely, that as it comes down lower, where it finds more freedom, as wearied with its long passage, by so many, turnings and windings:at length it runs more calmly, and quietly then before it did.As for those,that render the words,pass through thy country,as men pass over a river;or, as a shallow brook that men pass over on foot:they carry little shew of probability with them,& I forbear therefore to insist on them.

O daughter of Tarshish]By this circumlocution, some understand Tyre, or the Inhabitants of it, (for the place is put commonly for those that therein abide.See chap.1.27.)called the daughter of Tarshish;that is,of the main Sea,or the Ocean,because scituate in the Sea maintained by the Sea,and the famousest Sea-town, and mart, for Sea-traffick,in all those parts. See on ver.1,2,6,7.Others, Tarsus, or Tartessus(the daughter:whether Tarsus, or Tartessus,or of Tarsus, or Tartessus,for Tarsus,or Tartessus it self, as the like,ver.12.)as if the Tyrians were advised to flee thither, leaving their own Land, the particle to or unto,being,though suppressed,yet to be supplyed,as before.But against this,is objected.that where this form or metaphor of daughter is used;there.not so much the place it self,as the people, or persons,there residing or inhabiting,is implyed;which yet,it may be, need to be no bar to this exposition of the place; since that as well to the people of a place,as to the place it self, men may betake themselves for refuge.But others conceive it to signifie the shipping that used to Tyre,the daughter of Tarshish, that is, the ships of Tarshish,as ver.1.ships in Heathen Authors also being called Virgins,or Damsels of the Sea;or the Merchants that had trading at Tyre, so stiled, either as some, from the principal place, that they belonged unto:whether Tarsus,or Tartessus;put here,to comprehend under its name,all places, whence any repaired to Tyre for traffick:or as other some,from the main Sea,the midland especially,on which, their places of abode lay,and by which they traded to and-fro.

there is no more strength] The reason, why either the Tyrians should quit their country, or forraign people should leave them; to wit, because there was no place of shelter , or means of protection, and safety there,either for the one,or the other. See Ezek.26.4.ver.

strength]Heb.girdle.as Psal.109.19.where only,and in this place, it is in this form found; and in another, Job 12.21. by it,is understood,either the wall and rampire of Tyre,wherewith the City was begirt,ver.4.but now gone,ver.11.or her former might and power, whether by fortifications within her, or the Sea about her, or her shipping,or her Souldiery,or any other means whatsoever, now utterly impaired, ver.4. the girdle being an usuall emblem of might and strength, Job.38. 3. chap.11.5. and 22.21.in particular,some from the Chaldee Paraphrast, would have the girdle here mentioned to be their Souldiery, because the military belt, or girdle, was a badg of that profession, 2 Sam. 20. 8.Psal.45.3. Others,the Sea, wherewith it was begirt, until the enemy besieging it, by strange devices, and stupendious works, joyned the Ile it stood on to the Continent,thereby to render it assailable from the shore : whereof see Curtius,l.4.c.3.4.and Pliny,l.5.c.19.but these two latter,though somewhat farfetcht, yet without any such straining of the word, do of themselves, fall within compass of the former ; for, as for their interpretation,it seems to me over-poor,and slender,(though some of good note mislike it not)who taking the word girdle,in its native notion;because they find girdles among other petty comodities,that Merchants sometime trade in,Prov.31.24. would have the meaning to be,that Tyre had been so rifled,and her wares so plundred, and swept clean away,that there was not so much as a girdle left in her.

V.11. He stretched out his hand over the Sea, he shook the Kingdoms]Or.He hath stretched out his hand over the Sea, and shaken the Kingdoms. The Prophet returneth again, after the former digression,or interjection,conceived as in way of advice, ver. 10.to shew who it was, that had both contrived, and brought about that design against Tyre,ver.8,9.or to fasten the words of this verse to that that went next before,unto the very close of ver. 10. he renders a reason,why Tyre was not able to retain her wonted strength,or to afford shelter,and safeguard any more, either to others,or her own, because the Lord hath lift up his hand against her,& the other States and Kingdoms thereabouts;and hath set out, and sent against her military forces, to make an end of her.

He]that is,the Lord, to be supplyed from ver.9. or from the next branch.See the like,Hos.13.9,10.

stretched out his hand over the Sea]or against the Sea; as Ezek.16. 27.that is,against Tyre,lay some, scituate within the Sea, as ver. 4. or against the Ilands and Provinces bordering upon the Sea; to strike at her,or them,or both,and to destroy either;as Jer.15.6. and 51.27.Ezek.6.14.& 14.9.& 16.27.& 25.7.& 35. 3. And who can stay,or turn back his hand?ch.14.27.Dan.4.35.Howbeit,there seems to be an allusion to Gods hand, that was sometime stretched, or held out over the red Sea, when as Pharao; and his forces, were therein drowned and destroyed,Exod.14.26,27.& 15.6.12. alluded to also,ch.10.26.& 11. 15. though I concur not with those of the Jewish Commenters, or others, who suppose that story to be here intended,as produced to shew,that God was as well able to destroy Tyre, and her allies, now,as he was to destroy Pharao, and other great ones,then.See ver.13.

He shook the Kingdoms] or made them quake;as Deut. 28. 65. 1 Sam.14.15.Hab.3.7.16.or as some render it, he raised up, or moved the Kingdoms:as chap.14.9.which they expound of Gods stirring up Nebuchadnezzar, and the Kings,or Princes, of the Provinces under him,to come against Tyre,Ezek.26.7.12. But the word here used,is no where found to signifie such a moving, or gathering together, as this exposition implies,but such a shaking,as is joyned with trembling, and terrour,Deut.2.25.chap.32.11.Jer.33.9.Joel.2.10. Jer. 50.36. or such a moving,as is joyned with removing, Job 9.6.2 Sam.7.10. 1 Chr.17.9. not unlike that shaking,spoken of Hag.2.21,22.Heb.12. 26,27. The Kingdoms therefore here spoken of, are either the Kingdoms of Tyre and Sidon, and those other on the Sea coasts, that God had shaken and shattered, whether by the Assyrian, or the Chaldean.ver.1,12. for Tyre and Sydon were two Kingdomes, Jer. 37. 3. beside that they may both seem to have had inferiour Kingdoms, or Provinces, also under them. Jer.25.22.and the Prophet speaks of these things,as past,and done.See on ver. 3, 4,5. or they are rather, as some other, those kingdoms and provinces that were made to tremble,and shake, being stricken with fear & terrour, at the fall of Tyre.So Ezek.26.15.18. then which, no other Commentary needs on this place. And,howsoever I take it to be no relation,as some would have it,of what God did for his,either in Canaan,Josh.12.7.-24.or in their way to Canaan, after they had passed the red Sea,Josh. 12. 1.-6. in shaking the Kingdoms on either side Jordan : yet I suppose there is an allusion unto the stories of those times ; and withal, as to the dreadful Earth-quakes, and shakings of the Mountains,that seem to have accompanied some of those things then done;(See Psal.77.16.-18.& 114.4.Hab.3.6,10.) so to the fear and terrour, that upon the same, surprized the Kingdoms & Countries about them,Exod.15.14.16.Josh.2.9.11.See v.5.

the Lord hath given a Commandement against the Merchant City, to destroy the strong holds thereof] Or. the Lord gave because the charge, in course of carriage,preceeds the execution of the thing given in charge;it is the Lord of Hosts,ver. 9. that set his Souldiery, whether Assyrians, or Chaldeans,on work to do it; and therefore it could not but be done,ch.14.27.and 55.11.

given a Commandment]Heb. commanded, or charged: a military term,as we also use it; whence the term of a Commander, and it importeth,by a kind of Zeugmatical form, a sending of forces with a charge.So Amos 6. 11.& 9 3,4.9. Some of which places are not so clearly rendred through want of this observation. The consultation, as at a counsel of war,and resolution upon it,was before,ver.9.now there is a commission given out, for the putting of it in execution, and a mission of forces,with a strict charge to effect it:so ch.10.6.& 13. 3.

against]Heb.unto;as Jer.51.3.or concerning; as Jer.22.11.but used also for against,as Est.7.7.

the Merchant City]the word City,is not in the text, ver.7,8. The term used here,rendred Merchant,is Canaan,(whereof see chap. 19. 18.)which some therefore retain,rendring the words, against Canaan;yet by Canaan,understanding Tyre,as so termed, because it stood within the compass of the country that was commonly called, and known by that name,Psal.150 11.& 135.11. and fell by lot to the Tribe of Judah,Josh.19.29.see Mat.15.21.22.or more generally,the reliques of the Canaanites, abiding in Tyre, and Sidon, and the Coasts thereabout.But it is by others rather deemed here to signifie, as we render it,a Merchant; for because the Phenicians, or Canaanites(compare Mat.15.25.with Mar.7.26.) were their Land lying fit for Navigation,much addicted to merchandize: hence it came to pass,that the word Canaan was used for a Merchant: so it is taken, Hos.12.7.Job 41.6.V.8.and Tyre is so termed here;because a principal place for mart,and market for merchandize and merchants: see on ver.2,3, 8.

the strong holds thereof] The strength of this place, how great and extraordinary it was, may appear by the long and sore pains, that it put Alexander and his whole Army to, ere he could be master of it : whereof see Curtius,l.4.c.2,3,24. And this the Prophet to express, seems to have coyned a new word, nowhere else found, but here;and drawn it out in length longer then any, from the same root;as if one should say,with us, her strengthednesses, or her fortificationnesses.

V.12. And he hath said,Thou shalt no more rejoice,O thou oppressed virgin,daughter of Zidon]Or.He hath also said,as ch.8. 8.& 22.9. because the Prophet turneth his speech from Tyre to Sidon,fore-telling her overthrow,together with Tyres:see Ezek.38. 21.Jer.47.4. Joel 3. 4.

He]the Lord,ver.11.

hath said] hath passed this doom or sentence upon thee, as chap. 15. 14.

thou shalt no more rejoice.]Heb. thou shalt no longer add(as ch.1. 13.& 7.10.)to exult, or to revel;to wit, as formerly thou wast wont to do,& as Tyre thy daughter did,ver.7. yet no more,or no longer,rather(because that solves the ambiguity)doth not intend a perpetuity,but an intermission,or intercision, for the present; or for some space of time,at most, as some of the Jewish-writers well observe, pointing us to the like forms,2 King.6.23.prov.31.7.for it is not unlikely, that as Sidon fell together with Tyre,so with Tyre she also rose,and recovered again:see ver.17.

O thou oppressed]Or.O thou grievously oppressed;for the word is in that form, that aggravateth the simple notion of the theam, in which form the same is no where found,but here only;and our Prophet is in his terms very pregnant and precise.This some suppose spoken,in regard of the dammage that the Sidonian-merchants should sustain by loss of their wares remaining at Tyre, when it was taken by the enemy but it seems to imply much more then so;no less,then the like surprizal,and sacking also of their own city : as Ezek.28. 22,23.Some suppose that there is in the word an allusion to a Virgin,or Damsel,forced and ravished,Deut.22.25.2 Sam.13. 14. and this suits not amiss with the term here given to that State, or City;nor is it unusual,that such things are over-frequently acted in the surprizal of such places,Lam.5.11.but I find not the word any where so used,or applyed.

Virgin daughter of Zidon]or Damsel, Daughter Sidon. By Virgin, Daughter of Zidon, most of our Interpreters here understand Tyre, so called, say they, because founded at first by those of Sidon; as Justine,l 18.see on ver.4. Whom I should willingly assent unto;did I not observe the constant tenour of Scripture in forms of this kind,concerning States,and Cities,without exception, running perpetually another way;which therefore induceth,or enforceth me rather,to go with these,though fewer,Jewish Writers, and ours, who conceive not Tyre,but Sidon it self here intended,called a Virgin, or Damsel ; (for the word seems to be taken sometime not so strictly,as Joel.1.8.)either because she had hitherto continued untouched,unsubdued,unacquainted with any yoke of servitude, or any such grievous pressures as now she sustained; or because,for state and beauty, she was like to some young beautiful Damsel of noble parentage,daintily brought up, and living at ease and in pleasure; Daughter of Sidon.for Sidon it self; as Daughter of Sion, for Sion it self:see on chap.1.8.and Virgin,or Damsel,Daughter of Sidon;as Virgin,or Damsell,Daughter of Sion, chap.37.22.and Virgin,or Damsel, Daughter of Babel,ch.47.1.and Virgin,or Damsel,Daughter of Egypt, Jer.46.11.where it may be observed,that the word Virgin,or Damsel, in such phrases,is constantly in a contract form,and hath in a way of regiment therefore,a reference , as well as the word daughter, unto the noun following both of them;which I find no Grammarians to have taken,or given notice of,by any rule for the like : and as

*D*aughter apart, so is Virgin, or Damsel found apart, in this manner of speech; for so we read the Virgin, or Damsel of Israel, Jer. 18. 13. and 31.4,21. Amos 5.2. in which frame of speech, the Virgin of Israel, is not to be understood as a Virgin of Israel, Deut. 22.19. that is, an Israelitish virgin, or a virgin that is some Israelites daughter, though the terms be just the same; but by the virgin Israel, is to be understood, Israel the virgin, or the virgin Israel, as by the City of London, the city London; or, London the city. And it would further be observed, that these kind of forms, the virgin, or Damsel, or Daughter of Sidon, Sion, Judah, Israel, Jerusalem, Moab, Edom, Egypt, and the like are not found, but in the poetical and prophetical books of Scripture; or where something of either nature is inserted into the story.

arise, pass over to Chittim] The like advice is here given to the Sidonians, that was before to the Tarteſſians, or Tarſenſes, as ſome; to the Tyrians, as others, ver. 10.

ariſe] This term doth not alwaies imply any particular preſent poſture of body to be changed: as ſitting, lying along, or the like: but it imports only, a ſpeedy and ſedulous addreſſing of ones ſelf without delay, and ſetting all other buſineſſe aſide, unto ſome ſpecial act, or work, employment, or journey, that he was not at, or on before, Gen. 13. 17. and 19. 15. and 27. 19. Jon. 1. 2. Mic. 4. 13.

paſſe over to Chittim] Leave Tyre, ſay ſome, for there is no more mart, or market, for thee there, and ſeek out ſome other place for thee to trade in: or, as others rather, leave thine own place and ſeat, and ſeek thee ſome place of ſhelter, and harbour elſe-where: the particle to, is wanting, as oft elſe-where: ſee on ver. 10. But ſome read the words, as ſpoken to Chittini, and the ſame advice given it, that was given Sidon before: O Chittim, ariſe, and paſs, or depart: and the order of the words, as they lye in the Original, ſeem to favour this Interpretation: but the former I ſuppoſe to be genuine, and more agreeable to the tenour of the context: of Chittim, ſee on ver. 1.

there alſo ſhalt thou have no reſt] Having no aſſurance of ſafety any where, as Deut. 28.65,66. either the enemies ſword purſuing them, and following them whithertowever they flee, which ſome ſuppoſe ſhadowed before by the ſimilitude of a river, that finds no place of reſt any where, till it come to the Sea, ver. 10. See the like, Lev. 26.33,36-38. Jer. 41.2.14-17. or the enemy every way, and on every ſide ſo prevailing, that no ſure place of ſuccour, or ſhelter, can any where be had: ſo Jer. 25. 15,-26. and 27. 6,-8. and 43.10, 11. A learned Authour underſtands it, of the deportation of them unto Babylon, and other Countries thereabout, Ciſſia, or Suſiana among the reſt; where yet they ſhould not long be at reſt, in regard of the Medes invading theſe parts. See on ver. 8.

V. 13. Behold the land of the Chaldeans: this people was not, till the Aſſyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderneſs.] The ſcope of the Prophet in theſe words, by divers diverſly expounded, ſeems to be, to meet with an objection; or to remove a doubt at leaſt, that many might make, or have, againſt the verity, or concerning the certainty of that that is here denounced againſt Tyre and Sidon, as deeming it a thing, conſidering the preſent ſtate and ſtrength of them, if not utterly impoſſible, yet almoſt incredible, that they ſhould be by any other people or power thus deſtroyed. This therefore the Prophet ſheweth, to be no ſuch, either impoſſible, or incredible matter: either by pointing at thoſe, by whom it ſhould be done, a people of more antiquity, and greater power then themſelves, and that had been the firſt founders of them, and their ſtate, as ſome; or as others, rather, by telling them of other States, to wit, the Chaldeans, or Aſſyrians, or both, which being far more ample and potent then theirs; yet had either the one by the other, or either of them, by ſome other, in like manner been deſtroyed: ſee either of them, by ſome other, in like manner been deſtroyed: ſee the like, Ezek. 31. 3,——3. Amos 6.2. But that learned Author, of whom, on ver. 12. ſuppoſeth this to be ſubjoyned, as rendring a reaſon, why in Chaldea they ſhould not be long quiet, being that that Land, alſo, God had devoted to deſtruction, chap. 13.& 14.

Behold the Land of the Chaldeans] This ſome underſtand of Tyre, as affirming it to have been ſometime the Chaldeans; who, as they at firſt founded and peopled it, ſo now come to deſtroy it: Others, rather, of Chaldea, or the Chaldeans by whom Babylon, and Nineveh, were then poſſeſſed, though not the firſt founders, or owners of them; and that, for all their greatneſs, were to be deſtroyed by the Medes and Perſians, ch. 13.& 14. Jer. 50.& 51.

this people was not] The Tyrians, ſay ſome, were neither ſo ample, nor ſo ancient a people, as the Chaldeans, or Aſſyrians, whom they ſuppoſe to be here the ſame; But the moſt go another way, or other ways rather: Some, the Chaldeans were not a people of any great note, or name, at firſt: See of their original, on chap. 13.19. Others, there was not any like this people, the note of ſimilitude ſupplyed; as ch. 22. 18. there were no people comparable to them, as 2 King. 18.5. & 23.25. Others again, this people now is no; they are not now a free people, but a Province, governed by an inferiour King under the Aſſyrian, 2 Chr. 33 11. Dan. 2.37,38.

till the Aſſyrian founded it] it, or her, that is, Tyre, ſay ſome; nor doth that, ſay others, croſs what is elſe-where related of its founding by others: of which, ſee on ver. 7, 12. becauſe thoſe others were then under the Aſſyrian command: But others, the Land of the Chaldeans, before mentioned; wherein the Aſſyrian, not Aſſur the ſon of Shem, Gen. 10.22. but Nimrod, the ſon of Cuſh, Gen. 10.8. built Babylon, and other Cities, whoſe Succeſſors were called Aſſyrians, and their Empire, the Aſſyrian Monarchy; after he had ſubdued that country held by Aſſur, and his before, and made Nineveh, there by him erected, the principal ſeat of his Empire, Gen. 10. 10-12. But ſome read the text, not till, but ſince, ſince that the Aſſyrian founded it, for ſtrange people, that is, placed ſtrange people in it, which they expound of the Samaritans, there ſeated by Salmaneſer, 2 King. 17.16.

for them, that dwell in the wilderneſs] The word here uſed ſometime ſignifies ſhips, Num. 24.24. ch. 33. 21. Ezek. 30. 9. So ſome would have it here taken, that the Aſſyrian Kings finding Tyre a fit place for ſhipping, did for that purpoſe at firſt build it. But it ſignifies alſo deſarts, waſte, and dry places, Pſal. 63.1. & 74.14. and thoſe that abide, or dwell in ſuch places, whether perſons, or other creatures, Pſal. 72.9. chap. 13.21. Thus moſt here take it, that the Aſſyrian Kings built Cities in it, either for ſuch people as were ſcattered abroad, here, and there, living in wild and waſte places, after the flood, Job. 3.14.& 15.28. or, that diſperſion cauſed by the diviſion of tongues, Gen. 11.11. that they might convene, and be cemented, into a People, or a ſtate: or, for ſuch people of other Nations, as having ſubdued, they there placed in the room of ſuch Colonies as they thence removed, and tranſplanted in other places, 2 King. 17.6,24.& 18.11.

they ſet up the Towers thereof] properly, watch-towers, chap. 32. 14. Jer. 6.27. they fitted them, not only for habitation, but for defence: Heb. they ſet up his watch-towers, that is, each company of people their own; as ch. 2. 20. though ſome underſtand it of the Princes of Babylon, endeavouring each one to ſtrengthen his part what he could, in that City.

they raiſed up the palaces thereof] to wit, of the land, or of the City: the former particle, or affix, was maſculine, this feminine. See ch. 15.1. they built further; as for ſtrength, ſo for ſtate, chap. 13. 19, 22. Dan. 4.29,30. Howbeit, ſome read the words, they have deſtroyed, or, demoliſhed her palaces: So the Caldee Paraphraſt, whom ſome of the Rabbines follow; and ſo the old Latine, whom ſome of ours, as if it came from the root that ſignifies to raze, Pſal. 137.9. Jer. 51.58. Hab. 3.13. not from that to raiſe, chap. 14.9. Zach. 9.13. for they are neer in ſound, and letter, the one to the other; or, ſome, what more rather, in Hebrew, then in Engliſh; but in this latter notion, I never find it applyed to walls, or buildings; and I therefore embrace rather the latter ſenſe, and read the words, yet, (as chap. 17. 6.) they razed her palaces; or, were her palaces razed, as chap. 22.24.

and he brought it to ruine] He that firſt founded it, to wit, Tyre, can, and ſhall ruine it; as ſome; or, as others, rather the, Chaldean, or Aſſyrian State, Kingdom, or Nineveh, or both, either already are, or ſhall be ruined: See chap. 13.& 14. Jer. 50. & 51. Nah. 1.2,3.

he brought it] One brought it; or, it was brought, as chap. 22. 8. Heb. put it; or, made it, a ruine, or, a ruine; that is, a ruinous, heap, as chap. 25.2. Jer. 12.11. See on chap. 1.7. So rather, then (as a learned man of late renders it) cotages: ſuppoſing the punick word for cotages, deduced from the word of ruine, (for both the root, and the uſe of it ſhew that it, ſo ſignifies) here uſed: but neither doth the notation of it, ſo well ſute with the thing, thereby expreſſed, and the skilful in that language affirm, that it comes from a word, only by change of a letter, that with them ſignifies an houſe.

V. 14. Howl, ye ſhips of Tarſhiſh,] As he began this denunciation of Tyres ruine, with an invitation of the ſhips of Tarſhiſh, to howl in regard thereof: ſo he cloſeth it here again with the like: concerning which, ſee on ver. 1.

for your ſtrength is laid waſte] or, your fortreſſe, rather; and ſo ver. 4. to wit, Tyre, ver. 1.

V. 15. And it ſhall come to paſſe in that day] At that time, wherein this Prophecy ſhall be fulfilled: as ch. 10.20.& 22.20. In the paſſages following, there is firſt an extent with limitation of Tyres calamities, here foretold, how long they ſhould continue, in this verſe; and ſecondly, a gracious promiſe of her reſtitution, after that term of time expired, in the verſes following.

that Tyre ſhall be forgotten ſeventy years] forgotten, that is, neglected, not regarded: not looked after, either by God or Man: as Pſal. 13.1.& 45.10. chap. 49.14, Jer. 2.32. Hoſ. 2.13.& 4. 6. & 8. 14. becauſe things forgotten, are not regarded: hence, thoſe caveates, ſo frequent, Exod. 20. 8. Deut. 4.9,23. & 8.11,18. nor is it improbable, or impertinent, that one of the Jewiſh Commenters here ſuggeſteth, that the Prophet ſhould have ſome alluſion to the condition of an Harlot, forgotten, and forſaken by her lovers; ſince that it fulfeth ſo well with what immediately followeth, v. 16. ſo the word forgotten ſhould have ſpecial reference to her Merchants, whom her trade was with, before, ver. 17. See the like, Jer. 30.14. Howbeit it ſeems more general, and to include alſo Gods diſregarding of her, who is ſaid to viſit her again, v. 17.

ſeventy years] Concerning this number, and the fixed terms of it, there is difference among ſt Interpreters: One furmiſeth ſome corruption in the text; and that as ch. 7.8. there is, as he conceives, ſixty, for ſix ſo here, ſeventy, for ſeven: & theſe ſeven years, he ſuppoſeth to have have been under Salmaneſer, of whoſe invaſion of Tyre, and interruption of their trade for five years together, ſee what was out of Menander alledged, on v. 1. But this ſeems to be ſomewhat over-bold dealing with Scripture, both here, and before. Other Interpreters therefore, generally, reading the text, without any ſuch alteration, deem theſe ſeventy years to concur with thoſe of the Jewiſh Captivity in Babylon, Jer. 29.10. Dan. 9.2. and that the rather, becauſe not the Kingdome of Judah only, but the other Kingdoms alſo thereabouts, and thoſe of Tyre, and Sidon, among the reſt, are ſaid to be by God given, for the like time, into the hands of the Babylonian Empire, to ſerve it, Jer. 27. 3-8. and a Commiſſion to be made out from God to Nebuchadnezzar by name, for the taking, and ſacking of Tyre, Ezek. 26.7.14. and Egypt alſo, and to him, as pay, for him and his forces, in way of recompence for their ſervice, therein performed, Ezek. 29.18-20. Howbeit, that prediction of Tyres deſtruction in Ezekiel, ſeems to reach further then this, ſince that this goes with a limitation of years, and a promiſe of reſtitution at the expiration of thoſe years; whereas there is denounced a final and perpetual deva ſtation, without any reſtauration, Ezek. 26.14. as of Babylon, ch. 13.20.

according to the dates of one King] This one King, a late Writer would have to be Salmaneſer, during whoſe reign and life, Tyre was never able to recover the damage that by him ſhe ſuſtained, whereof above. But this ſandy conceit I let paſs, becauſe it is founded on that which directly croſſeth and controlleth the text. The Jewiſh Interpreters that hold to it, yet are of divers minds about the meaning of it; ſome of them underſtand it of David, who is ſaid to have lived ſeventy years, being thirty years old when he came to the crown, and holding the Kingdom forty more, 2 Sam. 5. 4. which put together, make ſeventy. But one of them confeſſeth ingenuouſly, that he knows no reaſon, why Davids life ſhould be here intimated, as the limit of ſuch a time: which yet, another, to meet with, faith it might be; becauſe there was a league of amity between their King and David, 1 King. 5.1. to mind the Tyrians of the breach of it, which had brought this calamity upon them: See on ver. 1. And ſome Chriſtian Writers, who take this way, ſay; becauſe the name of David was exceeding precious among the Jews, and all his acts and occurrents, of ſpecial obſervation with them: But theſe reaſons ſeem to be of very ſmall moment: Others therefore ſuppoſe, that the ordinary limit of mans life is here aimed at, as it is circumſcribed, Pſal. 90. 10. by Moſes, and by Heathen men, as Macrobius on Scipio's dream, l. 1. c. 6. but ſaid, of a King, rather then of a man; that is, of ſuch an one, as lives freely, and chooſely, not tired out with paine-taking, not expoſed to ſuch encounters, and inconveniences as are wont to ſhorten mans life, in ſuch manner, as others uſually are: and the rather (addeth the Rabbine) the ſaith, of a King, becauſe Tyre, whom he ſpeaks of, had lived as a Queen, or a Princeſs, ver. 8. But the moſt probable, and, as I take it, the genuine meaning of the words, is that, which another of them gives, according to the dates, that is, the Reigns, or continuance in Reign, as chap. 1.1. of one King, that is, of one Kingdom: as Dan. 7.17. & 8.21. to wit, in the dayes or reigns of Nebuchadnezzar, his ſon, and his ſons ſon, who ſucceſſively held the Chaldean Empire, during the time of thoſe ſeventy years, Jer. 17.7. For thoſe Writers of ours wrong them, who would father ſuch an abſurd opinion upon them; as if by the dates of one King, they ſhould underſtand Nebuchadnezzar, ſuppoſing him to have reigned himſelf full ſeventy years, which indeed is moſt untrue; for he reigned but forty three years in all, both with his father, and by himſelt; as out of Berolus his Chaldean, or Babylonian ſtories, Joſeph. againſt Apion; which agrees well with the holy ſtory; wherein we find upon record, that in the eighth year of his Reign, he carried Jehoiachin away captive, 2 Kin. 24. 12. and withall, that he reigned not above ſeven and thirty years, after that, 2 Kin. 25.27. which put together, make up much about the ſame ſum, but come far ſhort of ſeventy: Nor could thoſe Jewiſh writers be ignorant of this: nor doe they ſay, that Nebuchadnezzar is this one King, but expreſly, that he, his ſon, and his ſons ſon, are accounted as one King.

after the end of ſeventy years] The time ſet for her deſolation, and the diſcontinuance of her wonted ſtate being expired, what time the Babylonian yoke ſhall be broken; the alſo among other people, that had formerly been in bondage under that Empire, ſhall recover her liberty, and return to her former trading again.

ſhall Tyre ſing as an harlot] Heb. it ſhall be to Tyre, according to the Song of an harlot. Or, as ſome, there ſhall be with Tyre, as the ſong of an harlot. Which ſome underſtand of a long ſung to an harlot: ſuch a ſong ſhall be ſung to her, as men uſe to ſing to an harlot, that hath for ſome ſpace of time been left, and not looket after, in regard of ſome diſeaſe, or other like diſaſter, which ſhe hath now overcome, and is recovered of again, inciting her to uſe means for the regaining of her Lovers: and ſuch a ſong they ſuppoſe to be that, which followeth, ver. 16. But moſt take it, for a ſong uſed by an harlot, to draw thoſe again to her, as they paſs by, who had formerly abandoned her: and ſome therefore render it, there ſhall be in Tyres mouth, as the ſong of an harlot, which our Engliſh well expreſſeth. The meaning is, that Tyre, upon the ruin of that Empire, which had at the firſt riſing of it to its height, ſubdued her, and till that time kept her down; having now recovered her liberty, ſhall by all means labour to ſet up her former market and trade, and to draw merchants and cuſtomers to her again. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe they are over-nice on the one ſide, that would have Tyre, that was termed a virgin before, while yet unſubdued, ver. 12. to be ſtiled now an harlot, as forced and deflowred; for neither was it Tyre, but Sidon, that was ſo termed: nor is it the conſidered as unſubdued, where ſhe is ſo termed: nor is it violent enforcement, but voluntary proſtitution which makes any one an harlot. As alſo doe thoſe mince it too much on the other ſide, who by the word here uſed, would not have to be meant an harlot, but one that carreth her living by ſome honeſt, but mean employment; as by being an hoſtelle, or an huckſter, or one that careth ſome forry wares about, which they uſe to do ſometime with a ſong: and ſome alſo, in ſome countries, with the tinckling of a pan, or the like, as Tinckers do, thereof ſo termed with us: that which they think alſo alluded unto, ver. 16. So they ſuppoſe the word to be taken, where it is given unto Rahab, Joſh. 2.1. & Heb. 11.31. (and it is not improbable, that the word there ſignifies an hoſtleſs or victualler) and of thoſe two women that contended before Solomon for the child, 1 King. 3.16. of which yet, more doubt may juſtly be made. And it is true indeed, as appears by a Poem aſcribed commonly to Virgil, that hoſtelles in thoſe times did uſually by ſuch ſingings and jinglings invite cuſtomers to them; but thoſe that ſo did, were commonly light-housewives; ſuch as are alluded to, Prov. 9.13-17. and the words following here, ver. 17. where it is ſaid, ſhe ſhall return to her hire, and commit fornication with the Kingdomes of the world, doe evidently ſhew, that no other then an harlot is here meant: not as if merchandize were a diſhoneſt or unwarrantable courſe, being of great and neceſſary uſe, and in the word of God not approved only, but commended too, Pſ. 107.23. Pro. 31.14,24. Eccl. 11.1,2. which laſt place ſeems to intend traffick, rather then almſ-deeds: but the one is reſembled by the other, becauſe gain is intended as well in the one as in the other; and in regard of ſome ſimilitude, or proportion, in ſome particular that the one hath to the other, are good and commendable exerciſes, ſometime compared unto courtes evil and unjuſt. See Luk. 16.1-8,9. for I fear they go again a little too far, who would have the compariſon here intended, to hold in regard of the fraud and inequity; or, the tricks and devices found and uſed commonly in either; where: the mammon of inequity, Luk. 16.9. as alſo that of Solomon, Prov. 20.14. and that of Siraehs ſon, Eeclus. 27.2. For merchandizing is here conſidered ſimply, as a gainful courſe; and the gain thence ariſing, not as evil-gotten gain, but as ſuch gain as might wartantably come into Gods treaſury, where the hire of an harlot might not be admitted, Deut. 23.18. ſuch as might well go for an offering unto God, who abhorreth an oblation made of ill-gotten goods, Ch. 61.8. Jer. 7.9, 11. Mic. 6.6,7,11. See ver. 18.

V. 16. Take an harp, goe about the city thou harlot, that haſt been forgotten] The Prophet proceeds in his former ſimilitude, comparing Tyre to an harlot, that having grown out of requeſt, uſeth all means, as melodious muſick of voice and inſtruments, among the reſt, to come into ſome requeſt again; yet he may withall ſeem to allude to her wonted muſick, mentioned Ezek. 26. 13. & 28.13.

make ſweet melody] good ſinking, or, hand-muſick, ſo the word properly imports. See Chap. 38.20 the Hebrew phraſe is, do well to ſinke, for, ſinke well, skilfully, cunningly, pleaſantly. So 1 Sam. 16. 17. one doing well to ſinke; for, one that can ſinke skilfully, play cunningly; and do well to ſinke, for ſinke skilfully, play cunningly, ſweetly, pleaſantly, Pſal. 33.3.

ſing many ſongs] Heb. multiply ſong; as, multiply ſaps, for, uſe much ſope, Jer. 2.22. multiply ſin, for, commit many ſins, 2 Chr. 33. 23. and multiply viſions, for, afford many viſions, Hoſ. 12.11.

that thou myſelt be remembred] thought upon ſought to, regarded, viſited, as ver. 17. brought to remembrance with thoſe that had forgotten thee, and grow into ſome requeſt again. So Gen. 30.22.& 40. 23. with 41.9. 1 Sam. 1.19. Pſ. 22.27. See ver. 15.

V. 17. And it ſhall come to paſs after the end of ſeventy years] Or, at the end. Heb. from the end: as Gen. 8.6. Exod. 12.41. Deut. 5.1. when ſo many years are once expired. See on ver. 15.

that the Lord will viſit Tyre] Gods viſitations are of two ſorts; either of mercy, as Ruth 1.6. Pſal 65.9. Luk. 1.68,78.& 7.16.& 19.44. or, of judgement, Exod. 20.5.& 34.7. Chap. 13.11.& 26.14. See Ch. 24.21,22. This of Tyre here, is in mercy; and it is ſaid, not that her merchants ſhall viſit her, repair to her, and renew their former trade again with her; but that the Lord ſhall viſit her, to ſhew that this her recovery, and riſing again, ſhall not be effected, or come to paſs by meer caſualty, or her own might, or skill, and the means mentioned, or intimated to be uſed by her, but a gracious and powerful paſſage of Gods providence in mercy minding her, and making the means uſed by her, ſucceſsful and effectual to that purpoſe. See Deut. 8.18. Pſ. 127.1,2. Prov. 10.20.

and ſhe ſhall turn to her hire] Heb. return, and ſo it would be rendred, as Levit. 22.13. chap. 6.13. for it hath reference apparently to Tyres former trading, ver. 2,3,6. ſhe ſhall return to her wonted trading hire] The word ſignifies not properly only, but generally, the hire of an hore (for to ſhould it be written, according to the true and due notation of it, not whore) or, an harlot: either given to her, or given by her, for impure purpoſes. So Deut.23.18. Ezek. 16.31,34.41. Hoſ.9.1. Mic.1.7. nor is the verb, from whence it comes, uſed any otherwiſe. Hoſ.8.9,10. Howbeit, it is uſed in way of ſimilitude, or reſemblance, for gain ariſing from trade and traffick, and conſequently trade and traffick it ſelf; as another word of very near affinity to it, of the ſame family, and of the ſelf-ſame notion with this, is uſed Hoſ.2.14. (being no where elſe found) in the like way of ſimilitude for ſuch commodities as the Iſraelites had, and received by their commerce and trade with other Neighbouring Nations; the main matter taxed in them there, being notſimply, that they had trade with them, and ſuch commodities there-by from them, but that they aſcribed them wholly unto thoſe whom they deal with, and not to God: not to him from whom they received thoſe commodities by them, Hoſ.2.7,8. As in Nehemiah's time, they are blamed, not ſimply for trading with Tyre and Sidon, but for violation of Gods day, in their trading with them, Neh.10. 31.& 13.16-21.

and ſhall commit fornication with all the Kingdoms of the world] Or, play the harlot, as the word is rendred, Genef.38.24. ſhe ſhall have commerce with people of all Kingdomes and Provinces, as a common ſtrumpet hath with all comers, Ezek.16.15,25.& 23.43, 44.for the Prophet perſiſts ſtill in his former compariſon. Nor doth this note here, an inſatiable exceſs of wickedneſs, as ſome would have it, as Rev.17.2. & 18.3. but an amplitude of commerce and trade, ſuch as before the had. See on ver.8.

world] Heb. earth: as Ch.37.16,20.but here rendred world,becauſe earth followeth: ſo Rev.11.15.

upon the face of the earth] The word ſeems more ſpecially to imply the earth tilled,trodden, and traded on, by mankind,Pſal.104. 24. Chap. 13. 14. & 24.21. & 30.23.24. This clauſe ſome refer to Tyres trading,ſhe ſhall trade with them, not in corners privily,but in open fight and view,publikely: or, with much pride and pomp, as ch.57.7-9.Ezek.16.15,16,24,25,31.But others rather with the Chaldee Paraphraſt, to the Kingdoms next before, as noting the generality of them,from whence out of all the habitable parts and quarters of them,people had recourſe to Tyre,as recourſe is wont to be even from forraigh parts,to ſome ſtrumpets of ſpecial note.Ezek. 16.15. So Deut.14.2.

V.18. And her merchandize, and her hire ſhall be holineſſe to the Lord] In this laſt paſſage, as in the cloſe of other ſad Prophecies before,chap.18.7.& 19.18-25.the Prophet ſubjoyneth an intimation of the converſion of the Tyrians unto God, in the Kingdome of his Chriſt, yet delivered in forms,alluding to the manner of Gods ſolemn ſervice, then in uſe: as Chap.60.9,10,13,14.Mal.1.11. And to the dates of the Meſſias,do ſome of the Rabbines refer it,though ſome other of them, to the times of their return from captivity under the ſecond Temple.

And] Or, Yet: as Chap.17.8.

her merchandize, and her hire] Heb. hires, the word before uſed, but here plural; that is, the gettings, earnings, or gains of her merchandize: or, thereby accruewing to her: of the phraſe, ſee Chap.4.5. and hence appears, what before was meant by hire, ver.17.

holineſſe to the Lord] It ſhall be a great part of it, devoted and conſecrated to Gods ſervice; ſet apart for pious and ſacred uſes. There is an alluſion in the words, to the motto engraven on the High Prieſts golden frontler, Exod 39.30. ſo Levit.27.30. Joſh.6. 19.Jerem.31.40.Zach.14.20. For it is a very abſurd conceit that a Popiſh Writer hath, that Tyres gain gotten by her trading, ſhould be called ſacred, as an accurſed or abominable thing, like the goods of Jericho, Joſh.6.17,18. or like the hire of an harlot, Deuter. 23. 18. becauſe the word ſignifying facred in Latine, is ſometimes uſed for deteſtable; and one in found ſomewhat like the word of holineſſe here uſed, doth ſignifie an impure perſon, in that place of the Law before mentioned, and elſwhere, Gen.38. 21. 1 King.15.12.& 22. 46. and that therefore it was not to come into Gods treaſury, directly contrary to what immediately followeth.

it ſhall not be treaſured, nor laid up] It ſhall not be reſerved or laid up for any prophane uſe,either publike, or private. One of the Jewiſh Writers thus diſtinguiſheth the words, It ſhall neither be carried into the Kings treaſury, nor reſerved (as durable ſubſtance, ſo the word properly ſignifies, chap.33.6.) for iſſue, for poſterity, 2 Chron.12.14. the former word is uſed commonly of publike reſerves,Neh.10.39.Ch.39.6.Mal.3.10. the latter of private,Pro.15. 6.& 27.24.

for her merchandize ſhall be for them that dwel before the Lord] for, or, but, as chap.2.6. her merchandize, that is the gain thence ariſing, Prov.3.14. for them that dwell; or, ſit; or, abide before the Lords preſence, or, in the Lords preſence,for his Miniſters that attend upon him in his houſe; the place of his ſpecial preſence and reſidence among his people,Deut.10.8.2 Sam.7.18. Pſal.27.4.& 42.2. & 61.7.& 84.4.& 134.1.

to eat ſufficiently] Heb. to eat unto ſatiety, or fulneſs, as Levit. 25.19. & 26.5. Prov. 13. 25. that Gods Miniſters may have food ſufficient, even to the full, 2 Chron.31.10. Malac.3.10. Some expound it, of the Tyrians making great feaſts after the time of their recovery: by occaſion whereof, they ſhould laviſh out the ir money upon corn, wine, and fleſh, which the land of Iſrael abounded in, and ſo their earnings ſhould fall into the hands of Gods people; if it had been laid, they ſhould bring them to Jeruſalem, and ſpend them there in ſacred feaſts, that Gods Miniſters might feed, and feaſt with them with it, it had been ſomewhat to the purpoſe. See Deut.14.23-29.& 16.11,14. But the expoſition given, as before, is not only forced,and far fetcht,but it is clean beſide the intent and ſcope of the place.

and for durable clothing] Heb. covering, as the like term imports,Gen.8.13. Exod.26.14. ſo is rainment called, in regard of the principal uſe of it to cover the body, and to ſhelter it againſt outward annoyances, Hoſ.2.9. 1 Tim.6.8. Rev.3.18. & 16.15. The word rendred durable,as Prov.8.18. doth in his prime notion ſignifie old, 1 Chron. 4. 22. Pſal.6.7. but ſometime hard, or hardſh, and ſtiff, Pſal.31.18.& 75.5. whence ſome render it thick; ſuch, ſay they, as the wooll, in Paleſtine, made the Rabbines precious,or of worth; from that in the Proverbs,ſuch as ancient things ſometimes are, as in regard of their worth, kept and reſerved. Others,as ours. durable; ſuch as will laſt long, as the original word hath a notion ſometime of continuance onely; not of decay, Job 21.7. See the like form, Chap. 65. 22. The meaning is, that from the Tyrian trade, they being converted to God, means and maintenance ſhould be freely and largely afforded unto Gods Miniſters, as well for apparrel, as for food.

CHAP. XXIIII.

Verſ.1. BEhold the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waſte, and turneth it upſide down, and ſcattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof] Here beginneth a new Sermon, or Prophecy, more general than thoſe go.ng before; and ſeems to comprehend not the Land of Iſrael alone, or Judea alone; (unto which ſome would reſtrain it) but the countries alſo on every ſide, neer to either; and ſuch of them, eſpecially, as had exerciſed enmity with them, or been unuſefull ſlayes to them, as the Moabites, the Ammonites, the Philiſtines, the Syrians, the Ethiopians, the Egyptians, the Idumeans, the Arabians, the Tyrians, the Sidonians, againſt whom he had formerly, in more particular manner, propheſied; and to have been executed, partly by the Aſſyrians, and partly by the Chaldeans, the two principal inſtruments and Executioners of Gods judgements on thoſe people, Chap. 10.5.14. and 14.12,17. Jer. 50. 23. and afterward alſo, by others, upon them. See the like Jerem.25.15-38. & 27.2.8. Howbeit, as thoſe ſtraighten it too much, that confine it to the narrow limits of Judah and Iſrael, ſo they over-widen it much more, that would extend it to the general day of doom, which many paſſages in it do clearly controll. The whole Sermon reacheth unto the end of the 27.Chapter.

Behold] The Prophets uſuall Preface to the relation of remarkable acts, either of judgement, or of mercy. See Chap.7.14. & 17.1.

the Lord maketh the earth empty] Heb. word for word, Behold, Jehovah emptying the earth, and laying waſte; as himſelf, by the Spirit of propheçy, ſeeing God already in doing it, and inviting others by the eye of Faith grounded on this propheçy, revealing as much to them, to behold the ſame with him. So Chap.3.1.& 13.9.

maketh the earth empty and waſte] For, the earth, ſee on Chap.13. 5,11. emptying it of its inhabitants, either ſlain on it, or removed out of it: laying it waſte, by deſtroying, and ſpoyling all of worth, or uſe in it, and on it; as if he were bringing it to its firſt conditition,without all form and furniture,Gen.1.2. See the like, Nah.2. 10. where both words are found; the latter here,and there, only; which though moſt of the Jewiſh Interpreters here expound, as we do, yet ſome of them would from the Arabick give it other far-fetcht notions, which I forbear to recite. See ver.3.

turneth it up-ſide down] Heb. perverteth the face of it; as Lam.3. 9.where,and here,only,the word is found in that form: he ſo tranſformeth it,that it hath not that face and faſhion,that before it had. Which ſome apply more ſpecially, to what followeth,ver.2. and expound of a prepoſterous diſpoſition of ſtates and conditions; that whereas in due courſe, the maſter ſhould lead, and the ſervant follow, the miſtreſs lead, and the maid attend; the Ruler be reſpected, and the Subject leſs regarded: all ſhould now be turned a clean contrary way.

ſcattereth the Inhabitants of it] By flight from their enimies invading them,or deportation by the enemy,having ſurpized them,So Gen.11.8.Deut.28.25.2 King.17.6.& 18.15.Jer.13 24.& 18. 17. Ezek.5.10.

V.2. And it ſhall be,as with the People,ſo with the Prieſt: as with the Servant, ſo with his Maſter; as with the Maid, ſo with her Miſtreſſe] Heb. word for word: as the People, as the Prieſt, or, Prince; as Hoſh. 2.9. and ſo in the reſtwhence ſome read, there ſhall be like People, like Prieſt, and ſo forward; ſuppoſing the ſenſe to be, that there ſhould be a general confuſion, no order, no diſtinction, or regard of perſons, in Church or State; as chap. 3. 5. whereof ſome expound, that perverting the face of things.ver.1. But others rather as ours render it, it ſhall be, as with the people, ſo with the prieſt, or, Prince, and ſo on. The ſenſe being, as they conceive, that all eſtates and conditions ſhould face alike, none, in regard of eminency of place,or ſtate,ſpared,Chap.2.9.& 5.9. 2 Chron.36.17. Lam.5.12.

the Prieſt] The Prieſts being ſuch, ſay ſome,as Jeroboam made, of the meaneſt of the people, 1 King.12.31. or ſuch, as by their miſcarriages,and Gods juſt judgement thereupon,were become vile and contemptible with the people. 1 Sam.2.12,17,22,30. Mal.2.3, 8,9. Or, the Prince; for ſo the word ſometime ſignifies. See Gen. 41.45. Exod.2.16.& 3.1. and on ſuch doth God oft-times,for the like cauſes,caſt contempt, Job 12.21.Pſal.107.40. But this ſeems to look another way, to wit, that neither Prieſt nor Prince,or this latter rather, here, principally,I ſuppoſe,intended, ſhould eſcape more then any of the common ſort of people: ſee the ſame word uſed in the ſame places, but diſtinctly for both Offices, 2 Sam.8.17,18. & 20.25,28.

his maſter] Heb. Lord, but ſo uſed, Gen. 39. 20. Exod. 21. 4, 6. Deut.23.15.

as with the buyer,ſo with the ſeller] Or,ſo with the buyer, as with the ſeller; for the very ſame particle is in either member, and admitteth either notion here rather thus,then as before; becauſe in the three former branches, the better condition, and more likely to do well, to wit, the Prieſt,the Maſter,the Miſtreſs, were in the latter place; whereas in theſe three latter branches,the better eſtate,to wit, the buyer, the leader,the letter, are in the former. He that by purchaſing made account to mend his eſtate,ſhall be in no better plight, in regard thereof, then he that hath made it away, and embezelled thereby his means. See Ezek.7.12,13. and ſee ſomewhat the like, but in another notion,1 Cor.7.30.

as with the lender, ſo with the borrower:] Or, ſo with the leader, as with the borrower; neither having any ſurety of what he owns, or what he owes; nor any manmore of what is in his own hands, then of what is in anothers.Of the uſe of the words, ſee Pſ.37.21. & Pro.22.7.

as with the taker of uſury, ſo with the giver of uſury to him.] Or, rather, ſo with the letter on uſury, as with him,to whom he letteth on uſury; for ſo it is, word for word in the text: as alſo, Deut.24.11. the man to whom thou lendeſt, or letteſt; for, the word is in either place the ſame,and the word both here and there uſed,is of a large extent, compichending as wel free lending,as letting upon conſideration,as the Greek δανείζειν, which it anſwereth unto, alſo ſometime doth.See Lu.6.34,35.The Heb.Cómenters therefore to diſtinguiſh this branch from the former, ſay ſome of them,that the former ſpake of thoſe that let,or lent out money:this latter of thoſe that lent, or let out victual,or any ſuch other thing. Deut.23.19.others of them,that the former is meant of ſuch as lend what they have freely: this latter, of ſuch as lend upon pledg or pawn,as Deu.24.11.where yet no conſideration is mentioned, or neceſſarily implyed; but the contrary rather: for it ſpeaketh of a brother, of whom they were forbidden to take intereſt,Deut.23.19.ſo that the pawn ſeems to be there intended only as ſecurity for the principal. Howſoever, this latter diſtinction here ſeems more probable than the former. But though the parties here and there mentioned, are for good cauſe to be diſtinguiſhed, yet the particle, or note of ſimilitude, is the very ſame here, that was in all the former branches; and that learned Scholiaſt was much miſtaken (though not the firſt that here tripped) in ſuppoſing the term here to be altered; and the word cauſher to be no more here, then (as in other places of it is) the ſame with the Latine ſicut, or quemadmodum; the Engliſh, as, or, in like manner; whereas indeed it is more then ſo,& it is to be taken aſunder, as oft elſwhere: the ca it ſelf alone, as in the former branches, importing as much as he would have ſignified by the whole; and the latter part, to wit, ſher, being here a relative diſtinct from it, and looking forward, not to the particle next it, but to the pronoun demonſtrative, by an elegant redundancie in that language very uſual, ſubjoyned in the cloſe of the ſentence, the very like conſtruction whereunto is preciſely found in that parallel to this, Deut.24.11. Howbeit herein I concurre with that learned Writer, for the reaſon before rended (which yet by him is here croſſed) that albeit in the three firſt branches, the former particle is to be rendred ſicut, as, the latter, ſic, ſo; and that therefore in the former part of the verſe, the ſentence runs aright, as our verſion hath it, as with the people, ſo with the Prieſt; and ſo forward: yet in the three latter branches,(and not in the two latter only,as he grounding upon his fore-mentioned miſtake would have it)the text ought rather to be rendred, ſo with the buyer, as with the ſeller; and ſo forward; as if he had ſaid, as the Prince, or Prieſt, ſhall fare no better then the common ſort of people; the Maſter or Miſtris then the Man or Maid-ſervant; ſo it ſhall be no better with the richer ſort, with well-monied men (ſuch as uſe to purchaſe,, are able to lend, and are wont to let money out to uſe) then with thoſe of poor and meaner condition, ſuch as are faln to fall, and are conſtrained oft to borrow, or to take money up at intereſt: either of which to be enforced unto, is made a note of penury,Deut.15.6.8. & 28.12. Nehem.5.3,4. Prov.22.2,7.& 29.13. Thus a miſtake hath yet miniſtred an hint of that, which gives ſome light for the right conceiv ng of the text. Nor were the miſtake ſo much to be regarded, but that it hath bred another more material, as one error uſually begetteth another. As therefore there was before obſerved ſome difference among the Jewiſh Writers about the diſtinction of this branch from the former; ſo is there no leſs variance among them about the ſtating of the two terms uſed in this branch. For one of them miſled by that former miſtake, would have by the former term here uſed, to wit, noſheh, to be underſtood,the taker up of money at intereſt, or the borrower; and by the latter term, to wit, noſheh ho, the letter out, or, the lender, therein controlling another that had gone before him, and went a diverle way; and with him concur ſome great Maſters in that language; as alſo ſome late Interpreters of prime note, and the Chaldee, and ancienter Greek, ſeem to go the ſame way with him. But that ancienter critick by the former term noſh h, underſtandeth the creditor, or letter out, the money-taker, as he termeth him; and by the latter, nſheh noſheh ho, that is, he to whom he letteth out, or, lendeth,the debtor,the taker up, or the borrower; and in his ſteps tread moſt of the Latine, and all our Engliſh verſions; as alſo the order of the terms in the former branch pleads for it; where the leader ſtandeth before the borrower, as the letter here before the taker; the creditor in either before the debtor:and the conſtant uſe of the word noſheh, never found uſed any otherwiſe then for one that lendeth, or letteth out, doth abundantly confirm it.See Exod.22.25. Deut.24.11. 2 King.4.1.Pſ. 109.11. nor doth the word it ſelf taken apart by it ſelf, ſignifie any other thing in the one member then it doth in the other; but the ſelf-ſame thing in both: Howbeit, the words taken intirely together, as they make up the latter member of the ſentence,he whom he letteth to him, as Deut 24.11. the man whom thou lendeſt to him; (for ſo in either place the words expreſly are) they doe evidently deſign the debtor: all th: difference between theſe two parallel places is, that there is a defect of the antecedent (ſuch as is found, Ruth 1.16,17 & 2.9. 1 King.18.12.) in the one, which is expreſſed in the other. But to laſtly, 1 Sa.11.22.2. where it is ſaid,as our verſion rendreth it, every one that was in debt; it is in the original, word for word, every one whom a leader, or letter,was to him (the redundancy before obſerved,there alſo found) that is, every one that had a creditor, or every one that was indebted. And thus much for the preciſe notion of the terms. Now from hence ſome obſerve,that thoſe of the ten Tribes (whom alone they ſuppoſe this propheçy to concern) had not regarded to obſerve the Law of God, by Moſes enacted againſt taking uſury of their brethren, Exod.22.25.Lev.25. 36,37. Deut.23.19,20. as alſo many other of Gods Ordinances, v.5. And it is true indeed,that not they alone,but the Jews alſo were oft times very faulty that way,as appears,Neh.5.2——7.Ezek.22. 12. as well as in not releaſing their ſervants at the ſix years end,Jer. 34. 8-11. But this Propheçy, though it concern the Iſraelites among other, yet it reſpects other Nations beſides them, as was before ſaid: nor is this here mentioned, more then any of the former, as a matter of iniquity, but as a note of ſome mens more plentiful eſtate then others, and an occaſion of their commerce and dealing with others, uſually of meaner and lower condition, with gain and advantage to themſelves; notwithſtanding which, yet they ſhould be no more ſecured in theſe diſtracted times, then the pooreſt of theſe they deale with. See Jer.15.10.

V. 3. The Land ſhall be utterly emptied, and utterly ſpoyled] The Land,Heb.earth; as ver.4. of Iſrael,ſay ſome; of Judah,other ſome: but all that circuit of land,rather,devoted to deſtruction,againſt the ſame here denounced.See ver. 1 4. Heb. ſhall emptying, be emptied; and ſpoyling, ſpoyled, the word in either branch doubled, for the more emphaſis,as the like,Gen.2.17.& 37 33.Exod.18.18.& 19.13. 2 King.2.23.Canr.8.7. and the latter word here confirms the expoſition given of the ſecond,in ver.1. emptyed,as ch.19.3.ſpoyled,as ch. 10.6. & 17.14.

for the Lord hath ſpoken this word] God hath paſſed this doom upon it. See ch.21.17. or, as ſome, hath ſpoken this thing, as Num. 30.1.& 36.6.

V. 4. The earth mourneth and fadeth away] Or, It fad.th away;for ſo runs the Hebrew without the copulative: the earth it mourns, it fades away; there is a fineneſs of language in the original, which our Engliſh cannot ſo fitly expreſſ;as if it were ſaid, it wails,it faiſs, or, it quails. The former may have reference to the emptying forementioned, by voydance of her Inhabitants, as ch.3.27. Lam.1.4 the latter, to the ſpoyl,before pointed at, of her fruit,and other furniture, as ch.1,30.See ver.13.

the world languiſheth, and fadeth away] By the world here, ſome ſtill preſs to have underſtood the Land of Iſrael, being as a little world within it ſelf, ſequeſtred and levered from other people, by thoſe ſpecial rites and ordinances aſſigned them by God, which other Nations had not,Deut.4.7,8,34.& 7.6.& 26.17,18.Pſ.147.19, 20.Rom.3.1,2. and 9.4. but they produce no place, where it is ſo termed; and the term, as it is of a far larger extent; ſo it evinceth this Propheçy to reach far further, then they would have it. Of the word, ſee ch.13.11.& 14.17.

and fadeth away] The text runs here,alſo,elegantly on the letter, it faints,and fails,or falls; but there is a metaphor from the faintneſs of a feeble and ſeaſie body,pining and ſpent,in a manner,with ſome long and lingring diſeaſe,in the one.1 Sam.2.5.Neh.4.2.Pſ. 6.2.See ch.17.4. from plants that withering and fading, ſhed their flowers & their leaves,ch.1.20.or, from the leaves & flowers themſelves, that ſo wither and fall,in the other, Pſ.37.2.ch.28.4.& 34.4. & 40.7.

the haughty people of the earth do languish] Heb. the height, or, haughtiness of the people of the earth, nor, doth, but, do langvish. Which some of the Jewish Commenters taking in the former sense, for height, which it first, and properly signifies, vers.21. ch.2.13,14. & 14.10,13. & 22.16.expound it of great ones, in power and place, set higher then others: as, the height of the cedars, for, the highest, and tallest of them, chap.37.24. so, the height of the people, for, the highest, and greatest among them: they that sit loftiest among them faint, as well as those that lye lowest; as even the tallest men, and the greatest bodies stoop, and grow faint and feeble with sickness, as well as the lowest, and the least. So chap. 1. 5. & 2.9. & 5. 15. But the most take it in the latter sense, for haughtiness; as Deut. 8. 14. Pfal. 131. 1. Prov. 30. 13. as pride, for a proud person; or, proud persons, Jer. 50. 31. Pfal.36.11. and, might, for, mighty ones, chap.33.21. so, haughtiness, for, haughty ones; and, the haughty ones of the people of the earth, for, the haughtiest, among the people upon earth: as, the wicked of the nations, for, the worst, and wickedest among them, Ezek. 7. 24. The haughtiest, those that heretofore carried their heads highest in any place, among them, do now droop, and hang the head. See chap.2. 12, 17. It may well include both; the one usually causing, and accompanied with the other, ch. 5.15. Ezek.31.10.

V. 5. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof] A reason of the former denunciation is here rendred, why God was resolved thus to proceed against the world, and the people thereof; to wit, in regard of their sins, and grievous transgressions, whereby both those other nations, and his own people, violating as well the Laws of Nature in general, as his special institutions and ordinances,had defiled and polluted the places of their respective abode, which should,therefore, call them up, and spue them out, as some impure and loathsome matter, that made them sick, and qualmy, untill they were rid and eased of them, Levit. 18. 25--28. Lam. 3. 13--15.

The earth also] Or, as some, This land also; that is, fay they, even the land of Israel and Judah; not of other nations, at large only: that land, that should have kept it self free from such defilements as other people are polluted with,Lev.11.43,44.& 18.16, 18. Ezek. 14. 11. and so indeed, is the copulative used, chap. 12. 4. & 22. 9. but the article is no other here, then was, ver. 1, 4. Heb. And the earth; which may well be rendred, For the earth: as ch. 13. 8.& 16.2.

is defiled]Either with the gore-blood, and carcasses of men, slain, and sacrificed on it, in the execution of these judgements, Ezek. 7. 21,24. & 9.7.& 39.11-20. or, rather, with the impieties, impurities, murthers, rapes, violences, and other like wickednesses, committed by those that live therein, Levit.18.25, 27. Numb.35.33. Pfal.106.38.chap.1.10,15,21. & 4.4.& 54.3.Jer. 3.1, 2. Ezek. 20. 30,31.

under the Inhabitants thereof] As if they were so contaminated with sin, that their very footings defiled the ground that they trode on; not unlike those things, or persons legally impure; whereof Levit.11.31-35.& 15.4,12,20-27.

because they have transgressed the Laws, changed the ordinances, broken the everlasting Covenant] Because all Gods Laws, both general, and special; civil, and sacred, have been grievously and extreamly violated by them; that which hath made them so impure,Levit.18. 24 Ezek.14.11.& 20.26,43.& 23.7,13.& 24.6,13. Zeph. 3. 1. Mat. 15.18 20.

transgressed] The word signifies properly to passe over, or beyond, Josh.4.1.& 15. 3. applyed to sins and trespasses, because by commission of them, men passe the bounds and limits prescribed them by God; as Shimei the circuit, assigned him by Solomon, 1 King. 2.36,37.

the Laws] Either in general, written, or unwritten, concerning mans duty, both to God and man; which even the Heathen also have engraven in their hearts, Rom.2. 14,15.or,as some, the moral,and civil Laws delivered to Gods people, distinguished from the ordinances,afterward mentioned:as 2 Chr.33.8.

changed] So the word,sometime,signifies, Gen.31.7, 41. & 35. 2. but not in the form here used:where it signifies to passe away,or, passby,Job 4.15.& 9.26.& 11.10,and so seems to intimate,properly,neglects,or passings by:sins of omission, as the former passings over: or, beyond:sins of commission: and it would therefore be rendred, passed by the ordinances.

the ordinances] Heb. ordinance: but taken collectively: as Exr. 7.10.rendred sometime statute,and statutes,Deut.4.5,8.Josh.24.25, supposed,here,to intend sacred rites,and observances,more specially by God prescribed to his people:as Neh.9.13,14.

broken] The word properly signifies,to annull,frustrate,or make void, Numb.30.12,15.

the everlasting covenant] Heb. the covenant of eternity: as chap.55. 3 that is, a covenant,never to be broken,or annulled, Jer. 50. 5. This some understand of the covenant of Circumcision, made with Abraham and his seed. So called,Gen.17.7,13,14. Others, of the Covenant made with the Israelites in Mount Sinai, at the giving of the Law,Exod.24.7,8. Ier.11.2,4. and this seems more probable then the former. Others, of the Law of nature, concerning all men in general, which was from the beginning, and shall last to all eternity, Pfal.119. 89. Matth. 5. 18. and they suppose, that these three several branches intend one and the same thing only,in divers terms,as is usual with this Prophet.But I find not where the word covenant,is thereof used in Scripture; and enclineth therefore rather to the former.

V. 6. Therefore] To wit, for the sins and transgressions beforementioned,ver.v.and so in the next branch.

hath the curse devoured the earth] Or, land: as vers. 1,4,5. the curse, that is, the wrath of God, by these dismal effects, manifested, and executed therein. It seems to allude, either to the curse denounced in the Law, taking hold of the wilfull breakers of it, Deut. 27.26.& 28.15-68.& 29.20. or,to the curse,together with the oath conceived by them,in their covenanting with God, as now for the violation thereof, justly inflicted, Neh.10.29.See Ier.23. 10. Zach. 5.3,4.

and they that dwell therein are desolate] Being ftript,and bereft of all those comforts and commodities, that from it they formerly enjoyed, Lam.4.5. or,pined,wasted and consumed for want of necessary sustenance,Ezek.4.17. Joel 1.18. or,destroyed: as Ezek.6.4,6. according to another reading, they sustain the punishment of their trespasses; they suffer for their sins: as Prov.30.10. Ier.2.3.See the like ambiguity,Pfal.5.10.& 34.21,22.Hof. 5.15.& 10.2.& 13.16.See also,verf.20.

therefore the Inhabitants of the earth are burnt] burnt up; consumed with fire and fword, by hoftile Invasions, Ezek. 5. 2,4. & 24. 10,11. or, with the fire of Gods wrath,chap.9.18.& 10.16. or, dryed up, and exhauſt; as the body of man, or beaſt, through want of moisture, Pſ. 69. 3. & 102.3. or, a brook, by means of drought, 1 King.17.7.Jer.50.38.& 51.32.

and few men left] The words are all singular,but collective,as Pſ. 8.4.ch.2.9.& 5.15.See ch.16.14.

V. 7. The new Wine mourneth, the vine languisheth] The Prophet proceedeth, in particular, to inſtance in ſome ſpecial outward comforts, that the creature is wont to afford men; to wit,in wine, that is ſaid to chear mans heart,Pſ.104.15. but ſhould now be taken away, both it,and the vines that yeeld it,being both ſpoiled.

the new wine] So it properly ſignifies; whereof the moneth Tiſri, the ſeventh moneth,anſwering to our September in part,is,by ſome deemed to have its name; becauſe then their vintage was:but is put here for wine in general:as ch.36.17.Jer.31.12.Hoſ.7.14.

mourneth] The wine is ſaid to mourn, being ſpilled and ſpoiled by the enemy: as the land,or, ground,is ſaid to mourn,Joel 1.10. implying what it would do,were it ſenſible of what is done unto it. See ch.24.1.

the vine languisheth] Being trodden down, and deſpoyled by the enemy.See ch.16.8.ver.4.Joel 1.12.

all the merry-hearted do ſigh]The wine-drinkers, ver.9.(ſo called, becauſe wine makes the heart merry,Pſ.104.15.2 Sam.13.28. Eſth. 1.10.Zach.10.7.)do ſigh,and mourn:becauſe the means and matter of maintaining their mirth,are gone,ver.8,12. Amos 5.19. inſtead of their wonted ſinging, ver.9.now they ſigh: to ſigh,for,to mourn: as Ezek.9.4.Lam.1.21.

V. 8. The mirth of Tabrets ceaſeth, the noiſe of them that rejoyce endeth, the joy of the harp ceaſeth] Their muſick and melody,that they uſed at their banquets, and merry-meetings, is all at an end. See ch. 5.12.& 16.10.Jer.7,34.& 16.7.& 25.10.Ezek.26.13.Hoſ.2.11.Amos 6.5,7.

tabrets] Or,tabors.See ch.5.15.and of harp,there alſo.

the noiſe of them that rejoyce:] Or, the tumultuous clamor (the confuſed noiſe that they uſe to make,when they are drunk,Pſal.78. 65. Zach. 9.15.)of the revellers: ſtyled,the ſons of clamor,Ier.48.45. See ch.22.2.& 23.7,12.

V. 9. They ſhall not drink wine with a ſong] Heb. the ſong: ſuch ſongs as they uſed to ſing in their merry meetings, and at their feaſts. They ſhall not revel it as they had wont to do; either with voices,or other muſick,ver.8.

ſtrong drink ſhall be bitter to them that drink it]little pleaſure ſhall they take in any ſtrong drink, by reaſon of the calamities and diſtractions of the times.See ch.5.11.

V.10. The City of confuſion is broken down] Or, The city of emptineſs; as it is rendred, Iob 26.7, or, of waſteneſs; as Deut. 32. 10. Iob 12.24.or, of deſolation, as ch.34.11.Jer.4.23. or,of vanity,ſuch, as things void of ſoundneſs, or vertue, are,1 Sam.12. 21. chap. 41. 29.& 44.9.& 45.16,18.& 59. 4. and becauſe ſuch things are as good as nought, and nothing worth, the word is uſed alſo for nothing, Iob 26.7.chap.40.17,23. So, chiefs of waſteneſs, that is,waſted, made or laid waſte,chap.61.4. Hence, ſome underſtand here,the City Bethel; which, both in regard of the Idol, by Jeroboam there erected, 1 King.12.29, 32,33. as alſo of that deſolation that was denounced againſt it, and made good upon it, 1 King.13.2. Hoſ. 5. 5. is by the Prophets called Bethaven, that is, the houſe,or city of vanity, or deſolation and emptineſs, Hoſ.4.15, & 10.5,6. Others would have it to be Ieruſalem,ſaid to have been broken up by the Chaldees, 2 King.25.4.Ier.39.2.and as having been guilty of the like ſins with Bethel,did undergo the like judgment,Ier.7.17,20.& 11. 13. & 32. 28-35.And theſe ſeem juſtly to others over-narrow; but they may no leſſe juſtly be deemed to range, as far over-wide, that would thereby have underſtood the whole world; becauſe all that is isin it,is vanity of vanities,and nothing but vanity, Eccl.1.2.And to be brought unto its firſt emptineſſe again,Gen.1.2. The moſt, and beſt,ſuppoſe it to be ſpoken, not of any one city; but by the word city,taken collectively,as chap.25.2. & 27.10. the ſeveral Cities of the Kingdomes and Countries reſpectively. which this Prophecy concerned,ſo termed, as ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, becauſe their inhabitants ran after idols, and other vanities, of whom this word is uſed,1 Sam.12.21.chap.44.9.or, as others of them, rather becauſe ruined,emptied,and deſolated, by the enemies breaking into them,and breaking down of them,though the word down is not in the text.See ch.3.26.& 34.11.and it is obſerved by one of them,that by a kind of anticipation,it is ſaid, the city of deſolation is broken; albeit,it were not ſuch before it was broken; but being broken, and ſo ruined,came to be ſuch,to which he ſuppoſeth a parallel place to be, ch.44.19.whereof ſee there.But ſuch anticipations are found manifeſtly,Gen.18.19,22.Levit.15.16.Judg.4.21.ch.37.9.& 28.1.& 32. 6.& 40.19.Ezek.3.3.Nah.3.5.Howbeit, others would have it to be termed the city of deſolation;becauſe deſigned,or deſtinated to deſolation,as the city of deſtruction;becauſe thereunto deſigned, ch.19. 18.See Ch.23. 12.

every houſe is ſhut up, that no man may enter in] or,that there is no going in,or out,Heb.every houſe is ſhut up from entring, as chap. 23. 1. Which ſome underſtand of being ſhut up,to keep out the enemy having broke into the city, chap.26.20.Joh.2.19. Others, ſo ſhut, that none goeth in, becauſe there is no buſineſſe there to be done, as chap.23. 1. or, ſtand ſhut up, and neither going in, or out, for fear of the enemy, as 1 King.15.17. 2 Chr.15.5.& 16. 1.or,becauſe the Inhabitants are gone, either captived, or ſlain,ch. 27.10.I ſuppoſe it may well be rendred,all houſes are as ſhut up, ſo that there is no going out, or in;there is no more going in or out, then as if the houſes were all ſhut up.See c.22.3.Jer.13.19.See alſo, ver. 22.

every houſe]that is,many,or the moſt of them,as Gen.41.57.ſo one of the Jewiſh Commenters.Howbeit,if rendred as before was intimated,there will no ſuch reſtriction need.

V.11.There is a crying for wine in the ſtreets] This paſſage,among others,ſhewes that this prophecy is not to be underſtood of the univerſal deſtruction of the world at the laſt day,2 Pet.3.10,11.

a crying for wine]or,becauſe of the wine; not calling for it,but yelling and lamenting; not, as ſome, for the preſent want ſo much, Hoſh.7.14.as becauſe of the ſpoil,and lols of it,Lam.5.18.Ezek.27. 30.where it ſhould alſo be ſo rendred.See chap.16. 7-10. for they ſeem to wander much out of the way, who would have it underſtood,either of paſſengers,or thoſe few left in the city, crying up & down in the ſtreets, who hath any wine to ſell;as intimating, both the ſcarcity of that liquor, and mens greedy deſire of it, notwithſtanding the calamities of the times; that which yet ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters ſuggeſt,and ſome of ours admit.

all joy is darkened]extinct,put out.See chap.8.22.& 9. 19. word for word,it is even-tide with it; becauſe at even darkneſs comes Pſ. 104.20,23.their mirth ſhall fet,as the Sun doth at even,and end in mourning,Amos 8.9, 10.Howbeit,becauſe the verb is in that notion no where elſe found,there may be ſome ſuſpition,that by a tranſpoſition of letters,which in Scripture is ſometime obſerved(; ſee Lev. 3.7.& 4.32.1 Chr.4.9, 11.)the word may ſignifie here to paſſe away,which with that alteration,is moſt frequently doth, and would ſuit very well with the next branch.See Iob 30.15.

the mirth of the Land is gone]together with the liquor that helped to maintain it,Pſ.9,Heb.is gone into captivity, ch.5.13.as alluding to the captivity of the people of the land carried away by the enemy:the like alluſion is in the word of Elies daughter in law, when the Ark of God was taken, 1 Sam. 4. 21, 22. See alſo, Hoſ. 10. 5.

V.12.In the city is left deſolation]or,as ſome render it, He that is left in the city ſhall be deſolate.Heb.deſolation,as chap.17. 9. or, unto deſolation,as Ier.4.7.or as others,what is left in the City,ſhall be deſtroyed with deſolation, ſupplying the verb from the branch enſuing:as chap.13.18.& 18.7.and the particle of wanting,as 21.7. & 22.17,18.which way ſoever we read it, the ſenſe is plain;there is nothing left in the city;City and Country are both alike ſtript and plundered of all,City for Cities,as v.10.

the gate]Either the gates of the city, broken open and deſtroyed by the adverſary,Judg.9.52.Neh.1.3.Ezek.2.1.22.or,gate,for city,as ch.14.31.

is ſmitten]Heb.broken to pieces,as Mic.1.7.

with deſtruction]ſo the Rabbine, affirming this and the former word to be ſiſters, and ſo the moſt take it;yet ſome render it, with a noiſe,or a crack,ſuch, a noiſe as ſouldiers are wont to make in the aſſaule of a Fort or City,Ezek.21.22. Amos 2.2.or ſuch a crack, as Gates or Walls, being violently broken aſunder, or broken down; are wont to give, alluded to,Ier.49.21.Ezek. 26.15. The reaſon of the ambiguity is, becauſe both the root whence this word comes (being no where elſe found) and ſome others derived from the ſame, and in found coming neer it,have in them, not unuſually, a notion of either: the reaſon whereof, may ſeem to be, becauſe ſuch aſſaults,whereby deſolation is wrought, are commonly accompanied with fearful out-cries on either ſide. See on chap.14,9,10. The particle,all grant,is to be ſupplyed, as before.

V.13. When thus it ſhall be in the midſt of the Land among the people,there ſhall be,as the ſhaking of an Olive-tree, and as the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done]or, For ſo(as Gen.15.5. Yet ſhall be in the Land among the people, as in the beating of an Olive-tree, as with cluſters left; when the vintage is done. Thus, or ſo,as was before ſaid,it ſhall be, when theſe judgments ſhall be executed in thoſe places,and with thoſe people where they are put in execution, that a very ſmall company ſhall be left, or eſcape; which may here come in,either in way of confirmation of the former relation,and further amplification of the judgment therein related,by a lamentable effect,to wit, the paucity of thoſe that ſhould therein eſcape,or in way of mitigation and limitation of thoſe ſad denunciations of deſolation and deſtruction, that yet God would not make an utter riddance of all,but reſerve a remnant, that he might have a people to praiſe him.v.14. The former I conceive to be principally intended;though with an intimation of the latter. See ch.7.9.& 6. 13.& 7.3.& 10.21,22.Ier.3.14.This ſome ſuppoſe to have reference to the that Tiglath-Pileſer captived,2 King.15.29. Others, to the Jews,that either by the Chaldees were carried captive to Babylon, Jer.39.9.or that voluntarily of themſelves went down into Egypt, Jer.43.5-7.both which I leave to the judgment of others.

in the midſt of the land]or,earth,as Pſal.74.12. whereby ſome underſtand Jeruſalem,ſituate(as the Jews ſay) in the very midſt of the world,or the navel of the earth,Ezek.39.12.neer to which,ſay they the laſt judgment,or ecumenicall aſsiſe, Act. 17. 31. ſhall be held, Joel 3.2,12.Zach.14. 4. But theſe are groundleſs conceits; in the midſt of the land,is no more,then in the land,as chap 6.12.& 7.22.as in the midſt of the people,or peoples rather, (for ſo the text hath it,as chap.25.6,7.)is no more,then among the people, or peoples,as Jer.39. 14.& 40.1.5,6.which yet argues the prophecy to concern more,then any one people.

as the ſhaking of an Olive-tree]or, as in the beating of an Olive-tree; it ſeems to have been a proverbial kind of ſpeech: ſee chap. 17.6.

as the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done]or, as cluſters left, when the vintage is done, a defect of the epithet cluſters, for cluſters left.as ſheep,for loſt ſheep,chap.53.6.See chap. 5.2. and the cluſters ſo left,are called the cluſters of the vintage, Mic. 7. 1. as corpſe left by the ſoul,is called a ſoul,Num.19.13.and wines drawn off the lees,are called lees;by the name of that they left, ch.25.6. See ch.17.6.Jer.6.9.& 49.9. The vintage,the time of cutting grapes hath thence its name in Hebrew, as the harveſt, being the time of mowing graſs, or of reaping corn, is thence alſo ſo termed; and but one letter difference between the one and the other. See chap. 17. 5.11.

V. 14. They ſhall lift up their voyce, they ſhall ſing for the majeſty of the Lord,they ſhall cry aloud from the Sea.]In this verſe,and ſome enſuing,is deſcribed the condition and carriage of thoſe few, the remains among each people,that ſhould be preſerved in, or delivered out of the common calamities and afflictions of thoſe times; they ſhould abundantly rejoyce,and out of the joyful ſenſe and apprehenſion of Gods might and mercy therein ſhewed them, break forth into praiſes of him.So ch.12.& 25.& 26.This ſome reſtrain to thoſe that were delivered in Sennacheribs Invaſion,ch.37. 31, 32. ſome to thoſe that were freed from the Babylonian captivity,Pſ.126 1,2. But it ſeems to be of a larger extent, and ſome extend it unto the times of the Goſpel,which yet ſeems not ſo cleer.

They]or,theſe; for there is an emphaſis in the word, the pronoun not only expreſſed,which ſeldome is, but with an additional adjection alſo to it, as Eccl.3. 18. chap. 35.2. the perſon ſo left; as ver. 13.

lift up their voyce] The phraſe is uſed to ſignifie an expreſſion, either of great grief,as 1 Sam.11.4.Iob 2.12.or, of much joy, and ſo here,as the like,ch.40 9.

ſing] or, make joyfull acclamations, as ch. 12. 6.& 54. Pſalm. 35.27.

for the majeſty of the Lord]or excellency,as Amos 8.7.or, magnificence.See chap.2.10.the ſupereminent greatneſs of his might, and mercy ſhewed, both in the deſtruction of ſome, and in the deliverance of others.Theſe words,according to the diſtinctions in the original,appertain not to this branch,but to the next.

cry aloud]Of this word,ſee on ch.12.6. Some ſuppoſe, that it alludes here to the ſhoutings in vintage and harveſt,ch.16.9.Others, to the ſhouting of Sea-men,at their coming into harbour, becauſe of the next words.

from the Sea]that is,ſay ſome, after their deliverance from their former afflictions; compared in Scripture,oft to a Sea, Pſalm 42, 7. & 69.1, 2, 15.& 88.7.& 93.3. and 130.1.Rev.15.2,3. when from the ſea be no more, Rev. 21. 1. of this uſe of the particle, ſee on chap. 38. 15. & 53.8. But other rather underſtand it of the place, from whence thole voices of joy and praiſe ſhould be heard,which ſome underſtand of thoſe that are upon the Sea,Pſal. 65.5.& 107.23.as if the ſenſe were, that God ſhould be magnified by Sea and Land,Pſal.96.11. & 98.9. Others, from the Sea, that is, from the weſt,as chap.49.12.from Paleſtine,which lay Weſt from Judea, ch. 9. 12.or the ſea coaſt, the utmoſt bound of the Land of Israel Weſtward. Josh. 1. 4. and 15. 47. or, the Iles of the midland ſea, verſe 15. or laſtly, which is moſt likely likely, the transmarine lands, or sea-coasts in general, where any of those shall be found that were partakers of this deliverance.

V. 15. wherefore glorifie ye God in the fires, even the name of the Lord God of Israel,in the Iles of the sea]The faithful deliuered, and escaping the forementioned calamities, as they celebrate Gods name,for both his judgments on the wicked, and his goodnels to themselves;so they incite others also to do the like with them, and encourage one another thereunto:so Pf.34.3.ch.12.4.5.

in the fires] Ye that abide yet in the fire of tribulation,Pf.66. 10,12.chap.48.10.despair not,nor be discouraged; but by your patient sufferings glorifie God,and depend upon him for deliverance, Pfal.94.19.Mat.5.12.Act 5.41.& 16.25.Rom.5.3.2 Cor.4.8,9.& 6. 9,10.Phil.1.18,20.& 2.17.Col.1.24.Iam.1.2.1 Peter. 1. 6.——8.& 4.12-14.or,in the valleys,so termed, as some, by way of antiphrasis, as a grove in Latine;because they enjoy lefs light,that live in them, then those that dwel in higher places on the hills; or as others rather, for the plenty of herbs, and green things that there grow, chap.18.4.& 26. 19. So divers of the Jewish Doctors understand that,Gen.11.28.31.Ur of the Chaldeans,that is,the vale wherein the Chaldeans dwelt,for their Country lay low:see chap.21.1. and they suppose the valleys here mentioned, because more Cities are usually in valleys,for conveniency of watering and feeding, Pfal. 64. 12,13 & 104.10,14. then on hils,chap.32.19,20. and this seems most probable. Though there want not Jewish Critcks that would have the word signifie holes, as two other words somewhat neer it do, both found together,c.11.8.expounding it either of such holes and caves,wherein they lay hid,1 Sam.13. 6. & 14.11.or of such holes and dungeons wherein they were held,ch.42.22.

the name of the Lord]the Lord himself,as Pf.9.2.& 69.30.his power and majesty,Deut.28.58.1 King.8.42.43. see ch.30.27.

the God of Israel]by his judgments manifested to be the only true God,1 King.18.39.Pf.9.16.& 83.18.ch.45.6.Zach.14.9. but therefore,saith the Rabbine,here so ftiled; because for his Israel he doth all this,ch.43.3,4. & 45. 4.

in the Iles of the sea]The Iles, whereof great store in the midland sea,Pf.97.1.or,the regions bordering upon the sea, see v.14. chap. 21.6.

V. 16. From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs] Or,of the Land.as v.3. The generallity of the joy, and praises of God,from that scattered remnant,out of all places,far & neer,where any of them are found;there is nothing but singing with them; all the Land over they sing fo loud,that they may be heard even from the Lands endsfee the like of Lamentations and out-cries,ch.15.4,5. 8.Jer.49.21.

the uttermost part]Heb.wing,as ch.11.12.

songs]songs of deliverance,Pf.38. 7. such ditties properly,as are made to be sung unto some musical instrument,& those are in Greek also peculiarly termed Psalms,Col.3.16.see ch.12.2.

even glory to the righteous] Some make this the subject& matter of their singing,to wit,Glory be,or be given,to the righteous,that is, to God the righteous One, whose righteousnels hath been manifested,and magnified in the execution of judgments above mentioned,Pf.72.9.4.Apoc.7.12.& 15.3,4.& 19.1. Others understand it of the goodly and righteous, by reason of deliverances made beautiful, delightful,amiable,and honourable:see Pf.149.4,9.and they read the words,a beauty,or beautiful ornament,to the righteous: see ch.28. 5.and of the term it self,ch 4.2.righteous, for righteous ones,as ch. 3.10.

But I said,my leannesse,my leannesse]After the relation of this great glory that should fill the hearts of those that should escape fo, as to survive the judgments before denounced;the Prophet,in an abrupt manner, breaks off that his chearful and gladsome discourse; and to shew how full his heart was of grief,and regret for the miseries that were the while,ft to befall his people,he falls to lament their condition,as well in regard of their grievous sins as of the great variety of dreadful and unavoidable judgments,that for the same should be inflicted upon them;withal,making a very pathetical profession,and affectionate expression of his own present affliction, upon the very fore-sight thereof:so Jer.9.1.

My leannesse,my leannesse]The old Latine, following the Chaldee, rendreth it, My secret to my self,my secret to my self.And the Chaldee expounds it of a secret revealed to the Prophet, concerning the retribution of the wicked in one kind, and of the righteous in another;but neither is the last letter in it a pronoun.but the formal and usual termination of the words,as in others of the like stamp; nor is the word ever found without in Hebrew, as it is, when it signifies a secret,in Chaldee;nor hath either the root it self,from whence the word ariseth,or any other of the same flock, any other notion, but of leannesse, as our English therefore well rendreth it. See Num.13.32.chap.10. 16. & 17.4.Ezek.34.20. The meaning is, that the grief of his mind was so great, for the perfidiousnesh of his people,and Gods wrath thereby incenfed, and fure thortly to seize on them,that even the flesh of his body was also wasted and consumed with it, as with some emaciating and pining disease. So Pfalm 69.9.and 119.139. See also the like expression,upon other occasions,Pfalm 22.15,17.& 32.4.& 102.3-5. & 139.82. The repetition is only to manifest the vehemency of his affection: see the like, Jer.4.19.

the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously,yea the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously]Heb. dealing treacherously,have dealt treacherously, as Jer.5.11. that is, they have dealt exceeding treacherously,or, have dealt treacherously oft times, again and again. He cannot multiply words sufficiently, to expreis the extream perfidious courses and carriages of his people towards God; whom by so many special and peculiar obligations, they stood so deeply endeared unto, and had so oft, and so solemnly engaged themselves : that which made their trespasses and trangressions far the more hainous then the sins and excesses of any other people, Pfal.81. 11. Amos 3.2. See the like heaping up of various expreisions to the same purpose, Dan.9.5,6. For it cannot be so fully understood of other persons dealing perfidiously with Gods people;albeit it be true,that divers of them so did, ch. 21.2.& 33.1,8. Lam.1.2.and so some apply it;as if the Prophet mourned not so much for their treacherous dealing with God, as for others treacherous dealing with them.

V.17. Fear,and the pit,and the snare,are upon thee, O Inhabitant of the earth]Heb. Fear,and pit,and snare. The hainousnels and grievousnels of their sinful courses was before, the dreadfulnels of Gods inevitable judgments upon them,for the same, now enfueth. Thus when sin is come to an height, judgment followeth it at the heels, Gen.15.16.Ezek.7.10,11. Mat.23. 32.36.1 Thess.2.16. In these words,a variety of perils, of sundry sorts, is implyed, and they are knit together with a copulative reiterated, as pursuing the same persons; that if they chance to miss in the one, yet they may be sure to take in the other,ver.18. The words run very elegantly, in a neer affinity of letter, and found, in the original; as if we should say,Scare,and fewer,and snare,or the like;yea,the words come to neer,in letters & found,one to another,that sometime one of them ,is,in some copies,read for the other:as Lam.3.47.See the same,Jer. 48.43.

O inhabitant of the earth]Inhabitant,for Inhabitants:as ch.5.3.but there is some emphasis,here,in it;as if each one should be exposed to the same perils of the earth, or land,as ver.16.which the Jewish Commenters would,by all means,put off from their own Nation,to the people abroad in the world.

V.18. And it shall come to pass,that]Heb. And it shall be:as ch.17.4 he who fleeth from the noise of the fear, shall fall into the pit,and he that cometh out of the midst of the pit,shall be taken in the snare]The meaning is plain,he that escapeth one danger, shall fall into another : as if he faid,he that fleeth for fear of the cuemy,either breaking in upon him,or pursuing him,shall fall into some Well,or ditch; as those,Gen.14.10.and if he get out of that,(though he may then think himself safe,)shall fall into the hands of some that lye in ambush for him,or the like,as Judg.20.42,43. See the like,1 King. 20. 30.Amos 5.19. & 9.3. and an allusion to somewhat the like, Prov. 29.25. There seems to be, in the words,a metaphor, taken from the manner of hunters dealing with Deer, or other wild beasts, whom, when they have digged pits for, and covered with some loofe,or light matter,and set toils, or gins and snares, not far from them,that if they escape, either passing by, or getting up out of the one,they may be surprized with,and held fast in the other,do then,with noise and clamor raised, rouze up their prey, and so drive them,while they flee to fave themselves, for fear of the noise, into those pits,or gins, that they have before-hand prepared for them, to intercept them in their flight. Hereunto are also alluded in Scripture,Pf.9. 15. & 10.8,9.& 35.7,8. & 57.6.& 64.5.& 91.3.& 124.6,7.& 140.3,11.Jer.16.16.Lam.3.52.& 4.18.20.Howbeit, I cannot concur with those,who in the word fear, suppose an allusion to such feathers and papers,as huntersuse, with us, to blanch the Deer with,or that string or line, furnished with the like, which they are wont,anceinly, to feare wild beasts with, to the same purpose that ours do;because in Latine,it is termed formido,that is,the fright or the feare,for it suits not well with the words of the text , wherein it is said,not,from the sight,as it should be, if that were intended but , from the noise (which that makes none) of the fear : and indeed, the noise, or voice of the fear, is nothing but the fear of the noise:as,the uncleannesse of a man,for,a man of uncleannesse, Levit.7. 21.the oath of obligation, for the obligation of an oath, Num.30.14. and to flee from the sound,or the noise of the fear, is no other,then to flee for fear of the noise:as for fear of the sword,ch.21.15. or, to flee from the dreadful noise;as ch.33.3.a noise of fear,or a fearfull noise, or,a noise,or report of some fearfull evil approaching,as Job 15.21.

out of the midst of the pit]For, out of the pit,simply:as Prov.5.15. Jer.15.6.with Rev.18.4.Ezek.32.22.Amos 6.4. See Jer.41.7.

for the windows from on high are opened, and the foundations of the earth do shake]This is further added ,more fully to illustrate the unavoidableneis of Gods judgments; the vengance of God breaking forth,and surprizing them,both from above, and from beneath, as well over their heads,as under their feet; & as no shelter for them, against the one; so no ftoddy ftanding for them, in regard of the other.

the windows from on high are opened]from on high,that is, from heaven. So Chap.32.15.Lam.1.3.the windows from heaven,for, the windows of heaven:as, a boar from the wood,for, a boar of the wood.

Pfalm 80.13.or,the windows from above pour down,being opened,or are opened,and pour down,from above. Of which concise and comprehensive form of speech see on Chap. 14.12. & 38.17.The windows of heaven are faid to be fet open, to intimate, sometime, abundance of blessings,Deut.28.12.Mal.3. 10. sometime, to expreis as large measure of unavoidable judgments;and so here,in way of allusion,either to the general deluge in Noahs days, Gen.7.11.or, to that dreadful destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah,Gen.19.24.See Pf.11,6.Rom.1.18.

the foundations of the earth doe shake]An hyperbolical phrase,very frequent in Scripture,whereby is represented that exceeding terrour and astonishment,wherewith people are surprized and transported, upon the manifestation of Gods might and wrath, in some extraordinary judgments; as if the earth, to the very center of it, shook under their feet. See Pfal. 18. 7. Chap. 2. 19, 21. and 13.13.

V.19. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved the earth is moved exceedingly]The Prophet proceeds, ftil,in the rhetorical amplifications of the fulnes and fubversion of the Kingdoms and States,coming within compasi of this Prophecy, so subverted, and all things with them turned upside-down; as if the earth it self, that beareth them,were rent, and torn asunder and shattered, and not able, any longer, to consist, or to subsist. So ver. 1, 18. 20.

is utterly broken down]Heb.in breaking asunder, or to pieces, is broken asunder,or,to pieces, for that is, the more proper notion of the word,and better suits with the object here, the earth. So Pfal. 2.9.Prov.11.15.& 13.20.& 25.19.

is clean dissolved]Heb.in dissolving,is dissolved,or,rather, in rending,or,tearing,is rent,or torn asunder. For though the word in one form signifies to dissolve,breake,frustrate or make void, vows, covenants,and contracts,Numb.30.8,12,13,15.verf.5. yet in the form here used,it signifies to rent, or tear asunder, some solid body,Job 16.12.Pfal.74.13.and there,of the word for clefts,or ruptures in the ground,Chap.2.20.yet there may be a glance at the former, here, in this latter, as noting a retaliation of transgression, and penalty; the earth is broken,and rent asunder with them;because they have broken and violated their covenant with God.ver. 5.

is moved exceedingly]Heb.in moving, is moved. The word is used for such a moving,by which a man ftaggers, so as his feet are scarce able to keep him ftanding upright, Deut.32.35.Pfal.13.5.& 17.1.& 66.9.& 98.18.or,for such a moving, where somewhat is removed, out of its former fixed feat, *Chap.54.10.Applyed to the earth,or land, and the States and Kingdoms thereof, Pfal. 46. 6. and 60.2.

V.20. The earth shall reel to and fro, like a drunkard]Or, reeleth: that it may run in the same tenour with the former. The future is frequently used of things spoken of,as past,or present,Pfal. 1. 2.& 18.6,11,13,16.20.Heb. reeling reeleth,the same term is used,Ch.19. 2.& 29.9.and the same similitude,Pf.107.27.ch.19.1.Jer.23.9. It is the same in effect,but clad under a new notion in other terms, that was before,ver. 19.

and shall be removed like a cottage]Or,is removed,as before. The word properly importeth a ftitting,or removing from place to place; the curse of Cain,Gen.4.14.16.

a cottage]The word is used,ch.1.8.for a fhed, that a gardiner, or keeper of a garden, fetteth it up in it, there to repose, or to shelter himself in a ftorm;or from thence to watch the fruits, or plants in it : and it is there rendred,a lodg:but it seems here to be taken for a tent; either a fouldiers tent, as some, that is taken down and removed,when they are to march,or are quitting of their quarters; or,a shepherds tent,which he removes from place to place,as he finds conveniency of feeding for his sheep, Chapter 13. 20. and 38. 12.

and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it,and it shall fall, and not rise again]Or,that it shall fall, and not rise again;as Judg.7. 13.the judgments of God, by the transgressions of its inhabitants procured,ftall lye so heavy on it, that it shall sink down under the weight of them,and not be able to recover again its former estate. See ver.5, 6.

the transgression]That is,punishment of it:as Gen.4.7.13. Prov. 29.22.

heavy]In the punishment of it,Pf.38.4.Ezek.33. 10. a metaphor taken from weighty burdens,so heavy,that a man cannot ftand upright under them.

not rise again]Heb.not add to rise.So Jer.25.27. & 51.64. Amos 5.2.

V.12. And it shall come to passe in that day,that &c.]As chap.10. 27.

the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones,that are on high, and the Kings of the earth,upon the earth]None so great,or high in power,or place,that shall escape in this judgment of God,ver. 2. chap. 5.15.

punish]Heb.visit upon:as ch.28.14.

the host of the high ones, that are on high] Or.The host of that high one,(that is,as some think the King of Assyria, chap. 10.12.) that siteeth on high,so far above other Princes, chap.36.4.or,as the King of Babylon.in his own haughty conceit, Chap. 14.13,14.or, the host of each high one,with the high one himself,nor their hosts alone, but themselves also : as Pfal.68.12.Chap. 34.2. So is the particle used,1 Sam.1.24.Jer.11.19. or, each high one, in his height, that is the highest of men, in their highest estate: And so the latter part of the verse, should expound the former. But some would, have it meant of the celestial bodies, the Sun, and the Moon,that are faid to be darkned, ver. 23. the darkning whereof is counted a dismal sign, Chap. 13. 10. Joel 2. 21.,10 the heathen especially, Jer.10. 2. Some,of the Angels, that ftand for severall Kings, and seem concerned in their affairs; them in heaven, opposed to, yet joyned with, the Kings on earth. So some of the Jewish Commenters, from Dan.10.13,20, 21. Of Christian Writers,not a few,of the Devils,those principalities,and powers,that are faid to be in high,(as our last edition rendreth it,)or rather, in heavenly places,that is,aloft;in the ayr,Eph.2.2.(as, the birds of heaven,Pfal.8.8.Matth.13.32.that is,of the air,) and are to be judged at the last day,1 Cor.6.3.Jud.6. And some again, of their idols, set usually a loft, 2 Chron. 34. 4, or their images of the celestial bodies, Chap. 17.8.and 27.9.Amos 5.26.Act. 7. 43. See Chap. 19.1.and 46.1. Others,of the heavenly host here on earth, that is, the Church militant,which should be visited, as well as the world, and the Princes of it,Lam.2.1. Dan.8.10.Rev.12.1,3,7. Among this great variety of Interpretations, to which divers others might be added, I suppose that most probable, that by the host of the high one,(the word collectively taken;for those,that sit aloft,chap. 5. 8. are meant those great Monarchs and Potentates, such as the Heads were of the Assyrian,and Chaldean Empire,ftyled not barely Kings but Kings of kings,Dan. 2.37. and whose dominion is faid to reach up unto heaven, Dan. 4. 20, 22, whose resplendent state and majesty, is also compared to the lustre and brightnesh of those celestial bodies,Chap.13.19.with 14.7. ver. 23.and whose dejection and downfall, therefore, is resembled by similitudes, taken from, and glancing at the diffolution and alteration that those heavenly substances ftall, in likelihood, undergo at the last day. See chapter 34.4.Rev.6.12-14. as on the other side, the restitution and restauration of Gods Church, and children,after some long captivity,or greivous calamities, is wont to be deciphered by resemblances drawn from, and alluding to, the general resurrection, and glorious condition that the whole body of the faithful, ftall, at the last day,attain,ch.26.19.Ezek.37.1-14.Dan.12.1,2.

and the Kings of the earth, upon the earth]Or, that are upon the earth;that it may answer the former branch : those Kings and Princes,who though great, and high, in regard of those that are under their command; yet seem to have their thrones on the ground, in comparison of those their superiours, so far above them, that they seem to have their thrones set among the stars,or above the clouds,ch. 14.13,14.See ch.10. 9.

V.22. And they shall be gathered together,as prisoners are gathered together in the pit,and shall be shut upon the prison]These great ones,of both sorts,or sizes, When God ftall have executed judgment thus with them, ftall,as common people captived,be kept down,and kept in so by his Almighty power, that they ftall no more be able to ftir abroad,or to act ought,as they had wont to do, nor be pleasd to release them, and set them at libetty again, then as if they had been all that while kept fast ftut up in some dungeon, or some strong and close prison.See Zach.11.9,12.Rev.20.1-3. and of such like executions of judgment on such,2 King.23.33.& 25.7. 2 Chr. 33.11,& 36.6.Pf.149.7,8.ch.38.33.Jer.52.11.Ezek.19.4,9. Lam.4. 20.

be gathered together,as prisoners are gathered together]Heb.gathered together with the gathering of a prisoner, as some render it;and so it should be like the phrase used, chap. 10.26.& 27.7.& 62.5. but because the former noun is not,in a form of regiment, it would rather be rendred,as the Rabbines conceive it, they shall be gathered with a gathering,(that is, exactly, or ftrictly gathered, so as none ftall escape;as throw with a throwing,chap.22.17. and as, gathering gather,Mic.2.12.besides that,the verb is in a form also implying no leise,and so chap.33.4.Zach.14.14.)as a prisoner, (to wit,is gathered) or,as prisoners(the word taken collectively, as Pf.79.11.& 102. 20.)are gathered together,a defect of the note of similitude,as ch. 22.18.yet some render it without any such supply, they ftall be collected,being collected,bound.Heb.fay they, a collection bound:but this sounds very harsh;unlesse we read, and bound; but the word is not a particle,but a noun,and that singular,and so also, the text seems over-forced. Nor doth that, which some of the Rabbines suggeft, come off any more smoothly,to wit,that those great ones, Israels enemies, when they are gathered together,ftall be as a man in bonds, not able to ftir hand or foot,until they have fubmited themselves to Gods people.See somewhat the like,ch.12.3. For as for the Latine, they ftall be gathered with the gathering of one bundle,it cannot be admitted,since that the word here used, doth no where signifie a bundle,but a prisoner alwaies,or one in bonds,chap.10.4.& 46.7.nor any interpretations therefore grounded thereupon.

gathered together]that is, fay some, destroyed, because she word sometime seems to have some such like notion, chap. 57. 1. Jer. 8. 13. Hof.4.3.Zeph.1.2. but the most take it, in the ordinary and most common sense, they ftall be gathered together ; as malefactors are oft times out of severall places, to be laid up fast in some Gaol or prison, untill the day, either of affise, or of release.

in the pit] Heb. on the pit; yet the particle is also so used, chap. 38. 20. and in the next branch; and if it be so taken here, it may seem, that somewhat else should be supplyed, and the text thus read, they shall be gathered together——and cast into, or laid up in the pit: of which manner of concise speech, see ver. 18. Otherwise it may be rendred, they shall be gathered together——for the pit, as malefactors for the Gaol.

the pit] that is, say some, the grave, which mens carcasses are wont to be cast into, chap. 14. 16, 20. & 38. 18. others better, the dungeon or hole, wherein prisoners are cast and kept, Jer. 37. 16. & 38. 8. Zach. 9. 11.

and they shall be shut up in the prison] or, in prison: for there is no article in the text; nor doth it suit so well here: or, as in prison, as in the former branch; as a prisoner, they shall be as surely and narrowly restrained and curbed, as if imprisoned and mured up in the strongest and strictest place of restraint. There is in the Hebrew a neer affinity between the verb and the noun; the word rendred prison, signifying a shutting up, or, a place of shutting up, Psal. 142. 7. ch. 42. 7. and the verb is in the more weighty form, as Joh. 6. 17, 10. Jer. 13. 19. importing a strict and sure shutting up.

and after many daies shall they be visited] What manner of visitation it is that is here intended, is among Interpreters much controverted: Some, and those not a few, both Jewish and Christian Writers, understand it of a visitation, not for good, but for evil: so divers of the Rabbines, of whom, some suppose it to allude to the manner of mens dealing with captives and slaves, whom they keep shut up all night, and in the morning let out to labour: Others, unto the wonted manner of proceeding with malefactors after are committed to prison, and there kept untill they be brought forth unto execution, or to trial. Where in the main, to wit, that the visitation here mentioned is no matter of mercy, those Christian Writers concur with them that interpret this whole Prophecy of the general judgement at the last day; which yet because this passage seems to oppugn, some of them seems to make use of a Rabbinical exposition, though not naming the Author, rendring the words from, or, for, many daies; and expounding it, of being questioned, and upon triall condemned to suffer for the sins that had been many daies, committed by them; or, committed not many daies after their commitment before mentioned; but many daies before they were brought to their tryal, 2 Cor. 5. 10. But the most of outs, and the most judicious, expound it of a visitation in favour and mercy; such as is intimated in the like phrase, Gen. 21. 1. & 50. 24, 25. Exod. 4. 31. Ruth 1. 6. Zeph. 2. 7. which the Jewish Writers, that go this way, expound, some of their own nation, that though they were held in bonds and captivity, for some space of time, both Princes and People; yet, at length, God would in mercy visit them, and set them at liberty again, ch. 27. 12, 13. Jer. 29. 10. & 32. 37. & 33. 31-33. Others more largely of other Nations and States, that should, after these judgements executed upon them, being bettered by them, adjoyn themselves to Gods people, and find mercy and grace. Where in we willingly concur with them, acknowledging the same to be fulfilled under the Kingdome of Jesus Christ, the true Messias, in those other Nations; and desire to see accomplished, also, in them, Chap. 2. 3, 4. & 18. 7. & 19. 20-22. & 23. 17, 18. & 60. 3, 11, 12. But here a rub would be removed, cast in our way by a late Interpreter of prime note, that may else impeach the free progress of this exposition; the rather, because our late Translaters have afforded it admission into the margent, though not into the text. This learned man, therefore, renders the word here, not, they shall be visited, but, they shall be missed, or, found wanting; that is, for many daies, or, for a long time, they shall not be extant, as he expoundeth it. And it is true, indeed, that fitch a notion the word here used sometime hath; it signifieth, first, and properly, to visit, or to survey: and in the next place, upon survey, to take notice of the absence, or presence of those things, or persons, that come within compass of the survey, and to dispose of them, this way, or that way; for evil, or for good. Hence it comes to pass, that sometimes it signifies to miss, and to be missing; as Num. 31. 49. 1 Sam. 20. 18. & 25. 7, 21. 2 King. 10. 19. ch. 34. 16. But that cannot be made good, which to strengthen this Interpretation, here is averred, that in that form which is here used, put absolutely, it never signifieth otherwise: nor if it were so in all other places, where it is so put, would it necessarily follow, that it cannot otherwise be understood here. For first, it is apparent that it is used otherwise, where put absolutely, without any addition, in a place parallel to this, Ezek. 38. 8. where it is said, after many dates thou shalt be visited, that is, as this Author himself renders it, execution shall be done upon thee; and that indeed is the genuine sense of the place, thou shalt be visited, to wit, with evill, as Solomon more fully, Prov. 9. 23. where the same word is in the same form used, he shall not be visited with evill; and if it do so fignifie, when good or evill is added; why not where neither is expressed, since that in the active, it is so frequently used without either? Again, it seems but an harsh expofition, After many dayes, they shall be missed; that is, they shall not be extant for many dates: and lastly, the like term used, but in the active, of Tyre, chap. 23. 17. After seventy years the Lord will visit Tyre, helps much, both to confirm that which we have here in the text, and to enervate that which the margent suggesteth.

V. 23. Then the Moon shall be confounded, and the Sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his Ancients gloriously] This Chapter containing the first part of the prefent Sermon or Prophecy, the Prophet closeth after his wonted manner, with a passage concerning the spiritual, yet conspicuous glory, and magnificence of the gracious Kingdom of God, in the times of the Gospel, ruling in his Church, by his Christ, the brightness and majesty whereof should be such, as no light of Sun, or Moon; no glory or magnificence of any worldly state, should be comparable thereunto:

Then] When God shall have manifested his might and majesty, both in dejecting, and in restoring again Kingdoms and States; in visiting them in wrath first, ver. 21. and then in mercy again, ver. 22. Heb. And, as chap. 8. 3, 14.

the moon] So called in regard of her whiteness, as here: so Cant. 6. 10. chap. 30. 26. an emblem of worldly state and glory, subject to change and variety, Rev. 12. 1.

shall be confounded] or, blush, as alluding to the notation of her name; she shall blush for all her white or pale face; or, be ashamed, for that the word properly signifies, and so is it rendred Psal. 34. 5. & 71. 24. ch. 54. 4. Jer. 50. 12.

the Sun] So termed in regard of his heat, Pf. 19. 6. both here, and Job 30. 28. chap. 30. 26. an usual type of the greatest and most excellent glory, Jud. 5. 31. Mat. 13. 43. & 17. 2. Act. 26. 13. 1 Cor. 15. 41. Rev. 1. 16. & 12. 1. & 10. for no good, but for evil: so divers of the Rabbines, of whom, some suppose it to allude to the sun, as Cant. 6. 10. ch. 30. 26. from the leffe light to the greater, Gen. 1. 16.

shall be ashamed] or, because this suited well with the former, shall be abashed, which both in letters and sound, comes very near to the Hebrew; whence in likelyhood also, it hath its original; both words are oft conjoyned, as of a neer or common notion, in some of the places above recited, and elsewhere. The less lights lose their light or lustre, at least, upon the appearance of some far greater and more glorious one; which by its eminent splendour dimmeth their former bright, but far inferiour beauty: so the raper burns dim in day-light, and the moon and stars appears not when the sun shines forth, Joh. 3. 30. & 5. 35. 1. 2 Cor. 3. 10.

when the Lord of hosts shall reign] Pf. 93. 1. & 97. 1. when the Kingdomes of the world, shall be the Kingdoms of the Lord, and of his Christ, Rev. 11. 15.

and before his ancients gloriously] or, in glory, or, with glory, as most conceive it to run in the Hebrew, the defect of the particle being frequent, as chap. 22. 17, 18. v. 2. or, as some other, and there shall be glory before; or, in the sight of his ancients; or, the ancients thereof; that is, of the Church of Israel, a type of the main body of the faithful, Rev. 4. 4. & 5. 8, 9. among whom, and in whom, God more specially manifesteth his glory in his ordinances, and the passages of his providence, in the regiment of his Church, Psal. 29. 9. See chap. 4. 5. for they narrow this precious and pregnant prophecy over-much, that would restrain it to Gods magnifying himself, his might and his mercy; in relieving Jerusalem, by the slaughter of those that besieged it, ch. 37. 36. and the Elders of Israel, their going up with their rich robes unto the Temple in triumph, there solemnly to bless God for it, ch. 38. 19, 20.

CHAP. XXV.

Ver. 1. O Lord thou art my God, I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name] The Prophet in the former part of this Chapter, as one transported with the apprehension of the transcendent majesty, might, and mercy of God manifested, in the just execution of his vengeance on the insolent and obstinate wicked of all sorts, and the gracious protections and deliverances of his poor distressed, despised, and dejected people, and with the consideration of his admirable and unexpected wisdom, most clearly revealing it self in the passages of his providence concerning either, doth abruptly break off the file of his prophetical discourse, and falleth into a solemn celebration & praising of God for these his wonderful works, as well of judgment as of mercy; and in the latter part, so recurreth again to his former discourse, that it is not easie to desigu or fix the precise lists or limits of either, they are so artificially interwoven the one with the other.

O Lord thou art my God] Some suppose this sacred hymn to be conceived, as in the person of the Elders, or Ancients, mentioned, chap. 24. 23. and so those words wanting to be supplyed, in that day it shall be said, as ver. 9. or, In that day Shall this song be sung, as chap. 26. 1. But I conceive it rather to be an expreffion of the Prophets own affection and disposition, much taken with the mercy and goodness of God in these counsels and courses of his shewed to his people, such like holy breathings may be observed to break oft from Gods children amidst other their discourses, Jerem. 10. 7, 8. 16, 19. 1 Tim. 1. 17. Rev. 1. 5, 6.

thou art my God, I will exalt thee] So Moses, Exod. 15. 2. thou art my God, the pronoun for the verb substantive, as Psal. 44. 4. I will exalt thee, so Psal. 30. 1. & 145. 1. God exalteth his, Psal. 37. 34. chap. 12. 2. and they exalt him: he them, by making them high and great; they him, by acknowledging and celebrating his soveraignty and his greatneis.

I will praise thy name] That is, thee, as chap. 12. 1. So Psal. 54. 6. out of a full assurance of, what will be done, he praiseth God for it, before it is done. So Psal. 13. 5, 6.

for thou hast done wonderfull things] Heb. a wonder, as chap. 29. 14. but here taken collectively, as Psal. 97. 11. see chap. 9. 6.

thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth] Or, counsels of old faithful and firm: Or, even thine ancient counsels, or, purposes, done in faithfulness and truth. For some read the words, as an entire proposition apart by it self, what thou hadst determined; or, (as those that conceive them spoken as already done in the person of Gods surviving people) what things thou didst fore-ord long since, are all faithfully and really fulfilled. Others, as an additional by way of amplification, to the former, shewing what these wonders done were, to wit, things consulted and resolved on long agon, most faithful and most firm counsels, or contrivances or purposes, (see chap. 23. 8.) for things consulted, contrived, & purposed, as Psal. 31. 12. Mic. 6. 19. of old, long agon, as ch. 22. 11. Faithfulness and truth, or firmeness, for things, or counsels, contrivances (supplyed by repetition, as Psal. 111. 7.) of faithfulness, and truth, or firmeness, that is, most faithful, and firm, or true, as Deut. 32. 4. Psal. 119. 30, 87, 142, 151. yea firm and firmness there, rather then true or truth, because the word in the singular no where else found, is in the plural used for pillars, 2 King. 18. 16. or counsels, contrivances, and purposes; things consulted, or contrived and resolved on; in faithfulness and firmness, a defect of the particle in, as chap. 14. 22, 23. & 41. 2. faithfulness and firmeness, faith a Rabbine, one and the same thing, in two terms of the same stuck, and the same sense; as the like, Jer. 16. 19. But I suppose yet, there is in either place some difference; faithfulness is one thing, and firmness another, and though the one is with God, ground sufficient for the other, yet with men, oft it is otherwise; faithful enough a man may be in his purposes, and yet his designs may prove infirm: but in Gods counsels, both concurring, give good and sure ground of praising him, for the doing of them, though not yet done, when so faithful and firm; and as sure therefore to be done, as if accomplished already, Matth. 5. 18. Mat. 13. 30. 1.

V. 2. For thou hast made of a city, an heap; of a defenced city, a ruine;] Or, Thou doest make Thou manifestest thy might in overthrowing and ruining the Cities and strong holds of thine enemies and the enemies of thy people. A learned late Writer thus reads the words, Thou hast from being a city, (or that it may no more be a city) brought a fenced city to an heap; a vaine a palace of strangers, from being a city: or, that it may no more so be.

a city] Collectively for cities, as v. 3. ch. 26. 5. though some restrain it to Jerusalem, Psal. 79. 1. a most unlikely thing, that the Prophet should praise God for the destruction of Jerusalem, which the Psalmist there is so much lamenteth. Others, to Babylon, chap. 13. 19-21. Jer. 51. 25, 26. with more probability. But it seems here to be more general.

an heap] Heb. to an heap, and so after, to ruine; and it might therefore be rendred, thou hast brought it (or wonting, as chap. 9. 9. & 21. 3.) from a city to an heap; from a fenced town to ruine, that is, to a ruinous heap, as chap. 23. 13. where the same phrase is so rendred, So, to be unto desolation, is, to become desolate, Jer. 11. 11. the latter repeateth the same thing only with some emphasis, implying, that no strength or the creature can stand out against God, chap. 2. 15. & 37. 10.

a Palace of strangers to be no city, it shall never be built] Heb. from a city: of which phrase, see on chap. 23. 1. & 24. 10. the latter part may be rendred, that it be not built for ever, Job 14. 12. added to the particle, as chap 51. 8. & 10. 2. for ever, here may imply, not simply at any time, but for a long time, or an age, as Exod. 21. 6. a. King. 5. 27. Psal. 37. 18, 27. chap. 34. 10. for as for that commentitious distinction of the word here used, that being written at full, as it is here, it should signifie eternity, when otherwise, some long time, but finite; it may by manifold places of Scripture be controlled and consuted: it is full written in most of the Scriptures above mentioned; it is otherwise, Exod. 3. 15. & 15. 18. Deut. 32. 40. and elsewhere; where yet of necessity, it must signifie eternity, when otherwise, some long time, but finite; it may by manifold places of Scripture be controlled and consuted: it is full written in most of the Scriptures above mentioned; it is otherwise, Exod. 3. 15. & 15. 18. Deut. 32. 40. and elsewhere; where yet of necessity, it must signifie eternity. By the palace of strangers, some Jewish Writers would have Babylon here meant in particular; and some of ours, Rome; (the former words they understand both more generally) so called, say they, because there the Chaldean Court was to which strangers from all parts repaired, chap. 13. 22. But the words take the word Palace here, as City before, collectively: so chap. 32. 14. The Palaces, for royal Cities, Seats of great Kings, as chap. 23. 13. called the Palaces of Strangers, that is, possessed by strange people of other Nations, such as Israelites; as strangers, and Israelites do commonly counter-divide, 1 King. 8. 41. Jer. 19. Lam. 5. 2. Eph. 2. 12. for v. 5. or, as some, strong holds furnished and guarded with forrein forces, chap. 13. 14. Jer. 51. 30. Ezek. 17. 10, 11. But I see not how the version of these latter, sorts well with the text.

V. 3. Therefore shall the strong people glorifie thee, the city of the terrible Nations shall fear thee] The stoutest and strongest of them, that before would not acknowledge the, either escaping and surviving in the States and Kingdoms subverted, or living in remote places, and hearing the report of them fall, shall be enforced to give glory to thee; and they that were formerly a terrour to others, shall then stand in aw of thee. So Exod. 15. 2. & 8. 8. & 9. 27, 28. & 15. 14, 15. Psal. 18. 44, 45. & 66. 3. & 83. 16. city for cities, as v. 2. and either for inhabitants, as ch. 19. 18.

V. 4. For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress] Or, because thou hast been a strong hold, or fortresse to the poor, a strong hold, or fortresse to the needy, for so the word properly signifies, chap. 23. 4. & 30. 3. distinguished from strength, Jer. 16. 19. That which shall gain so much glory to God, will be, not one-by the consideration of the destruction of those mighty ones, with their States and Kingdoms, that oppoled him and his people, ver. 2. Dan. 2. 44, 45. but the observation also of his powerful protection of his poor despised and dejected ones, formerly oppressed by them; and of his strange deliverances wrought for them in their deepest distreses, Pfal. 9. 9. & 18. 27. A very conspicuous and remarkable example hereof, doth the raising of the siege of Jerusalem, if it were, at least besieged by Sennacherib, by the raising of his camp, howsoever, intended for the siege of it, after'd, chap. 37. 36. Yet to restrain it to that, I suppose it to be a needless narrowing of the text.

a refuge from the storm] What he had said before of Gods protecting, and delivering his poor people, is here illustrated by certain elegant resemblances, this taken from such places or covert and shelter, as in storm and tempest of wind or rain, men or beasts are wont for succour and safeguard to retire to, ch. 4. 6. & 32. 2.

when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall] or, for the blast of the violent ones, was like a storm against a wall, as rendring a reason, why there was no small need of such shelter and safeguard; because the violent rage of the wicked, until by God repressed and suppressed, Psal. 76. 10, 12. was like some furious gust of wind, or storm of rain or hail, that beating on a wall, and that but a weak one, either wholly shatteresh, or threwdly shaketh it, ch. 18. 2. Ezek. 13. 10, 11, 14. Mat. 7. 25. a storm of a wall, for a storm against a wall; as, a covert for a storm, for a cover from, or against a storm ch. 32. 2.

V. 5. Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place] Or, but, as the heat, in a drought; or, dry place, so the tumultuous noise, or, tumult, of the strangers, shall thou abate. The adversative, oft wanting, is to be supplied, as Pf. 129. 103, 113. to clear the connexion of this verse, with the close of the former. Thou shalt suppress their tumultuous noise and rage, as the extream heat of the Sun, in an open Plain, or on some Heath, putting passengers to much pain, is much abated, by the intervention of some thick cloud, or the shade of some shrowdy tree. See ch. 4. 6. & 32. 2.

the noise] Or, tumultus Pf. 74. 23. See ch. 22. 2.

of strangers] Of whom, ver. 2.

in a dry place;] Heb. drought: and so chap. 32. 2. Pfal. 68. 6. for land, or place of drought as more fully, Pfal. 63. 1. chap. 41. 18. Ezek. 19. 13.

even the heat with the shadow of a cloud, the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.] I joyn these two branches together, because they make up the latter part of the verse, divided by a middle stop from the former. The words may well be rendred, as the heat (is abated) with a thick shadow; so the song, or chanting of the terrible ones was abated: for this latter part runneth exactly in the same tenour with the former: the former note of similitude is supplyed from the former part; the latter as before, and oft in the like, Prov. 25. 12. & 26. 11.

with the shadow of a cloud] Or, of a thick cloud. See chap. 14. 4. & 19. 1. or, as some render it not amisse, with a thick shade, whether of cloud, shroud, or the like: for the word is more general. See Exod. 19. 9. Hab. 2. 6.

branch] Where the word is so used, I find not; nor, were it elsewhere so used, would it fit here: for song it is used, Cant. 2. 12. it is put here for triumph, well sorting with the precedent tumult: their roaring and revelling, their shouting and triumphing shall be quelled and quailed, ch. 23. 11. & 24. 8, 9.

the terrible ones] The same with the strangers before.

brought low] or abated, be dejected, humbled, cast down, laid low, so is the word used, Pfal. 116. 10. I was much dejected, and, before I was humbled, or, brought low, Pfal. 119. 67. compare this with Pfal. 7. 4, 5. there their tumult is said to go amain up: here their triumph is said to come as fast down, and but one letter difference between the one and the other. They, though great ones, that would have it to signifie, to answer, and thus render the words, which (to wit, heat) answered (or was fit for) the branch of the violent, seem to writhe and wring the text too hard. For I spare to spend further words, in relating how strangely the Rabbines, some of them, and some of ours also, tear it asunder: Onely I will adjoyn what a learned late Writer suggesteth, He would have the text thus rendred; As the heat in a dry place, is the tumult of Strangers, the heat with thou bring down with the shade of a thick cloud, the cutting off of the terrible ones shall tellifie it. He confesseth, the paules, as they are in the text, go against him: but he denieth it necessary to stick constantly to them; and yet when they afford a plain and fair sense, I should not lightly depare from them.

Verf. 6. And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees: of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined] Or, Moreover; For the Prophet having finished his former digression, wherein he had directed his speech unto God, in way of praising of his name for such passages of his providence, as he had formerly related: He doth at this verse return again to his former prophetical discourse; and in these words, foreteels what the Lord will do further: When having vanquished his enemies, and enlarged his Kingdom, and beginneth to manifest himself in more glorious manner, then formerly, among his people, chap. 24, 23. he will do as great Princes and Potentates are wont to do at such like cases, 2 Sam. 6. 18, 19. 1 King. 8, 65. Est. 1. 2-9. Dan. 5. 1. he will entertain his subjects of all sorts, out of Nations reduced now unto his obedience, with a most royal and magnificent spiritual feast, described here by such worldly daintics, as are wont to be the materials of such solemn and simply sumptuous banquets; thereby figuring those celestial viands, wherewith God feedeth his people by the Ministery of his Word and Sacraments, and the comfortable presence of his spirit in his Church here Psal. 22. 26, 29. & 36. 8. Prov. 9. 2. Mat. 22. 2-4. Luk. 14. 16, 17. Rom. 14. 17. and will yet further satisfie them, even to the full, by the immediate communicating of himself unto them hereafter, Luk. 22. 16, 30. Rev. 19. 9.

in this mountain] Mount Zion, Gods court, chap. 24, 23. unto which this looks back, a type of the Church, chapter 2. 2. Rev. 14. 1. & 21. 2.

the Lord of hosts] See ch. 1. 9.

unto all people] Heb. peoples, as ch. 2. 3. & 56. 7. as well Gentiles as Iews, Rev. 7. 9.

feast] Not a sacrifice, as a learned late Writer would have it, expounding it of Gods vengeance executed on his enemies, who are thereby confumed, as meat at a feast, and whose destruction is as pleasing to God, as is any meat and drink at a feast to a man; though it be true, that the word sacrifice is sometime used of a feast, Gen. 31. 54. and the slaughter of Gods enemies is termed a sacrifice, ch. 34. 6. for that is not the word here used; but one that hath no such ambiguity, signifying no other thing then a feast, or a drinking, as the Greek word also doth, Gen. 21. 8. Est. 2. 18.

fat things] Fit for, and reserved commonly for Feasts, Neh. 8. 10. Luk. 15. 23, 30.

wines on the lees] The Hebrew text hath no more then lees, as Pf. 75. 8. Zeph. 1. 12. whereby some would have to be meant strong wines, wines not racked, but remaining still upon their lees, Jer. 48. 11. and it is true indeed, that as wines cannot be clear till they have by some time got settled; so they cannot attain their full strength, untill they have rested some space of time upon their lees, which for some time are said to preserve and feed them, whereof also it may be supposed, that they are so termed. Howbeit, I rather conceive, by Wines of lees (for that is to be understood) are meant pure wines, wines drawn off from the lees (the Prophet himself afterward seems so to expound it) as by a city of destruction, some conceive to be meant, a city saved from destruction, chap. 19. 18. and as ch. 32. 2. an hiding place of the storm, and a covert of the tempest, for an hiding place from the storm, and a covert from the tempest; or, as a corple is termed a soul, from the soul that it formerly held, though now gone from it, Num. 5. 2 & 9. 10. and as vintage clusters, for clusters remaining when the vintage is past and gone, Mic. 7. 1. of Wine at feasts, see ch. 5. 12. & 22. 13.

full of marrow] Heb. marrowed, or well marrowed, for there seems an emphasis in the word, the word is no where else found; the word marrow, whence it comes once only, Job 21. 24. and another from it, signifying fat ones; because such commonly have most marrow, Psal. 66. 15. chap. 5. 17. whence also some expound the word here, fatted, or crammed; not fat of themselves, and their own feeding, but fed of purpose, to make more then ordinarily fat. So Mat. 22. 6. Luk. 15. 23. in marrow, not fatness only, but sweetness also exceedeth; so they can excel that rendred another word marrow, Psal. 63, 5. but the word there used doth not so signifie.

wines on the lees well refined] Heb. no more, then lees refined, or, well, or, thoroughly refined: for the word is in the form of weight: and in its original notion, it importeth such a refining, as is used about metal, for the purifying of them, by melting out of them, whatsoever drosly matter is mixt with them, 1 Chron. 28. 18. & 29. 4. Pf. 12. 6. Mal. 3. 3. but here, being applyed to wines, it must of necessity, signifie a drawing of them clear, and clean off from their lees; that being the thing, wherein the purity of that liquor consisteth. The Jewish Rabbines, divers of them, refer all this to the execution to be done on Gog and Magog, Ezek. 39. 4. and by fat things, therefore would have understood, such cloying meats, as mans stomack abhorreth: by lees refined, not wine drawn from the lees, but lees drawn from the wine, Pfal. 75. 8. and apply hereunto, that paſſage, ch. 49. 26. But the tenour of the context, which they little regard, doth, of it self, readily, and clearly refel them.

V. 7. And he will destroy in this mountain, the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all Nations] The Prophet further proceeds, to relate the spiritual benefits that should accrew unto those of the Gentiles, that shall be, by the ministery of the Gospel, brought home unto God, and joyned unto his Church. The first where of is, that they shall be freed from that ignorance and obstinacy, wherewith their minds and hearts were formerly possessed, and that kept God and them aloof, Eph. 4. 17, 18. For they narrow the text unreasonably, that restrain it, to the removal of that great terrour from Sennacheribs forces, that blinded mens minds, and made them at their wits end.

destroy] Heb. swallow up, or swallow down, as ver. 8. chap. 19. 3. & 49. 19.

in this mountain] Whereof before, ver. 6.

the face of the covering] Or, wrapping rather, as 1 Sam. 21. 9. and there seems to be a transposition in the words, not unusual, the face of wrapping; for, the wrapping of the face; or, the face of wraping, or wrapper, as Gen. 3. 24. a flame of sword, for a sword of flame, or a flaming sword, Lev. 5. 15. silver of shekels, for shekels of silver, Num. 6. 9. his head of consecration, for the consecration of his head, and this face-wrapper may seem to allude either to the face-cloth of death, wherewith dead mens faces are wrapt up, Joh. 11. 44. or of condemnation, wherewith malefactors, after sentence past upon them, had wont to have their head wrapt up by the hand of the executioner, or some other, as unworthy longer to see the light, Est. 7. 8.

cast over] Or, wrapt over: covering them so, as it doth enwrap them withall: as in mourning, men wrap up head and face, 2 Sam. 19. 4. and Elias wrapt up his head and face, with his mantle, 1 King. 19. 13.

all people] Heb. peoples: as ver. 6. and so after, nations; all of them, being destitute of the light of grace, and found knowledg of God, while they abode wrapt up in their natural blindnes of mind, and hardnes of heart, and spiritual deadnes in sin, Eph. 2. 1-3, 12. & 4. 17-19.

and the veil, that is spread over all nations] The same thing in divers terms.

veil] Or, covering as chap. 28. 2. & 30. 1. Of this veil, or covering, now resting upon the Jewish Nation, as in times past, upon the Gentiles; yet promised, in time, also, to be taken from them: See the Apostle, 2 Cor. 3. 14-16. alluding there, to another veil, whereof, Exod. 34. 33, 34. For the Jewish Doctors run wide here, that understand all this, of much evil and misery, that should befal the Nations, who had lived quietly and securely hitherto, as under a sure and safe covert, Zach. 1. 11. which as a veil, cast over their faces, had kept them from the foresight of their future afflictions, chap. 47. 7, 8.

V. 8. He will swallow up death in victory] Or, And he will, or, he will, also, destroy death for ever. That the copulative is to be supplyed, both the connexion of the context, and the use of the verb in Hebrew, shew. The second benefit accrewing to the convert Nations, a freeing of them from the power of death, Hos. 13. 14. Heb. 2. 14, 15. and putting them into a condition of life, joyful, unto poſſeſſion of eternal life inchoated here, Joh. 3. 18, 36. & 8. 51. & 10. 35, 26. and to be entirely completed, and fully consummated, hereafter, 1 Cor. 15. 26, 54. 2 Tim. 1. 10. Rev. 20. 14. & 21. 4. For they straiten the text, and give it a very slender sense, that expound it only of freeing the Jews, at Jerusalem, from fear and danger of death, from Sennacheribs forces, by the diſſolution of his Camp, chap. 37. 35. & 38. 6.

swallow up] Or, destroy: as ver. 7.

in victory] Or, unto victory; until an utter conquest be made of him. So the Greek, which the Apostle retaineth, 1 Cor. 15. 54. because the sense is found and good; though it do not exactly render the letter: for the Hebrew is, as the old Latine well yeelds it, for ever: and so, indeed, the word in this form of speech, constantly signifies, Iob 4. 20. Pſal. 9. 18. chap. 13. 20 & 34. 10. which they are too too short, that expound, so long as Ezekiah lives, and so limit it, by the narrow laſt of his life ch. 39. 8.

and the Lord God will wipe away tears from all faces] A third benefit accrewing to the godly converted ones, (not, as some, to the beſieged, by Sennacherib, at Jerusalem, only,) that they shall be freed from all occasions of such anxiety and anguish, as they were formerly surcharged with, and drew tears of from them, which shall then be dryed up, fulfilled, partly, in this life, by the inward comforts, and spiritual joyes, from time to time imparted unto them from above, Mat. 5. 11, 12. Joh. 16. 21, 33. Act. 2. 41. & 8. 8. & 16. 34. Rom. 5. 2, 3. & 12. 12. & 14. 17. 2 Cor. 6. 10. Phil. 3. 1. & 4. 4. 1 Theſſ. 9. 16. 1 Pet. 1. 6, 8. 1 Joh. 1. 5. but perfectly in the next, when all grounds and occasions of grief and heaviness, shall be utterly abandoned, ch. 30. 19. & 35. 10.

God will wipe away] As an affectionate Father would, with handkerchief, or the like, wipe the tears from the face, and eyes of his child, when it lies weeping out of pain or grief. So Rev. 7. 17. & 21. 4.

tears] Heb. tear: as Pſ. 116. 5. Jer. 9. 1. Mal. 2. 13.

faces] For eyes, Rev. 21. 4. as eyes, for face, ch. 1. 15. so face to face, Gen. 32. 30. and, eye to eye, ch. 52. 8. are used for one and the same: or, faces is because with weeping and tears, the whole face, the cheeks especially, are oft blurred and besmeared, Lam. 1. 2.

and the rebuke of his people, shall he take away from off all the earth] Or, and the reproachings it is intended, Pſ. 31. 11. & 44. 13. & 89. 50. Jer. 31. 19. and so in most places: nor was there any sufficient reason, of swerving from the usual & most common acception, & expression of it, here: rebuke, or reproof, (for they are, in a manner, one, Prov. 9. 8.) is a friendly and neighbourly office, Levit. 19. 17. Pſal. 141. 5. Prov. 28. 23. reproach, a spiteful and enemy-like taunt, Pſal. 42. 10. & 89. 51. & 102. 8. and therefore suits well here: for that is the fourth favour God vouchsafeth to honour his reconciled people with a removal, and riddance of those outward afflictions, whereby Gods enemies and theirs, did ordinarily take occasion to reproach, and taunt both him, and them. See Pſ. 74. 2. 2 chap. 37. 3, 23. & 54. 4. Ezek. 36. 15, 20, 30. and of the phrase, see Gen. 30. 23. 1 Sam. 17. 26. ch. 4. 1. Luk. 1. 25.

for the Lord hath spoken it] as chapter 21. 17. & 21. 4. See Ezek. 36. 36.

V. 9. And it shall be said in that day] The thankful and joyful acknowledgment made by the people of God, partakers of these his favours and mercies in those times, is by the Prophet here expressed, though somewhat more succinct; yet the same in effect, with that in his own person before conceived, v. 1, 5.

And it shall be said] Heb. And he, or one, or each one, (to wit, of Gods people, so delivered, v. 8.) shall say, which some therefore supply, and put into the text, reading it. And Gods people shall say, which yet is not needful. Some others render it, that he may say; to knitting it unto the former words, concerning Gods taking away the reproach of his people, and making a parenthesis of the clause by ing between; but such forced connexions make no smooth scanning. The word here is impersonal, or indefinite; and it is therefore well and fully enough rendred, as our version yeeldeth it, containing in it as much as the word in such form of speech importeth: so Deut. 32. 37. where being not observed, it hath caused a foul mistake, making that to be Gods speech, which the tenour of the text duly considered, will appear to be the bitter taunt of his malignant adversaries, and the enemies of his people. So also, ch. 45. 24. & 57. 14. & 65. 8. Pſ. 42. 3.

in that day] In those times, as ch. 26. 1.

Lo, this is our God] as chap. 12. 2. ver. 1. It is he, and he onely, that hath done all this, Pſal. 118. 23. See also, chap. 35. 4. & 40. 9. for what is spoken by way of encouragement there, as sure to be effected, is uttered in way of acknowledgment here, as being really accomplished.

we have waited for him, and he will save us] As chap. 8. 17. & 33. 22. or, we waited for him, (Pſal. 33. 20. & 40. 1. chap. 26. 8. & 30. 18.) and he hath saved us, ver. 4. for he speaketh in the person of the people delivered, upon their deliverance now atchieved. See ch. 26. 8, 9. & 33. 22.

this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad, and rejoyce in his salvation] Or, we are glad, and do rejoyce. For it is the same thing, for the greater emphasis again reiterated, with expreſſion of their inward diſpoſition thereupon. So Pſ. 118. 23, 24. Though some understand it, as spoken of an hopeful expectation of future, preservation and protection, ver. 10.

be glad, and rejoyce] Two words of the same notion, to expreſse the abundance of their joy, Pſal. 14. 7. Chap. 65. 18. & 66. 10.

in his salvation] In the deliverances afforded us by him. So Pſ. 9. 14. & 13. 5. & 21. 1.

V. 10. For in this mountain shall the hand of the Lord rest] These words render a reason of the rejoycing and triumphing of Gods people, and of the assurance of their safety, to wit, because the hand of Gods power and providence, is continually, and constantly stretched out over them, both for their protection, and for the destruction, also of those that attempt ought against them, Zach. 2. 5, 9. And this branch is, therefore, deemed by some, to be as a paſſage from the relation of the gratious exhibition of mercy and magnificence, to the one, unto the declaration of the just execution of such grievous judgments as should be inflicted upon the other. Those other Interpretations; either of those that expound it of Gods smiting hand only, in afflicting and chaſtising of his own people, which, say they, shall then rest, that is, cease, Gen. 2. 2, 3. Numb. 10. 36. or, in taking vengeance upon their enemies, which it shall rest in, that is, shall be long about: as Pſal. 125. 3. Zach. 9. 1. or of those that understand it of the eternal rest of the Saints, with God, in heaven, Heb. 4. 3-11. they seem none of them to expreſs the genuine sense of the place.

in this mountain] Whereof before, ver. 6, 7. for in heaven (as Some will have it) such a powerful protection will not need, no more then strong guards, where no enemy either is neer, or can approach.

the hand of the Lord] His powerful protection, ch. 49. 2.

rest] Reside, make its constant abode. So Pſ. 132. 14. Prov. 14. 33. ch. 11. 2. See Deut. 33. 12. ch. 4. 5, 6.

and Moab shall be trodden down under him, even, as straw is trodden down for the dunghill] That hand of his, that is spread over his people to protect them, shall be stretched out against their adversaries, to destroy them, ch. 11. 13, 15. & 19. 16. & 26. 11.

Moab] The Moabites here, as the Idomites else-where, chap. 34. 6. & 63. 1. and both together, chap. 11. 14. are put for the enemies of Gods people in general; because they were of the chief of those bad neighbours, ler. 12. 14. that disturbed Gods inheritance, & were ever and anon, plotting and attempting against them, Numb. 22. & 23 & 24. Deut. 23. 3. Josh. 24. 9. Judg. 3. 13, 14. Mic. 6. 5. and ready to joyn with any other that invaded them, Pſ. 83. 7. 2 Chr. 20. 1. 2 King. 13. 20. & 24. 2.

trodden down] Or, crushed: 2 Job 39. 15. or, threshed. So the word properly signifies, Deut. 25. 4. 1 Chr. 21. 20. ch. 21. 10. & 28. 28. but so used, as here, Judg. 8. 7. 2 King. 13. 7. ch. 41. 15. Amos 1. 3. Mic. 4. 13. Hab. 3. 12. Howbeit, a learned Writer would have that of treading, the first and native notion of the word; because the Syrians mostly so use it: that of threshing, the secundary; because with cattle, they used to tread it out in threshing, Deuter. 25. 4.

under him] Under his, feet, Pſ. 110. 1. ch. 26. 6. Mal. 4. 3. or, as some interpret it, in his place, to wit, Moabs. wherelower he shall be found; or abiding. So is the word used, Exod. 16. 29. ch 46. 7. & may do not amiss here.

as straw is trodden down] Or, thresht and by threshing, bruised and broken with the iron teeth of the cart-wheel, that is drawn over it, chap. 28. 28. and 41. 15. or the hoofs of the cattel; that tread it out, Deut. 25. 4. Hos. 10. 11. Mic. 4. 12, 13. See somewhat the like resemblance used, of subduing, and destroying, Pſalm 18. 42. and 44. 5. and 60. 12. and 108, 13. Zach. 10. 5. but here, rather, trodden down: because the dunghill followeth; on which it is not wont to be threshed, but trodden, Matthew 5. 13. Luk. 14. 35.

for the dunghill] There being less regard had of such straw, as is destinate to the dunghil, then of that, that is intended to be reserved for the fodering, or littering of beasts, or other the like uses, Gen. 24. 25. 1 King. 4. 28. cap. 11. 7. or, in the dunghill, that being cast out thither, is there trodden down, and trampled upon, with the feet both of men and beasts, Mat. 5. 13. There is, in this place, some variety of copies; the writing is heme, with a jod; but the Maseres would have it read heme, with a vau: and so it is precisely, in, or, on, the dunghill. Howbeit, a learned late Writer, retaining that which the writing exhibiteth, rendereth it, in the water of the dunghill, as the Chaldee, in the division dung and water maketh dirt; nor is chaff, or stubble, wont to be laid on some dry, but on some moist dunghil, the sooner to rot it, and make the better soil of it: So he. But some conceive it to be the proper name of a place, before mentioned, chap. 10. 31. which they deem to be a Town of Moab, the same with that, Jer. 48. 2. though alligned to Judah, Josh. 15. 31. and so read it, as straw in Madmenah; supposing mention to be made thereof, because being situate in a corn-country, there was both great store of straw, and in that regard, the lesse regard had thereof there. The root it comes of, signifies dung, 2 King. 9. 37. Pſal. 83. 10. Jer. 8. 2. and thence the Jewish Criticks suppose this word, being here only so used, to signifie the place of dung, the dunghill. Howsoever, in the word here, there is a pleasant consonancy, between the word used for straw, here, (in that form, no where else found, as made choice of by the Prophet, for that purpose) and this Madmenah, which our English cannot expreſs.

V. 11. And he shall spread forth his hands in the midest of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim] Some, as well Jewish, as Christian Writers, understand these words of Moab; but diverſly, either that he should strive and endeavour by all means, but in vain, to get from under those pressures, that from Gods hand, lay heavy on him, Pſal. 38. 2. as one in danger of drowning doth, to get safe to the shore, Act. 27. 43, 44. or that being subdued and thrown down, he should lye sprawling on the ground, resembling the manner of a swimmer; or that being so subdued, he should in like sort, as a suppliant, spread abroad his hands to God in prayer: as ch. 1. 5. Others, of either sort, conceive it rather to be spoken of God; he shall as one that in swimming with all his might, stretched out his arms, in powerful manner, reach and smite his enemies, on either side, Zach. 5. 3. or, he shall as easily destroy them, as the swimmer parteth the waters with his hands, they being no more able to make resistance against him, then the water against the arm, or the stroake of the swimmer, Pſalm 110. 2. chap. 14. 26, 27.

and he shall bring down their pride] Which reigned so much before with them. See Chap. 16. 6. Jer. 48. 29. as a man in swimming easily dippeth, or thrusteth down ought, that he meeteth with in the water.

together with the spoils of their hands] So some: or, as others, with the lying in wait, or snares of his hands, (to wit, Moabs,) understanding of the wealth of the Moabites, gotten by robbery, and lying in wait, to prey, and spoil, Prov. 1. 11, 13. both the pride of Moabs heart, and the fetches of his hands, shall be pulled down. To somewhat the like purpose, do some other expound the word, but with reference to God, with, or, by, the lyings in wait of his hands, that is, with his hands, that lye in wait: and they suppose it to be a metaphor taken from wild beasts, that ly lurking in dens, and cover, watching for prey; which when it comes in their way, they suddenly starc out, and surprize it with their paws, Pſal. 10. 8, 9. so the meaning should be, that he would be to Moab, as he is said to have been sometime to his people, as a bear, or lion, lying in wait in his covert, Lam. 3. 10. But because a word somewhat neer to it, and of the same stock with it, signifieth windows, Josh. 13. 3. 2 King. 7. 2. chap. 24. 18. which were in those parts of lattice, 2 King. 1. 2. Cant. 2, 9. some thereby understand the fingers, that being spread abroad, are as lattice: and so it should be, with the lattice, or, fingers, of his hands: and becaufe the fame word applyed to waters, feems to import fluces, or duns, that keep in water; (fo they render it Gen. 7.11. & 8.2.) fome would have the word, here ufed, fo alfo to fignifie; and tranflate it, with the cataracts, or fluces, of his hands: Which, to me, feems to found very harfh, and not to fuit well with the context; the ufe of fuch fluces, or duns, being to keep in, and to keep up water contrary to what is here intimated, of depreffing and bringing down. The word, therefore, being no where elfe read, I concur with thofe Jewifh Criticks, who inform us, that the word here fignifieth not the arm, as many of our Interpreters miftake them; nor the cubite, as fome other; but the elbow, or, more largely, the nook, or bending of the arm, whether at elbow, or arm-hole; for the word feems indifferent to either, coming from a root, that fignifieth to lye in nookes and corners, both men or beafts ufe to do, Pfal. 10.9, 10. and fo it forts well with the fimilitude of a fwimmer; and may be rendred, with the elbows, or arm-holes: and conſequently, more familiarly and plainly, with the bowings, or bendings, that is with the motions, or ſtrokes (as both the Chaldee, and old Latine interpret it, of his arms. The only difficulty is, how it ſhould be fitly ſaid, with the elbows, or arm-holes, of his hands: but that is eaſily ſolved: for in thoſe places where the word is uſed, whereby they interpret this, and is generally acknowledged to ſignifie one of theſe twain, the very ſame phraſe is uſed, the elbows, or arm-holes of the hands, Ezek. 13.18. Jer. 38.12. In which places, the learned alſo obſerve, that hands, are put for arms: and ſo the old Greek Tranſlators took the word, Pſal. 128.2. when they rendred it by a word, that ſignifies the fore part of the arm, next the hand, or wriſt; which word, alſo, uſually ſignifying fruit, gave, by miſtake, occaſion of that abſurd tranſlation, in the old Latine; Of the labour of thy fruit ſhalt thou eat: out of which, the ancients pick miſteries. Thus have I endeavoured to clear this dark and difficult paſſage; which, as many, on the one ſide, ſtrain and ſtray in; ſo, as many on the other ſide, ſlight and let ſlip, as if nothing were dim, or doubtful in it. I ſhall add onely, what I find ſince this note here inſerted, in the poſthumous Annotations of a famous Writer very deeply ſeen in the Oriental languages. He would not have the word here queſtioned, to be applyed to God. His reaſon is, becauſe the particle here uſhiering it in, is (as he ſuppoſeth) never taken in an inſtrumental notion. Yet ſo is it found uſed, Eſth. 9. 25. He commanded by letters. The word, for the ſenſe and uſe of it, here, he interpreteth it much in effect, as I do; but fetcheth it about another way, and applieth it to Moab. For becauſe he findeth in Schindlers Penteglotte, that with the Rabbines, arbath, (the word here uſed) or arubbath rather, (for to arubbah Schindler ſubjoyneth it,) of the feet, doth ſignifie the ſecrets, or ſecret parts of the body, and that a word in Arabick, ſomewhat neer it, is uſed for the ſame; he thence conceiveth the term to come from a root, that hath a notion of muchneſs in it; (the firſt letter in it, as in arbeh for a locuſt, being not radical, but additional,) and to ſignifie thoſe parts of the feet, that have moſt fleſh on them; to wit, the thighes: and conſequently, by proportion the arbath, or arubbath of the hands, to be thoſe parts thereof, that are moſt fleſhy and brawnie, to wit, thoſe which the Latines call lacertos, the arms. So, becauſe mans ſtrength conſiſteth moſt in his arms, Pſal. 18.34. the meaning to be, that God would put down Moab, together with all his might: and ſo he threateneth; indeed, to break Moabs arm, Jer. 48.25. Now about theſe his criticiſms, I will not contend with ſo great a ſcholar, being, in theſe ſtudies, but a novi ere to him. How beit, well knowing the word feet, to be frequently uſed in ſome forms, for thoſe parts, not with the Rabbines onely, but in the facred Scriptures, as I have ſhewed on chapter 6. 2. & 7.20. I conceive that tho's Jewiſh Maſters, where they apply this erubbath to the word feet ſo uſed, underſtand nothing thereby, but fornaina, the holes, or iſſues of, or in thoſe parts taken from that acception of the word, whereby it is in Scripture uſed for ſuch holes in the wall and houſe-ſide, windowes, and loopholes; or in the roof and houſe top, lovers and the like, whereby light iſſueth, and is let in; ſmoke iſſueth, and is let out, 2 King. 7.2, 19. Hoſh. 13. 3. See on chap. 24.17. & 60.8. and according to this notion, there is no fit applicat on of it unto the hands. Beſides, ſhould it be referred to that other root, as he would have it, I ſhould rather deem the term given to thoſe parts in a notion of multiplication then of muchneſſe; becauſe they are inſtruments of propagation, whereof that root is moſt frequently uſed, Gen. 1.22, 28. & 9.1, 7, 8. Exod. 1.10, 12. What from ſome of the Jewiſh criticks I have obſerved, concerning the genuine notion of the word in this place, was above ſhewed: and how fitly it agreeth to the courſe of the context, I leave, together with what hath been here annexed, to the judgment of others.

V. 12. And the fortreſſe of the high fort of thy walls, ſhall he bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the duſt] The Prophet here turneth his ſpeech to Moab, (as the variation of the perſon, is in this Prophecy, very frequent. See chap. 1. 29. & 10. 3, 4, 25, 26.) telling him, that notwithſtanding his pride and haughtineſs before touched, Chap. 24. 21. & 16. 6. and the height and ſtrength of his walls and fortifications, which he ſo much relyed upon, he ſhould find God to ſtrong, both for him and them, who would pull them both down, lay them level with the ground, and reduce them to duſt: and this he delivereth in variety of terms, and expreſſions, cloſe packt together, without any intervening particles, which needed not, therefore, to be inſerted, to make the ſentence the quicker.

the fortreſſe of the high fort of the walls] That is, thy fenced and lofty walls; for both words have reference unto walls. See chap. 26.5.

ſhall be bring down, lay low] Or, ſhall be brought down, laid low, as ver. 9.

bring to the ground] Or, brought to the ground, as before, Heb. make to touch the ground: as Lam. 2.2.

to the duſt] Laid in the duſt: as Pſal. 7.5. & 44.25. So chap. 26.5. he makes them touch the duſt; or, diſhonored, and turn'd into duſt: not broken down only flat to the ground, but battered, alſo, to pieces, that they are nothing but duſt: as Job 10.9. Pſal. 22. 15. & 18. 42. ch. 27.9. & 41.15. 2 King. 23.7, 15. duſt, or rubbiſh: as Nch. 4.2, 10. Thus if we take it, (which would add much emphaſis) ſome what is to be ſupplyed: but the former, becauſe of the parallel place, there cited, ſeems ſufficient.

CHAP. XXVI.

Ver. 1. IN that day ſhall this ſong be ſung in the land of Judah] As before, the Prophet did, by the way, briefly relate, what affections and meditations Gods people ſhould have, when they ſhould ſo plentifully partake of the mercies of God above mentioned ch. 25.9. ſo here thorow this whole Chapter, he delivereth them a large ſong, of purpoſe penned by him, for them, ſuitable to their affections, before related, then to be made uſe of, what time theſe benefits ſhould betide them. See the like, chap. 12. The Pſalm, or Song, is wholly ſpent, in the relation and acknowledgment: 1. Of their former extream miſery, in their forepaſſed difficulties and diſtreſſes. 2. Of gods gracious mercy and free goodneſſe, in the ſupporting of them under them, and delivering them out of them 3. Of the obſtinacy of the wicked under Gods hand, together with his juſt judgment inflicted on them for it, to their endleſſe deſtruction.

in that day] As chap. 25.9. & 27.1.

in the land of Judah] In the Church: as Jer. 31.23.

we have a ſtrong city] To wit, Jeruſalem, while God protecteth it, chap. 37.35. and the Church of God, thereby typified, Pſal. 125. 1, 2. Matth. 16.18. Heb. a city of ſtrength; as, a fort of ſtrength, for, a ſtrong fort, Prov. 18.10.

ſalvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks] Heb. ſalvation he ſetteth; that is, ſalvation is ſet: as chap. 25.9. the main ground of the cities ſtrength, not her walls, or motes between the walls, or her outward means of defence, chap. 22. 9-11. but Gods protection, his ſalvation, ſufficient inſtead of all theſe, and without which, none of theſe were able to ſecure them, Pſal. 121. 3, 8. & 125. 1, 2. chap. 60.18. Zach. 2.5.

walls and bulwarks] Heb. bulwark: or, whatſoever it is, that the word here uſed, ſignifies. So Lam. 2.8. where wall, and it, are likewiſe joyned together, and is rendred rampart. Some would have the word to ſignifie a ditch, or trench, chap. 22. 11. as our Engliſh renders it, 2 Sam. 20.15. Some, the counterſcarf, or the outer, and lower wall, that ſtandeth before the inner, and higher. For their cities were many of them double-walled, chap. 22. 11. and ſo thoſe take it, 2 Sam. 20. 15. that underſtand the words ſtone of the city: Some, the parapet, or bank of earth, or ſome other like fortification raiſed within the wall to ſtrengthen it. Others, laſtly, the coping of the wall. Whereof, ſee Vitruvius, l. 2. c. 8. and Curtius, l. 9. c. 4. for the ſhooting of the rain, making the fence ſtrmer, and entrance over it, the more difficult. The Jewiſh Rabbines ſeem doubtful of it, and differ much about it. and though it be here, and elſe where, in the two latter places above mentioned, diſtinguiſhed from the wall; yet it ſeems to be uſed for the wall in general: and is ſo rendred, 1 King. 21. 23. though ſome Jewiſh Doctors would have the text there altered, and a letter added to make it agree with, 2 King. 9.36. Howſoever, this, and wall here, are uſed to comprehend all means of fortification, which Gods ſafeguard is alone ſufficient to countervail. where wanting; and to add ſtrength ſufficient for ſafety, where weak: and theſe ſeem here, as to be oppoſed to thoſe ſtrong and ſtately walls of Moab, that were to be battered and broken down, ch. 25. 12. wanting that principal ſtrength, which this city is from God ſaid to have; and withal, to have ſome eye to the naked, and undefenced eſtate of that city, that continued ſtill diſmantled for ſome ſpace of time, even after the peoples return from the captivity, to aſſure them of Gods protection, and to ſtrengthen their faith in him, as ſufficient to ſecure them, notwithſtanding the want, or weakneſs of ſuch outward means of defence, Neh. 1. 2. & 2. 13. & 4. 2, 3. See Zach. 2.4, 5. a good Comment upon this place.

V. 2. Open ye the gates, that the righteous Nation which keepeth the truth may enter in] He willeth either the gates of Jeruſalem, a type of the Church, to be ſet open for the receipt of thoſe returning from diſperſion or captivity that had continued faithful with their God, or by repentance returned to him; thereby intimating, both the multitudes of thoſe that ſhould be referred in thoſe calamitous times, to replenish and recruit that city and State; as alſo, the confluence of others together with them unto Gods Church, when the limits thereof ſhould be enlarged, chap. 60.11. Zach. 2.11. & 8. 4, 5, 22. or, as ſome, of the Temple that the people preſerved, and returned, might enter thither, to praiſe God for his mercy toward them, in the deliverances vouchſafed them, Pſal. 24.7, 9. & 118.19, 20. But the former ſeems the better, and is the more received: for they draw it out too far, that underſtand it of letting heaven gates open at the laſt day for all the faithful, Mat. 25. 10, 34.

the righteous Nation] As ch. 60.21, & 61.11. a reſerved and upright people: ſuch righteouſneſſe is here intimated, as is ſpoken of, Mat. 5. 20. Luk. 1.6. what ſome add of imputed righteouſneſs, ſeems not here aimed at.

that keepeth truth] Heb. truths, or faithfulneſſes, as Prov. 13.17. & 14.5. & 20.6. that have continued conſtantly faithfully with God. Pſ. 31.23. Hoſ. 11.12. Rev. 2.10, 26. & 3.8, 10. & 14.12. Some expound it of faith, as well to Man, as to God; in the former whereof, the Phariſees failed. Mat. 23.23. as alſo, hypocrites uſually do: See 1. 1. 14, 15, 16. But this I ſuppoſe is too nice.

V. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtaid on thee, becauſe he truſteth in thee] Or, The ſtaid mind wilt thou keep in continued peace: Or, To the ſtaid mind wilt thou preſerve conſtant peace. So, the moſt, referring the firſt words unto the godly mans conſtancy, in adhereing unto, and depending upon God, and aſſuring all, that ſo do, of a continued courſe of peace, and proſperity from God; Or, as others, who ſuppoſe (but without ground) that there would be a tautology in the latter part of the verſe, if the former were ſo underſtood; and require therefore to have the former applyed unto God, By a firm thought, or purpoſe, wilt thou preſerve conſtant peace unto them, (that is, to the faithful before mentioned, v. 2. becauſe they truſt in thee, Pſ. 37.40. Rom. 11.22. Tim. 1.9.

whoſe mind is ſtaid] Heb. a ſtayed thought or imagination, or mind, or purpoſe, the word ſignifieth properly a frame, or faſhion, or thing framed and faſhioned, by the potters art and skill, chap. 29.16. Hence it is tranſlated, and applyed ſometimes to mans body, and the frame and model of it, Job 17.7. Pſal. 103.14. ſometime to the ſoul; and to the mind more ſpecially, that is as a mint, or forge in it; and ſo it ſignifies any thing whatſoever is framed, conceived, or contrived in it, be it thought, imagination, deliberation, determination, or the like, Geneſis 6.5. and 8.21. Deuter. 31. 21. 1 Chron. 28. 9. and 29.18.

ſtayed on thee] As ch. 48.2. they ſtay themſelves upon God, but that is in another form. Or ſimply ſtayed, applied to Gods precepts and purpoſes, Pſal. 111.8. to the godly mans heart and mind, Pſal. 112. 8. here, a ſtayed mind; for, a man of a ſtayed mind, a firm or conſtant minded man: as firmneſſe, for hands of firmneſſe, hands firm and ſtedy, Exod. 17.12. and firmneſſe, or faithfulneſs, for precepts of firmneſs or faithfulneſſe; firm and faithful precepts, Pſal. 119.86. to folly, for a man of folly, a fool, Prov. 24.9. and, wiſdome, for a man of wiſdome; a wiſe man, Mic. 6.9. and peace, for a man of peace, a peaceable man, Pſal. 120.7. and prayer, for a man of prayer; a devout man, Pſalm 109.4.

perfect peace] Or, conſtant continued peace; or all manner of true & ſound peace, Joh. 14.27. & 16.33. Rom. 5.1. & 14.17. Phil. 4.7. Heb. peace, peace, as chap. 57.19. peace, for proſperity, as ch. 48.18. Pſal. 119. 165.

becauſe he truſteth in thee.] So Pſal. 37.40. 1 Chr. 5.20. 2 Chr. 13. 18. & 16.8. See alſo, Pſ. 9.10. & 22.4, 5. & 32.10. & 33.21, 22. & 34.22. & 125.1. The word here, is, he, or it, is truſted in thee; that is, by truſt or confidence, fixed or faſtned upon thee, as Pſal. 112.7. (and the ſame is no where elſe read, but here, and there) his heart is fixed, it is truſted (or by truſt and confidence faſtned or ſettled) upon God.

V. 4. Truſt in the Lord for ever] Upon aſſurance of Gods readineſs, to confer all ſure and ſound peace and proſperity upon thoſe that ſincerely rely on, and keep him and faithful to him; and of hisconſtancy, in continuing the ſame inceſſantly to them, they incite and encourage one another perpetually in all eſtates, and at all times to rely and depend upon him. So 2 Chr. 20.20. Pſ. 31.3, 5, 7. 32. 6-10. & 55.22. & 61.8. Prov. 3.5. & 16.3.

for in the Lord Jehovah is everlaſting ſtrength] Heb. for, or becauſe in Jah, Jehovah, is a rock of ages, or, as the old Latine rendreth it, for Jah Jehovah is a rock of, or, unto eternity, that which a learned late Writer approveth, deeming the particle bet, here redundant, as Ezod. 32.22. Job 18.8. Pſalm. 55.18. Hoſh. 13.9. as alſo, Pſalm. 68.4. not in Jah, but Jah is his name, or, whoſe name is Jah, as Chap. 47.4. & 48.2. An argument to induce and perſwade to truſt conſtantly and perpetually in the true God, becauſe he continueth for ever a God of infinite power, able ever to ſave, c. 63.1. Heb. 7.25.

Jah, Jehovah] Two names of God; the former found alſo, Pſal. 68.4. and conſtantly in Hallelu-jah, that beginneth and endeth divers Pſalms, as Pſ. 111.1. & 112.1. & 113.1. and 104.35. & 105.45. & 106.48. Rev. 19.1, 3, 6. the latter, as frequently throughout all the books of the Old Teſtament, ſo expreſly in our verſions, Exod. 6.3. Pſal. 83.18. nor is the one, as ſome have deemed, an abbreviation only of the other; but they are two diſtinct names, ariſing from two diſtinct roots, though both of the ſame ſignification, and have a notion of being in them, and either name therefore belongeth unto the only true God; both in regard of his own eternal and immutable eſſence, or being, which he hath from no other, but in, and of himſelf only, and is no other then himſelf, Exod. 3.14. & in regard alſo of his works, the creatures which have their being all from him, Gen. 1.1. & 2.1. Pſal. 146.6. Act. 17.25, 28. Rom. 11.36. Rev. 4.11. and of his word and counſels, and their accompliſhments, which he never fails to give being to, in their due and appointed ſeaſon, Exod. 6.3. & 12.41. Pſal. 33.11. & 146.6. Chap. 14.24, 27. & 55.11. Thoſe of ours, that would have us one to ſignifie here God the Father; and the other, God the Son; and render the text, in the Lord, the Lord is ſtrength for ever, that is, the Son in the Father, according to that, I am in the Father, and the Father in me, Joh. 14.10. That I am in the Lord, as their wall is the Lord, Gen. 19.23. and, the Lord with the Lord, 2 Tim. 1.18. ſeem to ſpeak thats out of the text, that the Prophet therein never intended, and to alter the genuine ſyntax of it.

everlaſting ſtrength] The word rendred ſtrength, ſignifies primarily a rock, Deut. 32.13. Job 18.4. It is given on to God, in regard of his invincible and unmoveable firmneſs and ſtrength, ſometime ſimply and abſolutely, he rock, he is a faithfull God, Deut. 32.4. and, the rock that begat thee, the God that formed thee, Deut. 32. 18. and, Their rock is not as our rock, Deut. 32.31. that is their God, as our God: ſometime, with ſome ſpecial reference to the creature, as he who alone is able to ſecure them, and ſupport them: and ſuch an one therefore, as they may alone confidently repair to, and rely upon. Hence thoſe ſpeeches, no is a rock, (that is one to be truſted to, or relied upon) ſave our Godſand, There is no rock like our God, 1 Sam. 2.2. and this phraſe alludes, partly to ſuch places, as men or beaſts are wont to repair to for ſhade and ſafeguard, Judg. 15.8. & 20.47. Pſal. 104.18. Prov. 30.26. and hence is God called, as a Rock of habitation, that is a laſting Rock, Deut. 32.15, 18. Sam. 22. 47. partly to ſuch firm grounds and bottomes, as men are wont to make choice of to build upon, that their dwellings may be firm, and their ſtructure ſtand ſure, ch. 22.16. Mat. 7.24, 25. and to this, more eſpecially, the Prophet ſeems here to have had an eyeas alſo, 2.8.16. & 33. 16. So Mat. 16.18. Rom. 9.33. Epheſ. 2.20. 1 Pet. 2.6.

everlaſting] Heb. of ages, ſuch as continueth firm, and the ſame throughout all ages, Pſal. 102.27. & 146.10. So, a King dome of ages, for an everlaſting Kingdom, Pſ. 145.13. and ſalvation of ages, for everlaſting ſalvation, ch. 45.17. and, righteouſneſſe of ages, for everlaſting righteouſneſs, Dan. 9.24.

V. 5. For he bringeth down thoſe that dwell on high] An argument to perſwade men to truſt in God, and to give them aſſurance of his ability to protect thoſe that depend upon him, againſt the proudeſt and moſt prevalent of thoſe that oppugn or oppoſe them, taken from a preſent and pregnant proof of his power, in pulling down ſuch mighty Potentates that ſate aloft ſo high above others, and ruinating their ſtrongeſt and beſt defenced Cities, and enabling ſuch of his, as were in regard of their ſeeming wants and weakneſſes in the eyes of fleſh and bloud accounted contemptible, and unable to effect ought to prevail againſt thoſe, and even to trample upon them that had ſo mean an eſteem of them, and had formerly oppreſſed them, God then ſuffering it for their ſins.

he bringeth down] Or, hath brought down; for it is ſpoken, as of a thing now done and paſt. See ver. 1.

thoſe that dwell on high] Or, that ſit aloft, either that dwel in high walled Towns, and high built Palaces; See Jer. 51.25, 53, 58. or, ſit on high thrones, in ſtate far above others. See ch. 14.13, 14. & 24.21. & 25.11. Dan. 4.37.

the lofty City he layeth it low] Or, hath layed it low, a redundancy of the pronoun very frequent, as Gen. 5.29. Pſal. 1.4.

he layeth it low even to the ground, he bringeth it even to the duſt] Or, he hath laid it low even to the ground, he hath brought it even to the duſt. Heb. made it to touch even the duſt. See Chap. 25. 12. & 32. 19. The whole verſe may be read, as ſome give it. For he hath brought down thoſe that dwell on high, and the lofty city he hath laid it low, he hath laid it low even to the ground, he hath brought it to the duſt; and this beſt agreeth with the diſtinctions in the original.

V. 6. The foot ſhall tread it down, even the feet of the poor, and the ſteps of the needy] Or, So that the foot treadeth it down, that it is trampled upon, and that by thoſe that ſeem pooreſt, and of leaſt ability, or were formerly ſuch. See Chap. 14.30. a defect of the particle, intimating the effect or event of which, ſee on ch. 7.25. The copulatives are wanting, nor need be inſerted, becauſe the ſenſe is plain enough without them, and their abſence makes the ſentence the quicker. The ſum is, he ſetteth up his poor formerly afflicted ones over the power of their proud Oppreſſors, Joſh. 10.4. 1 Sam. 2. 8. Luk. 1.52. & 10.19. Rom. 16.20. Rev. 2.26. that which is ſet forth by a ſimilitude taken from cattle that tread down the graſe, which even the leſſer can do with the rankeſt of it. See c. 37.29. Ezek. 24.18. Mal. 4.2, 3.

foot] For, feet, as Job 39.15. Pſ. 9.15. & 36.11. Put collectively, as alſo poor one, and needy one, for poor and needy perſons, as Pſ. 9.18. & 10.9.

V. 7. The way of the juſt is uprightneſs: thou moſt upright doeſt weigh the path of the juſt] From this verſe the Prophet directeth his ſpeech unto God, and ſo runneth on through the greateſt part of it that followeth, relating therein the various paſſages of his providence, and acknowledging his goodneſſe in going along with them, in them, and in due time giving a good iſſue of them. This verſe ſome expound of the juſt and upright courſes that the faithful take in all eſtates: yet ſo, that their ability ſo to do, is from God who strengthens them therein, and enableth them thereunto, Psal. 37.23. Phil. 3.13. Col. 1.10, 11. Others rather, of Gods gracious providence out of his free favour towards them: so disposing of all occurrents befalling them, that in all their courses, and the passages of this life, they find a way made for them, and such impediments removed as might prove prejudicial unto them, or hinder their free progress, fet forth by a metaphor taken from ways that are levelled, for the more eafe & conveniency of paffengers, and the ſtones or other like matter removed, that may offend them in their paſſage, ſee Pſ. 5.8. & 18.32. & 27.11. & 143.10. & 40.3, 4. & 62.10. Some read the Pſ. 5.8. & 18.32. & 27.11. & 143.10. & 40.3, 4. & 62.10. Some read the verſe, not disjoynted in two ſeveral axioms, as we have it but in one continued ſentence, The juſt doth level the way of the juſt with all evenneſſe, or, with moſt even courſe; the path of the juſt with an even poiſe or ballance. So there ſhould be a deficit both of the particle with in either member, which is common: ſee Chapter 24. 22, 28. and of the ſubject, or ſubſtantive alſo, in the latter: the like whereunto, ſee 6.5.2. But I rather divide it, as our Engliſh doth.

The way of the juſt is uprightneſſe] Or, a moſt even, or, ſtrait way. Heb. evenneſſe, or ſtraitneſſe, for a way of evenneſſe, or ſtraitneſſe; the word ſupplyed in the predicate from the ſubject, as Pſal. 111.7. the workes of his hands are works of truth and judgment, and thy law is a law of truth, Pſal. 119.142. and thy precepts, precepts of uprightneſſe Pſal. 119.172. and a way of evenneſſe, or ſtraitneſſe, for a moſt even way, as a place of plainneſſe, or evenneſſe, for a plain or even place, Pſal. 26.12. without rubs or hilloeks ſo Jer. 31.9. in an even way wherein they ſhall not ſtumble, or a moſt ſtrait way, without windings & turnings, Prov. 4.26, 27. as, a land of ſtraitneſſe, or evenneſſe, for a moſt ſtrait, or moſt even land, ver. 10. See Prov. 21.10. where the ſame, in effect, is ſaid, that is here, & may ſerve as a comment for this place.

of the juſt] Such as were before deſcribed, v. 2.

thou moſt upright doſt weigh the path of the juſt] This way the Jewiſh Commentators moſt of them go; yet the words might peradventure better be rendred, Thou doſt with evenneſſe ballance the path of the righteous: with evenneſſe, that is, evenly: for the word is ſometime uſed ſubſtantively, as Pſ. 111.8. and we need not take in poiſe or alſo uſed ſubſtantively, as Pſ. 111.8. and we need not take in poiſe or ballance: or thus, the even path of the righteous thou doſt ballance, or levell rather, for there is no uſe of a ballance here; that is, thou O Lord, doſt by the levelling of them make them thus even: of the phraſe, or manner of ſpeech, ſee on c. 34.10. This I conceive to be the genuine, both ſenſe, and ſyntax of the place. For the further clearing whereof, we are to take notice of the uſe of the word rendred weigh, which though it ſeem properly, ſo to ſignifie, in regard of a weird that either comes from it, or it comes from, (for in Hebrew, verbs ſometime come from nouns, ſignifying a ballance, Prov. 16.11. c. 49.11. where it is rendred weight in the one place, ſcales in the other, and it may be, would be better beam in either: Yet in that ſenſe properly, it is never found uſed in Scripture, but another in the room of it, whereof the ſhekel hath its name: but by a metaphor thence taken, it is uſed for to conſider, q thing exactly, and to decide, or do it exactly: to which purpoſe, ſee on Pſal. 58.2. where it is very elegantly uſed; and being applyed to a way or path, it hath a two-fold notion: for ſometime it ſignifies, to conſider exactly what manner of way it is, whether good or bad, right or wrong, that is, as we uſe to ſay, to weigh it well, as in a ballance, or to ponder it, as it is rendred, Prov. 4.26. & 5.6.21. ſometime to level it, or to make it exactly even: ſo it is taken, Pſal. 78. 50. where it is but ſlenderly tranſlated, he made a way, whereas it ſhould be, He levelled a path for his wrath: he cleared a paſſage for it, that it might without let or interruption (as Exod. 32.10.) proceed to do execution on the obſtinate Egyptian: And ſo it is to be here underſtood, Thou doſt by ſtinate Egyptian: And ſo it is to be here underſtood, Thou doſt by ſtraiting make the juſt mans path even. As for weighing them out ſtraiting make the juſt mans path even. As for weighing them out as in a ballance, a juſt and due proportion of chaſtiſements and deas in a ballance, a juſt and due proportion of chaſtiſements and deliverances, or carrying an even hand in chaſtiſing of them when liverances, or carrying an even hand in chaſtiſing of them when they do amiſſe, and relieving them again upon their repentance; neither of them ſeem to be proper to this place, no more then of the weighing of mens ſpirits, or pondering of their hearts, Prov. 16.2. & 21.2. where another word is uſed, which yet ſome would alſo draw hither.

V. 8 Yea, in the way of thy judgments, O Lord, we have waited for thee] Or: Even. An effect of their faith, and confident aſſurance of ſuch dealing of God with his People, which they formerly profeſſed, v. 7. to wit, that in conſideration hereof, even then, when God ſeemed to lead them along through rough and rugged ways, yet they ſtill depended upon him, and their hearts and affections hung continually after him, and kept cloſe with him, hopefully expecting an iſſue out of them, & patiently waiting until the time thereof ſhould come.

in the way] Properly, the high way, or trawellers way, ch. 33.8. Gods way of Chaſtiſement, is an ordinary way with his, Pſ. 73.14. & 89.31, 32. a deſect of the particle; as Hoſ. 6.9.

of thy judgments] That is, chaſtiſements, 1 Cor. 11.32. ſo called, either becauſe diſpenſed with moderation, Jer. 10.24. & 11. 30. See ch. 27.7, 8. or, becauſe in inflicting of them, God ſeems to carry himſelf, as a Judge; and for the ſubject matter of them, they are the ſame of with thoſe things that in a judiciary way, he inflicteth upon the wicked, Jer. 30.14, 15. Lam. 1.15, & 2.5. & 3.3.

we have waited for thee] See ch. 25.9. & 33.2. & 64.4.

the deſire of our ſoul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee] Theſe words may thus be knit to the former. Even when in the way of thy judgments we waited for thee, the deſire of our ſoul was (for it would be conceived in the time paſt) unto thy name, and unto the remembrance of thee. Our affections were not enſtranged from thee, but our hearts were ſtill towards thee, and our minds on thee, Pſ. 44.17, 18. Joh 13.1. ch. 64.5.

V. 9. With my ſoul have I deſired thee in the night; yea, with my ſpirit within me will I ſeek thee early] Or, with my ſoul I deſired thee, and with my ſpirit I ſought thee; becauſe they ſpeak of their forepaſt carriage, during the time of their troubles. Our thoughts of thee, and our deſires after thee, have been continual, night and day, Pſal. 42.1, 2, 8. 63.1, 6. Mal. 3.16.

With my ſoul] An affectionate form of ſpeech, So Gen. 34.8. Pſ. 63.1. a defect of the particle: as ch. 24.22, 23. The Rabbins here obſerveth, that a man hath both a ſoul, and a ſpirit, and maketh them here two diſtinct faculties: and it is true, that ſometime they are diſtinguiſhed the one from the other, 1 Theſſ. 5.23. but here they ſeem only mentioned, by an elegant variety, to make the ſpeech the more paſſionate.

in the night] When others are taking their reſt, Pſal. 63.6. & 119. 62, 148. Cant. 3.1. & 5.2. They that by night, here underſtand the night of affliction. I ſuppoſe, ſwerve from the intendment of the Prophet in this place.

with my ſpirit within me] Heb. in the midſt of me: a phraſe here emphaticall as ch. 25.11. and would therefore have been expreſſed, Pſal. 143.3. Dan. 7.15.

will I ſeek thee early] The word is taken from, not the light ſome, but the dim and dusky morning, ſcarce twilight; for to diſcloſe it hath its name,) implyes both an earneſt and early ſeeking. It is uſed, Pſalm 63.1. Prov. 8.17. where deſire is ſincere, there endeavour will be ſerious, and ſeeking early, & earneſt, Pſ. 119.47. & 130. 5, 6.

for when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteouſneſſe] Such a diſpoſition and affection, not they alone, but others alſo, ought to have, under Gods hand: and when his judgments are abroad in the world, thereby to learn the fear of God, and amendment of their lives, Job 37. 23, 24. Rev. 15. 4.

when] So is the word uſed, Joſh. 2.5.

thy judgments] The word is general, and comprehendeth as well the effects of Gods avenging wrath, as of his fatherly diſpleaſure. See on ver. 8.

in the earth] Or, on the earth: & ſo it would be rendred, Mat. 6.10. the preposition is ſelf there requiring it: as on the Throne, Pſ. 9.4. & ch. 3. 26. on the ground.

the inhabitants of the world] Not we only, thy peculiar people, Pſ. 9.16, 19, 20. & 83.16, 18.

will learn] Or, ſhould learn. Heb. have learned. But that tenſe is uſed alſo in ſignification of duty, as Jer. 2.7. & 13.2. or in a potential form: as chapter. 37. 26. and as the future is oft: Mal. 2.8. form: as chapter. 37. 26. and as the future is oft: Mal. 2.8.

V. 10. Let favour be ſhewed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteouſneſſe] Having intimated what ſhould be done, when Gods judgments are in the world, he ſubjoyneth, now, the contrary diſpoſition and carriage of many, ſo perverſe in their demeanour towards God, and ſo deſperately bent to, and ſet upon, evil, that neither Gods mercies, nor his judgments, have any gracious or kindly work upon them, they take the more liberty to live looſely from the one, & they ſtand out obſtinately againſt the other, untill at length, they bring deſtruction upon themſelves, deſervedly for either, ver. 11. See a pregnant proof hereof in Pharaoh, Exod. 7.13, 14. The like texture of ſentence, as it is here conceived, may be found, Joh 13.15. Lo, let him ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. Howbeit, it may be rendred, with ſome others, Yet when favour is ſhewed the wicked, he will not learn righteouſneſſe: or, Though favour be ſhewed him he will not learn righteouſneſſe. See Rom. 2.4, 5. The particle is oft omitted: as Deut. 8. 12. ch. 17.6.

learn righteouſneſſe] To do righteouſly, to walk uprightly: as c. 1.17. Phil. 4.10-12.

in the land of uprightneſs will he deal unjuſtly] Or, in the plaineſt, or evenneſt land, or ground, he will deal perverſly. He will perſiſt in his wicked courſes, though he live among a reformed people, or in a land, where godlineſs is profeſſed, and means of inſtruction are. So Interpreters, the moſt, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian. Or, in a land, or place, where all is plain and clear, and nothing either to offend a man in his way, or to force him out of it, even there will he go awry, or turn aſide to crooked by-pathes, there will he betake himſelf to his wonted wicked courſes, where there is nothing to preſſe him from walking uprightly, or to put him upon ſuch practices: and this I take to be the true meaning of the Prophets words in this place, inſiſting ſtill on the ſimilitude of a way, or path, before uſed v. 7, 8. Gods children walk evenly and uprightly with God, even in rough and rugged wayes: the wicked will tread awry, and run out, though the way be never ſo fair and clear, Pſalm 125.5.

in the land of uprightneſs] Heb. a land of ſtarkneſſes, or, righteouſneſſes: as ch. 59.14. right, or, equity cannot enter, and Amos 3.10. they know not to do, or cannot do right, and chap. 30.10. prophecy not right things] that is, in Jeruſalem, or in Iudah ſay the Iewiſh Commenters; in the Church where righteouſneſſe reigneth, ſay ours, Chap. 60.21. Rom. 5.21, 2 Pet. 3.12. Or, a land, or ground of ſtraitneſſes, or evenneſſes, that is, a moſt ſtraight, or even, or plain land, or ground, where all is fair, and clear, and ſtrait, and even and plain, ſo that a man may walk right on with eaſe; that which David alludeth unto, when he ſaith, Pſal. 5.8. Lead me for thy righteouſneſſe, becauſe of thoſe that watch me, to do me ſome miſchief: Make plain, or even before me thy way, that is, the way that, thou leadeſt me. And Solomon, when of wiſdome he ſaith, Prov. 8.8, 9. All the words of her mouth are juſt, there is nothing perverſe or crooked in them; they are all plain to an underſtanding man, and ſtrait to the finders of knowledg to knowing men: See v. 7. He will ſtray, and go out of Gods way, even where it is ſtraiteſt, plaineſt, evenneſt, cleareſt, eaſieſt, both to find, and to follow. Jer. 2.2, 5. & 6.16. & 14.10. & 18.14, 15.

deal unjuſtly] Or, unequally, and perverſly, (the verb is found here onely) as Pſ. 71.4.

and will not behold the majeſty of the Lord] Or, as ſome and he ſhall not ſee the majeſty of the Lord, as if it were ſpoken by way of commination, that ſuch wicked ſhall never attain to that beatificall vision which the Saints enjoy in heaven, Mat. 5.8. Heb. 12.14. 1 Joh. 3.2. and ſome frame here a dialogue between God and the Prophet, as debating with God about the toleration of the wicked here, and ſuffering them to thrive, and riſe, as Jer. 12.1. and God at length ſtopping his mouth, with this cloſe. But the ſenſe ſeems to be that plainly, which our verſion affordeth: they reſuſe to take notice of any hand of God in his work, either of mercy, or judgment: though his majeſty ſhine forth never ſo eminently in either, Pſ. 28.5. Ch. 5. 12. The next following paſſage iplainly confirmeth it; for we may obſerve an elegant reiteration, or epanalepſis, wherewith the Prophet chaineth and linketh together the ſeveral branches of his diſcourſe, with the cloſe of the precedent ſentence, making entrance into the ſubſequent, and that in a conſtant courſe, from v. 7. to v. 11. the like may be obſerved in the beginning of John's Goſpel, Joh. 1. 1-12.

majeſty] See ch. 12. 5.

V. 11. Lord, when thy hand is lifted up, they will not ſee] Or, Lord, thy hand is lifted up but they will not ſee it, (it ſupplyed, as chap. 21.3.) Or, ſhine high-hand, or hand lifted up they will not ſee) as Deut. 32.17. Our high hand, and not the Lord, hath done all this. Though the workings of thy mighty power in theſe admirable and remarkable occurrents, as well the deſtruction of thy proud and potent Foes, as the deliverances of thy poor deſpiſed people, be ſo conſpicuous, as might well wring an acknowledgment thereof from thine adverſaries themſelves, Pſal. 118.15, 16. Deut. 32. 31. yet they wilfully ſhut their eyes againſt it, and refuſe to regard it. See ver. 10. They that reſtrain this, as ſome do, either to the deſtruction of the twelve Tribes, by the Aſſyrians, for their ſins, 2 King. 18.11, 12. or, to the ſlaughter made in the Aſſyrian Camp, ch. 37. 37. do too much in my mind, ſtrengthen the text.

but they ſhall ſee, and be confounded for their envy at thy people] Or, Yet they ſhall ſee it, and be confounded, Or, they ſhall ſee, (and be confounded at the ſight of it) thy zeal for thy people. They ſhall at length, will they, nill they, to their pain and ſhame, be enforced to take notice of: and acknowledg, what now they will not, when Gods vengeance ſhall ſeize upon them, to their utter confuſion, Pſal. 83. 16, 17. Or, they ſhall with ſhame and confuſion, or to their ſhame and confuſion, be compelled to ſee and take notice of the zeal that God beareth to his people, Chap. 9.7. & 37. 31. in the ſtrange protections and deliverances vouchſafed to them, Pſ. 86.17. & 112.10. ſhall ſee be enforced to take notice of, Pſ. 48.5. or ſhall ſee, that is, ſhall feel it to their coſt and ſmart, 1 Sam. 5.6-12. ch. 30.30. ſo, to ſee death, for to ſuffer death, Pſ. 89.48. Joh. 8. 51. to ſee affliction, for to ſuffer it, Lam. 3.1. See the next branches.

for their envy at the people] Their envious and ſpiteful carriage towards Gods people, chap. 11. 13. that bitter zeal, of which, Jam. 3. 14. or, the zeal of the people, that is, thy zeal or ardent affection which thou beareſt to thy people; and in behalf of them, againſt thoſe that oppoſe, or oppugn them, Zach. 1.14, and 8.2. a metaphor taken from thoſe, that having an ardent affection, ſet upon ſome perſon that is very precious in their eye, cannot endure to ſee any affront offered them, or the leaſt injury done unto them, Num. 23. 21. Pſalm 105.15. ch. 43.3, 4. Zach. 2.5, 8.

zeal of the people] not whereby they are zealous for God, as Num. 25. 11. 1 King. 19. 10. 2 King. 2. 16. Pſ. 119. 137. but wherewith with God is zealous for them, chap. 63. 15. and whereof they are not the ſubject, but the object, as the zeal of Gods houſe. Pſ. 69.9. which David hath for it, whereof David is the ſubject, Gods houſe the object: ſo Joh. 2.17. See the next branch.

the people] That is, thy people, the pronoun ſupplyed from the latter branch, as ch. 58.13. from the former.

Yea, the fire of their enemies ſhall devour them] That fierceneſs of wrath wherewith thou art wont to proceed againſt thine enemies, ſhall for their obſtinacy deſtroy them, ch. 42.13. & 59. 17, 18.

the fire of thine enemies] That fierce wrath of thine, compared frequently to fire, whereof they are the object, wherewith thou art wont to proceed againſt thine enemies, Deut. 32.22. Pſal. 21.9. & 97. 3. as before, the zeal of thy People, which thou beareſt unto them: ſo, my words, Gen. 16.5. Lam. 3.59. not done by me, but done to me; and thy curſe, Gen. 27. 13. not, wherewith thou curſeſt, but, which thou mayeſt incur, wherewith thou mayeſt be curſed; and of the wicked man, Job 18.10. his ſnare, and his trap, not laid by him, but laid for him; as appeareth, ver. 8, 9. and as there, the ſnare of the wicked, for the ſnare for the wicked: ſo here, the fire of thine enemies, for the fire prepared for thine enemies. See ch. 30.33. Mat. 25.41, 46. Rev. 20.9, 10.

V. 12. Lord, thou will ordain peace for us] From God juſt proſecution of his obſtinate enemies with the fiery fierceneſs of his wrath; the Prophet ſpeaking ſtill in the perſon of Gods people, proceedeth to his gracious adminiſtrations, for the benefit, comfort, and welfare of his people. Some read the words in form of a prayer, Lord diſpoſe peace for us: for the future ſeems ſometime ſo to be uſed, as Job 6.23. Pſal 74.19, 20. But the moſt, as in way of profeſſion of their faith, and hopeful expectation of peace, and proſperity from God, on whom alone they depend for it. See ver. 3.

for thou alſo haſt wrought all our works in us] This, many, the School divines eſpecially, expound of Gods working by his Spirit in the hearts and ſouls of his people: of which Phil. 2.13. Heb. 13 21. But that ſeems not to be the genuine ſenſe of this place. The meaning is rather, as moſt Interpreters, that all thoſe gracious protections and preſervations of them, in the times of their troubles and all thoſe ſtrange deliverances out of their troubles, which hitherto had been afforded them, they had been all wrought by God, and to him alone they do aſcribe them. So Pſ. 18. 32. 36, 47-50. & 44.3, 7. and 55.28. and this experience of the former favour and goodneſſe of God, formerly exhibited to them, they lay here, as a ground whereon they build, either their petition for, as Pſ. 22.9, 10. 11. & 27.9. & 71.4.6. and 85.1.4. or their aſſurance and expectation of future favour, as continuance of peace and proſperity, from his hands: ſo 1 Sam. 17. 36, 37. 2 Cor. 1. 10. 2 Tim. 4. 17, 18.

our works] Not wrought by us, but for us: as my violence, for the violence done, not by me, but to me, as it is well rendred, Jer. 51.35. in us] Heb. unto us, as in the former branch; as we ſay, to our hand or for us, as Pſ. 47.4. ch. 6.8.

V. 13. O Lord, our God, other Lords beſide thee, have had dominion over us] but thy only will we make mention of thy name] Or. Though other Lords beſide thee have had dominion over us, yet through thee alone we now celebrate thy name. This paſſage many expound of the carriage of Gods people in time of their afflictions, that though they were harſhly and cruelly handled by thoſe whom God had given power over them for their ſins; yet they had conſtantly, even then alſo depended upon him, and ſuſtained themſelves by the frequent remembrance, and ſerious meditation of his might, and his mercy; and ſo it ſhould be in effect the ſame, with what we had before, v. 8. But the words ſeem rather to look another way, and to proceed in what was intimated in the latter part of the verſe, next before going, to wit, that how ſoever God had ſuffered wicked men to tyrannize over them for a time; yet through his gracious providence, being protected and preſerved, they now ſurvived to praiſe his name, Pſ. 66.11, 12, 13. & 71. 20.

other Lords] Foreign Tyrants, 2 Chr. 12.8. Jer. 27.7, 9, 12. & 50. 17. Lam. 5.8. a defect of the word other: as 2 Chr. 32.22.

beſides thee] Other then thou, who art our Soveraign Lord, and King. Pſ. 44.4. & 74.12. chap. 33.22. or, then thou haſt appointed to be Rulers over thy people, Deut. 17.15. Jer. 30.21. Some refer it, not to the Rulers, but the manner of ruling, they have ruled over us harſhly, cruelly, otherwiſe then according to thy word and will. But I no where find the word uſed for otherwiſe, to diſtinguiſh the manner of doing ought: but for beſides, as ſecluding party from party, and thing from thing: it is frequently found, 1 Chr. 17.20 ch. 45.21. & 64.3.

but by thee only] Or, through thee: as Pſ. 44.5. & 60.12. without whom, all humane helps are unavailable, Pſ. 33. 16, 17. & 60.11. Prov. 21. 31. Some read it, with a pauſly, as a defective ſpeech, but truſting in thee but ſuch inſertions are ſuperfluous, where the context runs full enough, and ſmooth without them.

will we make mention of thy name] Or, we celebrate thy name: We now ſurvive to celebrate thy name; to publiſh and praiſe thee for thy might and mercy. So is the word frequently uſed, 1 Chr. 16.4. c. 63.7. See ch. 12.4.

V. 14. They are dead, they ſhall not live, they are deceaſed, they ſhall not riſe] The people of God do here amplifie Gods gracious dealing with them in their deliverance, albeit, he had permitted ſome cruel Tyrants, as rigid taskmaſters, to uſe them harſhly for a time, with his contrary carriage towards, and dealing with other people, and other perſons, whom he had irrecoverably deſtroyed, Pſ. 36.12. ch. 24.20. Jer. 25.27. & 51.64. See ch. 27.7.

They are dead, they ſhall not live, they are deceaſed, they ſhall not riſe] The people of God do here amplifie Gods gracious dealing with them in their deliverance, albeit, he had permitted ſome cruel Tyrants, as rigid taskmaſters, to uſe them harſhly for a time, with his contrary carriage towards, and dealing with other people, and other perſons, whom he had irrecoverably deſtroyed, Pſ. 36.12. ch. 24.20. Jer. 25.27. & 51.64. See ch. 27.7.

They are dead, they ſhall not live, they are deceaſed, they ſhall not riſe] Or. They dead ſhall not live, their deceaſed ſhall not riſe. Or, Being dead, they ſhall not live; being deceaſed, to ſ hall not riſe. When they are once deſtroyed, they ſhall no more be able to recover themſelves and their former eſtate againe then a man, when he is once dead, is able to recover, and to return to life again, 2 Sam. 12. 22, 23. & 14.14. Job 14.7, 12, 14.

deceaſed] Of the word here uſed, ſee on ch. 14.9.

viſit] Shall the deceaſed viſit, Pſ. 88. 10.

therefore haſt thou viſited and deſtroyed them, and made all their memory to periſh] The reaſon is here rendred, of th s their irrecoverable deſtruction, to wit, Gods ſeverc. but juſt proceeding in judgment against them, Pſ. 9. 6.

therefore] To wit, that they might not recover, and return again, to oppreſſe and wrong Gods people, as formerly they had done. See ch. 14. 21. Ezek. 28. 24. or, becauſe, becauſe thou haſt, in thine heavy viſitation, taken ſuch a courſe with them, that they are utterly deſtroyed. So is the particle found uſed, Gen. 38. 26. Num. 10. 3. & 14. 43. Pſalme 42. 6. Jer. 48. 36. and ſo the context runs ſmoother.

viſited] See ch. 24. 21.

V. 15. Thou haſt increaſed the nation, O Lord; thou haſt increaſed the nation] They return again to relate Gods dealings with them, though in ſomewhat an harſh and rough manner, for ſome ſpace of time, ver. 15-18. yet in a far other manner of iſſue, then with thoſe other before mentioned, ver. 19. Theſe words are by divers, very diverſly expounded. The Hebrew is, word for word, Thou haſt, or hadſt, added to the nation. Some underſtand them of Gods manifold benefits, conferred upon that people, the people of the jews. Thou hadſt added to them, bleſſing upon bleſſing; thou haſt laded them with variety of benefits, Pſal. 68. 19. Others, of the enlargment of Gods Church, by adding multitudes thereunto, Chap. 2. 3. & 60. 3-12. Zach. 8. 20-23. Act. 2. 41, 42. & 4. 4. & 5. 14. Others, of the reſtitution of them, oppoſed to that of other people, ver. 14. Thou haſt added (that is, reſtored) life to this nation. See ver. 19. But others, again, underſtand them of variety, not of bleſſings, but judgments; either of vengeance, as ſome, executed upon the people before-mentioned; God purſuing them with a continued courſe of calamities, untill he had utterly conſumed them, Jer. 30. 11. or of chaſtiſement; in way whereof, God had exerciſed his people with variety of evils, adding one affliction to another, Jer. 45. 3. See the phraſe, Pſ. 69. 27. And this laſt interpretation I take to be moſt likely.

thou art glorified] Thou diddſt glorifie thy ſelfe, or gain glory, to thy ſelfe, by the good thou dideſt, or haſt done for thy people, both in the deſtruction of their enemies, and in the deliverance of them, and reſtoring them, as to life again, Exod. 14. 4, 17, 18. & 15. 1, 6, 11. ch. 20. 18. & 59. 19. & 63. 12. Ezek. 28. 22. & 38. 23. So Some. Others. Thou diddſt glorifie thy ſelf, by thy judgments executed upon thy people for their ſins and exceſſes: for thereby, alſo, doth God vindicate the honour of his name, which by means thereof, is oft diſhonoured, Levit. 10. 3. a Sam. 12. 14. And others again, render the word to another ſenſe, thou haſt aggrieved; to wit, with their ſins: and the word, indeed, doth alſo ſo ſignifie, to be preſſed, vexed, and grieved, as with ſome weighty thing, that lyeth, or hangeth heavy upon one, Exod. 18. 18. 1 Sam. 5. 11. Pſal. 32. 4. chap. 24. 20. and in ſuch manner, is God faid to be vexed and grieved, yea, broken and tired out with the ſins of his people. See the note on ch. 1. 13. See alſo, ch. 44. 20. & 63. 10. Jer. 15. 6. & 44. 22. Ezek. 6. 9. Amos 2. 13.

thou haſt removed it far unto all the ends of the earth] This, the moſt, and beſt, underſtand to be ſpoken of removing the people of God out of their land, and diſperſing them far and wide into foreign parts. So is the word here uſed; applyed unto them, Chap. 6. 12. and in particular, to thoſe of them; whom yet he intended mercy unto, Ezek. 11. 16. See Deut. 28. 64. & 30. 4. yet ſome expound it of the dilatation of the Church of God into all Countries to the worlds end, Pſal. 72. 8. chap. 54. 1-3. Matth. 24. 14, 31. Mar. 16. 15. Rom. 10. 18. Col. 1. 23. Rev. 14. 6. But the former ſeems more conſonant to the tenour and current of the context. The pronoun is wanting, as ver. 11. the preposition, as Deut. 33. 17. Pſ. 45. 6. Thoſe that expound the whole verſe of the deſeat given to Sennacheribs forces, with the effect thereof, and reſtrain it thereunto, may ſeem, at the firſt ſight, to have thereon run ſmoothly for them; Thou haſt added to the Nation: (many of other people joyning themſelves to Gods people, upon that overthrow given them; as upon Hamans downfall, Eſth. 8. 17.) thou haſt gloryfied thy ſelf, (both in their deſtruction, and in thy peoples deliverance) thou haſt enlarged all the ends of the land: the limits and bounds of the Jewiſh territory, they taking occaſion thereby, to bring in and under, ſome neighbouring nations, or have liberty now to enlarge themſelves; and whereas before they had been penned up in the city, to go abroad freely to the remoteſt parts of their country; Cap. 33. 17. But, beſide that we finde no mention in ſtory, either of the acceſſion of any forraigners thereupon, to Gods people; or of their ſubduing any neighbour country, the word doth no where ſignifie to enlarge, but ever in the one form, to go far away, in the other two, to remove far away: as Jer. 27. 10. Ezek. 43. 9. (where if it were rendred enlarge, it would make a moſt abſurd ſenſe) and elſewhere, and the ſubject matter both of this Song, and the whole Sermon, ſeems to be of a far larger extent, then that particular paſſage of providence, or the conſequents of it.

V. 16. Lord, in trouble they viſited thee; they powred out a prayer, when thy chaſtening was upon them] In this verſe, and the two next, is deſcribed both the great ſtreights that they were ſometime in, during their afflictions before ſpecified, v. 8. 15. and their religious, alſo, and earneſt addreſſes unto God under them, for deliverance out of them.

in trouble] Or, in their ſtreights, or diſtreſſe, as the word properly ſignifies. See ch. 8. 22. & 25. 4. a defect of the pronoun: as Pſ. 81. 7. ch. 23. 22. more fully expreſſed, Hoſ. 5. 15.

viſited thee] Or, minded, remembred. as the word is rendred, 1 Sam. 15. 2. See ver. 8. or, looked after: 2 Kin. 9. 34. Jer. 23. 2. thee, whom they had forgotten, Hoſ. 8. 14. and did not look after, but neglected too much before, chap. 17. 7. See 2 Chron. 20. 12. Pſal. 25. 15. & 123. 1, 2. The Prophet ſeems, in the ule of the word, to have had an eye to Gods viſitation of them, by his fatherly caſtigations, Pſ. 89. 32. it is, as if he had ſaid; they then viſited thee thus with prayer, when thou viſiteddſt them with afflictions; Pſ. 78. 34, 35. Jer. 2. 27. Hoſ. 5. 15. & 6. 1.

they powred out] The phraſe of powring out, implies a large quantity of the thing ſo dealt out: ſo when God is ſaid to powr out his Spirit, it argues a more then ordinary, or formerly uſual meaſure of it, to be diſpenſed, chap. 32. 15. Joel 2. 28. Act. 2. 18, 33. and when perſons are faid, to powr out their ſpirit, or their prayer, unto God, it implies a large and earneſt drawing out of their ſpirits and affections, in prayer, with plenty, oft, of ſobs and tears, 1 Sam. 1. 15, 16. Pſal. 42. 4. & 142. 2. it is a metaphor taken from water, that men making no great reckoning of, where it is not ſcant, are wont not to be ſparing of, as of ſome other liquor, more pretious; but to pour it out freely and largely, where occaſion requires it, Pſal. 22. 14. or, to the pouring out of water, for the quenching of a fire, when it hath ſeized upon ſome building, at which times men are wont to make no ſpare of it, though it be ſomewhat geaſon; but to pour on as plentifully as they can, to prevent a greater miſchief: and it may well ſeem to have an eye to that abundance of tears, that fear and grief are wont, not ſo much to wring out of, as to pour out by, the eyes in ſuch caſes, as are here ſpoken of, Judg. 2. 4, 5. 1 Sam. 1. 10. & 7. 6. Pſ. 6. 6. & 42. 3. & 80. 5. & 102. 9. Ier. 15. 5. & 16. 9. & 22. 4. Jer. 9. 1. Lam. 1. 2. 16.

a prayer] Heb. a ſpell, or, a charm, that is, either a paſſionate, and perſwaſive ſpeech; ſuch, as Orators and Eloquent perſons are wont to work upon peoples affections with, chap. 3. 2. or an humble, ſubmiſſe, and lowly ſpeech, ſuch as proceeds from dejected perſons, ch. 29. 4. or, a bemoaning, muttering manner of ſpeech; a muſſitation, ſuch as thoſe ſpel-mongers were wont to uſe, that men might not underſtand what they ſaid; chap. 8. 19. ſuch a prayer as Anna's was, 1 Sam. 1. 13. ſhe ſpake in her heart, and her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: ſuch as Ezekiah's was, chap. 38. 14. when he mourned like a dove: as the like is ſaid, alſo, of this people, Ezek. 7. 16. ſuch a prayer, as the Apoſtle deſcribeth. Rom. 8. 26. that hath more ſpirit & fervor, then words and language.

when thy chaſtening was upon them] Heb. in thy caſtigation of them. See ver. 8.

V. 17. Like as a woman with child, that draweth neer the time of her delivery, is in pain, and cryeth out in her pangs; ſo have we been in thy ſight, O Lord] The extremity of the pain and grief they were in, either by God himſelf inflicted upon them, or while he ſtood by, and ſeemed to neglect them, is further illuſtrated by the ſharp pangs and throws of a woman in travel. An expreſſion very riſe in Scripture. See ch. 13. 8. & 21. 3.

a woman with child] Or, one great with child. See on Chapter 7. 14.

that draweth neer the time of her delivery] Heb. approached to bring forth, or, to be delivered; as 1 Sam. 4. 19.

and cryeth out] As c. 42. 14. The uſual form, whereby we are wont to expreſs womens travel.

pangs] The word ſignifies ſuch pains, as pinch like cords. Whence, ſome ambiguity now, and then, becauſe the word ſignifies either, 2 Sam. 22. 6. Pſal. 18. 5. and 119. 61. Act. 2. 24. It is commonly uſed for pangs of birth, Job 39. 3. Jer. 13. 21. & 22. 23. Of death Pſ. 18. 4. & 116. 3.

ſo have we been] Or, ſo were we, to wit, in the time of our diſtreſs, v. 16. That it may run on in the ſame tenor with the former; though the perſon be altered in the form of ſpeech, (as formerly) yet the perſons themſelves, with the circumſtance of time, being ſtill the ſame.

in thy ſight] Heb. from thy face. Which ſome expound ſimply, from thee: or, by reaſon of thee; as Gen. 6. 13. By occaſion of thoſe chaſtiſements, which from thee we ſuffered, ver. 16. Or, from thy wrath: face, for wrath; as Pſal. 34. 16. The conſideration of Gods wrath, diſcovering it ſelf in thoſe things that they ſuffered, being more grievous unto them, then the ſufferings themſelves, Job 6. 4. & 13. 26. Pſalm 38. 1-3. Others render it, as our verſion. Before thee, or, in thy ſight; as Gen. 31. 35. Which might aggravate their grief, when as God ſhould not ſeem to ſtand aloof off, and not look after them, as ſometime they complain, Pſal. 10. 1. which yet muſt needs be very grievous; but, (that which could not but much further enhaunce their grief and miſery) that God ſhould ſeem to ſtand by, and look on, and ſee in what extremity they were, and yet afford them no ſuccour, Pſal. 10. 14. & 35. 22. Hab. 1. 13. It is a grievous diſheartening to a woman in ſore travel, to have her friends out of the way, that ſhould be helpful to her in that extremity; but a far greater heart-breaking unto her, to behold them at hand about her, but to ſtand gazing on her, and as not regarding what extremity ſhe endured, or caring what became of her, refuſing to lay hand once on her to help her, to afford her any relief, or to further her delivery.

V. 18. we have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind] They proceed to deſcribe, and amplify the diſtreſs

diſtreſs they were in, purſuing the former ſimilitude, by the ſtate and condition of a woman in labour, that hath pang upon pang, and throw upon throw; and is now upon pitch of delivery, when the throws are foreſt and sharpeſt, but hath no power to deliver her ſelf of that ſhe goeth with. See ch. 37. 3.

we have been with child] Or, were with child, or went great; as ver. 17. The old, both Greek and Latine, render it, We have conceived: which many wreſt to a myſtical ſence, and expound of a ſpiritual conception of grace in the ſoul. But neither is the tranſlation right, and the expoſition much more unſound. See on chap. 9. 14. Yet it may well be expounded, as ſome do; We had many thoughts and devices, in our heads, and conceived great hopes of bringing them about; and meanſwhile were as in travel with them. See the like, Job 15. 35. Pſ. 7. 14. ch. 59. 4.

we have been in pain] Or, we were in pain; as ver. 17.

we have as it were brought forth wind] Or, as ſome, we did in a manner bring forth our ſpirit; that is, we were ready to give up the ghoſt, we were as at point of death, paſt hope of life; as 2 Cor. 1. 8, 9. & 4. 11. or, as others, we were, as if we were with wind: we were in continual pain, as one tormented with inward gripes of the windcolick, beating to and fro within the bowels, and putting to extremity of pain, whereof they can attain no eaſe. Or, as others again; but we brought forth, as it were, wind; or, we did no more, then as if we had brought forth wind: that is, nothing but wind, or ſome windy matter. It was not with us, as with women ordinarily going with child: they are in pain indeed for ſome time; but when they have brought forth what they went with, there is an end of their pain; they are at eaſe then, and enjoy the comfort of their former travel, Joh. 16. 21. But it was otherwiſe with us, we wanted not for pain; but we found no iſſue; our pains were eaſeleſs, and endleſs; and all our attempts, and indeavours to relieve, or deliver our ſelves, proved weak and windy, unable to wind us out of our preſent diſtreſſes. Vain hopes and helps, are by a proverbiall form of ſpeech, termed windy ones, both in Hebrew, Greek, and Latine, by a metaphor taken from ſeeds, or eggs, that will not take, or produce ought. See Hoſ. 8. 7. & 12. 1. Job 15. 1.

we have not wrought any deliverance in the earth] Or, we could not effect any deliverance for the land. He telleth in plainer words, what he intended in the former, to wit, that by all their conſultations, and caſting about, by all their deviſes and deſigns, they were not able to compaſſe, or accompliſh ought, for the ſuccour, or ſafeguard of themſelves and their country. So 2 Chr. 20. 12. chap. 36. 1. and 37. 3.

we have not wrought] Heb. will not do. But the future is put oft potentially: For willing enough, queſtionleſs; they were to have done ſome what. we could not do, or effect; as Pſal. 56. 4, 11. I will not fear what fleſh, and what man will (that is, can) do unto me: and, I will not fear: what will (that is, can) man do to me? Pſ. 118. 6. See the like, ch. 30. 5. Job 9. 3. & 14. 4, 14. & 15. 3. & 22. 14. Jer. 2. 11, 23. & 11. 12. Mat. 12. 23, 23. compared with Mark 3. 24.

any deliverance] Heb. ſalvations, Pſal. 74. 12. 1 Sam. 22. 51. or, deliverances; as it is rendred, Pſal. 18. 50. It is thus uſed in the plural number, moſt commonly, in way of extention, and augmentation, to intimate a concurrence of all manner of ſalvation, and deliverance fully and perfectly accompliſhed, Pſal. 28. 8. and 42. 5, 11. and 44. 4. But here in way of extenuation, and reſtriction, for any ſalvation, or any deliverance; as it is well rendred. So all, for any, Exod. 20. 10. Job 1. 11. Pſ. 49. 17. And underſtanding, for any underſtanding, chap. 27. 11.

in the earth] Or, for the earth; that is, the land: (neither in, nor on is in the text) earth, for land; as ver. 10. land, for their land; as Chap. 13. 22.

neither have the Inhabitants of the world fallen] Or, neither did the Inhabitants of the world fall, as they did before David, when God aſſiſted him, Pſal. 18. 38. We were not able to beat down, or to beat down our enemies; thoſe are meant, here by the Inhabitants of the world; as ver. 9. oppoſed to the land, to wit, of Judea, before mentioned. And theſe it was that they were not able to maſter; it was God alone that was able to effect that for them. See Pſ. 18. 37. & 44. 5. Hence that confeſſion before, through thee alone we ſurvive, to effect the ſame thy name, ver. 13. and that now followeth in the next verſe.

V. 19. Thy dead men ſhall vive] Hitherto was deſcribed the calamitous condition of Gods people, under Gods chaſtiſing hand; together with their utter inability of doing ought that might free them from the ſame. Now in this laſt paſſage, wherewith the Prophet ſhuts up this Pſalm, is ſubjoyned a gracious promiſe, or profeſſion of confident aſſurance, concerning the power of God, to be ſhewed in reviving, and raiſing them from that their extream, low, feeble, and forlorn condition, wherein they ſeemed to be no better then men dead and buried, and even diſſolved into duſt. Now this is, by moſt; conceived here to be delivered to Gods people, by the Prophet, as a promiſe from God, whereby they might be ſupported in that their helpleſs, and as it might ſeem, hopeleſs eſtate, aſſuring themſelves of a comfortable iſſue of their preſent afflictions, and of certain deliverance out of that their diſtreſſed condition, though, in the eyes of fleſh and blood, it might ſeem a thing utterly impoſſible. Ezek. 32. 3, 11. Zach. 8. 6. And they ſuppoſe it to be ſpoken in the perſon, either of God himſelf, or the Prophet from God, and directed to his people. But ſome other conceive it to be the voice of Gods people, in whoſe perſon, the words next before, were conceived; as reſtaling what out of their faith and confidence in God, with Abraham, above, or againſt hope, believing in hope, Rom. 4. 17, 18. They then ſuggeſted unto themſelves, wherewith to ſtay their minds, and ſettle their diſtracted thoughts, amidſt thoſe doubts and difficulties, before rehearſed. And they render the words, therefore with ſome ſupply, thus. Yet ſaid we; Thy dead ſhall revive. And ſuch ſupplies are oft very requiſite, for the fitter connexion, and clearer conception of paſſages in Scripture, not a few. See Neh. 13. 25. Job 8. 18. Pſal. 27. 8. & 38. 16. & 105. 15. chap. 22. 13. Act. 7. 32. The words are conceived thus, in way of expoſition, to what was ſpoken of their enemies, ver. 14.

Thy dead men] Heb. only thy dead. And ſo it would rather be rendred, as including, both either ſex, and each age. In Scripſture, extremity of miſery, and anxiety is ſpoken of as a kind of death; 2 Cor. 1. 10. & 11. 23. becauſe it takes away all the joy, and comfort of this life; and makes it little better, if not worſe, and more bitter then death; & death, then ſuch a life, more deſirable, Deut. 28. 65-67. 1 King. 19. 4. Job 3. 20. 22. & 6. 9. & 7. 15. Jer. 8. 3. Jon. 4. 3. Rev. 9. 6. And thoſe that live in ſuch a ſad and diſconſolate condition, are deemed, and ſpoken of, as dead, Pſal. 31. 12. & 88. 5, 6. Yea, as buried, and conſumed, and diſſolved into duſt, Pſal. 22. 15. and 71. 20. and 137. 3. Ezek. 37. 2, 11, 12. Dan. 12. 2. and in this ſenſe is the word uſed in this place, as alſo in the two Prophets, laſt quoted.

Thy dead] If ſpoken in the perſon of God to his people; it is to be underſtood, with relation to them; thoſe of you that ſeem dead; as thy children, ſo Rachel, Jer. 30. 17. If in the perſon of Gods people, ſpeaking to God, it muſt have relation to God; thoſe that thou in juſtice to thy people, and owneſt for thine, as thy people, Jer. 31. 7. Howſoever this particle is added, to diſtinguiſh thoſe dead, from thoſe dead, before ſpoken of, ver. 14. and the old Greek, and the Chaldee therefore did not well in omitting it.

Shall vive] Heb. ſhall live; as Pſal. 69. 32. & 119. 175. As the ſad and diſmall condition of people, in grievous afflictions and diſtreſſes, is compared unto death; So the freeing of them from the ſame, and reſtoring them to a more comfortable and gladſome eſtate, is ſaid to be a reviving of them, and a reſtoring of them unto life again, Pſal. 71. 20. & 80. 18. & 85. 6. & 138. 7. Ezek. 37. 5, 14. Dan. 12. 2. Hoſ. 6. 2. Rom. 11. 15. So is it here to be underſtood, not of the general reſurrection at the laſt day, though many ſo expound it; and yet in way of alluſion, in likelihood to it, and thaddowed out by a reſemblance taken from it; in regard whereof alſo, the rather here the word would be tranſlated, ſhall live; as having reference to the reſurrection of life; as it is termed, Joh. 5. 29. that is, peculiar to the faithfull, and oppoſed to that, v. 14. Their dead ſhall not live: that is, ſhall not be revived.

together with my dead body ſhall they aviſe] So rending it, there ſhould be a defect of the prepoſition; as Pſal. 5. 4. ſo one of the Rabbines, who yet addeth another reading by ſupplying the note of ſimilitude, oft wanting, Pſal. 11. 1. chap. 21. 8. and in the next branch but one; as my dead body they ſhall aviſe: they ſhall as ſurely riſe, as I know that my body ſhall lie Job of himſelf, Job 19. 25. But others read the words without any ſuch ſupply. And here one of the Jewiſh Doctors makes theſe words, Gods anſwer to the Prophets prayer. The Prophet, ſaith he, had before prayed againſt the wicked, that their dead might not live, nor their deceaſed riſe again, v. 14. but here he prayeth, in the behalf of the righteous, that they may be revived, and raiſed again; Let thy dead live: and God, in theſe words, returns him an anſwer, as granting his ſuit for them, My dead corpſe ſhall riſe again. But of any ſuit or prayer, rendred to God, here, or there, there is no great likelyhood. Others therefore, to paſſe by thoſe that apply it, to the laſt reſurrection, and ſo expound it of all thoſe that are members of Chriſts ſpiritual body, 1 Cor. 15. 22, 23. 1 Theſ. 4. 14, 16. Or, with the Jewiſh Doctors, that underſtand it of a reſurrection at the Meſſias his coming; either corporally, as they; or ſpiritually, as others, Joh. 5. 24. of which latter, yet it is not denied, but that this might be a type. Thoſe that underſtand it (as the whole tenour of the Prophecy requries it) of the reſtitution of the Jewiſh people, ſome would have it meant of the City Jeruſalem, and render it, My carcaſe ſhall riſe again; my City, that now ſeems to be but carcaſe, or a dead body, ſhall be raiſed out of her duſt, and reſtored to her former ſtate and luſtre again, Pſal. 102. 13, 14. chap. 52. 1, 2. & 54. 11, 12. and we read, indeed, in Forein Authors, both Greek and Latine, of carcaſſes of cities; and ſome what looking that way, of Babylon, Chap. 13. 19. but the verb plural here, will not admit this reading. And becauſe there is ſome ſeeming incongruity, between the noun and the verb, the former being ſingular, and the latter plural, ſome would alter the text, and with the change of a vowel make the ſingular noun plural, reading it, My corpſes, or dead bodies ſhall riſe: but ſuch alteration is not needful: the manner of ſpeech in collective, or diſtributive notions, is very common, as hath been ſhewed on chap. 2. 18, 20. and ſo ſome of thoſe that expound it of the body of the Jewiſh people, (whether the ſpeech be Gods, or theirs) do well render it, My corpſe, or dead bodies, each of them ſhall aviſe: the ſame thing, in other words repeated, as exactly anſwering in way of oppoſition, to what was said before of their enemies, ver. 14. and with a more exquisite application unto each particular person, by Gods gracious election deligned unto this deliverance, that no one of them shall fail of having his share in the same. There shall not one of them be wanting, whom God hath preferved, and referved to partake in this nationall resurrection, alluded unto, Rev. 20.6. See chap. 27. 12, 13. Dan. 12. 1. Amos 9.9. The change of the person as in the Greek Lyricks, so in this, and other sacred Poems recorded in Scripture; and with this Prophet, also out of his Poems, is very awake, and sing ye that dwell in the dust] Here again, some not unfitly, supply somewhat, as before; and that of the same nature, with that there supplyed, rending the text. Thou wilt say, Awake, &c. as, whom thou didst say, Seek my face, Psalme 27.8.

awake] From the depth of your affliction, which is as death unto you; and death, whereby it is resembled, as a deep sleep, Psal. 13.3. Act. 7.60. & 13.36. So of the natural death 2 King. 4.31. the child is not yet awaked, and of the Spiritual, awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, Eph. 5.14. See also, Job 14.12. So chap. 51.17. & 52.1. & 60.1. the phrase implyes, that it is as easie a thing for God, with a word of his mouth, to raise up from death, or from the greatest depth of affliction, as desperate an estate as the state of death, as for one man to awake another out of his sleep. The damsel slept, but to him, that was able to awake her with a word, Luk. 8.52, 55. Joh. 11.11, 14, 43, 44.

sing] For joy, chap. 12.6. & 24.14. Jer. 31.7. Zeph. 3.14. Zach. 2. 10.

ye that dwell in the dust] Heb. dwellers, or, inhabitants of the dust, as also, Dan. 12. 2. not only as some would paraphrase it; ye that are cast down to the ground, and sit in the dust, as Psal. 7.5. & 44.25. & 119.25. ch. 14.12. & 47.1. Job 16.15. but that are as men buried, that are as laid up, and ly sleeping in the dust, as Job 7.21. Dan. 12.2. For to such is the state of this people compared, Ezek. 37. 11, 12.

for thy dew is as the dew of herbs:] This last word is ambiguous; in the singular it is found used for light, Est. 8.16. Pf. 139.12. and so would some, both Jews and Christians, take the plurall here, and so render it, as the dew of lights, that is, of the morning; or, that is accompanied with the light and warmth of the Sun; Psal. 110.3. and it is true, that God is light, 1 Joh. 1.5. yea the Father of lights, Jam. 1.17. and that the light of his countenance shining forth upon persons and people, doth not enlighten only, but enliven them, and gladsome state, Num. 6.25, 26. Job 29.3. Psal. 4.6, 7. & 36.9. & 43.3. & 63.3. & 89.15. & 60.1, 2. Joh. 1.4, 5. But this metaphor doth not so well suit here. Others therefore, of either rank, take it in another sense, as the plural is used, the same with this here, 2 King. 4.39. and the masculine singular, with little variation, chap. 18.4. for herbs, as our English well renders it. Little difference else is between the most that go this way, save that some few make it the speech of Gods Prophet to his people, and expound it thy dew, that is, the favour that God sheweth unto thee: the rest, conceive it as the speech of the people to God; as rendring a reason why they expect such a strange and sudden alteration of their present condition, upon Gods being in mercy reconciled unto them; because, say they, thy dew, that is, the favour and grace that thou sheweſt unto thine, (which, in effect and substance, also, cometh home to the former) is like unto the dew that refresheth and reviveth the herbs, that were parched and withered with the heat of the Sun in Summer; or that in Spring time, causeth them to revive, and to flourish, and sprout out again, when as they seemed to be in the Winter time stark dead, and lay buried under ground, as in a Grave. See Gen. 27. 28, 39. Deut. 32.2. & 33. 13. Sam. 23. 4. Psal. 133. 3. Proverb. 19. 12. Chapter 18.4. Hos. 14.5. of the defect of the particle of similitude, the branch next but one, before going, and the expression of it in the like form of speech, Chapter 65. 22.

and the earth shall cast out the dead;] This verſion hath very few fautors, or followers: Nor will the signification of the verb here used, well admit it: For it signifies in its first form, to fall; in the next active here used, to make to fall, or, to cast down: the nearest use I can find of it, to that here given it, is where it is used of striking out a tooth, Exod. 21.27. or where of casting a lot, Est. 3. 7. & 9. 24. as if it were said, the earth shall cast out her dead, those that ly dead and buried in her, as the lots do in the lot-pot; untill they be drawn or cast out. But this seems somewhat far fetcht, and harsh. It is true indeed, that some other render the word, cast out, as alluding to creatures that going with young, cast that they go with before their time, Exod. 23. 26 in regard that the word signifying an abortive, is from the verb here found derived, Job 3.16. Psal. 58.8. Eccl. 6.3. But another word is used for such casting of young; not this nor is the abortive so termed from the Dams casting of it, but from its falling from her that goeth with it: and is turned another way, by those that to expound it, as used afterward to be shewed. Nor doth it seem to be a fit similitude, to resemble Gods gracious deliverance; used rather to let out the dead, and retrour of his voice, casting into fits, and pangs of travel, Psal. 29.9. not the calmeſte of it, awakening and enlivening dead creatures. The most therefore waue this sense; and albeit they agree much at one in the signification of the verb, yet they vary much in the acception of the noun, and in the derivation of the time, and the persons here intended. Some by the word Rephaim here used (of which, somewhat before, chap. 14. 9. & 17.5.) understand the enemies of Gods people; of whom the word was used before, v. 14. so called, because mighty and giant-like men, such as the Rephoites are reported to have been, Deut. 2. 11. 20. Or, because given to oppression and violence, as those great ones before the Flood were, Gen. 6.4. 13. and some of these render the text, and the land of the violent ones is fallen down, which fitteth not wel with the form of the verb. Others, The land shal cast out the Giants, as an abortive birth, of the ground whereof before. Others, But thou hast overthrown, Or, wilt overthrow the land of those violent ones. Others, conceiving the former branch also, in the future; for thy dew shall be as the dew of herbs; when thou shalt have thrown those giants, or great ones, to the ground; the destruction of their potent adversaries and oppressors, ordinarily making way for the deliverance of Gods oppressed people. See chap. 14.1. Heb. and, for when; or, after that, as Judg. 2.19. Hoſ. 1.11. Zach. 12.8. and a defect of the particle to, as Amos 9.9. and this last, to me, seems the likelyest to expresse the Prophets mind: Yee some take the word rephaim here, for dead, or deceased, as v. 14. and the word is so taken, Psal. 88. 10. Prov. 2.18. & 9.18. and they thus render the text applyed to Gods people; after that thou hast cast down the deceased into the ground, that is, after thou hast brought them so low, and wasted them so by the afflictions, that they seem as dead, and laid up in their graves in the ground, Pſ. 71.20. a metaphor taken from corn that is cast into the ground, and there dyeth before it revive and fructifie, Joh. 12.24. 1 Cor. 15.39. And here ends this pious song composed by the Prophet, for the use of Gods people.

V. 20. Come my people, enter thou into thy Chambers, and shut thy doors about thee, hide thy self, as it were for a little moment, untill the indignation be over-past.] The two last verses of this Chapter, being no part of the Psalm, or Song therein comprehended, would rather have been joyned with the Chapter ensuing, as some Interpreters therefore have also disposed of them. For in them, the Prophet having made an end of his Song, returneth again, to proceed in his former discourse, and being to relate what dreadful judgments God was to execute abroad, far, and near, in the world, and even in thoſe places, among the rest, where many of his own people abode, he beginneth his speech, directed unto them, with an wholesome advice, admonishing and exhorting them, to seek and provide shelter for themselves, against the great and generall storm that was coming, retiring themselves as to some secret place of security and safeguard; and keeping close there, partly by sincere reformation, and renewing of their repentance, that all occasions of breach between God and them, might be removed, Zeph. 2. 1-3. and by fervent prayer repairing to him, for his gracious preservation, and powerful protection, Mat. 6.6. and partly by serious meditation of their future deliverance, with a quiet and patient expectation of it, Ch. 30.15. & that the rather, because it would be after a while over, Psal. 30.5. chap. 10.25. & 54.7, 8. Hab. 3.3. 2 Cor. 4.17. Heb. 10.37, 38. That which is here set forth by allusion to the usuall practice of people, if they perceive a storm towards, when they are abroad, to get home speedily to their houſes, Exod. 9.19, 20. and in time of peril, to retire into the secreteſt and sureſt rooms in the house, and to make all fast after them, Judg. 9.51. 1 King. 20.30. & 22.25. Psal. 18.45. Joh. 20.19. Or, it may well be, more specially to the Israelites, keeping their houses close in Egypt, while the destroying Angel pasled over, throughout the whole Land, Exod. 12. 22, 23. Some of the Jewish Writers expound it, of their being shut up in Jerusalem by Sennacherib, ch. 36.2. See Jer. 8.14. But this is neither intended here; and in regard of comprehension, it is overstrait.

Come] Or, Go, chap. 6.9. but come, rather here; as Number. 10. 29. as if God himself went along with them, and led them by the hand, as a father his children, to conduct them to a place of safety, and there to shut them in, as he did Noah in the Ark, Gen. 7.16.

thy chambers] Or, closets, distinguished from chambers, 1 Chr. 28. 11. the chambers of Gods providence and protection, Pſ. 31.22. & 143.9. Prov. 18.11.

about thee] Or, upon thee; as 2 King. 4.4.

hide thy self] Or, lurk, ly hid: the word is no where else found in this form.

as it were for a little moment] Or, for a little space: as it is well rendred. Ezr. 9.8. or, for a little while, for the particle here seems rather a preposition, then an adverb of similitude, as Gen. 18.10. Ruth. 1.4. Heb. a little of a moment, (as, a little of water. Gen. 18. 4.) the least imaginable particle of time, 1 Cor. 15.52.

the indignation] The storm of Gods wrath, chap. 10.25. Dan. 11.36.

V. 21. For behold] The reason why they should do, as the Prophet advised; ushered in with a mark prefixed before it, implying it to be as sure, as if they saw it present, (see chap. 7.14.) because there is a grievous storm coming; God himself is setting out, to sit in a generall Session, and to execute judgment all the World over. Psalm 50.1-6.

the Lord cometh out of his place] From heaven, Pſ. 68.35. & 76.8. Rom. 1.18. So Mic. 1.3. A metaphor taken from a King that comes down out of his Palace, to sit in judgment, hear, decide, & censure, 2 Sam. 19.8. Jer. 38.7. Gen. 18.20, 21.

to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity] Heb. to visit the iniquity of the inhabitant of the earth upon him. See the like phrase, Exod. 20.5. & 34.7. inhabitant, for inhabitants, as ch. 5.3, 8, 24. 17. inhabitants of the earth; those that dwell far and near of whom, ch. 24.6, 17. v. 18.

the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain] Some expound this of the severity of Gods judgment, and the large execution that shall enſue; as if it were said, there shall so much blood be shed, that the earth shall not be able to receive, or drink it in: and so many slain, that there will want ground or room to bury them, Jer. 7.32, 33. But it is rather spoken, to shew the strict inquisition that God will then make, for the oppressions and wrongs that have been done, and murders that have bin committed, Psal. 9.12. that they shall be as surely brought to judgment, and avenged, as if the earth should spue up the blood she had taken in, and call up again the bodies of the slain buried in her, to appear in judgment, and to give in evidence against the murtherers, Gen. 4.10, 11. and it may well withall intimate, that no murther, though never so secretly committed, or closely carried, should then be concealed; but all brought to light; as if he had said, the blood that had bin not shed on a rock, and there left to open view, but poured on the ground, and covered there so with dust, Lev. 17.13. that no sign of it could be seen, Ezek. 24.7. should all then come to light, Job 16.18. and the murthers not of thoſe alone, whose bodies had bin left lying upon the open surface of the earth, without burial, Pſ. 79.2, 3. but of thoſe also that had bin privily slain, & secretly buried; should then be discovered.

her blood] Heb. bloods. See chap. 1.15. her blood, which she had taken in, or was shed upon her; and so her slain, buried in her, or slain upon her.

no more] Or, no longer, as Jer. 44.22.

CHAP. XXVII.

VER. 1. IN that day, the Lord with his sore, and great, and strong sword, shall punish Leviathan the piercing serpent, even Leviathan, that crooked serpent, and he shall slay the dragon that is in the Sea] As the murthers and oppressions of Gods people, shall then come to trial, so justice shall accordingly be done upon thoſe, be they never so great, that have been the murthers and oppressors of them.

In that day] At that time, when God shall hold that his great Assize, ch. 26.21. as ch. 25.9.

sore] Heb. hard, or cruel, chap. 19.4. our old English heavy. There is a great deal of emphasis in the words, as they are in the Hebrew: for thus they run there; with his sword, that sore, or cruel one, and that great one, and that strong one; able to do execution to the purpose. See the like, Ezek. 21. 9, 10, 14.

sword] An allusion to that sword, not which souldiers use in the field, 2 Sam. 11.25. chap. 1. 20. & 3. 25. but where with, for capital crimes, Kings and Magistrates are wont to execute malefactors, 1 King. 2.8, 32. Act. 12.2. Rom. 13.4. for God is here described, as proceeding in a judicary way, not as Pſ. 45.3. And here described, as proceeding in a judicary way, not as Pſ. 45.3. And here is supposed that power of God, wherewith he taketh vengeance, and doth justice on the obstinate wicked, So chap. 34. 15. & 66. 16.

shall punish] Or, do execution upon: that it may come nearer home to the Hebrew, visit upon, or, do justice, or, execute vengeance upon; to expresse the better a judiciary proceſs, as Pſal. 149.9. So chap. 26.21. and 24.21.

Leviathan] The word seems properly, to import a whale, of the greateſt sort and largeſt size, Job 41.1. Pſalm 104.26. & 74.14. for in thoſe places only, is the word certainly found: that, Job 3.8. is ambiguous. Of this Leviathan, the greateſt of all living creatures, Job 41.33, 34. So called, as containing in addition of many creatures, put together, and made up into one: and of the Behemoth, or Elephant, so called likewise, as a compoſition of many beasts, Job 40. 15. being the greateſt, that lives on land and concerning their huge bigneſſe, and making sport, by fighting together before their Medias, when he comes, the Talmudiſts tell us prodigious tales out of Pſal. 50.10. & 104.26. by them grosly abuſed; as also, of the killing of them both afterward, to make a great feaſt, for the just ones, from this place, and ch 25.6.

the piercing serpent] Or, a piercing serpent. The word serpent, is in the Hebrew, a general term, common to all living creatures in water, or on land; that glide along in the one, and on the other, with a wirgling kind of motion, without use of feet, or fins. For such, only, seem properly to be so termed. Of the lesser sort whereof, are the eel, and the snake, of the greater sort, the whale, and the dragon; of which, more anon.

piercing] The word here used, signifies, properly, a bar, or bolt. So called, of a word, that signifies to flee, (whence the ambiguity, chap. 15.5. & 43.14.) because it swiftly fleeth, or shooteth the bolt into the staple, the bar, from the one end or corner of the thing barred, or born by it, to the other, Exod. 26.28. & 36.33. Hence, diversity of versions here, some rendring the word fugitive; as Chap. 15.5. so our former English, after the old Greek, some, slippery, or gliding: some, long, like a bar, or bolt: some rounds, as bars and bolts use to be: some strong, like a bar or iron, or brass, Pſal. 107.16. & 147. 13. Prov. 18, 19. chap. 45.2. to which purpose, our ancient English, swinckled: some shooting, from the one violence, as the Sea, to the other, so the Jewish Criticks: some, crossing; because a bar, or bolt, runs acroſs: piercing, as to the Geneva verſion. Which whether it be here, piercing; and so the Geneva verſion. Which whether it be meant of piercing the waters, by such a quick motion, from place to place, or of piercing and insinuating it self into holes and bodies, where it finds any the leaſt way for entrance, (which is noted, as a special property, in snakes and serpents) is uncertain: the word is found used, as the epithet of a serpent, here only, and Job 26.13. and from that which signifies a bar, or bolt, it varies only in one vowel: the old Latine yeeldeth it not so fitly, a barsome other, better barlike, or like a bar, which, I suppoſe to be beſt; The Hebrew Criticks observing the variation, to intimate, the one to be a substantive, signifying a bar, or bolt; the other, an adjective, importing some resemblance of the same, as the serpent, or whale, doth, in divers of the particulars above recited.

even Leviathan, that crooked serpent] Or, and upon Leviathan, that crooking serpent. Some, that retain the most common use of the copulative, suppoſe two Leviathans, to be here intended, the one whereof, they conceive to be the King of Assyria; the other, the King of Egypt. Some Others, as our verſion, rending it even: as Deut. 4. 33. suppoſe one and the same to be in both branches intended; which some, would have, to be Pharaoh the King of Egypt, compared to a whale, Ezek. 29.3. & 32.2, 6. in regard of the River Nilus, that runneth thorow his Country, is a chief strength of it, bring it in much wealth; and by overflowing it, makes it fertile: as was also, another of them termed before, Psal. 74.14. Others would have it to be Sennacherib, King of Assyria; so termed, because his Country lay upon the great river Euphrates. See Chap. 8.7. Others, Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, situate upon the banks of the same: See Jer. 51.13. Others, taking the word collectively, conceive it to be intended, not of any one particular person alone, but of sundry great Tyrants, that had been principal oppressors of Gods people; of whom, chap. 26.13. compared to these huge devouring Sea-creatures, because they make havock of men, Psal. 14.4. & 124.3. as those vast bodied ones are wont, even as by sholes to swallow down the lesser sort of fish, Hab. 1.14. Howbeit, some understand all here spoken, of Satan, the Devill, of whom, Rev. 12.3, 9. But I suppoſe the Devill no more intended by the Leviathan, here, then by Lucifer, ch: 14. that is, no otherwise, then as such Tyrants were his instruments, Eph. 2.2. & as they might some way be types of him. See the Notes on Rev. 12.3, 7.

crooked] Or, crooking, or, winding; not crooked, in regard of the native shape of his body, but winding and crooking many ways in the motion of it; not going straight forward, but with wrigling to & fro, making his way, it is taken from by-wayes, full of windings and turnings, one while to the right hand, and another while to the left, Judg. 5.6. Pſal. 125.5.

and will slay] He will not amerce them, with some pecuniary fine, as in some lighter treſpaſſes is wont to be done, Exod. 21.22, 30. 32. strip them of their wealth, nor scourge them, as in some greater offences is usual, Deut. 25.2, 3. lay some more grievous afflictions on them; but as in capital crimes, the proceeding is unto death, Exod. 21.12, 15-17. so here, he will slay, he will destroy them; he will make use of, not the rod, or the scourge, but the sword; and that not to wound, as in war it sometime only doth, Joel 2.8. but, as in judicature, the use of it is ever to slay, Mat. 26.52. Rev. 13.10. or, he will not imprison them only, and restrain them for a time: as ch. 24.22. but utterly to destroy them, and rid the world of them; Rev. 20.2, 3. that they shall never return to oppreſs his people again, Chap. 26.14.

the dragon] The word dragon, though used sometime in foreign authors, Poets especially, for any serpent in general, yet more peculiarly seems to denote a long snaky kind of serpent, usually of great length; not such as they paint, commonly, with wings and legs. Of the strange length of them, see Aelian, lib. 2. chap. 11. and lib. 15. chap. 21. and lib. 16. chap. 39. and Pliny, lib. 8. chap. 11, 13, 14. and such an one doth the word here import, when it is applyed to land-creatures; as Chap. 13. 22. for that the former word rendred serpent, seems the genus to this; and this, to comprehend only the biger and larger kind of them: but here there is no place for such land-creatures; for there is expresse mention in the text, of their abode in the Sea: and as for the Sea-dragon, of which, Pliny, lib. 9. chap. 17. and Aelian, lib. 5. chap. 37. and lib. 14. chap. 12. it seems no great fish, not much unlike to our wiver; but the word, applyed to Sea-creatures, signifieth a whale; and those of a snaky shape, or serpentine figure of the like size with it. So Gen. 1. 21. Pſalm 44. 19. and 74.13. Chap. 51.9. Lam. 4.3. and would so be here rendred, not and 74.13. Chap. 51.9. Lam. 4.3. and would so be here rendred, not and, (for we never so use the word) but the whale, or, the whirlpool, the dragon, (for we never so use the word) but the whale, or, the whirlpool, the dragon, (for we never so use the word) but the whale, or, the whirlpool, that is, in the seas: in which latter, word, though there may be an allusion

allusion to the situation of Egypt, or Babylon, great waters usually in Hebrew bearing that name, whereof,see on ch. 19. 15.& 21. 1. Yet it is here enough, for that which the Prophet here intendeth, that those devouring fishes, by which the Prophet representeth these great Tyrants in them here intended, abide generally in the

V. 2. In that day sing ye to her, a vineyard of red wine] From the prediction of the destruction of Gods peoples greatest enemies, he proceedeth to relate the flourishing and fructifying estate of Gods people, now enjoying rest and peace. And this he enters upon,with an exhortation, whereby he excites and incites all that with well to Gods Church, and rejoyce in the prosperity of his people,by gladsome songs and acclamations, to expreis and shew forth the same, chap.52.9.& 66.10.Zach.4.7.The words, as they are here read, seem to intimate the latter part of them, to be the sum of the short song, or acclamation is self, as, Grace,grace to it, Zach. 4. 7. But some rather read the words, as one continued speech; to the vineyard of new wine, sing ye to it;a redundancy of speech in Hebrew very usual:as Gen.2. 17.ch.8.17.Pial.114.& 74. 14.& 144.2.Others,which I suppose the best,asdivided,but another way,into two Stratches, the one containing a prediction,In that day there shall be a vineyard of red wine,the other,an adhortation, sing ye of it,or to it.

In that day] At that time, when the potent adversaries of Gods people shall be destroyed, v. 1. and Gods people, by their former afflictions,pruned and purged, chap.1.25.ver.8,9.chap.48.10.Joh. 15.2.

a vineyard of red wine]Or, as some, hot, or strong wine: because the word in Chaldee hath a fignification of heat: but it seems rather,to intimate the colour,expressed plainly,Prov.23.31. red wine, in those parts, being usually the strongest, and the best; called the blood of the grape, therefore. Gen. 49.12. Deut. 32.14. In regard whereof, also, the Jewish Doctors advise their people,at the celebration of the Passeover, to make use rather of red wine, then of white; because this is usually the weaker.So Pial.75.8. The meaning is, the Church,Gods vine,Pial.81.8.chap.5.7,that had formerly degenerated from her native excellency,and brought forth vile and noisome grapes,Deut.32.32,33.chap.5.2.4. Jer. 2.21. should then recover her primitive generosity again,and bring forth such fruit,as should be of good esteem, useful and acceptable, both to God and man,Judg.9.13.

sing ye to it]Or,of it.as Num.21.18. where the same term though in another form,with the same particle in like manner diversly rendred is found,spoken there of the well: as here of the vine: and the one seems to allude to the other. Of the latter use of the particle see Chap.8.12.& 23.5.the word signifies; properly, to sing by course, answering one to another, Exod. 15. 21. 1 Sam. 18. 6, 7. Ezr. 3. 11. Sing together, as in a quire. Concerning it.

V. 3. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it, every moment,lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day] Or,as some, I the Lord will keep it : as others,knitting the two first members into one sentence, I the Lord,the keeper of it,will every moment water it;that it may not be hurt,I will night and day watch it. That this vineyard of God thus restored, may have some good assurance, not of present prosperity only, but of future security,God himself is by the Prophet brought in, undertaking the charge and custody of it. And whereas there are two evils especially, that may be prejudicial to a vineyard, and impeach the thriving of it, the one droughts, and want of water to refresh it, chap.1.30. the other, the violent breaking in, or, privy stealing in, of man or beast,that may annoy it, Pial.80.12,13.Cant. 2. 15. God here engageth himself to his Church,to provide for it abundantly against either. For he that before had forbidden the clouds to rain upon it,chap.5.6. would himself, now, be continually watering of it, by the gracious dews, chap.26. 19. and spiritual refreshments of his Word and Spirit, and with a comfortable supply of what soever should be needful to keep it in a fruitful and flourishing condition,3. Gen.2.9,10.Deut.11.10-12.chap.58.11.Ezek.47.1, 9,12.Hos.2.21,22.Rev.22.1,2. and he that before had pulled down her wall,and plucht up her hedg, Pl.80.12.ch.5.5.would now himself be as a wall,and fenteunto her, Pial. 125. 2.ch.26.2.Zac.2.5.he would keep such a constant watch night and day about her, that none should either by day openly force and break in,or in the night time,by some wile and slight,privily steal in to wrong her,Pial.121. 3, 4.

do keep it]Or,that watch it,or,the keeper:as the word is rendred,Ier. 4.17.or,watchman of it:as,2 King. 17. 9. the keeper of Israel, Psal. 121. 4.

water it]For it is his watering alone, that can make fertile, and fruitful,that can give thrift and growth,ch.44.3, 4.1 Cor.3.6,7.and without him,as no watching can secure,Psl. 27.1. so no watering can avail, ch.17.11.

every moment]Heb.at moments,or, by moments: as Job 7.18.Ezek. 26.16.& 32.10.

lest any hurt it]Heb.lest he visit on it:to visit upon, for, to punish, hurt,or afflict:as Jer.13.21.& 30.20.lest he hurt it,or, lest it be hurt: the word is taken indefinitely,as Job 19.26.Psal.7.2. and so the old Latine renders it;for they are wide, that think this form, and that, 2 King. 14. 8. parallel, let us look either other in the face; the phrases are nothing alike.

I will keep it] Or, watch it : as Job 7. 20. Prov. 24. 12. Mat. 26. 36.

night and day]Constantly,continually,without intermission. So 1 Sam.25.16.ch.21.8.

V.4.Fury is not in me:]The Prophet in these words, and the rest of his enfuing discourse, seems to meet with an objection, that might arise in mens minds, concerning these gracious promises of God, and his serious professions of his affection to, and care of his Church, and to strengthen the hearts of the truly faithful against it. For it might be demanded,how these things could stand with those predictions and denunciations of fiery,grievous calamities and distresses, that were to befall Gods people themselves, whereof mention,also,had formerly,in this Section,been made, Chap.26.8, 13,15,18: To which the Prophet retorteth anfwer : First, that God neither is of himself,prone to wrath,nor implacable. Secondly, that there are those among Gods people, that by their obstinacy enforce God,to severe courses, ver.4,5. Thirdly, that Gods sharp proceedings against such, are for the benefit of the rest, ver. 6. Fourthly, that Gods dealings with his people, in chastisement, do much differ from his proceedings with others,ver.7,11. And lastly, that there shall, in due time, be an entire deliverance of them,ver. 12,13.

Fury is not in me]wrath, or heat: See ch.42.25.& 51.17. Either my wrath against my people, is no fury,no rage, no implacable wrath, like that of an husband,towards a disloyal wife, Prov.6.34. I am prone, and ready to do,what in such case a man will not do, Jer.3. 1.or my anger and displeasure,conceived against my people, is now over;since that by their forepasted sufferings, they are humbled for their sins that procured them,reclaimed from them, and reformed, ch.12. 1.& 40.1,2.& 54.8,9. Ezek.16.42, 63.Zach.1. 15-17.and 6. 8.

who would set the briers and thorns against me in battle ? I would go thorow them, I would burn them together]Or,as some, who setteth set me briars and thorns in it, in battel will I march against them,and will burn them together. But this agreeth not so well with the pausesin the Hebrew. Others,Yet if any with briar and thorn, or like brier and thorn,shall induce me to battle, I will warily cuter into her, or,thorow her,and burn them, out of her together. This some understand of the enemies of Gods Church, that it is a folly for any, that are but as briers and thorns,fit to make fewel of, or matter to feed the fire,Pial. 58.9. Eccl.7.6. to offer to oppose themselves against God, or against those whom he protecteth; and if any such therefore shall so do, or shall prove like pricking briers or thorns unto his people,Ioth.23,13,Ezek.28.14,God will be as a fire to burn them up,and destroy them,Pial.21.9.chap.26.11.Zach.2.5.& 12.6. Others,of his Church and People, that albeit God be thus grac'ously afflicted towards it and them; yet if there shall those spring up in it, and be found among them,that like briars and thorns shall vex him,and provoke him to wrath, by their prophane and sinful courses, 2 Sam.13. 6. Mic. 7.4. they shall find him to be a consuming fire,Deut.4.24.chap.33.12.he will in hostile manner set upon them, or enter,to that purpose,into his vineyard, and burn them up together, and by that means rid it of them, 2 Sam. 23.7.ch.1.25.& 9. 18.which yet he will so wisely and warily do, that his vineyard shall receive no damage thereby; he will withall have a due regard to those that continue faithful to him,Zach.3.2.& Pet.2.9.Many other versions & interpretations are given, too long to relate:these I suppose the most probable.

who would set against me] Heb. give me, or, set me, some would have it read, by way of wish, as Job 29. 1. Jer. 9. 1. who will set me ? that is, I would some would set me. I suppose it rather to be spoken, either in way of interrogation, Jer. 9. 12. Hos. 14. 9. or, by way of suppofition; as Pial.107.43. Psalme 25.12.

the briers and thorns]Heb.brier, thorn,as chap.5.6.which some understand, as spoken of one kind only,as,briar of thorn, that is thorny brier:but both words being in an absolute and entire form, admit not well that construction:the most,therefore,rather take it,as intending two sorts;and either taken collectively,with defect of a copulative;as Hab.3. 11.

I would go thorow them] The word here used, being no where else found,only two teams derived from it,the one, fignifying a step, 1 Sam.20.3.the other,an hip,1 Chr.19.4. so it would there, more properly, and more modestly be rendred; because it peculiarly pointeth to that place, whence the motion in going seems to descend. Some here take it, to import a warlike march : Others, a wary stepping, as alluding to one, that entring into a garden, or orchard,to pluck up the weeds and thistles,and to grub up the briers and brambles, that pester the ground, is careful how, or where he treads,for hurting the useful plants,the more tender especially therein;and to this sense,I the rather encline,because the pronoun is here feminine.I will go in her,or in it,or step into her, or into it, to wit, the vineyard,v.2,3.

I would burn them together]Heb. I will burn her,or, it, together; which because it cannot here be understood strly of burning up the vineyard it self, as a ground altogether forlorn,Heb.6.8.(notwithstanding what is said, Lam.4. 11.) must of necessity be meant, of burning those briers and thorns out of it;and may well, therefore be rendred,I will burn them out of it; for the preposition is,in such manner,soit implyed,either in the verb,or in the pronoun,or affixto Psalm. 53. 5. encamping me, for encamping against me; dwell thee, for dwell with thee, Psalm 5. 4. come us, for come at us, ch. 28.15. so Psalm 65.5. where the same particle is necessarily supplyed, that is here wanting; though in a diverse use, then here.

V.5.Or,let him take hold of my strength,that he may make peace with me, and he shall make peace with me] Some read the words, Or, who will,or can grappel with my strength? let him make peace with me &c. as if he had said,who is able to stay mine hand, by laying hold on mine arm,or can hope to make his part good against me?Job 9. 4,12,13.Dan.4.35.1 Cor.10.22.and it is their wisest course, therefore,to make their peace with me, Job 11.13.& 22.21. The interrogative particle,supplyed from the words before-going,the future,for the potential:as 6.26.18.Others,Or,he shall take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; that he may, I say, make peace with me:under standing it, as in allusion to one who perceiving some offended person ready to smite him, or give fire upon him,in an humble and submissive manner, layeth hold on his arm, and by earnest suit,with prayers and tears,endeavoureth to stay him from smiting, or discharging on him, and by allaying of his wrath, to make his peace with him.See Exod.32.6.Hos.12.4. Jon.3.8-10. as if he had said,So will I proceed against such as thus provoke me; unlesse by humbling of themselves, and seeking timely to me, they make their peace with me,and so prevent it,Zeph.2.1,2.Luk.14.32. a defect of the finitive particle that:as ch.5.11.& 10.2.Hos.1.6. and the latter branch,for the greater emphasis, repeated : as chap. 26. 3. Cant. 6.13.

V.6.He shall cause them,that come to Jacob, to take root, Israel shall blossome and bud,and fill the face of the world with fruit] The Prophet returns again to these gracious promises of God, to be made good to his people; either of his restitution of them, or upon, and by means of his judgments executed upon the wicked, among them ; their taking deeper root, thriving better, and growing so abundantly fruitful, that their fruit should fill the whole world.

He shall cause them, that come to Jacob, to take root] Or as some others,He shall cause those of Jacob,that come to take root, Or,as some other again, He shall cause them that come from Jacob, to take root. Or,Jacob shall take root in his Posterity. The first, understanding the text of Jacobs Proselytes,chap.2.3.& 56.3.8. The second, of those that return from captivity,v.13.chap.35.10.The third and fourth,of their Posterity,chap.44.3,4.& 48.19. But the words,especially as they ly in the original,will not well bear any of these versions. The best Interpreters concurring therein with the Jewish Commenters, thus read them; Hereafter,or,in times coming shall Jacob's root,or take root;or,to knit them,the more aptly to the former discourse; That in time coming Jacob may take root:as an effect of Gods purging of his Vineyard, his Church, from such noxious plants as cumbred the ground,and hindred the growth and welfare of it.See chap.4.2,4.of the usual defect of the particle:see on v.5.

them that come]Heb.in the coming;to wit,days,or times:as, Behold the days coming,Jer.30.3.& 31.27,31,38.a defect of the particle, as in this very phrase,Eccl.2. 16.

he shall cause those that come to Jacob,to take root;] to wit, God, Psal.80.9.thou madest it to take root;or,taking it indefinitely,he, or, they shall be rooted,as Jer.12.2.so ver.3.lest he hurt it, or, Jacob shall take root ; as Job 5. 3. I have seen,the foolish taking root, where the word is the same, and in the same form ; See Chapter 37.31.

Israel shall blossome and bud] So Chap. 35. 1.2.& 66.14. of the word, See Chap. 5.24.& 17.11. Israel, and Jacob, are here the same : to wit, the Posterity of Jacob, called also Israel, as Psalme 14.2.

and fill the face of the world with fruit]Heb. and they shall fill, to wit,the Posterity of Iacob;either naturally descended from him, or by profession of faith adjoyned to him Psal.2.4. 6.Rom.9.6.Gal. 6. 16.the face of the world ; the surface of the habitable part of it. See chap.13.11.& 14.21.& 23.17 they shall be dispersed, and enlarge themselves through all parts of the world, fulfilled in the converts of the Gentiles, in all places by the ministery of the Gospel, called here,fruit,by a metaphor taken from the fruit,or,revenue of the field, Deut.32.13.Ezek.36.30.See Joh.15.16.Col.1.6.See also,ch.37.31. Iob 14.7.9.

V.7.Hath he smitten him,as he smote those that smote him] Another argument of Gods mercy to his people,albeit he did,and had,sometime,severely chastised them,yet doth he not therein deal so roughly and rigorously with them,as she doth usually with their enmies, when he comes to take vengeance upon them.

Hath he smitten him] This is, God his own people, his Israel.

as he smote those that smote him?]Heb.according to the stroke of him that smote him,or,stroke,him,as ch.10.26.him that smote, for, those that smote. The word taken collectively:Such as God had made use of, as instruments,rods,and cudgels,for the chastising of his people,ch. 10. 5,20,24.

or,is he slain according to the slaughter of them, that were slain by him?]The same thing is,as oft,again, but in other terms, somewhat more emphatically, repeated.

or,]A defect of the disjunctive;as Job 6.6.which yet here may well be spared.

is he slain] Or, hath he (that is, Israel, Gods people) been slain. That it may run in the same tenour,with the former branch.

according to the slaughter of them]As he slew, or, hath slain them, or,as they have been slain,or,slaughtered. Heb.his slain,or,his slaughtered ones,as,her slain,ch.26.21. These slain,all agree to be of the enemies of God,and his people: but whose slain they are said to be,is questioned. Some say,the slain of the Leviathan, or the King of Babylon, before spoken of, not slain by him, but belonging to him. The Hebrew Commenters, the slain of him, that is, of God that slew them ; as is said, verse. 1. Or, of him, that is, of Israel; not because slain by them,but because slain for them,for the wrongs that they did them. I suppole it may well be read, as those slain that is, those other, before mentioned, slain by him. And the interrogative implies a more vehement negative,as if he had said; God hath in no wise, to either smote, or slain his people, as he hath smote, and slain those other,his,and their enemies, chap. 26. 14. verf. 1. The version of many, who render this latter branch, Hath he been slain, as they have been slain, that slew him; the particle, being passive, will not admit. But those swerve further from the scope of the Prophet, that turn over all this to the Leviathan, above mentioned,as if the Prophet should say, Hath he smitten him, (to wit,the Leviathan)as one smiting himself?as,saith he, God doth his people himself,feeling what on them he inflicts:) Or,hath he slain him,as he slayeth his own slain? That is,his people, his friends. Prov. 27.6. Hos. 6.2,3. Zach. 13.3,6. But this is all clean besides the cushion.

V.8.In measure,when it shooteth forth,thou wilt debate with it: he stayeth his rough wind, in the day of the East-wind] The Prophet having affirmed,that God in his chastising of his people,dealeth otherwise with them, then he is wont to do with others, whom he hath not the like respect, or relation unto : he now proceeds more distinctly,to shew,wherein the difference consisteth, between Gods dealing with the one,and with the other. One point of difference, here laid down,is,that God dealeth in way of discretion,and in much moderation with his, Jer.10.24.& 30.11.meting out their sufferings in a due proportion, like those that do things exactly,by weight and measure;Physitians, especially, in prescribing pills, or potions to their patients,having a respect, as well to the ability of the patient, as to the nature and quality of the disease: according to the greatness of his power,and his wrath answerable thereunto, Job 23. 6.& 37.23.Psal.78.38.& 90.11. or to the hainousness of their sin, Ezr. 9. 13. Job 11.6.Psa.103.10.Lam.3.22.but according to the ability of the chastised, to bear that which is inflicted, Psalm 103. 13, 14.1 Cor. 10.13. Whereas in dealing with the other, he is nothing so cautious ; but proceeds, as those that pour out, or lay on, without regard of stint or measure, Chap. 65 6, 7. Ier.10. 25. See Ioh.3.34.He dealeth with the one,as a Father,in correcting his children when they have done amiss, regarding their weaknesses, as well as their wantonness ; and laying less on the more infirm,though all alike faulty,Psal.103.13. Mal.3.17. With other his enemies, as a Judg with delinquents, who proceeding, according to the strict rule of Law and Iustice, regardeth not the person of the offender, but his offence only, and according thereunto, dispenseth justice,equally unto all alike delinquent, though not alike able to sustain what their offence calls for, chap. 59. 18. and 65. 6,7.

in measure]The word,here used,is derived from one, that signifies a certain measure, one of the letter fort of those that they used, in measuring out of drie wares,meal,grain,or the like,and contained, as most suppose,the third part of an Epha,(and yet why should they then say,three seaes, Gen 18.6.that, it seems,being the ordinary rate of one batch, Mat.13.33.and not rather in one term, as Epha;) that is,according to the received estimation of the Jewish Epha,much a-bout,but somewhat above,our peck. Of it,see 1 Sam.25.18. 1 King. 18. 32. 2 King.7.1, 16, 18. and in the places before mentioned. The word is a duplicate, as many other of the like stamp in that language : which most of the Jewish masters would have to be a Noun,as if it should be said, by peck-peck,that is,delivering out,not the whole bushel,or strike together, but by peck after peck, as a man doth in meting out meal,or grain,out of a great Heap,or Tun,into vessels of a smaller size.Some make it a verb,with a Pronoun affixed to it,and render the text,in mensuring,as it were, by the peck out to it:as afterward, in sending out of it.The former seems the better, and that the rather, because there wants that point in the belly of the last letter,which the Pronoun wontedly hath.The word,as many other in this Prophet,hath no mate.

when it shooteth forth] The word, in the original, is very ambiguous.That which hath bred much diversity, both of version, and interpretation,amongst those that write upon the place. Some,In due measure,using the sword wilt thou debate it. Because a word used for a sword,so called of putting it up,or drawing it out,comes neer to the term here used,2 Chr.23-10.Neh.4.17.Iocl 2.8. Others, in measure, with her plantations doth thou contend: Because of those things which the ground it self, as plants growing on it, sends out, the like word is also used,Nehem.3.15. Chapter 16.8. Est. 17. 6, 7. As if the meaning were, that God in chastising his allusion to the situation of Egypt, or Babylon, great waters usually in Hebrew bearing that name, whereof see on ch. 19. 15.& 21. 1. Yet it is here enough, for that which the Prophet here intendeth, that those devouring fishes, by which the Propher repreſenteth theſe great Tyrants in them here intended, abide generally in the Sea.

V. 2. In that day ſing ye to her, a vineyard of red wine] From the prediction of the deſtruction of Gods peoples greateſt enemies, he proceedeth to relate the flouriſhing and fructifying eſtate of Gods people, now enjoying reſt and peace. And this he enters upon, with an exhortation, whereby he excites and incites all that with well to Gods Church, and rejoyce in the proſperity of his people, by gladſome ſongs and acclamations, to expreſs and ſhew forth the ſame, chap. 52. 9.& 66. 10. Zach. 4. 7. The words, as they are here read, ſeem to intimate the latter part of them, to be the ſum of the ſhort ſong, or acclamation it ſelf, as, Grace, grace to it, Zach. 4. 7. But ſome rather read the words, as one continued ſpeech; to the vineyard of new wine, ſing ye to it: a redundancy of ſpeech in Hebrew very uſual: as Gen. 2. 17. ch. 8. 13. Pſal. 1. 4.& 74. 14.& 144. 2. Others, which I ſuppoſe the beſt, as divided, but another way, into two branches, the one containing a prediction, In that day there ſhall be a vineyard of red wine, the other, an adhortation, ſing ye of it, or to it.

In that day] At that time, when the potent adverſaries of Gods people ſhall be deſtroyed, v. 1. and Gods people, by their former afflictions, pruned and purged, chap. 1. 25. ver. 8, 9. chap. 48. 10. Job. 15. 2.

a vineyard of red wine] Or, as ſome, hot, or ſtrong wine: becauſe the word in Chaldee hath a ſignification of heat: but it ſeems rather, to intimate the colour, expreſſed plainly, Prov. 23. 31. red wine, in thoſe parts, being uſually the ſtrongeſt, and the beſt; called the blood of the grape, therefore, Gen. 49. 12. Deut. 32. 14. In regard whereof, alſo, the Jewiſh Doctors adviſe their people, at the celebration of the Paſſeover, to make uſe rather of red wine, then of white; becauſe this is uſually the weaker. So Pſal. 75. 8. The meaning is, the Church, Gods vine, Pſal. 81. 8. chap. 5. 7, that had formerly degenerated from her native excellency, and brought forth vile and noiſome grapes, Deut. 32. 32, 33. chap. 5. 2, 7. Jer. 2. 21. ſhould then recover her primitive generoſity again, and bring forth ſuch fruit, as ſhould be of good eſteem, uſeful and acceptable, both to God and man, Judg. 9. 13.

ſing ye to it]Or, of it. as Num. 21. 18. where the ſame term though in another form, with the ſame particle in like manner diverſly rendred is found, ſpoken there of the well as here of the vine: and the one ſeems to allude to the other. Of the latter uſe of the particle ſee Chap. 8. 12.& 23. 5. the word ſignifies, properly, to ſing by courſe, anſwering one to another, Exod. 15. 21. 1 Sam. 18. 6, 7. Ber. 3. 21. ſing together, as in a quire. Concerning it.

V. 3. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it, every moment; leſt any hurt it, I will keep it night and day]Or, as ſome, I the Lord will keep it: as others, knitting the two firſt members into one ſentence, I the Lord, the keeper of it, will every moment water it; that it may not be hurt, I will night and day watch it. That this vineyard of God thus reſtored, may have ſome good aſſurance, not of preſent proſperity only, but of future ſecurity, God himſelf is by the Prophet brought in, undertaking the charge and cuſtody of it. And whereas there are two evils eſpecially, that may be prejudicial to a vineyard, and impeach the thriving of it, the one drought, and want of water to refreſh it, chap. 1. 30. the other, the violent breaking in, of, privy ſtealing in, of man or beaſt, that may annoy it, Pſal. 80. 12, 13. Cant. 2. 15. God here engageth himſelf to his Church, to provide for it abundantly againſt either. For he that before had forbidden the clouds to rain upon it, chap. 5. 6. would himſelf, now, be continually watering of it, by the gracious dews, chap. 26. 19. and ſpiritual refreſhments of his Word and Spirit, and with a comfortable ſupply of whatſoever ſhould be needful to keep it in a fruitful and flouriſhing condition. Gen. 2. 9, 10. Deut. 11. 10-12. chap. 58. 11. Ezek. 47. 1, 9, 12. Hoſ. 2. 21, 22. Rev. 22. 1, 2. and he that before had pulled down her wall, and plucht up her hedg, Pſ. 80. 12. ch. 5. 5. would now himſelf be as a wall, and fence unto her, Pſal. 125. 2. ch. 26. 1. Zac. 2. 5. he would keep ſuch a conſtant watch night and day about her, that none ſhould either by day openly force and break in, or in the night time, by ſome wile and ſlight, privily ſteal in to wrong her, Pſal. 121. 3, 4.

to keep it]Or, that watch it, or, the keeper as the word is rendred, Jer. 4. 17. or, watchman of it: as, 2 King. 17. 9. the keeper of Iſrael, Pſal. 121. 4.

water it]For it is his watering alone, that can make fertile, and fruitful, that can give thrift and growth, ch. 44. 3, 4. 1 Cor. 3. 6, 7. and without him, as no watching can ſecure, Pſ. 1. 27. 1. ſo no watering can avail, ch. 17. 11.

every moment]Heb. at moments, or, by moments: as Job 7. 18. Ezek. 26. 16.& 32. 10.

leſt any hurt it]Heb. leſt he viſit on it: to viſit upon, for, to puniſh, hurt, or afflict: as Jer. 13. 21.& 30. 20. leſt he hurt it, for, leſt it be hurt: the word is taken indefinitely, as Job 19. 26. Pſal. 7. 2. and ſo the old Latine renders it; for they are wide, that think this form, and that, 2 King. 14. 8. parallel, let us look either other in the face; the phraſes are nothing alike.

I will keep it] Or, watch it: as Job 7. 20. Prov. 24. 12. Mat. 26. 36.

night and day] Conſtantly, continually, without intermiſſion. So 1 Sam. 25. 16. ch. 21. 8.

V. 4. Fury is not in me]The Prophet in theſe words, and the reſt of his enſuing diſcourſe, ſeems to meet with an objection, that might ariſe in mens minds, concerning theſe gracious promiſes of God, and his ſerious profeſſions of his affection to, and care of his Church; and to ſtrengthen the hearts of the truly faithful againſt it. For it might be demanded, how theſe things could ſtand with thoſe predictions and denunciations of ſuch grievous calamities and diſtreſſes, that were to befall Gods people themſelves, whereof mention is made, had formerly, in this Sermon, been made, Chap. 26. 8, 13, 15, 18. To which the Prophet retorteth and anſwes: Firſt, that God neither is of himſelf prone to wrath, nor implacable. Secondly, that there are thoſe among Gods people, that by their obſtinacy enforce God to ſevere courſes, ver. 4, 5. Thirdly, that Gods ſharp proceedings againſt ſuch, are for the benefit of the reſt, ver. 6. Fourthly, that Gods dealings with his people, in chaſtiſement, do much differ from his proceedings with others, ver. 7, 11. And laſtly, that there ſhall, in due time, be an entire deliverance of them, ver. 12, 13.

Fury is not in me]wrath, or heat: See ch. 42. 25.& 51. 17. Either my wrath againſt my people, is no fury, no rage, no implacable wrath, like that of an husband, towards a diſloyal wife, Prov. 6. 34. I am prone, and ready to do, what in ſuch caſe a man will not do, Jer. 3. 1. or my anger and diſpleaſure, conceived againſt my people, is now over; ſince that by their ſorepaſſed ſufferings, they are humbled for their ſins that procured them, reclaimed from them, and reformed, ch. 12. 1.& 40. 1, 2.& 54. 8, 9. Ezek. 16. 42, 63. Zach. 1. 15-17. and 6. 8.

who would ſet the briers and thorns againſt me in battle? I would go thorow them, I would burn them together]Or, as ſome, who ſo ſhall ſet me briers and thorns in it, in battel will I march againſt them, and will burn them together. But this agreeth not ſo well with the paſſes in the Hebrew. Others, Yet if any with briar and thorn, or like briar and thorn ſhall induce me to battle, I will warily enter into her, or, thorow her, and burn them, out of her together. This ſome underſtand of the enemies of Gods Church, that it is a folly for any, that are but as briers and thorns, fit to make fewel of, or matter to feed the fire, Pſal. 58. 9. Eccl. 7. 6. to offer to oppoſe themſelves againſt God, or againſt thoſe whom he protecteth; and if any ſuch therefore ſhall ſo do, or ſhall prove like prickling briers or thorns unto his people, Ioſh. 23. 13. Ezek. 28. 24. God will be as a fire to burn them up, and deſtroy them, Pſal. 21. 9. chap. 26. 11. Zach. 2. 5.& 12. 6. Others, of his Church and People, that albeit God be thus grac'ouſly affected towards it and them, yet if there ſhall thoſe ſpring up in it, and be found among them, that like briars and thorns ſhall vex him, and provoke him to wrath, by their prophane and ſinful courſes, 2 Sam. 23. 6. Mic. 7. 4. they ſhall find him to be a conſuming fire, Deut. 4. 24. chap. 33. 12. he will in hoſtile manner ſet upon them, or enter, to that purpoſe, into his vineyard, and burn them up together, and by that means rid it of them, 2 Sam. 23. 7. ch. 1. 25.& 9. 18. which yet he will ſo wiſely and warily do, that his vineyard ſhall receive no damage thereby; he will withall have a due regard to thoſe that continue faithful to him, Zach. 2. 3, 12 Pet. 2. 9. Many other verſions & Interpretations are given, too long to relate: theſe I ſuppoſe the moſt probable.

who would ſet againſt me] Heb. give me, or, ſet me, ſome would have it read, by way of wiſh, as Job 29. 1. Jer. 9. 1. who will ſet me ? that is, I would ſome would ſet me. I ſuppoſe it rather to be ſpoken, either in way of interrogation, Jer. 9. 12. Hoſ. 14. 9. or, by way of ſuppoſition; as Pſal. 107. 43. ſo Pſalme 25. 12.

the briers and thorns]Heb. brier, thorn, as chap. 5. 6. which ſome underſtand, as ſpoken of one kind only, as, briar of thorn, that is thorny brier: but both words being in an abſolute and entire form, admit not well that conſtruction: the moſt, therefore, rather take it, as intending two ſorts; and either taken collectively, with defect of a copulative; as Hab. 3. 11.

I would go thorow them] The word here uſed, being no where elſe found, only two tems derived from it, the one, ſignifying a ſtep, 1 Sam. 20. 3. the other, on hip, 1 Chr. 19. 4. ſo it would here, more properly, and more modeſtly be rendred; becauſe it peculiarly pointeth to that place, whence the motion in going ſeems to deſcend. Some here take it, to import a warlike march: Others, a wary ſtepping, as alluding to one, that entring into a garden, or orchard, to pluck up the weeds and thiſtles, and to grub up the briers and brambles, that peſter the ground, is careful how, or where he treads, for hurting the uſeful plants, the more render eſpecially therein; and to this ſenſe, I the rather encline, becauſe the pronoun is here feminine. I will go in her, or in it, or ſtep into her, or into it, to wit, the vineyard, v. 2, 3.
